Money Lenders

Certain weaker individuals and groups in the industry are being victimized by a crew of heinous and thoroughly reprehensible money-lenders. The celebrated usurers and extortionists of history become legitimate bankers when compared with some of the hold-up outfits that are now preying upon the picture business.

Production of pictures and also distribution, but particularly production, requires elaborate financing and as a result frequently throws companies and individuals operating on limited capital into the hands of these money-lenders. The possibilities of profit in production may seem at times to make possible or even justify an exorbitant rate of interest, both in the form of interest and also of bonus extractions, but this all amounts to an illusion.

Profits on a single winning picture are great but motion picture production cannot escape the established laws of economics because no producer can consistently make big winning pictures and the stronger ones must carry the weaker ones.

The exorbitant demands of these money-lenders should not be tolerated and condoned but, on the contrary, should be vigorously opposed. To deal with them is fatal, eventually if not immediately. They are a financial plague, disastrous to everything they touch.

Supply of Product

Scarcity of product is not a problem which the exhibitor will have to contend with during the coming year. Although an apprehension was expressed in certain quarters that a more or less organized effort was being made to limit the output of pictures so materially that theatremen would be compelled to accept practically anything that would be offered to them, and at practically any price asked, developments indicate that there are no good grounds for this apprehension.

On the contrary, product announcements of the past few weeks present to the exhibitor a greater and more definite list of pictures than he has ever previously had offered to him. What the product will amount to, of course, remains to be seen but a sufficient quantity of it is going to be available.
THINK THIS OVER
There are fourteen imitations of the ment of Exhibitors Herald.

These imitations have gone to extraordinary effort to try to obtain reports from exhibitors. Yet,
Each week, Exhibitors Herald prints more reports in its department than are printed in the fourteen imitations combined.

Poet Laureate Ballot Appears
In This Issue
This week the Herald presents on age 83 a ballot form for exhibitors' use in the election of a Poet Laureate to What the Picture Did For Me."
The warmly contested competition of which this marks the conclusion has seen the center of reader attention during the weeks elapsed since H. G. Stettnund, Odeon theatre, Chandler, Okla. am, and Philip Rand, Rex, Salmon, Idaho, or the chair only to be greeted by a host of nominations from every part of the country.
The first break in the stream of nomiations occurred last week and the be-inning of theballoting was announced. It was necessary, therefore, to exclude from the form the names of those whose bids had not reached the Herald office after closing date of the January 7 issue.
The ballot will not be reprinted and prompt mailing of votes is urged.
Exhibitor Meets Death
When Car Turns Turtle
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)
ORLANDO, OKLA., Jan. 23.—A T.
Cook, owner of the Lyric theatre at Oklahoma, was killed in an automobile accident near here last week.
Mr. Cook was returning from a business trip to Guthrie and it is believed he will have turned from the center of the road over another car to pass when his win machine over-turned, pinning him underneath and killing him instantly.
Would Eliminate Need For Fireproof Booth
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)
PIERRE, S. D., Jan. 23.—A bill which would repeal the law requiring a fireproof projection booth has been introduced before the state legislature. The measure provides that if a "standard non-flammable film" is used a fire resistant projection booth is not compulsory in the exhibition of motion pictures.
The bill is scheduled to come up for consideration in the near future.
John S. Evans, prominent Philadelphia exhibitor and for years a leader in theatre-owner organization affairs, hakened the silence he maintained
in Philadelphia, December 23.
In a five-page letter to the officers and members of the M. P. T. O. A. of Eastern Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey and Delaware, the former "wonderful lieutenant of Cohen's"—discusses various matters which apparently brought about his decision to not only resign as an officer, but as a member of the organization as well.
Willing to Engage Cohen in Public Debate
Evans points out that at the meeting, December 23, Cohen spoke one hour and fourteen minutes, devoting most of his time to "shafts driven at me," and continues:
"You graciously allowed me three minutes to respond to it. It was long enough, boys—those three minutes to prove that he would have a time to answer the arguments and the documentary evidence that I possess of numerous things that show his dereliction as a leading officer.
... You can invite him to an open debate at any place he chooses and I will take him word for word."
Indicating that he touches only the "high points" of his statements and that he has more to say when the occasion demands, Evans devotes most of his statement to Cohen's handling of "Movie Chats" and the music tax situation.
No Profit on "Chats"
He declares that the "Movie Chats," for which he was originally one of the most enthusiastic, has turned out to be "a means of using our screens to enable one party of the contract, through his subsidiaries, for an advertisement and to enable him to tell lies to his neighbors of $5,000,000 worth of stock."
"The national organization have admitted that they never received a penny from 'chats,'" he continues.
"I don't know who got it all, but at least, I think, a thorough explanation in writing should be given regarding it."
He charges that exhibitors generally took the stand that because of running "chats," they were members of the exhibitor organization and ignored requests for payment of their proper assessments.
Scores "Music Tax" Action
In regard to the "music tax," Evans makes a strong point of the fact that while Cohen paid the tax himself, he urged other exhibitors to fight payment.
He declares that a group of Phila-adelphians decided to fight the tax. Cohen pledged financial and moral support and continues: "We have never received a penny financially but we have received oodles of moral support—whatever that is."
He is particularly incensed at Cohen going before the Federal Trade Commission without consulting exhibitors in various parts of the country and the attor-necies who had studied the music situation for some time.
Organization Is Divided?
The Evans-Cohen split is said to have had an immediate effect on the Pennsylvania organization. Only sixteen members are reported to have attended the meeting of the association January 19, at which officers were elected and Evans' and Cohen's resignations received. The letter is as follows:
"At the last regular meeting, Friday, January 5, I tendered my resignation from your unit and the national unit in all capacities, as an indication of the understanding that it was to be accepted in that manner.
I accepted my resignation as a member of the board of managers; and then on top of this, refused to accept my resignation as a member of the rank and file of my unit. While I recreate the fellowship and the spirit of your members in my unit, and I will accept in every manner, and that you remove the name of the Manheim Pennsylvania unit from the list of membership as well as the Tonga controlled by G. Miller.
"I greatly fear the appreciation, courtesies and kindness of the rank and file as well as the action of the board of directors requesting me to present a bill for expenses incurred during my term of national representative for two years;
but, as per my statement to you, I am glad that you last settle it to the credit of the four films above mentioned, which will leave me in good standing for the resignation to date, and no further asking or demands will be made.
Will Satisfy President Cohen
"My interest for these matters is attributed closely to the fact of Mr. Cohen making direct charges to me on the open floor at your meeting in December. In my letter to you then, I pointed out the fact that since my affiliation with you that I had never received any of the payment of the organization, and that my purposes were destryted, and that I preserved the better class and the higher minded men in this business, from affiliation with you as an exhibitor.
The simplest way to satisfy Mr. Cohen is to make an action that I have done, and this will allow him to work freely to boost the business and make himself look as you desire.
"In rebuttal testimony, I want to say that if there is any connection in your unit and the national, that any and everything I did was only for what I thought was right, nor allow for your exhibitors to do likewise, and especially those who are so the little independent fellow.
I apply your plan, nor accept a halo or a crown, but simply for the satisfaction that I

The Funny Side of Exhibition

By C. W. IRVIN

This experience did not happen to me, but it was so funny as told to me by a brother exhibitor that I am going to send it in for you to publish, if you see fit.

Everyone who has ever managed a theatre in a small town knows how often patrons ask to go in to look for somebody. So often is this requested that it has to be permitted.

One hot day, a day on which the theatre had tied up with the merchants on "Dollar Day" and the house was packed, a small boy, about 10 years old, asked the doorman to let him go in to look for his brother. The doorman could see no harm in this, so he let him in.

The little fellow walked down the center aisle downstairs several times and, not finding his brother, went to the balcony.

He couldn't find him there, and leaned over the balcony and yelled:

"Frey!" "Frey!"

Well, you know the rest. The patrons tore up three rows of seats getting out.

But how was a doorman expected to know this kid's brother's name was "Frey"?

By W. J. JOHNSON
(Palace Theatre, Long Beach, Cal.)

We were showing "Brewster's Millions" and using imitation ten dollar bills in the advertising campaign, having a table in the foyer a week in advance covered with these "bills." Some one passing out had looked at one of the "bills" and dropped it in the lobby.

This being in the winter, the front doors were kept closed and the curtains on the doors kept one from seeing inside, but the doorman, of course, could see out. He discovered a big fat lady eye this "bill" laying on the floor, give it the once over and look all about her. Seeing no one apparently watching, she proceeded to pick up the "bill," raised her dress and quickly crammed said "bill" in her stocking, thinking she made a lucky find.

thought I was doing right and trying to better the picture business. As a result of many of the irregularities that existed and still exist, which no doubt the new officers will attempt to do, and have succeeded in the matter I have been in charge of the course they choose nor how they do it, but let it all go, and they will be the worst."

"At the meeting on December 23, Mr. Cohen's speech occupied one hour and fourteen minutes—chiefly with shafts driven at me; and you graciously allowed me three minutes to respond to him. It was long enough, boys; those three minutes, to prove that he would have had a hard time to answer the arguments and the documentary evidence that I possess of numerous things that show his deleriousness as a leading officer. I do not care to go into lengthy writing at this time, but the view of all of you who were present and others I have talked to at any place I choose and I will take him word for word."

"At least, there was not a single good line done by me, and I will cite a few instances that may meet with your approval or not—I hope they do.

Points to Membership Increase

"When I was a representative at Cleveland in 1920, your organization had about sixty contributing members, and from that time until the term of my presidency ended in January, 1922, you had 293, exclusive of the Comford Circuit. What you exactly have now, I do not know; but a copy can be had from me if you care to visit Mrs. Cohen."

While I was president, every bill antagonistic to movie interests introduced at Harrisburg in 1921 was defeated. I claim to be responsible not only for my influence was of any value in having this done, and probably it may have been more of a matter of luck than good reasoning or headwork.

"This is about all I have ever done good for the local. Mr. Cohen even wanted to deprive me of these."

"I am now going to tell you of two things that I feel it would be well for you to recognize, study and analyze, and when you do, you will see how you have been placed in a position by the National organization where you are losing both money and time rather than gain it.

"MOVIE CHATS: I was one of the original signers of this famous document in New York in November of 1921, and can remember quite a lot that was contained in it, but I requested on three occasions from Mr. Cohen a copy of this original, which I was promised, but which I never received, even when I was in the good graces and such a wonderful lieutenant of Mr. Cohen (as he has admitted on numerous occasions). I thought this was a wonderful document and looked ahead of the day when the United States were set gone on a plan that would n't cost the country amounts of money to function, but:

"Little did I think or even dream that that document and that deal was going to turn out to be a means of using our screens to enable one part of the contract, through his sub- sidaries, for an advertisement and to enable him to raise funds in the neighborhood where a lot of stock upon what I term unsupposed public, and our theate rs were used as collection points, and all we poor exhibitors, instead of getting about $1 a day for running an advertising or a picture, were informed by the distributor by paying our good, cash for the things we were the only ones to pay for the payment of their proper assessments, in rel. There were, I am sorry to say, many that have taken this attitude to this moment. Again, some may state that the federal Government and the United States that the circulation of it can be counted on the hands of one man.

"When this stock selling scheme was found out by myself, Mr. Cohen was notified, and his answers were evasive, saying he could not deal or imagine such a thing was true and that he would look it up in due time; for two months he evaded close questioning, and in that time he had done nothing. He had given proper action as a leading officer, he have stopped the bills coming to us, have stopped our screens from being used to float and sell newspapers, the value of our tickets, and in four instances out of five (taken from statistics) never pay the holder anything, and in six instances prove that he has stopped by this statement that investor's worthless stock, but I doubt that's me in the movie business that would have invested in it.

"I may be right or I may be wrong in my conclusions, but it was having temper and gone ahead, the screens of the country that he used for exploitation or activities along these lines.

"GITHUB TAKES THESTUDENT'S FIRST call your attention to my article of February 2nd regarding this, that his direct answer to me was to deny that I had done any thing and that this meeting can deny this statement. Before that day, I had had the pleasure of a view of the fact of the expense in a certain trade of holding stock and retailing it, and of having been doing so for years, that every thing was working clear, that I had a mention it or talk upon it, inasmuch as on boys had been martyrs and had been induced to defy the music tax people and stand the nut at his suggestion.

"Mr. Cohen's remark of being double-crossed would be construed by most people to the effect that he had been coaxed and urged them to fight every time he had a chance to send a man up to the stand.

"He made a claim that he had been misrepresented as a matter, and that he had been continually shouting from the house-tops an 110 tax to the death of the music tax and that he stated and told them that he was paying it at the same time.

Challenging Cohen's Facts

"Mr. Cohen is wrong—positively, and I challenge him to give the facts in writing on eleven hundred out of one thousand signatures where he has stated to the exhibitors throughout the United States, an portion, that he was paying the music tax.

"On the contrary, your secretary, Mr. George P. Aarons, and myself, in a letter of February 19, 1921 and went into council regar- ding the time taking and spent to make to him in time threatening suit and spoke to him also the time that the original copy was taken out, and he informed us at that time as if the best the Pennsylvania exhibitors had made and urged that the tax and that at time led us to believe that he was not paying the music tax.

"I am now convinced from developments that occurred later on that whatever Mr. Cohen may say when his stock is so not much interested in us fighting the music tax directly as he was trying to have a show to open up a fight on a certain film company this industry, and took advantage of the situation.

"Our first stage essay at the Elliott Planetarium exhibited the gulf, stood the test which culminated into thirteen nine suits and we are still fighting and Mr. Cohen may, your secretary as attorney, informs me that wonderful proof has been made, and that eventually nobody will be given in behalf of the exhibitors.

"Mr. Cohen promised if this would be his idea he promised he would bend every effort and ener- gy to aid him and the Pennsylvania exhibitors and financial support. We have never received a personal letter from him, not even moral support—whatever that is.

Says National "Our meeting was most interesting."

"Over a year ago," I learned, "Mr. Cohen was paying the music tax at..."
Women May Back Move to Abolish Censorship in Ohio

Martin G. Smith Re-elected President of Theatre Owners Organization of State—True Presents Cohen Exhibitor Distributing Plan

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

COLUMBUS, O., January 23.—Ohio exhibitors are looking forward to the day when they will have a free screen in their state, a screen unhampered by political censorship as at present.

That day may never come, although at the present writing prospects are bright.

Cooperation Precludes Necessity of Censorship

If censorship is abolished in this state it will be due in a great measure to the efforts of the women. This was made clear in an address before the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio in convention last week. Mrs. O. J. Gurwell, first vice-president of the Cleveland Cinema Club, stated emphatically that the cooperation of the women’s clubs of the state had made censorship unnecessary. She agreed to bring the question of a referendum before the Cinema Club and it is possible they have the matter acted upon at the present session of the legislature.

Censorship was but one important phase of the annual convention.

The members discussed non-theatrical competition, and a resolution was passed against this practice. It was agreed that the theatre owners of the state would be protected against this “evil” if continued, although the action to be taken in such cases was left open for further consideration.

Hit Protracted Protection

Protection by distributing companies of more than four weeks on “productions designated as specials or supers” was protested, the exhibitors declaring that such a protection would have the effect of establishing a precedent and “such a precedent would seriously impair the success and standing of every other house except the first run theatres.”

Producers distributing in Ohio were petitioned not to enter into contracts granting longer than four weeks. In line with the announced policy of officials of the Theatre Owners Distributing Corporation to visit all key centers in advance of the convention, President W. A. True along with W. D. Burbord and Harry Davis, both officials, were present to present their proposition.

True Says Success Assured

True, in explaining the purposes of the distributing concern, presented figures which the association showed that the future of the new organization was entirely assured. Regional directors and members of the zone committees were appointed, these representing theatres in key centers of the state. It was announced by the distributing corporation executives that sectional meetings would be held through the state in furtherance of the movement.

About 200 theatres were represented at the convention. Martin G. Smith of Toledo was honored with re-election to the presidency for another term.

The feature of the convention, which was held at the Hotel Flamingo, was the banquet on the opening night. President Sydney S. Cohen of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, was billed as the principal speaker.

It was immediately following President Cohen’s address, in which he dwelt partially upon the defeat of censorship in Massachusetts, that Mrs. Gurwell pledged her support to an end to the reign of dictatorship over the screens of this state.

M. J. O’Toole, chairman of the National Public Service Commission of the M. P. T. O. A., was toastmaster.

Praise Governor’s Action

Expression of gratification at the action being taken by Governor Smith of New York to abolish censorship in that state was given in a resolution adopted by the convention.

In presenting his report for the past year, Treasurer John T. Kumler said that the financial conditions were fair, although not entirely satisfactory.

While discussing ways and means of financing the organization, a resolution declaring that no theatre owner in Ohio is deserving of the services of the association unless he has paid at least one year’s dues in advance was adopted.

The report of Sam Bullock of Cleve-
Cohen Gets Wisconsin's O. K. to Distributing Plan

Censorship, Non-Theatrical Competition and Rentals Are Discussed President McWilliams III

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

MILWAUKEE, Wis., January 23.—Sydney S. Cohen's exhibitor distribution plan has the support of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin. By a standing vote those in attendance at the convention held last week resolved to "endorse its service proposals," pledge the support of the Wisconsin league and urge all other exhibitors to give the corporation the "fullest measure of assistance."

OTHER than this resolution it is not divulged to what extent members of the organization are determined to go in supporting the Theatre Owners Distributing Corporation. *

Presdent W. A. True of the corporation and W. D. Harford, one of the officials, outlined their plan of placing the exhibitor in the distribution field. President Cohen and M. J. O'Toole of the national organization also were in attendance.

Like other state units in recent conventions, Wisconsin went on record as unalterably opposed to the rental of films to non-theatrical institutions.

Data presented by Walter E. Baumann, executive secretary of the league, revealed a serious situation throughout the state. At the present time there were 50 per cent more non-theatrical organizations exhibiting pictures than there were licensed theatres.

While it was suggested that for eliminating this evil were offered, no concrete plan of action will be taken until Mr. Baumann has completed his survey of conditions. One plan which met with special favor was that of offering theatres gratis to the various non-theatrical groups at present renting and exhibiting their own pictures. The advisability of this plan will be taken under consideration.

Another subject of vital concern at this time to Wisconsin exhibitors is that of censorship. The legislative committee reported that the recent element was planning the introduction of a coactive measure at Madison. Members in attendance were of the opinion that a publicity campaign, as well as direct contact with the state law-makers, would offer the most effective defense.

Film rentals came in for their share of attack. In this connection a direct attack was made on competitive bidding.

When report was received of the death of Walbee Reid, the following resolution was framed, adopted and wired to Mrs. Dorothy Davenport Reid:

"The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin, assembled in Mid Winter convention at the Hotel Wisconsin, Milwaukee, have just learned of the sad death of Walbee Reid and express our deepest sympathy and regret upon his untimely death because of the fact that the industry has lost an eminent screen artist whose pictures have always been 100 per cent clean." *

Here's the resolution relative to the distributing corporation:

"Whereas, the board of directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, have endorsed the formation of an independent exhibitor-owned distribution corporation, and whereas, motion picture theatre owners everywhere are in favor of such a move as a matter of business, therefore, be it resolved, by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin, in meeting assembled at Milwaukee, Friday, January 19, 1926, that we heartily commend the formation of the Theatre Owners Distributing Corporation, endorse it, and pledge the support of this organization to the furtherance of these purposes, and urge all theatre owners in Wisconsin and elsewhere to give the fullest measure of assistance to this corporation."

Owing to the illness of President F. J. McWilliams, J. H. Schill

min presided at the sessions.

"The Christian" Given Premiere at Capitol

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Goldwyn's screen version of Sir Hall Caine's novel "The Christian" was given its world premiere here today at the Capitol theatre.

The showing of the Maurice Tourneur production was held at 10:15 o'clock in the morning before a large invited audience.

The Best Tonic On the Market

"I do not know when my subscription expires, but please keep it coming. I can't help but bring back my check promptly as I don't care to miss a single number."

"I consider the Herald by far the best exhibitor's tonic on the market today. I enjoy it very much. The 'What the Picture Did for Me' department is very fine and I consider it one of the features of the Herald's greatness. It gives the small town fellows some idea of how things are going in larger places."

"I also greatly enjoy the letters from various exhibitors, which contain much useful information. So please consider me on your regular list."- rather than discourage, but more for the better, to keep up the spirits of the men in the Pennsylvania unit, have received from December the information, I may be censured for this, in a way, but I feel the majority of men will say that I did the right thing.

The most serious blunder in my estimation that national leader I have made was to tell a lie in December before the Federal Trade Commission, being a brother and representatives of the exhibitors throughout the United States that were posted fully up to the situation to that body.

"Was Mr. Aaron, your local counsel, or Mr. Cohen, of Missouri, your attorneys, or were you representing for the Kansas exhibitors, ever consulted, or where did he get his information to file his complaint, and why he brought the case, only the men who had more experience than he? Again, why does it with your document, the letter from the different attorneys representing picture theatre owners as well as from the exhibitors at large? In a matter of this kind it is in secrecy, and the sooner the cloak is removed and the things done in the open, the better they should be accomplished.

"I wish the public would consult with us.I think that is the right thing to do. It is cheaper, and I think what they should do not even get recognition. When the industry learns of this document, which it should demand, it will be better for them.

"Pennsylvania unit has three of the most resolute and determined men in the country, and I'm glad Mr. Cohen has done; we know them and we will admit that on certain points, in the industry, he has made blunders that are not excusable.

"MY PARTING: I part with you the best of friends, with whom I have been a servant to anyone in this industry, big or small, through or exchange-man, to offer, because I played square as I thought right, and these are services to cheap, and to them you owe allegiance, and I hope you ever will stand by them."

"I am not trying to overlook many good things Mr. Cohen has done; we know them and we will admit it on certain points, in the industry, he has made blunders that are not excusable."

"The removal of myself, I trust, will be of benefit to Mr. Cohen, to the Pennsylvania unit, and to all as well as all other units throughout the United States, and that it will enable all to grow bigger and larger, and that you may enroll all the members in all sections of the country."

"I have said in this letter and all statements made are not to be construed against anything I have only as to the points they hold and the methods under which they operate."

"The incomparably high esteem in which you hold to the outcome, I wish the best of success and hope this letter will spur them on to further services."

"If your associations while we are, you will ever revere in my memory and be cherished, and I go back to my business to give personal attention, which I hope it will increase and expand."

Brons Theatre Men

Make Whittman Head For Eleventh Term

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—The Bronx Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association held its installation banquet on January 22 at Davenport Electric Rooms, Grand Course and Fordham Road.

Officers for the new year are: Presi

John J. Whittman; Vice President, John T. Bolender; Secretary, Henry Cole; treasurer, Henry Suchman; trustee, Morris Ginsberg, and sergeant-at-arms, William Williams.

An unusual feature is that Whittman now is serving his eleventh term in the president's chair, and Cole is serving his tenth as executive secretary.
Big Year Ahead for Lessers-Rosenberg
Major Portion of Business to Be Directed from New York City
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—Irvinger Lesser is back from Coast conferences with Sol Lesser and Michael Rosenbery. As a result of these conferences Principal Pictures has been given an active year during which twelve features, productions will be placed on the market.

Among the 1933 output will be three Harold Bell Wright pictures, three Irving Cumings productions and four "de luxe" offerings from a producer whose name is being withheld for the present.

The Lesser-Rosenberg organization, in outlining its production policy states that story and cast must come first with sets secondary. In commenting upon this policy, Mr. Rosenbery, business manager of production, says: "The film executives of today can easily apply the strict business principles used in other businesses, and if these methods are adapted to the silent drama, as they are in other industries everywhere, for the coming year should work out in a most satisfactory manner."

One of the announcements of interest is that the executive offices have been located on the West Coast, this coming year will see a major portion of the business directed from the New York end. A publicity and exploitation department is to be established here which will work in cooperation with the Coast department.

Among the early productions of the company will be Cummings "East Side, West Side", and George M. Cohan's "The Meanest Man in the World."

Valentino May Work, But Court Ties String To Modification Order
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—Rodolph Valentino last week obtained a modification of the Famous Players-Lasky injunction, as he will still be held in contempt of court if he tries a question that apparently only an attempt to do it will solve.

On the plea of the player's attorney, that Valentino was getting near the end of his bankroll, the special court overruled the striking out of these words: "or rendering any services for himself or on his account," and "or any other business of any kind or class whatsoever." The injunction, however, still restrain Valentino from making work in pictures or on the screening stage during the period of his Paramount contract. Whether or not dancing in vaudeville would be appearing in the screening stage is the question that is bothering.

Field Sales Chiefs Empowered by "U" Man at Head of Each Division Will Have Full Control Under New System
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—A sales reorganization, far-reaching in its scope, is to put into effect by Carl Laemmle at Universal, it has been learned. According to reports from the home office the company's sales division will come under the jurisdiction of a "sales cabinet" which will consist of General Sales Manager Art Schmidt and group of assistant sales managers.

Has Power on Contracts

Under the new plan each assistant sales manager will be in charge of a territory or division for which he will be held responsible and in which he will be supreme sales head. He will make his headquarters first in one exchange and then in another, thus keeping in close touch with exhibitors and conditions throughout his division.

The assistant sales manager will have the final power to pass upon all contracts in his territory. This feature of the plan, it is declared, means the saving of much time which is now used in the company and to exhibitors. In addition, the power vested in the assistant sales manager will include complete control of all salesmen in his unit.

Makes for Direct Contact

It is the belief of Universal that through this system, it will not only be able to keep in constant touch with conflicting conditions in every territory of the country but it will be able to establish a greater direct contact with exhibitors in the matter of sales, contracts, service and other papers where direct authoritative action is desirable.

Selection of the personnel of the sales directing group is now under way and it is said that present territory or division managers are probable incumbents in the new cabinet.

Distinctive Pictures Plans Big Production
President Arthur S. Friend Takes Long Term Lease on Biograph Plant in East
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—A long term lease was signed last week for the Biograph Studios by Arthur S. Friend, president of Distinctive Pictures Corporation, giving the company full possession of the big building. Immediate acquisition of such a tremendous production space was made necessary by the plan of Mr. Friend and Henry M. Hobart, vice-president, for the production within the next few months of at least five big feature films. The first two of these are "Backbone" and "The Ragged Edge."

Will Remodel Plant

The Distinctive Corporation will proceed at once with an elaborate rearrangement of the vast floor area at its disposal in the Biograph building. J. N. Naulty, studio manager for Distinctive, has made plans for this rearrangement and for the installation of the new lighting and mechanical equipment which will be needed for the forthcoming productions. Together with the development of the physical facilities requisite for their big production schedule, Mr. Friend and Mr. Hobart are arranging for the augmentation of the personnel, Mr. Naulty will be assisted by Joseph Nadal.

Sloman Making Interiors

Harley "Shorty" White, who directed the Artis picture, "The Ruling Passion," and "The Man Who Played God," is one of the permanent members of the directing staff of Distinctive Pictures Corporation. He is now making "The Ragged Edge." Edward Sloman is completing interior scenes for "Stage Door," the Clarence Budington Kelland story.

Educational to Make Coue Film; All Other Offers Turned Down
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—Emile Coue, famous French apostle of autosuggestion, is putting his message on the screen. The little druggist of Nancy began work today on a two reel subject for Educational Film Exchanges, which will be published as this company's next short subject special.

This will be the only film made by M. Coue or authorized by him during his stay in the United States. He hopes through this picture to carry his message to the millions throughout the world who are unable to hear his lectures or attend his clinics. His share of the receipts will go toward founding a Coue Institute in New York City.

Since his arrival here M. Coue has been flooded with offers from motion picture producers. One came from Al Lichtman, who offered the French druggist $3,000 a week for his services. The Educational picture is being made at the studio of Motion Picture Arts at New Rochelle under the direction of John L. McCutcheon.
Exhibitors in Mood to Fight for Shorter Features

Survey of “What the Picture Did for Me” Shows General Objection to Length—Christie Endorses Editorial

Determined effort on the part of theatre owners to get producers back to five reels as the standard length for features is in prospect.

Two weeks ago, the “Herald” printed an editorial by Martin J. Quigley on the subject, “Five Reels,” in which the exhibitors’ side of the case was presented. Since then, there have been dozens of congratulatory letters from showmen received.

A survey of theatre owner’s reports to the “What the Picture Did for Me” department for the past six months emphasized the importance of the matter. Practically fifty per cent of the complaints against pictures could be summarized in the phrase “too long.”

“What the Picture Did for Me,” containing 20,000 reports annually, and contributed to by more than 2,000 exhibitors, is without doubt the one barometer of exhibitor opinion on picture subjects.

Report after report is found to contain such criticism as “would have been better in five reels,” “too much padding,” “a good five reel spoiled in 8,000 feet,” “patrons slept through the extra three reels,” “cutting would have helped this one,” “left out one reel entirely and they never missed it.”

At E. Christie of the Christie Film Company, Inc., in a letter to the Herald, states that the editorial “Five Reels” strikes the greatest problem not only of the exhibitor but also of the producer of short subjects. He says:

“Mr. Quigley’s editorial under the heading ‘Five Reels’ in the Exhibitors Herald of January 30 strikes the greatest problem, not only of the exhibitor who tries to run a well balanced show, but also of the producer of short subjects.

“In this connection, it is interesting to know that seventy-two per cent of all exhibitors in the United States and Canada have expressed their desire to run two-reel comedies in connection with their features. At the same time actual statistics show that the average length of a bill in a motion picture theatre is eight reels.

“These facts show that it is absolutely impossible for exhibitors to run any of the short subjects that they want badly when features are handed to them in seven, eight, nine, ten and sometimes twelve reels.”

“Speaking for myself, I may be allowed to say that we have devoted all our efforts and our entire organization to making something but a limited number of two-reel pictures. Several other producers are doing the same thing and devoting every effort to bringing us quality of two-reel pictures to a hundred per cent in entertainment value.

“The exhibitors realize this and want to take advantage of the improvement in short subjects, but in many cases their hands are absolutely tied because they are handed pictures that prevent them from running a well balanced show.

“I want to thank you for bringing this most important problem to the attention of the industry because it seems that from every angle the way points to shorter features.”

Talmadge-Valentino to Play Romeo and Juliet

Los Angeles, Jan. 23.—Joseph M. Schenck has admitted that his future plans include filming of “Romeo and Juliet” with Rudolph Valentino and Norma Talmadge in the title roles.

Manages Mexico Office

N. E., Jan. 23.—William C. Winship, has been made manager of Paramount’s offices in Mexico City by E. E. Shauer, director of the foreign department. He was formerly a salesman at the Los Angeles exchange.
All those intricacies of the radio have been mastered by "Bool" Montana, that comedian of the cauliflower ears whose latest Metro comedy is "Glad Rags." "Bool," like all radio bugs, had his difficulties as you will see, but persistence will win. We know for we have two (bugs) in our office.

You know they're happy. And why shouldn't they be? You're right, it's Walter Hiers, Paramount's fat comedian upon whom F. P.-L. has just bestowed stellar honors, and his bride, who was Miss Ada McWilliams of Syracuse, N. Y. The newlyweds are now touring the country on their honeymoon, a gift from Jesse L. Lasky.

Phil E. Meyer, member of New York sales branch of Associated Exhibitors, is elected president of Motion Picture Salesmen, Inc., a social and benevolent organization.
After many temptations covering a period of years, David Belasco, one of America’s greatest theatrical producers, has at last become interested in the screen. Credit for bringing the impresario into the film world must go to Warner Brothers, independent producers and distributors. Under the terms of the agreement, Warners will get many of Belasco’s stage successes and the theatrical producer will supervise in translating them to the screen. “The Gold Diggers” will be the first produced. Above are, left to right: Abe Warner, Harry M. Warner, Mr. Belasco, S. L. Warner and J. L. Warner.

Such a rousing welcome awaited Lupino Lane on his recent visit to London, his home, that he was forced to take refuge in a manhole. Perhaps we should add, that’s a “hole” lot of welcome. Lane has made a five-reel feature comedy for Fox, “A Friendly Husband.”

Baby Peggy, tiny 4 year old Century comedy star, was chosen from among scores of youngsters to represent Hollywood at Pasadena’s 1923 Tournament of Roses. May McAvoy was queen of the float Baby Peggy rode on. Baby Peggy’s current picture is “Peg o’ the Movies.” Universal distributes it.

One of the big street scenes erected for the Selznick special, “Rupert of Hentzau.” You see here Bert Lytell, one of the featured players, talking with Victor Heerman, the director, and Glenn MacWilliams, the cameraman. This attraction is being produced on the West Coast by Selznick organization.

Wallace Worsley almost wrecked Universal City when he sought to launch construction on the replica of the Cathedral of Notre Dame by shattering a bottle of fine champagne. Worsley will direct Lon Chaney as the hunchback in this version of the Victor Hugo opus for Universal.
A little boy's bad dreams is what this looks like, and that's just what it is in one of Universal's new series of "boy" comedies. Remember way back when you ate one too many green apples and mother pulled every kind of a bottle from the medicine chest?

This is what the narrow minded reformers try to make scandals of. You see here Douglas MacLean, star in Thomas H. Ince's First National attraction "The Hottentot," and his wife spending a quiet Sunday at home. The only scandalous part is Doug, reading the funnies.

Louis J. Gasnier, producing Preferred pictures for Al Lichtman, has returned to the Coast from New York to begin production on "Mothers-in-Law." The director made the trip East to visit his daughter.

J. D. Williams' latest photograph. A new photograph and a new company, for Mr. Williams has just organized Ritz Carlton Pictures which will provide a distribution medium for producers of independent attractions.

Ramon Novarro has just signed a long term contract to star in Metro pictures. In the Rex Ingram production, "Where the Pavement Ends," Novarro is co-starred with Alice Terry. He appears next in "Scaramouche."
Here's an exhibitor to look up when you're in Cleveland, Ohio. It's Earl McBride, manager of the Ezella theatre there.

Ena Gregory is one of the beauties appearing in Century comedies, which Universal distributes. Miss Gregory, signed by Julius and Abe Stern, is one reason why Century comedies are easy on the eyes.

Big German square rigger used in First National's "Fury," starring Richard Barthelmess. Pictures of this important "prop" have been published in many dailies and in National Geographical Society magazine.

Cover of the striking campaign book compiled by Nat G. Rothstein on F. B. O.'s new special, "The Third Alarm," which is playing at the Astor theatre, New York. Forty practical exploitation ideas are described and illustrated in the book which is proving of inestimable value to exhibitors.

Boys, keep your eye on that wicked right, the girl means business. This is Grace Darmond as she appears in the new Universal Pictures attraction, "The Midnight Guest."
H. A. Snow and lioness he trapped and killed during filming of “Hunting Big Game in Africa,” which has had its premiere at the Lyric, New York. Metropolitan reviewers described this film as “the most fascinating animal picture ever seen.”

Bus Cook, Crystal theatre, Dundee, Ill., has been down in Old Mexico and Arizona on another one of his big game hunts. Here’s what he writes: “I shot a big brown bear that measured six feet long and weighed around 500 pounds. Also hot white-tailed deer and wild bull. Had great sport shooting Mexican quail, ducks, wild pigeons, jack rabbits and wild turkeys. Came back via Los Angeles, San Francisco and Denver. Visited ‘terrible Hollywood’ and found it just as quiet as any other town of that size.” The four pictures were taken during the hunt.

The WEEK in NEW YORK

AFTER fiddling around several months trying to catch John Flinn in town long enough to install him in the office as president of the A. M. P. A. they are going to install him Thursday night whether they catch him or not.

Every time they get themselves all framed up for this installation thing Flinn gums up the works by being sent out of New York by Paramount. First it was to escort Pola Negri down the coast, then to a long jaunt to Mexico. Now he's off to the coast again, probably to see how that Negri girl is standing the winter or something.

Victor Shapiro, President Flinn's only vice, who has acquired such skill wielding the gavel during his chief's absence that he can do it with either hand and with one eye closed, spoke right up in the meeting last Thursday, and announced that the installation dinner would be projected Thursday night at Cafe Boulevard whether or not the feature attraction arrived.

And Shapiro, in making the announcement, had stress on the fact that the dinner will be for members only. To make it sink deeper Vic said it a couple of times: Wonder what he means, "for members only."

This is merely a suggestion. In the event of President Flinn not returning for the dinner, Hand Roosevelt might be able to persuade his friend, Clen Denaker, the prominent exhibitor from Pocatello, Nevada, to remain over and under-study Mr. Flinn.

A recent recruit to the forces of D. W. Griffith at his Mamaroneck studios is Basil Wilson, a young player from whom big things are expected. Born in New York, a lineal descendant of Martha Washington, Mr. Wilson's experience in acting has been confined to motion pictures. He had a prominent part in "Broadway Rose" with Mae Murray, and in "When the Desert Calls" he made a distinct mark and played the part of a Roman prince in "Madmosails and Men." He was leading man of "The Girl and the Law" and has been seen on Broadway, besides, in "Bring 'Em Up," "If Women Only Knew," and "To Have a Life," among others. A young man, his work has in every case been highly commended for its sincerity and forcefulness and Mr. Wilson has a personality with a strong appeal.

Jack Meador, of Metro (who is some mathematical genius) is working overtime with a pencil in each hand and two boys carrying him copy paper, trying to do a little figuring. What he is after is the dope on bookings for "Peg o' My Heart," in which Laurette Taylor made her screen debut this week, to make the number of screen showings equal that of the famous stage play in a given period.

And he has to go some. "Peg" was performed 1,500 times as a stage play. Outside of New York it was given more than 7,000 times in America, outside of London the English performances totalled nearly 2,000. It was played 122 times in Holland, 65 times in India, 20 in the Far East, 29 in South Africa, 114 times in France, with Hawaiian Scandinavia, Freeport, L. I., and Derby, Conn., still to be heard.

Moreover if he doesn't get it doped out by Saturday night he is going to try to hire Old Kid Calculus to finish the job for him.

John S. Robertson, director of "The Bright Shawl," recently returned from Cuba where the exteriors were filmed. On the trip he carried a little typewriter on which he practiced in writing some things to friends. Sometimes he hit the right keys. On his return he met one of these friends who said:

"Got your letter, John, but listen. After this you will mind handwriting your stuff. It's a lot easier to read."

Tom Wiley, secretary of the A. M. P. A., may have been reading something about exhibitor organization politics before sending out the call for the last week's meeting. The letter finishes up with "Yours for exhibitor enigma."

Hugo Riesenfeld was invited to give a special performance at Sing Sing prison last Friday evening, which he did, putting up an excellent entertainment made up of musicians, special music scores and films from the Wisno and Vitole theatres. After the performance they let Dr. Riesenfeld out, which is a lot more than they do for some people they invite to Sing Sing.

Hedda Hopper, popular stage and screen actress, sailed Saturday on the Olympic for a six-weeks' visit abroad, which is Miss Hopper's way of taking a rest after months of strenuous activity. She will visit Paris, London, Nice, Monte Carlo, St. Moritz and the Riviera. On her return in March she will go to Hollywood to start production under a new screen contract.

If the prognostications of Richard A. Rowland are to be relied on—and history shows they are—parlous times are ahead for head line writers of daily papers. Did any copy reader ever overlook describing as a "beautiful movie actress" any young woman who ever appeared in pictures, even for fifty feet of a mob scene? If so he hasn't been discovered.

And now the general manager of First National predicts that the film queens of the future will be homely girls. Says he to an interested one who returns from the coast where he has been studying producing conditions:

"When the popular girl of pictures will not be the pretty, doll-faced type. She will be the ordinary appearing young woman who plays the leading role in melodrama, because melodrama is going to be the principal screen fare, and in this form of picture facial beauty doesn't count."

Basil Wilson.

The New Year was indeed a happy one for E. Mason Hopper. Mr. Hopper needs little if any introduction to the film world. He has directed some fine film successes and the new year brought with it the fact that each and every picture Hopper directed during 1922 had been a tremendous success but from an artistic and a box office view point.

Hopper started his megaphone work many years ago with the old Essan company in Chicago. Prior to that time he had appeared in vaudeville as a color crayon artist. He won the name "Lightnin' Hopper" due to the fact that he could sketch a subject in quicker time than any one in the same profession.

He has directed feature product for Goldwyn and many other big film organizations. His most recent Broad was offering "Hungry Hearts," reversion on a German project.

Hopper will shortly have another on the silver sheet in Jackie Coogan forthcoming production, "Daddy," which is to follow the "Oliver Twist" production.

Hopper may well be classed as versatile director. He is an expert golfer, can play an excellent game of ball (having been on a major league three years), can cook a dinner that Rita chet would envy, is an inventor of small repute, is an author, and but far from least, can direct a picture.

Rumor has it to the effect Hopper's signed a new contract with a producing organization and that he shortly pay Gotham a visit. This is his first eastern jaunt for some time and I rather supposing that his duties having kept him close to a west coast studio.

Hopper's greatest aim in life is not to make all the good pictures shown on the silver sheet but to make some of them to mix in with these the things that he is doing good for all—that he is making new friends—that he is bringing shine into dark corners of life—this is Mason Hopper. —J. S. S.

City Chief Assumes Role of Dictator; Bans All Serials

Reform Issue Is Live in Many Localities—Defeated Free Screen Measure May Be Offered Again At Constitutional Convention

Autocratic rule in this country did not cease with the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

Superior, Wis., has a mayor, F. A. Baxter by name, who has clothed himself with all dictatorial powers. He has barred from the screens of that city Universal's serial, "In the Days of Buffalo Bill."

Here's Sample of Logic Propounded by Reformer

This is Baxter's logic in defining his reasons for not permitting exhibition of the chapter play: "If I allow one theatre to run serial pictures, I'll have to allow them all. Of course I know the picture I stopped from running was a good one in all respects, but the next serial might not be so good and therefore all must refuse to run them."

It appears now as though Baxter in assuming the role of a monarch is courting a stiff legal battle. He has taken a step which no legalized censorship board has dared take.

Opinions have been expressed quite openly that in assuming the role of a dictator, Baxter is forcing an early end to his political career. Upholding these opinions is the fact that when the first episode of the Universal serial was presented at the Capitol theatre the biggest business in months was reported. So it would seem that the Superior public wants its serials. A trade angle that must not be overlooked, is that Roy McMinn of the Capitol, because of the mayor's action, can be held liable to his contract with the film company.

Former Ambassador Flays Hypocrites

ST. LOUIS, MO., Jan. 23.—The liberty of the individual once held sacred by the "spirit of the Constitution" is being beaten down and the right of the man to govern himself is being continued encroachment upon the Constitution by a code of statutes to regulate the habits and morals of Americans, W. Davis, president of the American Bar Association and former ambassador to Great Britain, asserted in an address at the annual banquet of the Bar Association at Hotel Chase, St. Louis, on January 15.

Although Davis did not mention censorship in his hour's address there was no doubt of his reference to such restrictive laws in his frequent references to "too much law" and the need to ignore the mandates of the Constitution as they were originally intended." His remarks directed against the setting up of "a mysterious being called the state to the abandonment of the spirit of individual liberty" were construed by those present as a subtle blow at the so-called reforms and reformers.

At the very outset he pleaded with the bar to stem the tide of excessive government. "I would advise you to preserve the image of God in man, rather than to set up the image of man in the state," he said.

He charged the reformers with attempting to change the Constitution from a document of direction over government into a code of statutes to regulate habits, customs and morals of Americans; secondly, to so alter the Constitution to do away with the fundamental principles underlying it. To not dare give it of its spirit but its very life as well.

Committee of 50 Introduces Bill

JEFFERSON CITY, MO., Jan. 23.—During the past week the Committee of Fifty of St. Louis presented its censorship bill to the Missouri legislature at Jefferson City. The reformers claim that the measure has the backing of numerous Protestant and Catholic religious organizations throughout the state.

Its principal requirements are: Creation of a commission of two men and one woman, each to be paid $5,000 a year, to review and censor all motion pictures produced or shown in Missouri. That it shall be unlawful to sell, lease, exhibit or use any film unless it has been reviewed and passed by the board. In addition to this provision shall be a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of not to exceed $50 and imprisonment for not more than thirty days or both such fine and jail term. To break any other provision carries a maximum fine of $50 and a term of sixty days in jail.

A fee of $2 for views of 1,200 feet or less and $1 for each duplicate print shall be charged. Any member or employee of the board may enter any cinema where a film is exhibited and may prevent the exhibition of a film not approved by the board. The board may examine any ban er and refuse its use for advertising purposes.

The board will also appoint a chief clerk, two stenographers, two clerks, two inspector of operators, two inspectors of projections, and such other employees as the board and the governor shall agree on. Offices of the board shall be maintained in Jefferson City.

Will Sponsor New Free Screen Bill

KANSAS CITY, MO., Jan. 23.—Despite the active work of reformers, who have introduced a censorship bill at the present session of the Missouri legislature, there is little worry among the exhibitors, especially in the western half of the state. The reform organization, led by the Rev. Billman from St. Louis, appears to be staging its hardest fight in many years.

However, so little are the fangs of the reformers feared that A. A. Speer, president of the First National Bank at Jefferson City, the state capital, and a prominent member of the Constitutional convention, which has adjourned until spring, has announced that he again will ask for the consideration of a measure placing the screen under same basis, should he return to the convention. Mr. Speer, a staunch champion of the exhibitors in Missouri and a man of thorough knowledge of political movements, does not regard the present proposed censorship bill as serious.

Exhibitors Allow Motion of His Pass

Charles Reid, famous screen star whose death the industry is mourning.

Passing of Reid Is Mourned by Industry

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 23.—Thousands did tribute at the bier of Wallace Reid, whose body lay in state for four hours Thursday at the First Congregational church. The funeral was held in the afternoon of Rev. Neal Dodd officiating. Local Elks lodge was in charge of services.

Body To Be Cremated

The body is to be cremated as requested by the star and the remains will be buried at Forest Lawn cemetery of his desire.

Messages of condolences to Mrs. Reid were in all sections of the country. Sydney S. Cohen, on behalf of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America on the loss sustained in the death of your husband. His pictures were of an edifying and elevating character and a credit to his profession.

Death Ends Hard Fight

Reid's death came after a valiant battle for his life of more than a month at a hospital following a nervous collapse. His direct cause was ascribed by physi cians as due to congestion of the lungs of kidney.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—Jacques Tyrol productions, Inc., a New York Corporation, has been formed to produce pictures. Offices have been established in the city's building.

Kane Opens Campaign to Sell Direct to Public

Associated Exhibitors Chief Plans in This Way to Create Wider Demand as Aid to Box Office

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, January 23.—President Arthur S. Kane has taken two new steps to increase public interest in the product of Associated Exhibitors. First, he is launching a national magazine advertising campaign. Second, he is assigning the name "Encore Pictures" to the product so advertised.

In the words of the distribution official handout: "A-sorted is reverting upon an aggressive, vigorous and incessant onslaught.

The Saturday Evening Post, beginning with the February 3 issue, will carry the greater share of this advertising. Other magazines through which the company's product will be promoted are Photoplay, Motion Picture, Picture Play and Motion Picture Classic.

Initial plans call for a year's campaign of this nature. In fact, all contracts have been let for that period.

President Kane makes it plain that this direct to the public appeal will in no wise mean the slightest letup in trade paper advertising. The national campaign is merely an amplification of the company's present drive.

Pictures to receive the benefit of the initial advertisements are: "A Bill of Divorcement," with Constance Binney; "The W. W. W. Man," with Al Bowlly; "The Edward MacManus feature starring May Allson, and Martin Johnson's "Head Hunters of the South Seas."

Mr. Kane's statement follows in part: "In meditating the question of becoming national advertisers we considered the project from the standpoint of an entire year's drive or none at all. I am convinced that continuity is the greatest factor for success in any advertising. Whether you deal in soap or in collar, in breakfast foods or in motion pictures, in house furnishings or in works of art, whatever you place on the market and whatever its market may be it is the established product backed by a name that has become known and has won the public's respect and confidence, that counts and appeals.

"We feel that our direct appeal to the public will result in a most definite benefit to the exhibitor. It is bound to bring patrons to his house when showing such pictures. With a demand already created on which he can build his results on these subjects will be even better than now. It is to the dealer's interest, as ours, to give the picture the demand, and through this closer contact with the people, the establishment of a more intimate relationship. We also expect the public to make its wants known more easily and readily. In fact, in one copy we are inviting the public to cooperate in our idea, and was with the public we want to repeat with emphasis that there will be no enticement in our advertising with which the dealer himself. We purpose merely to widen our market, both with the public and with the exhibitor."

Steffes Wants Special Drive to Revive Habit of Going to Theatres

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 23.—William A. Steffes, president of the Minnesota unit of the M. P. T. O. A., has agreed with the Minneapolis, Film Board of Trade, and what's more, he doesn't want one tor he believes that harmony and cooperation between the two bodies will bring "more concrete and beneficial results to the exhibitor."

As a means of cooperation, the president of cooperative spirit, Steffes says that within thirty days a joint board of arbitration will be appointed.

President Steffes touches upon other phases of the business in a statement just issued. He proposes a special week, known as First Drive, to get people back in the habit of attending the theatre. He says it can be done, but not with the one sheet up in the lobby, or presentation of pictures two years old. It will require real shomowmanship, he says.

land, field representative, was very opitful. He said that in the talks with the state he had found the sentiments very favorable toward the organization. He predicted that during the next adhionional members would be enrolled.

Committees Are Named

President Smith named standing committees as follows:

Legislative and nominating: A. G. Hertich, Cincinnati; J. J. Hurhine, Cincinnati; F. Zehnder, Dayton; F. E. Moore, Fosterville; J. C. Canopy, Bryan; Fred J. Tyer, Portsmouth; Frank R. Thompson, Greenville; W. K. Richard, Findlay; J. W. Sparr, Ottawa; E. B. Berge, Newton; C. E. Haggard, Bethel; W. F. Seitz, Sandusky; W. J. Powell, Wellington; Earl Freeland, McConnelsville; Steve V. Caster, George Steiner, Newark; G. J. Mack, Sebring, John Steinberg, Youngstown; B. A. Pick, Cleveland; Harald W. Ackerman and L. E. Cleveland. There was one member from each congressional district.

Resolutions: G. H. Foster, Marion; L. F. Less, Cincinnati; William F. Leonard, Columbus; F. G. Zehnder, Dayton; W. K. Richards, Findlay, Hob Neoga, Columbus and George J. Wicks.

The auditing committee consisted of Lemont Smith, Alliance; H. E. Horwitz, Cleveland and C. L. Brown, Zanesville.

Gentlemen: W. A. Partetto, Mansfield, chairman; C. A. Smith, Chillicothe; F. H. Stump, Delphos; John Frick, Urbana; Robt. H. Smith, Columbus; G. K. Moore, Bellevue and J. T. Hilden, Xenia.

Ways and Means: James B. Daniel, Akron chairman; F. A. Kelley, Massillon; F. E. Co- stant, Steubenville; Sam E. Lind, Zanesville; V. Smith, Mt. Vernon; L. F. Eck, Marion; R. S. Wallace, Alliance; D. L. Schum, Cleveland, and J. Turek, Youngstown.

MONEY MAKING IDEAS

Which Have Been Used Successfully by Exhibitors to Build Up Their Patronage

By J. F. HILEMAN

(Broadway Theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Mich.)

I think the use of trailers is the best and cheapest way to advertise a coming special. All they cost is the postage, and are obtainable on nearly every film. Some that we have used and that have attracted attention are as follows: "Molly O.," "Trouble," "The Masquerader," "In the Days of Buffalo Bill" and others.

By W. RAY ERNE

(Rialto Theatre, Charlotte, Mich.)

We are trying out one cheap price night a week, and so far it has been rather successful. We are calling this one "Variety Night," as we give them a dramatic feature, a two-reel Western and a two-reel comedy, something to suit every patron. Our regular prices of 10 and 25 cents are reduced to 5 and 15 cents for this one night only. Any more would be foolish.

By E. D. KEILMANN

(Grand Theatre, Topkea, Kans.)

I enclose a herald, furnished me by the exchange, showing how I handled it. You will notice that I increased the effectiveness of the appearance of the fake bank book by having the imprint of a local bank thereon. For this advertising, the bank paid the cost of the herald and my ad on the back. I sent 2,000 through the mail to members of the Chamber of Commerce and the Y. W. and Y. M. here, getting a good story in one of the local papers for a "unique cooperative advertising idea."

EDITOR'S NOTE—The bank book referred to is one of the effective exploitation aids furnished by Warner Brothers for their picture "Your Best Friend," published on the state right market.
THE THEATRE
A department of practical showmanship

“What Have 'Exploiteers' Done for You?” Answered
By Letter in This Issue

J. P. Lannon's query as to the average exhibitor's experience with professional exploitation men, published in this department last week, is replied to by F. E. Johnston, Court theatre, Wheeling, W. Va., in his Theatre Letter in this issue.

Mr. Johnston is not an "average" exhibitor. He is, in fact, manager of a theatre devoted to both pictures and stage productions, a condition which has important bearing upon his experience with Bill Robson, "Goldwynner," the subject of his communication.

The Court exhibited "Sherlock Holmes." It was an important point for consideration in the exploitation campaign that patrons must not confuse the film production with the stage play. The theatre was prepared to go to considerable expense to finance the advertising of the engagement.

In his letter Mr. Johnston gives full details of the very comprehensive billing used. It is notable that the picture was not advertised as "Not a Stage Play," a negative but important virtue of the campaign.

His closing statement is to the effect that, "Business picked up consistently throughout the week," but the entire letter should be read.

Thus the second recorded experience with professional exploitation men. And another vote for their maintenance and use of their services by exhibitors.

If it is generally true that exchange representatives make for bigger theatre profits there is much room for development in this branch of service.

What have the "exploiteers" done for you?

A Better Theatre Platform

7. Sign Grammar

A man's first words catalogue him.

What he says is usually important, generally an acknowledgment of an introduction, but the manner of expression, the words employed, give you instant index to his personality.

First impressions endure.

A theatre's sign is its mouthpiece. The first words that it conveys to your consciousness influence you favorably or unfavorably. You are attracted or repelled.

In the case of the theatre the first impression is even more likely to endure, as the theatre does not enjoy occasion, in most cases, to amplify and correct an unfortunate introduction.

The need for grammatical theatre sign copy is evident.

Grammar, a forbidding word, is used here because none other applies.

The best theatre signs are, without exception, grammatical.

A portion of the public grasps the import of slang readily. A portion interprets improvised abbreviations with ease. But the entire reading public, these portions and all others, understand the grammatical. Incidentally, everybody respects good English.

Sign language has improved steadily with the advent of new and better sign equipment with greater and greater capacity and flexibility. There is still much room for improvement.

As the seventh plank in this better theatre platform The Theatre advocates observance of a hard and fast rule to the effect that every line of sign copy run in lights must conform scrupulously to the elemental laws of English grammar.
CHICAGO'S LIVEST SPOT is the advertised description of the Hotel Morrison's Terrace Gardens, where Ruth Fischer, "The Girl with the Golden Voice," in "Ching Ching Chinaman," a cabaret number of the revue presented by Charles Bohler and the Century Screeners, ends the feature with the above tableau, a direct tie-up with the run of the Al Lichtman feature, "Shadows," at Barbee's Loop theatre.

VISUALIZED DISASTER increases in popularity as an exploitation eye-getter. The Kinema, Los Angeles, used this float, built along unusual lines, to advertise First National's "The Dangerous Age." The stunt can be applied to several contemporary attractions.

NEW YEAR'S DAY, at 8 o'clock, this photograph was taken of the Chicago theatre front. Goldwyn's "Broken Chains," then opening, was one of the most intensively and variously exploited attractions in the history of the theatre.
SIGN LANGUAGE of exceptional eloquence characterizes the front of Barbee's Loop theatre, Chicago, as it appeared during the run of "Shadows." Foster Moore, Lichtman special representative, directed the exploitation. (Story on page 89.)

A BUILT-IN TIE-UP marked the frontal exploitation of "Shadows" at the Strand, Newark, a Chinese restaurant sign next door fitting nicely into the scheme of things. The picture is reported as doing that theatre's best business in six months.

FIRE! FIRE! The populace of Dixon, Ill., rushed into the street to see the fire department in realistic demonstrations made in the interest of "The Third Alarm," F. B. O., shown at the Dixon theatre. Complete story of the campaign appears on page 53, this issue.

A STELLAR TIE-UP with Colleen Moore perfume and Goldwyn's "Broken Chains" the principals produced this drug store window when the picture was shown at the Granada theatre, San Francisco.

PERIOD USHERS are eminently suitable for use with period pictures, as the experience of the American theatre, Butte, with Paramount's Cosmopolitan picture, "When Knighthood Was in Flower," attests.

Letter, Photo, Show "Herald" Service Value

The Theatre, built for service, has another guide to exhibitorial statements of results gained by which to fashion its contents.

When Theatre Letters like the following are received The Theatre believes that it is being conducted in conformity with exhibitor requirements of the day. That is its aim and its reward.

THEATRE EDITOR, Exhibitors Herald.
Dear Sir:
Am sending you a photograph of our lobby on the Jack Holt and Dorothy Dell picture, "On the High Seas," I received this front idea from one of your readers, Exhibitors Herald and had it painted.
The cost was $15 but it was well worth the money. The people could see this far above everything else. Going by it in our mobiles, one glance and it told the story.

HARRY VAN NOY,
Riviera theatre, Anderson, Ind.

DEAR MR. VAN NOY:
It's a great front, we say we. In fact we like so well that we spread it all over the page. I am confident that we treat it properly in so far as the idea is as good that you approved of it. Profitably, certainly your photograph makes possible for others to do likewise. That is a service to readers, and that is what The Theatre is for. Glad you had such good success and it to have figured, however slightly, therein. W W

Gill Combines Sales Lobbies And Economic

Almost anybody can create a selli lobby if he spends enough money. Gain sales strength without sacrificing economic soundness is another matter commonly called showmanship.

R. A. Gill, returning to the circle theatre letter writers after a long interval, does just that thing and tells how.

THEATRE EDITOR, Exhibitors Herald.
Dear Sir:
Under separate cover I am mailing you photos of two lobby displays that I use recently, "Polly of the Follies" and "The Silent Call."

The "Polly of the Follies" display consists of a lobby display a less than a four foot, including the three sheet display. It is a regular three-sheet size with a 12-inch drop in the back to a depth, wire for two lights at the top and a flasher at the bottom. Prepared with white paper for a background and used cutouts in front for additional effect.

"The Silent Call" expense was for the cost of the beaver-board and six-sheet n
Harry Van Noy, steady reader of and contributor to these pages, fashioned this front for Paramount's "On the High Seas" after a photograph published in 'The Theatre.' His letter, printed this week, tells about it.

What Have the "Exploiteers" Done for You?

Last week J. P. Lannon, Isis theatre, Cedar Rapids, told of his experience with Charles Raymond, Goldwynner, in exploiting "The Sin Flood" and expressed a desire to know how other showmen fare with professional exploitation aid.

This week F. E. Johnston, Court theatre, Wheeling, W. Va., tells of his experience with Bill Robson, another Goldwynner, in exploiting "Sherlock Holmes." What have exploiteers done for you?

Theatre-Store Page Converts "Hard" Editor

"Hard" editors do not merit that adjective. They are, in reality, friends of the theatre, ruling out cheap advertising and thus building up the character of copy carried in their newspapers.

Further, a hard editor, once converted to a policy favoring the theatre, adheres to it invariably.

George Rea made such an editor a permanent theatre friend with one good theatre-merchant advertisement.

Theatre Editor, Exhibitors Herald.

Dear Sir:

Enclosed find copy of first merchant-theatre ad ever in the Washington Daily Herald.

The paper is quite rich and independent. Have tried to get ad on front page. Nothing doing. When I approached him with this he inquired why I did not buy out the works, that I was always wanting the entire paper. Said, "We won't allow our paper to be puddled. We do not solicit any ads. You're not in Hillsboro, are you?"

Then I told him that I came from some place hes des Hillsboro, that I came from Winchester, population 1,000, but that I had been around the world four times.
That got him, and after it was all set up I carried in a proof for his once-over and he said, "Boy, that's the best looking ad ever in the Herald. Hot Dang!"

I was not turned down by a single one I called on. Most of them paid in advance and this page just cost me $3.

GEORGE REA.
Colonial theatre,
Washington C. H. O.

DEAR MR. REA:
Now that the paper has been converted, let the good work go on. No doubt, in view of his satisfaction with the initial page, the editor will make things much easier for you from now on. Congratulations on pioneering well done.—W. R. W.

"Every Day in Every Way" is Browne Chorus

Not wishing to be the only medium in the world not to have borrowed from Cose for a headline, we beg Frank L. Browne's pardon for attaching the above to his prosperity opus.

Business is great at Browne's.
Read about it.

THEATRE EDITOR,
EXHIBITORS HERALD.

DEAR SIR:

Here I am again, but I haven't done a solitary thing that deserves mention except the fact that I am pleased to say my box office reports still continue to prove highly satisfactory to all parties concerned.

The week of December 24 I had the pleasure of playing "Trifling Women." I say pleasure because it is a pleasure when a picture makes money for you.

Knowing that the day before Christmas and the holiday itself are considered two of the poorest show days, I refused to accept that as a fact and made up my mind that I was going to experiment, so I put out some extra paper (100 one-sheets and 10 stands) in addition to my regular amount of window cards, got busy with the newspapers and got about two hundred dollars more on my opening day than I had really expected to get. Christmas Day was another surprise to me and as the balance of the week held up quite well I found that the extra money I had spent to get a good opening was a very good investment.

My next attraction was "East Is West," opening with it on December 31st, and on the opening night I found it necessary to telephone the police department and they sent me a man in uniform to help me control my line-up. New Year's Day was equally as good and the picture held up so well during the week that I was forced to hold it over for a second week, now playing. And all in the face of the stiffest opposition I have experienced for some time. One of the other houses was playing Mary Pickford in "Tess of the Storm Country" and during the week another house opened with "When Knighthood Was in Flower."

For "East Is West" I used 10 28-sheets, 400 window cards, and also a big sign up on the principal corner of the city. The sign was on the roof of a building, being thrown on a screen by a stereopticon. This could only be seen at night but it was a great ad. I also put out 5,000 slips like the one enclosed. The cut is from the press book. I simply adapted it to my own idea.

I had five drug store tie-ups on the strength of there being a notice in the picture where Parker's Tar Soap is used. The Parker's Company cooperated on this stunt, offering prizes to those who would tell in twenty words or less what they liked Parker's Tar Soap.

I had all my usher girls and cashier dress in Chinese costumes and the lobby was decorated with Chinese flags, lanterns, draperies and other atmospheric articles. Oh, yes, the business was just as good but I was careful not to overdo it, as I had a real Chinese copper urn to burn it in. This lobby stunt got me a lot of extra newspaper space, for we have never gone in for these things before and it was a new thing for Long Beach and everyone sat up and took notice. You will have to pardon me for writing any more just now, as my assistant has just telephoned up to my office that it is time to close the box office and he wants me to help him call in the receipts, remarking that it is much for him to handle alone.

Pictures like "East Is West" general cost more money, but they're worth it.

Liberty theatre, Long Beach, Cal.

DEAR MR. BROWNE:

If there were a single note of distress or touch of hard luck anywhere in this letter, I would try and do my best to think of something to do about it and suggest a remedy. As there isn't any, we can do is extend congratulations and our best wishes, that the good business continues.—W. R. W.

A theatre is a good deal like a department store. It isn't difficult to sell ice and clothes, necessities, but the real money is made in selling the lesser titles, mainly luxuries, which bring forth and clothing customers and the like.

A little department store principle, merchandising the theatre program worth while.
Organ Trailer "Sells" Music To the Public

"Theatre Construction and Equipment" printed last week the story of a motion picture reel supplied to customers of the American Photo Player company for use in "selling" their musical accompaniment to the public. The stunt has been tried out in practical theatre operation with excellent results.

The prestige value of the thing is apparent. The theatre organ is a little understood device and exposition of its intricacies serves less to simplify it for the public than to impress upon the public mind its magnitude. Therewith goes respect, which is another name for prestige.

So much for the organ. It can be "sold" very effectively by this means. But why buy the organ?

Why cannot the projection machine, the fly loft, the mechanical side of the theatre generally, as well as the drilling and training of the personnel, be exploited in precisely the same manner?

It can. In all such undertakings the disclosures made should be of such character as to suggest rather than outline in detail the mass of matters complex to the lay audience.

Thus is the imagination put to work, and the imagination is a prodigious builder.

"Third Alarm" Measures Up to Campaign Book

"The Third Alarm," F. B. O., lived up to promise made by the remarkable campaign book prepared by Nat G. Rothstein and discussed in this department some weeks ago, in its performance at the Dixon theatre, Dixon, Ill., where Louis Kremer, of the F. B. O. exchange at Chicago, put the press book campaign into application with brilliant results.

The Dixon Daily Telegraph gave the picture the first publicity and cooperation accorded a motion picture in 8 years: the Western Union Telegraph Company contributed a tie-up; the mayor and various clubs endorsed the picture; the fire department cooperated to the extent of giving sign space on every fire box, adopting "The Fire Ladd" as the official song at the fire chief's convention then in session and making two exhibition runs.

The first run terminated at the theatre, where the firemen rushed to the top of the building by ladder and posted a special banner. The second run led the populace to the river bank, where another demonstration was made.

Superintendents of the high buildings in the city gave space for banners, a great number of windows were dedicated to the purposes of the campaign and the picture was shown to the 500 fire chiefs attending the convention at a special screening.

To advance the quality of short subjects, as of any other quantity, it is but necessary to buy the best.

The cost of the implied encouragement is a good investment as well.

Theatre Visitor

By HARRY E. NICHOLS

Field Representative, EXHIBITORS HERALD

THERE is not a theatre visit, in the usual sense of the word, nor can I illustrate it, even with my reliable snapshotter. This is a blanket reply to the question I hear every day, East, West, South, North, wherever my service car takes me.

"You get around a lot," remarks exhibitor with striking uniformity, "you ought to know what the people want. Tell us.

The simple answer is, "Good pictures," but it isn't as simple as it sounds.

Everybody wants to know what kind of pictures, what type of stories, what amount of short subject support and what, if any, added attractions.

If, as those who inquire seem to take for granted, a continuous tour of the country covering a period of years is indication of authority, then the fact must be that it doesn't make a great deal of difference what kind of pictures are shown, nor what proportion of the program is short subject nor what added attractions are included, though it is my belief that added attractions are in reality of more than added expense.

There is just one point upon which the theatre patrons of the nation agree; and that point is that motion pictures must possess merit.

The big successes that I have found among American theatres are what may be termed mere hobby plays of the best pictures that can be bought, regardless of type. They are known as good picture theatres. They prosper evenly throughout the years.

Such institutions are not touched by fads or momentary favoritisms. They are just what I have called them, good picture theatres, and in the end a good picture theatre is just what every exhibitor wants.
Wagner Letter Gives Views On Short Subjects; Argues For Thorough Exploitation

C. F. Wagner, Bugg theatre, Chicago, advertises short subjects for what they are worth. His policy is one of thorough-going exploitation.

In the following letter to "J. R. M." inspired by a note in the January issue of the "Herald" he outlines his method and gives sterling reasons therefor.

He leaves no room for argument as to the soundness of his policy.

"J. R. M."

EXHIBITORS HERALD

Dear Sir:

In your paper of the 27th I noticed a very neat little write-up in regard to "Rags to Riches" and "Mud and Sand." Here is the dope, right from the shoulder, and you can publish it if you wish.

Most theatres have a four-line attraction board the same as I have, but instead of using all the space possible they seem to try to use as little as possible. Of course, most managers of theatres do not change their own attraction boards as I do, but I want the public passing my theatre to know just as much as I can tell them in electric lights.

It doesn't cost any more to fill your board up with letters that tell a story to the public than it does to fill up with spaces. It's just a matter of a little more work, and that is one thing that never bothers me, just as long as the public keeps coming.

When it comes to telling the people what I have let me ask you this:

How many theatres advertise on their boards when they have a late news? I do, and our good friend Chick Kepler of Pathé can verify my statement. That attraction board is always as full of good news for the public as it will hold in letters.

"Fun From the Press" Regular Missouri Copy

"Fun From the Press," Hodkinson's reel of humor from the Literary Digest, is a permanent feature of sign copy at the Missouri theatre, St. Louis. A photograph reproduced herewith shows the manner of billing.

The Missouri is numbered among the nation's representative theatres in all modern lists. Its programs are comprehensive and high class, including staged features in themselves worthy of electric sign notation, as well as the big feature pictures of the day and an orchestra of numbers and accomplishments.

The example of the Missouri is a meaningful one, a convincing testimonial to the profit in short subject exploitation.

"Fun From the Press," Hodkinson, is regularly advertised in lights by the Missouri theatre, St. Louis.

"Educator" Is Seattle Strand Lobby Feature

Lobby exploitation by still and cutout was accorded "The Educator," Educational Hamilton comedy featuring Lloyd Hamilton, by the Strand theatre, Seattle.

In a close-up of this front received the short subject advertising, all but obscures the feature picture representation.

Not many shownmen go to the expense of making or buying cutouts for short subjects. Not many exhibitors make use of the stills supplied with the product; practically none do both. The Strand is the exception explaining the "practically.

The reproduction of the photographs is adequate description of the display. It sets up a high standard of short subject exploitation for other showmen to rival.

First National Offers Mats on Short Subjects

The First National press sheet for "The Balloonatic," Buster Keaton comedy, includes mats for newspaper advertising that reduce the matter of properly exploiting the attraction to utmost simplicity. EDWIN C. HILL

Appointed Fox News Director

Edwin C. Hill, "the best reporter in America," has left the New York Herald to become director general of Fox News. Mr. Hill’s qualifications for the post are suggested by the descriptive nickname applied by his associates in Park Row. Mr. Hill is a veteran newspaper man, his experience including the reporting of many of the greatest news events of modern times for the New York Herald, the New York Sun and the New York Sun-Herald.

The sinking of the Titanic, the public disaster, the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the political conventions of 1912, 1916 and 1920 are a few of his assignments. He also accompanied President Roosevelt, Taft, Wilson and Harding on cross-country tours, and has been referred to by the latter, because of the friendship between them, as "of my un-official cabinet." Well fitted by his long and varied news-gathering experience for the task of building a newspaper upon a substantial foundation of success, Mr. Hill is looked to for a new standard of newspaper content matter.

Short subject titles are especially significant. The character of the product admits of wide range in selection. The result is timeliness, punch and color. An omission of a short subject title in advertising a program is to needlessly lessen the money-producing power of the advertisements.

Numerous theater ads and hold prestige and patrons by exploiting their orchestras.

The orchestra is never more important than the short subject and seldom as dependable.

If a good orchestra is not a part of the program the same results can be obtained by exploiting the short subject.

If both orchestra and short subjects are on the program, the latter should be given premiere position for the reason that a short subject is a motion picture and an ad for the screen form of entertainment. An orchestra is only a band, with trimmings, and the opposition can hire it away if it is willing to pay enough.

It is easier to write a treatise than a really funny story.

It is easier to find a good novel than a funny joke.

It is easier to sell a public whose daily life is mainly dramatic a funny short subject than a dramatic masterpiece.

Comedy ad is worth its weight in gold.
THOMAS H. INCE, in an open letter addressed to exhibitors, says that if exhibitors will shop more for pictures, the millions of theatre-goers will be forced to "shop" less. He puts the responsibility for "bigger and better pictures" up to the theatre owners of America, and declares there are plenty of good pictures to be had right now. Mr. Ince says:

"Is there not a tendency on the part of many exhibitors to accept the productions they book without having thoroughly 'sold' themselves on them? I am hoping that this tendency is not growing; it would be a bad day for pictures.

"There are good pictures in plenty now being released. And if exhibitors will shop for them, picture-goers will be forced to shop less.

"The exhibitor who shops for his pictures is the biggest asset his studios have, in fact, he is the biggest asset the entire motion picture industry has."

From observation it would seem that more and more exhibitors are doing just what Mr. Ince urges and, as a consequence the results of their shopping tours of the exchanges is reflected in better shows and better attendance.—J. R. M.

"THE CUSTARD CUP" (Fox) presents Mary Carr in a pleasing story replete with humorous situations, dramatic moments and sentimental appeal. It was adapted from a story by Florence Bingham Livingston, and directed by Herbert Brenon. Ralph Spence wrote the subtitles and many of these are quite humorous.

"GIMME" (Goldwyn) is another one of those delightful Rupert Hughes productions which picture patrons have grown to look forward to with more than the usual interest. It was written and directed by the author assisted by his talented wife and, because of its human appeal, will live long in the memory of picture fans.

"BELLBOY 13" (First National) is a Thomas H. Ince production with Douglas MacLean in the stellar role. It presents amusing bits of fun of a light order, bordering on slapstick, and while not uproariously funny, achieves its purpose as a diverting five-reel feature. There are unique exploitation angles that will put it over also.

"NOBODY'S MONEY" (Paramount) is a new and better Jack Holt vehicle, as good as "Making a Man" in every respect, and better in most. The star is supported by Wanda Hawley, Julia Faye, Charles Clary, Lucien Littlefield and a host of other competent players. The story is a snappy yarn about crooked politicians and just plain crooks. It doesn't permit a break-down in interest in the six reels.

"ONE STOLEN NIGHT" (Vitagraph) starring Alice Calhoun, is another "sheik" story and for audiences not grown tired of this style of photoplay it should answer every purpose. The story is light and amusing and although well photographed and well staged, it only fairly succeeds in holding the interest.

"AS A MAN LIVES" (American Releasing), another regeneration story with several unusual twists. There is good action, plenty of suspense and a stirring climax. Robert Frazer, Gladys Hulette, Frank Losee and J. Thornton Banton in the principal roles give intelligent performances.

"THE FLAME OF LIFE" (Universal), Priscilla Dean, Robert Ellis and Wallace Beery are in the cast of this dramatic production from Frances Hodgson Burnett's story. It is filled with tense situations, moves fast and is screen entertainment of a high order.

"MY AMERICAN WIFE" (Paramount) ranks above the majority of Gloria Swanson's vehicles in story value, losing nothing in richness of investiture and scenic interest. It is a story of South American horse racing and politics, with Antonio Moreno effectively present as the chief support. A large and well balanced cast aid the principals in discharge of their roles. It's a wholly interesting photoplay that should give wholly satisfactory box office account of itself.

It is more than gratifying to be privieged to see such a film as "Gimme," a Goldwyn picture, written and directed by Rupert Hughes. The most prejudiced critic of the "movies" would have to admit that here is a genuine story told in motion pictures, and told entertainingly and convincingly. That a writer of Rupert Hughes' ability should turn his inquested talent to writing a story directly for the screen, and then direct it as entertainingly and make everyone in the business feel proud.

A capable cast illustrates the Hughes story. Headed by Helene Chadwick as Fanny Daniels and Gaston Glass as Clifton Ferris, with Kate Lester playing Clinton's naughtily mother; H. B. Walsh as John McGimsey; Eleanor Boardman as Clothilde Kingsley, a society job; David Imboden portraying an unnoticed interior decorator, Claude Lambert; Georgia Woodthorpe as a rich maid, and May Wallace as Mrs. McGimsey, the cast is eminently satisfactory.

The theme is an ever-present one among married folks—the ancient and ever-yet-universally-settled one of just how money should be handled so that either the wife's pride nor the husband's pocketbook suffer unduly. A girl who has earned money and had the handling of it before marriage finds it desperately hard to have to ask her husband for money after the minister has kissed the ride. As for the story—Fanny Daniels gets a job with Claude Lambert, an intrigued deacon, for forty dollars a week. Aside would like to include pleasure, such as hand-holding, with business but Fanny rebuffs him and he promises to eat.

Clifton Ferris falls in love with Fanny, the disgust of Clothilde Kingsley, who could have no aversion to spending the Ferris millions, and to the dismay of his other, who can see in Fanny only a rumble hunter. Clinton marries Fanny, and his mother's refusal to give him a cent, philosophically, and manages to make a living on the curb. He has never had to think about money and it doesn't occur to him that his wife is humiliated every time she has to ask for money to pay bills. She has borrowed five hundred dollars from her former employer who becomes revenged when he discovers what she has used it for—a trousseau to wed his rival. Clinton, off on business, gives Fanny a blank check, which she later fills in for Lambert, as he is getting ugly about the money. Clinton misunderstands; she leaves him and goes back to her old job.

There are some very natural touches in this separation, in fact the entire story is unfolded with commendable naturalness and restraint, and enlivened with Rupert Hughes' human comedy.

Drama comes into its own when the husband follows his wife and Lambert to an empty house and there trembles in the air a portent of tragedy, but explanations come in time, and, comprehending the rock on which their matrimonial barque almost split, Clinton agrees to treat her as a partner. Delightfully done, and a credit to the industry.

JACK HOLT IN

NOBODY'S MONEY
(PARAMOUNT)

A snappy crook-politicos comedy drama without a break in interest or amusement. An up-to-date picture of an up-to-date story by William LeBaron. Scenario by Beulah Marie Dix. Directed by Wallace Worsley. Six reels.

Jack Holt's steadily building popularity should take added impetus from this photoplay. It is as good as "Making a Man," in many respects better. It is a realistic story of American municipal politics with adventure, physical violence, craft and cunning interwoven in a casi admixture. The thing gets off to a flying start and never lags for a moment. Jack Holt is easily the big figure, but a host of excellent players set a warm pace for him. Julia Faye is effectively though briefly present. Charles Clary is calmly potent as the heroine's father, the heroine's obligations being adequately discharged by Wanda Hawley. The bulk of the work falls to a number of male players who in every case satisfy.

Any small American city is the background. Any small politician is the villain, and any upright citizen is the hero, in this case unidentified until the last subtitle. A more or less reformed crook, others who have not reformed, and several plain people make up the immediate circle of principals.

The introduction is novel and amusing. And throughout the action of the picture that humorous note is maintained constantly. The story is never taken too seriously, though always seriously enough to assure watch attention.

Jack Holt's advance during recent months has been a constant one. Paramount seems to have found just the type of material he requires and there seems no end to the supply. This picture should be widely advertised. It has ample qualifiications for satisfying patrons such advertising attracts.

CASEY JONES JR.

(EDUCATIONAL)

This Mermaid comedy, produced by Jack White, starring Lige Conley, resembles a serial in the number of hair-raising stunts performed by the comedian and his company. There is a comical looking locomotive, an exciting chase with bandits, and a sure-fire finish that equals anything ever staged by a comedy director. Lige is commissioned to speed up the service of the Speed-Ball Express, a train that gatherings much moss as it rolls along. A bandit gang robs the express car but Lige saves the money by riding over the car tops on a bicycle and unhooks the engine. Finally he drives the locomotive through a building and carries the bandits away stunned, on the cowcatcher.

DOUGLAS MACLEAN IN

BELLBOY 13
(FIRST NATIONAL)

Entertainment of a light order in this comedy, which, while not up to the high standards of its predecessor, will keep most audiences pleasantly amused. It was directed by William Seiter, from a story by Austin McColl. It is in five parts.

This, as the posters state, is "a story of a wise cracking bellboy whose life is just one pretty girl after another." It has a fairly well conceived plot that never gets beyond the bounds of plausibility and the story is fairly well worked out. It is in fact in Thos. H. Ince's recent success "The Hot-Tenton.

The story concerns a young man in partnership with an irritable uncle. The uncle would have him attend to business, while he prefers love-making. He is rushed to the train until he can make good at something. He becomes a bellboy in a large hotel, and it here most of the action takes place--skillfully vying for a place with the uncle, the boy's sweet-heart and the hotel guests all involved.

The story does not leave a lasting impression but is everything amusing and an air of general whimsicality that will get over with comedy-loving audiences.

MacLean and the other players make the most of their opportunities.

ALICE CALHOUN IN

ONE STOLEN NIGHT
(VITAGRAPH)

Audiences who have not tired of "sheik" pictures will doubtless find amusement in this story of the desert, of an American girl in love with an officer in Arabia, and his novel manner of winning her love and confidence. Light but amusing entertainment. Directed by Robert Ensmie. Five reels.

Although there are some points, such as the love-interest of the charming star, to this tale of the desert country, it is not the best of Miss Calhoun's star-making themes, that of an American society girl of Parthianan ancestry who falls in love with a man who rescues her from an Arab mob and becomes fired with the romance of the desert, is not very original, although there is an unexpected twist to the plot that happily saves the end.

The story opens fairly well and succeeds in holding the interest until the "sheik" angle is introduced, thence it only creates a very slight curiosity as to how everything will end, until the hero, who proves to be the "sheik," comes on and dies his love.

Alice Calhoun looks as attractive as ever and is given good support by a small but competent cast. The desert stuff is well done, the interiors are good and well lit and one or two night scenes particularly effective. Herbert Heyes appeared as Miss Calhoun.

There are interesting scenes of dance halls and bazaars, peopleed with grotesque figures in flowing costumes, and the most charming one is the chase between an oasis of the desert and the hero on horseback.

The dyed-in-the-wood Calhoun fans will doubtless like it but you can't promise them much in the way of novelty in this film.

SPECIAL CAST IN

AS A MAN LIVES
(AMERICAN RELEASING)

There has been quite a run on regeneration stories and "As a Man Lives," made by the Achievement Films Inc. for American Releasing Corp. measures up to the others in thrills, suspense and story interest. It skips around quite a bit, the action starting in New York, thence moves to Paris and later to Utah in the mining district.

Acting honors of the piece go to Robert Frazer, as a young man of wealth, who decides to drink himself to death when a little bookstorer clerk refuses him, and Frank Loste, as an eccentric surgeon of Paris. It was pleasing as the girl and Frazer adequate as the hero of the piece. J. Thornton Baston and Kate Manske appear in important roles.

A thrilling climax is furnished when a youngster sets off a blast which blows the mountains; the gold company; the gold company; there is a shower of debris, the city an instant in ruins. Another is thrown in for good measure where the girl is hanging from a rope in the mine shaft. She is saved by the villain of the piece who drops to the pit below when the rope is seen to be too weak to hold them both. The scene in the cafe, where the girl is used in Paris, the lady is particularly well handled, especially the Apache dance.

Sherry Mason is sent to France by his father on a business deal and to forget Naida, a little girl in a hook store with whom he has fallen in love. He becomes implicated in the death of a dancer and when he returns to America and goes to a mine belonging to his father in Utah, the Apache whose enmity he earned in Paris follows Inspectors threaten to expose Mason's partner in the mine deal and they plan to blow it up. Sherry is saved from death by a kind hearted physician who befriended him in Paris and the happy ending follows.

"HAS THE WORLD GONE MAD?"

The latest Equity special, has been purchased for the Southern New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania territory by Ben Amsterdam of Masterpiece Film Attractions. Mr. Amsterdam had an option on this second Daniel Carson Goodman production, and was unable to refuse it if he did not measure up to his approval as a special production. Apparently he is satisfied that it is everything Equity claimed for it as indicated by the purchase which followed its screening.

GLORIA SWANSON IN MY AMERICAN WIFE

(PARAMOUNT)

Antonio Moreno, playing opposite Gloria Swanson, satisfies all expectations as the South American man lover in "My American Wife." He looks and acts the part well and perfectly. Josef Swickard, Eric Mayne, particularly good as the villain. Pollye Chapman, Walter Long, Loyda Underwood, Eileen Pringle and E. R. Butler are others who contribute bright bits in support.

The story is of a Kentucky girl, owner of a winning race horse, whose winning of a turf classic in a South American capital brings her to Paris, with a powerful but inactive young statesman of ancient lineage. Love follows, but the machinations of business and personal rival, together with the cooperation of his mother to the match of his choice, precipitate complications. A duel with pistol, to the rescue, is a moment of dramatic tension which will stand considerable advertising, some cast passages with an unmained extra dancing in a little Valentine fashion, and an explosive denouement are big moments that punctuate an evenly spun narrative.

The dresses of the star represent what seems to be every style and costume in the modern huge outfit. The feminine portion of an audience should be adequately entertained by this. The story is good, and the investiture throughout is charming. The background is authoritative in mass and detail. The majority of the scenes reveal crowds of cast members who know how to act and look as required.

As a whole the production register distinctly above the usual run of Gloria Swanson's starring vehicles. It is fair to say that the best of them has had, plus star value that all have not possessed in like degree.

TEA 'N TEA

A single reel comedy with enough action to satisfy the most ardent slap-stick hound. It concerns a young engaged couple who plans to give a birthday party are upset by a rival. The rival gets the servants all quit. They hire a lanky negro with a mess of things up and the rival puts T. N. T. in the cake and when the candles are lit the T. N. T. destroys the house.

"NANOOK OF THE NORTH"!

Eskimo picture distributed by Pathé apparently is assured of long exhibition having received enthusiastic notices from exhibitors and exhibitors everywhere. The late to commend this picture is Roy S. Caras, curator of exhibits of the Museum at Museum. Says "Nearly all of recent films can be said to teach something other, but 'Nanook of the North' is a superior teacher.

"The Custard Cup" has these qualities: humor, dramatic moments and sentimental appeal in large measure, and for this reason it will appeal to the majority of film patrons. Although it has at a slight story and is rather drawn out, it has been handled with skill and every intelligent performance of any Carr, little Miriam Battiata and a well-chosen supporting cast, lift it above the average in entertainment value. The story is common to spinning out the adventure is reasonable, and accounts for most of the dullest moments in the production. Judicious cutting would help considerably, especially one scene in garden with the wait and the old man foraging with the hose. This is entirely too long.

Mary Carr, as "Penzie," appears in a role for which she is exactly suited—a role of "Mrs. Penfield of the Cabbage Patch"—and it is largely due to her efforts that "The Custard Cup" is the big picture that it is. Miriam Battiata has been found as the origin of the slums. The subtitling was done by Ralph Senner. Many of these are funny, but there are far too many of them, and it is a few to no purpose. For instance, a first title reads: "A nickel is better in a dollar because it goes to church every Sunday." It is chock full of these kind of expressions, but the photography is excellent work and the photographs are used as the origin of the slums.

Priscilla Dean gives her usual excellent performance with Robert Ellis and Wallace Beery in the important supporting roles. Every especially is cast in a part which he carries off to perfection—that of the Dan Lowrie, the cruel father of Joan Lowrie. Robert Ellis is Fergus Derek, the ever-man at the mines. And if you don't believe women can stage a fight for the screen that is equal in thrill to any ever put on by the "stronger sex," you should see Priscilla Dean and a fellow mine worker mix it in a rough and tumble affair. It makes a lot of film battles look like pink tea parties.

Followers of the star may be disappointed in the fact that with very few exceptions is seen in anything but old shabby clothes, hair pulled straight back, and her face well smudged with coal dust. Also, those who like a bit of dish of a tale of this type will probably find the amount served somewhat insufficient.

But these are less important considerations and are overshadowed by the many big and dramatic scenes. On the whole it is a strong, fast moving story that should and must have the audience with the force of its appeal and its excellent characterization.

The story of Joan Lowrie, who with the other girls working at the coal mines, is England is precluded against her employers. The kindness of the over-man eventually wins her trust and in a thrilling rescue she saves his life from a disaster caused by her father, who had previously been incensed.

BIGGEST BUSINESS in many months, and surpassed only by two pictures, is the record announced for "Secrets of Paris" during its engagement at the Cameo theatre in New York. This film is presented by C. C. Burr, president of Mastodon Films, Inc. The two pictures which surpassed it in box office receipts were Mac Murray in "Peacock Alley" and John Barrymore in "Sherlock Holmes." Mastodon officials attribute this remarkable busi ness to the unusually exciting story told in "Secrets of Paris," which is an adaptation of Eugene Sue's "The Mysteries of Paris." Remarkable box office results also from Philadelphia and Los Angeles where the picture played at the Victoria and Symphony theatres respectively.

CAPITAL SERIES is the name of the new block of pictures which Universal will offer the exhibitors beginning on February 26. Success of the Laemmle Nine, the company announces, encouraged it to offer this new series. Here’s the lineup for the new group: “The Prisoner,” George Burr McDougal story starring Herbert Rawlinson, published on February 26; “The Bolster Door,” George Gilks’ story featuring Frank Mayo, March 5; “The Midnight Guest,” produced by George Archeban with Grace Darmond in the leading role; “Single Handed,” starring Edward (Hoot) Gibson, March 26; “His Good Name,” a William Shavins McNutt story, April 2,

UNIVERSAL for the first time in six years has gone onto the open market for a picture. It has purchased Charles Brabin’s attraction, “Driven,” for publication as a Jewel. Universal says that the picture is being hailed as one of the strongest of the season. Burr McIntosh, Charles Emmett Mack, Elmer Fair, George Bancroft and Emily Fitzroy are in the cast.

THE FLIRT,” Hobart Henley’s Jewel production, has had a successful run at the Randolph theatre, Chicago. Newspapers in Chicago said of it: “The Flirt is intensely real. It throbs with humanity.”—Chicago Evening American. “It is without doubt one of the best offerings ever put out.”—Chicago Tribune. Others were equally as praiseworthy.

A SHOPGIRL” is to be given an opportunity to play in C. B. C. B. C. announces—considered the best screen material. In turn a committee comprised of Estelle Taylor, Mae Busch, Joe Brandt, Harry Cohn, Director Ed-ward LeSaint and others will select from the entire group the one considered best fitted for a role in “Temptation.”

INCREASING PRODUCTION at the Eastern plant of Paramount is under way, while on the West Coast things are less active following conclusion of five productions and the launching of new ones. This bull is a forerunner of capacity production shortly. In the East George Melford is making You Can’t Fool Your Wife,” Walder- mard Young’s story, and Allan Dwan “Glimpses of the Moon,” by Edith Wharton. In preparation are “The Exciters” to star Bebe Daniels, and “Fog Bound,” featuring Dorothy Dalton. “Dark Secrets” with Dorothy Dalton and “The Leopardess” with Alice Brady are now being edited. On the West Coast only four companies are working and William de Mille is making “Grumpy,” Mary Miles Minter starring in “The Trail of the Lonesome Pine.” Gloria Swanson is starring in “Prodiga Daughters,” and Dorothy Dalton in “The Law of the Lawless.” Within the next few days “The Rustle of Silk” with Fritzi Compton and “Contraband” with Agnes Ayres; “The Cheat” with Pola Negri and other pictures will be started Thomas Meighan and Company are in Panama making “The Ne'er-Do-Well” while Alice Brady and Director Henry Kolker are in Canada making “The Snow Bride.”

BIG THINGS ARE promised by Para-mount in “The Covered Wagon,” being completed by James Cruze. John C. Flinn has left for Los Angeles, where he will confer with Jesse L. Lasky on exploitation features of the production, an expects to bring a print back to New York with him by February. No publication date has been set for this Emerio Hough’s epic of the great west although through arrangement with A. Appleto & Co., publishers, an extensive box dealers tieup is being launched. Th production will probably be shown advanced prices in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles before being published.

ARTHUR H. Roddick, supervising director of S. L. Pictures, produced by Associated Pictures for Metro, is in San Diego supervising construction of the first stage of the new S. L. studios, which when complete will have fourteen working stages. The company's new picture, "Your Friend and Mine," has been completed with Willard Mack, Enid Bennett and Allene Ray in the leading roles. Shortly the company will launch production on "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," with Lon Chaney, Willard Mack and Barbara La Marr.

"QUINCY ADAMS SAWSER" will have its premiere presentation in the Middle West at the Chicago theatre on January 29. An extensive billboard campaign has been launched by the Chicago exchange of Metro. Bert Ennis will be in Chicago to aid in promoting the attraction which has had successful runs at a number of theatres.

Equity

"HAS THE WORLD GONE MAD?"

Equity Pictures Corporation announces that it has selected this exploitation title for its next "special with an all star cast," which Daniel Carson Goodman wrote and produced. It was made under the working title of "Something for Nothing," but was renamed, the company announces, by a committee composed of executives, exhibitors, exchange men and the author.

In the cast of the attraction are Charles Richman, Robert Edeson, Vincent Coleman, Mary Alden, Elmer Fair, Hedda Hopper and Lyda Laro.

This picture is expected to surpass Mr. Goodman's previous production, "What's Wrong With The Women." Equity says the picture will be greeted by independent exchanges as a great sensation.

Metro

"YOUR FRIEND AND MINE," the Willard Mack sketch which Sawyer-Lubin is producing for Metro, will be a brilliant presentation, the distributors declare. Clarence G. Badger is directing it. One of the high spots in the feature will be a "death dance" performed by Frederic Ko'Vert, for which he has designed an unusual costume consisting of 3,000 pieces. In the cast are Enid Bennett, William Mack, H. H. Van Loan, Willard Mack, Hunley Gordon, Otto Lederer, Rosemary Theby and others.

"THE FOG," William Dudley Pelley's story, will be started late this month under the supervision of Max Graf and H. H. Van Loan. The author has been making daily visits to the Metro plant.

TWO PLAY-ERS who have been stars in their right, Wanda Hawley and Tom Santshi, support William Far- num in his current Fox publication, "This Commandment," which will reach the theatres on January 28. In this Charles Kenyon story Farnum again is the outdoor Westerner in quest of justice and will roll out his fists and firearms in its fulfillment.

AL ST. JOHN COMEDIES are scheduled as follows: "Young and Dumb," January 25, and "The Salesman," March 11. Promotional publication dates announced on these were January 21 and March 4.

Cosmopolitan

A MAMMOTH SET measuring 300 feet by 300 feet and covering a floor space of 60,000 square feet has been constructed by Cosmopolitan for its production of "Little Old New York," which Sidney Olcott is directing. It was necessary to erect the set in the 23rd Regiment Armory in New York, because no studio of required size was available. The set represents the Battery and Bowling Green as it looked a century ago. Joseph Urban designed it. Forty-six available acres of 1,000,000 candles power each, twenty-four domes, thirty-six banks and thirty spotlights illuminate the set. Luther Reed adapted this Rida Johnson Young story.

EILEEN CHRISTIE, well known on musical and dramatic stage, makes her screen debut in Cosmopolitan's "The Enchanted." under the direction of Alan Crosland. This attraction features Lionel Barrymore and Alma Rubens. In this picture are revealed the wild extravagances of European aristocracy prior to the war.

American Releasing:

THE NEW FUGAZI theatre, situated in New York's populous Italian district, is preparing for a gala event on January 25 when "The Sign of the Rose" will be the attraction for two weeks. George Beban and his company of players will offer their combination of spoken drama and motion picture entertainment exactly as performed at the professional presentation given at the Earl Carroll theatre. There will be three performances daily during the run at the Fugazi.

Thomas H. Ince:

"HER REPUTATION" is the first of a series of new Thomas H. Ince specials for the 1923-24 season, on which rapid progress is being made. It is a story of newspaper life with McAvoy in the lead role supported by Cullen Landis. The production is being made from an original story by Bradley King, under the direction of John Griffith Wray.

BIGGEST FIRST NIGHT in the history of the Pitt theatre, Pittsburgh, is the boast for "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," which opened at that house on January 15. A throng of notables attended the premiere, among them being Mayor Magee who really acted in the capacity of master of ceremonies. A comprehensive exploitation campaign, directed by Pete Smith, preceded the opening.

With the Procession in Los Angeles

By Harry Hammond Beall

Paul N. Wilson, short story writer and former newspaperman of this city, has just completed the titling and editing of "The Midnight Guest," an original story by Rupert Julian, directed by George Archainbaud for Universal.

In order to successfully film scenes of the interior of a submarine, a complete replica of the U. S. Submarine is constructed at the United Studios for the forthcoming Maurice Tourneur production of "The Isle of Dead Ships." More correctly speaking, a half of a submarine has been built, for the big sub is cut in half lengthwise. Another realistic set recently constructed at the same studio is the huge ice skating rink built for Allen Holubar's special starring Dorothy Philips, "The White Frontier."

If Hunt Stromberg's comedy, "Rob-'Em Good," a burlesque on Doug Fairbanks' cinema classic, is advertised after the fashion of "Robin Hood in Hollywood," what will it be when it is shown in a Hollywood suburb? We may wake up some morning to be confronted by billboards reading "Rob-'Em Good in Hollywood," and some of our local merchants will undoubtedly leave town at once. At any rate the comedy classic featuring the "Bool" will have to be exploited with kid gloves.

Phil Goldstone's big production and thrill-of-the-drama, "His Last Race," directed by Howard Mitchum, will shortly be released on the state right market. The cast of the special includes such well known names as Pauline Starke, Noah Beery, Bob McKim, Tall Marshall and others. "Snowy" Baker, the well known Australian sportsman, plays a feature in the picture which will probably be Goldstone's most pretentious release in many a day.

Grauman's Metropolitan Theatre, which is rapidly nearing completion, was the scene of unusual activity the other night when Sid Grauman escorted an invited group of newspaper and magazine writers on a tour of inspection of the structure which will be formally opened on January 26.

Mr. and Mrs. Perley Poore Sheehan were dinner guests recently to Thomas Pat- ten, western representative for Will Hays and Mrs. Patten, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Eyton and Irving Thalberg, director general of Universal.

Are Charlie Chaplin and Pola Negri secretly married? This is the question that is being asked by members of the Hollywood picture colony. It was recently learned that the famous stars spent the week-end at Santa Barbara's idyllic "Honey- moon House" otherwise known as the Hotel Samarkand—but apparently it didn't mean anything as both Charlie and Pola have issued strong denials. Anyway it's fu- ture for the village gossipies and the yellow journals.

Every motion picture star in Los Angeles will be asked to aid in a scheme for nation- ally advertising the American Historical Revue and Motion Picture Exposition to be staged in this city next summer. Every answer to every fan letter will be rubber stamped like this: "Are You Coming to the International Exposition that the film industry will hold in Los Angeles next summer?" It will be signed by the star. The plan has already been adopted by sev- eral of the film luminaries.

Allen Holubar is considering a number of suggestions for a permanent title for his second First National production starring Dorothy Phillips. The picture now carries the working title, "The White Frontier," but as our friend Rube Goldberg, the eminent cartoonist would say, "it doesn't mean anything," hence the director-producer is seeking a more fitting name for his big pro- duction of the Canadian Northwest. As no prizes or cash bonuses are offered for a new title, professional contest advisers and "sure thing" title writers are asked to lay off.

Blanche Sweet is to play the title role in "Mickey." Nellie's production of "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," the Thomas Hardy novel which is to be picturized for Gold- wyn. The new film will probably be under way in about five or six week at the latest and as many of the scenes have already been shot in England it will not be long be- fore the special will be ready for publication. The marriage of Miss Sweet and Nellie was a notable event of last summer.

Connie Talmadge now has plenty of di- rectors but she is sadly in need of a suit- able story. Then she'll go to work. Two directors for the talented star were signed recently by Joseph Scheck, producer. They are Sid Franklin and Vic Heerman, the former recently having directed sister Norma Shearer's famous new motion picture on the Selznick staff. The important thing now is to secure a story that will fit the little star's rare personality.

Pretty Marie Prevost, a fastly rising comedy star, has been signed to interpret the leading feminine role in "Red Lights," the cin- ema version of the notable mystery play, "The Rear Car," which but recently closed a long run at a local stock theatre. The picturization is to be made by Goldwyn and preparation of the script is now in the hands of Carey Wilson.

Bonnie Wilson, who is now doing publicity and hand shaking for Mike Levey at the United Studios and also for Maurice Tourneur, the producer, was formerly press representative of the shipyard at San Francisco. Hence Bonnie knows how to "put it over" and as a result has been welcomed by the local scribes with open arms.

Mark Larkin, news editor of the Pick- ford-Grauman's studio, drops the hint that Marilynn Muller, former vaudeville beauty and wife of Jack Pickford, will soon join her husband in his picture work here as the haway, young couple will be main- enced separation as a result of their indi- vidual occupations. Miss Muller will give up her theatrical career work for a place in Jack Pickford productions in the dis- tant future if we may believe all we read in the manner of press material agent.

The Irish are to have their innings at the P. B. Schuberg studio. "April Showers," the picture already termed "The Irish Hu- moroscope," is to go into production with Tom Forman as director, Colleen Moore as feminine lead and Kenneth Harlan playing opposite her. Every other player in the cast will be of Irish extraction. "April Showers" is again "Rob-'Em Goldwyn" and will be shot on the backlot of Dublin Castle before he will be permitted to sign on the dotted line. The production will be published by Al Lich- man.

Work has been started on "Main Street" at the Warner brothers studio. Harry Beaumont is producing the "Rob-'Em" in the cast are Florence Vidor, Monte Blue, Robert Gordon, Noah Beery, Louise Fa- cenda, Harry Mydans, Otis Harlan and Jo- sephine Crowell. This is not the complete personnel but just the cast up to date. Some line-up, eh?

Walter Hiers, round comedian who recently became a benefact, is expected hom- e from his wedding tour this week and will at once begin production on his new Para- mount picture, "Seventy-five Cents At Hour." "Walt" will be met at the depot with a brass band and his bride will be present with a key to the studios by the fa- follow's many admirers.

An important change in production policy has been announced by Samuel Gold- abrahm Lehman, vice president in charge of production. Hereafter the unit system will be employed in making the big feature picture, to which the company has committed itself. Each director will have his own staff and will be given every facility to put into his productions his ideas and individuality. He will have the cooperation of the department heads in the studio but each unit will be separate unto itself, the announcement declares.

Excitement is running high and wild ri- mors are afloat as the election of new officers for the "Wampa" will take place next Monday. Two tickets will be in the field, we are in- formed, one headed by Joe Jackson, Gold- wyn press representative, and the other by Harry Wilson, Sol Lesser's top publicist. Torel light parades, election cigars and other pr- polling requisites are being practiced in the existing faction. The ballot will be closely guarded, however, and each ele- toment will be scrutinized before being pre- mitted to stuff the ca- be.

Hollywood now has its initial cabaret restaurant. The Montmartre, recent creation of Eddie Baker, most prominent of the local restaurateurs, occupies a palatial new building on Hollywood Boule- vard near Highland avenue, and plans to gather the brightest and the brightest for an event such as the "The night the movie firm- ment to trip the light fantastic and to end- palatable food.

Screen Message No. 92

The mayor of a Wisconsin city has barred from the screens a certain picture. He admits the picture is above criticism, but says that others of the same type may not be, therefore all must be prohibited.

That's the logic of a reformer. Censorship is conceived in the minds of such persons. That's why it is dangerous to the welfare of the country.

An affirmative answer to each and everyone of these questions means that the theatre men of the country have built a strong first line defense in their war on intolerance.

A strong defense is imperative at this moment.

Nebraska, Indiana, Missouri, Iowa, Idaho, Washington and other states again face the possibilities of censorship enactment.

The thoroughness of advanced preparations may determine the success of your fight against fanatical aggressiveness.

Eleventh hour methods may succeed, but the chances are a hundred to one against you.

The lawmaker says: "If you are not interested in your own welfare, why should I aid you?"

And the lawmaker is right in assuming that attitude.

Exhibitors of the country have had every available means at their command to perfect an organized force against referred interference.

Sentiment against censorship is becoming widespread. Judicious effort on the part of exhibitors should have enabled them to mold a workable defense out of this fast crystallizing public thought.

That the public is drastically opposed to legal regulation of the screen was illustrated clearly by the Massachusetts referendum. That vote may be regarded — and rightly — as a stern rebuke to the reformer.

Did you present the facts and figures of the Massachusetts referendum to your patrons? If you did not you overlooked your greatest opportunity to present the strongest argument against censorship yet offered.

Read again the questions introducing this article. See if you can give an affirmative answer to each. Judge for yourself whether or not you have made an effort to protect yourself and your fellow exhibitors.

The Small Town Situation

MUNCIE, IND.—To the Forum: As a small town exhibitor with his entire capital invested in his theatre, who is depending upon it to provide the necessaries and a few modest luxuries for himself and family and to offer for them a competence in their old age, I read in your Holiday Issue of the Herald your editorial comment on the letter in behalf of the exhibitors recently addressed to Frank J. Rembisch of Indianapolis to Mr. Will H. Hays, in which he makes an appeal in the exhibitor's behalf. It was less in anger than with a feeling of regret at your inability to grasp the situation from the viewpoint of the "ultimate consumer" in the moving picture industry that I read your editorial.

I am not speaking idly nor with exaggeration when I declare that the average exhibitor, not alone in Indiana, but in every state in the Union, is now fighting with his back to the wall. Daily we in Indiana, and I speak advisedly for I know personally the majority of the exhibitors in the state, are trying to figure out "What can I do to add to my service to the public?" but "Where can I make another cut on my overhead in order to meet my increasing expenses?" and "How long can I hold out?"

It becomes imperative to know when admission prices are to be reduced and our inability to give people cheaper amusements when the prices in other commodity lines, fallen long ago, is largely responsible for the adverse criticism that has been noted with growing alarm by all persons connected with any branch of the industry. Decreased attendance has been an inevitable result and this is a blow which has struck the exhibitor directly and which the producer and the distributors do not feel.

While we have heard much of a program of economy being exercised by the producers, while the salaries of stars are being cut, and the business generally is being systematized on a basis bound to reduce expenses, the exhibitors have naturally looked for a lessening of their burden also. But the reverse has proven true.

Film rentals have increased. New rulings have become effective forcing us oftentimes to take pictures we know in advance will not appeal to our particular community or clientele. We are receiving constantly less and less consideration from those from whom we buy, until to-day there are hundreds of motion picture theatre owners facing bankruptcy and hoping against hope for a chance to unload their theatres and quit the business for good time to come.

Please understand that in writing this letter I am making no bid for publicity as Mr. Rembusch was accused of doing. Neither have I an axe to grind. I am simply seeking to help you understand things as we face them and hoping to enlist your aid in reaching some solution that will not only react to the benefit of the exhibitors but to the entire industry as well. Is it not true that in the last analysis, it is the exhibitor upon whom the entire industry rests? Motion pictures are produced to sell and the exhibitor is the buyer. Motion picture magnets of some time only run Saturday night. They could cease to exist and the industry would go on undisturbed. High officials in the industry could step aside and their place could be filled. High-salaried stars could be replaced by others.

The exhibitor is the backbone of the industry. He pays the bills; he exploits the stars and the productions; strives to make each producer's name a household word in every home in his community. He alone suffers when a snowfall or a rainstorm keeps the folks at home on the night when he has a special feature booked. He suffers from the highly organized business methods which are removing any benefit that he might have at one time enjoyed through competition on the part of the producers. To him the industry is becoming more and more, the mighty octopus stretching out its arms to draw him in and crush him.

The exhibitor today is fighting hard, perhaps he should not be altogether discouraged. Certainly there should be a cause for hope that the great stars which have conceived and made the motion picture industry the great institution which it is today, will yet prove capable of realizing the one thing—the rights of the exhibitors—which they seem to have overlooked.

May we rely on you to help bring this matter to their attention more forcibly than we may all enjoy a greater benefit from the business in which we are so vitally interested?—A. E. BENNETT, Strand and Liberty theatres, Muncie, Ind.

CROFTON, NEB.—To the Editor: The comments on "What the Picture Did for Me" I always read first and I am especially interested in what you have to say now. Now that I am more this way than opening Wednesday also.

I wish to make a comment on an outsider company. Do not know whether you publish those or not. Hope you do this one:

Last Fall, I put on "Shepherd of the Hills" with the Glass Novelty Trio. The picture was very good. The music! Oh, baby! That was good. They all said: "Best music this burg ever listened to." They work on percentage basis and they acted the gentlemen about everything. I would say, to all exhibitors who have the chance to play this: "Grab them quick. You will not regret it, nor will your patrons kick on the prices. The worst kickers were pleased."—HELEN DREKLER, Star theatre, Crofton, Neb.

This Maurice Tierney production, "While Paris Sleeps," was published by W. W. Hoffkinson on January 14.

PURELY Personal

Interesting news about exhibitors and people with whom they come into direct contact. Readers are invited to contribute items for publication in this section. Address them to "Purely Personal."

Any exhibitor want a good cat? "Gib" Gibbons of the Majestic theatre, Kansas City, Mo., lost his "house cat" last week and advertised that he would give a ticket to the show to any boy or girl who turned the cat in. There were 100 children armed with cats of all description were waiting at the theatre for Mr. Gibbons.

Fred G. Sliter, Associated First National field manager, stopped off in A1 last week long enough to supervise construction of a home which he is building in one of the suburbs. He left for the west in the interests of the short subject department.

Lew Nathason, who operates the Gen theatre at Toppeka, Kan., has turned his salesman, having sold out the city territory for F. B. O. He will continue to operate the theatre.

Frank L. Newman, owner of the Royal Newman and Twelfth Street theatre Kansas City, gave his annual good fellowship party for members of his organization which included employees of the three theatres. The event was held in the Colonial room of the Hotel Muehlebach, beginning at 11:15 o'clock at the close of the last show at the theatres. Among the guests were, including 250 employees and personal friends of Mr. Newman, a number of musical numbers were presented by members of the Newman organization, old-time dances, including the Virgin reel, as well as other modern dances were featured. This is the ninth annual party which Mr. Newman gives his organization.

W. Benjamin, former Universal salesman in Kansas City, who recently was appointed F. B. O. branch manager Omaha, has been promoted to the position of special F. B. O. representative. Mr. Benjamin, after going to Omaha, was sent to Des Moinl 1A, where he made a record that qualified him for his present position.

George T. Cruzen has been appointed manager of the Plaza theatre, Sioux City, Iowa, by Hostetter Amusement Company.

A new precedent has been established by the Apollo theatre, Kent City's larger suburban houses, owned by O. D. Rose. Heretofore the policy of the Apollo has been a change of program each night, but last week "Olive Twill" showed the entire week and did a great business the last night than it did first. In the future there will be two changes of program, Mr. Rose announced.

n you can't go wrong on this one. It full of action from start to finish.—W. L. Landers, Gem theatre, Batesville, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Blue Beard, Jr., with Mary Anderson.—Air comedy-drama. Fair business.—G. Trasser, Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Associated Exhibitors

Woman Wake Up, with Florence idol.—Dandy picture. Play it. It will ease any audience.—Royal theatre, Malvern, Ark.—General patronage.

Grandma's Boy, with Harold Lloyd.— in A-1 picture and a real tonic for the jazzes. More power to Lloyd and may he keep himself in shape and make more good pictures.—Y. M. C. A. thea- e, Lake Geneva, Wis.—General patronage.

Grandma's Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—
evry good comedy. Will get the money at pleasure.—P. G. Morris, Regent thea- e, Cleveland, Miss.—General patronage.

Grandma's Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—
acknowledged in for two nights and it eased everyone. The only trouble is ey ask too much for it. If you buy it right show it and boost it and it will make you money.—A. A. Brollier, Kay-pee theatre, Mt. Gilead, Ohio.—General patronage.

F. B. O.

Thelma, with Jane Novak.—Beautiful picture. Many came because of reading book, which is followed closely.—A. J. Inks, Crystal theatre, Ligonier, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Good Men and True, with Harry Carey.—Your patrons like Western's, book this one. Lots of pep to it.—F. L. Anderson, Queen theatre, Marfa, Tex.—General patronage.

Good Men and True, with Harry Carey.—Extra good program. Not a special but pleased a very light attendance. All comments were good. Cold weather prevents attendance, although best pictures are used.—H. J. Longaker, Howard theatre, Alexandria, Minn.—General patronage.

The Name of the Law, with a special cast.—Picture, star are all great. Made money with it for two days. F. B. O. is giving us wonderful service. We used two cutouts on two principal corners of main street and they did the work.—Carroll & Miller, Gayety theatre, Amory, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Name of the Law, with a special cast.—Absolutely a first class picture. We rate it as high as we do Over the Hill. It has a mother love theme that gets them. Fine acting, good cast. Please a good attendance.—C. H. Pow-er, Strand theatre, Dunsmuir, Calif.—R. R. town patronage.

The Kick Back, with Harry Carey.—
The first Carey picture for a long time and it went over big. Bought it right and made money.—J. H. Ebersole, Majes- tic theatre, Avoca, Ia.—Small town pat-

ronage.

The Kick Back, with Harry Carey.—
Good. Good attendance. Admission fif- teen and thirty cents.—A. C. Betts, Pow-ers theatre, Red Creek, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Gay and Devilish, with Doris May.—
Original entertainment, full of fun. Gem theatre, Batesville, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Gay and Devilish, with Doris May.—

My Dad, with Johnny Walker.—A good picture. Will make a little dark in places.—D. A. White, Cozy the- atre, Checotah, Okla.—Neighborhood pat-

ronage.

My Dad, with Johnnie Walker.—This is a dandy good picture, but did not draw a very large audience.—A. C. Betts, Pow-ers theatre, Red Creek, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Up and At 'Em, with Doris May.—
Doris always gets good business here. This one, though, is not quite up to usual standard.—E. D. Keilhman, Grand theatre, Topeka, Kans.—General patronage.

The Glory of Clementina, with Pauline Frederick.—The worst picture that we ever showed. Almost everybody left before the show was over.—F. L. Anderson, Queen theatre, Marfa, Tex.—General patronage.

The Glory of Clementina, with Pauline Frederick.—I consider this the poorest picture it has ever been our misfortune to show. Nothing to it. Pay for it and shelf it. Will never book another.—Pauline Frederick, goodby! Goodnight! M. L. Guier, Auditorium theatre, Shaler, Md.—Small town patronage.

At the Stage Door, with a special cast.—
Received this as a substitute and it was very good. The comedy sprinkled throughout is good and helps to make it what it is.—H. A. Larson, Majestic theatre, Oakland, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Queen of the Turf, with a special cast.—
Nothing to it. Same old race stuff. Not a program picture.—Lyric theatre, Earlville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Silent Years, with a special cast.—They said it was punk on their way out. Did not seem to please one. My advice is— don't buy it.—L. M. Rothweller, Palace theatre, Bison, Kans.—Neighborhood pat-

First National

Lorna Doone, a Maurice Tourneur production.—This one did a fairly good business considering the fact that it was shown during Christmas Week with rather unfavorable weather conditions. David Harding, Liberty theatre, Kansas City, Mo.

Oliver Twist, with Jackie Coogan.—Opened big on New Year's Day, but fell off to a bare thrice daily business. Passsed about half. A remarkable picture.—H. A. McClure, Strand theatre, Emporia, Kans.—General patronage.

Oliver Twist, with Jackie Coogan.—Good picture. It's a rilled but we paid too much for it. If you can buy it right all O. K.—C. R. Sullivan, Fair theatre, Amory, Miss.—General patronage.

White Shoulders, with Katherine MacDonald.—This is the first MacDonald picture ever played in my theatre that patrons ever said they liked as they passed out. It is very good and a good card.—Grand theatre, Jackson, Wis.

The Light in the Dark, with Hope Hampton.—Good picture. Play up the story about the Holy Graal.—C. F. Kriegbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

The Light in the Dark, with Hope Hampton.—Beautiful to look at, but not a cast showing. This star has no power whatever in my city and the show was a very poor box office card.—Grand theatre, Jackson, Wis.

The Bond Boy, with Richard Barthelmess.—Dick Barthelmess can always be depended on to deliver the goods if a good story is to be worked up and most of the features he has been in have been A No. 1. The Bond Boy is as good as Tol'able David, or at least the people who saw it thought so. I find Barthelmess pictures drawing better than many others, although none draw very good.—H. J. Longaker, Howard theatre, Alexandria, Minn.—General patronage.

Alias Julius Caesar, with Charles Ray.—Better than the last few Ray pictures.—W. A. Dutton, Plaza theatre, Manchester, Ind.—General patronage.

East is West, with Constance Talmadge.—It has been months since we ran a picture that gave the satisfaction this did. 100% production.—C. R. Sullivan, Fair theatre, Amarillo, Texas.—General patronage.

East is West, with Constance Talmadge.—Good picture. Please everyone. Rental too high for us to make money.—E. S. Brewer, Strand theatre, Owasso, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

East is West, with Constance Talmadge.—Constance has redeemed herself with all who had tired of her former picture shows by demonstrating in East Is West that she is capable. The plot was different to most features and didn't stick too long, but continued all that could be asked. It is real entertainment with plenty of comedy. It also has it's tiny parts just fair.—H. J. Longaker, Howard theatre, Alexandria, Minn.—General patronage.

The Masquerader, with Guy Bates Post. Not a towns. Did pay out on it, but must say that picture is good.—A. J. Inks, Crystal theatre, Ligonier, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The Masquerader, with Guy Bates Post.—Very good attraction with box office value for small towns. First National has their classification boosted double the equitable rental. Can't come out on First National with this exhibition problem. Case 50 exhibition, in agreement, as rentals have increased more than 75% since purchasing franchise, and business has fallen off. Result, we are working for First National, playing their pictures. Six more months and then we hope for relief.—F. G. Morris, Regent theatre, Cleveland, Minn.—General patronage.

The Eternal Flame, with Norma Talmadge.—Splendid entertainment. Rental too high. First National has Captain Kidd stopped. I've pulled them out of Grand theatre, Owasso, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Eternal Flame, with Norma Talmadge.—Very good, but I don't consider it as good as Sphilin Through.—C. F. Kriegbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

The Seventh Day, with Richard Barthel-mess.—Very good, but not as strong as Tol'able David. Worth the money asked for it.—Lyric theatre, Earlville, Ill.—General patronage.

A Question of Honor, with Ania Stewart.—Star draws better than average business for us. Lots of favorable comments on this one. Out of town, any audience. Used a five-piece orchestra.—J. F. Hileman, Broadway theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Seventh Day, with Richard Barthelmess.—Nothing to it. Barthelmess delivers better story material.—Crosby Bros., Lily theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Sonny, with Richard Barthelmess.—A dandy picture enjoyed by all. Good clean comedy and a few zips.—Clifford L. Niles, Grand theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.—General patronage.

The Deuce of Spades, with Charles Ray.—Stay away from it.—W. A. Dutton, Plaza theatre, Manchester, Iowa.—General patronage.

The Primitive Lover, with Constance Talmadge.—Oct. 7.—General patronage.

The Infidel, with Katherine MacDonald.—Fair picture. Fair business.—G. Strasser, Sons, Embassy theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Roses of the Sea, with Esther Ralston.—Not so much. Used this December 29th and 30th and it flopped for Christmas day.—W. Ray Renne, Rolla theatre, Charlotte Mich.—Small town patronage.

Tol'able David, with Richard Barthel-mess.—Very good picture that pleased the few who saw it, but no fault of picture, lack of patronage. We sold out the week before Christmas.—Crosby Bros., Lily theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Tol'able David, with Richard Barthel-mess.—Very good, but we got a bad rip on it. Several stops on same.—Olen Reynolds, Pearl theatre, Hymera, Ind.—Small town patronage.

One Clear Call, with a special cast.—Good. A real picture and you won't afraid to face your patrons when the come out.—E. Galey, Crystal theatre, Wayne, Neb.—General patronage.

One Clear Call, with a special cast.—Better than the above. Sold out at advanced admission.—W. A. Dutton, Plaza theatre, Manchester, Iowa.—General patronage.

Posse, a Marshall Neilan production.—A great picture for the children as they enjoyed it immensely. It drew well not so good.—Crosby Bros., Lil-I-olif, patrons.—Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Blind Hearts, with Hobart Bosworth.—Fairly good picture, in fact it's like a second Tol'able David.—L. A. Larson, Majestic theatre, Oakland, Neb.—Small town patronage.

The Last of the Mohicans, with a spe- cial cast.—Better than the other practically any advertising it drew got business two days.—J. C. Rowton, Orlin theatre, Quinon, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Sign on the Door, with Norma
Talmadge.—This proves again that Napoleon's fruitful acts were very versatile one. A gripping drama that pleased very much here. —Sudie I. Haney, Liberty theatre, Des Moines, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Peck's Bad Boy, with Jackie Coogan.—Ran this for benefit of M. E. Sunday School. Cost $25.00. Charged twenty-five and thirty-five cents. Received poor print and queer us with patronage.—A. C. Betts, Powers theatre, Red Creek, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Boys in Blue, with Jackie Coogan.—It drew a good house and pleased. Ran Samson in The Agent with it. Result—two days of good business.—M. L. Grier, Auditorium theatre, Slater, Mo.—Small town patronage.

The Half Breed, with a special cast.—Good picture with a wrong title. Popular though it is Western.—G. Strayer Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Two Minutes to Go, with Charles Ray.—Quizzed this to rave over, but nothing in particular to kick about.—R. M. Harrington, Star theatre, Lathrop, Mo.—Small town patronage.

Fools First, a Marshall Neilan production.—Considered this a very good crook picture.—C. F. Kriegbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

The Woman He Married, with Anita Stewart.—Just got by for a fair program picture.—Clifford L. Niles, Grand theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.—General patronage.

Star Dust, with Hope Hampton.—This is a very good comedy and holds up well clear through the whole picture. We class this as extra good.—Robert M. Harrington, Star theatre, Lathrop, Mo.—Small town patronage.

Hail the Woman, a Thomas H. Ince production.—Great. A real picture and enjoyed by all.—O. Trover, Lyric theatre, Rugby, N. D.—General patronage.

Hail the Woman, a Thomas H. Ince production.—Ran this Christmas night to a good business. All that has been said of it. —Olen Reynolds, Pearl theatre, Hymera, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Smilin' Through, with Norma Talmadge.—Excellent picture I ever saw. Every patron satisfied.— Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

R. S. V. P., with Charles Ray.—Fair program picture Ray out of place in this. Paramount supplied him with suitable story material and it’s unfortunate that he can not or will not get better stories.—Crosby Bros. Lily theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Songing the Wreath,—with Anita Stewart.—Anita Stewart popular here and this gave satisfaction although we were rained out.—R. M. Harrington, Star theatre, Lathrop, Mo.—Small town patronage.

The Woman Gives, with Norma Talmadge.—Title poor, but picture pleasing.— L. M. Rothweiler, Palace theatre, Lathrop, Mo.—Small town patronage.

Dinty, a Marshall Neilan production.—A good picture which did a fair business. Barry does not please extra well here.—Norma Talmadge, Paramount theatre, Lathrop, Mo.—Small town patronage.

Mamma's Affair, with Constance Talmadge.—Here’s where Connie is different. The theme; in a word, the ending it is very good.—L. M. Rothweiler, Palace theatre, Bison, Kans.—Neighborhood patronage.

Wedding Bells, with Constance Talmadge.—Good comedy and kept them chuckling for an hour and a half.—Crosby Bros, Lily theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Not Guilty, with a special cast.—Better than expected. One that did not fail to please. Book it.—L. M. Rothweiler. Palace theatre, Bison, Kans.—Neighborhood patronage.

One Arabian Night, with Pola Negri.—Not suitable for neighborhood houses. Pola Negri gets the knife as usual.—Crosby Bros. Lily theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Jack Knife Man, with a special cast.—Nothing big, but just a good average picture. Photography stark. I gave it an extra and then regretted it. Felt it failed to register at the box office, as I didn’t take in enough to pay for the picture.—K. A. Bethold, Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Serenade, with George Walsh.—Fair
In Arabia, with Tom Mix.—Good, but no better than other Mix pictures. They are all fine action pictures, better than another star on Saturday night.—A. J. Inks, Crystal theatre, Ligonier, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Mixed Faces, with William Russell.—Good comedy drama with political twist in which Russell does some really wonderful work in a dual role.—P. G. Estes, Fad theatre, Kokomo, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Mixed Faces, with William Russell.—Good picture with the star in a dual role. Quite an amount of comedy in it.—C. F. Kriegebaum, Opera house, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

Fighting Blood, with John Gilbert.—If they like Westerns give them this one. 90% Western. One of the best.—P. A. White, Crystal theatre, White Neal.—General patronage.

Lights of New York, with Estel Tower and Mary McDermott.—No good picture. Lost money. Don't try to run it.—E. Gailey, Crystal theatre, Wa Nel.—General patronage.

Lights of New York, with Estelle Taylor and Mary McDermott.—One of the Fox specials that proved a pleasant surprise as it contained none of the gruesome sensational stuff that was present in pictures when New York was with these girls. In fact Lights of New York was a good sermon in places and irreproachable all through. A fine picture, but few opportunities were given Miss Taylor to display her ability.—P. G. Estes, Fad theatre, Brookings, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Moonshine Valley, with William Farnum.—One of his best pictures. Poor title, as it won't draw the women, though it's a good clean picture. The child doesn't do it any good, however. One real star—Olen Ulman, Orpheum theatre, Ada, Minn.— Neighborhood patronage.

Moonshine Valley, with William Farnum.—It will please William Farnum's followers.—M. L. Guier, Auditorium theatre, Slater, Mo.—Small town patronage.

The Love Gambler, with John Gilbert.—This is one of the best pictures of this star and from the remarks that I heard I think that the next John Gilbert will draw well.—B. W. Merrill, The Lyric theatre, Galena, patroonage.

My Friend the Devil, with a special cast.—No good. None of the Fox specials this year are any good for small town except The Fast Mail. Have two more yet to play.—Olen Reynolds, Pearl theatre, Hymera, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The New Teacher, with Shirley Mason.—Very good picture. You can always depend on a clean show when you have Shirley booked.—J. R. Ulman, Orpheum theatre, Ada, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The New Teacher, with Shirley Mason.—Very good picture. Nothing big, but will please all who venture out to see it. Star getting to be very popular in this city.—H. E. Swan, Empress theatre, Kearney, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The New Teacher, with Shirley Mason. —A picture of growth and spirits and the title would indicate. Miss Mason is at her best. A very good popular priced program picture.—Ben. L. Morris, Olympia theatre, Belaire, Ohio.—General patronage.

The Fast Mail, with Charles Jones.—Good picture. Will glue them to their seats from start to finish. If you want action, boys, this one has everything you ever read about and a little bit more.

Welcome To The Circle

Ensemble please find my first contributions to "What the Picture Did For Me.

Do not know whether you will be able to decipher them, but then I've a good reason.

You see, I have been in bed for over a month having a nice vacation with plebeian, and believe me the "Frosh" looks good to me every week, although I was afraid it was going to go to the deuce.

I am fortunate to have a younger brother and father to run the show. Part of the art and part of the business, but of course they do not do as you would and I am anxious to get up and at 'em again.

Of course when I was lying in bed I had lots of time to write nice poetry as Messrs. Rand, Jenkins and the family of artists do, but you know I'd try and get about three stanzas written and then I'd get mad to think of some of the things we have to face, especially in small towns, and I'd say, Poetry is nice, but let me up for action." If I'd attempt to put some of this stuff to happen to small town exhibitors in poetry —the type of the proper language to use.

I couldn't do without a subscription to your paper. HOWARD SPRAGUE, Park theatre, Nashville, Mich.

The Same To You

Our house has burned down and have had no show since, but I still enjoy getting the best motion pictures around here.

We hope to be able to build us a house some time during this year, and if we do I will be glad to converse with you about the Theatre "For Me." This one feature of the "Herald" alone is worth the extra time and expense of the usual department.

Wishing the "Herald" much success for 1923, I am program picture that got by.—Crosby Bros. Lith theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

45 Minutes From Broadway, with Charles Ray.—A fine comedy-drama. Keeps the audience in good humor most of the time and extra advertising on this one.—K. A. Bechtold, Opera house, Martinsville, Ill.—Small town patronage.

I Am Guilty, with Louise Glaum.—Good picture. Star well liked by my patrons and did good business on it—Edw. W. Werner, Windsor theatre, Canton, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

THE HOTTENTOT, a Thomas H. Ince production, is a corking good picture. Has all the action, laugh, thrills and spills anyone could possibly desire. Placed it on closing position of program, then listened to enthusiastic praise as patrons passed out. Heard more boosts for this one than on any for months. Get it, boost it and be sure to put it on closing position. Playing repeat next month.—Al, Ringling Theatre, Baraboo, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Nomads of the North, with a special cast.—Wonderful production. Bear and dog. Only thing is there is just enough comedy in the picture to be good. I should appeal to all classes. Extra advertising on this. K. A. Bechtold, Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Polly of the Storm Country, with Milford Harris.—Good title and picture, but star not liked by my patrons. Edw. W. Werner, Windsor theatre, Canton, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Yosemite Trail, with Dustin Farnum.—A good picture that will please the majority. This star not a good drawing card here. I had Ulman, Orpheum theatre, Ada, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Yosemite Trail, with Dustin Farnum.—Very good "program picture. Would not make much of a special. Star does good work.—Lyric theatre, Earlville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Boss of Camp 4, with Charles Jones.—Good, better than the picture Hines Jones, that is what counts. Business just fair. Ver- cold.—J. B. Hunter, Regent theatre Charlotte, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Our lady from Long-Acre, with William Russell.—Here is a good picture with Stirner's "street" stuff that I like to know where Fox got the name for it. They must have put a lot of names in a hat and shaken them up and used it for the name of this picture.—CRAWFORD & NEARY, Idle Hour theatre, Alton, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Nero, with a special cast.—Just another Queen of Sheba and twelve reels of it. No good for small town.—Olen Reynolds, Pearl theatre, Hymera, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Silver Wings, with Mary Carr.—This is a so-called special in nine reels and should have been put in five or six reels. It fell flat for me. I ran it on Friday and Saturday and only had about half the usual business. Saturday business is down so not the fault of anything but the picture, for it is not there and only pleased a few. If you buy this buy it at the price of a program picture and not much about it.—B. W. Merrill, The Lyric theatre, Edgar, Neb.—General patronage.

Youth Must Have Love, with Shirley Mason.—Just an average picture.—Olen Reynolds, Pearl theatre, Hymera, Ind.—Small town patronage.

A Jenkins Suggestion

Am holding my breath for the "Prisoner of Zelda." Why? Because Rex Ingram directed it. Have both eyes focused on "Quincy Adams and the Bully." Because who ever heard that Clarence Badger ever failed? There is a way to pick a program that's right. Watch the director and story and not the press agent and film peddler. What's the director doing now? He's the brains of the whole show. To whom should we give credit for "Ben Hur," and "Wallace Reid, publisher of the story?"

J. C. JenKINS.
Auditorium theatre, Nelliah, Neb.

Do and Dare, with Tom Mix. Different from other Mix pictures. Will get many laughs. It also has a few good thrills. —J. R. Ullman, Orpheum theatre. Ada, Minn. —Neighborhood patronage.

The Strength of the Pines, with William Russell. As good as the subject. If you like action and thrills, you'll get it in this one. A fine Saturday's subject. Will go in any house where Westerns or Northern pictures get by. —H. E. Swan, Crescent theatre, Kearney, Neb. —Neighborhood patronage.

Arabian Love, with John Gilbert. Good picture. Will please most everyone. Ran it with St. John in Happy Pent, which was a good comedy. —R. D. Troutman, Ethel theatre, Ethel, Mo. —Neighborhood patronage.

The Devil Within, with Dustin Farnum. —Here is a good picture for a Saturday for small town houses, as this picture sure has pep and action. After second reel your patrons will be either holding their breaths or standing up waiting for something else to happen. If you have not run it, book it, as you can buy it right. —Crawford & Neary, Idle Hour theatre, Utica, Ill. —Small town patronage.

A Connecticut Yankee, Queen of Sheba and Over The Hill —Played Fox's three giants. After booking them and reading comments I thought Fox had slipped me a bunch of duds. Ran along with some other boys. Played them straight through at 25 and 50 cents and put them over good. Each first class every patronage of its kind. Pleased all. Only mistake thought made (possibly not) used a two reel Lloyd or Borden with each. Made program too long. —Elwood Singer, his theatre, Broadwater, Neb.

Western Speed, with Charles Jones. Good Western. Picture such as pleases Saturday night house. Almost as good card as Mix. A life saver. —J. W. May, Grand theatre, Shawneetown, Ill. —Small town patronage.

Western Speed, with Charles Jones. Very good Western. Sure to please Saturday crowds, Jones generally holds them. D. A. Miller, The Depot, Tecotah, Okla. —Neighborhood patronage.

Western Speed, with Charles Jones. Think this the best Jones picture I've run. Threw out of competition also. —C. F. Kriegbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind. —General patronage.

Queen of Sheba, with Betty Blythe. A good Western. Rare to get a Western and a fine one. —General patronage.

Queen of Sheba, with a special cast. Historical. Biblical romance in ten reels where seven would be far better. Gorgeous sets, impressive but slow. Charlot race interesting; attack of Jerusalem very fine. Spectaculars are good. There is a love plot of first magnitude which makes it interesting. The acting of all is very fine. Betty Blythe as the queen is beautiful. Her costume, however, is too bold. Fox shows his insatiable greed by the terrific price demanded. Many will like this, especially school children, church people and nearly all the women; the male Western fans will fall asleep. Small towns had better think carefully before booking. We charged 50 and 25 cents to about our regular Sunday crowd. —J. H. Hunter, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.

The Roof Tree, with William Russell. This one seems to hold the interest well all the way through. —C. F. Kriegbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind. —General patronage.

Sky High, with Tom Mix. Good picture as usual. Lots of action. Scenery wonderful. A lot of good business. Mix always has been a good star for our box office. —Crawford & Neary, Idle Hour theatre, Utica, Ill. —Small town patronage.

Sky High, with Tom Mix. Very good. Will go over with a bang. Lots of splen-

They Will Do That

I have copies of the "Herald" file since 1919.

Please send me a copy of the "Box Office Record" for the old one has been lost or stolen. The last time it was seen was a film salesman looking up a few reports.

Am enclosing a few reports of pictures run here.

H. E. HOLBEN, Olympic theatre, Lenox, la.

Nothing big, but gave satisfaction to audience.—R. M. Harrington, Star theatre, Lathrop, Mo.—Small town patronage.

The Penalty, with a special cast.—Good picture. Had a number of good comments and no bad ones. But failed to pay expense for a single day's run. O. Troyer, Lyric theatre, Ruby, N. D.—General patronage.

Mr. Barnes of New York, with Tom Moore.—One of the biggest lemon's I've run in some time. Am sorry I ran it, and am sorry an exchange is so hard up they have to sell pictures like this.—Harry Hobohol, Maxine theatre, Imlay City, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Mr. Barnes, with Tom Moore.—Good picture. Tom Moore a good drawing star here.—D. J. Harrington, Strand theatre, Leslie, Ark.—Small town patronage.

Mr. Barnes, with Tom Moore.—A good picture. Tom Moore a good drawing star here.—D. J. Harrington, Strand theatre, Leslie, Ark.—Small town patronage.

Mr. Barnes of New York, with Tom Moore.—Not so good.—J. H. Ehrosk, Majestic theatre, Avoca, Ia.—Small town patronage.

His Back Against the Wall, with Maynard Hargrove, a very mild and pleasant Western free from the usual impossible Western stunt. Sounded to please.—Y. M. C. A. theatre, Lake Geneva, Wis.—General patronage.

Scratch My Back, with a special cast.—Fine picture and show. It kept my patrons happy and that is what I like.—O. Troyer, Lyric theatre, Rugby, N. D.—General patronage.

Be My Wife, with Max Linder.—Will please, although it is close to slapstick, but for a small price and without an extra change we will continue to play it as it is different from the general run.—Russell Armbront, K. P. theatre, Pittsfield, Ill.—General patronage.

The Old Nest, with a special cast.—Should be played in every theatre. Will draw in people that never go.—J. R. Ullman, Orpheum theatre, Ada, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Old Nest, with a special cast.—A wonderful picture and a sure fire attraction. Can't help but please.—C. Harrington, Star theatre, Lathrop, Mo.—Small town patronage.

The Glorious Fool, with a special cast.—A most pleasing light comedy drama.

Nothing big, but gave satisfaction to audience.—R. M. Harrington, Star theatre, Lathrop, Mo.—Small town patronage.

The Penalty, with a special cast.—Good picture. Had a number of good comments and no bad ones. But failed to pay expense for a single day's run. O. Troyer, Lyric theatre, Ruby, N. D.—General patronage.

Mr. Barnes of New York, with Tom Moore.—One of the biggest lemon's I've run in some time. Am sorry I ran it, and am sorry an exchange is so hard up they have to sell pictures like this.—Harry Hobohol, Maxine theatre, Imlay City, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Dangerous Curve Ahead, with a special cast.—Get this. Good, and a new print on same.—Olen Reynolds, Pearl theatre, Hymera, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Dangerous Curve Ahead, with a special cast.—Very entertaining comedy drama, being a take-off on a young fellow's married life.—R. M. Harrington, Star theatre, Lathrop, Mo.—Small town patronage.

The Dust Flower, with Helene Chadwick, her patrons rather disappointed in this.—J. Winingham, Davison theatre, Waupun, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Boys Will Be Boys, with Will Rogers.—Good, but did not draw as well as an awful cold night.—A. C. Betts, Pow'rs theatre, Red Creek, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Bunty Pulls the Strings, with a special cast.—Nothing to this one. Lay off brothers.—O. Troyer, Lyric theatre, Rugby, N. D.—General patronage.

An Unwilling Hero, with Will Rogers.

The Headless Horseman, with Will Rogers.—Wish more pictures of this sort were produced. The Headless Horseman is a good subject well done.—Y. M. C. A. Theatre, Lake Geneva, Wis.—General patronage.

Free Air, with a special cast.—This is a picture any manager can face his audience with his head up. Pleases 99 per cent.—Harry Holohan, Maxine Theatre, New York City, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Free Air, with a special cast.—This is a real automobile comedy drama and if Sally Reiley was in it someone would want a million dollars for it. It has all the thrills, romance and excitement which makes for a lulu. —B. L. Morris, Elk Grand Theatre, Bellevue, Ohio.—General patronage.

Free Air, with a special cast.—Whole me and pleasing to all.—Y. M. C. A. theatre, Lake Geneva, Wis.—General patronage.

The Veiled Woman, with a special cast. No good. Don't book it at any price. Not a big hit. Sugar, spice, and everything that makes for success in a picture. —E. Swan, Crescent Theatre, Kearney, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

No Trespassing, with Irene Castle.—Good clean picture and pleasingly done. Y. M. C. A. Theatre, Lake Geneva, Wis.—General patronage.

No Trespassing, with Irene Castle.—Not as good as French Heels, but a good picture, which will please 75 per cent. —W. Filson, Opera House, Scott City, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Metro

June Madness, with Viola Dana.—Cute little picture. Not much to story, but the kind they like in the North. —Edna Dunton, Plaza Theatre, Manchester, Iowa.—General patronage.

The U. P. Trail, with Roy Stewart.—This kind of a picture seems to please my patrons. They are calling for more. —Zane Grey's, C. M. Vail, Benton, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Camerion of the Royal Mounted, with Gaston Glass.—One of the very best Northers I have seen. Beautiful settings, fine acting, good story, full of action, absorbing and entertaining. We have very little competition, and charged this thirty-five and fifteen cents. Six reels. This is certainly worth booking.—Philip Rand, Rex Theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

Keeping Up with Lizzie, with Enid Bennett.—Not very good. It was supposed to be a comedy, but there were few laughs. —Broadway, Paramount, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

Down Home, with a special cast.—Played this picture Christmas. Drew well and everybody pleased. —J. N. Phillips, Ideal Theatre, Table Rock, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Coast of Opportunity, with Warren Kerrigan.—Not very good.—C. F. Kriehbaum, Paramount Theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

The Man of the Forest, with a special cast.—A very entertaining picture. The comedy is well worked in. Film in good condition.—C. M. Vail, Blende Theatre, Blende, Wis.—General patronage.

The Brute Master, with Hobart Bosworth.—Not so bad. A pretty good picture.—C. F. Kriehbaum, Paramount Theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

French Heels, with Irene Castle.—Pretty fair production. Cast drawer good. —C. M. Vail, Blende Theatre, Benton, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Mysterious Rider, with a special cast.—All of Zane Grey's take well with my patrons. This is no exception.—C. M. Vail, Blende Theatre, Benton, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Lichtman

Shadows, with Lon Chaney.—One of the real pictures of 1922.—Clifford L. Niles, Grand Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.—General patronage.

Shadows, with Lon Chaney.—Lon Chaney, as usual, makes good. Shadows is splendid entertainment and with some comedy injected at intervals it would have been a real success. It is rather sombre as it is presented.—H. J. Longaker, Howard Theatre, Alexandria, Minn.—General patronage.

Rich Men's Clothes, with a special cast.—A good picture which drew fairly good business.—W. A. Dutton, Plaza Theatre, Manchester, Iowa.—General patronage.

The Fourteenth Lover, with Viola Dana.—What a blessed relief to have a picture that pleases everybody. Why can't we have more of these real entertaining comedy-dramas and less of the society and hobbit dramas? —Fred McCullough, Miss Dana. My patrons are all for you strong just as long as you continue to secure good plays such as The Fourteenth Lover.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

Fascination, with Mae Murray.—Splendid picture, and the rental is fair. —One-third the price of The Eternal Flame.—E. J. Breuer, Strand theatre, Oswego, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Alias Ladyfingers, with Bert Lytell.—Just a fair program picture which gives satisfaction.—P. G. Morris, Regent Theatre, Fairmont, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

There Are No Villains, with Viola Dana.—A delightful little drama that business at regular admission price.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

The $5 Baby, with Viola Dana.—Very good picture to pleased audiences. Could be shortened and thus made a better picture.—Nice Christmas program.—J. L. Tiller, Opera House, Mont.—General patronage.
The Man Who Saw Tomorrow, with Thomas Meighan.—Not up to Meighan standard on account of dream stuff. Patrons don't like it. Meighan a good bet for rentals.—H. A. McClure, Strand theatre, Emporia, Kans.—General patronage.

reeling with Theodore Roberts.—Book this picture and book it as it is just the right kind for a small town. Pulled a full house the second night throughstorm. My liked it better than Over the Hill.—Russell Armentrout, K. P. theatre, Pittsfield, Ill.—General patronage.

The Old Homestead, with Theodore Roberts.—Exceptionally good and pleased all. Drew good.—Crosby Bros., Lilac theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Old Homestead, with Theodore Roberts.—Good cast, good picture, good business.—W. A. Dutton, Plaza theatre, Manchester, N. H.—General patronage.

Outcast, with Elsie Ferguson.—Ferguson does not draw, although picture as good as any she has made. Light business.—A. H. Altoona, Strand theatre, Emporia, Kans.—General patronage.

Outcast, with Elsie Ferguson.—This is a good picture for most houses, but not suited to the Majestic. Draw D. A. Bus, Star theatre, Tonawanda, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

On the High Seas, with Dorothy Dalton.—A picture which will give good satisfaction. Has a shipwreck which is one of the best.—Russell Armentrout, K. P. theatre, Pittsfield, Ill.—General patronage.

On the High Seas, with Jack Holt.—A worth while picture in every respect. A story that combines romance on land and sea most pleasantly with its ending that is a surprise. Please big for three days.—Ben L. Morris, Temple theatre, Bel¬lair, Ohio.—General patronage.

Clarence, with Robert Reid.—Darn good show, but it didn't do a whole of a business. Thank Heaven Paramount sold this rather reasonable.—W. Ray Erne, Rialto theatre, Charlotte, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Clarence, with Wallace Reid.—Better than the average Reid, but not a special. Please large Christmas Day business.—H. A. McClure, Strand theatre, Emporia, Kans.—General patronage.

Over the Border, with Betty Compson.—Considered a very good Northern picture.—C. F. Kriegbaumb, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

The Ghost Breaker, with Wallace Reid.—This is one of Wallace Reid's best pictures.—D. A. Bus, Star theatre, Tonawanda, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Ghost Breaker, with Wallace Reid.—Beloved.—Jack Tiller, Temple theatre, McCook, Nebr.—General patronage.

The Ghost Breaker, with Wallace Reid.—Although not much to it, gave good satisfaction as it was what they expected of Wallace.—Russell Armentrout, K. P. theatre, Pittsfield, Ill.—General patronage.

The Pride of Palomar, a Cosmopolitan production.—A show containing little of everything. They called me up to tell how good it was. Used December 31 and January 1.—W. Ray Erne, Rialto theatre, Charlotte, Mich.—Small town patronage.

If You Believe It's So, with Thomas Meighan.—Excellent picture that did well and pleased all. These kind of pictures will help strengthen Meighan's box as a star.—Bert Nightingale, Kozey theatre, Eureka, Ill.—General patronage.

The Man From Home, with Jam Kirkwood.—Very good entertainer. Beautiful and intelligent. This made him highly desirable.—Custer Carlin Victoria theatre, Frankfort, Mich.—General patronage.

The Man From Home, with Jam Kirkwood.—Wonderful production every way. 100 per cent entertainment value. Get it and boost it. More favorable comments for this picture in a long time.—J. J. Crowell, S. theatre, Middleport, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

North of the Rio Grande, with J. Holt.—Fairly good Western.—C. F. Kriegbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

Manslaughter, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—A theme for two.—Of course not adverse criticism. A real production that appeals to the masses.—Crosby Bros., Liberty theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Manslaughter, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—Good box office attraction will please the majority.—J. J. Crowell, S. theatre, Middleport, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

While Satan Sleeps, with Jack Hol¬
EXHIBITORS HERALD

February 3, 1923

This is a first class picture in every respect.—Dan Buss, Star theatre, Tona-lands, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Her Gilded Cage, with Gloria Swann-
by every lady. Did not have one dissatsatisfied patron. (They know the good tuff—all you got to do is to get it and then advertise.)—H. E. Swan, Empress theatre, Kearney, Nebr.—Neighborhood
atronage.

Across the Continent, with Wallace
reid.—Good r a c i n g story. Theodore Roberts is good in this one.—J. R. Ul-lan, Orpheum theatre, Ada, Minn.—
Neighborhood patronage.

Across the Continent, with Wallace reid.—Book this, and don't be afraid of Did a very fine business for us.
It always goes over big here.—Barber
ros., Leg i o n theatre, Verm o n t v i l l e .
ich.—Small town patronage.

A Bachelor Daddy, w i t h Th o m a s Beighn.—Surely a real picture. One hat sends them out smiling. Lots of good comments.—J. H. Ebersole, Majestic theatre, Avoca, Iowa.—Small ruinage.

A Bachelor Daddy, w i t h Th o m a s eighn.—Our patrons liked this one to
We would like to buy a lot more se this one. Absolutely will go over any town, large or small.—Barber
ros., Leg i o n theatre, Verm o n t v i l l e .
ich.—Small town patronage.

Her Husband's Trademark, with Glo-Swanson.—Did not see this one, but and some good comments on it.—J. H. hersole, Majestic theatre, Avoca, Iowa. —
Small town patronage.

Just Around the Corner, a Cosmopol-tin production.—Thought this was a very s good picture.—C. F. Kriegbaum, Para-toon theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General
tronage.

A Daughter of Luxury, with Agnes res.—Best picture starr i n g Agnes ramour has released. Please all be-use it was not so heavy as The Ordeal
d Borderland.—H. A. McClure, Strand eatre, Emporia, Kans.—General patron-re.

Is Matrimony a Failure? with a special cast.—Good comedy of program type. It isn't a special at all, but will please Saturty night crowds.—Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—General patronage.

Beyond, with Ethel Clayton.—Ladies will enjoy this picture. Men didn't care so much.—J. H. Ebersole, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town
atronage.

Enchantment, with Marion Davies. —
Nite clean little picture, but not much to get excited about. Isn't worth much and the exchange doesn't charge much.
Empire theatre, Cedar Springs, Mich. —
Small town patronage.

After the Show, with a special cast.
—Fair. A good program picture.—Clifford P. Xile, Grand theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.
—General patronage.

After the Show, with Jack Holt. —Ve ry good. Should have raised my admission.
It will stand it.—J. H. Ebersole, Majestic theatre, Avoca, Iowa.—Small town
atronage.

The Dictator, with Wallace Reid. — Fair picture that will please Reid fans. and they are legion here. Not as good as most of Reid's pictures. Walter Long has made the comedy in this to perfection.
Did better than average business.—J. F.
Hileman, Broadway theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Moran of the Lady Letty, with Dorothy Dalton.—A dandy good sea story with a real cast. Don't see why Valentino wasn't mentioned on the paper.—
J. H. Ebersole, Majestic theatre, Avoca,
Iowa.—Small town patronage.

Moran of the Lady Letty, with Dorothy Dalton.—This production gave the best of satisfaction, but Dorothy Dalton never runs with the first of the poorest in this picture of any that I have seen her in.—Custer Carland, Victoria theatre, Frankfort, Mich.—General patronage.

The Ghost in the Garret, with Dorothy Gish.—About the cheapest made picture I have shown. Nothing to it. Lay off, brothers.—O. Troyer, Lyric theatre, Canton, Ohio.—Better, N. Y.—General
tronage.

The Ghost in the Garret, with Dorothy Gish.—Absolutely nothing to it, but had them all yelling with joy—so who cares whether they are long or short as they are happy?—"Violet" was some actor himself.—Sadie J. Hance, Liberty theatre, Des Moines, N. ”—Small town
atronage.

The Woman God Changed, a Cosmopolitan production.—Excellent production. Patrons went out of their way to compliment us on this one. Plot unusual and cleverly handled. Don’t be afraid of this one.—H. G. Sweet, Royal theatre, Royal Centre. Ind.—Small town
atronage.

The Woman God Changed, a Cosmopolitan production.—Old, but very good.
In fact, a real picture, I would say. Big success.—J. R. Tullman, Regent theatre, Charlotte, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Inside of the Cup, a Cosmopolitian production.—This picture, if it has ever been played, is one of the best productions and will make you a lot of new friends. You can’t go wrong on this one.
E. L. Wood, Liberty theatre, Lakeview, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Blood and Sand, with Rodolph Valentino.—Good drawing card and good picture, but doesn’t have universal appeal.
With no knockers were heard several stated they didn't care for this type of picture.—Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—General patronage.

Three Word Brand, with William S.
Hart.—Hart very good in this one.—J.
H. Ebersole, Majestic theatre, Avoca,
Iowa.—Small town patronage.

Three Word Brand, with William S.
Hart.—Hart always goes pretty good with us, but this was not quite as good as some we have had. Don’t pay fancy prices for program pictures. The exhibtor in small town knows best what he ought to pay, but exchanges don’t think so.—Empire theatre, Cedar Springs, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Three Word Brand, with William S.
Hart.—This is a good picture and Hart again shows that he is a Western actor who really can act. It pleased well and drew the usual Western fans.—E. W.
Merrill, The Lyric theatre, Edgar, Nebr.
—General patronage.

The Little Minister, with Betty Com-son.—Nothing but praise from patrons.
Book and boost it. A better picture indeed.—F. E. Sabian, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

The Little Minister, with Betty Com-son.—Gave excellent satisfaction. Very high grade production.—C. M. Vail, Blonde theatre, Benton, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Fool’s Paradise, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—Absolutely the best thing we have had in months. Patrons liked it and told us so and we made a little money. Once in a while they let us make a bit for our trouble.—Empire theatre, Cedar Springs, Mich.—Neighborhood
atronage.

One a Minute, with Douglas MacLean.
A pleasing comedy, But MacLean doesn’t draw for me.—J. H. Ebersole, Majestic theatre, Avoca, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

One a Minute, with Douglas MacLean.
—It’s great to run pictures like this one.
You will not have any trouble keeping

Watch Out For

AFrontPageStory

The Truth About Gorham
the wolf away from the door with pictures like this one. —B. W. Merrill, The Lyric theatre, Edgar, Nebr.—General patronage.

Cappy Ricks, with Thomas Meighan.—Good. The story is by Peter B. Kyne, so you can expect a good one. —C. G. Kriegheim, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

Cappy Ricks, with Thomas Meighan.—Very good, although it differs from stage version. —C. M. Vail, Blende theatre, Bennington, Vt.—General patronage.

The Beauty Shop, with Raymond Hitchcock.—The cast in this looks like a world beater and drew some business. This programme is—by far—our worst ever. As a picture to please your audience it is not worth one dollar rental.—Ben L. Morris, Olympic theatre, Bellaire, Ohio.—General patronage.

Behold My Wife, with a special cast. —Good picture. I think it would please anywhere.—O. Troyer, Lyric theatre, Rugby, N. D.—General patronage.

Behold My Wife, with a special cast. —Good. It is Good. Enough good for a special. Should please any audience. Pleased 100 per cent with us. Good Sunday night picture for small town. One shot, three sheets, photos, slide.—W. Sage, Masonic theatre, What Cheer, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Lane That Had No Turning, with Agnes Ayres.—A high class audience picture which should not be played up to the kids. It is an out of the ordinary hit. A picture for the old patrons who can appreciate it.—Ryan & Kundert, Empress theatre, Beresford, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Trouble, a Cosmopolitan production.—One of Paramount's good ones. Played to good business. Print was good.—Olen Reynolds, Pearl theatre, Hymera, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The Good Provider, a Cosmopolitan production.—An excellent picture for general appeal. It hasn't much drawing power, but will please if you get them in.—Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—General patronage.

Experience, with Richard Barthelmess.—A Sunday night picture and one that will go any night though a little heavy for the average movie crowd. —Chas. L. Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—Small town patronage.

Saturday Night, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—Cecil B. De Mille puts the pep in his pictures. They are all good and this was no exception. Pleased 100 per cent. Book it, Boy, and boost it.—D. A. White, Cozy theatre, Checotah, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Saturday Night, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—A fine picture, but did not draw for a small town second night's run. —Chas. L. Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—Small town patronage.

At the End of the World, with Betty Compson.—Did a nice business with the rain coming down in torrents all evening. Our people all like Betty Compson and Mabel Normand but we don't give them too much on this one.—A. A. Brollier, Kaypee theatre, Mt. Gilead, Nebr.—General patronage.

The Crimson Challenge, with Dorothy Dalton.—One of the best Westerns. If you like excitement, book this one, but don't pay too much. It's a good picture and only.—J. D. Weisbeck, Liberal theatre, Alden, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

The Crimson Challenge, with Dorothy Dalton.—Five full reels. A real blood and thunder Western feature. Subtitle stated of the present day. We cannot imagine an audience of people under fifty years of age. Dorothy better get her bobbed hair grow out again and go for her looks. Think it pleased 50 to 60 per cent.—Horn & Morgan, Star theatre, Hay Springs, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

The Cradle, with Ethel Clayton.—This is a high class lesson to it.—R. L. Dowling, Ozark theatre, Ozark, Ala.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Man Unconquered, with Jack Holt.—Jack Holt new to our patrons. Picture well received.—J. Winninger, Davison theatre, Waupun, Wis.—Small town patronage.

The Devil's Pawn, with Pola Negri.—The plot was O. K., but the acting was poor. It pleased about fifty-fifty.—R. L. Dowling, Ozark theatre, Ozark, Ala.—Small town patronage.

White Oak, with William S. Hart.—Regular old time Western. Gamblers, guns, Indians, and everything. Pleases.—J. Winninger, Davison theatre, Waupun, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Bought and Paid For, with Jack Holt.—A good one, but my, the print was pure old junk; caused some to walk out before it was over.—R. L. Dowling, Ozark theatre, Ozark, Ala.—Small town patronage.

Beyond the Rocks, with Gloria Swan- son.—This is a clever and cleverly acted picture even by me. No chance for stars to do any work. Should be on a program basis.—J. Winninger, Davison theatre, Waupun, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, with John Barrymore.—Some of our patrons didn't like this picture, but the "willie" pictures are not with the others liked it. Personally, it's the greatest piece of work we ever witnessed on the screen, by any actors.—Clyde Allen, Casino theatre, Antwerp, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Affairs of Anatol, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—A big attraction. A swell picture. Well played by all the stars.—Edw. W. Werner, Windsor theatre, Canton, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

Footlights, with Elsie Ferguson.—A stage story about an American girl who impersonates a Russian actress. Good. Pleased.—J. Winninger, Davison theatre, Waupun, Wis.—Small town patronage.

An Amateur Devil, with Bryant Washburn.—My patrons sure knocked this one. It also was a poor picture.—O. Troyer, Lyric theatre, Ruby, N. D.—General patronage.

The Charm School, with Wallace Reid.—A mighty good pleaser with our audience. —J. Winninger, Davison theatre, Waupun, Wis.—Small town patronage.

A Full House, with Bryant Washburn.—Not a good Washburn picture. He seems to be slipping here.—O. Troyer, Lyric theatre, Rugby, N. D.—General patronage.

The Testing Block, with William S. Hart.—About the poorest Hart picture I have ever shown. I withdrew it from the box office for—O. Troyer, Lyric theatre, Rugby, N. D.—General patronage.

Our Leading Citizen, with Thomas Meighan.—A great one. Pleased 100 per cent. Theodore Roberts deserves mention in this picture. —J. Winninger seems to always please.—Proctor & Wade, Sol- tana theatre, Williams, Ariz.—Neighborhood patronage.

In Flip Polon, with Mae Murray.—Bet- ter leave this one alone as it is a poor No satisfaction to it at all.—O. Troyer, Lyric theatre, Rugby, N. D.—General patronage.

Sham, with Ethel Clayton.—Imposs- ible story is saved by the comedy of Wal- ter Hiers and Theodore Roberts. These two players make the picture better and therefore I recommend it a good attraction.—H. J. Trainer, Piasa theatre, Blue Mound, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Something to Think About, a Cecil I. de Mille production.—They praised the picture as they left the theatre, but failed to draw them in.—J. Winninger, Davison theatre, Waupun, Wis.—General patronage.

The Wild Goose, a Cosmopolitan production.—Good program picture. It's interesting and pleased majority.—H. (Sweet, Royal theatre, Royal Centre, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Three Live Ghosts, a Cosmopolitan production.—Did not give satisfaction Poor entertainment value.—Custer C. Whitehead, Lyric theatre, Frankfort, Mich.—General patronage.

The City of Silent Men, with Thomas Meighan.—Picture plays both men and women. A good prison picture.—R. Ullman, Orpheum theatre, Ada, Min- neapolis, Minn.—Small town patronage.

The Witching Hour, with Elliott Ot- ter.—This program, print and service is most Paramounts that we have been unfortunate enough to play, was rated with a big "R."—Carroll & Miller, Go-

Dr. Jack, with Harold Lloyd.—A good drawing card which made a big hit with patrons and did a good business for a week’s run.—David Harding, Liberty theatre, Kansas City, Mo.

The Killer, with a special cast.—A very good picture and pleased a good attendance. Ran ad with two col. cut drawing attention to name. “Do not let title mislead you.” Startling melodrama, clean as a spring, and they sure came out.—A. C. Betts, Powers theatre, Red

Do We Hear A Second?

Through "What the Picture Did for Me" the exhibitors have joined in giving information. Through Exhibitor, the value of which will never be known. It is getting better. We have a suggestion to make which we feel would fill a long desired want and answer a question which in many cases cannot be otherwise learned.

Beginning with this week's report it will be our policy to state after the title and star the number of reels of which the picture was shown and whether or not any of these reels were assistant.

We do not know how other exhibitors feel about this matter, but we do know that if we decide to help us judge the length of the short subjects to be used. We have gotten some idea whether, or not the picture had been cut to any extent when we used it.

Trusting that this suggestion will meet with your approval and assuring you that it is our desire to assist in making "What the Picture Did for Me" even more valuable.

PAUL C. MORGAN, Horn & Morgan, Star theatre, May Springs, Nek.

United Artists

A Tailor Made Man, with Charles Ray. One of Ray's best. Just the kind of picture that our patrons like to see. Abounding with laughs and thrills, romance and simple home stuff. Good for theatre, W. Werner, Warwick theatre, Kansas City, Mo.

A Tailor Made Man, with Charles Ray. The tailoring of this star do and away above his recent productions. A real story well handled and people liked it 100 per cent. —E. L. Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D. —Small town patronage.

The Ruling Passion, with George Arliss. —Very good. Bought four picture of United Artists and this one was the best. —W. L. Latterson, Fairbanks, Pickford. —Olen Rock, Pearl theatre, Hymera, Ind. —Small town patronage.

Orphans of the Storm, a D. W. Go production. —Have just completed three days' showing of this wonder production, and we shall not be surprised to see this prove to be big from box office standpoint; we did capacity business for three days at raised admission. —We did not receive anything but praise from patrons, and personally I think it is the best historical, literary and even better than the old two. —W. L. Latterson, Fairbanks, Pickford. —Olen Rock, Pearl theatre, Hymera, Ind. —General patronage.

The Three Musketeers, with Doug Fairbanks. —It is a privilege for any theater to play this picture. This picture reflects real art in pictures. —Charles, Grand theatre, Chetek, Wis. —Neighborhood patronage.

The Three Musketeers, with Doug Fairbanks. —I lost on first show. Thought it was the heat. Brought back for the cool of an evening. —But here is the situation. Fairbanks I made his war and gone in for art instead of wanting to please the masses, and never thought of the masses in popular a light refreshing plays than playing to "art" world with the plumage picture "Art" won't pay film rentals of the lord out in the sticks and even smaller places. —Grand theatre, Jackson, Wis.

Way Down East, a D. W. Griffith production. —Splendid family circle entertainment. United Artists are leaders in the art. —L. P. Charles, Grand theatre, Chetek, Wis. —Patronage.

Way Down East, a D. W. Griffith production. —A splendid picture, rounded out, and a sure fire box of attraction still. Played on percentage and cost it make you money. —R. M. Harrington, Star theatre, Lathrop, Mo. —Small town patronage.

Universal

Another Man's Shoes, with Herbert Rawlinson.—A dandy picture with a good prize cast. Directed by R. C. Brown. Presented by Harry Hobolth, Liberty theatre, Marlette, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Altar Stairs, with Frank Mayo.—Seemed to get all right with our people, but personally did not care for it. Too many of these South Sea stories with same ingredients: booze, cigarettes, brown women, profanity, everything that we detest and protest against. Frank Mayo too good for that. Pleases for us in up-standing young American parts. This was not good, but the money was clean enough to see the Mayo was much better than Sam Taylor—P. G. Estee, Fad theatre, Brookings, S. D.—General patronage.

Wolf Law, with Frank Mayo.—A good picture. Drew a full house for me and pleased everybody.—J. N. Phillips, Ideal theatre, Table Rock, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Wolf Law, with Frank Mayo.—Although this is a good picture, it is not up to the Mayo standard. It falls a little short on story.—J. W. Anderson, Rialto theatre, Cozad, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Broad Daylight, with Lois Wilson.—Just fair but good enough. Used this picture with two re-issues, Universal and Universal—two reel Universal comedy on variety night at ten cent drop in price. Fair business.—Ray Erne, Rialto theatre. Charles, Minn.—Small town patronage.

Broad Daylight, with Herbert Rawlinson.—A mighty fine picture. Interesting from start to finish. Went over big. Directed by H. A. Bellair. Majestic theatre, Oakland, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Broad Daylight, with Herbert Rawlinson.—Interesting, well done melodrama that seemed to please the many who came to see it. Not a great production.—Ben L. Morris, Olympic theatre, Proctorville, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Black Bag, with Herbert Rawlinson.—This would have been a good picture if it had all been there. About 400 feet of the last reel—Small town. Directed by R. Green-haw, Strand theatre, Leslie, Ark.—Small town patronage.

The Black Bag, with Herbert Rawlinson.—A very good mystery story. Not much detective in it. Picture was a little dark, but story is so interesting that may be overlooked. Pleased 100 per cent. Poor attendance—not fault of picture. One sheet, three sheet, photos.—A. W. Sage, Masonic theatre, What Cheer, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Afraid to Fight, with Frank Mayo.—This is good. Ran with Leather Pushers No. 4 and plans to go out of prize fighting.—Olen Reynolds, Pearl theatre, Hy-mura, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Afraid to Fight, with Frank Mayo.—Extra good program picture. Has a good prize fight. One sheet, three sheets, photo, slide.—A. W. Sage, Masonic theatre, What Cheer, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Out of the Silent North, with Frank Mayo.—A good picture that will please the masses as well as the classes.—W. L. Landers, Garfield theatre, Batesville, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Out of the Silent North, with Frank Mayo.—One of the best Northern pictures on the market. Mayo is one of my best drawing cards among the male stars.—Edward W. Warner, Windsor theatre, town picture.—Jens Brotz, Victory theatre, Pauls Valley, Okla.—General patronage.

The Girl Who Ran Wild, with Gladys Walton.—Another good one and at a price you can make money.—Royal theatre, Malvern, Ark.—General patronage.

The Girl Who Ran Wild, with Gladys Walton.—A dandy picture. This star can sure pull the crowd for me. I would be glad to see you go wrong on this clunker.—R. G. Stanley, Crystal theatre, Crystal River, Fl.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Loaded Door, with Hoot Gibson.—Had to repeat on this one. The crowd was pretty lively for the second showing. Boost and you will win out with Hoot. Play the Prosperity Nine. They are all winners.—N. Phillips, Ideal theatre, Table Rock, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fox, with Harry Carey.—Good Western picture and will please some who are not strong on Westerns. Print was in bad shape. Pleased 90 per cent.—D. A. White, Cozy theatre, Checotah, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Trouper, with Gladys Walton.—Poorest picture ever shown on my screen. Some patrons said, "Worse than rotten."—J. K. theatre, Middletown, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

One Wonderful Night, with Herbert Rawlinson.—Failed to please.—J. Winning, Davison theatre, Waupun, Wis.—Small town patronage.

The Trap, with Lon Chaney.—Fine scenery. Good cast. Chaney at his best. Good story.—Giaccama Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

The Trap, with Lon Chaney.—Chaney does some good work, together with Stanley Gothals, but it's too much of a one picture.—J. Winning, Davison theatre, Waupun, Wis.—Small town patronage.

The Trap, with Lon Chaney.—This is a trap. Beware! Did not please. Did not play the second night at all. Play is dull and sad, though the acting and scenario is good. This is not entertainment. Universal has unlimited chance to call this a special and charge the prices they do for it when their regular program pictures give better entertainment. Sorry I booked it. Advise you not to. More complaints on this than any play I have run this winter.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

The Galloping Kid, with Hoot Gibson.—Just say Hoot Gibson in my town and all hands, young and old, are out. This is a fine one. Play Gibson up. A sure winner.—R. G. Stanley, Crystal theatre, Crystal River, Fl.—Small town patronage.

The Scrapper, with Herbert Rawlinson.—This is a good program picture if you run it in a town where there is no Swedish population. Cracking good Irish picture and will get good money if well advertised.—Crawford & Neary, Idle Hour theatre, Utica, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Headin' West, with Hoot Gibson.—Dandy good Western. Plenty of action and comedy in every reel. Holds your audience all the way through. You can't beat it for a Western.—R. D. Troutman, Ethel theatre, Ethel, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Headin' West, with Hoot Gibson.—Oh, boy, this one is sure there if they like Western action. Starts out with aeroplane action and does not stop until by Richard Matthew Hallett. It's hand-made to attract and enthral the millions who read the story as well as the millions of Carey followers and other fans.

One sequence alone is worth the price of admission to anyone—that crunching, pulse-stopping series of unforgettable scenes showing the bursting of the dam—the mad rush of an unleashed ocean of angry water swooping down into the basin battlefield where hundreds of horsemen are fighting with machine guns and rifles—the black, devouring stream carrying everything before it—cast.—This is a real good picture! I played same three days to good business. Nice clean entertainment all the way through as near as I could find out. It pleased me. You Print in 1 shape.—P. G. Held, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Island Wives, with Corinne Griffith.—Fair picture. Patrons did not stay for finish. Poor business.—G. Strasser Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Inner Chamber, with Alice Joyce.—Very good program picture. One sheet. Three sheets, photo, slide. A. Spiegel, Masonic theatre, What Cheer, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Too Much Business, with a special cast.—Can’t understand why some exhibitors knock this picture. We found it pleased our patrons very much. Tully Marshall’s acting very good, also the rest of the cast. Photography very good.—J. Koopman, Amenia Opera House, Amenia, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

The Prodigal Judge, with a special cast.—Very good, but did not seem to please some.—Y. M. C. A. theatre, Lake Geneva, Wis.—General patronage.

The Prodigal Judge, with a special cast.—Macklyn Arbuck puts this over. Will please majority, Secrecy and photography good. Don’t advance prices.—F. E. Salin, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

The Blue Mountain Mystery, with a special cast.—Good picture. Very well liked. Very good photography. Good business.—J. W. May, Grand theatre, Shawneetown, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Ten Nights in a Bar Room (Arrow), with John Lowell.—While the picture is O. K. it is not much of a picture for a small town when the better known films are gone and forgotten.—P. G. Held, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Ten Nights in a Bar Room (Arrow), with John Lowell. No. 1. Played New Years and went over good. Did not take in as much as expected, but business is a little slow.—F. Paulick, Paulick theatre, Minot, N. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

When East Comes West (Goldstone), with Franklin Parnum.—Farnum is a new star with Goldstone and did not draw very large attendance on Saturday, but this picture seemed to please all who saw it. Perhaps he will draw when better known.—Ander- son & Weatherby, Gym theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Worldly Madonna (Equity), with Clara Kimball Young.—Good picture—Giant Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

Up in Mary’s Attic (Fine Arts), with Eva Novak.-Advice all exhibitors to lay off this one. A good picture, and we will wonder where our business has gone.—Carroll and Miller, Gayety theatre, Amory, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Cyclone Bliss (Arrow), with Jack Hoxie.—A shoot em up Western that pleased most of Western fans. An old one but very well got up. Program with like Westerns. Charged ten and twenty-eight cents.—S. G. Idoe, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kans.—Small town patronage.

The Unknown (Goldstone), with Richard Talmadge.—It’s surprising how these productions draw. Have used practically all of them and they get the business and satisfy the patrons. Run after a full house with the Talmadge pictures. Lots of action and pep to every one.—H. E. Swan, Florence theatre, Kearney, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Price of Youth (Arrow), with Neva Gerber.—Have not used many independent a picture. Did it just right, like the few I have played. compares favorably with the productions made by “big time” companies.—Levi G. Durpo, Browne theatre, Limestone, Me.—Small town patronage.

Pleasure Wives (Fidelity), with a special cast.—Lay off this one. It is a lemon unless you get a high brow crowd.—Plaza theatre, Phoenix, Ariz.

The Fall of Babylon (D. W. G.), a D. W. Griffith production—Excellent. Did 30 percent more than Queen of Sheba and the rental was only half as much.—J. C. Rowton, Orphicum theatre, Quentin, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fall of Babylon (D. W. G.), a D. W. Griffith production.—Played this several years ago but thought I’d chance it again. Did it this fall, ran it 35 and 20 cents. three days run. Picture too ancient to have audience appeal. They want more modern stuff. Picture very elaborate and spectacular and Biblical and historical subjects not suited to 1923 ideas of entertainment.—J. C. Jenkins, Auditorium theatre, Ne- ligh, Nebr.

Dangerous Toys (F-lerated), with a special cast.—An unusual picture with a good moral and a fine ending, but don’t see how it wasn’t ruled out by the board. I held my breath every time a new reel was put on—it was so rank in places. On the whole the audience liked it. One sheet, three sheets, photos, slide.—A. W. Sage, Masonic theatre, What Cheer, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Devil’s Ghost (W. P. E.), with Lester Cuneo.—Of all the bunk I ever played this is it. This Cuneo and his so-called the Dare Devil, will never make the grade in features.—J. Winninger, Davison the-Boomerang Justice (Russell), with George Larkin.—A real Western that carries the kick. Plenty of action and will go good in any Western house.—W. L. Landers, Gem theatre, Batesville, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Big Stakes (Bond 1 Photoplay Corp.), with J. B. Warner.—Good business. Good picture.—G. Strasser Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Crow's Nest (Arrow), with Jack Hoxie.—Jack is growing to be a favorite in my house. His pictures are all clean and carry the punch.—W. L. Landers, Gem theatre, Batesville, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Apple Tree Girl (Graphic Reissue), with Shirley Mason.—Patrons surprised. All say how a picture can be made without a revolver or a fight in it. Patrons ask for more like it. Good business.—G. Strasser Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Two Fisted Jefferson (Arrow), with Jack Hoxie.—Good picture full of pep and comedy. Ran this one with Larry Senion in The Saw Mill, Go to Senion, Brothers. They are money getters and you can buy them right from Vitagraph.—H. F. Sembler, Colonial theatre, Radford, Va.—Small town patronage.

The Desert Crucible (Arrow), with Jack Hoxie.—As poor a Western picture as we ever ran. No pep or action. Too much posing in front of the camera. Did not please over 25 percent as there were too many impossibilities.—Crawford & Neary, Idle Hour theatre, Utica, Ill.—Small town patronage.

When Dawn Came (Prod. Sec.), with a special cast.—A very good picture. Played to small attendance due to Christmas being so near.—A. C. Betts, Powers theatre, Red Creek, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Shadows of the West (Niagara), with Hedda Nova.—Very good Western. Well liked. Good business.—K. A. Bechtold, Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Heart of the North (Brandt-Davis), with a special cast.—This is a very good picture and pleas.—A. C. Betts, Powers theatre, Red Creek, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Go Get Him (Pioneer), with William Fairbanks.—Fine Western picture. One of the best fight scenes I have ever witnessed in a picture. Don't be afraid to boost it.—K. A. Bechtold, Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Wise Husbands (Pioneer), with Gail Kane.—A good comedy. Look for a lot of good jokes. Was in season of special offer. Print was in poor condition. Advertising paper, photos and slide.—K. A. Bechtold, Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Serials

Speed (Pathe), with Charles Hutchison.—Here is one that is true to its name. It is holding up fine. So far, so good.—W. L. Landers, Gem theatre, Batesville, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Robinson Crusoe (Universal), with Harry Myers.—Quer here this held up for twelve straight episodes without a break. This gave us a good crowd every Saturday with our usual Western picture. This took much better with us than any serial we have attempted. What I think of it or my select crowd thinks has little weight, for enough people liked it to make it pay and that is the proof of the pudding.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

Captain Kidd (Serial Sales), with Eddie Polo.—On Episode Fifteen. This serial has been just too fair. Too much padding with previous episodes. Why can't they get away from this padding? It is one of the things that is killing the serial game.—H. F. Sembler, Colonial theatre, Radford, Va.—Small town patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—Any just getting started in this serial and is taking big. Will prove a winner. In fact, the Universal lead all in serials.—R. G. Stanley, Crystal theatre, Crystal River, Fla.—Small town patronage.

The Secret Four (Universal), with Eddie Polo.—Lay off this serial. A real lemon. Lost money on every episode.—Plaza theatre, Phoenix, Ariz.

Breaking Through (Vitagraph), with Carmel Myers.—On Episode Eleven and holding up fine. In fact it is one of the best I have had for some time and I run two serials a week. Vitagraph is as white as they make 'em. Serial has plenty of action and comedy.—H. F. Sembler, Colonial theatre, Radford, Va.—Small town patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pathe), with Ruth Roland.—Finished fifth chapter to increased attendance. It's the best serial I've shown. Fairly logical and splendid scenery and photography. Ruth and Donna good types.—F. E. Sahin, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pathe), with Ruth Roland.—On the twelfth episode and want to say that this is the only serial in the past two years that has held up in attendance with me. You can't go wrong on this.—J. W. Andresen, Rialto theatre, Cozad, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pathe), with Ruth Roland.—Started out good business. On Episode Twelve and business off half. Patrons says outside of one thrill and the scenery in each episode nothing to it. Wish it were over. Trying one more serial after this. Miracles of the Jungle which, if like the Lost City, will go good here.—Oln Reynolds, Pearl theatre, Hymera, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pathe), with Ruth Roland.—All hold a good serial. All serials are impossible stories, but this one holds interest.—J. W. Anderson, Davison theatre, Waupun, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Short Subjects

Aseso's Fables (Pathe).—Good entertainment with a good moral.—G. E. Wendel, Opera House, Smithland, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Al St. John's Comedies (Fox).—He is funny and his comedies please the kids and are clean.—Chas. L. Hyde, Grand theatre, Picare, S. D.—Small town patronage.

Felix the Cat Cartoons (Winkler).—Very good single reels.—Clifford L. Xiles, Grand theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.—General patronage.

Hal Roach Comedies (Pathe), with Sid Pratt.—Very funny.—G. E. Wendel, Opera House, Smithland, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Harold Lloyd Comedies (A. E.), with Harold Lloyd.—Considered in a class by themselves. Best bet on the market. We can get along without Arbuck.—C. M. Vail, blonde theatre, Benton, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Harold Lloyd Reissues (Pathe).—Hav used these for three months and find they are the best bet on the market. The second time they have been run in my theatre and the nights they are shown my business has increased over 30 per cent. A good bet for any exhibitor.

H. E. Swan, Empress theatre, Kearney, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Harold Lloyd Reissues (Pathe).—Harold Lloyd two reeers are standing a second showing, though they don't draw as they undoubtedly would if first run. They do please even when people have seen them before.—Chas. L. Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—Small town patronage.

The Leather Pushers (Universal), with Reginald Denny.—A few men and boys come to see this. Good of its kind if you don't pay any more for it than a regular comedy.—Olen Reynolds, Pearl theatre, Hyrum, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Mermaid Comedies (Educational).—One of the best slapstick comedies on the market. Absolutely clean and if they don't get the laughs your audience must be paralyzed.—H. G. Sweet, Royal theatre, Royal Centre, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Our Gang Comedies (Pathe).—These comedies sure get the laughs, but the company wants a lot of money for them.—J. R. Uffman, Orpheum theatre, Ada, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Our Gang Comedies (Pathe).—Played the first one, Fire Fighters, and if the others keep up with this one, will say they are knockouts.—J. Winninger, Daivision theatre, Waupun, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Our Gang Comedies (Pathe).—People enjoy the kid comedy stuff and come to see it.—Chas. L. Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—Small town patronage.

Pathe Review.—A splendid magazine single reel that is educational as well as entertaining.—J. C. Rowton, Orpheum theatre, Quinton, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Sunshine Comedies (Fox).—All very good.—J. W. May, Grand theatre, Shawneetown, Ill.—General patronage.

The Toreador (Fox), with Al St. John.

—The two reel Fox comedies are all good. They will take in any kind of a house.—Plaza theatre, Phoenix, Ariz.

The Reporter (Fox), with Lupino Lane.—Here is a new comedian that is most refreshing. His style is not exaggerated humor and gets over by genuine fun. This comedy gets more continued laughs than any recently shown. It looks as if it will have a good run.—L. Morris, Temple theatre, Belleville, Ohio.—General patronage.

Mud and Sand (Metro), with Stan Laurel.—Title even though you have not run Blood and Sand. Get em in. That's what we all want.—Ryan & Kundert, Empress theatre, Beresford, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Kiss Me Caroline (Educational), a Christic comedy. One of the best I ever saw. Can't go wrong on this one. One up.—A. W. Sage & Masonic theatre, What Cheer, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Punctured Prince (Metro), with Bessie Love.—One of the few real high class comedies and which has sets built better than some features. Lots of laughs.—Lang & Knohm, Empress theatre, Beresford, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Torchy's Ghost (Educational), with Johnny Hines.—Very good. The best of the Torchy comedies I've run yet.—C. F. Kriegbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

For Rent—Haunted (Pathe), with Johnny Jones.—A good two part dramatic subject that will please all children and teach a good lesson. A few comic situations. However, as a comedy not in a class with "Our Gang" or Snub Pollard two reeers for laughing purposes.—Adolph Kohn, Pastime theatre, Granville, N. Y.—General patronage.

For Land's Sake (Educational), with a special cast.—About the funniest comedy we have had for some time. New stunts that make them laugh.—R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kan.—General patronage.

The Newly Rich (Pathe), with Snub Pollard.—A good two part comedy with much a hearty laugh throughout. The kind of comedies that are liked here.—Adolph Kohn, Pastime theatre, Granville, N. Y.—General patronage.

One Jump Ahead (Pathe), with Leo Maloney.—The best two reeers ever put on the screen. Yes, it is a Western.—Wood & Wehler, Star theatre, Corinith, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Loaded Dice (Pathe), with Frank Keenan.—Cutting from five to three reeers puts lots of pep and action in these features. There are a lot of five to ten reeers on the market that would be better trimmed down this way. Keeps the people awake.—R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kan.—General patronage.

The Fire Fighters (Pathe).—Our Gang comedy. A good two part kid comedy. So far all the two part "Our Gang" kid comedies have been good. The Johnny Jones comedies do not take so good.—Adolph Kohn, Pastime theatre, Granville, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

The Big Flood (Pathe).—This fable is always a hit and the Ark, and funny, well I should say so, and your patrons will certainly enjoy it. Ours did.—Wood & Wehler, Star theatre, Corinith, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hook, Line and Sinker (Pathe), with Snub Pollard.—A good two reel comedy that pleased here.—Adolph Kohn, Pastime theatre, Granville, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Harold Lloyd.—Fine. No better comedies are made than those made by Lloyd.—R. M. Harrington, Star theatre, Lathrop, Mo.—Small town patronage.

A Ladies' Man (Metro), with Bull Montana.—Another high class comedy for people who appreciate real stuff. Bull would have scored better in this if it had been two reels instead of three.—Ryan & Kunder, Empress theatre, Beresford, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

I Do (A. E.), with Harold Lloyd.—Fine. All Lloyd's are good. Showed with Tropical Love, which is a pleasing little picture bringing the Lloyd glamour to the program over.—R. M. Harrington, Star theatre, Lathrop, Mo.—Small town patronage.

My Wife's Relations (F. N.), with Butler Keaton.—Here's the Buster at his best. It brought more laughs than The Paleface. Boys, run this one.—R. L. Downling, Ozark theatre, Ozark, Ala.—Small town patronage.

A Dark Horse (Universal), with a special cast.—First one I have played of this brand for a long time. The horse was good and all in all pulled down several outbursts of laughter.—G. F. REDISKE, Star theatre, Ryegate, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Neighbors (Metro), with Buster Keaton.—Very good comedy.—C. F. KRIEGBAUM, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

Don't Be Foolish (Nu-Art), with Billie West.—Two reel Billie West comedy. Good.—A. C. BETTS, Powers theatre, Red Creek, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

A Day's Pleasure (F. N.), with Charles Chaplin.—This is a reissue and the poorest Chaplin comedy I ever saw.—C. F. KRIEGBAUM, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

The Sap (Nu-Art), with Billie West.—This was good, but You'll Be Surprised was a scream.—A. C. Betts, Powers theatre, Red Creek, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

The White Moose (Educational), with Lewis Stone.—A pretty good two reel comedy.—C. F. KRIEGBAUM, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

Merry 'Xmas (Fox).—Good short subject. This is great.—A. C. BETTS, Powers theatre, Red Creek, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Love and Doughnuts (F. N.), with Ben Turpin.—A pretty good comedy.—C. F. KRIEGBAUM, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

Torchy's Knighthood (Educational), with Johnny Hines.—This was very good. You should have heard them laugh.—A. C. Betts, Powers theatre, Red Creek, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

The Agent (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—A 100 per cent comedy. Good old slapstick is the best there is. I kept it up, Larry.—M. L. GUIER, Auditorium theatre, Slater, Mo.—Small town patronage.

A Bed of Red Roses (Pathé), with Paul Parrott.—This is a very promising star and this one reel comedy is very entertaining. Book it. Our patrons liked it.—Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Ocean Swells (Educational), a Christie comedy.—Quite a bit better than the general run of comedies. Well directed and well acted. All at seashore or house boat.—H. J. LONGAKER, Howard theatre, Alexandria, Minn.—General patronage.

A Quiet Street (Pathé), with Our Gang. These are the very best comedies that we have used in a long time. They appeal to young and old. If you can buy 'em right, you can't go wrong.—Clyde Allen, Casino theatre, Antwerp, N. Y.— Neighborhood patronage.

A Rural Cinderella (Educational), with a special cast.—Like most of the Educational comedies, this is a good one.—J. C. ROBERTSON, Orpheum theatre, Quinton, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Game Birds (C. B. C.), with Hallroom Boys.—This was one of the best comedies I have seen in many a day; in fact, I find that all the Hallroom comedies please.—Studie 1. Haney, Liberty theatre, Des Moines, N. M.—Small town patronage.

THEATRE CONSTRUCTION AND EQUIPMENT

Exchange of Exploitation Equipment Would Turn Loss Into Profit

Who pays for your exploitation?

If you pay for it in cold cash, time and labor and "junk" it when the picture is gone, you know it costs a lot of money. You know that you don't use as much of it as you would if you could make it pay for itself.

The elaborate palanquin prepared for exploitation of "Omar the Tentmaker" and reproduced complete and in drawing upon this and a following page is one of the things you would like to use—if it didn't cost so much to construct.

It is expensive.

But you can get your money back.

* * *

If First National didn't sell "Omar the Tentmaker" to anybody but you, you'd have to sell your theatre to pay the rental.

But First National sells it to a subsequent run of houses.

For some inexplicable reason exhibitors have not until now followed this logical procedure. The point is clear.

This paper, truly the exhibitors' medium of exchange in the matter of business reports, policy discussion, etc., offers a precisely identical opportunity for the disposition of used exploitation material.

It is clearly the course of wisdom and economy for the exhibitor who has gone to the expense of building such a structure as the palanquin cited to dispose of it to another exhibitor when he no longer has use for it. He may thus retrieve a great portion of the cost represented in material and time of construction which would otherwise be totally lost. He would also be helping a brother exhibitor to whom the palanquin would be equally valuable during the picture's presentation at his theatre.

* * *

This material has not been sold in this manner to any great extent previously. The palanquin cited here is but typical of quantities of similar special exploitation or "supplemental equipment" evolved by various exhibitors from week to week which could be circulated to equal advantage.

The "Theatre Construction and Equipment" department believes that such exchange is wholly in line with good theatre economics and directs the thought of theatre men to the proposition.

It is apparent that the contact for the marketing or exchanging of such supplemental equipment must be economical, centralized and far-reaching.

* * *

This paper suggests that it has such a medium in its "Classified Advertising" column where, at a small cost, exhibitors may carry on these transactions, turning a long-time waste into profit in the exploitation of pictures involving special equipment where that equipment is of no further use after the picture is gone.

Pittsfield, Mass.—Sam Goldstein of Springfield has taken over the Majestic theatre here and will rename it the Palace.

ACTIVITIES IN REVIEW

III

A Challenge to Architects

Are the theatre architects of the country lacking in a knowledge of the requirements of the projection room in size, location, capacity, type of equipment that must be provided for and many other features?

This question put to equipment distributors in many instances manufacturers as well, of various makes of projectors will be answered in the affirmative in the great majority of cases. And few, if any, even among the prominent theatre builders of the country are absolved of the charges.

Generally speaking here are some of the things you would hear on the subject:

Do you know that the 'Whoozis' theatre was completed and about ready to open before they discovered that the projection room had been left out?

Did you know that at such and such a theatre provision in the drawings was only made for one projection room when they need three, not to mention spotlights and other stuff?

Did you know that at another theatre the operator would have been squeezed to death if he had tried to walk between the projection machine and the rear wall?

Did you know that they had to rebuild the projection room at the "Blank" theatre because you couldn't begin to put the necessary equipment in there?

These are typical. The longer you stay the more you will hear. And the funnier—or sadder—they will become.

Architects of the country need no spokesman. The modern and beautiful homes of the cinema in every section bespeak their progressiveness and ingenuity.

But, what is the answer to these insinuations?
New Projects

New York—It is rumored that construction of a theatre and office building is contemplated by Universal, the structure to house the company’s executive offices and the playhouse to accommodate 3,500.

Byesville, O.—Contract for the construction of the new Luna theatre here has been let to John W. Little of Cambridge. Those interested in the project include George Brown, manager of the Luna, Tom Coins, Lyric theatre, Cambridge and Chacos Bros., Pastime and Utana theatres, Coshocton. John Adams Quincy, Columbus, is architect. The house will seat 800.

Texarkana, Ark.—Plans are in preparation by Saenger Amusement Company for the construction of a theatre on property which the company owns at State and Third streets here, according to a letter received by the chamber of commerce from E. M. Clarke, special representative of the company.

Muskogee, Okla.—Dan Myers, former owner of the Broadway, Strand and Orpheum theatres will operate a theatre to be remodeled from present property at 206 Broadway.

Stebenville, O.—Tri-State Amusement Company, operating the Strand and Olympic theatres, has purchased property at Fourth and Adams street for the building of a motion picture theatre to cost $500,000.

Glendale, Cal.—Work has been started on the new Gateway theatre by Winter Construction Company. It will seat 900. Fred Miller of the California and other Los Angeles theatres is one of the parties interested in the project.

Fullerton, Cal.—Plans are nearing completion by Architect Eugene Durfee for a $100,000 theatre here at Whiting avenue and Spadra road which will be leased by Harry Wilber and erected by Stanley Chapman.

Elmira, N. Y.—Myles G. Kelly, representing Harton Theatre Company announces the purchase of a site measuring 80 by 120 feet which will be used for the purpose of doubling the seating capacity of the Regent theatre at a cost of $150,000.

Kansas City, Mo.—Plans have been completed for a theatre to cost $125,000 for Star Amusement Company of this city.

Council Is Split on Sunday Show Issue
Theatre Men Seek Attitude on Proposition at Watseka

Sunday shows have had their inning in the city council of Watseka, Ill. They didn't win and neither did they lose.

Placed Before Council
The Sunday opening issue was placed before the council by Shobe and Robertson of the Palace theatre with the idea of ascertaining the attitude of that body as well as the sentiment generally throughout the city.

Three council members in the council. Three, in discussing the question, favored Sunday shows. Three were antagonistic and a seventh was noncommittal.

Aldermen Hickman, Evans and Moore argued that maintaining a closed Sunday in Watseka was forcing business to surrounding towns, such as Kankakee and Danville.

"No Reason," Says Opposition
The councilmen opposing Sunday shows offered the argument that there was no reason for Sunday shows any more than there was reason for other merchants operating seven days a week.

At this juncture it was pointed out that other business houses could open on the Sabbath in so far as the law was concerned.

Whether or not the question will be pushed has not been indicated by the theatre owners.

Harrisburg Plans Benefit Shows
The Harrisburg, Ill., band wants a series of Sunday shows at the local motion picture theatres to increase its finances. The council will be requested to grant the privilege of holding these performances which will consist of pictures and concerts.

Putting On Campaign
Bert Ennis, director of publicity and advertising for S-L Pictures, whose special feature "Quincy Adams Sawyer" is being distributed through Metro, arrived in Chicago on the Century, Friday, and called on District Manager S. A. Shirley at the local Metro exchange.

Producer Visits Chicago
Edgar Lewis, producer and director, accompanied by Mrs. Lewis stopped off in Chicago last week on their way to the West Coast where Mr. Lewis will work on "Till the Blood Shall Flow" for Fox. He traveled with the director by way of Los Angeles.

Flinn Passes Through
John C. Flinn of Famous Players-Lasky Corp., arrived at the Chicago exchange last Wednesday. He was en route to Los Angeles.

The new Star theatre, Whiting, Ind., and office building, is nearing completion. It will seat 900.

"Shadows" Is Given Wide Presentations

Important Bookings Follow Successful Premiere at Barbee's Loop

Following unanimous approval from Chicago newspaper critics and a highly successful premiere showing at Barbee's Loop theatre, "Shadows," the Al Lichtenstein Corporation production, has been assured one of the widest bookings accorded a picture by Chicago theatres during the present season.

Four Weeks in the Loop

Originally set in Barbee's for one week, the reception given the picture made it almost compulsory to rearrange the theatre schedule to permit a second week. The two week's run closed January 21 with attendance still holding up.

Monday, January 22, it was moved to the Castle theatre in the loop and the week following will be presented at the Rose.

Simultaneously with the opening of second down-town run at the Castle, the picture was set in Balaban and Katz Tivoli theatre, the big neighborhood house on the South side. February 19, it will open simultaneously at the Senate theatre of the West side and the Pantheon on the North side. March 4, it is booked at Balaban and Katz Central Park.

Booked by Chain Houses
The film has also been obtained by Ascher Brothers for their fifteen houses and by Lubliner and Trinz for their chain of sixteen. It will also play over the Hammond circuit of three houses. Many other bookings for individual houses have been closed.

Peter Moore, special representative of Al Lichtenstein, assisted in arranging the premiere showing of the picture. Celebrated Players Film Corporation is the Al Lichtenstein exchange in the Chicago territory.

Stork Visits Ryan

A ten-pound boy was born to Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Ryan on Sunday, January 21. Both mother and son are doing well, according to the proud father who is managing director of the Garfield theatre, 2448 West Madison street.

Ragland in Town

J. C. Ragland, secretary of Associated Exhibitors, was a caller at the local Pathe exchange last week. Mr. Ragland was on his way to Los Angeles to confer with a number of independent producers.

Arrest Berlin Film Man

Stephen J. von Lothrath, an official of the United Film Company of Berlin, was arrested Jan. 19, charged with having a confidence man. The film company has a branch office at 2939 So. Wabash ave., Chicago.

Laemmle Goes West

Carl Laemmle, and his secretary, Harry Zehner, were Chicago visitors at Universal exchange for two days last week, leaving on Sunday for California.

JOE BONOMO, modern Apollo and strong man, prize winner in New York Daily News perfect man contest, passed through Chicago last week en route to Universal City where he will play in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." The young man and the young ladies he is holding are members of "Chicago Tribune's" organization.

Sales Contest

Sales manager Herman Stern, of Universal exchange, Chicago, has organized two sales teams for a competitive sales campaign and prizes of considerable value will be awarded the winners. This campaign will also stimulate work being done in the Universal sales drive for the gold watches to be awarded by President Carl Laemmle.

Already Sid Decker, J. P. Denton, W. H. Tracy and the other salesmen of the "U" exchange are out after one of these time pieces.

Sunday Shows

W. Lyons of the Castle theatre, Bloomington, Ill., advises he is now entertaining Bloomington citizens Sunday nights by giving shows under the auspices of several social clubs of the city, which is one way of getting around the Sunday closing nuisance.

Wallerstein's New Theatre

The beautiful new Tivoli theatre, Michigan City, Ind., is nearing completion and it is expected will be formally opened Feb. 1. Abe Wallerstein is pleased with the wonderful progress made on his new palace and when completed it will be one of the show places of Michigan City.
HARRY HATFIELD, of Hatfield's Grand theatre, Green Bay, Wis., was a caller at the Vitagraph exchange last Thursday. It's 18 degrees below zero up at Green Bay and they have lots of snow, but business is good, so Mr. Hatfield is not worrying.

Jack Young, Detroit manager of Vitagraph, called upon district manager, J. M. Duncan, and branch manager, J. A. Stinson, Monday, Jan. 15.

T. W. Taft, assistant branch manager of Vitaphone, made a flying trip to Waukegan last week and closed with Walter Spoor, at the Academy theatre, for "Ninety and Nine." He also made Champaign, Ill., and came back with a nice contract.

District Manager J. M. Duncan, in a circle of his territory called on managers at Kansas City and St. Louis Vitagraph exchanges.

S. T. Marks and C. O. Roberts, who are handling the North Side territory for Vitaphone, closed with eighty-four houses on "A Front Page Story" and "Ninety and Nine" in three days, which is some record. "Contracts are plentiful but there are not enough play dates in the year," according to these boys.

The great moustache contest between A. G. Spencer and Charlie Miller, F. R. O. salesmen, is growing apace. Miller at the end of the first week led by a hair. The one with the heaviest coffee strainer at the end of thirty days is to be declared winner of the $25, which is on deposit in a downtown bank.

J. J. Clark has been added to the American Releasing sales staff, covering the Indiana territory.

Pau Di Bush has been selling films for Si Greiver.

Larry Wagner, who has been doing impersonations of Larry Semon at local theatres, has left for St. Louis, Sam Lamonsky, who was booking him hereabouts, is back at his old job shipping Vita, films.

J. F. Young, former Vitaphone salesman, has returned to the Goldwyn exchange. Frank feels right at home, as he was with Goldwyn three and a half years.

W. Spanuth has taken over the Lyceum theatre at Cottage Grove and 36th street.

"Bill" Danziger, Paramount's bustling exploiter, is in Duluth, Minn., putting over "When Knighthood Was in Flower," and filling the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Doolittle.

Tom Delaney, the genial Fox salesman, has been absent from his usual place of business, due to illness.

L. J. Rosier, of Dixon Theatre, Dixon, Ill., was a Film Row caller last Tuesday.

The Randolph theatre, Universal's downtown first-run house, is playing the Fox special, "Monte Cristo," for two weeks.

Cress Smith, former manager of the Chicago United Artists' exchange, and now in charge of exchanges throughout the U. S. A., left with his wife and two children for Australia last Wednesday.

Carl Leisner, "U" salesman, is back on the job after a month's serious illness.

Harry Phillips has a new Cadillac coupe. Business must be good around the Universal exchange.

W. H. Tracy was covering the north side for Universal during the illness of Carl Leisner.

Over 750 children nearly wrecked the Auditorium theatre at Berwyn, Ill., last week when Ed. Johnson played "In the days of Buffalo Bill." "Eddie," the Indian, and his squaw were extra added attractions. It's the first time a serial has played this house in twelve years.

The Jefferson theatre, 50th street, owned by the Apollo Theatre Corp., opened Friday, Jan. 12, playing a solid Universal program.

Mrs. Very Langford, wife of the manager of Lucille theatre, was taken to the hospital last Thursday and was operated upon.

Mrs. Henry Goldman, wife of the manager of the Julian theatre on Belmont avenue, was taken to the Garfield Park Hospital last week and operated upon for appendicitis. "Hank" reports that she is getting along nicely.

J. P. Denton and Lipton Astrachan, "U" salesmen (must be something in that name Lipton), have developed into racing demons with their Fords. They challenge the Row for long distance records, and have Louis Lautmille to back them up.

Jason Costas has added the Triangle theatre to his string. He is now booking this house, as well as the Charm theatre.

Ed Ettelson of the Hyde Park theatre, who fell through a canopy not long ago, is "letting George do it" these days when it comes to climbing around this part of his house.

Mrs. Stepenack, of the Lynn theatre, is vacationing in Florida for the next four weeks.

Charles Kamp, the general manager of the Madison and Ashland theatres, was recently installed as commander of the Wabash Post No. 176, American Legion. Charlie extends an invitation to all of the film boys to join and assures them all of interesting times ahead.

Vincent Ocorto, of the DeLuxe theatre, Lake Forest, Ill., called at the Universal exchange and demanded service last week. He got it, too.

Joe Wolfinb, who recently purchased the Southport theatre from Joe Pastor, has re-decorated the house and made many other improvements.

Charles Lamb, of Palm theatre, Rockford, Ill., dropped into the Universal exchange last Wednesday and booked for "The Filt" and some Haly Peggy pics.

S. J. Gregory, of the Parthenon theatre, Hammond, Ind., and his managers of the Parthenon, Hammond, Grand and Cosmos, Gary, Ind., were Film Row callers last week. Mr. Gregory is planning a month's rest at Hot Springs. He arranged with the Universal exchange to play "The Filt" and use the six attractive firsts recently employed by the Randolph for its advertising campaign. Book store tie-ups have also been arranged. Jim Craighton and Pete Kalaris returned to Hammond with Mr. Gregory.

Paul Roscoe is managing the Secley and Hammond theatres for Mrs. F. B. Rice, widow of the late northwest side exhibitor.

Louis Kramer, F. B. O.'s live-wire exploiter, is back from a three days' campaign which he put over at LaPorte for "The Third Alarm."

As a mark of the hospitable spirit of the Ascher Brothers, Harry Crawford, manager of the Metropolitan theatre, allows all the soldier boys from the 47th Street Hospital to attend any performance at this popular south side house free of charge. Mr. Crawford also admits the crippled children from the hospital nearby any time they wish to attend, free of charge, also the inmates from the Orphans' Home, Grand boulevard.

E. Thomas Beatty has purchased the Triangle theatre, 73rd and Wentworth avenue.

An epidemic of black eyes prevailed on Film Row last week. Prominent among those exhibiting them were Simon Simansky and Chris Heine, of the Central Office of the Empire also was seen slightly bruised. Evidently some of the exhibitors have found it hard to get around the corners. Simon refuses to give an information about his mishap, but Chris is truthful—he fell while skating, he says.

"CLASSICS OF THE SCREEN" Announcing 39 New Paramount Pictures to be released from Feb 1st to Aug 1st 1933

a program of motion picture entertainment for the whole nation

PARAMOUNT can plan and produce as far ahead on this gigantic scale because Paramount Pictures have the pre-release endorsement of thousands of waiting audiences.

— an endorsement earned by steady, by unbroken growth, by never letting down the loyal audiences, always delivering the highest quality in every production.

The mark of leadership for the Screen, the Director, the Screen Dramatic, the Screen Technic of every kind is to have Paramount at its heart. Paramount has the world's greatest ex-movie company of dramatic talent.

Paramount takes responsibility for the support of present great movies, for their great dimensions, and every technical screen betterment.

Perfect team work of the front office and the great motion picture organization to bring the perfect presentation of the screen's best.

Theatres everywhere are booking these pictures with jaws of showing. If it's a Paramount Picture, it's the best show in town.

THIS double-page announcement runs in the SATURDAY EVENING POST, January 27th, in TWO COLORS, and in all the national fan magazines.

It will be seen and read by almost everybody who goes to motion pictures.

It tells the readers what they may look forward to for the new season. It starts them looking into the theatres that show "The Super 39."

Here is advertising worth thousands of dollars—without cost to the exhibitor. All you have to do is tell them that you're showing these pictures.

Paramount Pictures
Here's the Picture you've asked for, Mr. President!

"Next to studying history by living through its epochs is seeing its actors and evolutions presented before our eyes. This might be accomplished by a proper use of the motion picture."

WARREN G. HARDING.
(In a recent letter to Will H. Hays)

In a two thousand word letter, President Harding pleads for motion pictures which shall make the great epochs of history live again, in all their romance and drama. And Paramount, simultaneously with his appeal, has produced "The Covered Wagon."

Here is the most romantic period in all American history, the days of '49 — a period in which thousands of men and women braved hardship, danger and death and opened up America to civilization.

Three thousand actors spent three months in the desert, eighty miles from a railroad, to make it. Everything in it is real—a thousand Indians were used in the attack scene; nine square miles of prairie grass were burned for the prairie fire; five hundred bison were used for the buffalo hunt; scores of actors were nearly drowned in the scene where 300 wagons ford a mile-wide torrent.

Great in theme, in love story, in production, "The Covered Wagon" marks a new epoch in film history, and is destined to be the biggest box office attraction ever made.

It is a James Cruze production, adapted by Jack Cunningham from the novel by Emerson Hough.

ANNOUNCEMENT TO THE TRADE AN OPEN LETTER FROM FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN
AND BEVERLY BAYNE

Friends:

We are preparing to resume our moving picture activities, because we feel that better times are in sight and that this is the psychological moment to combine our picture triumph of former years with our recent record, dramatic and vaudeville, box office successes. We feel positive that our next picture -- which will be begun when this advertisement goes to press -- will prove that we have not only our picture following of other days, but also hundreds of thousands of new friends made by our intimate personal contact with dramatic and vaudeville audiences.

It is a matter of record that our legitimate stage tour under the management of Oliver Morosco was a "landslide".

It is also a certified fact that during the two years of our engagements on the Keith and Orpheum Circuits we broke more house records for attendance than were ever before broken by any one act and for this reason in some cases we were held over for the second week. Obviously, these successes have broadened our clientele and increased our following by many millions of people throughout the entire country.

Our pictures will be so constructed that the fifth reel can be played on the stage with a setting identical with that, on the film as a novel form of personal appearance. We will appear with the film in this manner (assisted by two of the other artists in the picture cast) for just one week in one theatre in each of twelve key cities. We would like to do more but this is all the time available between pictures.

Yours for prosperity,

Francis X. Bushman

THE TEST of a producing and distributing organization is its ability to supply good consistent motion pictures continuously.

There is nothing more important to the exhibitor than a permanent source of supply of good motion pictures.

It is no less important for the producer to have a permanent outlet in every town and neighborhood in the country.

When Ben Schulberg, Jack Bachmann and myself organized this business, we determined to build an organization that would soon be recognized for its Quality and Dependability.

Our producing organization consists of a staff of picture creators, whose sincerity of purpose, loyalty, ability and efficiency will assure exhibitors a steady flow of profitable motion pictures.
There is no guess work or waste in our Studios. We try to make every dollar look like two on the screen.

In distribution, we have allied ourselves with the foremost independent exchanges in the United States. They know your problems and are in business to serve you.

We offer our first eight now. Seven of them are finished. They are all good—some are great! Each is sold at a price proportionate to its value.

We are doing big things, and will do bigger things, with the exhibitors’ support.

Exhibitors know we stand squarely in back of every contract. They will always make money with us.

City Officials Anxious as "One Exciting Night" Breaks All House Records

Municipal authorities of Minneapolis watched closely when this great D. W. Griffith mystery picture played the Garrick theatre and the crowds packed every inch of space in the house, jammed the lobby and milled around in the streets. Then the management put on an extra force of employees to handle a patronage that broke all attendance records for the first week and went into a tremendous opening for a second big week. The advance campaign for "One Exciting Night" was chiefly through liberal newspaper space.

Race-track melodrama never was more popular and more in demand than today. This type of motion picture is a certain winner from both the audience and the box-office standpoint.

Jack Pickford in "Garrison’s Finish"

Is the exceptional screen feature of the melodrama type. Not only does it tell a really big story and have a genuine plot, but it shows actual racing scenes of the Kentucky Derby and the Metropolitan Handicap that have been described in the Exhibitor’s Herald as “the best racing scenes ever screened.” There also is one of the sweetest and most beautiful love stories ever spread on celluloid, and a tender theme covering the sacrifices of mother love.

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST
Were you there?

Did you attend the special morning showing of "The Christian" Tuesday?

Every important exhibitor in the East was present and the vast audience of 3,500 combined to give a great picture a reception unprecedented in screen annals.

"The Christian" was acclaimed the greatest box-office attraction in years. Attractive booking offers were made on spot immediately after showing.

The opinion was unanimous that the widely heralded book and play had been made even more dramatic in pictures by Goldwyn.

Here's what the industry's great editors said right after the showing. These are men who weigh their words, for their editorial opinion is precious to them and they call a spade a spade!

WM. A. JOHNSTON, Editor Motion Picture News:
"Goldwyn's big production, 'The Christian,' will go down in history as a masterpiece!"

L. W. BOYNTON, Editor Exhibitor's Trade Review:
"'The Christian' is a screen marvel. It takes its place with the acknowledged classics of the motion picture. Unquestionably the biggest box-office picture Goldwyn has ever released."

ROBERT E. WELSH, Editor Motion Picture World:
"'The Christian' is a really great picture without an 'if' or a 'but.' It will make a pile of money."

JOHN SPARGO, N. Y. Editor Exhibitor's Herald:
"'The Christian' will clean up. It has everything!"

Goldwyn announces: Despite numerous offers from legitimate theatres "The Christian" will not be road showed!

Exhibitors First!
A Pair of Kings (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. —Larry always gets the dough. He brings the crowds and laughs, too. Absolutely the best on the market. —Roy L. Dowling, Ozark theatre, Ozark, Ala.

Larry Semon Comedies (Vitagraph). —If you are not playing the Semon Comedies, you have got to do without them, as there are no better comedies made. I have booked all of them. After you play one, you will play them all. —A. E. Berlin, Jr., Lyric theatre, Rock Falls, Ill.

Larry Semon Comedies (Vitagraph). —Not one but all of these a tonic for a sick box office if you give these to your people. The king of slapstick comedies, well made, fast and laughs in all of them. —Bowen & Charles Theatre Circuit, Vader, Wash.

The Fall Guy (V), with Larry Semon. —If your patrons like slapstick, give them all the Semons. This one brought the house down. Play these with features, and you will eat 'em up. —R. A. Batty, Grand theatre, Carington, N. D. —Larry Semon Comedies (Vitagraph). —A great comedy. —G. W. Summers, Royal theatre, Unionville, Mo.

The Agent (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. —A comedy that is a scream from beginning to end, and the barroom the best thing done in comedy for some time. There is action to who tied the pup and keeps the audience in an uproar. W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.

The Hick (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. —Larry's and W. W. Wells people laugh as heartily as they did over this one. And how could they help it? Many came back to see it the second night. Exploit it good. It will meet your highest expectations. —Mrs. W. H. Helfer, Itasca theatre, Alice, Tex.

Larry Semon Comedies (Vitagraph). —This brings a new meaning to the expression, to look over the comedy. Comedies sure overlooking a good bet. Have played them all and not a bad one yet. —E. O. Ford, Broadway theatre, Brooklyn, Ia.

The Saw Mill (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. —A very good comedy. Larry is all right. —O. N. Foster, Elite theatre, Otoe, Neb.

Dew Drop Inn (V), with Larry Semon. —Best of the Semon comedies I have run. Semon has brought me business. When I don't have Semon I have to do without. I do have him I get from forty to sixty. —A. Names, Strand theatre, McCracken, Ky.

The Sawmill (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. —If you need a good slapstick comedy, you cannot find a better. In fact, you can pick Semon comedies with very few exceptions, and you will find good. Also Vitagraph is to be complimented on the way they sell them. —J. J. Kudlacek, Swan theatre, Swanton, Neb.

Golf (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. —A good comedy. It will please the public as it is different from ordinary slapstick comedies. —Gertrude Gribb, Eagle theatre, Westville, Ill.

The Grocery Clerk (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. —A bowling success in the way of a two reel comedy. One thing happens right after another and you will laugh at them all. —W. P. Perry, Rialto theatre, Cheyenne Wells, Colo.

The Sawmill (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. —One of his best. Lots of new stuff in this one. They will eat it up. You can't play it too strong. They have never got a real comedy coming. —William Thacher, Royal theatre, Salina, Kan.

The Hick (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. —Laugh, laugh and laugh and laugh. Have run a number of his comedies and have not had a poor one. We consider these the best comedies on the market. —H. G. Stettmund, Jr., Odeon theatre, Chandler, Okla.

Larry Semon Comedies (V.) —Good consistent comedy and has always given best of satisfaction. —Custer Carland, Victoria theatre, Frankfort, Mich.

Golf (V.), with Larry Semon. —If you are not playing Semon comedies you are losing money. This one is a knockout. —J. W. Crouch, Elite theatre, St. Paul, Neb.

The Sawmill (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. —Semon's greatest comedy, and I have run them all. —Harry Threde, Scenic theatre, Holstein, Ia.

Star Semon's (Yitagraph), —Just half through with a series of ten Semon comedies. Consider them the best comedies for the money I ever booked. —W. S. Moore, Twin theatre, S. Dak.

The Sawmill (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. —Semon always good for here. Went over like a house afire. —R. S. Peak, Pastime theatre, Maquoketa, Ia.

The Agent (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. —A dandy comedy, and pulled a good crowd. Patrons were more than satisfied. —N. Calbeck, Auditorium theatre, Naples, Ind.

The Grocery Clerk, with Larry Semon. —This is my first Semon. I have been afraid of them on account of the price of such small towns, but when they are worth it. Every inch a laugh. —R. S. Moore, Gem theatre, Snyder, Okla.

The Bell Hop (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. —A good comedy with many good jokes. —Satter, Columbia theatre, Kansas City, Mo.

The Bell Hop (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. —When we have a rather flat audience we always had a Semon to book it with. These are getting better with each release. How they roared and laughed and then asked when the next one would be here. —J. W. Joergie and H. M. Maloney, O. K. theatre, Enterprise, Ore.

The Bell Hop (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. —Boys, here is a comedian that draws and pleases. His comedies are the best rough and tumble I ever saw. They will be the Bell Hop. This Bell Hop is extremely funny. —W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.

The Rent Collector (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. —If you are not playing Semon comedies, you are standing in your own light. —D. A. White, Cozy theatre, Checotah, Okla.

The Saw Mill (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. —A riot from start to finish. Larry's the slap-stick king. —W. Ray Erne, Biltmore, Oakland, Mich.

A Pair of Kings (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. —Larry is always good, as we used to say about the stuff sold in our "honest-to-goodness" stores, 'it's for others,' and the same with Larry. Play it, it will please. —D. Filizola, Empress theatre, Port Scott, Kan.

Larry Semon Comedies (Vitagraph). —Consistently the best comedies to be had. —M. L. Guier, Auditorium theatre, Slaton, Mo.

Larry Semon Comedies (Vitaph). —Larry Semon can see them and be better off for doing so. —Frank E. Lee, Lee's theatre, Three Oaks, Mich.

The Show (Vitaph), with Larry Semon. —The best comedy of his career, and one of the best ever produced. Contains as many thrills as the average series of W. W. White, Jefferson theatre, Jefferson City, Tenn.

The Bell Hop (Vitaph) with Larry Semon. —Larry is a genuine "big league" star with our audiences. We have played every Larry Semon comedy that Vitaphag has ever released. In fact, we used the first, second and third versions of the Bell Hop. The fact is, Larry's comedies get better with every one he makes. —Harry M. Palmer, Liberty theatre, Washington, Ind.

The Bell Hop (Vitaph), with Larry Semon. —A sure riot of fun. Best Semon comedy run to date. Semon in a class by himself. —A. H. McLaughlin, Criterion theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla.

Solid Concrete (Vitaph), with Larry Semon. —This brings a new meaning to the latest comedies. Have found they are all good laugh producers. Try them with a mixed program. —J. S. Wasserman, Liberty theatre, Peebles, Ohio.

The Saw Mill (Vitaph), with Larry Semon. —This is the best Semon comedy to date. Have run eight of his comedies and all were good. He sure gets the laughs. Book them. —A. A. Neese, Beatrice theatre, Haw River, N. C.

New System Needed

Some arrangement must be effected—sooner or later—to enable a greater part of the motion picture public to see pictures in the continuity in which they were produced.

We are not unaware that this merely re-echoes what has been repeatedly declared for many years.

Yet nothing has been accomplished toward this end, although the necessity for an improvement of the condition, which was from the start very great, is constantly growing more intense.

Producers and distributors, considering merely their own interests, are, of course, unanimous as to what should be done. Quite generally they assume the position that the exhibitor should arrange to have his audience in the theatre for the opening of his show. Nothing beyond that, and nothing of any possibly constructive nature, is offered to the theatre owner in his difficulty, the gravity of which he appreciates as well as anyone else.

No one will deny that it is nothing short of butchering a picture to have it viewed from, say, the middle to the end and then from the beginning to the part already seen.

It is beyond question that the entertainment and interest values of even the greatest pictures are materially reduced by this procedure.

And unless a person is singularly dense as to the consequences of the procedure, he must admit that something should be done about it.

But the difficulties surrounding an adjustment of the matter are tremendous.

Theatre owners naturally have in a measure resisted agitation tending toward the establishment of a system under which shows would be advertised to commence at stated intervals. They have clung to the drop-in arrangement which grew up in the early days of the business. They have deliberately refrained from advertising the starting-time of their shows in order that large numbers of their patrons would not hold back, or hurry up, in order to enter the theatre at a particular hour.

It is asserted—and ample proof is introduced—that under any system other than the existing one many less patrons could be taken care of, for the simple reason that if the show was advertised to commence at a stated hour the patrons of a theatre, almost without exception, would seek to gain entrance to the theatre at that hour and in event of failure to do so they could not be expected to wait throughout a full show. Hence, regardless of the attraction only one show would be well attended and attendance earlier and later than this one show would be very poor.

All of this comprises the difficulty which is encountered, but none of it affords an adequate reason for denying the public the right of seeing pictures in the continuity in which they were intended to be seen.

The representative motion pictures of the day are worked over laboriously from the very start to the finished print. Generally speaking, characterizations are carefully developed in order that the spectator may be given an accurate idea of what the character is supposed to be. Likewise, situations are carefully built, one on another, and an effort is made to carry a story along logically and convincingly. But these laborious and costly efforts are largely wasted when a spectator is dashed into the middle of a picture without introduction as to characters, plot or settings.

Regarded of the difficulties with which the existing situation is weighted down, something must be done toward correcting it; otherwise, it must be recognized that we are deliberately tolerating a condition which in itself is sufficiently serious to undermine the public's interest in pictures and to stop the industry's development.
"Last Report" Is Filed by New York Board of Censors (ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 30.—What is generally regarded as the "last report" of the New York Censorship Commission has been filed with Governor Alfred E. Smith. On the declaration of time soon, machinery in the legislature will be put in motion to abolish the commission, which in its own report shows that it cost $150,000 to operate during the past twelve months. Aside from the figures showing eliminations and expenses, the greater part of the report is given over to excusing the existence of the commission and urging its continuance.

Bill Names Fine for Drawing Color Line

(DEN MOINES, Ia., Jan. 30.—In a bill introduced by Representative Ditz of Polk county before the Ohio legislature is a clause which fixes a definite penalty for violation of the civil rights statute. The penalty is a fine of $100 or thirty days imprisonment.

The present statute makes refusal to admit a colored person to a theatre, cafe, hotel, and the like a misdemeanor, but because the statute does not fix a specific penalty the general penalty clause of a year in jail or $500 fine is applicable.

Exhibitor Convicted On Charge of Arson

(MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., Jan. 30.—First conviction of a theatre manager in the Northwest on arson charges occurred this week at Pipestone, Minn., when Jerry Hines, Pipestone exhibitor was found guilty of arson in the third degree in connection with the burning of the $60,000 Orpheum theatre at Pipestone, Nov. 14, 1922.

It was the second trial of Hines on the arson charge. The first jury disagreed.

Freed on Fire Charge

(ST. LOUIS, MO., Jan. 30.—Arthur Robinson, owner-manager of the Hickory theatre, who was arrested by the police following a fire at his theatre, January 7, was released by Judge Hochdoerfer of the Court of Criminal Correction and was exonerated of all blame in connection with the fire. He said he carried fire insurance.

Lesser Buys T. & D. Chain; Schenck Joins Organization

Deal by Which West Coast Theatres Acquires 40 Coast Houses and Additional First National Franchises Involves Millions

(Los Angeles, January 30.—West Coast Theatres, Inc., the Lesser-Gore-Ramish chain, has purchased the Turner & Dahmen circuit of forty houses in California, the First National franchise for Northern and Central California, the Educational franchise for the state and the First National franchise for New York.

Op the heels of the announcement of this deal, which is one of the largest in the history of the industry, comes the important announcement that Joseph M. Schenck, producer of the Norma and Constable Talmage attractions and the Buster Keaton comedies, has become a fifth partner in the West Coast Theatres organization.

$5,000,000 Involved in Deal, According to Report

No figures have been mentioned in connection with the big transaction, but it is understood that the transfer of properties involves something like $5,000,000. The deal increases the Lesser-Gore-Ramish holdings on the West Coast to 100 theatres, located in cities extending along the coast, from Eureka to San Diego.

Officials of West Coast Theatres, Inc., are Sol Lesser, A. L. and Michael Gore and Alfred Ramish. In the present A. L. Gore will go to San Francisco where he will remain until permanent adjustments between the two organizations have been made. It is likely that Joseph Samuels then will be the West Coast representative in the Golden Gate city.

Arthur Remains Manager

Harry C. Arthur remains general manager of the entire string of houses, while Dave Bershon will have supervision over the bookings of all theatres.

The T. & D. houses acquired will be remodeled and altered to conform to the high standard of motion picture presentation established by the West Coast organization.

The theatres which the deal brings under the control of the West Coast company are located at Oakland, Berkeley, Richmond, Watsonville, Salinas, Stockton, Sacramento, San Jose, San Francisco, and other houses in Southern California.

Controls Big Distribution

West Coast Theatres now control the distribution of First National attractions in California, Nevada, Arizona, Hawaii and New York.

Commenting upon the deal, Mr. Lesser said:

"Such a consolidation as this is advantageous not only to the industry and to the artists but to the public as well. By controlling such a chain of theatres we can afford to buy the best talent available and bring it to our patrons. The number of our houses permits us to offer artists and performers of all kinds a tour of at least thirty weeks and at remunerative salaries. This brings us the cream of arts and our patrons get the benefit. It is the same with art directors, ballet masters and the like. We can hire the best and keep them profitably busy staging acts for presentation over our circuit, and Mr. Gore's early departure for New York where he will enter into contracts with these specialists. Los Angeles gets the benefit too by reason of its vastly extended artistic colony. We shall help to make this southern metropolis the center of the artistic life of the west if not indeed of the nation."

According to reports the deal gives the West Coast combine more than 150 booking days throughout the state. This includes first runs in cities all along the Coast.

Control 150 Booking Days

"We propose to have at the head of each of our producing departments the most distinguished experts available and that is one reason for bringing into the smaller towns acts of metropolitan quality and seldom otherwise seen outside the largest cities."

Iowa Exhibitor Threatens Suit

C. J. Latta, manager of the Lyric Theatre, Harlan, la., values the HERALD so highly that he threatens suit if he misses a single copy. He writes:

"Will you kindly advise where your records show my subscription to the HERALD is paid up to?"

"I wish to assure you right now that if it ever expires while I am in the motion picture business and you stop sending me the HERALD, I am immediately going to bring suit for damages.

"To run a theatre without the HERALD would be as difficult as to attempt to run one without a motion picture machine."

Musicians Union Files Suit Against Exhibitor

(SEATTLE, WASH., Jan. 30.—Because of statements alleged to have been made by John Danz on December 28 in which he declared union men were responsible for the placing of stink bombs in his theatres, Musicians' Association, Local 1016, has filed a libel suit for $25,000 against the exhibitor.

E. H. Bailey, trustee of the Musicians' Association, signed the complaint and it is said that the union will have the support of the Washington State Federation of Labor in the fight.
Expect Uniform Contract To Be Realized This Week

Meeting Called for February 2 at Which Remaining Differences Are Expected to Be Settled and Agreement Signed

By JOHN S. SPARGO

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—In spite of the denials and secrecy which always accompanies any big deal or important movement in the film industry, it can be stated as a fact that the much talked of exhibitors' "equitable contract" has been agreed upon by all concerned and will be ratified by the end of the present week.

Meeting Called for Friday Afternoon

For the purposes of ratification, a meeting has been called for 2 o'clock Friday afternoon at the office of Will Hays, head of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. At this meeting, in addition to Mr. Hays and the board of directors, attorneys, etc., of the Hays organization will be the executive committees of the Motion Picture Owners of America, headed by President Sydney S. Cohen; of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York, headed by President Charles L. O'Reilly; and of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce, headed by President William Landon.

Complete accord on all the provisions of the contract, with one minor exception, is said to have been reached last week. Then came the question as to which of the three exhibitor organizations should take the lead in affixing the signatures to the document which would make it official.

Notify Exhibitor Leaders

Mr. Hays suggested that owing to the importance of the action to be taken, he thought advisable for the highest officials, boards of directors or executive committees to meet with the executive committee of his organization for the purpose of signing.

This was agreed upon and notices have been sent to these officials of the three exhibitor bodies to assemble in Mr. Hays' office on Friday. This will be the first time since the rupture of relations between the Sydney Cohen organization and the New York exhibitors at the Washington convention, that the warring factions have assembled in one room. History will be made by the signing of the famous contract, and it is believed to be not without the bounds of possibility, that history may be made in other ways at the gathering of the battling clans.

One of the most baffling points in working out the contract in a manner that would be equitable to both sides and at the same time be legally binding, was in the matter of the arbitration clause, aimed to do away with the old Hoy system, which in many ways was objectionable to distributor and exhibitor alike.

The matter of how this arbitration should be conducted was easily decided upon—the system which has worked so satisfactorily for the past year between the T. O. C. C. and the F. I. L. M. Club in New York, being practically adopted. The question which caused the trouble was the method of putting teeth in the arbitration rules which would make them equally binding on distributor and producer, and at the same time be legally sound.

For many months this particular clause has been in the hands of what are considered to be among the best legal luminaries in New York. Many times what was believed to be a solution was arrived at, only to be upset when the attorneys for the distributors and those of the three exhibitor bodies got together to consider the newest proposed solution.

Even the toughest knot may be untied and agreement on all except the minor points reached. It is expected that this minor point will be speedily settled at the meeting Friday.

Everyone Is Jubilant

While no one with intimate knowledge of the details of the agreement yet knew what both sides—in fact all four sides—were jubilant over the results reached and the resolution is freely made that the adoption of the contract will do much to wipe out the strife which has existed for years between the distributors and the exhibitors.

One of the first actions of importance by Mr. Hays after becoming the head of the Hays organization was to offer to proffer to the exhibitors a contract that should be mutually agreed upon and ratified. He believed it would do much towards bringing to the industry the peace and harmony so necessary for its advancement towards stabilization.

At the time of the inception of this movement all was peace and harmony in the ranks of the exhibitors and little difficulty was anticipated in getting the two important branches of the industry together on a program of mutuality. Then came the new historical rupture in exhibitor ranks at the Washington convention, and instead of dealing with one body of exhibitors in working out the contract, Mr. Hays found he was compelled to deal with three, two of which were not on speaking terms with the other.

Exhibitor Split Is Handicap

Since then many meetings were held between the Hays organization representatives and the three exhibitor bodies—it being necessary to hold three separate conferences every time it was deemed advisable to consider any clause of the contract as the document was being built up.

To the necessity of these many conferences is due much of the delay in getting the contract into completed form. However this has finally been done and it is confidently expected by all concerned that early in February all business being done between distributors and exhibitors will be under the new form of contract.

Addresses College Club

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 30.—Courtland Smith, secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, addressed members of the College Club of St. Louis Monday evening, January 28, at the Artists Guild. He told of the work of his organization and also touched on the evils of state censorship.
Paramount Closes Lynch Transaction

Sum of $1,900,000 Is Paid

To Lynch Firm—Get F. P. L. Stock

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 30—The contracts whereby Famous Players-Lasky Corporation takes over the management of the theatres and exchanges of S. A. Lynch of Atlanta and his associates has been closed. Famous Players-Lasky Corporation paid to S. A. Lynch Enterprises Finance Corporation approximately $1,900,000 which appeared on the company’s consolidated balance sheet as common stock.

Issue 15,000 Shares of Stock

Of this sum, $1,500,000 was paid by Famous Players agreeing to issue to Mr. Lynch and his associates 15,000 shares of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation’s common stock.

The five exchanges of Southern Enterprises will be operated under the same management as other Famous Players’ exchanges, while the theatres will be brought into close alignment with theatre department of the company.

Rumors that Famous Players-Lasky Corporation contemplated refinancing were emphatically denied.

Office As Elected

Officers of Southern Enterprises elected are as follows: President, Fredric G. Lee; vice-president, Harold B. Franklin, secretary and treasurer. Fredric G. Lee, Daniel Michaelow, director of theatres, will be in active charge of theatre operations under the supervision of Harold B. Franklin, and A. S. Barnard is retained as general counsel.

Exhibitor, 73, Dies at Rice Lake, Wisconsin

(Rice Lake, Wis., Jan. 30.)—Exhibitor M. L. Newell, 73 years old, part owner with George Minor of Ladysmith, Wis., in the Kato and Majestic theatres here, died at the home of his niece, Mrs. Fred Campbell.

Mr. Newell was one of the leading business men of the city and came here from Excedo in Menomonie, purchasing the Kato theatre, in which he recently sold half interest to George Minor and acquired a half interest in Minor’s Majestic theatre. Mr. Newell acted as manager of both houses. A son living in New Jersey survives him.

Fairbanks’ Brother Is Stricken by Paralysis

Fairbanks was stricken last Wednesday evening after he had awakened from a restless slumber. Physicians were immediately summoned but there was nothing they could do as the stroke had already paralyzed the right side following which he lost the power of speech.

Iowa Theatre Man Charges Cohen League Is Negligent

Declares Exhibitors Who Paid Money Into Treasury of Association Are Receiving No Support and No Benefits From It

A direct charge that the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America is negligent in its duty to exhibitors of the country, and that members of the organization are not receiving the support pledged them when they paid their money into the treasury is made in a communication addressed to the editor of Exhibitors Herald by Frederick V. Hinds, manager of the Cresco Theatre, Cresco, Iowa.

No Move Made to Fight Drastic Tax Bill

Mr. Hinds’ complaint at this time is prompted by the fact that in the face of drastic tax legislation now before the state legislature no move has been made by the M. P. T. O. to defeat it. If this legislation is enacted, he says, many theatre men of the state will be forced to darken their houses.

Hundreds of Iowa exhibitors have paid thousands of dollars for protection against such legislation. Mr. Hinds says, but thus far the exhibitors’ organization has not raised a hand to fight the measures now being considered.

Mr. Hinds letter to the Herald follows:

“Editor, Exhibitors Herald,

“Des Moines:"

“Dear Sir:

“Just where is the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America’s legislative—legislation which, if passed, will, in all probability, put a large percentage of Iowa theatres out of business, is now pending in the state’s legislative bodies with what many of us believe to be a strong chance of passing. The principal thing—what are the plans for the organization of this exhibitor body—was to protect exhibitors, as far as possible, from just this sort of legislation. None of us can find any record of any participation of this association in the fight against this bill.

Has No Membership Record

“Not very long ago one of the ‘Paramount Twins’ gathered in a large batch of memberships in Iowa by charging merchants three times the actual value of a slide service—which is a violation of the law (as the merchants advise is to a cat. Naturally, the sale was made with the assistance of the exhibitor, for which he was given membership in the association.

“Personally we receive two or three communications (mimeographed) a year, addressed to the president of the board of directors of this body. As we did before the membership was taken out. They don’t even know this theatre is a member of the organization.

“With hundreds of members in Iowa, from whom—or because of whom—thousands of dollars have been received for a protection from such legislation, no action whatever has been taken at this date to fight the proposed addition of a 10 per cent state tax. While the proposed tax is confined to a single state it intends to force theatres to pay 20 PER CENT as a total tax. The theatre would receive 10 cents out of the 25 cents collected!

Assurances Were Given

“Assurances were made us that the association would even go so far as to fight local bills for exhibitors, here’s a STATE-WIDE proposition of the most drastic nature we have had to contend with since the imposition of the federal tax.

“And Iowa exhibitors who paid, or directly caused to be paid, $57 each into the treasury of this association, are receiving no support from it in this battle.

“Yours very truly,

[Signed] M. C. Hinds.”

Latest news from Des Moines, Ia., reports that a censorship measure also has been introduced in the state legislature.

Valentino Can’t Appear At Theatres, He States

(ST. LOUIS, MO—Jan. 30.—Just what liberties to work Rodolph Valentino has at present is made clear in a telegram received by Fred L. Crownwell of the Delmonite theatre in which the star denies signing a contract to appear in vaudeville. In his wire he says:

“Rumor of my vaudeville engagement totally incorrect. If I could appear in theatres, I would appear, first at the Delmonite, true to my promise. Modification of contract only allows me to go to large restaurants or hotels, but not on the stage.”

Fairbanks Terms Hays "Fixer;"
It's Meat for Editors
Newspapers All Over Country Carry Columns When Star Attacks Head of M. P. P. D. A.

By HARRY HAMMOND BEALL
(West Coast Representative of the Herald)

LOS ANGELES, CALI., January 30.—Is Douglas Fairbanks trying to label former Postmaster Will H. Hays, now the czar of the film industry, as second-class matter?

Does he regard his as a dead letter so far as being the uplifter of the picture industry is concerned?

THAT is what the local screen colony is asking as the result of an interview published in a Friday morning paper, in which Fairbanks is quoted as saying Mr. Hays "is nothing whatever to do with the art or morals of the motion picture industry—that he is simply the hired intermediary or "fixer"—that he has done wonderful work in straightening out the censor-like tangle but that and only that is his function.

"When Mr. Hays was here last month, I told him the public ought to be informed that moral uplift was not his true role," Fairbanks is quoted as saying, "I admire his ability and admire Mr. Hays but I believe his true status should be made known."

Answering Fairbanks' statement, Jesse L. Lasky says, "Will Hays is a great benefactor in the film industry; he has made his influence felt in any controversy, eulogized Hays and declared his faith in the "Little Napoleon of Filmdom.""

"Mr. Hays' record is unimpeachable and his integrity indisputable," said Mr. Lasky. "Since he has been the leader of the motion picture business, the morale of the entire industry has been uplifted. Will Hays is a great benefactor and I have the utmost faith in him. All businesses need a leader and the film industry is a nationally organized business."

The attack on Hays attributed to Fairbanks was the result of his being asked to comment on the proposed organization of leading stars of filmdom, including Fairbanks, Jack Pickford, Greta Garbo, Clara Bow, Harold Lloyd and others to give the photoplay patrons "art instead of what the parasites of the industry," as Mr. Fairbanks terms them "think art."

The plan called for independent transactions direct to the exhibitors from these independent stars with their own producing companies.

New Theatre in Strand Chain to Open Feb. 22
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

TROY, N. Y., Jan. 30.—The tentative date for the opening of The Troy, another of the Strand chain of theatres, in process of construction has been fixed for February 22. There is rumor to the effect that Uly Hill, manager of the Mark Strand in Albany, may be given the management of the Troy house.

The Troy, when completed, will represent an investment of about $350,000.

New Schenectady House Cuts Admission Charge
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 30.—In an effort to increase its patronage, the State in Schenectady, N. Y., newest of the Strand chain of houses, has dropped its admission prices.

Shortly after the opening of the State, the Barchi announced a drop in prices.

Manages Boston Houses
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

BOSTON, MASS., Jan. 30.—Arrangements have been completed here whereby the Boston unit of theatres of New England Theatres, Inc., will be operated under the direction of William P. Gray. He has operated theatres for the company in Maine, New Hampshire and New York. No change of ownership is planned and present officials will continue in office.
Fairbanks Mixes In

Mr. Douglas Fairbanks' dissatisfaction with Mr. Will H. Hays broke from the privacy of his immediate circle last week and became common property with a newspaper statement which characterized Mr. Hays in a manner that doubtlessly was most pleasing to the enemies of the screen and the picture business.

Because of the phase of the motion picture business with which Mr. Fairbanks is chiefly concerned it probably should not be surprising that Mr. Fairbanks was not warned away from the action he took by a realization of the desperate conditions facing the business and the serious consequences which his action might entail.

Mr. Fairbanks has been and is far from the firing line where the industry is constantly being assailed by various types of persons and associations which seek either to control or wreck the business and who cannot but find much help and encouragement in the condition of an industry divided against itself which he has endeavored to publicize. Mr. Fairbanks has been fortunate in having had elements in the business make straight and smooth a great deal of the way he has traveled as a producer and distributor but apparently he now feels that all of this has come about in a natural way and that he has no one to thank for it.

Mr. Fairbanks seems to feel that he and his interests rest securely far above the small business with which Mr. Hays is concerned. He appears to believe that any offer of help from Mr. Hays is presumptuous, that in reality he is quite able to help himself and if the occasion presented itself he could also help Mr. Hays in the meantime without much additional effort.

We do not assume to defend Mr. Hays nor the work he has in hand. We feel that Mr. Hays is thoroughly able to defend, when necessary, himself and his activities. But we do feel that the Fairbanks criticism of Hays which can accomplish nothing of a constructive nature but will serve only to encourage the assailants of the screen and to embarrass Mr. Hays in many important matters he is working upon should not pass unnoticed.

Mr. Fairbanks resents the leadership of Mr. Hays. Opposing this he would set up an association of independent producers and stars who would be fortunate enough to receive Mr. Fairbanks' approval. In this new association we presume Mr. Fairbanks would play general. All of which, it seems to us, presents a situation which speaks eloquently for itself.

There is much in the Hays program to which we do not subscribe. We do not approve, for instance, of the elaborate effort to gain the 'good will of certain types of persons whose good will never stays put very long—and which would not be worth much even if it did—but we feel that nothing but a singular case of mental obtuseness could prevent anyone in good faith not realizing that the Hays program already has accomplished immeasurable good for the motion picture industry in every branch and in every aspect.

It will be remembered that while Mr. Fairbanks has been very busy making his pictures—good and great as they have been but still his own private interest—much has been accomplished without even a gesture from him which has satisfactorily has enjoyed to the New York Centrship, Blue Laws, tariff matters and various other questions, all have had their quota of attention while Mr. Fairbanks has been confining his attention to his own lot out in California.

The "Parasites of the Business," as Mr. Fairbanks appears to characterize film company executives generally, have, as the records show, devoted their time, effort and money to these questions.

Mr. Fairbanks is particularly wrathful about the interest attributed to Mr. Hays in the improvement in moral conditions in the professional end of the business. Well, the whole world knows that with or without reason these conditions have not been considered consistently ideal and if a man of Mr. Hays' prominence and reputation sees fit to cast a supervising eye over these conditions we can find no grounds for a disclaimer in the public press.

We don't like Mr. Fairbanks in this new role: He is much more constructive and convincing in greasepaint.

Bushman and Bayne
Will Appear in Act
With New Photoplays
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Following two years in vaudeville on the Keith and Orpheum circuits Francis X. Bushman, well known in screen player has announced that he will again resume work before the camera with Beverly Bayne as his leading lady.

It is Mr. Bush-

man’s plan to make about three big pictures a year in which he and Miss Bayne and other members of the cast will appear on the stage and personally “act” one reel of the picture. The picture will be complete without the act, but will be so made that the personal appearance of the players can be substituted for the reel in first run houses where this may be desirable.

It is said that his personal appearances in the cast of the picture will be limited as he plans to appear in a Broadway play in the future and also appear in vaudeville from time to time.

Sacramento Pictures
Has Popular Cast
For Its First Feature
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 30.—An auspicious beginning in its first production “Temporary Marriage” has been made by Sacramento Pictures Corporation. Through the courtesy of B. P. Schulberg Kenneth Harlan has been acquired for the leading male role and in addition to this the company has signed a long term contract with Mildred Davis, who will have the feminine lead.

Lambert Hillyer has been engaged to direct the production. Besides Harlan and Miss Davis the cast will include Tully Marshall, Myrtle Steadman, Stuart Holmes and Maude George.

B. F. Zeidman is a partner in the enterprise and has charge of production. John Stumar is the cinematographer.

Reformers in Hard Fight to Control Screens of Country Bills Seek to Retard Progress of Industry

Iowa Measure Provides That All Films Be Cut to the Standard of the Child Mind

While the legislative situation appears rather dark at the first glance, a complete digest of news reports received from many sections of the country discloses a strong opposition to coactive measures among law-makers. Thousands of exhibitors who refuse to be rushed off their feet by the prattle of the reform element, which reaches the height of its activity at each convening of a legislature.

An insight into the situation in a number of states is reviewed briefly in the adjoining symposium:

Iowa

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

DES MOINES, I.A., Jan. 30.— Iowa's censorship bill appeared in the lower house last week, being introduced by Representative J. P. Gallagher, Williamsburg farmer. Gallagher goes one better than the sponsors of measures in other states, and proposes to call the censorship board the "Iowa Board of Standardization of Motion Pictures." Other than its name, it bears the same earmarks of all censorship measures.

That is, it would charge $2 for reviewing each 1,000 foot reel including originals and copies. Board members would receive $3,000 each annually. A drastic clause of the bill is that which provides that all pictures be cut to the standard of the child mind. Violation would bring a $25 fine. Subsequent offenses would be punishable by fines of not less than $100 nor more than $500, or from thirty days to six months in jail.

Alabama

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Jan. 30.— The state senate has not been impressed by the wails of the reformers who are seeking a Sunday closing law in the state. By a vote of 18 to 17, the upper house tabled indefinitely the measure which would have forced a "sour" Sunday upon the state.

North Carolina

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

PINEHURST, N. C., Jan. 30.— The club women of this state will not support any effort to enact censorship for at least the next two years. This decision was reached at the meeting here of the State Federation of Women's Clubs when a resolution was adopted recommending to the Legislative Council of Women that action on censorship be delayed at least two years.

Ohio

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 30.— Ohio ministers, meeting here last week, went on record in favor of (1) prohibition of Sunday pictures, (2) active fight by churches against move to repeal censorship, (3) fight to prevent question of censorship being put to a vote of the people, (4) vote to repeal the amount to be seen that state censor law is not violated, (5) fight to prevent a combination of exchanges refusing to rent film to non-theatrical exhibitors, (6) permanent barring of Arbuckle film from Ohio, (7) endorsement of policy of Vernon Riegel as head of censor board, (8) national censorship, and (9) additional legislation providing penalties for the showing of films detrimental to the public welfare.

Indiana

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Jan. 30.— After a three hour debate the senate committee on public morals decided to report without recommendation the bill designed to establish censorship. A similar measure is up in the house. Two hundred ministers attending the interdenominational evangelistic meeting here adopted resolutions urging censorship. The Legislative Council of Indiana Women also is supporting legislation. The Indiana Indorsers, headed by Mrs. Fred L. Pettijohn, is fighting the movement.

Oklahoma

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., Jan. 30.— A drastic Sunday closing measure has been introduced in the state legislature. This discriminatory bill, which would permit shows in churches and the like where no admission price is charged, provides for a fine of from $50 to $500 for violation, the amount to be doubled on second conviction, with the offender forfeiting his license to do business one year.

Another drastic measure before the legislators would make it unlawful to exhibit or transport pictures showing the conduct of any person of criminal reputation or immoral character, or any person convicted of crime. The measure also would prohibit exhibition or transportation of films showing, or purporting to show, sex relations in such manner as

It's Time to Get Busy

Below are published reports showing the local exhibitors only who are endeavoring to clamp blue laws and censorship upon the country. These reports illustrate clearly that the principles which the Public Rights League has been sponsoring must be applied if a free screen is to be maintained.

Los Angeles, Calif., Jan. 29.— The public has experienced in years, a flag was raised over the city which read: "Berestford as in this and following Jan. 21, 1776."

A letter from Mr. Kudert telling of his fight against the blue law advocates is published in the Public Rights League.

Measure Is Shelved

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

CANTON, O., Jan. 29.— The city council shelved by a vote of eight to five a proposed ordinance which would have prohibited operation of theatres here on Sunday.

People Will Vote

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

ARCADIA, CAL., Jan. 30.— A special election, at which the question of Sunday shows will be voted upon, will be held here on February 1. In 1917, Arcadia voted against Sunday pictures.

Greater Power Voted

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

PALO ALTO, CAL., Jan. 30.— The city council has vested greater powers in the Advisory Board of Commercial Amusements. Under the new ordinance the board becomes a censorship proposition, it is empowered to refuse approval of the license application when presented by the theatre if the picture in question is considered improper for public viewing.

Urges Censorship

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

WET PALM BEACH, FLA., Jan. 30.— City Manager Riddle is gathering data on both censorship and Sunday closing ordinances following requests made by ministers and others that such laws be enacted here. Manager Riddle said he did not believe that the theatres could be closed under present statutes.

A Magazine Sold on Merit

No greater compliment to the editorial contents of a magazine could be paid than the following letter from T. R. Jessie, manager of the Humphreys Theatre, Humphreys, Md.:

"I am enclosing a check to cover a two years' subscription to EXHIBITORS HERALD.

"I am enclosing one copy but I am convinced that no exhibitor should be without it. Send me all the back numbers to January 1st if possible."

They Say!

OPINIONS on two subjects of concern to the industry have been voiced during the past week by two men prominent in the affairs of the business. President Carl Laemmle, of Universal, and Mr. Laemmle’s, opinion, and others who believe the time inopportune for such a change. They are doubtless not a little interested and provoked widespread comment by his statement that “box office admission prices are too high in many instances.” The question is considered a vital one by exhibitors, some of whom support Mr. Laemmle’s opinion, and others who believe the time inopportune for such a change.

Touging on an entirely separate phase of the business is the statement of John Emerson, president of the Actors Equity Association, who has returned from a conference in Hollywood and motion picture actor’s contract, would place a morality clause in the agreements he might consider a step toward a reorganization of the screen business which tends to the hiring of extras. Instead of being paid at the studio when their work is done, they now are obliged to go into Los Angeles after the next week’s price is to be set for the preceding day, thus having to waste hours of their time, and, in the majority of cases, lose the next day’s work.

We hope to bring about a reorganization of the studio system, the equity feelings this will be the best time to for him and the producer as well as the actor, as it would greatly increase the efficiency of the work and cut down the present enormous cost of overtime paid to the technical staff and others.

“There are certain unscrupulous producers who plan to make their actors work fourteen to sixteen hours every day, and under present conditions they are able to do so. In thus squeezing from their actors practically two weeks’ work for one week’s pay, these producers are competing unfairly with the honest, fair-minded producers who work their people a reasonable length of time. Every honest producer should see the advantage to himself in such a condition, and help to correct it.

Says Mr. Emerson:

A morality clause is an insult to actors everywhere. However, we are willing to insert one in the proposed standard contract providing there is a also a managers’ morality clause. Morality is a broad term and is just as estimable in employees as it is in employers.

One of our chief purposes in asking for the new contract is to do away with the subsidized managers’ agency which now dominates Hollywood. In many studios an actor must pay a commission to this agency even if he has already paid a commission to his own private agent. He must pay it whether the managers’ agency gets him the work or not.

We hope to bring about a reorganization of the studio system, the Equity feelings this will be the best time to for him and the producer as well as the actor, as it would greatly increase the efficiency of the work and cut down the present enormous cost of overtime paid to the technical staff and others.

“In regard to the forty-eight hour week, the Equity feels this would be an excellent thing for the producer as well as the actor, as it would greatly increase the efficiency of the work and cut down the present enormous cost of overtime paid to the technical staff and others.

There are certain unscrupulous producers who plan to make their actors work fourteen to sixteen hours every day, and under present conditions they are able to do so. In thus squeezing from their actors practically two weeks’ work for one week’s pay, these producers are competing unfairly with the honest, fair-minded producers who work their people a reasonable length of time. Every honest producer should see the advantage to himself in such a condition, and help to correct it.

Has Directed 47 Productions

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—The publication by Fox Film Corporation in February 25 of “The Net” is of particular significance to Director J. Gordon Edwards. With this picture Mr. Edwards will have contributed to the forty-seventh screen production.

Among the films to his credit are Theda Bara’s “Salome,” “Queen of Sheba,” “Nero,” “The Shepherd King” which is forthcoming, and many others. Barbara Caslton has a leading role in his latest, “The Net.”

Film Export Growing

Bureau of Commerce Compilations Indicate

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 30.—Our foreign trade in motion picture films is increasing steadily, according to figures prepared by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, exports for November totaling nearly $530,000. During the month, the bureau’s report shows the export of 1,102,148 linear feet of unexpensed film, with a total value of $83,988, of which $160,399, was valued at $20,102, went to Japan, and 1,005,409 feet, valued at $25,251, to England.

Exports of negatives totaled 282,122 feet, with a value of $10,597, of which 102,508 feet, valued at $33,327, went to England, the highest in this class of film being Mexico, with 51,092 feet, valued at $2,540.

Imports to the total of 12,601,101 feet and valued at $309,980 we were also exported, the heaviest importers being Australia, with 1,710,622 feet, valued at $71,394; Canada, with 1,645,255 feet, valued at $77,915; Japan, with 1,463,111 feet, valued at $41,997; and England, with 1,023,261 feet, valued at $41,545.

Ince Urges Exhibitors To Shop for Pictures

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 30.—“There are good pictures in plenty now being released. And if exhibitors will shop for them, picture goers will be forced to shop less.”

This is the opinion of Thomas H. Ince, who sees in the exhibitor a medium for bringing about bigger and better pictures. “The exhibitor who shops for his pictures is the biggest asset my studios have,” he declared. “He is the biggest asset the entire industry has.”

Pantages Cuts Charge

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

KANSAS CITY, MO., Jan. 30.—A cut in the price for the thousand balcony seats for week night performances has been made by the Pantages in the vaudeville and motion picture house. The reduction will be from 50 cents to 25 cents, including tax, Saturdays and Sundays not included.
Has anybody got spunk enough to say that Harry Beaumont hasn't his hands full? Mr. Beaumont is the proud daddy of twins. He has been engaged to direct "Main street," the Sinclair Lewis story, for Warner Brothers.

Harry Rapf, who is producing on the West Coast for Warner Brothers, is joined by his family. Mr. Rapf is the producer of the Wesley Barry vehicles and other attractions for independent distribution by the Warner organization.

Conrad Nagel and his "second best" girl. This is the first time you have met his little daughter, Ruth. Nagel is a featured player and member of the Paramount stock company.

And here's another member of Paramount stock company photographed with his "next best" girl. This is Milton Sills, member of the Paramount stock company, and his daughter, Dorothy.
The masked dancers appearing in the elaborate production of " Enemies of Women," the Vicente Blasco Ibanez story which Cosmopolitan is adapting to the screen. Alan Crosland is directing the piece. Lionel Barrymore is one of the featured players.

The West Virginia football team on its jaunt to California dropped in on the Selznick production forces and was received by Elaine Hammerstein and Director Victor Herman on one of the mammoth sets for "Rupert of Hentzau."

Here's something for aspiring screen stars to think about. For instance, Nell Shipman in "The Grub-Stake," American Releasing picture, is on friendly terms with many wild animals, including "Brownie," the bear.

Baby Peggy, Century star, is a full-fledged saleswoman. She is selling "Peggy dolls" to aid Peggy Wheeler, Los Angeles-crippled girl.

Two of Pittsburgh's finest meet H. D. Buckley and "Robin Hood" film at depot and escort them through city to bank vaults for safe keeping prior to premiere of Douglas Fairbanks' picture at Pitt theatre.

Believe it or not, but these primeval forest scenes from Cecil B. DeMille's new Paramount production, "Adam's Rib," were photographed inside the Lasky studio. If your eyes are sharp you can see the steel framework of the studio structure at the top of the center picture. This is not discernible in the film, however. Picture at the left shows Pauline Garon in the prehistoric caveman forest. At the right is Julia Faye as the "mischievous" one in the prehistoric scenes of this new DeMille special.

Above, half million dollar check which Jackie Coogan received from Metro for his name on the dotted line. Left, little star watches "daddy dear" put finishing touches on the contract while Joseph M. Schenck, Mrs. Coogan, Neil McCarthy, Joe Engel and Edwin Loeb look on. The contract is for four Metro attractions.

William Duncan has signed to make "super serials" for Universal. Edith Johnson, the star's wife, also joins Universal production forces.

Esther Ralston, new leading woman at Universal City, is playing opposite William Desmond in "The Phantom Fortune," a new serial.
A busy producer must play once in awhile. Here is Thomas H. Ince pausing for a chat with Madge Bellamy, Ince star, and Hottentot. Both Miss Bellamy and the horse play important roles in that fine Ince-First National comedy, "The Hottentot."

"Speaking of expansion. How about opening an exchange at the North Pole this year?" E. E. Shauer (left), director of Paramount's foreign department, asks John Cecil Graham, general foreign agent in charge of Paramount British organization.

If you know flags of various nations you know extent of Fox Film Corporation's world-wide distribution. The flags of these countries are kept in this showcase in reception room of New York office.

The WEEK in NEW YORK

CONFESION is said to be good for the soul, and that's probably why Herb Crocker is trying to ease his. A couple of weeks ago we had something to say about the misadventure of the A. M. P. A. press agent. Herb was it. Now he isn't. Get this—his confession:

DEAR JOHN:

I am writing in a pool of tears with the latest copy of the Herald floating through the window, open at the page wherein is contained, "The Week in New York." At the same time, I am glooping lacrimously over the appointment of Fred Bac as press agent for the Paramount.

Oh, the irony of being caught. And the unfairness of the press in disclosing another scandal in filmdom that might have been hushed up! For I was that press agent shrouded in mystery. But Grant's Tomb! I was supposed to have three (3) assistants, and they weren't even shrouded in mystery. They just weren't! Each one was assigned for the week, and when it came to me, I wrote mine. But alas, they grew weaker, and so did I, and, lo, it came to pass that you were lucky to get a story ever fourth week. But here's the explanation! H! You see the "Naked Truth Dinner" is coming down as that is always shrouded in mystery before it breaks out, I put my test together! I decided to become a Teaser Campaign for the after-dinner repast as mysterious as the soup at the dinner! I meant to tease you all by writing nothing. (For the only Xmas present I gave you was a cigar from the printer!) But Great God! I got so mysterious and Fred Bac became so open faced he resembled an Ingersoll. H! got the job. From now on, you will probably be well posted as to Who Starved at the Cunard Club (fill in date). But don't forget the Naked Truth Dinner!

Herb Crocker.

And speaking of press agents, alias publicity directors, Louie Garby wields a wicked Corina, as witness:

"From far away Assuan on the Nile, via the picturesque art of the ancient times which was the basis of the dances that came later pp the Greek classic dance, the many European forms and finally our own." Don't know just what "pp the Greek classic dance" but it's probably something pretty good.

George Melford is making "You Can't Fool Your Wife" for Paramount. There are a lot of people rich in this film industry whom title will not be any news.

As is customary when a new star or director is signed up First National gave a luncheon (with usual Earl Hubbard trimmings) at the Ritz-Carlton one day last week after the acquisition of Frank Borzage to the directorial ranks.

After partaking of what was provided to be an excellent buffet, Reichenbach expressed the hope that Dick Rowland's organization would increase its output.

Murry Thurman, motion picture actress, and Allan Dwan, motion picture director, were much surprised to learn that during their absence from New York on two different film productions recently, an announcement had been made of their engagement to each other.

Miss Thurman and Mr. Dwan have made denials of this erroneous report. At first, due to the nature of the announcement, they intended to let the statement die a natural death, but as it grew more persistent and increased in circulation they decided to make formal denial.

It happens that Miss Thurman is an admirer of Mr. Dwan's pictures and that she is one of the favorite motion picture players. This is probably the fifth or sixth unfounded rumor concerning engagements or forthcoming marriages of rather prominent motion picture figures in the past year.

Tito Schipa, tenor of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, Galli Curci and Tito Ruffo were visitors at the Tifford hotel this week, to pay their respects to John Robertson, who is directing Richard Barthelmess in "The Bright Shalt," Mr. and Mrs. Robertson were guests at the christening of a new arrival at the Tito Schipa home last week. Tito Ruffo and Galli-Curci were the distinguished guests.

The National Board of Review will hold its annual get-together in the ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria next Saturday. This year the Board for Best Foreign Films which is affiliated with the National Board is joining in the event. The topic for the luncheon, "The Future of the Exceptional Photosplay," will be discussed by a brilliant group of speakers. They include Everett Dean Martin, until recently Chairman of the Board of Walter P. Ross and Eatonton, Essayist; Clayton Hamilton, author; Kenneth MacGowan, dramatic critic of the New York Globe and former director of Goldwyn's scenario department! Senator James J. Walker, majority leader of the New York Senate, Rex Ingram, Reginald Warden and the Strand Pinner Earle.

Joseph Unger was last week elected president of the F. L. M. Chub, succeeding Sam Zierler, who resigned. Unger, who is Vice President of the New York branch of the association, is the first person elected in that position in the history of the Chub. The new President is enthusiastic about the coming of the second national convention of the Chub to New York, and has already made arrangements for a program that will be attended by many of the Chub's leading members.

S. L. Rothafel, distributor of the New York City branch of the American Mutoscope and Biograph Company, has been named as the new president of the company. He succeeds Mr. M. W. Reichenbach, who has resigned from the position.

Rothafel has been with the company for many years and is well known in the industry. He is a prominent member of the New York City branch of the American Mutoscope and Biograph Company and has been an active participant in the affairs of the company since his appointment as President.

Harmon Weight

Harmon Weight

HARMON WEIGHT, the young director who wielded the megaphone for Distinctive Pictures Corporation in the making of "The Man Who Played God," with George Arliss as star, comando of the directorial field by a route that is as interesting as it is circuitous. Like many other directors, he served a long term of the legitimate stage. But before he arrived on the stage, Mr. Weight was a member of no less a romantic organization than a circus troupe.

This was in his extreme youth. He was a trapeze artist, cutting dices from the high top of the canvas roof of Walter L. Main's show to the depths of the saw dust ring far below, and all that sort of thing.

Harmon Weight left the circus to join a theatrical company, and before he was twenty-two he had his own repertoire company in the West. Besides managing directing, acting anything from the smallest role to the leading role, Weight also took a hand at any of the various jobs o property man, electrician, etc. A long time on the stage, Weight took the Southern Pacific to Los Angeles. He c. job there—a small job. But he was determined to learn the motion picture business from the production angle. He became assistant to a number of important directors.

Mr. Weight's original association with Mr. Arliss was as assistant to Director Henry Kolker, who made "Dissolved." Mr. Kolker went to Rome, and Mr. Weight was given the second Distinctive production starring Mr. Arliss, "The Ruin Passion," to direct. The great success of this picture resulted in the offer from Distinctive Pictures to make their latest picture, "The Man Who Played God." This picture is the first one to be exploited by the Better Pictures Association of the World as their initial offering. It is adapted from the play, "The Silent Voice" which Jules Eckert Goodman dramatized from the Gouverneur M. story, "The Man Who Played God" which ran in the Cosmopolitan Magazine. Mr. Weight is certainly to be congratulated on the instantaneous success of this production, and we shall await his achievement with keen pleasurable anticipation. J. S. S.
Arbitration Body Disbands; League Charges Overt Act

Agreement Between New York City Exhibitors and Exchanges Brought to Abrupt End After Being in Existence More Than a Year

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, January 30.—After an existence of more than a year, during which time more than 4,000 disagreements between exhibitors and distributors have been amicably settled, the joint board of arbitration of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce and the F. I. L. M. Club of New York has ceased operation.

The end to what was generally considered the most forward step in the relations between distributor and exhibitor came last Wednesday, when Secretary S. A. Moross of the T. O. C. C. walked into a session of the arbitration board and dramatically brought the agreement between the two bodies to a conclusion by instructing the T. O. C. C. members to withdraw.

End Comes Abruptly. Rules Were Being Revised

The end came abruptly and unexpectedly. For some time past, a joint committee of the two bodies has been at work on a revision of the rules under which the arbitration proceedings were conducted. It was generally believed that these rules could be revised to mutual satisfaction.

At last Tuesday’s session of the T. O. C. C. the charge was made that some of the exchanges whose managers are members of the F. I. L. M. Club, were attaching contracts which, in the event of a dispute, permitted the exchanges to name a board of arbitration. At these risks I Emerson was made as to the personnel of the board nor was there a provision that the exhibitor organization should have representation on it. This allied raised the question which in turn was termed an overt act by the exhibitors.

Resolutions ending the negotiations with the F. I. L. M. Club were adopted and Secretary Moross was delegated to notify the exchange organization and to withdraw the exhibitors from the arbitration board meetings. Deliverers Exhibitors’ Message

The following day, while the arbitration board was convening for its weekly sessions, Mr. Moross made his appearance.

N. Y. Exhibitors May Hold Meet at Albany

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 30.—There is talk here today that the coming convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State may be held in the city. Last year’s gathering was held here.

At that time the date and place of this year’s convention was left undecided. Members of the Albany Theatrical Managers Association are none too kindly inclined to the prospect of sending another gathering here, saying that some other city in the State should share the burden of work and expense which attaches itself to a convention of this sort.

Hughes Has Hard Luck In Present Production

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 30.—A producer’s life is not just one long smooth row. Rupert Hughes, for instance is having his share of it, as is evidenced by his “Souls for Sale” for Goldwyn here.

Frank Mayo who has the male lead is suffering from Kleig eyes. Mae Busch is confined to her home recovering from bruises sustained when she was struck by an automobile while crossing Hollywood boulevard. And on top of this Carmelite Geraghy was injured while practicing balet steps for a cabaret scene.

Second National Adds Four New Branches to Its Distribution Units

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Work of reorganizing the distribution system of Second National Pictures is being rapidly completed. Last week the company established four new exchanges. They are Strand Film Service, New Jersey and K. streets, Washington, D. C.; Standard Film Exchange, 1050 Forbes street, Pittsburgh; Greenwald-Griffith Film Exchange, East 21st & Payne avenue, Cleveland, and Hartill Pictures, Inc., 732 S. Wabash avenue, Chicago.

Dale Hanshaw, field representative of the company, is in charge of the work and is visiting important exhibition centers.

At present Second National is publishing seven feature productions and two short subjects.

Made Canadian Manager

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Louis Bache, manager of First National’s branch in Washington has been made district manager for the company in Canada by Floyd Brockell, manager of distribution. Walter E. Lank, Cleveland manager succeeds Mr. Bache in Washington while G. W. Erdman, assistant manager, has been promoted to Cleveland.

Leaves for Havana

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Accompanied by Chester E. Sawyer of Caribbean Film Company, Paramount distributors, E. E. Shauer, director of the foreign department of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has left for a business trip to Havana to be gone about two weeks.

Fine Arts Studio Is Damaged by Flames; Film Loss $150,000

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 30.—Entailing a loss of over $100,000 in uncompleted films and damaging the laboratory and other structures on the grounds to the extent of $50,000, fire last week swept through the Fine Arts Studio, one of the oldest and most historic studios in Hollywood, endangering the lives of three firemen who were nearly caught in the flames.

The explosion of an electric heater used to dry films in the laboratory is believed by police firemen to have caused the blaze, which was extinguished after a ribbon of flames swept by several hours by six Los Angeles fire companies.

The laboratory building was destroyed in its entirety together with a large amount of equipment. Of the $130,000 in developed film destroyed a large amount was represented in the production, “Tea, With A Kick,” being filmed by Halperin Productions Co. According to John Fickleman, secretary and treasurer of the holding company, the plant will be rebuilt.

Moreno Gets Five-Year Contract With F. P. L.

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 30.—Antonio Moreno is the latest actor to affix his signature to a long term contract with Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Jesse L. Lasky has announced that Mr. Moreno has been engaged for five years to play leading roles in Paramount pictures.

His first picture under the new contract will be “The Exciters,” in which he will co-star with Bebe Daniels under direction of Richard Oransky in the East.
Exchanges-Salesmen Talk Better Methods
St. Louis Men Would Improve Sales Practices—Form Temporary Society

ST. LOUIS, MO., Jan. 30—At a meeting of exchange managers and salesmen at the St. Louis Film Board of Trade headquarters here last Saturday definite steps toward better selling methods in the St. Louis territory and a general up-lifting of the industry in this district was taken. The affair was in the nature of a luncheon given by the exchange heads for the men in that field, with C. D. Hill, Hodkinson manager, and Joseph Desberger of American Releasing, in charge of arrangements.

Mast Honor Promises
The trend of all addresses made was that pictures should be sold in the St. Louis trade territory strictly on their merits; that a salesman should not boost his own product by knocking some other exchange's product, and that above everything else he should not make any promise to an exhibitor that he did not intend to keep or was not in a position to fulfill. The salesmen were advised that immediately on reporting to the exchange office they should advise the management of the conditions under which films had been sold so that any promises they may have made the exhibitor could be taken care of.

Following the luncheon the salesmen held a meeting of their own and perfected a temporary organization. Tom McKeen of F. B. O. was named temporary chairman, and Lester Bona of First National, temporary secretary.

Wanda Hawley to Star
In European Pictures

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 30—Wanda Hawley will leave for Europe where she is to be featured in a picture produced by Gaumont of London and Paris, to be directed by Tom Terris.

J. Stewart Wilkinson will accompany her as business manager.

MONEY MAKING IDEAS Which Have Been Used Successfully by Exhibitors to Build

By W. M. WARD

(Starlight Theatre, Corning, Ark.)

For the small town exhibitor with a weekly newspaper, the following scheme works pretty good, especially in starting a serial in bad weather:

A week before showing, get enough merchants to go in and buy next week's tickets and let them give them out free. Run a page ad with each merchant's insert. This has proved a drawing card on several serials for us.

I have tried to economize on my electric bill in winter by cutting out some of the lights, but I also find a drop at the box office. A little room with plenty of lights, used wisely, is a good drawing card the year around.

By S. M. SOUTHWORTH

(American Theatre, Canon, N. Y.)

Most companies ship the pictures two days ahead. Occasionally, when the morrow's feature is in the day before, I screen the first reel. If the first half of the first reel is exceptionally interesting, run it for a trailer until the action and story get the customers, then cut off and run a slide saying "To be shown tomorrow." I nearly doubled my receipts by doing this on one occasion.

By WILLIAM McNAMAR

In a small town, avoid over exploitation.

Realize that the demand for your commodity (motion pictures) is a definite quantity and varies only as it is affected by outside influence, such as weather, financial conditions and other attributes, etc. It is presumed, of course, that you present a standard line of pictures that are satisfactory to the class of people you cater to.

The tentative plans of the salesmen organization call for the drafting of a rigid set of rules, setting forth the ethics of the profession. "Sell your own pictures and don't unseat the other fellow's." will be their motto. They will appoint a grievance committee which will hear complaints against members violating the rules of the organization.

Victor Seastrom Is Engaged by Goldwyn Prominent Swedish Director Brought Here by Godsol

NEW YORK, Jan. 30—Victor Seastrom, Swedish director, regarded by many as one of the greatest directors in the industry has arrived in New York and is preparing to start for the Goldwyn studios on the West Coast where he will become responsible for thebig pictures for the company. Negotiations by President F. J. Godsol which were recently completed brought the Swedish producer here and it is the intention of Goldwyn to offer him every opportunity for fulfilling his ideals.

Made Swedish Dramas

During the past ten years Mr. Seastrom has won fame as the director of Swedish Biograph dramas. Among his productions are "Jerusalem," "Eyrine of the Hills," "The Secrets of the Monastery," "The Stroke of Midnight," and others. Although the director's prominence has been closely associated in his own country, with strong dramas, beautifully photographed, he has had striking success in his own land with comedies. It has been said of him that he is an artist who has the faculty of getting life's own tempo into pictures.

Visited America in 1905.
In addition to being a director Mr. Seastrom has also gained prominence as an actor and stage director. He made a previous visit to America in 1905.

Hungry Hearts

NEW YORK—Through arrangements made by Edward Carrier, Goldwynner at Cleveland, and Eddie Bonns, manager of exploitation for Goldwyn, 84 American newspapers will carry a double truck Sunday magazine feature on "Hungry Hearts."

Minnie

BURLINGTON, Ia.—"New Traffic Rules" was the wording on an envelope motorists found tied to their parked cars and "Beware of the extra heavy traffic around the Palace theatre while 'Minnie' is there" was the message they read within. Girls named Minnie were admitted free by L. F. Blank, manager, and 10,000 paper napkins bearing in red ink a scribbled "free note" signed Minnie were distributed to restaurants.

Shadows

WOONSOCKET, R. I.—A dozen of Woonsocket's fairest young women participated in the shadow contest arranged by Phil Kahn, of American Feature Film company, for the Al Lichtman feature, "Shadows," at the Park theatre. Each posed variants back of a back-lighted sheet hung at the footlights, the mayor acting as judge in selecting the prettiest silhouette.

NEW YORK—A phonograph record bearing a message from W. E. Shallenberger to buyers of "None So Blind," Arrowplay Deluxe, is being distributed by Arrow Film Corporation.

Broadway Rose

ST. PAUL—In connection with the New Astor engagement or "Broadway Rose" original designs for a new dancing costume for Mae Murray were solicited by the Daily News.

Oliver Twist

STREATOR, I11.—Streator mothers were invited by the Free Press to contribute suggestions to Jackie Coogan's mother regarding his proper upbringing. The Majestic theatre played "Oliver Twist."

Omar the Tentmaker

NEW YORK.—"Lucky salt from Egypt," in a little red bag tied to a little red tag, focused comment on the Strand theatre run of "Omar the Tentmaker." Fifty thousand tags were distributed.

Only a Shopgirl

NEWARK, N. J.—The Shopgirls League of Newark is the name of an organization formed by shopgirls of this city under the suggestion of William Kraft, Apollo Exchange, New York, handling "Only a Shopgirl," C. B. C. feature. The picture was shown at the Strand theatre.

Contributors of Theatre Letters to this department have built up and are weekly strengthening the box office with good pictures and against ill fortune from any source. Consider the list of showmen represented in this issue:

A. H. DODGE, Palace theatre, Capac, Mich.
C. H. POWERS, Strand theatre, Dunsmuir, Cal.
J. E. STOCKER, Myrtle theatre, Detroit, Mich.
H. A. ALBRIGHT, Rialto theatre, Bremerton, Wash.
FRED PAULICK, Paulick theatre, Muscoda, Wis.
C. R. SULLIVAN, Fair theatre, Amarillo, Tex.
A. R. BENDER, Olympic theatre, Cleveland, Okla.
P. R. MATSON, Crystal theatre, Flandreau, S. D.
G. A. REA, Colonial theatre, Washington C. H., O.
THOMAS S. DALEY, Casino theatre, Halifax, N. Y.

The communications of these showmen are laden with constructive ideas, tried in theatre practice and found practical, contributed for the welfare of showmen generally. In "Theatre Letters" from week to week are presented the findings of practical showmen diligently endeavoring to perfect the science of showmanship administration.

Each individual letter contains information that may be turned into money by other showmen. Co-operation is the unwritten watchword of the contributing circle and exchange of observations and experiences is the common aim.

Collectively, the Theatre Letters of a year constitute a practically infallible guide to theatre administration.

Members of the circle, and the contributors who receive through this exhibitor conducted service sufficient exploitation, presentation and managerial data to operate a theatre to a profit indefinitely. The occasional local depression, as well as the general let-down that comes with the warm weather, has little terror for the showman with a multitude of money making stunts and devices at his disposal.

A Better Theatre Platform

8. A Single Standard

The theatre prospers on a single standard—good pictures for everybody, always.

Where this rule is most rigidly enforced biggest crowds are in evidence, business is most substantial, the screen attains its present utmost.

Where picture quality varies, where treatment of patronage is differentiated in catering to a designated element, where let-down in morale is permitted for any reason, screen, box office and administration pays.

Good pictures for everybody, always, is a tenable standard. At times it costs more; it is always worth more; it always pays more.

In time of prosperity it yields maximum returns. In time of adversity it operates as box office insurance, reducing damage to a minimum.

It eliminates inferior product and supplies incentive for picture improvement, elevating the screen by the one sound means—regulation of supply and demand.

Big business successes in any line may be traced to source in an identical policy. The theatre, capable of yielding the biggest business successes, can observe no more reliable rule.

HATS, SHOES, SILKS, BISCUITS, CHOCOLATES, DOLLS, sheet music, phonograph records, cards and books were used in cooperative exploitation of the Mack Sennett United Artists production, "Suzanna," in its premiere showing at the Mission theatre, Los Angeles. More than sixty business houses took part in the campaign. The engagement stands as additional proof of the merit that lies in pre-publication cooperative exploitation arrangements. All the articles used were made available in this manner. The policy of advance exploitation preparation in cooperation with national manufacturers has borne up under test by several leading companies. A good beginning has been made in a work which should become in time a fixed practice.

FIRST NATIONAL MONTH was observed by the Liberty theatre, Yakima, Wash., in impressive manner. The above photographs show the theatre's scare banners, its foyer and a panel in close-up. BUSINESS MEN’S Quintette Adds To Film Public

In his "Business Men's Quintette," described in his letter, A. H. Dodge finds a means of increasing patronage during a temporary depression and simultaneously adding perceptibility to his theatre public by bringing new patrons to his theatre.

Either end justifies the means. Read his explanation.

THEATRE EDITOR:
Exhibitors Herald
Dear Sir:
I have been enjoying the Theatre Letters and "What the Picture Did For Me" in the Herald, I am enclosing a bill on a stunt that I am working. It pays out fine. I thought maybe some other exhibitors might profit by it, as business is kind of dull after the holidays. I call it the Business Men's Quintette.

Go to your merchants and tell them you will give them theatre tickets good to any regular show, they to pay 25 cents each or whatever the price is and allow only one merchant in any one kind of business. Now you have started something, as they will fight to get the tickets.

They give one away free with each $2 purchase of goods. By doing this stunt you get new patrons in your theatre and create new interest.

Have a contract made out and signed by each merchant that they are to purchase so many tickets each week. Hoping this will help some other Brother Exhibitor.

A. H. DODGE,
Palace Theatre, Capac, Mich.

DEAR MR. DODGE:
As described in your letter and borne out by the bill, your promotion seems eminently sound. The new patron interest angle is especially good, we think. Thanks for permitting us to convey it to other showmen. Undoubtedly it will be adopted by many.—W. R. W.

Exploits Most Costly Picture With “Herald”

Use of matter quoted from the “Herald” in theatre advertising has been demonstrated a device of utmost dependability.

C. H. Powers, a newcomer to the circle of Theatre Letter writers, describes this week’s method of exploiting the most costly attraction he has used in this manner:

His letter follows:

THEATRE EDITOR: Exhibitors Herald.

Dear Sir:

We recently played “Smilin’ Through” and as we paid such a heavy rental we decided to go after it stronger than anything we have heretofore played. We are sending you the full page ad used in our local paper. Would like you to criticize any part or all of it so we will know better how next time.

We also bought 500 of the post cards (one enclosed) and mailed them. Used 300 heralds, 200 cutouts for telephone mouth-places, and believe me, we did the largest house since we took over this theatre, April 1st, 1922.

Of course the regular lobby display of 11 photos, 1-sheets, 6-sheets, and a 24-sheet was used.

C. H. POWERS,
Strand Theatre, Dunsmuir, Cal.

DEAR MR. POWERS:

Come see The Theatre.

Your local ad bears out our impression of your showmanship formed through reading your reports to “What the Picture Did For Me.” Your treatment of the expensive attraction was ideal just what we would have expected.

Our one suggestion is that you might have enclosed your page ad with additional strength had you denoted the source of the reports quoted. This procedure is followed by Balonas & Kate and other leading theatre advertisers in quoting from this paper and lends to their advertisements the authority of a national publication. You see the point.

The use of the reports, of course, is splendid judgment, as countless tests by exhibitors have demonstrated.

Let us hear from you again.—W. R. W.

Stocker Finds Public Contact Vital Element

Public contact is revealed as a vital element in theatre success in the letter and cards contributed this week by J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit.

From a full knowledge of his clientele Mr. Stocker draws guidance in his advertising plans.

Read his letter.

THEATRE EDITOR: Exhibitors Herald.

Dear Sir:

The enclosed cards are partly self-explanatory.

I secured “The Four Seasons” a day ahead of regular showing to show to teachers. After viewing it the teachers were so enthusiastic about it that they announced it to their pupils the following day.

I cannot praise “The Four Seasons” too highly. This picture you ought to not to class with short subjects. It is in four reels and in my opinion ought to be used as a full length feature with another picture. I used another five reels with it.

Brother Exhibitors, go the limit with it as it is absolutely in a class by itself. Busi-

TO OUR PATRONS:
We have undoubtedly secured the greatest picture of 1922, in “Smilin’ Through,” with Norma Talmadge; it is so clean, wholesome and sweet. It is sure is the screens best treat.

We ask you to read what others have to say in regard to the production, which is true facts. You may write any of these theatres a personal letter at the address given.

We are trying to put this picture before our theatre in order to be able to play more of this standard. It cost a small fortune to secure this picture, and we are compelled to raise our admission prices as follows: Gallery, 35c; Lower Floor, 40c; Loge, 50c; Wicker Loges, 50c. The picture has played most all the theatres at 25c and 50c and all who have seen it say that it is worth every cent of the price charged.

FIRST UNIT in Thomas S. Daley's campaign for Universal's "The Flirt."

Second UNIT in "The Flirt" campaign, a four-column space.

Third UNIT, in two columns, advancing interest.

Dear Mr. Sennett:

We have just finished an engagement on Thomas Luee's "The Hottentot." Taken by points from every angle, title, story, stars, act, action, this is the best picture the writer has looked at in years and I want to make a prediction right now—"If The Hottentot' does not head the list of good pictures of 1923 it will fall short much.

I would like to own a print of "The Hottentot" and I want to use it out and run it every week, just to myself, for the next 52 weeks, and at the end of the fifty-second week I'll bet I would still get a kick.

We have just screened Mack Sennett's 2 reel comedy, "Home Made Movies," in which Sennett attempts to burlesque moviemakers by showing all the silly stuff.

The public knows much now about actors, actresses and studios without attempting to put them up to how they are made. If it were not for a bear chasing some fish in a tank in "Home Made Movies" there would not be a single laugh.

If anybody directed this comedy you can't tell it by looking at it. The bear didn't need much directing, and maybe that's responsible for a few laughs from the bear. Let's leave all the actors and studios out of the films used in this manner.

C. R. Sullivan,
Fair theatre, Amarillo, Tex.

DEAR MR. SULLIVAN:

We saw "The Hottentot" at the Chicago theatre recently and the 4,000 who saw it with us got about the same sort of kick that you and we did; so there seems to be no question about the picture's theatre fitness. We haven't seen "Home Made Movies," but Receipts Show "Pal Night" a Reliable Stunt

Box office receipts constitute the real test of a stunt. "Pal Night," reported by A. R. Bender, stood up under that test.

Mr. Bender gives details in his first Theatre Letter.

THEATRE EDITOR, EXHIBITORS HERALD.

Dear Sir:

Men, listen. And women too. If you do not think price counts try a "Pal Night." I started the new series of "The Leather Pushers" off with one. I am enclosing a throwaway which will explain how I worked it.

The results were that I showed to about 10 per cent more gross business with these prices than regular, for that night I had a double-header basket ball game at the high school for opposition. Try it. The idea is not original with me, so I give the originator due credit, but I do not know his name.

A. R. BENDER,
Olympic Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio.

DEAR MR. BENDER:

Neither do we know the name of the originator, but credit for reporting the stunt in order that other exhibitors may use it certainly is due to you. The result you note is ample proof of its adequacy.

Glad to have you a member of the circle. Write again soon.—W. R. W.

Strong Herald Boosts Comedy As Attraction

A strong bit of exploitation for a strong production generally results in an attraction of satisfying proportions. P. R. Matson, Crystal theatre, Flandreau, S. D., reports use of such a bit, a herald, for a comedy that produced "best business" yesterday.

THEATRE EDITOR, EXHIBITORS HERALD.

Dear Sir:

We are enclosing a sample of the herald we used with the showing of the Lloyd comedy, "A Sailor Made Man," and had splendid results. Our slide and newspaper advertising also featured the $1.00 reward. You will note the heading is in red and the figure $1 is so spaced as to look at first sight as $100.

We have shown nearly all of the Lloyd comedies but have never been able to do much more than an average business with them. Did the best business on "A Sailor Made Man" of any picture we have shown in months and believe the advertising is what did most of it.

Three people called for the reward. I think this line of advertising could be used as successfully in connection with the showing of "Grandma's Boy."

P. R. MATSON,
Crystal theatre, Flandreau, S. D.

DEAR MR. MATSON:

It is indeed unfortunate that the herald concerned in your first Theatre Letter should have failed to reach us, limiting but certainly not nullifying the adaptability of your stunt. Better luck next time, and by all means let there be a next time.—W. R. W.

What's Your Favorite Melody?

I don't think anyone has a favorite melody—whether it be a song, a number or grand opera. Haven't you ever noticed that at times when you feel like singing or whistling that the first tune that pops into your head is that "old favorite"? Perhaps you'd like to hear this melody played on the Rialto organ. In other words: Maybe you'd like to "show the ol' tune a good time." The effect might be surprising. At any rate, we'll wager it will be mighty pleasing! The Rialto management and Organist William Rosler have arranged a plan whereby these favorite melodies will play a prominent part on the Wednesday and Thursday night programs. On the opposite side of this card is a simple form. Fill it out and return to any house attached to theatre. Your request will receive prompt attention and, furthermore, YOU WILL BE NOTIFIED WHEN YOUR FAVORITE WILL BE PLAYED. Everybody is invited to join in the fun. MELODY NIGHT comes every WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY at the RIALTO THEATRE.

HENRY, constant aid to George Rea decorated for Paramount's "Ebb Tide."

Neighbours Use Ballyhoo Made "Service Car"

George Rea's "Henry," as he calls it, is a double ballyhoo. It advertises Colonial attractions and serves the neighbours as a service car. There's a typical Rea idea in that.

Incidentally, it is our privilege to present this week a picture of the man who put Washington Court House, Ohio, on the theatre map of the United States in red.

Gentlemen: Mr. George Rea.

THEATRE EDITOR: EXHIBITORS HERALD.

Dear Sir:

Here's a picture of: "The Colonial. Selected Photoplays, Washington, C. H. O., Advance Car No. 2." I could not get along without this Henry. It's always on the street and usually carries two and three cutouts, three ones and three window cards.

It never kicks so long as it's working a big picture. On a special it will carry two six-sheets.

All the neighbours are welcome to use this Henry to run errands and so on. The only rule is that they do not molest any of the signs.

The first day of "Ebb Tide" Henry was lit up like a sore thumb. It carried a banner: "Just Married, Ila Lee and James Kirkwood in Ebb Tide. Now Playing. The Colonial," with all the 'em cans and old shoes tied on streamers.

Now just a word for "Ebb Tide." With a great many, I'm sure, the music "Ebb Tide" is one of the real big pictures from every angle of the year.

GEORGE REA.

Colonial Theatre, Washington C. H. O.

YOu, too, have visited this theatre.

The front rows are carpeted with peanut husks. The drapes carry a dull gray coat of dust. Three organ stops are defunct.

The ticket man's uniform needs pressing. The ticket chopper is tarnished. The furnace pounds.

It is chilly within until a crowd has gathered, when it becomes damp. The projector cuts the first reel short and leaves a white gap between two and three. You've seen the comedy half a dozen times. There is no news.

Two of six announcement slides are cracked; all three pictures are dull red blacks against black. The audience is immobile.

The picture is good, but you don't believe in it.

You don't like the theatre. Nobody does.

Next day it closes.

Yet the visit is worth while—giving you a five-foot library on "What Not To Do to Make the Theatre Pay."

There is some good in everything.

Moore Publicity Sells "Shadows"

Distinctive publicity methods practiced by Foster Moore, special representative of A. I. Lichtman Corporation, has sold "Shadows" to the Chicago public in an uniquely thorough manner. Opening with a two-weeks run in Barbee's Loop theatre and moving thence to the Castle, on the "world's busiest corner" and the dominant independent theatre chains throughout the city, the picture is well along its way to a Chicago record.

Cleanliness, fairness and honesty in dealings with the press and the populace achieved these results. Not all who visit Chicago to introduce pictures use like tactics. Certainly few attain like success.

Mr. Moore's performance endows the city with a valuable hit of exploitation history that should be reflected in future procedure.

On Short Subjects

The short subject proposition is less complex than popularly supposed. It is in reality a merit proposition.

The best short subjects cost more, mainly because they are worth it. In this they parallel feature length attractions.

Unlike the latter, however, they are sold to the theatre public in job lots. Herein lies the key to the whole matter. When short subjects are not bought but also sold by the exhibitor on a merit basis there will be public appreciation of values as there now is in regard to the long production. The theatre will be markedly enriched through the change.

Australian Exploitation of Fox Short Subject Sets High Standard for World Showmen

Expositions accorded "The Eskimo," Fox comedy featuring Clyde Cook, by the Hoy theatre, Sydney, Australia, gives showmen of the world a high standard to equal in the treatment of short subjects.

Its equal in effort involved and appreciation of comedy values is seldom seen in this country.

The Hoy lobby display was of mechanical construction. While full details are not available, the photograph indicates that the cutout Eskimo probably moved his baton rhythmically and in time with oscillations of the cutout heads of man and seals. Certainly this arrangement is practicable and in line with known Australian methods.

Just what the result of direct duplication in an American lobby might be is somewhat problematical, but the application of the underlying principle, capitalisation of short subject program content in program exploitation is eminently commendable.

Humor is no more in demand in Australia than in the United States. "The Eskimo" is worth no more in Sydney than in any American city. Yet a Sydney theatre spends as much money in exploiting "The Eskimo" as the majority of American exhibitors spend in exploiting a feature and short subject combined.

On the face of the matter it would seem that Australian showmen are in advance of American exhibitors in short subject exploitation. We do not believe that is actually the case, but we do believe that Australian enterprise can be adopted by American showmen to a profit.

made clear to them in the impersonal and authoritative word of the cash drawer.

Mountie department directs attention to the Short Subject division of "What the Picture Did For Me" in this, a representative issue, and suggests participation in the good work there being done.

Reports Prove Short Subject Screen Values

Exhibitors reporting on short subjects o"What the Picture Did For Me" prove definitely the screen values of the various product offered on the market. Individually and collectively the various brands of product are played by the acid test of the box office and a scale of values of esthetic worth to exhibitor, producer and performer is created. The Box Office Record presents the completed cable semi-annually in compact and permanent form.

No new force for the advancement of the short subject could be contrived. Here the exhibitor is given access to a utterly dependable source of information as to the satisfying power of every short subject product. Here the producer is told what "is doing" and what is not, what lines to follow in making new product and what lines to abandon.

Here short subject actors and directors learn their virtues and their faults, their successes and their failures are

Educational to Supply Ad Mats

Free service of mats for publicity and advertising purposes is to be inaugurated by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., beginning with its February product.

Hereafter all publicity and advertising layouts prepared for use in connection with its short subjects will be offered by Educational without charge to collectors booking these subjects. This applies to all two-reel comedy and special issues.

Press sheets are issued for use of exhibitors on all Hamilton, Christie, and Mermaid Comedies published through Educational Exchanges beginning with "Extra! Extra!" in the Hamilton comedy series; "Second Childhood" in the Christie group; and "Pest of the Storm Country" in the Mermaid series. Each layout and advertising pictures or sketches illustrated in these press sheets can be had at the Educational branch exchanges for the asking.

"THE CHRISTIAN" Hall Caine's famous novel has been made into an intensely interesting film for Goldwyn. Maurice Tourneur has made a superb production of this dramatic story and it is undoubtedly the crowning achievement of this director's career. It was made on the original locations and every detail, photography, acting and sets are in keeping with the story.

"DOWN TO THE SEA IN SHIPS" (Hodkinson) is a remarkably interesting picture in many ways. It gives an insight into the whaling industry that is at once educational and exciting, and a pretty love story is woven into the story that holds your attention all the way through. Some of the most interesting and thrilling scenes depict the catching and handling of immense fish of the deep amid the hard life led by these men before the days of motor boats and steam craft.

"THE FIRST DEGREE" (Universal) an adapted Saturday Evening Post story by George Pattullo, and one which gives Frank Mayo excellent opportunity to display his histrionic ability. It was directed by Edward Sedgwick who has managed to keep the interest centered on the star and at no time does it lag.

"THE PILGRIM" (First National) with Charles Chaplin may not prove a riot, but it's awfully good fun. Every scene is nicely timed and there are several excruciatingly funny bits that are worth anybody's time and money. It is in four reels.

"DARK SECRETS" (Paramount) presents Dorothy Dalton badly handicapped by an automatic story. She spends most of her time in a wheel chair, the remainder in trying to offset that disadvantage. Robert Ellis is very unreal as the hero. Jose Reuben is a mail order Egyptian villain. The story is by Edmund Goulding, of whom better things are expected, and Victor Fleming directed.

"HUNTING BIG GAME IN AFRICA" (Roth) is a tremendously interesting and instructive picture of wild animal life in Africa. The real mission of the camera is here brought to the fore—the educational value as against pure entertainment. It represents painstaking care and patience on the part of H. A. Snow and his son Sidney Snow who photographed the film.

"WHAT A WIFE LEARNED" (First National) is a delightful story by Bradley King, and a thoroughly convincing and well acted screen play. Out of ordinary material—the story of a wife who seeks a career as a writer and drifts away from her husband—director John Griffith Wray has made an intensely interesting and amusing picture.

"WHILE PARIS SLEEPS" (Hodkinson) is a commonplace story with several sordid incidents that will repay many. It was directed by Maurice Tourneur and is mechanically efficient in this respect. Lon Chaney and a competent cast appear in it and it has the correct Parisian atmosphere.

"FOOTLIGHT RANGER" (Fox) is a conventional tale of a cowboy who becomes infatuated with a little actress and follows her to the city where he saves her from the clutches of a designing wealthy man. Not the type of play suited to Charles Jones and because of the roadhouse incident not particularly wholesome.

"THORNS AND ORANGE BLOSSOMS" (Lichtman) presented with a special cast, including Estelle Taylor, Kenneth Harlan and Ethel Roberts is an adapted Berth M. Clay story, popular in the early 90's. As present-day material it holds little interest for picture fans, because it is too conventional and lacking in suspense.

"THE SCARLET CAR" (Universal) has little to do with automobiles, but a great deal to do with entertainment. It offers Herbert Rawlinson a chance to do the things he and he has ample assistance from his support. Richard Harding Davis wrote the story, which ought to be recommended for anybody. It is all that the author's name promises. Stuart Paton directed well. The picture is decidedly worth seeing, not big, but good.

Three important scenes from the Goldwyn production "The Christian" with Richard Dix and Mae Busch in the leading role. The picture was directed by Maurice Tourneur from Sir Hall Caine's book, and scenes were taken on the Isle of Man.
A superb production, based upon the famous novel by Sir Hall Caine. Splendidly directed by Maurice Tourneur, in authentic locations. Looks like one of the big winners of the year. Length about seven reels.

THE CAST

John Storm .............. Richard Dix
Glory Quayle ........... Mae Busch
Brother Paul ............ Gareth Hughes
Polly Love .............. Phyllis Haver
Lord Robert Ure ......... Cyril Chadwick
Horatio Drake ........... Mahlon Hamilton
Ford Lempleigh .......... Joseph Dowling
Lord Storm ............ Claude Gillingwater
Parson Quayle .......... John Herdman

THIS is a picture of which the Goldwyn Company may well be proud.

The production, by Maurice Tourneur, based upon Hall Caine's well known novel, is eminently satisfactory from every angle, and the crowning achievement of this director's career to date. The cast, while not entirely of note, is quite up to the direction, photography, English locations and detail. Perhaps this is unfair, but the characters of this particular story are so vivid a whole, that their screen types must have a hard time living up to their realization. Richard Dix, it must be admitted, became more and more the maddening "John Storm" as the story progressed. In the later scenes, he was often stern and hollow-eyed to portray the tempestuous apostate.

Mae Busch portrays "Glory Quayle," here is something lacking—a fire and seduction that one expects from a viv "Glory" of the novel, and yet Miss Walsh appeared to play intelligently. Phyllis Haver as the unfortunate Polly Love was most appealing and convincing, and Gareth Hughes did his best as her intense brother. Cyril Chadwick as "Lord Robert Ure" emulated, of all the cast, nearest to type, while Mahlon Hamilton is good as Brother Paul.

The London street scenes, especially those showing the mob the night the boy is expected to come to an end, are tremendously good. It is a pleasure to see a picture of English life with the scene aced in authentic locations. The atmosphere throughout is excellent. The story itself is well known to need repeating in full. The theme, that of the man of God trying to live the life Christ lived in this earth, and the reception accorded his sacrifice, is not new, but the treatment, with the World and its pleasures supplied by Glory Quayle, and the resulting clash, makes never-ending material.

Dix is particularly good in the sequence owing him, after having taken monastic vows, struggling vainly against his worldly love for a woman, and his subsequent renunciation of those vows that he may be near her. There is something so drastically fine in this character of "John storm" that it jars when, in his zealous fury, he comes perilously close to being merely a selfish and self-deluding natic, as when he goes to her rooms to "kill her body to save her soul." Glory, however, knows him better than he knows himself, and convinces him that love is not all of the flesh, that real love is of the spirit as well.

From the wealth of excellent material certain portions stand forth. The scene where "Polly Love" is hailed before the righteouse members of the Board of Governors of the church and publicly questioned and humiliated, while the man responsible for her shame, Lord Robert Ure, one of the honored members of this same board, sits silent. The scene in the Mission when, out of revenge because John Storm has caused his wife, unknowingly, to adopt his own child. Polly's baby, Lord Ure comes to him to tell him that he has bought the building over his head, and intends to convert it into a music hall; the dashes of the Derby, with Royalty and Costerland attending; the contrasting bits which illustrate Storm's reason for renouncing the world, all are but a few of the strong sequences that come to mind.

All in all, a most creditable production of a great novel.—J. S. S.

SPECIAL CAST IN

THE CHRISTIAN

(GOLDWYN)

CHARLES CHAPLIN IN

THE PILGRIM

(FIRST NATIONAL)

A rib-tickler that sets a fast pace for two and a half reels and then slows up a bit. The funny feet, the trick moustache and the baggy pants are in it and that's all some folks care about. Amusing throughout and exquisitely funny in several scenes. Written and directed by Charles Chaplin.

Four reels.

"The Pilgrim" is worth the price of admission for the derby incident alone. Anyone who doesn't get a laugh out of that and feel that his money has been well spent, isn't human or normal, that's all.

The trouble with Chaplin comedies seems to be they suffer in comparison with "The Kid" and "Shoulder Arms." Everyone says, "It's not as good as "The Kid." And perhaps Chaplin himself agrees with them but there's this to be said—Chaplin's poorest is so much better than a lot of other "bests" that some allowances must be made. His name in front of a theatre insure a good time within, and that's worth something. He is still our cleverest comedian.

The present picture depends for its fun upon the antics of an escaped convict, posing as a minister, and waited upon by an expectant public. He is met at the train by a committee of churchgoers and escorted to the Brown's home and there meets their pretty daughter, Callers arrive, and a mischievous little boy is placed in his arms by a doting mother. The youngster gives the minister a bad fifteen minutes by playfully slapping his face and finally gets mixed up in fly-paper, which is transferred to his papa's face and thence to the back of his mother's dress. The minister helps daughter with the dinner, the kid puts papa's hat over the blank mange and Chaplin decorates it with whipped cream and cherries. The dinner scene following is the high spot of the picture where the minister attempts to cut the pudding while papa searches everywhere for his derby. Another extremely funny bit is where Chaplin delivers a sermon on "David and Goliah," waits for the applause at its conclusion and exits bowing, then comes back for "curtain bows." There is a wild finish where a former cell mate arrives in town and attempts to steal the mortgage money from the Brown's and Chaplin's strenuous efforts to prevent him. He finally proves to the villagers that he is honest and wins the pretty daughter.

Edna Purvis appears in the role of the Brown girl; Sidney Chaplin is effective as the father of the obstreperous youngster. The others in the cast were well chosen for their respective roles. Most of the action takes place in the Brown home.
HUNTING BIG GAME IN AFRICA
(EUGENE H. ROTH)

Tremendously interesting and instructive pictures of wild animal life in Africa. Will prove a big box-office feature when released through regular channels after a period of road showing. Photographed by Sidney Snow. About ten reels.

Many of the "million dollar" fiction stories presented on the screen pale into insignificance when compared with this record of real life, obtained by the exercise of great physical discomfort, of unremitting watchfulness and patience on the part of father and son, H. A. Snow, the hunter, and Sidney Snow, photographer.

The real mission of the camera is forcibly brought to mind—the educational value as well as that of pure entertainment. No one can fail to be entertained and the great majority of people who see this picture will admit that their knowledge of natural history has been tremendously enlarged.

Two years were spent by these intrepid Snows in obtaining this record in the heart of Africa. In that country alone the expedition traveled 60,000 miles and ascended some feet of negative altitude. Over fifty distinct species of animal life are shown. It is hard to say which are the most interesting, but a herd of elephants in the shallow crater of an extinct volcano, including a close-up of a huge specimen with amazingly large ears, a group of giraffe pursued by a live tiger in which the hunter and cameraman traveled the African plains; thousands of penguins basking in the surf; views of hippos and rhinos; a regiment of baboons at their drinking place; a hyena worn out by the pursuit of the Ford, turning viciously on its adversary, are only a few of the exceedingly interesting bits that come to mind.

The hardships that the cameraman must undergo in the humid tropical heat, hidden in his blind for days to get a picture of the wary jungle beasts, the fact that all the developing of the negative had to be done at night, as the day time temperature was at times 125 degrees, enough to melt the emulsion on a film—all this makes these pictures of more than ordinary value. Every educational institution in the country, from the primary grades to the universities, could well utilize these unusual educational scenes.

LON Chaney IN WHILE PARIS SLEEPS
(HODKINSON)

This unoriginal and somewhat sordid tale has little appeal and its entertainment qualities are slight. A commonplace story which has had quite good production. Directed by Maurice Tourneur, from a story by "Pan." Five reels.

A Maurice Tourneur production but not one of his recent ones. It was made in the days before Lon Chaney had gained his reputation for superb character parts, and in "While Paris Sleeps" he is cast as an artist and given little opportunity to display his histrionic talents. Mildred Manning, Jack Gilburt, Harden Kirkland, F. Farrell McDonald and Jack MacDonald appear in effective support but the material calls for nothing in the way of first class acting.

There is a commonplace plot, that of a girl being forced to give up the son of a rich man, to prove to him her devotion and set up her father's whin. She tends to be in love with a sculptor, who bargains with an insane man to kill the girl. Santados, the artist, relent when he learns that the man is being tortured to death and they hasten to save her.

The scenes in the torture chamber are gruesome and there is considerable footage devoted to a trip through a waxworks.

DOROTHY DALTON IN
(PARAMOUNT)

Automatically properly endowed mystic narrative, more automatic than mystic. Just a picture. Dorothy Dalton in a wheel chair, Robert Ellis in British uniform obviously obeying a director, and exactly the incidents throughout that you expect after the first reel. Victor Fleming director. Story by Edmond Goulding. Six reels.

Dr. Lorenzo, the Austrian physician, who attained some newspaper mention on his recent visit to this country, is mentioned in a subtitle of this picture. One observer also mentioned Cope, hinting that his vogue might be capitalized in exploitation. The picture does not warrant such procedure.

It is a very dull story featuring, if anything, an Egyptian physician, portrayed by Jose Reuben in stereotyped fashion, who causes an American girl to be crippled in order that he may exact his own reward for curing her. The girl is played by Dorothy Dalton, who doesn't do so good a job. She is well in a wheel chair, and her fiancée, a British officer, is visualized disjointedly by Robert Ellis.

For six reels these and other colorless characters do just what the observer expects them to do, the end leaving all the pictured people happy save the deceased physician and the observer somewhat confused as to just what it is all about and why.

Miss Dalton and the Paramount trade mark seem out of place.

WILDERNESS TALES

During the past year the popular "Wilderness Tales" series made by Robert C. Bruce for educational distribution, proved to be classic at the short subject field. With the first three of the second series which are not ready for market, as the criterion, Mr. Bruce will greatly enhance the enviable fame he now has as a maker of wonder pictures.

The best of the first three of the new series—if it is possible to select a best from three almost perfect picture gems—is called "By Lantern Light," and is an

The story of a henpecked man of kindly heart, who befriends a stray dog, and on taking it home is ordered by his wife to take it away and lose it and not come home until he does.

He tries to lose the dog but can't. An he doesn't go home. The travels of the man and the mutt are utilized by Mr. Bruce for the showing of some of the most beautiful and wonderful scenic effects yet recorded on the screen. An the story of the man and the dog blended in with these scenes in such a way as to lend a sort of love story to both man and mutt.

Another of the "Wilderness Tales" called "By Lantern Light" is the story of a small boy lost among the rocks of a rugged Oregon sea coast. The night search for the youngsters permits of much photography of wonder beauty.

The third picture is "Moonblind," and is built about the adventures of two prospectors in the wild north land. The story is prolific in most entrancing photography.

In these "Wilderness Tales" Mr. Bruce and his able photographer John M. L.mond have set a high mark for other makers of scenic pictures, and the second series of these delightful pictures should prove an even greater attraction for exhibitors that did the first series.

MARY PICKFORD will produce "Faust" before "Dorothy Vernon Haddon Hall." Ernest Lubitsch will direct this picture, which, it is expected will represent the star's most ambitious undertaking. Filming of "Faust," in which "Pickford" portrays Margueri will defer production on "Dorothy Vernon" until summer.

DIRECTOR Elmer Clifton set out to make for the Whaling Film Corporation, of New Bedford, Mass., a film production different from anything before attempted. That he has succeeded in a manner more than satisfactory, there can be no question. "Down To The Sea In Ships" is a production that stands in a class by itself and one that, with proper exploitation, should set many a new box office record.

Taking as his theme a delightful love story of Quaker life in the whaling city, when New Bedford was the headquarters of that industry, Director Clifton has cleverly transformed it into a film epic. The photography is nothing short of remarkable and gives rise to wonder as to how much of it could be accomplished in so brief a time.

The big scene shows a terrific chase after a school of whales, the harpooning of a bull whale which wrecks a boatload of whalers in its death struggles. Just where the cameramen kept themselves while securing these remarkable scenes is fully as interesting a question as where and how the picture makers found the school of mammals upon which to practice their art. However, the production is evidence that the whale was there and that the camera caught the battle between the giant fish and the whalers. All through the picture the photography is so rendered as to make the scenes showing the capture of the whale, of a high order, and reflects great credit on Alex G. Penrod, Paul Allen, Maurice Kains and Albert Bouberra, whose work it is.

The story is built around the attempts of a couple of villains to steal the ship and daughter of Charles Morgan, head of a whaling fleet. Morgan is a stern old Quaker and pledges his daughter Patience not to marry a man who is not a Quaker or a whaleman.

Patience has a playmate, Thomas Allen Dexter, not of the Quaker faith, and is forbidden to play with him. The children separate and after growing up, renew their childhood friendship and fall in love. Dexter determines to go to sea, become a whaleman and thus remove the only ground upon which the girl's father objects to him.

Dexter is shanghaied on one of Morgan's vessels by the scheming mate, and then told by the mate that he kills the captain. Assures command, the crew mutinies, the whales are caught, and finally after a terrific storm the vessel returns. To save the life of Dexter to rescue Patience from being married to the second schemer who has remained ashore and warned himself into the good graces of the girl's father.—J. S. S.

SPECIAL CAST IN THORNS AND ORANGE BLOSSOMS (PREFERRED—LICHTMAN)

This adapted Bertha M. Clay story is conventional film material, lacking in suspense and conviction. Director Gasnier has done the best he could with a competent cast, lavish sets and a poor story.

Length, 6,970 feet.

This is a Preferred Pictures production, made from one of Bertha M. Clay's stories. The scenario was written by Hope Loring with many of the flowery sentences of the original Clay story used for vitamins. Estelle Taylor plays with spirit the leading role, that of an impetuous Spanish dancer, Rosita Mendez. Kenneth Harlan is the much signed against hero. Allen Randolph. Arthur Hull is Ramsey and Edith Roberts plays Violet Beaton with a blond wig. Carl Stockdale, John Cossar, and Evelyn Selbe complete the cast.

As drama of the paper back type it may satisfy in the smaller houses, but its various situations are so obvious it will not interest critical audiences.

Alan Randolph is engaged to be married to a Spanish belle. Violet Beaton, when he meets Rosita Mendez, a Spanish dancer and singer. He returns to America when he finds himself falling in love with Rosita. The Spanish girl follows and in a quarrel she is shot. She accuses Randolph which results in a five years sentence at the Lears. Randolph has been secretly married to Violet and that her home has been blessed with a child, Rosita writes a confession that clears Randolph and he is pardoned by the Governor.

A scene from the Hodkinson Special, "Down to the Sea in Ships."

SPECIAL CAST IN WHAT A WIFE LEARNED
(FIRST NATIONAL)

A thoroughly convincing and well-acted melodrama. The characters are the whole company brings out various situations in the best light. The story is both interesting and amusing and has good lighting and artistic settings. Directed by John Griffith Wray from a story by Bradley King. Seven parts.

Out of quite an ordinary theme the producer of "What a Wife Learns," has made an intensely interesting play of the "society" type. The centre of interest is fastened upon three characters and it is all the more praiseworthy that the situation and acting create such good entertainment.

John Bowers, in the role of Jim Russell, has been fitted for his part with restraint and is very effective as the young, struggling engineer. Marguerite de la Mote has an equally important part as Sheila Corrigan, a woman and playwright who finds a husband rather a nuisance when she goes after a certain Miller. Smith, the producer of plays, Rudolph Martin, with his usual reserve and conviction. Esther Russell, a crippled girl, is played by Evelyn McCoy; Harry Ted is played by McGrath and Aggie Harring, Maggie McGrath.

Besides Russell falls in love with Sheila Dorne, the village school mistress and upon a promise not to interfere with her ambition to become an actress, she marries them. They move to the city where a producer accepts Sheila's first play and while it is being gotten into shape, the two jealous rage disperses a party of friends calling upon Sheila, and asks her to return to the country town with him. She has about decided to do so, but she renews his promise, and remains to see her play produced. Sheila and her friend are drawn together and it ends happily when Jim completes a big engineering project and saves the life of the play producer in a raging torrent.

PEST OF THE STORM COUNTRY

You've seen burlesques and burlesques but you haven't seen nothing yet, until you see "Pest of the Storm Country." It's a Christie. made by Jack White under the direction of Robert Kerr, and it's a wow! It has Louise Fazenda, Harry Strickland, Jack Lloyd and some other Christie furnakers in it, and all in all is about the funniest thing that has been produced by this or any other company.

Louise has a persistent lover, who plays various musical instruments, rain and shine. and Shannon belle, after gal. Finally, one night, when an awful storm comes up, she invites him to stay all night and while they are in the same room in the shed he runs home for his pajamas. Not new, No. But funny. And such a storm. Twice as many trees fall in "One Exciting Night" and the wind blows twice as hard. Louise's pet dog just floats through the air at the end of its leash. There are plenty of laughs in this two reeler. Our advice is to hop out and get it. And advertise it.
FRANK MAYO IN

THE FIRST DEGREE
(UNIVERSAL)

A dramatic and emotional tale of injustice done one man by his half brother. Based on the "Saturday Evening Post" story "The Case of the Disappearing Butcher." Directed by Edward Sedgwick from a scenario by George Randolph Chester. Five reels.

This is practically a one man picture. Frank Mayo occupying the centre of the stage moving the time. It is replete in action, however, and is one of the best things this Universal star has done of late. Mayo contributes a strong characterisation to the role of Sam Bass, a man bounded by an unnatural and venomous brother, and Philo McCullough was effective in the latter role. Sylvia Breamer appears opposite Mayo in a small but convincing part, that of Mary, a girl who does not give faith in her own strength. George A. Williams is the Sheriff and Harry Carter the district attorney.

The story is told by a series of flashbacks from the dusty room of a small town, where Sam Bass, who has been summoned before that body to testify in a sheep stealing case, confesses to the murder he believes he committed the day before. His recital of the injustice done him by his own brother holds the jurymen spellbound, and when he completes his story, they are ready to acquit him of all blame. The blackmailing brother is then brought to the courthouse still retaining his hold over the sheep, and the law takes its course, punishing Will, and bringing peace and rest to Sam.

FIGHTING BLOOD
(F. B. O.)

F. B. O. offers a rare treat to theatre-goers in this series of two-reel subjects under the general title of "Fighting Blood," the first three "rounds" of which were shown for the first time last week. The pictures, which are a departure from anything yet offered in the short subject field, were adapted by Beatrice Vany M. H. C. Wit. The popular stories published in a national weekly magazine. In all there will be twelve pictures in the series.

The stories, each of which is complete in itself, but with the same character-figuring in each, have been translated by Director Mal St. Clair into most pleasing as well as blood-stirring bits of screen entertainment. The cast selected for the series is excellent. George O'Hara is a dashling and athletic hero and in addition is an actor who merits more than passing attention. His work in the fight scenes is so realistic as to indicate that he would be no mean adversary in a real scrap. Pretty little Clara Horton is all that could be desired, her spirited portrayal of the part of the sweetheart of the fighting young man being not a small amount due to the pictures, while her winsomeness makes her well worth fighting for.

The somewhat interesting stories is good clean comedy, and while there is many a tense moment, there are also plenty of laughs. These pictures should go very big.

In Loving Memory

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
Died February 1, 1918

ETHEL CLAYTON KAUFMAN

CHARLES JONES IN

FOOTLIGHT RANGER
(FOX)

Conventional from start to finish is this Jones vehicle, with the star in rather inharmonious settings. Only an average program picture, lacking in dramatic suspense and logic. Story by Dorothy Yost. Directed by Scott Dunlap. Five reels.

There is very little to be said in favor of this slight story of a Western youth who falls in love with a pretty actress, rescues her from unwelcome attentions of several men and finally marries her. The whole thing lacks the general appeal it should have. Jones is practically wasted on such a plot, and its unsavory turn, where the wealthy New Yorker takes her to a road house and attacks her in a private dining room, has been used far too frequently in pictures for their own good.

Jones does good work as the lazy youth, a returned soldier, and is given good support by Frizzi Brunette, as a selfish, aggressive actress, and she meets the demands of her role. The other characters were well cast. James Mason made a good Al Browney, Lilian Langdon a typical wardrobe lady, and Henry Barrows a disgusting David Marsh, the villain.

The Fox press book for "The Footlight Ranger," contains a story they might use for Charles Jones some time, all about a young man who makes a fortune in oil and goes on the stage in small parts, but it has little relation to this story.

Bill Moreland meets Janet Ainsley when the company in which she is star becomes stock company in Western town. He sells his German police dogs to buy tickets for the troupe to New York and promises to meet Janet there. Later Bill goes to New York as a riveter. He is injured while working on a skyscraper, and Janet sends him flowers. David Marsh, who is backing a show in which Janet is to be the star, forces unwelcome attentions upon her in a road house. Her theatre companion takes Bill in the road house, where he administrates a good beating to Marsh. The next day he takes a train for home and discovers Janet in a seat across the aisle, also going to his home town.

HERBERT RAWLINSON IN

THE SCARLET CAR
(UNIVERSAL)

A rapid-fire melodrama with politics as a background. Herbert Rawlinson effectively brusque as usual in a returned college boy hero role. Tom McGuire a dominant figure in support. A good cast in a good picturization of the Richard Harding Davis story. Directed by Stuart Paton. Five reels.

A Richard Harding Davis story is always good advertising capital, and in this case the picture that has been made from it will back up the copy. Herbert Rawlinson heads a good cast in its depiction and Stuart Paton has kept action humming from the beginning to the end.

Tom McGuire, whose name has not been printed generally in type as big as his performance in this case, holds the attention almost as constantly as the star in the picture. He will hear watching if given a chance.

C. Adams is briefly the heroine, the story having little to do with the feminine members of the cast. Marc Robbins does a dissolve father that repels in the approved manner, a difficult creation.

The story has to do with a young man sent home from college who finds his former sweetheart about to marry a political aspirant whose record is well concealed but not unsmirched. The young man's discovery and disclosure of the facts in the case make up the body of the story.

A great deal of action is bound up in the narrative, much of it in the form of fistic combat, not of the ring variety but no less thrilling. Rawlinson and McGuire engage briefly at arm's length, with the conventional result, but McGuire doesn't suffer through the punishment.

The yarn is one of the healthy variety that gave Richard Harding Davis his hold upon the American public. It has no subtlety, no finesse, as the Drama Leaguers say, but it has a whole lot of that spirit that makes people like good motion pictures.

The automobile has little to do with the plot, but enough to warrant the title, which is a good line and denotes a picture that will not disappoint.

Frank Mayo and Sylvia Breamer in a dramatic bit from "The First Degree," a new Universal feature.
Metro

BUSTER KEATON has selected “Three Ages” as his first feature length comedy for Metro. This has practically been determined by Joseph M. Schenck and Metro officials. According to Mr. Schenck “Three Ages” will be spared in making this one of the best comedies ever made.” Margaret Leahy, English prize-winning beauty, will appear in the film. “Three Ages” was written by the comedian and Jean C. Havez, Thomas J. Gray, Joe Mitchell and Clyde Bruckman. Eddie Cline will direct.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG’s next vehicle will be “Cordelia the Magnificent,” by Leroy Scott. Metro also announces that the famous Robert W. Service poem, “The Shooting of Dan McGrew,” is to be produced by the company. Bull Montana’s next Host Stronberg comedy for Metro is to be “The Two Twins.” Chuck Reisner is the other twin. Albert Austin will direct.

FRED NIBLO has completed “The Famous Mrs. Fair” for Metro. He and his wife, Enid Bennett, are now enjoying a belated honeymoon. Louis Burtons has commenced production on “Desire” at the Metro plant, Rowland Lee directing.

First National

A ROTOGRAVURE SECTION of four pages is being distributed to exhibitors by First National as an exploitation feature for “Omar the Tentmaker,” the Guy Bates Post vehicle produced by Richard Walton Tully. Hand these to your editor. He’ll be glad to use them.

YOU’LL SEE J. Warren Kerrigan, Sylvia Bremer and Russell Simpson in “The Girl of the Golden West,” which Edwin Carewe will start shooting soon at United Studios, as his second First National attraction. Carewe plans to make this the most ambitious picture of his career.

THE NEW Alvo Holubar-Dorothy Phillips picture for First National will be published under the title, “Slander the Woman.” It was made under the temporary title, “The Wild Frontier.” It will be published in April.

Universal

“NAUGHTY MARIETTA,” popular musical comedy of a few years back, is to be filmed by Universal. Virginia Valli in all probability will draw the stellar role in the piece which was written by Rida Johnson Young. Victor Her- bert composed the music for the stage attraction. Universal will take advantage of the music tieup possibilities in exploiting the picture.

HUGO RIESENFELD has contract for the full series of Educational-Hamilton comedies to be issued this year, for the Tivoli and Rialto theatres, New York. He has already played “The Speeder,” “The Educator,” “No Luck,” and “Extra! Extra!” among those coming in the series.

Christie

EDUCATIONAL

THREE NEW “Wilderness Tales” subjects have been completed and edited by Robert C. Bruce. They are “By Lantern Light,” a sea picture depicting the life of a family of coast dwellers; “Moonblind,” a forest fire story; and “Jenkins and the Mutt” a tale of a dog’s devotion.

HODKINSON

“HEADLESS HORSEMAN,” featuring Will Rogers, received the distinction of being placed at the head of a list of photoplays recommended as wholesome recreation by a joint committee of the Illinois Council Parent Teachers Association, Illinois League of Women Voters and the Woman’s City Club of Chicago.

MINIATURE WANS, mounted on a card are popular novelties supplied by Hodkinson in exploitation of “Second Fiddle” featuring Glenn Hunter which Hodkinson declares is creating much interest.

MARGUERITE COURTOT has recovered sufficiently from an operation for appendicitis to permit her removal from a hospital in Newark to her home. She has the feminine lead in “Down to the Sea in Ships.”

“LUCRETIA LOMBARD” by Kathleen Norris is the newest novel acquired by Warner Brothers for screen production. (Continued on page 97)
CLEVELAND FILM BOARD OF TRADE—Seated, left to right: Mr. Davidson, Lande Film Distributing Company; H. R. Skiboll, Ohio exchange for Education Films; Robert Cotton, Fox Film Corporation and president of the board; G. E. Almy, Metro Pictures Corporation and treasurer of the board; Nat Barach, Goldwyn; Mark Goldman, Select Pictures Corporation, and W. N. Skiboll, Skiboll Bros. Gold Seal Productions. Standing, left to right: Tom Colby, Universal Film Exchange; C. E. Penrod, Film Booking Offices of America; J. E. Beck, Miss S. Black stenographer, F. B. of T.; C. L. Peavey, W. W. Hodkinson; H. W. Christman, secretary of the board; J. E. Fontaine, Famous Players-Lasky; F. B. Rogers, Pathe, vice-president of the body; M. A. Labenburger, Standard Film Service Company; E. C. Fielder, Progress Pictures; Miss B. Leibson, American Releasing; J. J. Jossey, Progress Pictures and Walter Lusk, Associated First National; George P. Jacobs, Western Pictures, another member is absent.

W. W. HODKINSON CORPORATION—Other exchanges of the Hodkinson organization will have to "step on it" if they are going to keep pace with the Cleveland branch. This is the warning of the staff shown above. They are: Henry C. Fleming, booker; Leona E. Myer, bookkeeper; L. A. Getzer, salesman; Gertrude R. Sledr, stenographer; E. R. Litte, from the New York office; and C. L. Peavey, who is manager of the branch.

TWO NEW PRODUCTIONS on the Warner program have been completed. Executives in the East have received a print of "The Little Church Around the Corner" while a print of "Brigsy" from Charles G. Norris' novel is expected any day.

THE STORY OF "The Beautiful and Damned," Warner production now under way, is running serially in the New York Daily News and in hundreds of newspapers. In addition to this the book is pronounced one of its best sellers by Charles Scribner's Sons, publishers.

WESLEY BARRY not only got the glad hand from everybody in Boston when he appeared personifying Modern and Beacon theatres in connection with his "Rags to Riches" but also swelled box office receipts considerably according to the exhibitors.

Playgoers Pictures:

THREE PICTURES are announced for February publication by Playgoers Pictures. They are: "A Pauper Millionaire," February 11; "A Clouded Name," February 18, and "The Supreme Passion," February 23. The first reveals the London adventures of a penniless New York millionaire. The second is marked by action, romance and beautiful scenic effects. The third is founded on the poem, "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms."

"A PAUPER MILLIONAIRE" has been set for publication by Playgoers on February 11. It is a novel by Austin Fryers and depicts the trials of an American millionaire who loses his ready money and identity while in London.

Vitagraph:

ALABAN & KATZ theatres in Chicago have booked the Urban Popular Classic "Abraham Lincoln" for Lincoln's birthday week. The next Urban Classic to be issued is called "Roving Thomas in Canada." The Strand, Buffalo, is among the first houses to book Vitagraph's "One Stolen Night," featuring Alice Calhoun.

COMEDY MADE in 1905 called "License No. 13" and featuring the late John Bunny, was Vitagraph's contribution to a bill at a New Haven theatre, New York, called "Thirty Years of Motion Pictures."

Principal Pictures:

THINGS ARE ACTIVE again at the King Vidor studios which have been taken over by Principal Pictures Corporation. The company has established its headquarters at the plant which is located on Santa Monica boulevard, Hollywood. Occupying offices in the main administration building in addition to Mr. Lesser are Michael Rosenberg, secretary-treasurer, Arthur L. Bernstein, studio manager: Walter Anthony, scenario department head; Harry D. Wilson, director of exploitation and publicity, and E. H. Meser, chief auditor. Irving Lesser, vice-president, makes his headquarters in New York.

"DADDY" will be Jackie Coogan's production to follow "Oliver Twist." This is announced by Sol Lesser. First National will distribute it. The story of "Daddy" is the work of the star's parents.

WORK SHOULD START shortly at Principal Pictures studio on the first of the George M. Cohan plays. This will be "The Meanest Man in the World." Mr. Cohan will go to the Coast to cooperate in the production of the picture.

RIGHTS TO "East Side, West Side," Broadway stage play, have been purchased by Principal. It is announced that Principal will distribute four pictures to be produced by Sacramento Film Corporation. "Temporary Marriage" will be the first. The deal with Sacramento was made through Benny Zeidman.

Fox:

PRE-PUBLICATION SHOWINGS in Cincinnati and neighborhood houses in New York and vicinity was made of "The Town That Forgot God," as a money making box office attraction, according to Fox Feature努 feature, which had its premiere at the Astor in the metropolis, will be published on February 11. In many ways, says the company, this picture has surpassed "Over the Hill," which is now in its third year. Harry Millarde directed both these films. The storm and flood scenes in "The Town That Forgot God" have received high praise.

George H. Wiley:

IMPORTANT CIRCUITS and first run houses are completing negotiations for the showing of Malcolm Stuurs' "Salome," according to George H. Wiley, Inc., which is handling the distribution of the feature on the independent circuit. Mr. Wiley states that exchange men throughout the country have advised him that there is a big demand for this type of picture. In connection with bookings by circuits and first run theatres, arrangements are being entered into for the personal appearance of Diana Allen, former Ziegfeld Folies girl, who plays the role of Salome in the picture. Mr. Wiley will tour the Middle West and South shortly in the interest of the feature.

Distinctive Pictures:

"THE GREEN GODDESS," William Archer's melodrama in which Colleen Moore and George Arliss has been making a triumphant tour of the country, has been bought for production by Distinctive Pictures Corporation. Arthur S. Friend, president of the company, announces also that he has purchased the screen rights to the new Karl Brown and Josephine Hagan romance, "Barred Doors." It is planned to produce "The Green Goddess" on an elaborate scale. Both pictures will be filmed at the Distinctive Biograph studios. "The Green Goddess" has been regarded as one...
Production Progress

Norca Pictures:

"I HE RED TRAIL" will be the third production of Norca Pictures, Inc. Norca is announced for availability in its two previous films, "Just a Mother" and "Love's Old Sweet Song." Lesley Mason is author of "The Red Trail."

AYWON has ACQUIRED "Love's Old Sweet Song" for distribution in the New York and Northern New Jersey territory. Melvin Hirsch of Aywon is conducting an intensive advertising campaign on behalf of the attraction.

George H. Davis:

H. G. WELLS "The Passionate Friend" has been picturized by George H. Davis, who announces that the feature film will be ready for publication. Plans for distribution of the picture are being considered and an early announcement is expected. This is believed to be the first Wells story to be filmed.

F. B. O.:

FOUR WEEKS to increasing business is the report sent out by Film Booking Offices relative to the run of "The Third Alarm," at the Astor theatre, New York. F. B. O. assigns this increasing popularity to the tremendous amount of word of mouth advertising accorded this Emory J. Love feature. The Fox circuit will play "The Third Alarm," following the Astor run.

DAN MASON'S forthcoming Film Center comedy for F. B. O. is "Pop Tartle's One Horse Play." Pop is a theatrical producer in this subject. Paul Gerber produces these pictures. In February, F. B. O. will publish its Finis B. Fox article, "The Bishop of the Ozarks." This picture features Milford W. Howard, the author, deals with the regeneration of a criminal by the power of love.

H. C. WITTER'S "Fighting Blood" pictures which F. B. O. will distribute are something to look forward to in the opinion of the New York reviewers who were enthusiastic in their acclaim of these short subjects following a trade preview at the Astor. The first three rounds were shown.

Pathé:

Here's What you may book from Pathé for February 4: Second episode of the Pearl White serial, "Flunder," "A Rough Winter," in which Snub Pollard gives you many laughs in his effort to emulate Santa Claus; "Smoke Out," re-creating some fast riding and hard fighting by Leo Maloney; "Once Over," a new stunt at barbershop comedy that re-creating Paul Parrott and Johnny Russell; Pathé News Numbers 12 and 13; Topics of the Day Number 5; Pathé Review Number 5, showing "The Fig Leaves," of Japan, and Ascop's Film Fable, "A Raisin and a Cake of Yeast." Sound interesting.

HAROLD LLOYD has a new comedy out. It is "Safety Last." Elmer Pearson, Pathé general manager, describes it as "foolishly dangerous." Mr. Pearson says he does not hesitate in giving that strong endorsement.

Snub Pollard's second series of two reel comedies, "Bounced by the Public" scheduled for publication on March 4. Hal Roach produces the Pollard subjects.

“Pictures That Pay” Discussed by Lichtman and Schulberg

By Al Lichtman—By B. P. Schulberg—

The successful exhibitor is the sound-minded business man who looks ahead. He has material that pays him and satisfies him. He doesn’t want to hear a long speech. He wants to find an organization that gives him the right product and then he’ll come back for more. We let our pictures speak for themselves. We are young but we feel that the exhibitor knows we have something of exception. We believe that the features that are new are features that we made to net him profits, and they have proven their own worth. All our future releases will be made along these same lines.

Our organization, comprising Preferred Pictures, Inc., and Al Lichtman Corporation, is founded on the solid rock of quality and square dealing. We were formed to create and distribute “real motion pictures. We are doing it. With the first anniversary of our organization closed, Preferred Pictures and the allied organization, fifteen of the best box office attractions in the history of the screen.

Seven of the first-eight are now completed. “Rich Men’s Wives,” our first release, directed by Gaaster, tells its own story of big profits for the houses where it was shown. “Shadows,” a Tom Forman production, is another tremendous success. “Thorns and Orange Blossoms,” a Gaaster production is a third. And so it goes on: “Poor Men’s Wives,” “Are You a Failure?” “The Girl Who Came Back,” “April Showers,” ready to blaze their own trail of pictures to prosperity. Then will come our second group of eight big pictures with more to follow. Our releases are on a roll of a motion picture industry.

We make no pretensions. We stand as an energetic, successful, wide awake picture producing and releasing organization. Why? Because the men in it are experienced in every angle of the industry. B. P. Schulberg, president of Preferred Pictures, Inc., who is in charge of production, knows how to produce the very best. We have under contract two of the foremost directors in the industry—Louis Gaaster and Tom Forman.

Our sales manager, Henry Ginsberg, needs no introduction. He is known to every exhibitor.

Traveling throughout the country a- exploitation and service directors for our pictures have been four men of great proven ability. They are: Foster Moore, who for many years has been an invaluable part of the Jans Film Corporation, Joseph Klein, formerly manager of Metro’s New York exchange and afterward with F. O., as district manager, Edward Grossman, formerly with Paramount and Associated Producers, E. P. Whitter, formerly with Artcraft, Select and Thomas H. Ince.

Select Fine Cast

An unusually fine cast is announced for “April Showers,” a Preferred Picture production, published by Al Lichtman Corporation. Tom Forman is the director.

Those who will be seen in the production according to B. P. Schulberg, are: Toronto. The Preferred Pictures are Coelen Moore, Kenneth Harlan, Myrtle Vane, Priscilla Bonner, Harriet Hammond, Tom McGuire, Matt Gallagher.

Franchise Holders

The men who stand back of the Schuberg product and the Lichtman selling plan are amongst the foremost of the industry. They are responsible in a large measure for the progress made by the Al Lichtman Corporation in placing Preferred Pictures in the best houses throughout the country. Al Lichtman made a personal tour of the selling centers in the United States when his organization was formed and allied himself with prominent picture men in all these cities who became his franchise holders and managers.

As a result of this tour, Mr. Lichtman allied with his organization these men: Boston, Harry Asher: Chicago, J. L. Friedman; Cleveland, Harry L. Charnas; Detroit, Donlan: Des Moines, A. H. Blank; Minneapolis, J. F. Cubberly; New Jersey, H. F. Jans; New York, Sam Zeiler; Philadelphia, Ben Amsterdam; San Francisco, Louis Hyman: St. Louis, Spyrus Skouras; Seattle, Al Rosenberg; Atlanta, J. T. Richards.

In addition to these cities there are exchanges in New Haven, Portland, Albany, Milwaukee, Indianapolis, Cleveland, Detroit, Cincinnati; Pittsburgh, Salt Lake City, Kansas City, Omaha, Los Angeles, Washington, Dallas, Oklahoma City, Atlanta, St. Louis, Denver, Boston. The Walterown Film Company represents Al Lichtman Corporation in Great Britain.

Our sales manager, Henry Ginsberg, needs no introduction. He is known to every exhibitor.

Traveling throughout the country as exploitation and service directors for our pictures have been four men of great proven ability. They are: Foster Moore, who for many years has been an invaluable part of the Jans Film Corporation, Joseph Klein, formerly manager of Metro’s New York exchange and afterward with F. O., as district manager, Edward Grossman, formerly with Paramount and Associated Producers, E. P. Whitter, formerly with Artcraft, Select and Thomas H. Ince.

Are You a Failure?—the first Preferred Picture with a comedy vein. Larry Evans is the author of the piece. His first work for Preferred, which has lately placed him under contract, was Katherine MacDonald’s vehicle, “Money, Money, Money.” Through a special arrangement with Thomas Ince, Lloyd Hughes and Madge Bellamy have the featured roles, supported by Tom Sanschi, Harder Kirkland, and others.

The Girl Who Came Back—a film version of the play by Charles E. Blaney and Samuel Ruskin Golding, the popularity of which has been sustained on the stage season after season.
DAVID BELASCO, foremost of all theatrical producers, became personally identified with motion pictures last week following the closing of a big deal with some prominent brothers for the production of a number of his famous stage successes, the first three of which are "The Gold Diggers," by Harry Holwood, "Deburau," by Sacha Guitry, and "Dubbies," by Lessing Hubble.

The second Hollywood story to be filmed by Fred Caldwell at the Fine Arts Studio is "The Deacon of Hollywood."

JOHN C. RAGLAND, secretary of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., is a visitor in the city. He is here to give the various producing units of his organization, operating in the vicinity, the "once over" while in Los Angeles Ragland will confer with the producing heads and stars of A. E. including Arthur Rank, Leah Baird, Florence Vidor, Malice Bellamy, Douglas McLean, Harold Lloyd and a couple of others who are soon to be announced.

NORMAN MANNING, has been retained by Sol Lesser to rebuild the old King Vidor studio in Hollywood recently acquired by the producer. The rehabilitation work will start immediately and when completed the Lesser studio, it is said, will be one of the most modern and best equipped motion picture producing units in the country.

MRS. MONTY BLY is to return to the screen where she made her first appearance many years ago under the direction of D. W. Griffith. She is cast now in the new Charles Ray production, "The Courtship of Miles Standish."

Rumor has it that GUY BATES Post, stage and screen star, has severed his connections with Thurl Thorley, producer, and will not appear in the picturization of "Trilby," the forthcoming Tully production, as originally planned.

The brood was caused by an argument, it is said, with reference to publicity. Post claims that Tully failed to give him due publicity in the financial end of their partnership and although he had been consistently featured as an actor, few people were aware that he had a financial interest in Tully's plays.

MARIE PROVOST, of the prominent flapper allure, has been assigned the leading feminine role in the Goldwyn Company's production of "Red Lights," which Clarence Badger will direct. "Red Lights" is the screen version by Carey Wilson of the mystery melodrama, "The Rear Car," which had its premiere and a long and successful run in Los Angeles.

Somewhere in the middle of the Pacific on the "Express of Australia," sails Henry McRae, director and independent producer, who, with his staff, is bound for the Orient to make a series of motion pictures whose themes find their inspiration in the environment, present and past, of the inhabitants of China, Japan, Siam and the Philippines. McRae will be absent the better part of a year for the making of these productions.

LEW COBY, who plays the part of "Rupert in "Rupert of Hentzau," may have recently shaved off his mustache for art's sake, but he has nothing on Elliott Dexter, who is growing a very conspicuous pair of "sideburners" for the role of Jose Querda in the Selznick all-star production of "The Common Law."

In line with the recently announced intention of the Selznick Company to move its entire distribution organization to Los Angeles, F. R. Cole assistant to the Vice-President of the company, has arrived in Los Angeles from the East to assist Vice-President David O. Selznick and A. George Volck, in the preparatory work of making the big change of residence.

JOHN F. SEITZ, cameraman, and Tom Storey, laboratory expert for Rex Ingram, have arrived in Hollywood from New York. Seitz and Mr. Storey worked on "Where the Pavement Ends," Ingram's next production for Metro.

MAE MURRAY has completed her work in "Jazzmania," Robert Z. Leonard's newest production for Metro in which she is starred, and has gone to San Francisco for a short vacation before starting her next picture.

MAX GRAYE has returned to Hollywood after spending two weeks in San Francisco preparing for the filming of "The Fog" which will be his next production for Metro. It will be made at the San Mateo studios.

EDWIN CAREWE, the producer-director of "The Girl of the Golden West," recently acted as host to Gene Sarazen, the American open golf "champ," Carewe, Sarazen and E. Mason Hopper formed a threesome and held a match on the Hollywood Country Club links. The golf "champ" met Carewe in New York a few months ago, while the latter was filming "Mighty Lak a Rose," for First National.

RUPERT JULIAN, whose "Beast of Berlin," is yet remembered, and director of "Merry Go Round," has just sold another story to Universal. The new one is for Herbert Rawlinson and it bears the temporary title of "Help! Help!" Another of Julian's stories, "Flesh," was completed a few weeks ago.

BULL MONTANA carried a print of "Rob-Indiwood" out to the Fairbanks home at Beverly Hills one night last week and screened it for a select audience that included Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, and Charlie Chaplin. And you should see the smile Hunt Stromberg's star is wearing now.

Protest Arts has loaned Cecil Holland and Raymond Cannon, star and director respectively of Protest Productions, to the Fred Caldwell Productions for the comedy-drama "Knightwood in Hollywood."

CHARLES SEILING left for New York this week to complete releasing arrangements. He has "Big Boy" Williams under long contract and will also have comedy units.

The published rumor that Los Wilson and J. Warren Kerrigan are engaged in a highly publicized divorce is said to have been put out by the popular Paramount actress. Miss Wilson and Mr. Kerrigan recently finished playing the featured roles in "The Cover Vampire," an American production of the West, transferred to the screen as "James Cruze Production for Paramount, and Mrs. Wilson beheld the rumor start because the two were brought together in the making of this picture.

The New year marked the termination of Kathryn McGuire's contract with the Sennett Studios.

ROWLAND V. LEE, who is directing the Metro production, "Desire," has received word that "The Dust Flower," in novel form, is attaining the proportions of a best seller, and if the demand for the book continues to accelerate, another edition will be issued. Lee directed "The Dust Flower," as an original Basil King story for Goldwyn. So successful was his motion picture version that Harper and Brothers arrange with King to write the story into a novel thereby reversing the usual form of basis for the picture on the book.

When S. L. WARNER and Harry RAI leave for the east next week they will talk along with them the master prints "Brace," and "Little Church Around the Corner."

Mrs. Reid to Play in Anti-Narcotic Pictur

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 30.—Doroth Davenport, widow of Wallace Reid, will turn to the screen in an anti-narcotic film to be produced by Thomas H. Ince. According to Mrs. Reid the picture will be devoted to an attempt to be known as the Wallace Reid Memorial Sanatorium. It is aimed to make a picture that will teach a great moral lesson.

Watterson R. Rothacker
Reelected Head of Firi

At the annual election of officers of the Fifirothacker Film Manufacturing Company, Watterson R. Rothacker was reelected president, H. J. Aldous was elected vice-president, and C. E. Pain, jr., treasurer. John Hahn was reelected secretary Edward H. Shain and John Hahn were elected to the board of directors with Douglas D. Roth and William H. Strauss and Brenda Moore in a scene from "Solomon in Society." (American Releasing)
Think This Over

Ohio's film dictator has barred Marshall Neilan's 'The Stranger's Banquet' from the screen of that state because of the protest of union labor. A majority of the public is disregarded. Think that over. If you haven't been doing your share in fighting the reformers, don't you think it's time that you get busy?

From E. W. Kundert

Editor, Public Rights League, EXHIBITORS HERALD, Chicago, Ill.
Dear Sir:
We are greatly indebted to you for your cooperation in letting us have copies of laws, etc., also clippings, etc. Same are herewith returned. We have been convicted after a second trial of the terrible crime of Sabbath breaking and fined $300 and costs which by the way are considerable. However, we paid it.
We expect to now enforce all state laws in force against any reformer we catch; also all city ordinances, and the game bag will be full. Our trouble was caused by the foreign language ministers who have absolute control of the city council. We have always contended that the screen is an instrument by which 100 per cent Americanism is taught and that under the Constitution of the United States and the State of South Dakota a man could spend his Sabbath as he pleased so long as he did not interfere with the rights of his neighbor.
We had the best legal talent available but the jury was not with us. The city is evenly divided on the question. The operators in the employ of the telephone company claim they will strike Sunday. In other words we have a "Little Hell" all our own in Beresford. We expect to smoke out all hypocrites before the final gun is fired. You will gain hear from us regarding the matter.

Yours truly,
E. W. KUNDERT

From William H. Creal

Editor, Public Rights League, EXHIBITORS HERALD, Chicago, Ill.
Dear Sir:
I hand you herewith a clipping from Omaha World-Herald, which may be interest to your readers. This paper owned and published by United States senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock, whose opinions should have some influence with the present administration in Nebraska the governor is of the same political as the "senator." Thanking your paper for former courtesies, I am

Sincerely yours,
William H. Creal, Suburban theatre, * * * Omaha, Neb.

The clipping (an editorial) enclosed by Mr. Creal follows:

No Censors Are Needed

A bill for the censorship of motion pictures is again before the legislature, and it is to be hoped that this, like prior similar measures in Nebraska, will meet with merited defeat.

Its purpose is to provide for a new board of the each to draw a $3,000 salary, with power to appoint clerks, inspectors, etc., all at the public expense, to decide what pictures Nebraska people may and may not be permitted to see. It means a piling up of expense, not only to serve no useful purpose, but to impose upon the state a vicious and indefensible theory of government.

There is no place in a free government for censorship. A free government is a government by law, and the law provides punishment for the showing of improper and immoral pictures just as it provides punishment for other offenses. No three people, eager to regulate the lives of all their fellow citizens, are so wise, so broad minded, so Catholic in their sympathies and so infallible in their tastes and judgment, as to be permitted to say what literature, what arts, what amusements, are to be open to the people and what are to be banned.

So far as the motion pictures are concerned there is far less than ever before any excuse for singling them out for censorship. In the last two years the quality of the pictures has shown very great improvement, in art, in good taste, and in every way. This result has been brought about by the steadily applied pressure of a healthy public opinion. The people do not need Medesdale Mattles to ride herd on them, and are quite competent, in these and many other matters, to take care of themselves.

St. Louis Civic Units Request "Family Night"
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

ST. LOUIS, MO., Jan. 30.—Motion picture exhibitors of St. Louis will be asked to set aside Friday evenings as "Family Nighs" with programs of films of "approved artistic and educational value" by the St. Louis Council on Motion Pictures, formed at a recent meeting of women's civic and welfare organizations. The meeting was held under the auspices of the College Club. Exhibitors will also be asked to give special matines for small children on Saturday mornings. A voluntary reviewing committee will also be organized and a bureau of information about films for the benefit of schools, churches and other organizations.

The officers are: Mrs. J. Bretzfelder, 4738 Westminster, president; Mrs. Albert Spaulding, Parent-Teachers' Association, first vice-president; Mrs. John S. Payne, Eighth District Federated Women's Clubs, second vice-president; Mrs. Douglas Corner, College Club, secretary, and Mrs. T. G. Ratchful, Wednesday Club, treasurer.

Browne on West Coast Theatre Control Board
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 30.—Frank L. Browne, Liberty theatre, Long Beach, has been appointed to the advisory board of the West Coast Theatres, Inc. Mr. Browne has been active in theatre management for over sixteen years, his experience including direction of playhouses in Boston, Los Angeles, where he formerly managed Chun's Broadway, and other cities. He has been identified with the Liberty at Long Beach since 1920.
More "Funny" Stories

ASHLAND, OHIO.—To the Editor: Our funniest experience has been spending Sunday. We were trying to leave the picture, that was absolutely free, to self-styled cultural ladies who absolutely refuse to see a picture unless they have read the story in a book thirty years ago. CLARK & EDWARDS, Palace theatre, Ashland, Ohio.

EUREKA, MONT.—To the Editor. I really haven't seen anything funny about this game since I took over the Majestic in 1920 but since December 25 my uncle, who is a humorist, has sold me some cards for a holiday. I'll never again think of a joke without his assistance. Welter, which I have been trying to describe for years, took the bank. WALLACE: Fundamentally, I feel the picture is going to be a smash hit. But tonight's showing left me feeling it's going to be a flop.

RUGBY, NO. DAK.—To the Editor: The funniest thing that has happened to me in the picture motion business: Why do nearly all exchanges (O. D. your local exchange) insist on your contract no matter if it is paid for or not? Fox did it to me, and Paramount is C. O. D. crazy. Now if they want extra business, let 'em be fair with you.

And another funny thing is, why don't we North Dakota exhibitors organize and get rid of these Sunday Chautauquas? If anyone can show me why a "Chautauqua" has a perfect right to operate on Sunday and charge admission, I am ready to go to the river with a big stone tied to my neck. The reason they get away with it is because they are organized. Why don't we organize and get to be of some power, boys? Let's go. I'll go the limit; work like — and spend some good American money to get rid of the Sunday Chautauqua. OSCAR TROVER, Lyric theatre, Rugby, No. Dak.

ABERDEEN, MISS.—To the Editor: Brother, my funniest experience during 1922 was trying to keep the old doors open. The hardest of all was keeping the exchanges from getting all the jack that was taken in. I doubt all of you had this same experience. Some might say it's comedy, but to me it was drama. Hubert Streeter was soon in as normal so that all of us can buy shoes for the baby.—W. E. ELKIN, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.

GREENVILLE, MICH.—To the Editor: My whole seven years in the picture show business has been one big joke.—Burt S. Siver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.

Clip the "Knocks" and Be All Set for "Bonet" Smith

ELGIN, NEBR.—To the Editor: It amuses me to read some of the "What the Picture Did for Me" reports. I believe it is all right to say that this picture was good or bad, whichever it happens to be. But to swell up and run over about a picture like my personal friend JENKINS did about "The Four Feather Men" and FRIEND RAND about the picture "Turn to the Right" is not the proper thing to do, in my estimation, as every film peddler on the road is loaded with extracts from "What the Picture Did for Me.

I have before me now an extract with sixteen reports on it which were copied from the Herald and other trade papers. This is on one star only. The film companies are only inducing the exhibitor to buy their service.

You may be sure that they have copied any of these reports which suited their pictures. I had a film peddler in my office the other day and the first thing he did was to pull out a bundle of reports. I tore down my stacks of Herald trying to convince me that he had the great and only eagle-eyed star on the market. And the price he made me on one of his pictures (which made me think of my grandmother when I was a boy) was sure going to reimburse him for all his troubles showing me the reports.

The film companies are using those reports to scare exhibitors out of some money out of us; also as a club to make us buy. Show me the film peddlers who are packing a report which pans their pictures. This is the L. L. Miller, manager, Community theatre, Elgin, Neb.

Coogan's New Contract

BESPELER, ONT., CANADA.—To the Editor: I note in the Herald that Jack Coogan has been signed by Metro for a salary that makes the average exhibitor give an exhibitor of many years standing, I feel these enormous salaries are fundamentally wrong. Why in the name of common sense should a person at one end of the game receive such fabulous sums, and the fellow at the other end take a big chance, whether he gets as much luck as he pays for his pictures. If we had a Babe Ruth in the game who would swallow these big items, he would receive the gratitude of thousands. B. O. DEARBER, WALTER H. MESSON, Queen's theatre, Besperler, Ontario, Canada.

Exhibitor Issues Warning

AMARILLO, TEX.—To the Editor: I am writing you in reference to a W. A. Wallace and am in hopes that you will help to locate this man. Mr. Wallace has left my office with excellent recommendations and proposed to make a local motion picture and work same on percentage. We signed contract, and he took the contract. Wallace was to make eight or ten advertising trailers for merchants and take that part of receipts, also a percentage on pictures. Wallace was busy around here for about ten days—I thought taking pictures—but I've not seen him. He has not appeared. We inquired around to merchants and found he had sold them advertising, collected for same and vanished. Will you help me locate this brother?

Here is a description of Wallace: About 4 feet 8 inches, light build, 6 in., weight about 145 lbs., has dark brown hair, rather nervous disposition, very quick motions and wears glasses.

Mr. Wallace drove a large automobile. If any exhibitor reads this and knows his whereabouts, wire me at my home, C. W. ROLLIN, The Fair theatre, Amarillo, Tex.

PURELY Personal

Interesting news about exhibitors and people with whom they come into daily contact. Readers are invited to contribute items for publication in this column. Address them to "Purely Personal."

R. D. Miller of Genoa Junction, Wis., now operates a motion picture theatre as well as the Pharmacy. He is a good operator. The motion picture theatre is a new venture with Mr. Miller. We wish him success.

J. W. Bengough of Buffalo is the new manager of the Jefferson theatre, Auburn, N. Y. For many years Mr. Bengough was associated with the Mark-Strand chain of theatres.

Nicholas Paiko is now the sole owner of the Strand theatre at Mont. He has purchased the interest of Mr. Klontary. Mr. Paiko has been part owner of the Warsaw Candy Kitchen and Mr. Klontary has held an interest in it. So Mr. Paiko purchased Mr. Klontary's interest in the theatre and sold his interest in the Warsaw Candy Kitchen to Mr. Klontary.

C. J. Doerr is now managing the Auditorium theatre at Waco, Tex., and is a busy man these days making a lot of improvements on the house.

Samuel Reider of St. Louis has arrived in Louisville, Ky., where he will manage the Gayety theatre. He is succeeding William W. Woodfolk, who has been in charge for five years.

C. A. Foster has sold his theatre at Carthage, Texas.

F. T. Welte, of the Grand Opera House, Warsaw, Wis., writes that he is in the process of changing the name of the "Boney Smith, the 220-pound showman of Kansas City, Kans., is who is going to catch the rabbits?"

J. Dugger, St. Louis manager for Goldwyn, has resigned to accept an executive position with Famous Players in the South.

Col. "Bp!" Yoder and his bride are making a tour of the Pathé exchanges. Yoder is Pathé district manager and has headquarters in Dallas, Texas.

The following changes in management of theatres in the Kansas City district have been announced during the last week:

Pastime theatre, Ottawa, Kan., purchased by Scott and Goodell, from Lawrence theatre, Kansas City purchased by Arthur Crone, from Robert Leonard; Rowley Wilson has succeeded H. W. Ulrich, who resigned the management of the Orpheum theatre, Joplin, Mo.; G. H. Beckley has succeeded George Crown as manager of the Cozy theatre. The local newspaper.

The E. M. Loew Company has been transferred by the Hosteller Company to the Plaza theatre, Sioux City, Ia.; Morris theatre, Kansas City, reopened for business by the Central Amusement Company.
American Releasing

The Sign of the Rose, with George Beban.—One of those truly "delightful" pictures, giving an audience a great star at his very best. I do not believe it will be a big money getter anywhere, as this sort of story does not appear to draw them in. However, it is a pleasure to play a production of this kind, regardless of the financial return. This sort certainly never injures the standing of a house. (John R. Ritch, Myrtle theatre, Lewistown, Mont.—General patronage.)

The Three Buckaroos, with a special cast.—Satisfactory Western comedy-drama. Bought right and did good business. (R. V. Erk, Big Ben theatre, Illion. N. Y.—General patronage.)

Moongold, with a special cast.—An allegorical or fairy story, with a Pierrot and Pierrette. Represented to us as to be a thing of beauty. Our print showed so dark we did not know what it was all about, and mightily interesting, to say nothing of lack of the "beautiful touches." Only touch was patrons walking out. (P. G. Estree, Fad theatre, Brookings. S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.)

The Belle of Alaska, with Jane Novak.—A program picture. Photography dark. Will please where they are not too critical. Should have good comedy to make fair program. (George Zinsz, Harbor theatre, Corpus Christi, Tex.—General patronage.)

The Cradle Buster, with a special cast. Comment on this picture was great. Everyone seemed to enjoy it. Find all American Releasing pictures good.—J. F. Sanderson, Jr., Strand theatre, Winchester, Va.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Trail of the Ax, with a special cast.—Good program picture. Will get the business. Be sure and use the six sheet.—M. E. Ames, Pastime theatre, Jefferson, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

My Old Kentucky Home, with a special cast.—Fine picture. Played two nights. Not a big picture, as they say. Don't pay too much for it. The title has some drawing power.—A. F. Affelt, Liberty theatre, St. Louis, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

My Old Kentucky Home, with a special cast.—Very good. Patrons will like this.—M. E. Ames, Pastime theatre, Jefferson, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

Associated Exhibitors

Grandma's Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—A 100% comedy. Had the people roaming from beginning to end. Did a good business on New Years.—E. J. Laqua, Gem theatre, Hankinson, N. D.—General patronage.

Ballot Jams Mail: Staff Overcome

The staff of "What the Picture Did for Me" was tripled last week when the flood of ballots naming favorite candidates for the post of Poet Laureate jammed "Herald" mails and overflowed the desks of the permanent personnel. Despite the overtime efforts of the augmented force, it is impossible at press time to compile even a semi-official bulletin of returns.

Early balloting shows a striking disregard for party lines and promises sensational surprises when the final count is recorded.

Old General Apathy, a prominent figure in the majority of elections, is conspicuous by his absence. Successive mails represent a steadily widening territory, indicating that votes are being cast promptly upon receipt of ballot. (The staff is grateful.)

Shifting leads noted at periodic test counts are marked by slight margins. There is positively no indication that last-minute charges of "electioneering" made against certain candidates were substantial.

So prompt has been receipt of ballots that publication of official result at an early date is expected. Immediate dispatch of votes not yet in the mails is urged in the interests of candidates, readers and staff members' nervous systems.

Marry the Poor Girl, with a special cast.—Not worth running; and I paid a good price for it, too.—Ernest Locey, Temple theatre, Howell, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Don't Doubt Your Wife, with Leah Barlow, a picture that pleases all classes. Good clean story.—J. A. Holmes, Arcade theatre, Holtville, Calif.—Neighborhood patronage.

Handle with Care, with a special cast. (It had a good run.) Would be ahead now.—Vernon Locey, Temple theatre, Howell, Mich.—Small town patronage.

F. B. O.

Thelma, with Jane Novak.—One of the best from every angle. Jane Novak is an ideal Thelma, and the story had an appeal for all classes.—P. G. Estree, Fad theatre, Brookings, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

If I were Queen, with Ethel Clayton.—It was a very good picture having fine scenery, but did not draw. Good bet at right price.—I. S. Rex, Princess theatre, Wauseon, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—A very good picture. A money getter, but not as good as boosted up to be. Nevertheless it's worth while showing.—J. Carbonell, Monroe theatre, Key West, Fla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The THIRD ALARM, with a special cast.—This is the best picture I have ever shown. Couldn't handle all the people. Ran two days to largest crowd in history of theatre.—J. S. Rex, Princess theatre, Wauseon, O.

Son of the Wolf, with a special cast.—Nothing to this one, but the name of Jack London. Pass it up, boys.—H. F. Sembler, Colonial theatre, Radford, Va.—Small town patronage.

Son of the Wolf, with a special cast.—Good for a double bill night. Otherwise don't book it. If you do, don't guarantee to please the majority. (Few real night.) W. Hrrigan, McDonald theatre, Phillipsburg, Mont.—Mining town patronage.

Good Men and True, with Harry Carey.—This is better than The Kick Back, but far from being a special. Your patrons will like this one if they are for Carey. It will make you money it bought right.—Henry Saubers, Fad theatre, Fairfax, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Good Men and True, with Harry Carey.—Good picture. but poor business.
HUMAN CRAB FLAYS POETIC CONTESTANTS

I have wanted to write you a letter for some time, but have had to be in prose, as I haven't the money to hire Riddle the韵诗 Patch to write my picture; neither am I a direct descendant of Shakespeare. You may imagine the timidity that bids me hesitate as I approach this line — to say learned, portals of "the What the Picture Did for Me" department.

It is evident that the unprecedented outbreak of near-poetry followed closely on the heels of near-beer, and at the hour of going to press I am undecided as to which has caused the most suffering. The w. k. business — depression has a lot to answer for, but this plague of alleged poetry is the last straw.

It started like this:

When the slump came, some exhibitor's business was knocked for a row of empty box cars, so after the show was over he walked up and down the state of the hollow sounding cot till he was enveloped in great gloom. Sitting down at his long suffering type mill he indignantly and solemnly said to "Exhibitors Herald," and right here I would like to have some psychology shark explain the subconscious connection between rotten business and the poetic urge.

Phil Rand has existed for the past six months with his head among the "sun crained clouds" where the "shaven of glorious moon beans kiss the rippling waters of the brooding lake." (Rot! Now you've done it — do you think you can do it again?)

How in Heck can an exhibitor run his business with his head in the fumes of these poetry debauches? I presume that was on the basis of his conscious approach, he strikes an attitude and says, "Yon film producing and distributing firm looks — (and if someone tries to harpoon Fred Meyer for a $500 rental for a $100 picture he dreams of) — and reads him a little something from Reists or Browning.

When a patron leaves the theatre at North, N., and kicks to Jenkins about the tumb show, no doubt J. C. soothes the customer's wrath by making up an extension — a "B'Boom!" to the head! The business has always been clutched up with much patronage. The good ones are waited for with a tidal wave of pun poetry. What next?

Yours truly,

The Human Crab (alias)
LYRIC THEATRE, GOODMAN, Kan.

This reissue has not much pulling power. It is interesting only in that it compares favorably as to direction and treatment with pictures of today. — A. S. Widaman, Centennial theatre, Warsaw, Ind. — General patronage.

First National

The Hottentot, a Thomas H. Ince production. — Positively a riot and one of the fastest moving comedies we have seen for some time. — Brought in from the box office or the patrons' standpoint. It's a wonder with a capital W. — U. K. Rice, Auditorium theatre, Winston-Salem, N. C. — General patronage.

Lorna Doone, a Maurice Tourneur production. — Personally I thought it to be absolute classic. Those who have read the book are in possession of the proper interpretative art, and who hasn't read the book? The exhibitor who books this picture, and all the others who do, must take a lot of courage up with the schools. Maurice Tourneur may well be proud of Lorna Doone. — M. H. Hansen, New Victory theatre, Oregon, Calif. — General patronage.

Oliver Twist, with Jackie Coogan. — A screen masterpiece which is a tribute to the direction of Frank Lloyd and the wonderful work of Jackie. We paid more than this one, but couldn't find a better one. — No objection, a few dark scenes. — U. K. Rice, Auditorium theatre, Winston-Salem, N. C. — General patronage.

Sonny, with Richard Barthelmess. — Heart interest picture that sure pleased our lunch. Quite a few stopped to tell how much they enjoyed it. It certainly enjoyed it. — G. Stettmund, Jr., Odeon theatre, Chandler, Okla. — General patronage.

SONNY, with Richard Barthelmess. — Everyone kicked about this picture as they left the theatre. But the reason for doing so was, they said it should have lasted at least an hour longer. Would you be pleased? I guess yes. — E. G. HENSON, Opera House, Charles Town, W. Va. — General patronage.

Sonny, with Richard Barthelmess. — Wonderful picture if your patrons like war stuff. To poor business two days. — W. L. Uglow, Crystal theatre, Burlington, Ia. — General patronage.

The Eternal Flame, with Norma Talmadge. — When it comes to honesty-to-goodness acting Norma has them all backed off the boards. Please all who saw it. Should have played it the week before Christmas. Noma gets by in costume plays where others fall flat. Book it. One of the best of the year. — A. V. Stewart, Majestic theatre, Paris, Ill. — General patronage.

Kindred of the Dust, with Miriam Cooper. — Splendid, although a little too long. Would have been better in five reels. — M. W. Mattechecker, Liberty the at New Kent, Wash.—Neighborhood patronage.

Kindred of the Dust, with Miriam Cooper. Worth exploiting. Good business first day and came back strong second day. If you book it play it up.

Brawn of the North, with Strongheart. Although this is a very good picture, I do not think that it can be compared with The Silent Call. My patrons who had seen The Silent Call were disappointed. Those who had not seen Strongheart's previous picture thought this a knock-off. The story is not up to the story of The Silent Call for a picture starring the dog. Some wonderful scenic shots, and stellar work of H. R. and Lee Shumway. We did two days' good business at twenty-two and forty-four cents. —M. M. Hansen, Victory theatre, Oxnard, Calif.—Small town patronage.

Skin Deep, a Thomas H. Ince production. —Played two days. First day fair; second day much better. Picture advertised itself. Seemed to please all who saw it. Star excellent. —A. V. Stewart, Majestic theatre, Paris, Ill.—General patronage.

Skin Deep, a Thomas H. Ince production. —This one sure brings them in. A picture to suit the masses. You can't go wrong when the picture is by Mrs. W. J. Carter. Maxine theatre, Crosswell, Mich.—General patronage.

The Bond Boy, with Richard Barthelmess. —Very good. We liked Tol'able David better; so did our patrons. But The Bond Boy is easily a special. Good business four days at twenty-two and forty-four cents. —M. M. Hansen, Victory theatre, Oxnard, Calif.—Small town patronage.

Trouble, with Jackie Coogan. —Why go into a picture lesson about the title? Every exhibitor knows Jackie is a puller in any picture he is in. Trouble, the title, is the only trouble you'll have. —Play It—E. G. Henon, Opera house, Charles Town, W. Va.—Neighborhood patronage.

Domestic Relations, with Katherine MacDonald. —As a picture, this is the Bunker Hill. She has made worse, but I can't remember when. —M. M. Hansen, New Kent, Wash.—Small town patronage.

The Masquerader, with Guy Bates Post. —An excellent picture. Failed to draw the second day. Twenty and thirty-five cents. —W. L. Uglow, Crystal theatre, Burlington, Wis.—General patronage.

Hurricane's Gal, with Dorothy Phillips. —Splendid sea picture, but Phillips is no drawing card here. You can boost the "action and thrill" stuff to the limit. —E. W. Stewart, Majestic theatre, Paris, Ill.—General patronage.

The Crossroads of New York, a Mack Sennett production. —An extra fine high class comedy that pleases old and young. Highly recommended and favorable comments from my patrons. —M. J. Babin, Fairlyard theatre, White Castle, La.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Child Thou Gavest Me, with a special cast. —Here is a picture that should please any audience. The title did not draw, but story is great. The Child action is wonderful. —H. C. Reinhardt, Victory theatre, Bay City, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Child Thou Gavest Me, with a special cast. —One of the greatest pictures I ever ran, and pleased 100%. Come on with more just like this one. —Chas. Elliott, Jewel theatre, Sidney, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Rosary, with a special cast. —As good a picture as I ever played. Pleased everybody. Exceptionally good Sunday business. —J. A. Holmes, Arcade theatre, Holtville, Calif.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Rosary, with a special cast. —Too much Catholicism and sentiment that doesn't quite hit the spot. —David L. Mickey, Electric theatre, Anderson, Mo.—Small town patronage.

Hail the Woman, a Thomas H. Ince production. —My hat's off to Tom Ince. The greatest picture ever made, barring nothing. Ministers and priests alike urge pictures of this type to bring back the industry to where it belongs. Book it by all means. Don't make a son, but you should worry. It pleases everybody who saw it immensely. Eight reels. —F. W. Horrigan, McDonald theatre, Philsburg, Mont.—Medium patronage.

My Boy, with Jackie Coogan. —Better than Peck's Bad Boy. Ran this for benefit of Boy Scouts and pleased. Good lesson for boys in it. —A. C. Betts, Powers theatre, Creek, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

My Boy, with Jackie Coogan. —Very good indeed. Please run all of these Coogan pictures. Don't worry about anything but price. —F. P. Doyle, New Academy theatre, Nunda, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

My Boy, with Jackie Coogan. —Very good indeed. Please run all of these Coogan pictures. Don't worry about anything but price. —F. P. Doyle, New Academy theatre, Nunda, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Bits of Life, a Marshall Neilan production. —Booked for two days. Rolled after one. After seeing this picture the people didn't know where they were at. Some of them started out the back door. Exhibitors, lay off. —J. B. Hunter, Regent theatre, Charlotte, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Bits of Life, a Marshall Neilan production. —Absolutely the worst picture I have ever shown. Nothing to it at all. Over half of the audience walked out. I refunded money out the back door. Many. Don't run it by all means. —W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Tol'able David, with Richard Barthelmess. —Wonderful picture with great moral, but must say did not draw. Lost money both days. —J. S. Rex, Princess theatre, Wauseon, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

Tol'able David, with Richard Barthelmess. —An old one that will give satisfaction. —J. P. Doyle, New Academy theatre, Nunda, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Tol'able David, with Richard Barthelmess. —Splendid. None better. —M. W. Mattechek, Liberty theatre, Kennewick, Wash.—Neighborhood patronage.

Penrod, a Marshall Neilan production. —This is a dandy kid picture. Clean and full of laughs. —David Hess, Princess theatre, Del Norte, Colo.—General patronage.

Slin' through, with Norma Talmadge. —A great picture that will please almost everyone. It is indeed one of the best pictures on the market. Get the best people out to see this one. It will help your house. —J. P. Doyle, New Academy theatre, Nunda, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Slin' through, with Norma Talmadge. —A great picture that will please almost everyone. It is indeed one of the best pictures on the market. Get the best people out to see this one. It will help your house. —J. P. Doyle, New Academy theatre, Nunda, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Slin' through, with Norma Talmadge. —A great picture that will please almost everyone. It is indeed one of the best pictures on the market. Get the best people out to see this one. It will help your house. —J. P. Doyle, New Academy theatre, Nunda, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

For Next Vacation

Here are ten pictures to make you money for your vacation this summer:

"The Old Homestead."

"The Headless Horseman."

"Heaven Deep.

"The Storm."

"Human Hearts."

"The Impossible Mrs. Bellew."

"Bags to Riches."

"Who Are My Parents?"

"Manslaughter."

Fire up your boiler and use all of the steam. Put pep behind these pictures and you are bound to make it on high.

Charles Blaine, Morgan and Yale theatre, Henryetta, Okla.

Exhibitor Review

HEARTS AFLAME (Metro), with Frank Keenan.—Just saw this one and, Boys, it's a real-honest-to-goodness picture.

Get it and go the limit. Get them in and this will please 100 per cent.

—JACK CAIRNS, Brooklyn theatre, Detroit, Mich.

all the profit.—E. J., Laqua, Gem theatre, Hankinson, N. D.—General patronage.

Smilin' Through, with Norma Talmadge.—The box office receipts on this picture did not come up to expectations, in spite of a great deal of extra advertising. The picture appeals to the better class of patrons. If you have enough of that class and expect them to come in, it is certainly worth showing, if bought at a reasonable price. I paid $30 and ran it January 1 and 2 and did more advertising than on any picture since Sheik. We charged fifteen and thirty-five cents.—A. N. Miles, Emience theatre, Emience, Ky.—Small town patronage.

Smilin' Through, with Norma Talmadge.—It is everything that has been said about it. Sweet story. Acting best ever. Pleased all. Too bad we can't show more pictures like this one. Show it by all means. Can't go wrong.—David Hess, Princess theatre, Del Norte, Colo.—General patronage.

Smilin' Through, with Norma Talmadge.—So much has been said for this production that I cannot find words to express our opinion. It is a great picture as ever made, to please the masses. We advertised it heavily and it stood up to all the expectations. We are sending our way to the Hiraal, as we did a wonderful business.—C. H. Powers, Strand theatre, Dunsmuir, Calif.—R. R. town patronage. (See Theatre Depart.)

The Half Breed, with a special cast.—Women did not like this, but some men said it was good. Very much divided in opinion. It did not get the sympathy of the average fan.—B. C. Brown, Temple theatre, Viroqua, Wis.—General patronage.

Devotion, with a special cast.—This is one I had to buy to get some others that I wanted. Never again. It's the bunk.—A. F. Kehr, Princess theatre, Ogallala, Neb.—General patronage.

One Clear Call, with a special cast.—Our patrons certainly enjoyed this picture, and hesitated not to tell us so. Coming through all of the K. K. trouble in Louisiana, gave us plenty of opportunity to hook up our Night Riders with front page stories. Walhall does Slim and Miss Windsor.—M. M. Hansen, Victory theatre, Oxnard, Calif.—Small town patronage.

The Silent Call, with Strongheart.—Very fine picture. The dog is great in this. Do not be afraid of this one. Boost it.—W. W. Boden, Ralston, Neb.—Cozad, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Courage, with a special cast.—Say, fellows, a special at a program price. No kicks here from Sunday evening crowd. Everyone satisfied, which is something. That is, no one said that they thought otherwise to me.—Howard R. Sprague, Park theatre, Nashville, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Nomads of the North, with a special cast.—Here is a picture that will stand a raise in admission. Can be bought at a price to show a profit. It will please 99%.—J. W. Doyle, New Academy theatre, Rosita, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Lotus Eaters, with John Barrymore.—A picture hard to beat. Don't fail to book this one. 100% picture.—Chas. Elliott, Jewell theatre, Soleil, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Molly O., with Mabel Normand.—First National sold us this old baby on a basis that if the picture did not make good they would. First National is going to make good, perhaps. Temple theatre, Ilion, N. Y.—General patronage.

The Ten Dollar Raise, with a special cast.—A good picture that failed to draw. In fact, it did not get our film rental.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Fox

Monte Cristo, with John Gilbert.—Played three nights in a regular two day town against big advertising campaign and business, good first two nights. Fair last night.—W. W. McClellan, Dreamland theatre, L'ekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Bells of San Juan, with Charles Jones.—Went over big. Jones always goes a house.—W. W. McClellan, Dreamland theatre, L'ekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Monte Cristo, with John Gilbert.—Please don't book this picture. We'll try it next time.—L. D. Jones, Star theatre, Malad City, Idaho.—General patronage.

Lights of New York, with a special cast.—Nothing to it. Leave it alone.—L. D. Jones, Star theatre, Malad City, Idaho.—General patronage.

Lights of the Desert, with Shirley Mason.—Star well liked here. This picture did not use as good an effect as did Slim and Miss Windsor.—M. M. Hansen, Victory theatre, Oxnard, Calif.—Small town patronage.

The Silent Call, with Strongheart.—Very fine picture. The dog is great in this. Do not be afraid of this one. Boost it.—W. W. Boden, Ralston, Neb.—Cozad, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Courage, with a special cast.—Say, way of putting it over so that it takes good.—D. L. Pearsall, Nineveh Community House, Nineveh, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Oathbound, with Dustin Farnum.—A fine action picture. Exhibitors need not be afraid of this one. Russell is daily gaining in popularity here.—D. L. Pearsall, Community House, Nineveh, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

My Friend the Devil, with a special cast.—Good picture but not as good as Monte Cristo.—L. D. Jones, Star theatre, Malad City, Idaho.—General patronage.

Money to Burn, with William Russell.—A splendid picture. Exhibitors need not be afraid of this one. Russell is daily gaining in popularity here.—D. L. Pearsall, Community House, Nineveh, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fast Mail, with a special cast.—Not a special by any means. Just an over grown serial.—L. D. Jones, Star theatre, Malad City, Idaho.—General patronage.

Riding With Death, with Charles Jones.—Rather spectacular, but that's what Western fans want.—Levi G. Durco, Browne theatre, Limestone, Me.—Small town patronage.

Very Truly Yours, with Shirley Mason.—Good program picture. Mason is sure a real star.—G. Durban, Majestic theatre, Perry, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Rough Shod, with Charles Jones.—On the poorest night of the week, Jones pulled them in to an even break. A good Western, big price thirty and fifteen cents.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—Small town patronage.

Shame, with John Gilbert.—Good picture, but awfully long. Chinese setting very well done if you like it. Virgin's Paradise took better with our patrons.—Geo. W. Ferguson & Son, Royal theatre, Fairmount, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The Last Trail, with a special cast.—Splendid picture. Did good business on two day run. Motor house.—Frank Starkey, theatre, Wauseon, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

Without Fear, with Pearl White.—
Fine. They all will like this.—E. G. Wilson, Opera House, Odell, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Virgin Paradise, with Pearl White.—Here is one fine picture. Very good story sprinkled with comedy. Pearl is a great drawing card here, although her name appears on none of the advertising on this picture.—H. C. Reinhardt, Victory theatre, Bay City, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Self Made Man, with William Russell.—A good program picture that will please all. Enough comedy to make it good. Don't be afraid of this one.—R. C. Schmidt, Palace theatre, Lone Pine, Nebr.—General patronage.

Over the Hill, with Mary Carr.—Little late in running this, but got good business in spite of bad weather.—M. E. Ames, Pastime theatre, Jefferson, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

Men of Zanzibar, with William Russell.—Have good satisfaction here. Had several compliments on it. Print good.—M. D. Foster, Gem theatre, Williamsburg, Kan.—Neighborhood patronage.

Men of Zanzibar, with William Russell.—A good Saturday night picture. Something different, too, that they like.—G. Duke, Movie theatre, Perry, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Elope if You Must, with Eileen Percy.—Very good picture that is all action. Please.—D. Angel, C. Reinhardt, Victory theatre, Bay City, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Stage Romance, with William Farnum.—This was the best I ever got like it.—E. G. Wilson, Opera House, Odell, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Up and Going, with Tom Mix.—Mix always draws for me. Everybody pleased.—Brothers, back all Mix pictures.—O. W. McClellan, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Queen of Sheba, with Betty Bytho.—Biggest and best surprise I ever got in business. Both as for picture itself, which I thought great (so did patrons) and also broke records held by Over the Hill. Three nights to packed houses. Where do they get that stuff about "no good for small towns?" Ideal.—Howard & Camille theatre, Nashville, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Goldwyn

Brothers Under the Skin, with a special cast.—As keen and entertaining as intelligent direction and capable acting could make it. In fact it scored far better with my patrons than many of the recent "specials" I have shown. I class this production as first rate entertainment.—John B. RIch, Myrtle theatre, Lewiston, Mont.—General patronage.

Brothers Under the Skin, with a special cast.—A good comedy, but did not rate enough to make a good showing at the box office. The title failed to sell to the skin. The acting good and settings rich, but story old. A very satisfactory picture however. Not likely to be disappointed.—B. C. Brown, Empress theatre, Viroqua, Wis.—General patronage.

A Blind Bargain, with Lon Chaney.—Played to very poor business. As we have said before, Chaney is a wonderful box office actor, but not good for a sick six o'clock. Please.—D. Angel, C. Reinhardt, Victory theatre, Radford, Va.—Small town patronage.

Hold Your Horses, with Tom Moore.—This is clean cut wholesome entertainment liked by everyone. Good picture to show children.—O. W. McClellan, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Wet Gold, with a special cast.—Good program picture. Patrons were divided as to whether good or bad. Brothers don't pay much for it.—O. W. McClellan, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Bunty Pulls the Strings, with a special cast.—No good. Nothing to it. Wasn't even entertaining.—D. W. McIlvan, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Branding Iron, with Barbara Castleton.—A good clean story that will please all. Picture of Western type. Don't be afraid of this one. It will go over in any house.—H. G. Schmidt, Palace theatre, Lone Pine, Nebr.—General patronage.

Watch Your Step, with Cullen Landis.—Fine. Everybody pleased. Star a favorite here.—J. B. Laughlin, Bart's Mecca, Midland, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Poverty of Riches, with a special cast.—A good clean picture and will please all.—J. A. Holmes, Arcade theatre, Holtsville, Cal.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Poverty of Riches, with a special cast.—Great picture. Better than many of the so-called specials, but did not do up to my expectations. Must, will not go over.—Paul L. Shew, Rivoli theatre, Clinton, Ind.—General patronage.

The Man with Two Mothers, with Cullen Landis.—Just an average program picture, although stars work hard to make most of week story.—H. C. Reinhardt, Victory theatre, Bay City, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Dangerous Curve Ahead, with a special cast.—Good picture. Drew well, but have had pictures at half the price that pleased as well.—David L. Mickey, Electric theatre, Anderson, Mo.—Small town patronage.

Madame X, with Pauline Frederick.—Here is another good one. Every move and act a meaning. Every exhibitor should show this one.—Henry Saubers, Fad theatre, Fairlax, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari, with a special cast.—Advertised this one as a penny picture and told them to stay away. Had one of the best days of the season. If you know the picture to be poor just tell them so and you will make friends and good patrons.—H. F. Sembler, Colonial theatre, Radford, Va.—Small town patronage.

Roads of Destiny, with Pauline Frederick.—Very poor. Did not please 50%.—H. C. Reinhardt, Victory theatre, Bay City, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Old Nest, with a special cast.—So much has been said about this one that about all we can add is that no better feature has been produced. Draws like a mustard plaster and came near breaking our house records. Our advice is to play it. You'll clean up.—C. E. Johnson, Paramount theatre, Gibbon, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Old Nest, with a special cast.—
Lost hard on this. Not a small town picture, but a picture that gives a great deal of praise and that's about all. It's worthy of it, but it makes it cost too much.—David L. Mickey, Electric theatre, Anderson, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pardon My French, with Vivian Martin.—This is a companion picture to Mr. Barnes of New York, Head Over Heels and Always the Woman. This, I mean it is as good or not good as. This company sure dished up a fine bunch of dill pickles on the tail end of their franchise last year. One of the beauties of a franchise is that it enables a producer to unload all the old junk he has had shelved for years on an innocent and unsuspecting audience. Also, what producer has what he thinks is an extra good one, like The Sin Flood for instance, he hands it out and holds it for a good price. Then they all tell us we ought to get together and dwell in brotherly love. — Wm. H. Creel, Suburban theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hodkinson

Bull Dog Drummond, with a special cast.—On the order of business, we were sent over a good—C. B. Laughlin, Bart's Mecca, Midland, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Headless Horseman, with Will Rogers, is another amusing picture turned out. The director has given much attention to costuming and to proper staging. I regard it as a valuable contribution to the collection of so-called "historical" productions. My patronage liked it very much.—John B. Ritch, Myrtle theatre, Lewiston, Mont.—General patronage.

The Headless Horseman, with Will Rogers.—Fairly good offering. Pleased about 90%. Don't raise prices.—J. H. Hungerford, Family theatre, Friend, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Slim Shoulcers, with Irene Castle.—Satisfactory offering, no record breaker, but sold at a fair price.—R. V. Erk, Big Ben theatre, Iliam, N. Y.—General patronage.

Keeping Up with Lizzie, with Enid Bennett.—A good comedy-drama which draws and pleases. Play it if you can get a good print, but the one sent us had outlived its usefulness long ago.—C. E. Johnson, Paramount theatre, Gibbon, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Cameron of the Royal Mounted, with a special cast.—Not a very good draw as well as bad. Zane Grey pictures. A dandy picture.—Johnson Bros., Johnison theatre, Kipley, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Desert Gold, with a special cast.—A good program picture at a fair price that drew real business. Made money.—R. V. Erk, Big Ben theatre, Iliam, N. Y.—General patronage.

Riders of the Dawn, with a special cast.—This is one of the popular Zane Grey stories which has good drawing power. The films were in a deplorable condition and the theater have been junked a long time ago.—C. E. Johnson, Paramount theatre, Gibbon, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Mysterious Rider, with a special cast.—This pleased us 100%. In fact, anything by Zane Grey will pull for me. You cannot go wrong on this one, and Hodkinson is right on the price.—H. F. Sembler, Colonial theatre, Radford, Va.—Small town patronage.

The Mysterious Rider, with a special cast.—Drew well and pleased, as do all Zane Grey's. We do not get extra good ones from Hodkinson. The good of the reels are not in good shape.—John Bros., Johnsonian theatre, Kipley, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Lichtman

Shadows, with Lon Chaney.—A real production picture. Would have knocked them over, but half-made showing week late. Everybody who sees it will boost. Personally believe that "Yen Sin" as good production ever.—George Zinzl, Harbor theatre, Corpus Christi, Tex.—General patronage.

Rich Men's Wives, with House Peters.—It's a good picture, but not worth what they make the exhibitors pay in rental.—Vernon Loecey, Temple theatre, Howell, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Rich Men's Wives, with a special cast.—Pleased all who came to see it. Work of little Dick Hendrix wonderful, curious, and work. Business fair.—E. L. Lapp, Gen theatre, Hankinson, N. D.—General patronage.

Metro

Quincy Adams Sawyer, with a special cast.—Good and sold out at a fair price. Has held up its type since Way Down East.—Pleased everyone.—R. V. Erk, Big Ben theatre, Iliam, N. Y.—General patronage.

Enter Madame, with Clara Kimball Young.—At times Clara Kimball registers in this with a sincerity that gets the attention of the looker, but for the most part the picture is draggy and will never go over. I am free to confess that I noticed some who even had a nice sound sleep during the showing. It is a crime the way we are handicapped in this business, as many pre-reviews said this was a good one. Business fair for two days.—W. H. Brown, Col theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

Turn to the Right, a Rex Ingram production.—Strictly 100% with my patrons. No one will ever regret playing this one. You can boost it and do not have to hide when show is over.—E. G. Henso, Opera House, Charles Town, W. Va.—Neighborhood patronage.

Missing Hubards, with a special cast.—Pooorest picture I have ever run. They should have recognized in production, even though I didn't make money on it.—Jack Cairns, Brooklyn theatre, Detroit, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Prisoner of Zenda, a Rex Ingram production.—Just fine. A story played by a gifted group of actors. Would be an ideal show for a picture exchange, even though business dropped second and third day. Great attraction for the patron who reads the best of literature and can take logical ending.—A. V. Stewart, Majestic theatre, Paris, Ill.—General patronage.

The Prisoner of Zenda, a Rex Ingram production.—One of the greatest pictures ever made, but the motion picture patron always has been educated too much, except high endings. Business dropped second and third day. Great attraction for the patron who reads the best of literature and can take logical ending.—A. V. Stewart, Majestic theatre, Paris, Ill.—General patronage.

The Prisoner of Zenda, a Rex Ingram production.—I believe this is one of the best pictures ever thrown on our screen. However, it did not attract as well as it had been covered as yet. Perfect cast, direction and acting of the highest type. If your town will stand this brand of pictures, buy the prices they ask.—F. W. Illor, Mcdonald theatre, Phillipsburg, Mont.—Ming town patronage.

Broadway Rose, with Mae Murray.—No upt to other recent pictures with same star. Business poor after the first night.—R. V. Erk, Big Ben theatre, Iliam, N. Y.—General patronage.

Kisses, with Alice Lake.—Am a little late playing this. Nevertheless it pleased all who came. Stormy weather; audience small. We have only had two-week sells in this section since winter, came—C. A. Riva, Pastime theatre, Tilton N. H.—Small town patronage.

Glass Heroes, with Viola Dana.—Good comedy-drama that will go over any where. Viola Dana is very good in this one.—H. G. Schmidt, Palace theatre, Viborg, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Seizing's Believing, with Viola Dana.—One of the best and most pleasing program pictures we have seen this year.—John Leather Pushers (new) and Pathe News program pleased everybody. Fair business.—George Zinzl, Harbor theatre, Corpus Christi, Tex.—General patronage.

Fascinating Murray.—A wonderful picture in every sense of the word. Many liked it better than Peacock Alley. Fair business and no problems at all. Exchange got it, but don't pay too much.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Little Eva Ascents, with Garet Hughes.—Title injures patronage because people believe it a fairy story. Picture is really delightful, but the title is the reason.—Rosenfield Hopp & Co. Majestic theatre, Rock Island, Ill.—General patronage.

Little Eva Ascents, with Garet Hughes.—A dandy plot brought an abundance of favorable comments. Kept them interested and made them laugh.—J. L. Micks, Opera House, Davenport, Ia.—General patronage.

Small town patronage.

Peacock Alley, Fascination, with Ma
PEG O' MY HEART, with Lurette Taylor.—Come on all you producers of 57 varieties, and try to even tie this one. It can't be done. It's worth the price of the film rental to the poor old exhibitor to have the chance to watch his audience while PEG is being run.

The plot, the eye, the laughter, and Ma leaps over and nudges Pa, and Elmer puts Myrtle's hand, and younger generation boils with glee, for they are seeing something new and, Oh, so good and different.

Next night the rest of the family comes, and if you run it long enough, the whole town will see it, for it's worth it.

I say to every exhibitor this journal reaches, show PEG O' MY HEART if you can book it.—JOHN B. RITCH, Myrtle theatre, Lewis-ville, Mich.

Fighting Mad, with William Desmond.

An action picture that carries a good lean story, one that entertains from beginning to end. While a Western type will go over in houses that cater to the so-called better class, as that is what we cater to and it went over big here, reaching average house the first day to be the average second.—W. H. Brenner, Joy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General announcement.

Uncharted Seas, with Alice Lake—
Good picture. Valentino playing in it exploits draw. Film was in bad condition.—
J. C. Reinhardt, Victory theatre, Bay
City, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Right That Failed, with Bert Lyt-ill.—Pretty fair picture. The going it is nothing extra as the photography is so dark in the first part of it that 75 amperes would not bring it out; and the light is D. C. too.—C. H. Power, Strand theatre, Dunsmuir, Calif.—
R. town patronage.

The Man Who, with Bert Lytill—tory pretty good. It is one of the high out of living after the war. Just fancy old one that Metro makes us play to take or deposit money.—H. C. Reinhardt, Innards theatre, Bay City, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Hole in the Wall, with Alice Lake.
Bad weather. A very good picture, well acted by those who saw it.—Edw. W.
Cerne, Windsor theater, Canton, Ohio.
Neighborhood patronage.

The Great Redeemer, with a special cast.—Western drama, a good one. Ran on Sunday and well suited for same.— Star theatre, Sandusky, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Four Horsemen, a Rex Ingram production.—All that has been said is right. It is a box office hit. Spent real money advertising it and netted morthan is customary here.—J. P. Doyle,
New Academy theatre, Nunda, N. Y.—
Neighborhood patronage.

The Four Horsemen, a Rex Ingram production.—Wonderful picture of its kind, but did not get me any money on account of high rental. It is liable to create war prejudices that should be forgotten. It is one very poor as business-getters. Ending of play brutal and disappointing. Two cousins facing each other on battlefield and killed, one the hero of the play. Love theme in play not ideal, heroine being married.—Star theatre, Sandusky, Mich.—Small town
patronage.

JOHN GILBERT's latest production for Fox is "Truxton King," based on a George McCutcheon story. Jerome Storm directed it.

Pathé

Dr. Jack, with Harold Lloyd.—Some picture. Exhibitors, grab it. Advertise big, and you'll do big. Advertised bill boards, newspapers; 24 sheet makes swell cut out. Good stunt picture.—R. L. Beller, Royal Theatre, Garrett, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Without Benefit of Clergy, with a special cast.—Good picture, but too heavy for small town. Please about 50 per cent.—J. H. Hungerford, Family Theatre, Friend, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Dices of Destiny, with H. B. Warner.
A very good program picture.—A. C.
Betts, Powers Theatre, Red Creek, N. Y.
—Small town patronage.

Nanook of the North, with a special cast.—Very well liked. Something out of the ordinary. Scenes were good.—
David Hess, Iris Theatre, Monte Vista, Colo.—General patronage.

The Sage Hen, an Edgar Lewis production.—Some of my patrons liked this better than The Three Musketeers. A very good picture and very touching.—
A. C. Betts, Powers Theatre, Red Creek,
N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Paramount

Back Home and Broke, with Thomas Meighan.—A comedy-drama of the type that patrons delight to see and boost, and brings in extra business.—Rosenfeld,
Hopp & Co., Fort Armstrong Theatre,
Rock Island, Ill.—General patronage.

When Knighthood Was in Flower, with Marion Davies.—This picture broke all records for past two years. A wonderful production and could have held it aver another day.—A. S. Widaman, Centennial Theatre, War-saw, Ind.—General
patronage.

Singed Wings, with Bebe Daniels.—As good a picture as could be made; credit to star, producer, director, and of some prestige to the theatre that shows same.
—J. Carbonell, Monroe Theatre, Key West, Fla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Outcast, with Elsie Ferguson.—An average picture which drew much better than we had any reason to expect. Many thought it the best Ferguson has made for quite a while.—U. K. Rice, Broadway.

production.—Very good. Invited the ministers and his wife to see this one. They complimented the picture. Business fair.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic Theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Loves of Pharaoh, with a special cast.—No cheese factory should be without this brand, speaking from a boxoffice standpoint. Would go all right in the old country, but our patrons don't like this "square-head" square.—A. V. Stewart, Majestic Theatre, Paris, Ill.—General patronage.

The Loves of Pharaoh, with a special cast.—They stayed away from it, as it is not their genre, but the sets are wonderful and acting adequate. I can't put over any picture of this kind.—S. M. Southworth, The American Theatre, Canton, Ohio.—Neighborhood and college patronage.

North of the Rio Grande, with Jack Holt.—Good Western. Failed to do me any good financially, however.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic Theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Face in the Fog, with Lionel Barrymore.—Fair to good picture if your patrons like Blackie's stories.—T. A. Shea, Palace Theatre, McGehee, Ark.—General patronage.

The Face in the Fog, with Lionel Barrymore.—Very poor picture for my town. Pleased about 15 per cent.—L. D. Jones, Stage Theatre, Malad City, Idaho.—General patronage.

Her Husband's Trademark, with Gloria Swanson.—Please those who saw it. Lost money on it, but it was not the fault of the picture.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic Theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

A Bachelor Daddy, with Thomas Meigan.—This is one of those worth-while pictures. Very good. In seven reels.—Dien Reynolds, Pearl Theatre, Hymera, Ind.—Small town patronage.

A Bachelor Daddy, with Thomas Meigan.—This came as close to pleasing 100 per cent of my people as anything I have ever shown. They talked about it for days after.—F. P. Russell, Russell Theatre, Somerset, Ohio.—Small town patronage.

A Bachelor Daddy, with Thomas Meigan.—About as good as you can find to please all classes. Good clean comedy, brought to you with a good moral.—A. sprading, Opera House, Merna, Neb.—General patronage.

A Bachelor Daddy, with Thomas Meigan.—About as good as you can find to please all classes. Good clean comedy, brought to you with a good moral.—A. sprading, Opera House, Merna, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Bachelor Daddy, with Thomas Meigan.—About as good as you can find to please all classes. Good clean comedy, brought to you with a good moral.—A. sprading, Opera House, Merna, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Beauty Shop, with R. Hitchcock.—Punk. As a screen actor this gent is off color. Lay off this one.—Jack Cairns, Brooklyn Theatre, Detroit, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Beauty Shop, with Raymond Hitchcock.—Don't buy it; it's terrible.—W. L. Uglow, Crystal Theatre, Burlington, Wis.—General patronage.

Bought and Paid For, with Jack Holt.—Lacked punch. Special only in price. Over advertised.—M. W. Mattecheck, Liberty Theatre, Kennewick, Wash.—Neighborhood patronage.

Over the Border, with Betty Compson.—Very good. Better than most program pictures. Dandy snow scenes.—Jack Cairns, Brooklyn Theatre, Detroit, Mich.—General patronage.

Over the Border, with Betty Compson.—Pleased the majority. Good scenery. The story is an anti-prohibition one. The bootleggers get the sympathy of the audience. Business good.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic Theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Room and Board, with Constance Binney.—A small crowd enjoyed this dandy comedy very much.—Johnson Bros., Johnsonian Theatre, Ripley, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

The Great Moment, with Gloria Swanson.—Played this Christmas Day with Harold Lloyd in Number Please and satisfied a big crowd at fifteen and thirty-five cents. Gloria has a story to back up her looks and her clothes in this picture.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky.—Small town patronage.

The Great Moment, with Gloria Swanson.—If this star is known to your patrons get this picture. Pleased 100 per cent.—Edw. W. Werner, Windsor Theatre, Canton, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Spanish Jade, with David Powell.—They will like this picture, if you can get them in on it. I couldn't.—W. L. Uglow, Crystal Theatre, Burlington, Wis.—General patronage.

The Call of the North, with Jack Holt.—As good as most Curbwoods. I made a cleaning and Paramount does not ask all they expect you will take in.—Vernon Lacey, Temple Theatre, Howell, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Fool's Paradise, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—Good picture. Will satisfy the average picture fan. We raised prices and did a little better than our regular business.—Walter Musson, Queen's Theatre, Hesperal, Ont., Canada.—Small town patronage.

Fool's Paradise, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—One of the best ever played in my house. The picture pleased everybody. When you get a show like this one, dig down and work—get the dear public in, and they will be glad they came.—E. G. Henson, Opera House, Charles Town, W. Va.—Neighborhood patronage.

Fool's Paradise, Saturday Night, Cecil B. De Mille production.—Two of the most remarkable pictures ever run. Entertainment value far above the average. Don't buy new pictures at high rental and let these go by. Advanced adult price from twenty-five to thirty cents. Bought reasonably and made some money. Ran without short stuff and gave satisfaction.—Star Theatre, Sandusky, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Deep Waters, with a special cast.—Good. Something different, they all say.—Helen Dresler, Star Theatre, Crofton, Neb.—Small town patronage.

The Ordeal, with Agnes Ayres.—A very good program picture.—J. A. Holmes, Arcade Theatre, Halfville, Cal.—Neighborhood patronage.

Experience, with Richard Barthelmess.—Christmas week would have been a losing one had it not been for this ex-
Selznick

One Week of Love, with Elaine Ham-...ersten.—Great picture: in fact it is...n!-large town patronage.

Pawed, with Tom Moore.—A very...very crook picture which failed to...in better pictures, more suitable to his...C. K. Rice, Broadway Theatre, Winston-Salem, N. C.—Transient patronage.

The Referee, with Conway T...—Good.—E. G. Wilson, Opera House, Ogdell, Noh.—Neighborhood patronage.

Bucking the Tiger, with Conway T...—Slow moving affair. Too much gambling scenes. Detrimental to industry...George Murphy, Majestic Theatre, Ft. Sumner, N. Mex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Man of Stone, with Conway T...—Fair program picture. Will get by if...your patrons like desert scenes. Comments fifty-fifty on this one.—F. E. Hal...lief, Olympic Theatre, Lenox, Iowa.—General patronage.

The Way of a Maid, with Elaine Ham...ersten.—Good picture. Played on bad...business, but so few of picture. Received good comments from ones that saw it.—Geo. W. Ferguson & Son, Royal Theatre, Fairmount, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Evidence, with Elaine Hammer...sten.—Well dressed and interesting picture with very little action. Cannot get them in...see Hammersten. Must have action and so shown on the posters.—P. G. Vaughan, Royal Theatre, Lees Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Reported Missing, with Owen Moore...—dramatic loss. People walked out on it...the first time in history of the house.—L. D. Jones, Star Theatre, Malad City, Idaho.—Neighborhood patronage.

John Smith, with Eugene O'Brien...—Very good comedy-drama mystery picture...O'Brien does not draw for me, but consider this the best I've used.—P. G. Vaughan, Royal Theatre, Lees Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Experimental Marriage, with Constance Talmadge—Reissue. Nice little picture...good work. This star pleases but does not draw for me.—P. G. Vaughn, Royal Theatre, Lees Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

The New Moon, with Norma Talmadge.—Wonderful picture.—E. G. Wilson, Opera House, Ogdell, Noh.—Neighborhood patronage.

Panthea, with Norma Talmadge—Poor...story. Small town does not like this...of stuff, regardless of star.—Will J. Beche, Candor Theatre, Candor, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Silk Stockings, with Constance Tal...—Fair. Some comedy in this...People said it wasn't the best.—E. G. Wilson, Opera House, Ogdell, Noh.—Neighborhood patronage.
United Artists

Tess of the Storm Country, with Mary Pickford.—Grossed more than any picture I ever played. Three days to wonderful business. J. A. Walsh, Sourwine Theatre, Brazil, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Ruling Passion, with George Arliss.—Talk means nothing. One of the best exhibits in years. Many patrons declared it the picture they had ever seen. Raise your admission price.—J. P. Doyle, New Academy Theatre, Nunda, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Tailor Made Man, with Charles Ray.—Clever comedy drama. Excellent business. Many, good comments.—T. A. Walsh, Sourwine Theatre, Brazil, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Love Light, with Mary Pickford.—First time, I ever heard majority of patrons show enthusiasm over Pickford's work. Because she played "grown-up" part, some said.—Levi G. Durepo, Busine Theatre, Lyons, Mo.—Small town patronage.

Through the Back Door, with Mary Pickford.—A very good picture. It will please.—J. P. Doyle, New Academy Theatre, Nunda, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Three Musketeers, with Douglas Fairbanks.—Ran this two days. Saturday was stormy and the next was fair, but did not do the business we expected to do with this. Ran fifty-fifty.—A. H.precedented, Red Creek, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

The Three Musketeers, with Douglas Fairbanks.—Very good picture. Did big business first two days, but fell off third. Enjoyed by all.—R. L. Beiler, Royal Theatre, Garrett, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Three Musketeers, with Douglas Fairbanks.—A big special with all kinds of action. For some unknown reason did not get the dough. Played percentage and had to charge more than my patrons want to pay.—J. P. Doyle, New Academy Theatre, Nunda, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Three Musketeers, with Douglas Fairbanks.—One of Doug's best pictures. Went over good. Small attendance for such a big picture.—A. F. Kehl, Princess Theatre, Ogallala, Neb.—General patronage.

Way Down East, a D. W. Grifhith production.—A wonderful picture. Grab it off and then boom it to the limit. I cannot think of any class that will not like it. Played it percentage.—J. P. Doyle, New Academy Theatre, Nunda, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Universal

The Kentucky Derby, with Reginald Denny.—One of the best Jewels of the past season. Of course race horse story is the same as the general line of stories of this kind, but drew to a good box office for two days.—E. J. Haley, Hillside Theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Another Man's Shoes, with Herbert Rawlinson.—Good picture, good plot and plenty of humor. The work of Rawlinson and Bedford fine. Can't go wrong on his for a good program picture.—E. J. Aquia, Gem Theatre, Hankinson, N. D.—General patronage.

Under Two Flags, with Priscilla Dean.—Very good picture. Worthy of raise admission price. Think it would have been still better had a few scenes near and been cut shorter.—J. P. Doyle, New Academy Theatre, Nunda, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Don't Shoot, with Herbert Rawlinson.—A good average six-reel program show.—Olen Reynolds, Pearl Theatre, Hymera, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Forsaking All Others, with Cullen Landis.—Way above, head and shoulders, in fact, the ordinary program picture, although we thought it as such. Landis is getting to have quite a following here and, although we showed this on our poorest night, Monday, we showed it in business and pleased the majority.—M. Hansen, Oxnard, Calif.—Small town patronage.

THE STORM, with House Peters.—Played THE STORM in a storm to turn day business. Second night almost as good. Patrons pronounced it the best ever.—C. A. RIVA, Pastime theatre, Tilton, N. H.

Bidin' Wild, with Hoot Gibson.—A good picture but not the usual Gibson action. The only action is in the last two reels. I'm afraid Universal is going to do Hoot as to all other Western stars, and that is to start dressing them up in dude clothes.—J. W. Andreessen, Rialto Theatre, Cozad, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Married Flapper, with Marie Prevost.—Good little picture with some drama, some fun and action.—S. M. Snow, American Theatre, Canton, N. Y.—Neighborhood and college patronage.

The Long Chance, with a special cast.—Good program picture that pleased all those who saw it.—Gus Cook, Crystal Theatre, Dundee, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Wolf Law, with Frank Mayo.—You will have to hand it to Frank Mayo. He's there with the goods. Can always rely on shouts with the manly star. In a class by himself.—J. F. Sanderson, Jr., Strand Theatre, Winchester, Va.—Neighborhood patronage.

Wolf Law, with Frank Mayo.—Only fault I have to find with this picture is that the lighting is poor in a number of places. A Missouri story that seemed to take well here. Mayo reminds me of Valentine in this one. Ladies like his looks.—P. G. Vaughan, Royal Theatre, Lees Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Lone Hand, with Hoot Gibson.—The first three reels were a riot. Had half a house when show started, but soon the S. R. O. sign was out. Gibson has a 100 per cent following here.—E. J. Holben, Olympic Theatre, Lenox, Iowa.—General patronage.

The Lone Hand, with Hoot Gibson.—A crackerjack comedy action Western. A very good flood scene in this one. Photography very good. Did not draw, as we ran it week before Christmas, and Hoot a new one for me.—P. G. Vaughan, Royal Theatre, Lees Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Lone Hand, with Hoot Gibson.—Consider this one of the best Hoot has made and have run them all. Plenty of thrills, action, and enough comedy to make it quite entertaining.—E. J. Haley, Hillside Theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Her Night of Nights, with Marie Prevost.—Dandy little picture. Please.—J. B. Laughlin, Barton's Mecca, Midland, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—A very good picture, but paid too much money. Better than program picture and is worthy of extended run.—J. A. Holmes, Arcade Theatre, Holtville, Cal.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—Very fine. Get it early and advertise it like a circus. Your patrons will thoroughly enjoy it.—Jack Cairns, Brooklyn Theatre.

DOUGLAS MACLEAN inadvertently walks off with a fireman's hat and checks it in the cloak room. A scene from "Bell Boy 13" a new First National feature.
Detroit—Neighborhood patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—Best of the year. Went strong here. Book it strong.—E. G. Wilson, Opera House, Odell, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—Don't be afraid to go after this one. One of the best pictures Universal has released.—J. P. Doyle, New Academy Theatre, Nunda, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—Drew a little better than average business for two nights, week after Christmas, against Legion ball game. Scenery and forest fire very good. Story interesting. Seemed to please.—P. G. Vaughan, Royal Theatre, Lees Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Trimmed, with Hoot Gibson.—Good entertainment. Comedy, action and animal life enough to make it good. Clear throughout and the kind of a picture small town patrons like. Play it up, even to a free kid matinee, and give your people satisfaction.—Will L. Beebe, Candor Theatre, Candor, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

A Dangerous Game, with Gladys Walton.—Fair program picture. Will please the Walton fans. Having read the story I find that they have left out some of the best parts.—F. E. Holben, Olympic Theatre, Lenox, Iowa.—General patronage.

Human Hearts, with House Peters.—Very fine old-time melodrama. Fine plot, fine scenes, sober humor, fine acting. If you can buy this as a lesser special do so; if you have to pay top special prices do not. We charged forty and fifteen cents, but high cost caused us to break exactly even.—Philip Rand, Rex Theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

Human Hearts, with House Peters.—The salesman that sold me this at $3.00 surely did not possess a human heart. Not worth $3.00.—Vernon Loccey, Temple Theatre, Howell, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Human Hearts, with House Peters.—No fault to find with picture. Ran two days to poor business. Barely made expenses. Paid too much. Cannot use high priced pictures in a small town without a loss.—Ira J. Kendall, Victory Theatre, Milledgeville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Human Hearts, with House Peters.—Good picture with story that holds interest to the end. Play it.—J. P. Doyle, New Academy Theatre, Nunda, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Man to Man, with Harry Carey.—Fair picture. Plenty of action, but not enough humor to offset blood and thunder. It is a good program picture, but not a special. Would not advise buying it at high prices. We charged thirty-five and fifteen cents.—Philip Rand, Rex Theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

Nobody's Fool, with Marie Prevost.—A good comedy-drama. Harry Meyers as the woman hater is fine, and Marie, well, she is always easy to look at. Picture gave general satisfaction.—H. G. Stettmuller, Jr., Odeon Theatre, Chandler, Okla.—General patronage.

Sure Fire, with Hoot Gibson.—Author a former resident of this county. Advertised that strong and got the money. Hoot goes good here always. Not a world-beating picture but better than a lot of specials for satisfaction.—Will L. Beebe, Candor Theatre, Candor, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Headin' West, with Hoot Gibson.—A pleasing program picture. Hoot is a favorite here.—J. A. Holmes, Arcade Theatre, Holtville, Cal.—Neighborhood patronage.

Headin' West, with Hoot Gibson.—This is a very good program picture. Had lots of comments and no kicks. Did a good business.—A. F. Affelt, Liberty Theatre, Ogallala, Neb.—General patronage.

The Trap, with Lon Chaney.—I paid too much for this. Nothing more than a program picture. Will please, but not stand advance in price.—A. F. Affelt, Liberty Theatre, St. Louis, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fire Eater, with Hoot Gibson.—Gibson goes good here. This is one of his best books. It book it strong.—E. G. Wilson, Opera House, Odell, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Moonlight Follies, with Marie Prevost.—Just a fair program picture. No comments either way, so take it most all we released.—Ira J. Kendall, Victory Theatre, Milledgeville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Wilson, with Priscilla Dean.—This picture is rightly named. Not a drop of sentiment in it. If it is a Gibson you can't go wrong on booking it.—Ira J. Kendall, Victory Theatre, Milledgeville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Conflict, with Priscilla Dean.—A good picture which gave pretty good satisfaction. Might have been boiled down some, as it drags somewhat. A little slow in getting to the real punch. Lost money on this one.—Will L. Beebe, Candor Theatre, Candor, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

The Rowdy, with Gladys Walton.—Miss Walton fills the role of rowdy to a T. Well pleased audience. Fine program picture. Children especially pleased.—Ira J. Kendall, Victory Theatre, Milledgeville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Vitagraph

The Little Wildcat, with Alice Calhoun.—First time in town as a regular, but she has charm and character that seemed to impress patrons as it did us. Pretty fair story to work in.—P. G. Estes, Fair Theatre, Brookings, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Too Much Business, with a special cast.—Ran this Christmas and seemed to please good crowd. Held the attention and works up to a good climax at the end. Don't buy it for this Christmas, but a good program picture.—P. G. Vaughan, Royal Theatre, Lees Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fighting Guide, with William Duncan.—This is not as good as some of the other Duncan pictures, but will pass as an ordinary program picture. Will please where Duncan is liked.—H. G. Schmidt, Palace Theatre, Long Pine, Neb.—General patronage.

The Angel of Crooked Street, with Alice Calhoun.—Pleasing program picture, but small audience. Too much opposition in small town. For instance: Legion Ball, Rebekah installation, church entertainments and basket ball games.—C. A. Riva, Pastime Theatre, Titon, N. H.—Small town patronage.

A Woman's Sacrifice, with Corinne Griffith.—This picture was produced once before by the same company under the name of God's Country and the Woman. Nevertheless it is a very good Northern picture.—Wm. H. Crook, Red Hawk Theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Ladder Jinx, with a special cast.—An ordinary picture that is rated as a special. Plenty of advertising failed to produce results.—J. P. Doyle, New Academy Theatre, Nunda, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

My Wild Irish Rose, with a special cast.—This is a good clean picture. The title is the only drawing power. The last three reels are a joke. Buy it right or leave it alone.—Henry Saubers, Fad Theatre, Fairfax, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

My Wild Irish Rose, with a special cast —While Paris Sleeps," a new Hodkinson feature.
February 10, 1923

cast.—A delightful drama. A real Irish drama with plenty of comedy situations and good story that is interesting. Business above average—B. C. Brown, Temple Theatre, Viroqua, Wis.—General patronage.

My Wild Irish Rose, with a special cast.—A splendid picture which pleases all nice business considering unusual opposition. The picture will deliver the goods if you can get them in.—George Zinz, Harbor Theatre, Corpus Christi, Tex.—General patronage.

My Wild Irish Rose, with a special cast.—A good production with a real draft. Use trailer and hand out paper. You cannot go wrong on this one. Book it and then go after your business—J. P. Doyle, New Academy Theatre, Nunda, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Silent Vow, with William Duncan.—A dandy good Western; in fact, you cannot go wrong on anything Duncan works in, and our people like his class of work—H. F. Sembler, Colonial Theatre, Radford, Va.—Small town patronage.

The Silent Vow, with William Duncan.—This was a first-class picture of the North. However, the press book says Duncan does some double exposure that no one can explain. Any amateur tographer can tell how it is done and do it. He passes behind a chair on which he is sitting. The chair is of dark material. Also to the sleeve of his coat that he puts his hand on is dark, and it was only a matter of measurements and timing to get it. I am still waiting to see a man pass himself, both standing up and in clear view. With a dark ground I can show a man in three positions at the same time. R. Ross Riley, Wigwam Theatre, Oberlin, Kans.—General patronage.

Where Men Are Men, with William Duncan—shown on Christmas day. Please 95 cent. Good enough for any theatre. Shown to the largest house this season. E. L. Golden, Mt. Vernon Theatre, Tallassee, Ala.—Neighborhood patronage.

Flower of the North, with a special cast.—Should have run this one two days. For the picture is good and pleased my people. You can't go wrong on this one—H. F. Sembler, Colonial Theatre, Radford, Va.—Small town patronage.

The Fortune Hunter, with Earle Williams.—A very good picture. Reports con-flicting. Didn't see, but would judge it was very fair. Put on Semon comedy, but even this failed to pull.—Philip Rand, Rex Theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—Small town patronage.

When Danger Smiles, with William Duncan.—Good Western picture that pleased a good general. Reports not drawing card here—H. G. Steetmuns, fr., Odeon Theatre, Chandler, Okla.—General patronage.

Fortune's Mask, with Earle Williams.—Beaver boy this Christmas. Santa Claus. Went over strong.—E. G. Wilton, Opera House, Odell, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

State Rights

The Beautiful and Damned (Warner Bros.), with Marie Prevost.—An honest picture which pleased a good general. N. Y. C. says it lacks some comic effect.—K. Rice, Auditorium Theatre, Winston-Salem, N. C.—Transient patronage.

To Adjourn (Arbuckle) — A good picture with good story, beautiful setting and full of humor. Arrows commented favorably on it—J. M. Babin, Fairlyland Theatre, White Castle, La.—Neighborhood patronage.

Rags to Riches (Warner Bros.), with Wesley Barry.—Consider it much better than School Days and a mighty good audience picture. Paid too much for it and did not do the business on account of pulling a bone and running it week before. However, I'd say run it.—P. G. Vaughan, Royal Theatre, Lees Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

What's Wrong With the Women? (Equity), with a special cast.—Here is an all-star cast and a picture that will get you the money and also please your patrons. It did both for us at a price that we could afford to pay. It should do it for anyone, anywhere.—Clyde Allen, Casino Theatre, Antwerp, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Country Flapper (Prod. Sec.), with Dorothy Gish. This was a flopper for us. Some of our patrons thought it absolutely silly and the rest just didn't care. This picture may please the school girl type, since some of the titles and sub-titles are nearly as funny, but don't promise your patrons anything but five reels of picture when you show this, if you do.—M. M. Hansen, Lyric Theatre, Oxford, Calif.—Small town patronage.

The Innocent Cheat (Arrow), with Roy Stewart.—Another good picture that pleased all who saw it. A whole lot better at a reasonable rental than some big so-called super-specials.—M. J. Babin, Fairyland Theatre, White Castle, La.—Neighborhood patronage.

West of the Pecos (Steiner), with Neal Hart.—Packed them in with this, but then Western pictures all draw satisfactory business here. This is an average Western.—C. A. Riva, Pastime Theatre, Tilton, N. H.—Small town patronage.

Smiling Jim (Canyon), with Franklyn Farnum. School Days picture, good, but a little slow. All of them are good. My patrons like this star.—E. L. Golden, Mt. Vernon Theatre, Tallassee, Ala.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hills of Hate (Arrow), with Jack Hoxie.—This is a good Western. The patrons said so as they went out.—Geo. W. Ferguson & Son, Royal Theatre, Fairmount, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Double O (Arrow), with Jack Hoxie.—Hoxie is getting more popular here every time we show his productions. His name means almost as much as that magic word "Mickey".—Levi G. Duren, Browne Theatre, Limestone, Me.—Small town patronage.

When Dawn Came (Prod. Sec.), with a special cast.—Good picture for any class. Had a good moral and should be given more publicity. Holds the audience and pleases any person who loves God.—M. J. Babin, Fairlyland Theatre, White Castle, La.—Neighborhood patronage.

Burn 'Em Up Barnes (Abb. Dist.), with Johnny Hines. Boys, here's the best six reel comedy action picture I've seen in months. An all-star cast and very fine photography. Drew howls of laughter. Ran it with Chaplin reissue A Night in the Show, which is another scream.—P. G. Vaughan, Royal Theatre, Lees Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Angel Citizens (Canyon), with Franklyn Farnum.—Al Hart, Peggy O'Day and Shorty Hamilton play good parts in this good Western.—Helen Drexler, Star Theatre, Croton, Neb.—Small town patronage.

His Nibs (Exceptional) with Chick Sale. Novel, different, acting good, mild comedy. Some ate it up, others indifferent. If your patrons like comedy run it to get away from the usual stuff.—J. Christensen, Star Theatre, Sandusky, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Pal of the West (Film Art), with a special cast.—Fair program picture. Lacks somewhat in story interest. Acting good.—J. A. Weisbeck, Liberal Theatre, Alden, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Trapped in the Air (W. E. P. C.), with Lester Cuneo.—Lester Cuneo is getting to be quite a favorite with us here in his Westerns.—Helen Drexler, Star Theatre, Croton, Neb.—Small town patronage.

M. J. Babin, Fairyland Theatre, White Castle, La.—Neighborhood patronage.
LON CHANEY in a dramatic scene from "All the Brothers Were Valiant," presented by the Metro Pictures corporation.

C.), with Irving Cummings.—Consider this a weak Curwood, not worth the price asked for it here. Just a five reel pro- old fashion picture, not a specialty by any means. Do not make any "noise" about the do. Very small part.—P. G. Vaughan, Royal Theatre, Lees Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Putting It Over (Goldstone), with Richard Falmadge.—Consider this star's- worthy reputation. Maybe she forget her self in this picture as in previous four. Business fair.—C. A. Whitney, Star Theatre, Ottawa, Kans.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Masked Avenger (W. P. E. C.) with Lester Cuneo.—A good, snappy, Western. All will like.—Helen Drexler, Star Theatre, Croton, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight? (Equity), with a special cast.—All that is claimed for it. Especially suited for Sundays or holidays, but has all the essentials of a successful play for any time. A truly great picture, and they do not rob you to buy it.—J. Christiansen, Star Theatre, Saugusky, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight? (Equity), with a special cast.—A picture that will get you more money. Print in awful shape. See that you get a good one.—J. F. Sanderson, Jr., Strand Theatre, Winchester, Va.—Neighborhood patronage.

Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight? (Equity), with a special cast.—Best drawing card we have had in two years. Old ladies came out to see the "Wandering Boy." Advertise it well and you won't go wrong.—A. F. Mext, Liberty Theatre, St. Louis, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Silver Spurs (W. P. E. C.), with Lester Cuneo.—Some colorful melodrama of old California days. They sure liked this one.—Helen Drexler, Star Theatre, Croton, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Rangeland (Steiner), with Neal Hart.—The poorest of his pictures we have ever had. Action was very slow, and no plot. His leading lady would never win a beauty contest. Maybe she forgot her makeup.—R. Ross Riley, Wigwam Theatre, Oberlin, Kans.—General patronage.

Serials

The Timber Queen (Pathé), with Ruth Roland. We are on Episode Twelve. Holding up fine. We have run serials for the past four years and consider it one of the best. C. A. Whitney, Star theatre, Ottawa, Kan.—Neighborhood patronage.

Robinson Crusoe (Universal), with Harry Myers.—Playing last episode to- day and contrasts to reports from others, this serial made many friends. Myers great. I. B. Laughlin, Bart's Mecca, Winfield, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fighting Trail (Vitagraph), with William Duncan.—A realistic serial that is supposed to be great. Just finished this bunch of cheese. If it drew as much as twenty dollars I'll buy all you boys a new hat.—H. C. Stettunud, Jr., Odeon theatre, Chandler, Okla.—General patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—Cleaning up on this serial. Every episode brings more money. Art Acord a great drawing card.—J. F. Sanderson, Jr., Strand theatre, Winchester, Va.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—A mighty good serial and one of the best film investments of the season. R. V. Erk, Big Ben theatre, Ionia, N. Y.—General patronage.

Winners of the West (Universal), with Art Acord.—Just finished the last cpi. Held good attendance from start to finish. This serial drew more of the older patrons than the kids.—F. E. Hol- bien, Olympic theatre, Lenox, Iowa.—General patronage.

The Son of Tarzan (Serial Sales), with a special cast.—At Sunday matinee only. Played this repeat on my own house and doing better than first time. It pleases all audiences.—J. D. Sine, New Majestic theatre, Goshody, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Son of Tarzan (Serial Sales), with a special cast.—O. K. and will do the business. Kids delighted with animal stunts. Title great drawing card.—J. Christiansen, Star theatre, Sandusky, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Short Subjects

Century Comedies (Universal).—The last ten used have all been A comedies with big laughs.—F. P. Kohr, Princess theatre, Ogalala, Neb.—General patronage.

Fun from the Press (Hod.)—Judging from the laughter, they are in good shape.—B. C. Brown, Temple theatre, Viroqua, Wis.—General patronage.

Hall Room Boys Comedies (C. B. C).—All the上半年 used were in good shape. It's a comedy with some of the best boys on it. They can't ask too much for them, either.—C. A. Hill, Pastime theatre, Tilton, N. H.—Small town patronage.

Harold Lloyd Comedies (A. E.).—A great drawing card for me. Please everybody.—Chas. Elliott, Jewel theatre, Sibley, II.—Small town patronage.

ENTERTAINING THE BOSS, TWIN HUSBANDS, THEIR VA- CATION (F. B. O.), with Mr. and Mrs. Carter DeHaven.—Boys, here are three as clever clean comedies as were ever made. Good story, lots of laughs, and clog as a ribbon, and sold right.

It's a pleasure to present a good clean comedy that really has a good story and is a comedy without a lot of vulgarities in it. If you want good, clean stuff that's really funny, try these.—C. A. SPAIN- HOUR, Auditorium theatre, Greens- burg, Kan.

The Leather Pushers (Universal), with Reginald Denny.—Just as good but no better than the first series. Can see the end coming.—F. P. Kohr, Big Ben theatre, Ionia, N. Y.—General patronage.

Our Gang Comedies (Pathé).—These comedies are popular and the kids like them. Will you have another?—Clyd- Allen, Casino theatre, Antwerp, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Our Gang Comedies (Pathé).—This series is not getting old, but is very much like any of that have been shown in my house. I have shown three.—P. D. Rus- sell, Russell theatre, Somerset, Ohio.-Small town patronage.

Snub Pollard Comedies (Pathé)—good comedy if you want plenty of pet.—Chas. Elliott, Jewel theatre, Sibley, II.—Small town patronage.

Snub Pollard Comedies (Pathé)—Ex- ceptionally fine high comedies. These kids went crazy over The Old Sea Do- g.—P. D. Russell, Russell theatre, Somerset, Ohio.—Small town patronage.

Urban Movie Chats (Hodkinson).—One of the best single reeiders I have ever seen. It has such a variety that can't help but please all.—H. C. Ren- hardt, Victor Theatre, Bay City, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pop Tuttle's Movie Queen (F. B. O.), with Don Mason.—When a comedy like this will draw and please, anyone can make a comedy.—A. A. Sprading, Ope- lot, Missouri, Mena, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Blacksmith (F. X.), with Bust Keaton.—Not as good as his previous comedies.—E. R. Brown, Grand Forks, N. D.—General patronage.

The Counter Jumper (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—An action comedy with the usual Semon pep. It arrives along at a great rate with so much speed that you are in a whirl.
3 Telegrams from more than 56 already received and it hasn't hardly opened.

EXCHANGES EVERYWHERE
has them all beat a mile for trick stuff that seems real. We always welcome Semon comedies.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

The Fire Fighters (Pathé), with Our Gang.—One of the best two reel comedies we have ever had. Kept the house in an uproar. People went out of the way to tell me how much they enjoyed it. Get this one by all means. Photography perfect. Children wonderful.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Stork's Mistake (Educational), a Chaplin comedy.—Another clever comedy with a clever twist ending. The baby show was great.—R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kan.—General patronage.

Simple Lie (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Very good. Enough laughs and action in this to make three reels. Just one hearty laugh after another.—E. J. Laqua, Gem theatre, Hancock, N. D.—General patronage.

Simple Lie (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Didn't see it. Reports excellent.— steril Rand, Rex theatre, Salinas, Idaho.—Small town patronage.

A Donkey in Lion's Skin (Pathé), an Aecop Fable.—This animated cartoon was a knockout and was a welcome relief after so many so-called comedies.—C. E. Johnson, Paramount theatre, Gibson, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Star Comedies (Universal).—I see one of the exhibitors kicking on these, but I find them about as good as any one reel comedies. Not side splitters, but a few laughs in all of them. A good fill in.—C. A. Kelley, Rex theatre, Custer, Okla.—Small town patronage.

School Days; The Hick (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Very good. A good slap-stick, though not in the same class with Lloyd comedies.—C. M. Vail, Blende theatre, Benton, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Weatherly, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Electric House (F. N.), with Buster Keaton.—One of the most fast comedy in some time, but Keaton's stuff goes over the heads of most of them.—W. Ray Erne, Rialto theatre, Charlotte, Mich.—Small town patronage.

His Own Law (Pathé), with Leo Maloney.—Action slow in first reel, but good in second reel.—G. E. Wendel, Opera house, Shawneetown, Ill.—Small town patronage.

It's a Wild Life (Pathé), with Harold Lloyd.—Among the most laughable comedies of the resizing to date. Lloyd really gets them all laughing in this one.—Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Saw Mill; The Bakery (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Good comedies enjoyed by old and young.—J. W. May, Grand theatre, Shawneetown, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Show (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Not quite as good as The Bakery and yet good enough for any house which can boast of patrons who are real human beings—who are not so "hard- boiled" but what they will laugh when something really funny is shown.—Levi G. Durepo, Browne theatre, Limestone, Me.—Small town patronage.

A Likely Man (Metro), with Bull Montana.—While not a knockout this comedy has a good many laughs and deserved them. It is out of the ordinary comedy and is a fine added attraction to any bill and would prove to be even more than that if put on with a weak feature.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

365 Days (Pathé), with Snub Pollard.—The Snub Pollard comedies always go good here. This one very good.—Clifford L. Niles, Grand theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.—General patronage.

A Fair of Kings (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—As fine a comedy as you could ask for. Full of laughs and well produced.—Custer Carland, Victoria theatre, Frankfort, Mich.—General patronage.

The Agent (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Great comedy. Semon always good for laughs. This above average.—C. R. Sullivan, Fair theatre, Amarillo, Tex.—General patronage.

Spooks (Educational), with a special cast.—These Mermaids have been sure winners for us and this one is no exception.—Clifford L. Niles, Grand theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.—General patronage.

Cups (F. N.), with Buster Keaton.—About like all of Keaton's. Very good comedy but not quite the stuff they get for it.—C. R. Sullivan, Fair theatre, Amalillo, Tex.—General patronage.

The Head Waiter (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—A new comedy for us. One of the best Semons, but was enjoyed by most.—P. G. Held, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Sweetheart Days and Wedding Bells Out of Tune (F Paramount).—Absolutely poor. Not a laugh in them.—Clifford L. Niles, Grand theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.—General patronage.

The Grocery Clerk (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—One of the best comedies I have played. Too bad we can't always laugh. Larry is a good bet.—P. G. Held, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Bakery (Vitagraph) with Larry Semon.—A very good comedy. Well liked.—G. Strasser Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Stolen Glory (Educational), with a special cast.—A good comedy.—P. G. Held, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Rainmaker (Educational), with Lloyd Hamilton.—A good comedy. Full of laughs. Lloyd Hamilton well liked here.—P. G. Held, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Cold Feet (Educational), a Christie comedy.—Not so much of a comedy, but the snow scenes in this one are fine.—P. G. Held, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Sawing a Lady in Half (C. B. C.), with a special cast.—If you want to make a little extra money buy this two reeler. Posters unusually good. Will make you more money than some specials and satisfies.—J. Christiansen, Star theatre, Sandusky, Mich.—Small town patronage.

 Foolish Monte Carlo (F. B. O.), with a special cast.—Foolish indeed.—J. Carbo nell, Monroe theatre, Key West, Fla.—ITableView patronage.

365 Days (Pathé), with Snub Pollard.—The first of his two reeler and a sure knockout. The house just stood up and cheered every minute. By all means book it.—H. C. Blanhard, Victory theatre, Bay City, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Beggar Maid (Hoden), with a special cast.—A classical comedy which appealed to the better class of patrons.—B. C. Brown, Temple theatre, Viroqua, Wis.—General patronage.

The Skipper's Last Resort (Educational), a Tommerville comedy.—Nothing extra. Had a few good laughs.—M. D. Foster, Gem theatre, Williamsburg, Kan.—Neighborhood patronage.

Made in the Kitchen (F. N.), a Mack Sennett comedy, with a special cast.—All about home brew but it was handled well and the child in this saved it. Don't book it.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salinas, Idaho.—General patronage.

The Joy and the Dog (Pathé), and Aetzop Fables.—Very, very good. Run one of these every Wednesday night and they are a dandy filler and entertainment.—A. C. Beets, Powers theatre, Red Creek, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

The Dumb Bell (Pathé), with Snub

BUSTER KEATON goes up in the air over a love affair in his new comedy for First National, "The Balloonicat."
By H. H. Van Loan
A Robert Thornby Production

A sea drama whose very title carries to a jaded public welcome thoughts of red-blooded drama—drama whose background is the heaving realm of adventure where men ever have lived and fought and died in glory and ignominy—a sea drama

Starring

WALLACE and NOAH BEERY

the screen's most noted character actors. What more could anyone ask than to be treated to a view of these two noted stars as rivals in the world where men go down to the sea in ships—as strong, hating, scheming, FIGHTING rivals for the love of a woman whom neither of them wants after all? Man, there's drama here—drama and thrill and spectacle that's brought out to the full by the Beery boys and a sterling supporting cast. Book it—NOW.

THEATRE CONSTRUCTION AND EQUIPMENT

Grauman’s Metropolitan Opened

Newest Theatre and Office Building in Los Angeles Is Six Stories High and Was Constructed at a Cost of $4,000,000

FEATURES OF METROPOLITAN

Grauman’s new Metropolitan Theatre, Los Angeles, is a combination office building six stories high, costing $4,000,000.

Its seating capacity is 1,500. The building was three years in construction.

Probably the largest girders and concrete trusses ever built support the roof and balcony.

There is a front section to the stage which can be lowered away out of sight by means of an elevator.

The foundation of the balcony is built at an upward instead of the customary downward decline.

The cantilever beams supporting the balcony, resting on concrete trusses, are plainly in evidence from any point on the mezzanine.

The proscenium arch measures 32 feet in height and 60 feet in width. The Wurlitzer Hope-Jones Organ cost $80,000 and has the console mounted on an elevator.

Fifty-one motors are required for operation of the ventilating system which cost $115,000.

A remote control type switchboard with dimmer attachment cares for all the lighting effects.

Current is received through a double system of transformers, giving the house two sources of supply.

Through a synchrometer attached to the projection machine and the director’s stand and organ console the music leaders can regulate the tempo of their music to synchromate.

Draperies in the Metropolitan are valued at $200,000, being mostly Japanese silk, chintz and velvet, especially designed.

Twelve thousand yards of material were used for the drapes and stage curtains, and required 15 months in making.

Over 3,500 tons of steel were used in construction of the house, and 30,000 barrels of cement were consumed.

William Lee Woollett was the architect.

FROM a reality and structural point of view, Grauman’s new Metropolitan theatre at Sixth and Hill streets, Los Angeles, which opened its doors to the public Friday, January 20, represents a unique achievement. In it, Los Angeles possesses the ultimate in motion picture theatre construction and a playhouse, the beauty and grandeur of which is undoubtedly not exceeded by any other such structure in America or abroad.

Cost Is $4,000,000

The deal involved the tying up for three years of one of the most valuable corners in the very heart of the city during the construction of the theatre. The building, involving an outlay of approximately $4,000,000 to build and equip, is a combination of theatre and offices, six stories in height, underlaid by a foundation capable of and originally intended to support a structure thirteen stories in height. There are one hundred offices, many of which will be occupied by the various departments and officials of the theatre business branch.

 Structurally speaking, this concrete realization of a dream of Sid Grauman, and executed by the best architects, artists and contractors under his guiding genius, introduces many innovations in theatre building and equipment.

If Mr. Grauman and his architect, Wm. Lee Woollett, intended to convey that with a known abstract architectural idea—solidity and stability in this structure, they certainly realized their aim, for the theatre, entirely of reinforced concrete construction, presents this idea in a most impressive fashion. No attempts have been made to cover up and hide the giant trusses, supports and the strength of the concrete construction, as is often the case. The rough surface and the angles of construction, however, have been so deftly decorated by the master touch of William Lee Woollett, decorative architect and his experts that the very stability and solidity of the architecture has been transformed into beauty and highly artistic values of a novel and unique nature.

Cantilever Beams Support Balcony

The effect of the massiveness has been conveyed in the various embellishments, the hanging pendants, the huge circularly at the top of the vast enclosure, the colossal columns and the proscenium arch, which is forty-two feet in height, and sixty feet wide.

The large cantilever beams which support the balcony resting on the longest reinforced concrete girder ever built, are plainly in evidence from any point on the mezzanine floor which leads to the balcony. These girders and the ten great roof trusses stretch clear across the theatre enclosure from one side wall to the other.

Because this is a virtually new type of balcony construction and sets a precedent in this type of architecture, a structural test was made of the strength of the balcony and its supports. In the early stages of construction, something like two million pounds of weight, over seven times the combined weight of all the people who will ever be seated thereon were piled up in the balcony.

Stage Is Movable

The stage is another innovation in the theatre stage construction. It is provided with a front section, some fourteen feet in width, which can be lowered away out of sight by means of elevator machinery, controlled by huge motors. This allows for the lowering of the orchestra when this section of the stage is used as an orchestra pit, and the presentation of special effects, the performers being able to enter the movable section from underneath the stage and then come up into view of the audience. This section may be raised flush with the remainder of the stage, thus providing one of the largest stages in the world.

The organ console also rests on an elevator arrangement.

Forty built-in dressing rooms back stage have been provided for the prologue and accompaniment performers. Underneath the stage are view rooms, a large carpenter shop equipped with machinery, the system of wiring, fuses, transformers, motors controlling the elevator systems, ventilating system, etc.

Ample Ventilation Assured

The ventilating system was installed at a cost of $115,000 and requires for its operation, fifty-one motors. By means of this, cool air in summer and warm air in winter is distributed to all parts of the house.

The organ, a specially constructed unit orchestra is the largest ever built and was installed at a cost of $50,000.

The multi-colored light effects, installed by Holmes & Sanborn, electrical engineers, under the supervision of William Woollett, are controlled by a new remote control type switchboard—a compact innovation which although only thirteen feet long, is possessed of the same efficiency as an old type board of about fifty feet in length. The new board can be operated by one man, due to an elaborate system of master and sub-master switches. It is provided with special dimmer apparatus which allows for beautiful effects, by the gradual dimming out of one set of colored light effects, simultaneous with the gradual increasing in light value of another color combination. According to the engineers responsible for its installation, with this system, it is possible to get a greater variety of light effects than with any other system in operation in the United States.

Two Sources of Power

The electrical current comes into the theatre through a double system of transformers—six transformers to each system. Two sources of current are thus available so that in case either is impaired, the other is sufficient to supply the house with current.

Gentlemen:—

Words cannot express how satisfied we are with our “Minusa Screen.” Absolutely perfect in every way, shape or form.

We are very small exhibitors, this being only a mining town, but we want to say right now that we are mighty glad of the investment made in the new screen.

Will be glad to recommend your screen to anyone. We are pleased. WE ARE PLEASED.

Very truly yours,

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

Detail in highest highlight or deepest shadow, with every step of gradation in between,—Eastman Positive Film reproduces it all and carries the quality of the negative through to the screen.

Eastman Film, both regular and tinted base—now available in nine colors, is identified throughout its length by the words "Eastman" "Kodak" stenciled in black letters in the transparent margin.

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
A New Camera and Projector
Motion Picture Outfit for Amateurs Is Developed by Eastman Which It Is Believed Will Serve to Popularize Screen Entertainment

HOME "movies," among other things, will act as feeders to motion picture theatres, according to the Eastman Kodak Company which has just announced the successful development of camera and projector for amateurs. Just as the photograph for example has helped so wonderfully in popularizing opera and the better things in music, so will home motion pictures be in a position to educate popular taste in screen offerings. This, at least, is the belief of the Eastman organization, whose stake in the theatre world is considerable.

Weighs Seven Pounds
The amateur outfit developed by the Kodak Company consists of a taking camera and a projector. The taking camera which weighs only seven pounds, is daylight loading and so simplified mechanically as to enable the amateur to take motion pictures with the same facility as he has recorded snapshots. The projector, equipped with a two-inch lens for ordinary home use, will fill a screen 30 by 40 at a distance of 15 feet and a 40 by 54 screen at 21 feet. The projector to be known as the Kodascope, is motor driven, entirely automatic in operation and once threaded requires no further attention until the reel is exhausted.

The film on which the motion picture Kodak system is based is of special size, being 11/16 inches in width as against the standard width of 13/16 inches with picture space of 1½ c. in 3½ as compared with standard pictures of 1 inch by 3½ inches. This is coated with a special emulsion which, by a reverse process, yields a direct positive.

Film Is Non-Inflammable
These prints can be duplicated in a special printer and can also be enlarged to standard size for theatre use. This special film is of the non-inflammable type made from cellulose acetate. Five pictures on the small film, it will be seen, will occupy the same length as two on the standard so that 100 feet of film will be equivalent to 250 feet of standard and 400 foot reel equal to a thousand foot standard reel.

The diminutive taking camera, to be known as the Cine Kodak, is on the whole of standard type. It is fitted with a Kodak Anastigmat lens, working at 53.5, permitting pictures to be made under poor light conditions. The finder is just above the lens and by an ingenious attachment changes the position of the image so that the lens is focused. In this way the image is shown through the center of the field at all times. The lens has a focusing lever worked through the back and can be focused for any distance from infinity to four feet. The diaphragm control is in the left hand corner where it can be regulated easily. In the center of the back is a footage indicator. The crank turns normally twice a second, taking pictures at the standard rate of 16 per second. After exposure the film is removed in its magazine and sent to the company for development just as in the early days of the roll-film.

Viewed by Chemical Body
Two factors that have heretofore hampered extension of motion picture photography to the amateur—the burden of the equipment and the cost—have consequently been overcome in the new outfit. The case and facility of operation were clearly demonstrated before the American Chemical Society at Rochester, by Dr. C. E. Kenneth Myers, Director of Eastman Research Laboratory, when a picture of some of the notables present, taken at the opening of the meeting, was shown on the screen at the close.

$350,000 Troy Theatre
To Be Opened in March
The new Troy, in Troy, N. Y., another Strand house, is due to open about March 1. This house will cost when completed, about $250,000. The Strand in Hudson Falls, N. Y., opened this week. The house seats 1,000 persons.

Yuba City, Cal.—According to F. A. Shaw of the Sutter County Chamber of Commerce San Francisco interests are negotiating for a site for the construction of a theatre in this city.

Duncan Here on His Way to West Coast Star, Accompanied by Wife, Will Start Production of Serials for "U"

William Duncan and his pretty wife, Edith Johnson, who have just signed a contract to make a series of chapter plays for Universal, passed through Chicago Saturday, enroute to the West Coast, where he will soon start work on his first serial.

Wife Will Co-Star

Miss Johnson will appear opposite Mr. Duncan as his leading lady.

Mr. Duncan's contract with Universal provides that he shall write, direct and star in the serials, and he is determined to make them a series of the highest class pictures ever produced by this or any other company. He is anxious to secure the right to several big stories with sufficient plot to carry the theme through a ten or twelve episode play, and already has several in view.

Entertain Press

Mr. Duncan is an experienced director as a traveling actor and has been assured by Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, that he would have full scope in working out his ideas. While in Chicago Mr. Duncan and his wife met newspaper folks and posed for photographs and both proved charming hosts at an informal reception held in the Universal exchange Saturday.

Theatre Activities

The Cozy theatre, Chatsworth, III., opened Friday, Jan. 19. William O'Malley and a large force of helpers have been busy for a week moving the theatre equipment from the old location to its present home. It is expected that all shows have been held since Jan. 15.

According to Theodore Stover, Universal salesman, the new theatre is a big improvement over the old, being roomier, steam heated, having high ceilings and a cozy lobby. A pretty canopy graces the roof of the house and Mr. O'Malley has expended considerable cash fixing up the place.

The New Moline theatre, at Moline, Ill., is nearing completion and will be opened between March 15 and April 1. His house will seat 2,000, Samuel Levin, formerly with Jones, Linick & Schaefer theatre interests, Chicago, will be the evident manager of the new theatre.

DeKalb, Ill., has a new theatre under way. The house will be opened by the end of the town and will be operated under the management of L. Leithart, one of DeKalb's team of business men. It will be opened about May 1.

On Feb. 1, Max Schwartz and his sister will open the Capitol theatre, Albany Park district, Chicago. The theatre has been thoroughly overhauled and made modern in every respect.

Will Break Ground Soon For New L. & T. Theatre At Belmont and Lincoln

Another large motion picture house which will cost in the neighborhood of $2,000,000, with a seating capacity of 4,000, will be erected at Belmont and Lincoln avenues, it is announced by Lubliner & Trinz.

The new theatre will be fully equipped with a fine stage for vaudeville or drama, although it is planned to operate it exclusively as a picture house for the time being.

Walter Alschaeger is the architect and Harry Kusel the contractor. The property was purchased some time ago and it is expected ground will be broken in a few days. The building will be ready for occupancy early in the fall, it is said.

Sunday Shows to Be Issue in Evanston Three Candidates for Mayor Favor Abolition of Blue Sabbath

The question of Sunday picture shows in Evanston is to be made an issue at the April election for Mayor in that suburb of Chicago.

Mayor Launches Campaign

Mayor Harry Pearsons, the present incumbent, is opposed to picture shows on Sunday and has launched a campaign against them, supported by the various women's clubs and civic organizations. He is up for re-election.

There are also three candidates who declare the people of Evanston want Sunday amusement. These are Judge H. G. Williams, Roy Metz, Alderman Ernest Palmer, and an automobile distributor. Nine other candidates are lurking in the offing, it is declared, ready to throw their hats into the ring.

Says People Want Shows

"The majority of Evanston people want Sunday movies," according to Roy Metz, "and would have had them long ago if the mayor hadn't succumbed to the demands of a minority of Puritanical reformers."

Strong Improvement in Business Is Under Way Ralph Simmons States

There's one manager who has an optimistic outlook on business around Chicago. That fellow is Ralph Simmons, head of the Hodkinson exchange. With the assistance of Milton Crandall, who is now attached to the Chicago office as special representative, and a crew of energetic salesmen, the contracts are piling up. Some of the latest are: "The King of the Big Road," "Bulldog Drummond," and other Hodkinson features and short subjects, the books sold.

Manager Simmons reports that business conditions in and around Chicago are much improved, and exhibitors throughout the territory are shopping for big pictures and discovering the value of the Hodkinson productions.

Ennis Ad Campaign Reaches High Mark Novel Letter Series Boosts Run of "Quincy Adams Sawyer"

A high mark in advance newspaper advertising has been set by Bert Ennis, who has been in Chicago exploiting the presentation at the Chicago theatre this week of the SL-Metro production, "Quincy Adams Sawyer." Mr. Ennis has had the co-operation of Mrs. A. Shirley, district manager for Metro.

It is said that more than $10,000 was spent in newspaper advertising alone, the campaign covering the Tribune, News, Herald-Examiner, American, Post and Journal, Opening the campaign half page advertisements were used in every paper and a full page was taken in the Herald-Examiner the day prior to the opening.

Novel Letters Used

In addition to these display announcements, a novel series of Mabel and Mary letters were used for four days, the letters covering the various points in "Quincy Adams Sawyer" through the medium of one girl querying another as to when and where the picture would be shown. The final letter on last Thursday divulged all of the information concerning the cast of the picture. The two stars, the thrill, comedy element, etc.

There were effected with the Yellow Taxi Cab Company, the cab organization carrying cards in which the comparison between the one-horse shay in "Quincy Adams Sawyer" and up-to-date vehicles of the Yellow company was pointed out. Three of Chicago's largest department stores also co-operated in the exploitation of the picture through the medium of window displays covering the photooplay edition of the novel in their windows. These stores were Marshall Field & Co., the Fair and Rothwells, an addition to which hundreds of local booksellers displayed the novel and still scenes from the picture.

Distribute Weather Forecast

Two days before the opening, a novel herald was used in the form of a weather forecast, one side of which definitely stated that exactly nineteen stars would shine on January 29 at the corner of the Chicago theatre's location while the other side announced the names of the seventeen film celebrities appearing in the S-L special.

Corinne Griffith Here

Corinne Griffith arrived in Chicago on Saturday, en route to New York from the West Coast. She is going east to confer with Charles R. "Buck" Strong, chief executive of the Daily News, New York, who has placed Griffith third Small on her first list of "Hodkinson production favorites."
CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By J. R. M.

H. H. BURN, general manager of sales of Hodkinson Pictures, arrived in our midst last Thursday, after a sojourn in the East.

"Milt" CRANDALL, another Hodkinson man, is up in Canada for a week. We're going to look him up when he gets back.

MATT CAVANAUGH and his bride returned from their honeymoon last Saturday. The popular assistant manager is back on the job and receiving the congratulations of callers at the Fox exchange.

JAS. SALTER, former manager of Village theatre, Wilmette, is with the Goldwyn forces, selling film.

JOE LYON, the southside Greek salesman, is gloatting over several contracts for the big Fox specials he landed last week. Yep, the Woodlawn and Stratford theatrefores playing "Murder Crisis" on March 4, and a lot of others are lined up.

TONY DELaney, Fox salesman, is still on the sick list. Or was Saturday, when we wrote this.

D. E. ROBINSON, of the Madison theatre, Peoria, with the assistance of Al Sohler, First National exploitation man, put on a birthday party for three thousand kids last week and everybody had a good time. Oh, yes, he played the Jackie Coogan pic. "Oliver Twist."

GRADWELL SEARS, and the other First National sales hounds, have taken up bowling with a vengeance. Even the girls around the exchange are laying little bets on the noon day scores.

BILL COOK's been sick, but is now back on the job batting 300 in the First National league.

W. W. BRUMBBERG, manager of country sales, is another First Nationaler who has been on the sick list for several days. Bill's one of our best little reporters, too, and we miss him.

The great F. R. O. Moustache Contest is still the big topic of conversation around that exchange. SPENCER and MILLER begin to look like a couple of Ky, mountaineers now and several exhibitors have inquired for moonshine, instead of films. Charlie Miller trips over his every time he's invited to lunch by M. KAPLAN.

And speaking of human interest stories, one happened last week, when a beautiful Scotch collie got caught between the Fox and F. B. O. exchanges, in the narrow space that separates the buildings. The S. P. C. A. crew arrived and decided the only way to save the dog was to shoot him, but Ricardo "Dick" Grey, the genial janitor of Fox exchange, got a rope, lassoed the pup and he's now a happy member of the Grey family.

FRED DALLEN is now on the road for American Releasing. He was former manager of the Keystone theatre, on Sheridan road.

H. GOLDSN of the Adelphi theatre is taking a vacation after a strenuous Winter, in California.

Perc Barr, former Educational salesman, has left the film game to join his brother selling stocks and bonds. Barr is one of the youngest old men on the road.

WILLIAM SCHWARTZ, also with Educational, left on Saturday to go into the real estate business.

DAVE DUBIN and his crew are hyped up over the fact that Educational has the only and exclusive feature with Emile Coue, the noted French scientist, as its star. It is now ready for release.

On Saturday evening, Feb. 3, the Universal social club, composed of every employe in the Universal exchange, will hold one of its periodical get-together functions in the East Room of the La Salle Hotel. The time is 7 p.m., and besides a banquet there will be dancing and music.

T. C. "Deacon" BAKER, formerly covering the Indiana territory for Metro, but who has been away for six months, is back again selling features.

C. H. DINGMAN has been transferred from Indiana territory to Wisconsin by the Metro exchange.

A law suit between Vern Langford and John Krafieschen was up for hearing before Judge Charles Williams, Master in Chancery, last Saturday. Dave Dubin, Joe Lyon, Harry Phillips and other film men attended and testified. The question involved is the ownership of the Apollo theatre.

E. J. EISENFELD is the new manager of the Apollo theatre.

"Bob" PEARSON, a brother of Elmer Pearson, general manager of Pathé, is now booking short subjects at the local exchange.

WILLIAM "Bill" ASCHMAN, Milwaukee manager of Pathe, was in town last Friday.

HAROLD WISE, former booker and with Pathé four years, has been added to the Universal staff by Manager Herman Stern.

George BUSH, Pathe hooker, has resigned.

Now that Mayor Thompson has withdrawn from the race, it looks as though "Chub" Florine, "the little Mayor of Broadway," would have to run against candidates the other fellows pick.

A splendid letter of commendation has been received from Grauman and Damlay by Walter L. Hill of the Universal publicity department, for his fine work in getting window displays for "The Flint," in connection with the Universal feature which is being booked hereabouts. "You have New York heat forty ways for Sunday on exhibition," is how the publishers put it.

Emil Mayer, chief accountant for Jones, Linich & Schaefer for many years, will retire Feb. 15 and take a long vacation in California, where he plans to make a home. Sigmund Fischer will succeed Mr. Mayer, and George Moore will have charge of the Orpheum theatre.

Ben Beadell, who has been prominent in local film circles for upwards of thirteen years, has joined the Universal sales staff under sales manager Herman Stern. Mr. Beadell was born and raised in Chicago and knows his way about. He opened the first exchange for Edison Film Company in Chicago in 1900, and has been connected with Essanay and Selznick organizations, as Branch manager.

LOUIS KRAMER, F. B. O., exploiter, is now a regular cameraman. Yep, Louie purchased a triple action camera from Henry San and last Saturday he was preparing to take orders for the galloping photos.

Paramount moved down to its new headquarters at Thirtieth street and Wabash avenue last week and they do say Dan Roche and "Bill" Danziger are going to get a couple of covered wagons to haul the exhibits back and forth from the loop. Anyway they've ordered the wagons.

W. C. BRUMMER who was selling First National pictures to city customers, has been transferred to country sales manager W. W. Brumberg's department. Bill hit the ties last week.

And speaking of Brummer, didja know he's been laid up with a bad cold for a week?

C. E. Box's weekly sales meetings at First National are proving a success and every one is a lively session.

Everybody had a good time celebrating Gradwell Sears' birthday on the evening of Jan. 30. "Grad" is just twenty-six but doesn't look eighteen. "Bill" Brummer also celebrated a birthday, and coyly admitted he was more'n twenty-six.

F. B. O. Official Here

E. C. Jensen, assistant general sales manager of Film Booking Offices, arrived in Chicago Saturday and conferred with Local Manager J. J. Sampson.

Pathe Men Call

Ed Eschmann, general sales manager of Pathe, was in town last Friday, returning to New York on the Century. He was accompanied by W. B. Frank, general sales manager of Associated Exhibitors.

"What the Picture Did For Me"

When Knighthood Was in Flower, with Marion Davies—I scraped up all the loose change I could get hold of and booked this picture for the first three days of 1923. I borrowed a few extra dollars from my wife for extra advertising matter. She kicked on letting me have it, and said I should have taken the money I paid for the picture and bought a new Ford. I had the picture pretty well advertised, and on New Year's night it went down to the show "all set" for the usual costume flop. Like most of the small town exhibitors I had but very little faith in costume pictures. The show was scheduled to start at 7:45 p.m., but about dark they started to come, the lame, the halt, the rich and the poor—(Continued on page 73)

ONE of the most interesting plays of the New York theatrical season was a play entitled "The Hero" . . . . . . . . . .

The wonder of the present production is that despite a number of changes the spirit of the original is so largely preserved . . .

We know that the real Hero is the humble brother who with true heroic naivete continues to worship the hero of the trenches long after we have acclaimed his own humbler sacrifices. It is just there that the sterling worth of this picture lies; it is boldly carried along on the mere strength of its characterizations and qualifies as a piece of honest picture making . . . . . . . . . .

Both Gaston Glass as the soldier and especially John Sainpolis as the plodder do work which quite holds its own with that of Robert Ames and Richard Bennett in the original play.

Mr. E. W. Hammons
Pres. Educational Film Exchanges
350 Seventh Avenue
New York City

My Dear Mr. Hammons:

When I learned, after my arrival in America, of the great extent and influence of your公司, reaching millions of your people every day, I thought to myself that it would be most wonderful thing if the screen could one day be employed to help me spread the message I am trying to carry to all mankind.

It was in consequence of this desire or intention to convey the message to your people, that I had directed my publicity work to take advantage of the screen to reach millions of people, who would otherwise be unable to hear or understand my message. I was immediately impressed with the possibilities of the screen, in making arrangements to show the picture, "The Message of Emile Coue", which I sincerely hope will entertain your millions of patrons while still benefiting them by showing how self-suggestion, through conscious auto-suggestion, can help every man, woman and child - everywhere.

The proceeds of this motion picture, Mr. Hammons, will go to establish a free clinic, or more properly speaking, institute, near my house in Nancy, France, where I have great difficulty now in handling the crowds that come to see me. It must be understood that this institute will be managed right now so that I am not personally to be the beneficiary of whatever this picture earns; not one cent will come to me. The free institute so badly needed in my home town, will serve thousands of people in need of help, and if you are interested in seeing that a possibility, it ought to afford you much satisfaction.

Accept my sincere thanks, please, for the great kindness and consideration you have given to this project. You understand and seem to sympathise with me in what I am trying to do, and for which the screen is the only means of reaching you in your own tongue. I wish greetings to the people of your country.

Yours truly,

Emile Coue

Scores of exhibitors have told us this when they play a Keaton comedy the box office receipts take a jump.

The newspapers have a habit of reviewing his 2 reelers as the feature of the show.

That's because, while they are of short length, they really are the feature. Play them up as such and you will make money.

Any Keaton comedy will steal the show.

Dear Sirs:

It is with pleasure that I renew my subscription to your publication. It is, to my way of thinking, the one trade journal that serves the exhibitor. It has been of great benefit to me. It's a Wiz!

His biggest and best - 9 reels of tremendous drama, made before the mast by the same producer, star, author and director who made "Tol'able David".

"It's a wiz! Dick and Dorothy delight us in 'Fury.' The players in 'Fury' make you feel as though it really were life that they are portraying. And the film is entertaining.

"What a marvelous team Richard Barthelmess and Dorothy Gish are, to be sure. She is shortly going to rival her sister Lillian as a player of drama. And she has all her own rich comedy besides. She always makes her fun in 'Fury' count, whether she's roughhousing the cranky old landlady or spitting on the white shoes of the villain.

"Dick Barthelmess — how we marvel anew every time we see him, at the nice balance of fineness and tense virility that cause him to be the appealing, yet compelling figure that he is! There is a real psychological aspect in his character — and constant, fascinating action with enthralling power of the drama. There are many really thrilling moments.

"And what a wiz Henry King is at putting over drama through the manner in which the characters eye each other! There is the melting tenderness of Dorothy's look, when, as the heart-sick little slavey, she yields at last to Boy's ardent young love; there is the sorrowful and dancing love of the sea captain for his son, told in his eyes; there is the mounting fury in Boy's eyes when he meets his mother's traducer.

"Tyrone Power, as the Sea Wolf sea captain, does the impressive, yet finely shaded work we should expect of him, and the remainder of the cast fit their roles like the fingers to a glove."

Idle Boasting

The picture business in its earlier days seems to have felt that unless it made a great deal of noise and engaged in much idle boast it would be passed unnoticed in quarters where it was seeking recognition.

Perhaps, on that ground, much of this practice was excusable in the past. But at this time the silly boasting to which we refer does not help in the least but on the contrary leaves the impression with a great deal of the outside world that the business is far from grown up.

A conspicuous instance of idle boasting is the frequently heard assertion that the motion picture industry ranks fourth or fifth among the leading industries of America. This assertion misses the mark by some fifty or sixty points. The motion picture industry, great as it is and greater as it certainly shall be, is not fourth or fifth—or anything like it.

This industry need not overstate its case in any particular whatsoever in order to gain every desirable and appropriate recognition. The true story of the business is sufficiently significant. Good sense dictates that spokesmen for the business get down to earth and quit attempting to mislead intelligent outsiders who, instead of being impressed, are only disgusted with such obvious misrepresentation.

Publicity That Hurts

Newspaper and magazine publicity to be helpful must consist of and be based upon legitimate news. Stories concocted out of the thin air simply for the purpose of getting the name of the individual or the company into print are not constructive. Persons who use their brains are no more pleased with being lied to through newspapers than with being lied to in person.

We believe that one of the most seriously undermining influences now attacking the business is to be found in the sort of publicity that is being shoveled into newspaper and magazine offices. The publications, wanting picture news and being unable largely to get the kind of stuff they want, appear to have abandoned hope and are now printing anything old thing that comes along.

The so-called "fan" magazines represent a distinct problem. Some day, somehow a change in the character of stuff these publications print must be brought about. Very largely they present the professionals of the business, and also certain leading executives, in a light which warns the public to expect the worst. In these papers stars are caused to dribble and drool about their personal affairs, presenting themselves as nitwits who happened to stumble into the lap of luxury and affluence. They ramble on profusely about their personal and most intimate affairs, taking the public by the hand and leading it into their studios, living rooms and even boudoirs. And then when a star gets into trouble, after having been long subjected to this clinical examination in the fan magazines, he wants to be able to declare that his private affairs are his own business and nobody else's!

These magazines present the stars as extraordinary creatures apart from the ordinary race of human beings. They are first of all rolling in wealth. Next they are intellectual giants, thoroughly versed and experienced in everything from marbles to philosophy. Usually, also, they are marvles at a dozen or more athletic activities.

An outraged public will some day demand satisfaction for being victimized with such stuff.

And then there are the newspaper and fan magazine characterizations of some of the leading executives. Instead of insisting upon being presented in the light of thoughtful and hard-working business men they too often allow themselves to be crowned as some kind of extraordinary miracle men.

How we love it. Every zero in its makeup sends a shiver of ecstasy up and down our spinal column. And we long to put on a bathing suit and go out and roll in the snow. (Yes, we do.)

Uniform Contract Is Adopted; Will Be Put in Force at Once

Cohen "Bolts" Meeting; Excuse Regarded Lame

Sets in Conferences for Nearly Year But Avoids Final Meeting—Politics Seen in Action

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, February 6.—The long expected uniform contract is now a fact. After many months of labor in drawing up a document which protects the right of both exhibitor and distributor the new form of contract was officially adopted at a meeting held last Friday in the office of Will H. Hays, and attended by the legal representatives of the producers and distributors' organization, officials of the M. P. T. O. N. Y. and the T. O. C. C.

It was expected Sydney S. Cohen and the officials of the M. P. T. O. A. would also be present and take part in the ratification, but instead of appearing, the president of the national organization sent word to Mr. Hays that he was not prepared to accept the contract in its finality until the members of his organization had had more time to study it. Mr. Cohen requested eighty copies to send out to members of the national organization.

Hitch by National League Totally Unexpected

During all the long months of negotiations during which the various clauses of the contract have been worked out, these clauses have been taken up within the three exhibitor organizations. Many meetings have been held between the Hays' legal advisers and Mr. Cohen, his officials and legal advisers, and a hitch on part of the national association at the last moment was totally unexpected.

However, the detection of Mr. Cohen caused no consternation, and the contract will be used not only in New York state, but all over the country at the option of the exhibitors when contracting for pictures.

It is generally believed that the backing of Mr. Cohen, after sitting in on all the conferences and, apparently, agreeing on the clauses of the agreement as they were worked out, presages a fight on the contract and the Hays' organization by Cohen.

Balks to Aid Self?

It is freely predicted by many of those who have been conversant with all phases of the work of the various committees on the contract, that Mr. Cohen will announce that he has made a last-minute discovery that the uniform contract is all wrong and that the only solution of the troubles of the exhibitors is through the medium of his exhibitor distributing company.

It was announced immediately after the meeting that as soon as they can be printed the new form of contract will be put into use by all of the companies in the Hays' organization, and by many of the independent companies. This form of contract will be sent by the companies to all the exchanges throughout the entire country and in all bookings the exhibitors will be offered his choice of the new form or the old one with which so much lack has been found. It is expected by those who have studied the new form, that it will be the one generally chosen by the exhibitors.

All Factions Represented.

The history-making session got under way promptly at 2:30 o'clock with the following representation:

For the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors, Mr. Hays and Attorneys Rogers and Kirchway.

For the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York, President Charles L. O'Reilly, Sam I. Berman, Joseph Quittner and W. L. Linton.

For the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, Bernard Edelheitz, William Brandt, Charles Stainer, Leo Brecher, S. A. Moross and Counsel James J. Walker.

Although the Herald on following pages publishes in full the new uniform contract, it presents herewith a brief analysis, made by attorneys for the Hays organization and attorneys for the exhibitors, eliminating all legal phraseology, so that the contents of the contract may be easily and quickly digested by those not familiar with law terms:

For the Exhibitor

Here are some of the important changes which are advantageous primarily to the exhibitor

The photoplays to be delivered under the contract are specifically described and identified either by name or by the star who is to appear in them, and the distributor expressly agrees to deliver and the exhibitor to accept all such photoplays,
The Uniform Contract

By MARTIN J. QUIGLEY

The uniform exhibition contract is now a reality and with the realization of this agreement a decidedly important step forward in the affairs of this industry has been accomplished.

The history of this contract is as interesting as the contract itself. At the time of the formation of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America it was realized that a uniform, equitable contract, taking the place of the many contract forms that were in existence, no one of which could be considered anything like an ideal agreement form, was one of the crying needs of the business.

Exhibitors, distributors and producers all were agreed that a standard form of agreement should be worked out. The oldtime deposit system had to be eliminated. Many objectionable difficulties which constantly occurred under the old arrangement had to be wiped out. Despite the unanimity, which included all except that handful who always seeks to keep disagreements between exhibitor and producer alive for political purposes, the task of getting a concrete form of agreement accepted by both sides was a tremendous one. The distributors organization and representatives of exhibitors have been at work on the proposition for more than ten months.

It, of course, need not even be hoped that the new contract is perfect.

Like any other humanly conceived document it doubtless has shortcomings and objectionable features very likely will occur when it is put to a practical test.

But the agreement has been arrived at after laborious effort, coupled on both sides with a spirit of fair play to all concerned. The document itself is of far reaching consequences to the entire industry but a feature of the matter which is of even greater significance is the fact that the adoption of this agreement marks definitely the arrival in this industry of that long hoped for condition under which round-table discussion resulting in a common understanding will take the place of the unceasing bickerings of the old days which developed no constructive results but which served only to create bitterness and hard feelings throughout the trade.

The agreement has been ratified by competent and honest representatives of both the organized exhibitors and the exhibitors at large on one side and on the other side by representatives of companies which control a great percentage of the distribution interests of the country. Having been ratified under these auspices it should be accepted as the law of the business.

Objectors to the contract should be given consideration only to the extent that they are able to contribute practicable and reasonable improvements to the form as it now stands. Even though it may be pointed out that the contract form has features which could be and should be improved this fact should not be permitted to stand in the way of the industry commencing immediately to enjoy the unquestionable advantages of a uniform exhibition contract. Practicable and reasonable amendments should be considered in order at any time but any one with only a generalized criticism of the document, which most likely would be grounded on selfish motives, should be looked upon as a menace to the enjoyment of better and more profitable business conditions in this industry.

This contract, even though it should eventually disclose many features that may properly be subject to amendment, cannot but immediately effect better conditions throughout the business. Under the old, loose system honest theatremen and exhibitors were in innumerable instances at the mercy of crooked operators. Great personal annoyance and greater economic loss followed hand in hand with the old system of many different kinds of contracts, each with some good features and many bad ones.

We look upon the adoption of this uniform exhibition contract as a signal victory over the old might-is-right and the devil-take-the-hindmost code of the business and we commend all exhibitors to the support of it on the basis that it is an honest and diligent effort by competent and trustworthy representatives of all parties concerned to remedy a number of conditions that have been clogging the wheels of progress in this business.

whether released within the contract period or at a later date.

The period by which payment for each picture is to proceed in an exhibition has been shortened from seven days to three days in advance of the date of shipment from the exchange.

No Transportation Responsibility

The contract makes it clear that proper delivery of a print to the exhibitor renders the exchange responsible for transportation charges to the next exhibitor. These changes, designed to make the uniform agreement in line with the prevailing practice, should eliminate the possibility of friction between the exhibitor and the exchange.

The varying amounts required by different distributors as compensation for loss, destruction or injury to film have been rounded up uniformly in the exchange film. It is the hope that the exchange, through the provisions of the agreement, will be able to secure a substantial reduction in the amount heretofore required by most exhibitors.

The Distributor's Responsibility

The distributor expressly assumes responsibility for neglect or default on the part of its employees in connection with the delivery of prints in time for the exhibition scheduled.

The distributor expressly agrees not to authorize or license the exhibition of any photoplay in violation of the section of uniform as "run" clause in the contract.

The events in which the distributor may terminate the contract or suspend service for default of the exhibitor as been limited to failure of the exhibitor to play, or pay for a picture and "re-cycling" by the exhibitor. In addition, the exhibitor has been given the right to terminate the contract in the event of the intentional violation by the distributor of any protection or run clause or the distributor's intentional default in delivering any picture to the exhibitor. Thus the exhibitor has the right to terminate the contract only for a material breach going to the essence of the contract.

Arbitrary Penalties Eliminated

All arbitrary penalties and other provisions of a penal nature in favor of the distributor have been eliminated.

The provision for fixing play dates is covered in Article 8 of the contract and is therein clearly defined. Further, this clause only becomes operative if the exhibitor has failed or neglected to come to the exchange and agree to come to the exchange and agree to come to the exchange and agree to come to the exchange and agree to come to the exchange and agree to come to the exchange and agree to come to the exchange and agree to come to the exchange and agree to come to the exchange and agree to come to the exchange and agree to come to the exchange.

The contract will specify what photoplays included therein are re-issued or re-named pictures.

For the first time, the exhibitor is exempted from liability for failure to perform the contract due to various causes beyond his control.

The provision permitting the distributor to assign the contract has been eliminated. On the other hand, the exhibitor has been given the express privilege to assign the contract with the distributer's consent upon the sale of his theatre.

Drops Time Limitations

All time limitations upon the right of the exhibitor to file claims and commence actions under the contract have been
For the Distributor

Here are some of the important changes which are advantageous primarily to the distributor

The benefits of the new contract from the distributor's point of view may be summed up in a single phrase: The arbitration clause. As will appear from the foregoing, the distributors have been willing to make substantial concessions to the exhibitors for the sake of securing their consent to an arbitration clause which it is hoped will prove fair and effective in protecting and enforcing the rights of both parties to the contract.

This arbitration clause has been prepared with the greatest care and subject to the advice of the firm of Cadwalader, Wickersham & Taft, counsel specially retained for the purpose of passing upon the legality and effect.

Provides for Arbitration.

While arbitration of disputes between distributors and exhibitors has been in effective operation for some time past in New York City and various other localities, the new contract for the first time embodies a provision for such arbitration as an essential part of the agreement of the parties.

It has been the aim of those who prepared this arbitration clause to make it mutual in its operation and hence a provision by which distributors and the exhibitor, who desires to live up to his contract and require the other party to do likewise, the distributors are to be organized in each locality by the local film clubs or boards of trade under rules and regulations which have been submitted to the various organizations and which provide for absolutely equal representation of exhibitors and distributors on each board. The parties agree to submit all disputes under the contract to arbitration and to abide by the result. In the event of the failure or refusal of the distributors to do so, each distributor may (but is not obliged to), demand from such exhibitor security not exceeding $500 under each contract with the exhibitor, and in the event of the exhibitor's failure to furnish such security, each distributor may (but is not obliged to), terminate the contract or suspend service thereunder. Conversely, in the event of the distributor's failure or refusal to submit to arbitration or abide by the result thereof, the exhibitor may terminate all contracts with such distributors and in addition the distributor is deprived of access to the board of arbitration to enforce its claims against any exhibitor until it shall have complied with such award.

There is Nothing to Fear.

The classification of the arbitration clause as one primarily advantageous to the exhibitor in full measure and also for the benefit of the distributors is somewhat arbitrary. It is believed that every exhibitor who intends, in good faith, to live up to his contract, and nothing whatever to fear from the arbitration clause, but, on the contrary, will be materially benefited by its effective operation, both as against such distributors as his fellow exhibitors and distributors who disregard his contract rights.

The New Uniform Contract

The HERALD Herewith Presents the Drafted Contract of the New Document Which Was Ratified Last Week in New York

Agreement, made in triplicate this day of [date], between [names of parties], a corporation (hereinafter called "the Exhibitor") and a corporation (hereinafter called "the Distributor") of the State of New York, for the purpose of selling under the title [title], the photoplays listed herein, and all other photoplays herein mentioned and copyright hereinafter specified, at the same time and place, and at the same price, in the aggregate sum of [sum], subject to the following conditions: [details of agreement]

The Exhibitor shall pay to the Distributor the sum of six [6] cents for each reel of film, or any other part thereof, delivered to the Distributor, and the Distributor shall return the same to the Exhibitor within thirty days after the date of such delivery.

In the event of the failure of the Exhibitor to perform any of the provisions of this agreement, the Distributor may terminate the same at any time, and the Distributor shall not be liable for any damages thereunder.

other time or place than those herein specified or determined as hereinafter provided but the Distributor shall not be liable for any failure or default in delivering the above to such Exhibitor, or to any of the above named stars or other performers to appear therein to the time or place as herein specified or determined for any reason not within the control of the Distributor whether of a similar or any other nature. It is understood, however, that the Exhibitor, or his employees hereunder shall not be deemed a cause beyond the Distributor's control.

Sixth: In the event of default by the Exhibitor in exhibition or payment for any photoplays in accordance with the provisions hereof, or in the event of any failure of the Exhibitor, Distributor, or their agents or employees to perform any of the covenants or obligations herein contained in the contract, then:

Seventh: In the event of default by the Exhibitor in the performance of any of the protection or "run" clauses contained in this contract, or in the event of the intentional default of the Distributor in delivering any photoplays as herein specified in the contract, the Distributor may at his option terminate this contract and may select exhibition dates within the next months commencing with such date of availability. Within two weeks after the mailing of notice of such default the Exhibitor shall notify the Distributor in writing of the exhibition in the territory within which such failure was noticed by the Distributor, to the fact of such default, and the Distributor may, at any time after the expiration of such notice, shall have the right, at the option of the Distributor, to rescind any contract with such Exhibitor.

Eighth: The Exhibitor shall give the Distributor at least four weeks' notice in writing of the date upon which each photoplay, the exhibition dates of which are not specified in this contract, will be available to the Exhibitor and such notice shall be made at the same time notify the Exhibitor of the time of exhibition within the time or order within which such failure shall cease and be remedied, but, if the Distributor shall fail to accept such notice within the time or order within which such failure shall cease and be remedied, the Distributor shall be deemed to have waived such failure and the Distributor shall proceed with the performance of the contract as if such notice had been timely given.

Ninth: None of the photoplays specified in this agreement are reissues from old negatives or are old sound photoplays as except the following:

If prevented by censorship, fire, or similar damage by the elements, riots, insurrection, acts of war, enemy, public calumny, or the order of any court of competent jurisdiction, to prevent the performance of this contract by the Exhibitor, the latter shall have the right to extend the term of any contract and a reasonable time to effect a change in the theater if such change be necessary or, if the damage be of a similar or nature, the but Exhibitor shall give prompt notice to the Distributor of the same, and a reasonable time to effect a change in the theater for the reason therefor.

Eleventh: This contract shall not be assigned by either party without the written consent of the other party, and, provided, that if the Distributor sells all or less of its interests in the theatre above specified, he may assign this contract or any part hereof, in writing, to the person buying such interest.

Twelfth: This contract shall not be transferred to run photoplays as delivered without alteration, except with the written or oral consent of the Distributor, or the written or oral consent of the Distributor, or the written or oral consent of the Distributor, or the written or oral consent of the Distributor, or the written or oral consent of the Distributor.

Thirteenth: The Exhibitor agrees to pay the Distributor, upon demand, any Government tax imposed or any sums paid by the Distributor for the benefit of the Exhibitor, and such sums shall be paid within forty days after said payment is made, or within thirty days after receipt thereof, and the Distributor shall have the right to deduct from the unpaid sums of the Exhibitor, the amount of any Government taxes so paid by the Distributor.

Fourteenth: This contract calls for payments computed upon the Exhibitor's gross receipts, the same to be paid to the Distributor daily a fixed itemized statement of the gross receipts and the admissions thereto upon the play dates of said photoplays, upon forms supplied by the Distributor to be completed by the Exhibitor's bookkeepers, and the Distributor shall have access at all reasonable times for the purpose of inspection to the books and records relating to the Exhibitor's box office receipts during the period of exhibition of said photoplays.

Fifteenth: Any Exhibitor who shall fail to charge an actual minimum admission fee of $5.00 to each person attending at the Exhibitor's box office to the Exhibitor for the admissions thereto upon the play dates of said photoplays, upon forms supplied by the Distributor to be completed by the Exhibitor's bookkeepers, shall be liable to the Distributor for the difference between the sum of the amounts which may be required to be paid by the Exhibitor and the amount collected by the Exhibitor for the Exhibitor's box office receipts during the period of exhibition of said photoplays.

Sixteenth: All advertising matter used by the Exhibitor in connection with the exhibition of said photoplays must be leased from or through the Distributor on the terms agreed to and distributed by the Distributor shall have access at all reasonable times for the purpose of inspection to the books and records relating to the Exhibitor's box office receipts during the period of exhibition of said photoplays.

Seventeenth: The Exhibitor agrees to pay the Distributor, upon demand, the sum of $250 as hereinafter provided within thirty days after such failure, refund or finding, and in addition the Distributor shall not be entitled to recover from such Exhibitor any sums paid by the Distributor for the benefit of the Exhibitor.

Nineteenth: Any such termination by either party, however, shall be without any liability to the other party or to the Distributor, the Distributor being entitled to any sums paid by the Exhibitor and the Distributor by mailing notice that Exhibitor shall not have any such claim or claim after such failure, refund or finding, and in addition the Distributor shall not be entitled to recover from such Exhibitor any sums paid by the Distributor for the benefit of the Exhibitor.
M. P. T. O. A. Convention in Chicago Set for May 19-26

Sydney Cohen Takes Management from Chicago Exhibitors and Will Make All Preliminary Arrangements in New York

The fourth annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America will be held at the Coliseum in Chicago, May 19 to 26, unless something unforeseen happens.

Leases for the Coliseum have already been signed, it is understood, and A. J. Moeller, general manager of the organization, is said to have been given complete charge of the preliminary arrangements by Sydney S. Cohen, national president.

Control of Exhibition Taken from Chicago

One of the surprises of the week was the news that the management of the motion picture and accessories exhibition, which was to be a big feature of the convention, has been taken from the Illinois M. P. T. O. and will be in charge of the national officers.

Therein lies a story with many interesting sidelights and with promises of many developments.

Asks $15,000 Guarantee

Two weeks ago, Sydney S. Cohen, national president, made a special trip to Chicago to confer with the board of directors of the Illinois M. P. T. O. He was brief and to the point. He stated that the national organization regarded the proposed exhibition as a source of revenue and would have to have a guarantee of $15,000 from the Chicago exhibitors for the privilege.

The ultimatum came as something of a jolt, as the Chicago theatre men had been planning elaborate entertainment for the delegates and visitors at the convention and had looked to the exhibition to furnish considerable money for this purpose.

They were particularly anxious to banquet all of the visitors without charge and treat them to sightseeing tours, a lake excursion and other stunts. The cost of doing this would run into a large sum of money. A successful exhibition would go a long way in the financing, and in addition, individual exhibitors and public-spirited citizens could be counted upon for generous donations.

Vote to Surrender Privilege

Even the big guarantee demand failed to discourage all of the directors, but after a long discussion and a vote, it was decided to surmount the concession.

Just what response Cohen himself can get from motion picture companies and accessory concerns is regarded as problematical. His "bolting" of the uniform contract meeting is regarded as further complicating his relations with the film companies, while the failure of the exhibition at the Washington convention may discourage some of the accessory manufacturers.

In the meantime, Chicago exhibitors have turned back to the entertainment problem with a determination to make good regardless of the set-back, given their plans. They feel that Chicago's past record for hospitality demands strenuous efforts to uphold and are hard at work on ways and means.

Association Short of Funds

At the Washington convention, Mr. Cohen announced that there was an urgent need of funds for the M. P. T. O., stating that he had a personal claim for $5,000.

No public statement as to the financial condition of the national association has been made recently. Senator James J. Walker recently brought suit for $6,000 he claimed was due him for service as counsel.

Missouri Exhibitors Have Separate Units

(STILL TO EXHIBITORS HERALD)

ST. LOUIS, MO, Feb. 6—Missouri is now divided into two units of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, separate charters having been issued to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Missouri and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Missouri.

Joseph Mogler of St. Louis is president of the former unit and Charles T. Sears, Nevada, Mo., president of the latter. The move follows a request made by state exhibitors at a recent convention.

Candidacy Is Prompted to Frustrate Possible Cohen Control It Is Believed

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Politics, in large gobs, is hanging in clusters these days anywhere a bunch of members of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce congregate. The question of who will be the next president of the T. O. C. C. and who will be its secretary is being widely discussed. The nominations will be made on Feb. 27 and the election will take place one month later.

It is said that President William Landau does not desire the office another year, feeling that his personal business requires all his time and attention. Many of the rank and file of the T. O. C. C. are of the opinion that without S. A. Moross looking after the secretarial duties, it wouldn't be the T. O. C. C. and will insist on his re-election.

See Cohen Plan to Rule

William Brandt, who, it was generally believed, would not again seek the presidency, gunned up the works last week by announcing that he would again be a candidate. Brandt and his closest friends, who are known to be politically antagonistic to Sydney Cohen on all counts, it is freely said, reached this conclusion by the discovery of what they believe to be a plan of the president of the M. P. T. O. A. to get control of the T. O. C. C.

According to several of those who urged Brandt to become a candidate, Brandt yielded when it was shown to him that unless he did so a slate looked upon with a great deal of favor by the Cohen office might receive the preference of the voters.

Would Put Ochs in Race

This slate, according to the same information, was to place Lee Ochs in the presidential chair, with John Mannheimer succeeding Sam Moross as secretary. This is offset to some extent by the T. O. C. C. members who point out that no great friendship is supposed to exist between Ochs and Cohen. John Mannheimer is known to be one of the strongest friends of Cohen in the T. O. C. C.

Coast Producers and Stars Strike Blow at Film Censor Reformers Throughout Country Seeking Laws Which Would Take Millions of Dollars Annually From Income of Theatre Men

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, February 6.—Headed by Joseph M. Schenck and Douglas Fairbanks, producers and stars on the West Coast, will join in another big organization to fight censorship. Included in the roster of the alliance will be Norma and Constance Talmadge, Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Joseph M. Schenck, Charlie Chaplin, Jackie Coogan and Harold Lloyd. It is understood that Charles Ray also will become active in the organization.

Reformers Seem to Think Money Grows on Bushes

While the foregoing news from the Coast lends optimism to the legislative situation, reports from other sections of the nation are far from cheerful. If the reform element has its way in the legislatures, taxes and other levies piled upon the industry will sap it of millions of dollars annually. Iowa wants 2,000,000 annually from amusement enterprises in taxes, while Indiana, Idaho, Iowa, Missouri, Nebraska and other states would collect hundreds of thousands from producers and distributors, and ultimately the exhibitors, by establishing censor boards.

Following is a comprehensive review of the legislative situation:

Iowa

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

DES MOINES, Ia., Feb. 6.—Iowa’s motion picture theatres, with the assistance from other Senate assessments, are asked to contribute $1,000,000 annually to the county school fund in a bill drafted by the special tax commission and now before the general assembly. It calls for a 10 cent tax on admission charges, to be paid by patrons, and turned over by the theatres to the county treasurer on or before the fifth of each month. Collected tickets, under provisions of the law, would have to be kept in sealed containers for audit by the county assessor. The law, if enacted, would become effective on July 1, 1923. The usual exemptions would include elaborate, charity performances and community or cooperatively operated houses—are made. Failure to print box office price upon face of ticket would bring a $100 fine. Delinquency in turning over taxes would bring a penalty of 5 per cent a month from the date when due.

It’s Up to the Public

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

WEST UNION, Ia., Feb. 6.—Petitions are being circulated here by both factions in the Sunday opening fight to determine whether or not the town shall permit its theatres to operate on the Sabbath. Both sides in the movement—those favoring and those opposing Sunday shows—have been given two weeks in which to circulate their petitions.

No Worry, Say Friends

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

DES MOINES, Ia., Feb. 6.—Friends of the industry have little fear of the censorship bill now in a subcommittee of the house of representatives being enacted. Representative Elliott, chairman of the body considering the measure, expresses doubt that the bill will ever leave the committee.

New York

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

MECHANICSVILLE, N.Y., Feb. 6.—Sunday opening again is being agitated here and it will go to a vote of the residents on February 28, the referendum being ordered by the board of aldermen. It now appears probable that the vote will be favorable. Those favoring the movement have adopted this slogan: “What other places have, so should we have.”

Possibility Repeal May Fail

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 6.—Nothing new developed in the censorship situation during the past week, as the two repeal bills introduced are still in committee, without a companion bill introduced in the senate. Among many there is a feeling that the law may not be repealed at all. While the senate is Democratic, the assembly remains Republican. Also, the censor boards report that foreign companies were sending insidious propaganda films to this country has changed the aspect of the situation.

Indiana

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 6.—Representatives of the Indiana Laborers of Photoplays, Parent-Teachers Associations, Girl Scouts, exhibitors and producers on the one side and agents of the Lord’s Day Alliance, the Indianapolis Church Federation and the Legislative Council of Women on the other, clashed last week in a three hour discussion of the Steele censorship bill now before the committee on public morals. W. S. Fleming, erstwhile Chicago minister and now paid agent of the International Reform body, was the leader in support of the bill. Alvah J. Rucker, Indianapolis lawyer, speaking for the laborers, said that if there had been censorship in 1600 William Shakespeare would not have been as well known today as Bill Higgins of Indianapolis. Robert Lieber also spoke on behalf of the association.

The Funny Side of Exhibition

By WOODHULL BROTHERS

(Opera House, Bad Axe, Mich.)

We have a “valued” patron who has not been endowed, as liberally by the Creator intellectually as he had been with whiskers and a desire to see our shows. His name is George Dickie and his home is in UbI, Mich.

George has been the worry of my sweet young life, as he always wants to see every show as often as it is shown when he is a guest of our fair city. Feeling a certain compassion for the harmless more or less likable old derelict, he is often our guest. He chews tobacco, and was taught by some good man not to expectorate on the floor, so he would hang on to the collection bucket, wait until he could hang on no more and then clomp, clomp, clomp up the aisle to the door and unload, all of which was very disturbing to others about him.

I was about to despair of being able to entertain George any more when I hit upon the idea of giving him a special seat to one side, near the front and all by himself, and furnishing a cuspidor.

This worked so well that the next night George was on hand with a twelve-quant pail.

George is frequently our guest over night. I roll up the aisle carpet and make him a bed. He is a personage and never takes any chance on a bath, shave or hair cut during the winter, and seldom during the summer.

About seven years ago in a small town a youngster came up to me and wanted to get in for 5 cents. (I was charging 10 cents for children.) In fun I told him he could get in if he would hold his hand over one eye and see only 5 cents’ worth. He agreed to do this. An hour later as I was going down the aisle of the theatre I noticed that this littleurchin was looking at the show with one hand over his eye as he had promised. I got a good laugh out of it and then told him he could use both eyes and get 10 cents’ worth.

Emile Coue, French apostle of autosuggestion, is seen here approving the scenario by Elinore Leffingwell for his only authorized motion picture, "The Message of Emile Coue." The short subject was produced by Motion Picture Arts, Inc., for distribution by Educational. Coue will use his returns from the picture in establishing an institute in New York.

Universal exchange staff at Washington, D.C., snapped during open house week, the official house warming of their new quarters. The three men at the right are: Art Schmidt, general sales manager; Harry Brown, Washington manager, and Jules Levy, district manager. The Week in New York

EVIDENTLY we started something last week when we allowed Herb Crooker to ease his soul by confession. Now comes to bat one Walter E. Shirlow, who is a member of Crooker's A. M. P. A. publicity committee, but supposes as with Crooker and Charlie McCarthy, it didn't take. And now he's so peevéd over Crooker's confession that he writes:

"Dear John:—I'm not squittin' in any way, but in the other mystery, which if you don't know it, is the name given to the row of coops that protect the First National publicity hounds from insurance solicitors, bill collectors, hootch peddlers, and the outside world.

"Neither am I cleaved in any veil of mystery. Also I didn't get any Christmas presents except from John Stahl which isn't a Christmas present at all in the proper sense of the term, but simply an indication of his meller feeling for all us guys who draw down less than the L. I. B. estants.

"What I want to know is where this guy Herb Crooker gets off using your column for personal publicity. He isn't hired by any one to do that.

Herb Crooker says he was chairman of the publicity committee of the A. M. P. A. That's what I've seen in his nose on the letterhead. Outside of that I wouldn't have known it any more than you can tell the name of a subway station from the conductor. Of course I can't speak for Charlie McCarthy, who is all right even if he does live in Xutley, N. Y.; but saying something in my own defense, if Herb ever gave me an assignment he must have done so with a mouth silenced.

And that's that for Crooker's alibi.

And speaking of the A. M. P. A. here is a suggestion on how to play charades, garnered from "Helpful Hints for Happy Fan" in the last issue of the A. M. P. A. Bulletin. Try it on your boss.

"In the first place, you must inveigle your boss up on the stage. Hold a stock certificate in front of his nose if you can't get him there any other way. Then blindfold him and crash him over the head a terrific blow with a chair. After he regains consciousness, (this is important) you must all guess the meaning of the act. If no one can guess, dear children, the answer is: 'I Must Have a Raise Or You Get Another Crash!'

A series of seven one-reelers which will soon be started by Warner Brothers on the coast, will get a big play from the publicity man of the National golf party. Also it is expected that the next tournament will show great reduction in the golf scores as the golfers are watching these pictures.

Gene Sarazen, the champ of champs in the entrancing game of cow pasture pool, has been engaged by the Warners to be featured in seven pictures to be made under the supervision of Harry Rapf. The series will combine comedy and golf instruction, and the first of the pictures will be commenced immediately after the return of Mr. Sarazen from Miami, where he is showing the natives and winter visitors how to drive and put.

P. S.—Lon Young denies that he is cast to play the comedy part in the Sarazen series.

Mort Blumenstock has taken the advice of his old college chum, Horace Greeley. Mort ordered his Pullman reservations coincidentally with the arrival of George Landy in New York. Not that the town isn't big enough for them both; George was doing First National's publicity on the West coast with John McCormick when Jackie Coogan's dad came along and offered him what has been described as a Liberty Bond issue to transfer his allegiance to the young juvenile. Bill Yearsley looked around his office, saw a chance to get rid of Mort, and ordered him west to take the Ex-Landy job.

George Seitz

Among the ten or twelve producing units which are now supplying the widely varied standard product distributed by Pathe, none holds a more distinguished record than the main source of the long and successful list of Pathe serials.

At the head of this unit is Director-producer George Brackett Seitz, whose most recent achievement is "Plunder," which celebrates Pearl White's return to the screen in her famous specialty of Pathe's chapterplay star.

Either as author, director or producer—frequently as all three—Mr. Seitz figures as the presiding genius of fully twenty of these episode productions, and has been instrumental in refining and developing the present clear and censorship-proof standard Pathe serial form. His career before entering the picture field peculiarly fitted him for these important services.

On leaving college he entered an art school, and two or three years later was one of the most successful of New York's Greenwich Village community of magazine illustrators. He also wrote successful fiction for the magazines—and these two well-developed faculties gave him his first opportunity in connection with picture production.

As Pathe scenario editor he wrote voluminously for serial production, and was soon directing as well, with such success that, a few years ago, he became a Pathe serial producer.

His former work for the stage as author of several successful plays also served him well in these activities, as was indicated in the compact dramatic action of those early Pearl White serials—"The Iron Claw," "The Fatal Ring," "The Lightning Raider," "The Black Secret," "The Exploits of Elaine," etc.

Mr. Seitz also is producer of the current Pathe serials starring Charles Hurchinson.
Thalberg Will Be Partner of Mayer Gets Interest and Vice Presidency in Firm—Quits

"U" Feb. 15

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 6—When Irving Thalberg accepts his post as director general of Universal February 15 he will step into the vice-presidency of the Louis B. Mayer program. He will hold a substantial interest in the firm, donated to him upon signing of the contract last week, it is said.

To Have Free Rein

According to Mr. Mayer, Mr. Thalberg will be a full-fledged member of the firm and will be permitted to exercise free rein in the development and exploitation of his artistic and creative talents. It was said that he would hold the same position in the studio as Mr. Mayer as far as production and the choice of stories was concerned.

"I believe that Mr. Thalberg is one of the greatest executive finds that the film industry has produced," said Mr. Mayer in commenting on his newly-elected partner's entry into the firm.

Plan Increased Production

With the arrival of Mr. Thalberg at the Mayer firm, an immediate expansion program will be inaugurated. Through the acquisition of new companies and new directors, the present production schedule of eight big specials a year will be increased to fifteen with a policy of great stories and all-star casts in every picture. The studio facilities will be enlarged accordingly with more than $200,000 to be invested in new covered stages and equipment.

Zukor and Kent Will Study Foreign Affairs

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Accompanied by a general manager of distribution and Clarence Bowden, former member of the Hoover Relief Commission, Adolph Zukor, president of Famous-Lasky Corporation will sail for Europe on the Olympic February 10 in the interests of the company's foreign business.

The party will visit many countries on the continent including Paris, Naples, Rome, Constantinople, Bucharest and Scandinavia and will remain abroad until about the middle of April.

Hunt, Missing Manager

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., Feb. 6—The mysterious disappearance of Ted "Ding" for several weeks, house manager identified with Ruben & Finkenstein theaters, has baffled both the police and his employers. Max Force, who was manager of the Loring theater when he disappeared a week ago, gave no notice of his leaving. He was not short in his accounts and was considered a capable manager by his employers.

December Figures Show Increase in Theatre Patronage

(Washington Bureau, Exhibitors Herald)

WASHINGTON, D.C., Feb. 6.—Increased business, both as compared with the preceding month and with the corresponding month of 1921, is indicated for December by figures issued by the Treasury Department, showing admission tax collections for that month. The fact that current taxes have fallen reached a point in excess of those of the corresponding period a year ago and have been on the upgrade for several months is taken as an indication that the theatrical business of the country will soon be in a condition nearly as prosperous as that it enjoyed before the disastrous depression of eighteen months ago.

Tax collections on admissions for December amounted to $6,525,240, the department reports, as compared with $5,904,700 for December, 1921. Collections for the month of November, 1922, were $5,454,700, indicating that the holiday attendance at amusements was more satisfactory than in the preceding month.

Rumor Settlement Is Near Between F. P. L. and Rodolph Valentino

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Rumors that the differences between Rodolph Valentino and Famous Players-Lasky Corporation were in a fair way of settlement have been getting stronger along Broadway for the past few days, and a declaration of peace would not be surprising. In commenting on the matter, an official of Famous Players said:

"We stand ready now, as always, to give Mr. Valentino the most artistic pictures it is possible to make. We are still holding Allan Dwan, who is ready to do "The Spanish Cavalier," the script for which was prepared at Mr. Valentino's request by June Mathis. His pictures would have the best production results that the industry affords. He could have the best scenario writers and directors available, and you may be sure that we would give him every possible cooperation.

"As to his compensation, we always have been and are now prepared to discuss and readjust his contract commensurate with his present-day popularity, as we have from time to time done with other artists. All we ask in return is his honest cooperation."

Lyman H. Howe Dies At Boston Hospital

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

BOSTON, MASS., Feb. 6—Lyman H. Howe, originator of travel pictures, died at the Christian Science Sanitarium here following an illness of two months. He was 66 years old.

Mr. Howe was born in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., where he lived and conducted the Lyman Howe Moving Picture Company. He retired from active business about fifteen years ago but continued as president of his company.

Schenck Gets Equal Interest in Circuit

West Coast Theatres Deal Involves Millions—Becomes Director

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 6—Joseph M. Schenck's interest in West Coast Theatres, Inc., announced in the Herald last week in connection with the acquisition by that firm of the theatres of Turner & Dahnken, the new interest is that of any of the members of the firm, it has been learned. According to an announcement by West Coast Theatres officials, ten million dollars are involved in the deal which makes Schenck a fifth partner with Michael Gore, Sol Lesser, Adolph Ramish and A. L. Combs.

Production Not Affected

In assuming the interest in the theatre chain it is stated that the association does not affect Mr. Schenck's producing activities and that he will not be concerned in the transaction except in an obvious and indirect manner.

Mr. Turner & Dahnken string of forty theatres and exchange employs the West Coast Theatres chain to a total of 100 houses in California.

Called "Great Achievement"

Commenting on the matter President Michael Gore said: "It is a great achievement. There are many circuits of this kind but the fact that Mr. Joseph M. Schenck is associated with us gives California the biggest and best circuit in the world."

Starts Service for First Run Theatres

A service, intended primarily for first run theatres, has been inaugurated by Eugene Clifford, 301 State street, Brooklyn, N. Y. In addition to previewing, the new enterprise will furnish special reports on first run music scores and presentations, and supply complete exploitation campaigns.

Mr. Clifford has been engaged in exploitation work for a number of years with the Associated First National Pictures and other distributing companies and more recently has acted as eastern representative for a number of producers.

Teaches Exchanges How To Handle Films Right

NEW YORK, Feb. 6—Proper methods of handling film will be shown to Paramount exchanges by Earl J. Denison, film inspection expert, who is making a tour of branches. Mr. Denison is carrying a special picture on the subject and will address the exchanges.

He will show correct methods to scrape and slice films among other things, and emphasize the necessity for cleanliness of the room, tables, gloves and hands of those who work on films.
Prohibition of Inflammable Film Would Present Big Burden

Situation Is Serious, Says Frederick H. Elliott Who States Slow Burning Type Is Impracticable

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—The motion picture industry is facing a grave situation—one that will place upon it a terrific tax, if present agitation to prohibit the use of inflammable or nitro cellulose film is put into effect, Frederick H. Elliott, vice-president of Feaster Manufacturing Company warns. Not only is the slow burning type not practicable, he states, but it must result in an increase in picture costs.

COMMENTING on the activity of fire marshals' associations and similar bodies on the subject, Mr. Feaster said: "I doubt if the motion picture industry fully realizes the seriousness of the situation as the substitution of nitrate and slow burning film will place a terrific tax upon the industry. This will not alone in the increased cost of film, but the slow burning film cannot be compared with the film now used as to length of service and durability.

"Owing to its brittle quality the slow burning film will easily crack and break, thus rendering it absolutely worthless and frequently ruining an entire feature production.

This proposal should be given the most serious consideration by leaders of the industry. It certainly merits the attention of those who have so many millions invested, as well as of the theatre owners and managers, who may not be aware of the fact that with the substitution of slow burning film for nitro cellulose, the price of pictures must inevitably increase to meet the additional cost of prints and their necessary frequent replacements.

Mr. Elliott calls attention to the activities of the Fire Marshals' Association of North America, which is urging upon Congress the passage of a bill which would prohibit the handling of inflammable motion picture film in inter-state commerce after January 1, 1925. The International Association of Fire Engineers, composed of Fire Chiefs, has also adopted a resolution calling for similar action by Congress. Steps in the same direction have been taken in Canada and in foreign countries as well.

Considerable quantities of nitro cellulose film have been found in department and toy stores during the holidays, placed on sale to amateur operators and others inexperienced in the handling of inflammable film. It is partly because of the practical impossibility of keeping the inflammable film out of the hands of non-professional users, that the fire marshals and fire chiefs are moving to abolish its use altogether, he states.

MONEY MAKING IDEAS

Whch Have Been Used Successfully by Exhibitors to Build Up Their Patronage

By HOWARD K. ALLEN
(Rialto Theatre, Harlington, Tex.)

Why not try a "Family Night" once each week? I have a 600-seat house and it is almost a certainty that two-but-two customers. I put out a family night and I have them all come in at the same time. Run it every Friday and it's the best habit maker I've ever put over. In fact, mine is an institution now.

Have run as high as $90 on one night and that's a durned sight more than I'd take in otherwise. I give them a dandy good program and it makes a wonderful impression and has overcome a lot of prejudice. Try it out if you have enough seats.

EDITOR'S NOTE—A description of "Family Night" will also be found under the heading of "MONEY MAKING IDEAS" in the Office Record.

A window display on "Burning Sands" attracted attention and aided in putting this picture over despite sickness and general depression in this small town at this time of year, which is hard to overcome. Made a small tent from a strip of red and white awning and set a couple of palms from my theatre on either side of tent. A 22x28 was set near the tent.

On the floor, a layer of sand was put thick enough to cover nicely. From the merchant's stock, Dromedary dates and coconaut and other canned goods were taken to finish up the display and also to cooperate with the merchant. It cost nothing but my time.

Texan Sees "Exploiter" As Added Expense; Says Showman Must Pay for "Fol-de-rols"

O. B. Sterling, Sterling theatre, Dayton, Texas, injects a new note into the exhibitorial discussion of the professional exploitation man's status with the following communication:

EXHIBITORS HERALD,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:

The discussion started in the January 27th "Herald" on the "exploiter" should be of interest to every exhibitor.

Personally we regard them of very little value as a great many of the pictures which receive the most exploitation have only mediocre box office value if any. If the "exploiter" would see his pictures and confine himself to the truth he would be an invaluable asset to the exhibitor, but he is not paid to do this and he resolves himself into nothing more than an added expense to the exhibitor, for I'd have you know the poor exhibitor finally pays for these "fol-de-rols."

O. B. STERLING.

The discussion to which Mr. Sterling refers was started by J. P. Lannon, Isis theatre, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, in the Theatre Letter which appeared on page 48 of the issue named. Mr. Lannon commended a "Goldwynner" who had assisted him in a campaign and expressed a desire to hear experiences of other exhibitors co-operating with professional exploitation men. The Theatre opened its pages to showmen for interchange of communications.

Mr. Sterling is the first to comment adversely on professional exploitation service as an institution. That a difference of opinion exists among theatremen is evident and The Theatre believes that the question warrants discussion to such an extent as will definitely determine the exact status of the professional exploitation man in the industry. Accordingly the original question is reiterated:

What have the "exploiteers" done for you?

Exhibitor Advertises Lobby Cutouts to Subsequent Runs

George Rea, whose work is familiar to Theatre readers, this week offers lobby display materials he has used for sale to subsequent run exhibitors through a Classified Advertisement in this paper. A front on "Peg o' My Heart" is specifically mentioned in the Rea copy and a photograph of the lobby display on that feature is reproduced upon the following page.

The Rea advertisement, the first of its kind, was inspired by a "Theatre Construction and Equipment" article in the February 3rd "Herald," in which it was pointed out that through sale of used exploitation materials to subsequent run exhibitors first run men, as well as others, would be enabled to employ more expensive and better exploitation as a result of the general economy effected.

The Theatre believes that the plan suggested is eminently sound and that a system of accessory distribution yielding big returns through elimination of waste and extension of exploitation can be developed. The proposition patently merits the serious consideration of Theatre readers.

Better Theatre Platform

9. Illustrations

Use of illustrations is practically indispensable in the sale of motion pictures to the public.

Motion pictures are illustrations—illustrating ideas, stories, history, life. Illustrations truly illustrating them compose, patently, the best possible motion picture copy.

It was possible to create two advertisements of exactly equal intrinsic merit, using text in one and illustration in the other; the illustrated advertisement would still be superior, in that by its pictorial character it possesses the additional virtue of acting as an advertisement for the "illustration" that is the motion picture.

As the ninth plank in this better theatre platform, it is advised, therefore, that illustrations be given preference at all times over other forms of theatre advertising.

A Trip to McVicker's

A few years ago Chicago's down-town motion picture theatres consisted of unpretentious little 200- and 300-seat houses, and it was seldom the T. B. M. and his wife came to the Loop to see a picture show, except some special attraction at a "legitimate" house.

A large theatre devoted exclusively to motion pictures was then regarded as a foolish venture as far as getting patronage away from the neighborhood houses, of which Chicago has some of the finest.

But a trip to the New McVicker's, the Chicago or the Roosevelt, any afternoon or evening, will thoroughly convince one that Chicago has been educated to attend the first-run houses and do attend them.

Last week Jones, Linek & Schafer offered one of the most complete and satisfying programs to be found anywhere in these broad United States, at their new McVicker's theatre. The program consisted of the following:

I. Orphans—Offerback
McVicker's orchestra under H. Leopold Spitalny
II. Spitalny's classical Jazz Number—"My Buddy."
III. W. Remington Welch's song revue on the Wurlitzer.
IV. "Garden of Dreams" with Boris Pavot and ballet, one of the prettiest and most tasteful numbers ever presented in Chicago.
V. Literary Digest's "Fun from the Prewar Years."
VI. "Java Head," the Paramount picture with Loretta Joy, Jacqueline Logan, George Fawcett, Rose Tappendley and others.
VII. Comedy, "Hazel from Hollywood" Christie-Educational.

This week the McVicker's offers an adventure "II Guaran" by Gomez and another Spitalny classical jazz number.
"PEG O' MY HEART." Metro, as exploited by George Rea, Colonial theatre, Washington C. H., O. Mr. Rea advertises portions of this display for sale to other exhibitors in this issue, an exhibitorial departure.

"REMEMBRANCE," Goldwyn, caused Julius Fogelman, Colonial theatre, Allentown, to produce this artistic composition. It effects an admirable approach.

Illustrations

Reproductions on this page illustrate graphically the brief but important Ninth Plank in "A Better Theatre Platform" presented upon the preceding page. Illustrations of screen attractions offered, by lobby display, by newspaper ad, by distribution literature or otherwise, are vital factors in box office success. Better illustrations than these are seldom observed.

"SHADOWS," Lichtman, lighted lobby piece by Foster Moore.
"OMAR THE TENTMAKER." First National, brought out this lobby broadside at the Rivoli theatre, Portland, Ore. Note oriental rugs at sides of lobby especially. Interest in orientals is a constantly active force.

Illustrations

Reproductions on this page attest the interest building power of lobby material that really illustrate the screen attractions for which they are employed. In all advertising strong initial appeal to interest is essential. It is this appeal that creates an audience for the copy. In advertising motion pictures, themselves "illustrations" in a sense, this is best done by use of illustrations.

"HUMAN HEARTS," Universal, escaped none who passed the Family theatre, Davenport, while this display was in use. Especially note cutout in foreground.

World's Greatest Films, Adolph Zukor's Ambition

PAGE THREE of the section. The advertising principle involved, intensive exploitation of a picture program booked, is of sound foundation. This section constitutes a model.

PAGE FOUR is patently and properly Paramount. As a whole the section stands as an achievement and a practical sales manual for exhibitors desirous of thus exploiting any block of pictures.

STAFF ARTISTS are decidedly worth while when they produce such work as this five column layout for “Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood” by Bennet, of the Princess, Sioux City. The reproduction is its own testimonial.

TWO COLUMNS pay big dividends when used as by the Liberty, Kansas City, for “Dr. Jack.” Pathe. The ad bears reduction admirably, a severe test.

STOCK CUTS are ably employed by Waterloo showmen. “The Right That Failed,” Metro, and “When Danger Smiles,” Vitagraph, are advertised as above, two columns each, by the Rialto and Plaza.

TED, THAT GRIM JESTER
WHO LOVES TO TURN THE LAUGH ON US, STRIPS MANY OF US AT JUST THE MOMENT WHEN WE REACH FOR SUCCESS OR GREAT HAPPINESS.

IT PLAYED with Marie Lamont, the Broadway actress who was the play-thing of "Million Dollar" Morton, and then jested with the millionaire himself, turning the one real love of his life into bitterness and ashes.

It is THE Heart of Every Woman there beats an instinct that is stronger than any other emotion—the sacred instinct of mother love. When Marie Lamont discovered that the most notorious riddle on Broadway had won her innocent daughter's heart she was ready to fight with her very life!

"The Grim Comedian," featuring debonair Jack Holt and Gloria Hope, tells as powerful a story as has ever found its way screenward.
It will be shown at the Casino Theatre Monday and Tuesday.

When the man who wrote this letter to his wife came back to her—"she wondered, isn't she lonesome?"

Both sides of the Dangerous Age are here. It can't wait to have everyone read it. One solid week starting tomorrow—Sunday.

Suggesting a Symposium on Serial Stunt

Arthur M. Ford, new Theatre Letter writer, contributes this week a description of a clearly sensational and stately successful serial stunt.

The Theatre takes the liberty of inviting a symposium of letters from readers on the general advisability of this type of exploitation.

Mr. Ford writes,

THEATRE EDITOR, EXHIBITOR'S HERALD.

Dear Sir:

Under separate cover via this mail I am forwarding you copies of our local newspapers showing a scoop in the form of exploitation recently carried out by the above theatre.

For your information, I will advise that the Marple theatre started the serial attraction, "Nan of the North," on January 19-20. The accompanying issues of our local press are offered as exhibits of the successful way we worked out a Clara Phillips scoop in our city and then linked this situation up with the announcement of the starting of the serial, etc.

After the entire situation was closed we concluded that we had exploited the serial at less than 25 per cent of the expense usually attendant in the starting of a serial and that the results were among the best in the history of the theatre.

The matter was sprung on the Associated Press wires and 'most every newspaper in the country gave us a front page spread. We then built a large lobby display of the clippings in the local and foreign newspapers together with pictures of Clara Phillips, also our letters and the postmarked envelopes and telegrams and official police reports and everything of interest that could be found.

This lobby stood four days and proved exceedingly entertaining to a large group of passersby continually. The newspaper editor that fell so hard and the local police officials were easily brought out of a revengeful mood by well timed joshing and a few boxes of cigars. The local police department had a sleepless 24 hour shift in the detective department, thinking they were going to catch the famous Charlie Phillips. Among other things during this time, they continually shadowed me as well as carefully going over all our incoming and outgoing mail at the post office and listening in on all phone conversations.

In submitting the above I am under the impression that the incident would have proved good reading to the trade as well as helpful to some other live exploitatists.

Daley Copy Is Commentary on Theatre Plank

The Ninth Plank in the Better Theatre Platform given this week urges use of illustrations in all theatre advertising. Two advertisements contributed by Thomas S. Daley constitute an interesting commentary on the proposition. All of which proves the old rule about the exceptions that prove all rules.

But this is getting intricate—read Mr. Daley's letter and look at his ads.

THEATRE EDITOR, EXHIBITOR'S HERALD.

Dear Sir:

What do you think of our line-up for the next three months? (Shown in single column type display.)

Our ad on "The Grim Comedian" was a little different than the usual run of theatre ads. It must have attracted attention, for several of our patrons mentioned it to me. What do you think?

Thomas S. Daley,
Casino theatre, Halifax, N. S.

DEAR MR. DALEY:

In our opinion you are a very lucky showman. In the majority of communities, we think, well timed joshing and a few boxes of cigars would have appeased you little in overcoming the natural qualms of your victims. They unquestionably "fell hard.

Unfamiliar as we are with the local circum-stances, we refrain from hazarding an opinion as to the advisability of thus risking a back fire which might mean much or little to the box office future. Yes, we do not believe it is a wise thing to duplicate your stunt frequently, nor even in some communities. Of course you know what the Marple requires, and your statement of results is clear.

We believe the type of exploitation concerned, which is unquestionably sensational, merits the close scrutiny of Theatre readers and accordingly take the liberty of inviting comments.—W. R. W.

which appeared on our "enclosed book." That five-inch single column ad stood out like a million dollars on the society pages.

These "books" are being given out at three of the most prominent stores in town.

Please note that in the ad on the book I am using Harry Silver's name; in the first place, by so doing I detract from the obviousness with which my name always has been tucked in publicity matters.

The initials B. F. following Harry's name stand for "Bacheler of Firm," although every fellow will, of course, interpret them differently. Please note the pink stationery, exclusive perfume and everything.

Meyer Writes

"What I Know About Women"

"What I Know About Women" is not a new production, but a well composed volume of blank pages used by Fred S. Meyer to advertise "Trilling WOMEN," Metro, and placed in distribution after a newspaper advertisement on the society pages.

Mr. Meyer's letter and reproductions of the book, with blind teaser and straight ads, herewith and on page 54.

THEATRE EDITOR,
EXHIBITORS HERALD.

DEAR MR. MEYER:

At least you are the first to report using the Coue line, and so credit is yours until disputants prove their claims.

The idea is thoroughly sound. M. Coue seems to have demonstrated the insusceptible-gathering character of the phrase, and the advertising application is practically direct. Sorry we couldn't reproduce your initial announcement, dated January 29, in readable dimensions. That was surely the proper way to introduce the slogan.—W. R. W.

DEAR MR. MEYER:

We call it a capital idea. Of the several thousand "What I Know About" volumes we have seen it is, because of the duly mentioned pink stationery and exclusive perfume, as well as the teaser, one of the possible half dozen that ever impressed the everlasting sales power. With the newspaper backing you gave it we could readily believe that the public believes it.

Sorry the delicate tint was lost in the reproduction. But the essential matter is there. Thanks.—W. R. W.

THE merry little game of picking the ten best pictures goes on year after year, with no two critics agreeing on the same films.

The 1922 crop of pictures seems to have been particularly perplexing to these all-wise judges. For instance one magazine critic names "Robin Hood," "One Glorious Day," "Blood and Sand," "Nanook of the North," "Tol'able David," "Orphans of the Storm," "Smilin' Through," "Oliver Twist," "The Loves of Pharaoh" and "Hamlet" as the ten greatest, while another writer on the same magazine picks these: "Home Made Movies," "Grandma's Boy," "The Palace," "Nanook," "Tol'able David," "Distrael," "One Glorious Day," "Smilin' Through," "The Loves of Pharaoh" and "Blood and Sand."

A Chicago newspaper critic, who is quoted quite frequently, heads her list with "The Black Panther's Cub," and follows this with "A Stage Romance," "Gas. Oil and Water," "The Silent Call" and twenty-seven others. She didn't confine herself to ten, so out of all the pictures shown, picked thirty-one that she regarded the best.

How many of these have you played and how many others do you regard as worthy of a place on the 1922 list of "best pictures?"—J. R. M.

"JAVA HEAD" (Paramount) adapted from Joseph Hergesheimer's story offers exceptional screen entertainment. It will doubtless stand as one of the season's most worth-while pictures, because of the splendid performances of Leatrice Joy, George Fawcett, Albert Roscoe and Jacqueline Logan. George Melford has given this production his best in technical skill and it is a delight to the eye as well as to the mind.

"THE LOVE LETTER" (Universal) is Gladys Walton's latest and by far the best thing she has done of late. An original twist to the story near the end keeps the interest up and the small town touches and real locations add considerably to the picture's value as entertainment.

"BRASS COMMANDMENTS" (Fox) is a conventional Western story with William Farnum in the role of a man determined to rid the town of its bad men if he has to shoot 'em all up. Two popular screen stars appear in his support Wanda Hawley and Claire Adams. Picturesque backgrounds and a desert sand storm are valuable assets also.

"THE VOICE FROM THE MINARET" (First National) with Norma Talmadge and Eugene O'Brien is a colorful tale of the Orient and desert, adapted from Robert Hichens story and very well produced. It has heart interest and suspense, and a good supporting cast, including Edwin Stevens and Winter Hall. Frank Lloyd directed.

"CANYON OF THE FOOLS" (F. B. O.) Harry Carey stars in this production of the West and gives his usual satisfactory performance. The story, by Richard Matthew Hallet, moves fast and abounds in thrills. Romance is not neglected. It should prove thoroughly pleasing to Carey admirers.

"POOR MEN'S WIVES" (Al Lichtman) is an entertaining story very well worked out with a good cast. It was directed by Louis J. Gasnier, from a story by Agnes Christine Johnston and Frank Daezy. Barbara LaMarr, David Butler, Zasu Pitts and Richard Tucker are the principals.

"MILADY" (American Releasing) is a costume play made by a French company, and based on incidents in "The Three Musketeers" and other Dumas novels. It is generally well directed and will prove interesting as screen entertainment, although the players are unknown in America.

"A DANGEROUS ADVENTURE" (Warner Bros.) is an animal picture with a rather weak story. There are wild animals of every description in it, with two young ladies dressed in scant attire running about the jungle. Some clever double photography has been used. Grace Darmond has the leading role.

"A PAUPER MILLIONAIRE" (Playgoers) This production has a strong English flavor but of its kind it is especially meritorious. The story holds interest from start to finish, is full of action and ably mingles humor and pathos. It is from a novel by Austin Fryers, produced by Frank H. Crane. Five reels.
SPECIAL CAST IN

JAVA HEAD

(PARAMOUNT)

An exceptional picture in many respects and one that deserves a high place among the worthy contributions of the season. Here is excellent characterization, splendid story value, allied with superb technique in direction and acting. One of the finest things Director George Melford has ever done. Adapted from Joseph Hergesheimer's "Saturday Evening Post" story. Length, eight reels.

"JAVA HEAD" is a picture decidedly out of the common run. Its title may not appeal to you, but its story certainly will. It is something different. It is away from the beaten path. Its story grips you and it doesn't depend upon ice floes, storms, or floods for its "punch." And it has its dramatic moments, too, all the more impressive because they are arrived at logically and humbly worked out.

It was no easy task to transfer Joseph Hergesheimer's story of "down east folks" to the screen and make the characters ring true and the scenes seem real. For this tale of old Salem and the New England coast was written around the days when three-mast ships plied the seas and pantalooned were in style. But it has all been accomplished in an artistic and very natural manner with excellent character painting and every detail of the period faithfully carried out.

In this picture Leatrice Joy is given her big chance and she delivers with telling effect in a difficult role. Her Taou Yen will long be remembered. She played the Manchu princess with just the right shade of restraint even to the dramatic climax where she decides to take her own life, that her husband might be happy with his childhood sweetheart.

Jacqueline Logan, as Nettie, "the girl who waited," was a revelation too. Patron at McVickers theatre, where the picture had its premier, marveled at her beauty and appealing, pathetic face. She has never appeared to better advantage than in this quaint role. Others who gave their best and helped put the picture over, were Raymond Hatton, as a depraved dope fiend; George Fawcett, as a hard-hearted old New Englander; Frederick Strong, another equally stubborn neighbor; Albert Roscoe as the young sea captain; Violet Azzelle, Polly Archer, Audrey Beery as the Ammidon sisters, and Rose Tapley as Rhoda Ammidon. What a pleasure it was to see Miss Tapley again, and to recall other days in which she figured as one of the screen's favorite stars.

In sets and exteriors the picture is a real treat, as well as the quaint old costumes. The church pews, the shaded streets, the wharfs of Salem, contrasted with the scenes in China, held a fascination that was irresistible. The scenario was prepared by Waldemar Young and none of the dramatic bits of the book were overlooked, in this condensed version of the story.

Briefly, the story goes thus: Gerrit Ammidon, believing that a quarrel between his father and Brazil Dun Sask, grandfather of his sweetheart, Nettie Vollar, has destroyed all chance of their marriage, sails for Shanghai, where he saves a Manchu princess from a mob of drunken sailors, and finally marries her to save her life. The staid old town of Salem is shocked when he arrives home with his Chinese bride and Nettie is heartbroken. Gerrit, however, takes her home from a party and finds Nettie still loves him, and he loves her. At a social gathering in the town square, Nettie is injured, and Taou Yen, learning of her husband's love for Nettie, visits the injured girl and there takes her own life, thus insuring their happiness—J. R. M.

THE LOVE LETTER

(UNIVERSAL)

A pleasing little story of a factory girl who finds happiness at the end of her rainbow correspondence. Some original incidents in this unique little romance lift it above the ordinary. Directed by King Baggot from a story by Bradley King. Five reels.

"The Love Letter" is quite well produced and will be found one of the most pleasing vehicles in which this Universal star has yet appeared. While Miss Walton has appeared in numerous shop girl roles, and has done them well, she gets away from the stereotyped characterization in her present vehicle, which is all the more pleasing.

It is a simple, wholesome love story, produced and acted with considerable charm, amid natural backgrounds. A picture that should please where clean, wholesome stories are demanded. Fontaine La Rue, George Cooper, Edward Heare, Walt Whitman and Alberta Lee gave intelligent performances and rendered valuable assistance in putting the story over. Especially good was Mr. Heare as the village youth, who marries Mary Ann McKee, when he finds she has married him, only to find she had sent the note and picture as a joke.

However, Bill falls in love with her and never discloses the facts. They are married and live happily in a little cottage with their baby. "Red" Mike, a friend and crook in the city, having served a term in jail, visits the town and demands that she leave her husband. How she bluffs her way out of her predicament and the crook's discovery of the baby, causes him to go straight, winds up the story.

GLADYS WALTON'S newest Universal picture is called "The Love Letter," two scenes from which are shown above.
THE VOICE FROM THE MINARET (FIRST NATIONAL)

An interesting story of the Orient and the desert. A colorful romance adapted from Robert Hichens' story and very well produced. It has plenty of suspense and heart interest and is presented with all the brilliance of which this organization is capable. There is excellent characterization throughout. Directed by Frank Lloyd. Length, 8,000 feet.

"The Voice from the Minaret" will delight Norma Talmadge fans not alone because it brings Eugene O'Brien back as her leading man, but because of her own brilliant work. She wears many gorgeous gowns, and puts sincerity and appeal into every bit of acting she does. It is a colorful and romantic story, with an unusual climax and the charm of the Arabian desert and Orient is well carried out in sets and costumes.

Besides Eugene O'Brien, who appears as Andrew Fabian, there is Edwin Stevens in the portrait of Lord Leslie Carlyle; Winter Hall, as Bishop Walls; Carl Gerard as a secretary; Claire De Bracy as Countess Lafontaine and Albert Presco as Saleem.

The action of the play is laid in London, Bombay, Damascus, Port Said and the desert. These places are suggested in sets and atmosphere, although no actual scenes of Port Said and London are shown. Frank Lloyd has given the story a pictorial background of striking splendor and the action nor interest never lags.

Miss Talmadge appears as Lady Adrienne Carlyle, wife of the governor of Bombay. Sir Leslie, her husband, is cruel by nature and takes delight in torturing her husband, insulting and deceasing her in public. Lady Adrienne bears up patiently under the abuse, but the time comes when she cannot stand it further. She determines to leave her husband, return to England and get a divorce. She starts on her long journey, but meets the son of a British friend of her husband, Andrew Fabian—who is on a pilgrimage to the Holy Land. She had known him in Bombay and a warm friendship existed between them. He persuades her to defer her trip to England and accompany him. Sir Leslie is taken seriously ill, and sends his secretary to Port Said to overtake his wife. He follows them into the desert and she returns to Bombay. Sir Leslie learns of her desertion and determines she shall expiate her sin. They return to London where Andrew, in the meantime, becomes rector of a church. Sir Leslie gets Andrew in his study with Adrienne and tricks them into confessing their love by believing he has poisoned the coffee. The sudden death of Sir Leslie leaves the way clear for a happy ending for the two lovers.

HAZEL FROM HOLLYWOOD (EDUCATIONAL)

This Christie comedy is a pleasing satire on how big thrillers are made out on the West Coast. Dorothy Devore is the heroine, "Hazel," and she writes home that she lunches daily with Valentino, Mary Miles Minter and Andrew Thorne. The doors—to her—a」s a waitress in a Hollywood restaurant.

Her sweetheart comes from the Middle- west to rescue her from the film colony's terrible dangers. The girl has actually become a star. He gets thrown out of studios so often he gets used to it. He fazed from her at first. Just a funny but it shows "how the wheels go round" at the various studios, and is interesting for that reason.

HARRY CAREY IN CANYON OF THE FOOLS (F. B. O.)

Here is a good Western filled with action. Carey's admirers will not doubt "eat it up." It has several big and outstanding scenes with a thrilling flood scene as the climax. From a "Saturday Evening Post" story by Richard Matthew Hallet. Directed by Val Paul. Six reels.

Harry Carey has a story in which he does his usual good work in "Canyon of the Fools." It is one of those rugged Western pictures with plenty of intrigue, riding and fighting, staged in surroundings highly picturesque and beautiful.

The fact that it is from a Saturday Evening Post story should form a strong argument, combined with stress on some of the spectacular incidents which include the blowing up of a hotel and a thrilling flood. Throughout, the picture holds interest with a rapid succession of incidents in which Carey's action is interspersed with mirth and thrills. Besides, Carey the cast includes Margaret Chyton, Fred Stanton, Carmen Arsole, Joseph Harris and others.

Bob McCarthy, a hoop, played by Carey, on arriving at a mining town near "Canyon of the Fools" meets May Gowdy, his former sweetheart, who has come there to see him. Carey has been defamed and cheated by his former partner and is searching for him. This partner, as his partner has the same "Harper." How this situation rights itself and culminates in a happy ending for true love is revealed in the stirring incidents that follow.

GRACE DARMOND IN A DANGEROUS ADVENTURE (WARNER BROS.)

There are interesting animal scenes in this seven-reel state right feature, but a rather weak story to hold them together. There are thrills galore, much splendid photography and an exciting but competent cast and it is a pity a more logical plot was not provided. Directed by S. L. and J. L. Warner from a story by Frances Guinan. Advertise this as a remarkable wild animal picture and very likely you will draw considerable patronage from among those who favor this type of entertainment. Its popularity is confined to these, however. The story is too slight to warrant serious thought from those who demand original stories with reasonable situations logically arrived at. There is some valuable exposure photography in this feature.

The story concerns two sisters, Mar- jorie and Edith Stanton, who, upon the death of their father, go into New York in search of hidden treasure. A treacherous guide connives with a band of men and women with whom the Stanton sisters from America arrive in the jungle and finally rescue the girls after many harrowing adventures. The whole thing are flash-backs to lions, tigers, elephants, alligators, hippos, as well as monkeys, zebra and other denizens of the jungle. A fight in a room between the hero and the villain is interesting underwater bits, as well as a war dance.

SPECIAL CAST IN MILADY (AMERICAN RELEASING)

This is a satisfactory program picture, produced in France with a French cast, and based on incidents in "The Three Musketeers" and other of Dumas' novels. Well acted, with attractive locations and good sets. About six reels.

The foreword of this French made production conveys the information that the story begins with "The Three Musketeers" ended. It doubtless refers to the ending of the Fairbanks version, as "Milday" is an incident in "The Three Musketeers." It proves interesting screen material and has been generally well directed. The cast, while made up of names unknown to American screens, is uniformly satisfactory.

The story starts where Fairbanks' "The Three Musketeers" ended—D'Artagnan has incurred the enmity of the powerful Richelieu by thwarting his effort to betray the Queen's love for the Duke of Buckingham. Richelieu enlists the aid of "Milday" de Winter, a beautiful and unscrupulous woman, bearing on her shoulder the sign of the fleur-de- lis, warning that she is a freed murderess, who has had a love affair with the King of Portugal, who believed her dead.

D'Artagnan has fallen in love with Constance Bonacieux, who is an emissary of the queen. Constance married to a heavy individual for whom she cares nothing, returns the love of the dashing Musketeer. Milady, directed by Richelieu, attempts to lure D'Artagnan, and he, hoping to use her as a tool, apparently responds. Milady learns of D'Artagnan's infatuation for Constance. Then he discovers the fleur-de-lis on her shoulder and recognizes her as the woman who has ruined the life of his friend Feathers. He barely escapes from the room with his life.

War breaks out between England and France. Richelieu entrusts her with a mission to destroy Buckingham. She demands in return the arrest of D'Artagnan, Porthos over- appears her twice from her the deere. Her brother-in-law is informed of her character and mission and causes her to be detained. She is about to leave for England. She is confined in a tower, but "vamps" her jailer, who carries her down a rope ladder to freedom. She is again to be detained. Constance and poisons her, and is in her turn destroyed by D'Artagnan and his friends.
NATIONAL THEATRE

SPECIAL CAST IN

POOR MEN'S WIVES (AL. LICHTMAN CORP.)

The theme of this human story by Agnes Johnston and Frank Dazey appears to be that, while poor men's wives have their troubles — plenty of them — they at least have their husband's affection, undivided too, while the rich man's wife is paralleled with her family's motor cars, and lets hubby gather to himself divers charming ladies.

Directed by Barbara LaMarr as "Laura Merlene," David Butler as "Jim," her husband, Betty Francesco as "Claribel," Richard Tucker as "Richard Smith-Blanton" Zasu Pitts as "Apple Annie" and two clever children, Muriel McCormae, and Mickle McDan, as "The Heavenly Twins," Zasu Pitts, as always, is her own unique self, and furnishes natural comedy touches.

The story opens with Claribel teasing her chauffeur lover. His invitation to the movies and a soda afterwards awakens no special thrill in Claribel's world of haste. She and her friend Laura work in a fashionable salon. On one of the occasions when she preens her feathers for the benefit of "stylish stout" dowagers, Claribel is invited out by the dowager's son, who has used Reggie for a stepping-stone to a millionaire. She becomes his girl friend and Laura are married and later twins arrive.

Claribel is unhappy. She has clothes, a car, a maid, a house, but her husband is unfaithful. He takes the attitude he has given her what she married him for. She demands she keep out of his affairs. Laura is persuaded to attend the Artists Ball with Claribel. Claribel introduces her at a fashionable shop and Laura gets five hundred dollars worth of gowns and wrap accessories, "on approval." At the ball she meets Smith-Blanton Jr., who is drinking from her slipper and retaining it when she runs away. Jim takes Smith-Blanton home in his taxi, and the latter tosses the slipper in Jim's face as a tip.

Next day the heavenly twins destroy their mother's gown before she is up. She can get no mercy from the store. An officer is sent to arrest her. In despair she takes the money Jim has saved to buy his own taxi. The slipper, matching the one tossed him by Smith-

Blanton causes Jim to believe the worst. He turns his wife out. Things look bad for everybody, but in the end, explanations are made and Laura and Jim are happy again.

The authors have shown commendable restraint in the situations keeping away from the revolver stuff, and allowing their characters to act like rational beings. All in all, this is a human story that should prove acceptable in any theatre.

WILLIAM FARNUM IN

BRASS COMMANDMENTS

(FOX)

This Western tale, concerning cattle thieves, romance and love, is of a well-recognized type, although it has good suspense and a realistic sand storm. The picturesque backgrounds and excellent photography are assets also. Story by Charles Alden Selznick. Direction by Lynn F. Reynolds. Five reels.

Fox presents William Farnum in a typical Western role in "Brass Commandments." The plot is fundamentally identical with scores of others that have gone before. However, it is well produced, has good story interest, with excellent acting, good sets and artistic backgrounds that should put it over with most any public.

Farnum plays his usual swaggering, virile Western hero, who is quick on the trigger and a dead sure shot. Wanda Hawley, late of the Paramount forces, is good in a role that does not require much histrionic ability. Claire Adams puts in a very pretty part. Tom Santincli has the villain's part. Joe Rickson, Lon Poff, Charles LeMayne, Al Freemont, Joseph Gordon, Cap Anderson and other well-known figures in Fox pictures, complete the cast.

Stephen Lanning, known as "Flash" Lanning, returns to his Western home after several years' absence. He meets and falls in love with the pretty hotel clerk, who is in love with Ellen Bosworth, an Eastern girl. The tough element have caused Lanning's absence, and he assists the sheriff to round them up. Campan, a dangerous leader of cattle thieves, determines to get rid of Lanning. He gets the two girls to ride into the desert—supposedly to meet Lanning—and has one of his men ambush Lanning. A heater overtakes them, and Lanning saves the girls. Campan is punished and Gloria weds "Flash."

SPECIAL CAST IN

A PAUPER MILLIONAIRE

(PLAYGOERS)

Here is a good entertaining feature with many commendable qualities. While it is an English production and the cast probably unknown to American theatre-goers, it is a picture of much merit, with a good story and action that should prove generally satisfactory. From the novel by Austin Fryers, produced by Frank H. Crane. Five reels.

Without going into a discourse on the value of foreign-made pictures in theatres here, it must be admitted that overlooking the English flavor in this new Playgoers offering, it has every element of an interesting screen play. The story attracts and entertains, and the actors perform more in the way to which American audiences are accustomed to seeing screen players act than in the greater majority of foreign product.

Once accustomed to the appearance of the principals, "A Pauper Millionaire" is absorbing entertainment, ably handled, with the action moving fast and pleasantly. The story has a note of originality as a screen play and aptly introduces humorous and pathetic situations most effectively.

From a box office standpoint, while the cast offers little in the way of exploitation, a preview of the picture will undoubtedly suggest many worth while ideas.

The story tells of John Pye Smith, an American millionaire, whose son Harry falls in love with an English girl while abroad. Consent to their marriage is refused by the father who believes the girl is only after money and he goes himself to meet her. His theory that the poor of the populace are but lazy folks and unwillimg to work is exploded on arrival in England where he has his beard of long standing shaved off, and then discovers that he is without funds and his business connections and others who have known him are no longer to recognize him. His efforts to convince others of his identity and his attempt to keep from starving to death in spite of his wealth are told in many well developed situations. The culmination of many incidents lead to the climax through which he meets the girl his son is anxious to marry.

IN EXPLANATION

THERE are few theatre owners in the country—especially in cities of 50,000 and less—but what realize the important part public opinion can play in the successful operation of their enterprise.

And yet there is still a surprisingly large number of theatre owners who have made no earnest effort to court the general good will of the community in which they are located—the community from which they must draw support.

These exhibitors are in the minority. Anyone who has studied the general situation would estimate that at least seventy-five per cent of the motion picture theatre owners of the country consider their theatre a quasi-public institution and are devoting time, energy and money to community service.

In scores of cities, there are theatre men who are performing a service recognized as important to their fellow citizens as that of the church or school.

And the surprising thing is that in almost every case of this kind, the exhibitor entered into the work in the belief that it would require a considerable outlay of money—and later found that even from a commercial standpoint, he had made a paying investment.

This community service has taken innumerable forms, but unquestionably, the greatest progress along this line has been made in the regular and careful presentation of pictures either educational in nature or especially suitable for children.

In many instances the exhibitor has undertaken the experiment alone. In others he has started with the co-operation of women's clubs or civic organizations. In both cases he has found the substantial people of his city supporting him as soon as they appreciated his motives.

The problem of selection of programs has always been the paramount one. Most of the failures recorded have been due to the fact that the pictures selected have been educational, 'tis true, or suitable for children, but too often, they have lacked the one thing essential to any form of program regardless of the purpose—entertainment value.

It is to make the selection of these programs a simpler problem that the HERALD has invited the co-operation of the various distributing organizations in the compiling of a list of pictures suitable for educational and juvenile programs—and yet not lacking audience appeal.

The term "educational and juvenile" is a broad one and yet it perhaps does not completely cover the field of pictures which the exhibitor needs for his special efforts. * * *

Harry Crandall, of Washington, has developed the juvenile entertainment to a remarkable degree. He has a department devoting all of its time to the selection of suitable plays for special children's matinees and his efforts have not only won the commendation of the entire city, but the co-operation of every civic and educational body as well.

While Mr. Crandall's endeavors have been prompted solely by the thought of public service and a feeling that in the operation of his theatres he has a community responsibility, it is safe to say that he has won the regular patronage of thousands of people who previously considered his houses "just movies."

It is safe to say, too, that in question of censorship, daylight savings, Sunday

opening, proposed theatre taxation and regulations, and other matters of grave concern to his business, his protests carry weight and he finds plenty of friends to assist him in the protection of his rights.

And so it goes. The exhibitor, who has given, has been repaid many times over in increased patronage and in public support on questions of vital concern to his welfare.

politicians and the busybodies who have been mistimed "reformers" have always found it comparatively easy to thrust taxes onto theatres or harass the exhibitor with censorship and various restrictions because his protests have been ridden down with the cry "His interest is purely commercial."

The theatre owner has been victimized not because his defenses have not been reasonable—but because he has seldom been able to get a fair hearing.

In community endeavors, however, he attracts the attention of people of influence. They come to regard his theatre as a civic asset. His troubles are their troubles. Attacks on him are attacks on them. They are able to say no more in the defense of the theatre than the exhibitor himself, but they are able to obtain listeners. They are not dismissed as "commercial" before they start to speak.

many theatres in central and western states have found juvenile and educational programs remunerative beyond their expectations.

They have found that nights set aside during the regular theatrical season for children or for "class" groups could continue through the warm months without attendance being affected by the weather. In many instances, these so-called special nights have meant the difference between operating or closing in summer.

They have found too that pictures they were inclined to classify as "too high brow" or "over their heads" when presented in the regular run of things have proved big money makers when shown on the night, or nights, the people had been taught to expect "educational" or "selected" pictures.

Many experiments along this line have been phenomenal successes from the start. Others have had to be developed over a considerable length of time to be considered commercially successful in themselves, although practically all have rewarded the promoters by making new patrons for other nights.

In selecting his programs, the exhibitor must take his patronage and the general character of his community into consideration.

In some cities, a short subject of educational worth might be all that should be attempted. In other communities, it may be that everything on the program, including the musical numbers, should be selected with the one idea, "educational," in mind.

Juvenile programs present a similar problem. The range of ages to be catered to, the intelligence of the young people, and many other points must be considered. There are a number of things too apparent even to comment upon which should be observed.

In all cases, active cooperation of outside individuals or organizations should be sought and encouraged.

Theatre owners for cause have a hearty fear of "cooperation" from the extremist, who if given a free rein, would select a program which no one would enjoy.

To avoid this type, judgment and tact must be used. There are earnest and intelligent people, whose assistance can be enlisted and whose endorsement will carry weight. These are the people who must be interested.

In the ideal committee of selection, the exhibitor would contribute his knowledge of showmanship, while his assistants would give their judgment as to what was appropriate. There are plenty of pictures. If the effort is made, no great trouble should be experienced in selecting pictures of the type desired, which at the same time are theatrically sound.

Programs of this nature need not be given on regular schedule, but there are few theatres which can afford not to sponsor some programs of this kind at intervals.

Theatres, which do not attempt weekly or monthly schedules, often stage "Weeks" at appropriate times. "Book Week" is an instance. Other weeks, which have been put on with success by theatres, have been given such self-explanatory titles as "Better Pictures Week," "Historical Week," "American History Week," "Educational Week," "World Classic Week," etc.

Again, there is the opportunity of interesting the American Legion, the G. A. R., D. A. R., Spanish War Veterans and similar societies in the selection of your program for anniversaries of historic dates.

Women's Clubs, fraternal societies, civic organizations, and business men's associations can be interested in the presentation of certain pictures under their auspices, or with their published or tacit endorsement.

STANDING ROOM ONLY sign would be hung out on every moving picture theatre in the country if other producers were in the unique position of The Literary Digest to send patrons into motion picture theatres.

This foremost American news magazine has a field force of more than 15,000 salesmen selling the publication in practically every town and city of the country.

This immense force is constantly reminding the millions of families upon whom they call every week to attend the motion picture houses in their neighborhood which show The Literary Digest short reel “Fun from the Press.”

These salesmen are not only soliciting attendance for “Fun from the Press” but they go even further and recommend the theatre program in its entirety pointing out the fact that the managements of theatres which show this high class Literary Digest reel can quite confidently be relied upon to exercise the same judgment and discrimination in choosing the rest of their bill as they have exercised in choosing The Literary Digest subject.

Exhibitors know that “word-of-mouth” advertising is the most valuable that can be had. Here it is!

The constant weekly solicitation which these salesmen make to the many thousands of families they come in contact with is bound to show its effects through the box office windows.

This new selling plan has created a tremendous stir among exhibitors everywhere. As one exhibitor remarked, “thousands and thousands of neighborhood salesmen calling on families every day and every week urging them to go to the movies cannot help but be a boon to exhibitors, not only those showing ‘Fun from the Press,’ but to the entire industry.”

It is sure to be the means of getting people who have gotten out of the moving picture habit or who have never gotten into it to attend the theatre.

WARNING—“Fun from the Press” is the only reel produced and sponsored by “The Literary Digest.” Any use of the name in connection with any other reel is unauthorized and illegal.

PURELY Personal

Interesting news about exhibitors and people with whom they come into direct contact. Readers are invited to contribute items for publication in this column. Address them to "Purely Personal."

Frank L. Newman made a profitable move the week when he booked Arthur W. Nealy, the "singing policeman" of St. Louis, who resigned his position rather than obey the police commissioners' order not to sing while on his beat, as a special attraction at his Royal theatre. Nealy was good for several newspaper stories and a lively attendance resulted.

* Congratulations are in order. R. O. Rhoades of the Orpheum theatre, Converse, Indiana, is the proud father of a nine and a half pound boy. William Allen is his name, Mr. Rhoades informs us.

* W. C. Sears has an interesting theatre at 1226 W. Adams in a recent conversion with Harry Weiss, St. Louis First National manager, he said the Lyric was built in 1852 as a prison and during the Civil War many prisoners of the confined there. In 1863 the German society made a Turner hall out of it, and in 1875 it was remodeled again into an opera house. In those days the ferry across the Missouri brought many famous stage stars to play at this house. Their former front still stands but in 1906 the interior was again transformed into a picture show. Sears has plans in consideration for another remodeling of the interior.

* Charles Raymond, in charge of Goldwyn exploitation in Omaha, Neb., has been assigned to the Kansas City, Mo., office to succeed William Branch, who has been transferred to Minneapolis. Mr. Raymond, in addition to having charge of Kansas City exploitation, will be in charge of the St. Louis and Omaha territory.

* There is one motion picture theatre owner in New York State who is frank in admitting that he is a busy man. His name is Kennedy and he comes from Champlain, N. Y., where in addition to owning and running the Lyceum, he is express agent, post master and collector of customs. (How do you do it, Mr. Kennedy?)

The latest series of Neal Hart features has been purchased by the Crescent Film Exchange, Al Kahn, general manager at Kansas City, Mo., has announced. Crescent will start publishing the productions February 1, issuing one each month.

* Roy B. Churchill again is back in Kansas City as branch manager for F. B. O. office. Mr. Churchill resigned several weeks ago to become branch manager of Omaha's Omaha Herald. Mr. Churchill will succeed "Curley" Calvert, who has been called to the home office in New York. Randolph Elliott, formerly a city salesman, made the change to Goldwyn with Mr. Churchill, also is back at the Kansas City F. B. O. office.

Herschel Stuart, manager of the Missouri theatre, St. Louis, brought Larry Wagner, impersonator of movie stars, to town to exploit Larry Semon in "The Counter Jumper," which played the Missouri the week of January 20.

Harry L. Pittner, southern Illinois salesman for Vitagraph, on Saturday, January 20, journeyed to Edwardsville, Ill., and was married to Miss Georgia Johnson of Fairfield, Ill.

* Jack Weil has returned to St. Louis manager for Goldwyn. He was transferred several weeks ago to the home office. During the week he took a trip to Arkansas and was absent from the city for some time. He reports the outlook very bright.

* Charley Werner of Metro's St. Louis branch made a trip to Rochester, Minn., to consult the famed Drs. Mayo about his throat ailment. He was very gratified when they advised him that an operation was not necessary and he had nothing to worry about.

* Al Kahn, Kansas City, general manager of the Crescent Film Exchange, Kansas City, has traveled through Kansas with the Warner Brothers' Coast to Coast float, through arrangements with Frank Cassidy, in charge of the float, and give all the advertising and publicity possible to exhibitors who are under Warner Bros. contracts.

* Harold Cass, former Fox salesman, now is in the Kansas City territory for the Republic. He is working with E. L. Stevens of the Commerce, who has been selling Universal-Jewels and "The Leather Pushers" in the key towns, now is selling Universal product in Southeastern Kansas.

This Looks Like Trouble

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Feb. 6—A bill has been introduced in the lower house providing for the sanctity of Memorial Day. It would prevent athletic contests, political parades, demonstrations, parades, parades on that day. The measure has caused a near split in the ranks of the American Legion, certain members of the organization have taken an active part in the fight. The bill is aimed at the Motor Speedway races, there is agitation to have it apply also to motion picture shows.

Illinois

Petitions are being circulated in Oak Park, a Chicago suburb, by the Lubliner & Trina picture dealers, owners of the Oak Park theatre, for the purpose of having the question of Sunday shows placed on the April ballot. The question has been voted on no less than six times but in each instance it was defeated. Oak Park churches are fighting the move.

Missouri

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

KANSAS CITY, MO., Feb. 6—While E. V. P. Schneidertah, representative of the Committee of Fifty sponsoring the drastic Missouri censorship bill, was launching his fight before the house committee on the state's jurisdiction in Jefferson City a week ago, several of the most prominent ministers of Kansas City, with Charles D. Pettijohn, general counsel of the M. P. P. D. A., as their guest at a large public meeting at the Women's City Club, staged an attack on political censorship which may influence the state legislators against the measure now under consideration. Dr. H. H. Mayer, prominent Jewish rabbi; Mrs. Henry N. Ess, Democratic woman leader, and the Rev. Burr's A. Jenkins, pastor of the First Christian church, were among those opposing censorship at the Pettijohn meeting.

Tennessee

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

MEMPHIS, TENN., Feb. 6—The News Scimitar and The Memphis Press, in the campaign to defeat the Sunday closing bill now before the senate judiciary committee. The bill has passed the lower house. As a part of their campaign, The News Scimitar has requested every member of the senate to visit Memphis on Sunday at the expense of the newspaper for the purpose of observing this city and its observance of the Sabbath. The Press is publishing a petition which it requests every citizen in Memphis to sign and forward to members of the senate committee. The work of the papers is highly commendable.

Oklahoma

Hays and Industry to Be Discussed by Joint Organization

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 6.—Will H. Hays, and the organization of which he is president, are to be tried at the bar of public opinion on charges of having failed to carry out their avowed purpose of "cleaning up" the "movies." In a letter to Mr. Hays from H. H. Lund, president of the Institute of Government, a few of the most recent outstanding events in the motion picture industry are catalogued, and Mr. Hays is asked to tell the world what he is going to do about them.

The Institute of Government, composed of patriotic, civic and women's organizations, is to hold a conference in Washington during the week of February 19, and one of the sessions is to be devoted to a discussion of the educational and patriotic aspect of motion pictures together with consideration of "such impediments as now stand in its way for the fulfillment of its potentialities, and existing means for that accomplishment."

It is planned to discuss Mr. Hays' position with regard to these matters and he has been asked "in order to clarify disagreement, which is now current concerning your abilities to fulfill the promise you have made the country in this work," to issue a statement concerning the present position and power which he holds.

United Studios Bought By Joseph M. Schenk; Improvements Planned

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 6.—Presaging a tremendous era of activity, Joseph M. Schenk, one of the leading independent producers, this week purchased controlling interests in the United Studios. Lon A. Adler, associate and friend of Mr. Schenk who is his general manager, is said to be largely responsible for the consummation of the deal, due to his insistence that larger working quarters and the fact that Mr. Schenk had decided to become a permanent resident of Los Angeles and move the major portion of his activities to this city.

M. C. Levey, who before the consummation of the deal was president of the United Studios, will remain in that capacity and Mr. Schenk will head the board of directors.

The United Studios comprises 33 acres with 40 buildings and six stages and is one of the largest motion picture plants in the world. It is the plan of Messrs. Schenk and Levey immediately to spend $350,000 in improvements.

Important Finding Made on Copyright Can't Sue for Infringement Through Owning Film Rights. Court Rules

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—A decision of importance was rendered by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals of Southern District in the Motion Pictures Corporation v. Howell's Sales Company, which, in effect, declares that a party who owns the sole and exclusive motion picture rights to a literary work cannot sue under copyright laws to prevent an infringement thereof.

Novel Point Raised

The case involved the picture "Ven-derita," purchased abroad by the Howell company and shown in New York in 1921. Goldwyn claimed that "Vendetta" was infringing it, and in a suit for injury Goldwyn learned that the motion picture rights, they were a mere licensee and therefore could not stop an infringement.

Goldwyn then joined Stephens, owner of the copyright, as a third party. The court, in effect, declared that the same points were raised and it was claimed that the same injury existed and could not stand inasmuch as Stephens had assigned all of his rights to damages for an infringement to Goldwyn.

Purchases Not Protected

The injunction was vacated and dismissed, it being stated that Goldwyn as a licensee could not bring the suit and adding that Stephens did not good inasmuch as he had assigned all of his rights to damages to Goldwyn.

This decision is believed to practically determine that a purchaser of exclusive film rights to a story has no protection as far as others are concerned. Attorneys Kelly & Becker represented Goldwyn.

Eddie Cline to Direct New Principal Feature

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 6.—"The Mean-est Man in the World," George C. W. N. Cohen's stage play, which Sol Lesser and Michael Rosenberg of Principal Pictures will produce, will be made under the direction of Eddie Cline, who has just signed a contract with Principal.

Bert Lytell will have the leading role in this production, continuity of which is now in preparation by Leonore Coffee and John Goodrich. There is a possibility that Mr. Cohen may assist in the directing.

Equitable Distribution Is Discussed by Metro District Heads in East
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Just arrangement of pictures offered to all exhibitors was the subject of discussion at a meeting of district managers of Metro, held with home office sales heads. The recent big productions distributed by the company have of necessity brought a degree of rivalry among showmen for their exhibition, it is said, and an equitable scheme of provision of needs of exhibitors was considered.

Plans for handling the Metro output for the year was another question on the program, as well as a campaign for cooperation with exhibitors.

Those who were on hand to confer with E. M. Saunders, general sales manager, and other top executives, were C. E. Kessner, Atlanta; E. A. Golden, Boston; W. C. Bachmeyer, Cincinnati; Harry Lustig, Los Angeles, and S. A. Shirley, of Chicago.

Christie Goes East to Confer With Hammons
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 6—Having completed half of the twenty comedies to be issued up to July, C. H. Christie has left for New York where he will remain for three weeks discussing distributors with E. W. Hammons, president of Educational.

Mr. Christie declared that several new comedy stars will be introduced in the latter half of the year's product.

McDermott Elected Treasurer of Select
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—J. E. McDermott, who has been connected with the accounting and auditing division of Select Pictures Corporation for the past two years, has been elected treasurer of the company.

The promotion follows a period of faithful and efficient service, according to President Myron Selznick, during which Mr. McDermott introduced new methods and systems of accounting and conducted an extensive survey resulting in an effective auditing system which has been in force by the company for some time.

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

TOPEKA, KAN., Feb. 6.—Roy Crawford, vice-president and treasurer of Associated Exhibitors visited Topeka, his former home, to confer with his father, L. M. Crawford, in regard to important theatre matters in which they are interested.

Job Waning, Censor Sees Flood of Cheap Pictures Forthcoming
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 6.—"A flood of cheap, objectionable pictures will sweep over New York state if censorship is abolished," declared George H. Cobb, chairman of the New York Motion Picture Commission in a talk in his home city of Watertown. According to Mr. Cobb, certain producers are holding many of this type of pictures back, waiting until time as censorship is a thing of the past in New York State. Mr. Cobb did not reveal just how he knew that there was any such "flood" coming, or that there were any objectionable and cheap pictures being held in abeyance.

"A move has already been made to abolish the Commission," said Mr. Cobb. "Personally it doesn't make much difference to me if it is cast out. The Democrats are in power and I have never been noted for my Democratic leanings, so I will probably not have much longer to serve.

Chairman Cobb took a flogging at Will Hayes, asserting that instead of seeking to bring about better pictures, the purpose of the former postmaster-general was to prevent the spread of censorship.

Made Representative For Hodkinson Short Subjects in Mid West
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Special stress is being laid on its short subject program by W. W. Hodkinson Corporation and an additional step to stimulate exhibitor interest in the films is the appointment of C. J. Howard as special field representative for short subjects.

Mr. Howard was formerly with Paramount. Mutual and other companies, and has a wide acquaintance among theatre owners.

In the present time his activities will be centered in the middle west, where he will also handle the "Ex-Kaiser in Exile."

Merchants Stage Saturday Shows
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

HARWOOD, O. K., Feb. 7.—This city, with a population of 3,000, through the intuition of Harry Kirshbaum, Universal representative out of Kansas City, has adopted an idea which would prove profitable for film salesmen in other territories to duplicate. Virtually no form of entertainment could Harwood boast about until Mr. Kirshbaum hit the town.

In about two hours plans had been perfected whereby the merchants of Harwood would give a Saturday matinee, consisting of a two-reel drama and a one-reel comedy, free. A five-reel feature was added to the night's performance, for which 10 cents admittance is charged. Because of interest in civic affairs by the superintendent of the high school company, the only exploitation consists of a call in all directions over the telephone. These performances have attracted fully 50 per cent more people to the town each Saturday.

A PICTURE THAT IS DIFFERENT
TWO MORE comedies have been completed by Century and will be issued soon. They are "Smartie" starring Buddy Messinger and "Sweet and Pretty." Featuring Brownie, Century's "Wonder Dog," Harry Edwards and Jim Davis are the respective directors of the new mirth-provokers.

"PEG O' THE MOVIES" with Baby Peggy as the star scored a decided hit at Rivoli theatre, New York City, according to reports. Two more of her pictures, "The Flower Girl" and "Five After One" have been completed but not published yet.

HERMAN RAYMAKER has renewed his contract with Century and will direct the next picture in which Brownie will be featured. Jack Minz "gag man" will be his assistant.

THE FEATURED ROLE in the George M. Cohan play, "The Meanest Man in the World," which the Lesser organization will produce, will be played by Bert Lytell. This will be the first of a series of Lytell pictures, the second to be the screen version of one of Harold Lloyd's novels, probably "The Winning of Barbara Worth" or "The Re-Creation of Brian Kent." Eileen Fercy will support the star.

WARNER BROTHERS

FIRST SHOWING of Warner Brothers "The Little Church Around the Corner" will be given at the Strand theatre, New York, March 11. This picture is by Olga Priemau and is based on Charles Blaney's novel and play.

ANOTHER FAMOUS DOG, "Rintin- tin," is going to be simulated in a "Wolf Fangs," a Chester Franklin production to be supervised by Harry Rapp for Warners. An interesting story laid in the Canadian northwest is promised.

WESLEY BARRY in "Little Johnny Jones," will be Warner Brothers first feature for the coming season. It is from George M. Cohan's stage success and William Beaudine and Julian Josephson are whipping it into shape.

"BRASS," the Harry Rapp production, directed by Sidney Franklin, was screened before a special audience at Glendale, Los Angeles, and evoked much favorable comment. It is announced that "Main Street" is about half way completed.

F. B. O.

FEBRUARY BRINGS to the screens the initial publication of the H. C. Vitner-Collier "Fighting Blood" stories, each round to be issued at the rate of one every second week. Mal St. Clair directed George O'Hara as the middleweight champion in these interesting stories. Other February publications are: "The Bishop of the Ozarks," a dramatic story directed by Finis Fox. "Stormswept," a drama of the sea by H. H. Van Loan. Wallace and Noah Beery are featured in this picture.

"THE THIRD LARM," the Emory Johnson special which has been playing four weeks at the Astor in New York City, ended its run on February 4, playing to crowds as big as those which greeted it on the opening night, according to F. B. O. At the beginning of its general publication, F. B. O. announces that this attraction will play to 50 per cent more theatres than "In the Name of the Law."

PRODUCTION WILL START soon on Jane Novak's new Chester Bennett production, "Divorce." "Top Turtle's Pocelot Plot," is the next Plum Center comedy starring Dan Mason, Harry Carey is now in production, "The Man From the Desert" for F. B. O.

Hodkinson

CONFIDENTIAL showings of "The Ex-Kaiser in Exile," soon to be published by W. W. Hodkinson have been held before members of Congress, foreign diplomats and newspaper correspondents. The two-reel film received their enthusiastic endorsement, Hodkinson reports.

ELMER CLIFTON declares that the Hodkinson special "Down to the Sea in Ships" is designed and intended as a lasting memorial to perpetuate the coming generations, through the medium of the screen, the romantic thrills and adventures of whaling days of a century ago.

"THE KINGDOM WITHIN" made its bow to the New York public at Loew's State theatre on Broadway. Booking of "Bulldog Drummond" at the Victoria theatre, Philadelphia, is another Hodkinson announcement of interest.

United Artists

UNITED ARTISTS reports record business during the run of "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" at the Capitol theatre in New York. Despite inclement weather, the opening day's receipts were $11,500, the company states. Monday brought receipts of $7,104.50, which is said to be a new Capitol record for Monday, Tuesday followed with an increase of $7,134.

ASSOCIATION BOOKING CORPORATION, the exhibitor booking organization in New York City, has contracted for Mack Sennett's "Suzanna," an Allied Producers & Distributors Corporation publication.

LOUIS B. MAYER

"CLIMBING," the Lee Hutty play which is having a successful premiere at the Majestic theatre, Los Angeles, has been selected by John M. Sennett for his next special for Louis B. Mayer. First National will distribute the picture. The play is based on the premise that in America there is only one class of people, some more fortunate than others, but all spiritually equal.

Fox

SIX EDUCATIONALS are on the Fox publication schedule for February. Many concerns of the world are depicted in these reels and half reel subjects which include "Wild Waters," scenes of the picturesque Iguazu falls in South America, "School Days in Japan," which is self explanatory; "An Alaskan Honey moon," which takes you on a tour of America's Far North; "Algeria," illustrating ancient customs in that North African country, and two subjects yet to be announced.

THRILLS AND ACTION with picturesque settings will be found in the new Dustin Farnum picture, "The Buster," which Fox will publish on February 18. "The Wine Cracker," a late Sunshine comedy, is now on the market having been published on February 4. "Joe Cook's "The Artist," which is said to show the comedian at his best, likewise was published on that date. "The Net," another Fox special, will be issued on February 25. This picture, directed by J. Gordon Edwards, was filmed in Florida, the beauties of that state being a feature of the production.

Billie Dove will support John Gilbert in his new picture, "Red Darkness," which Jerome Storm will direct. It is in the course of production on the West Coast.

Bryant Washburn has been signed by C. B. C. Film Corporation to play the leading role in "Temptation," its third picture in its series of Six Box Office Winners. Edward LaSaint will direct, and an all-star list of players is being lined up to support Mr. Washburn.

Foreign Sales on "More to Be Pined" and "Only a Shopgirl" have been sold by C. B. C. to Australian Films, Ltd., through Millard Johnson, American representative of the firm.

Productions Aside from those on the company's regular schedule of "six box office winners," are to be obtained by C. B. C. for distribution on the independent market. The first of these will be a special produced by Dallas M. Fitzgerald, and featuring Miriam Cooper, Forrest Stanley, Mitchell Lewis, Louise Wayne and Kate Lester. No title has yet been selected, it being the plan of Joe Brandt to choose one from suggestions made following a special showing to be held shortly. Mr. Brandt, Director Fitzgerald and others will comprise the committee selecting the name.

Paramount

The initial attractions of the "Super Thirty-nine" reached the first run theaters on February 4, the two pictures published on that date being "When Knighthood Was in Flower" and "Dark Secrets." Reference to "The Picture Did for Me," as well as to pre-release performances, will give you an idea of what to expect from this Marion Davies-Cosmopolitan special. "Dark Secrets" is a Dorothy Dalton vehicle which carries you to the colorful and glorious life of Cairo. Gloria Swanson in "My American Wife" will be issued on February 11, and on February 18 will be published Mary Miles Minter in "Song of the South," and Jack Holt in "Nobody's Money."

Pass This On to any of your patrons who may aspire to screen honors: Allan Dwan, Paramount director, says that "right now the motion picture business is harder to break into than ever before," and assigns as the reason the fact that hundreds of thousands of dollars are expended in production which has eliminated the tendency to gamble.

"Glimpses of the Moon," featuring Bebe Daniels, Rita Naldi, Ruby de Remer, David Powell, Maurice Costello and Charles Gerardt, has been completed by Allan Dwan. The Alice Brady company making "The Snow Bride" has returned from Montreal where snow scenes were made.

Universal

"Driven" Will Be Issued in March by Universal as a Jewel Attraction. This Charles Brabin production starring Charles Emmett Mack will supplement "The Shock," starring Lon Chaney, as the March Jewel. Here is something to remember in connection with this feature: It has been selected for "major mention" by the exceptional photography committee of the National Board of Review.

First National

The biggest week in history is the prospect for First National's second anniversary week, February 3 to 10, according to company officials. The response on the part of theatre men, say these executives, far exceeds the most sanguine hopes.

Frank Lloyd Has Been Signed to Direct His Fourth Norma Talmadge Picture, "Ashes of Vengeance," according to Joseph M. Schenck. That speaks well for Lloyd's directorial ability. "Dulcy," one of the most pleasing humorous of all stage comedies, has been purchased by Schenck as a starring vehicle for Constance Talmadge. S'ondy will direct Paul Emerson and Anita Loos will adapt it.

Frank Borzage's First Production for First National Will be an Adaptation of "Terwilliger," the Tristan Tzara story.

Blair Coan

The last stages of production have been reached on the Blair Coan feature, "The Little Girl Next Door," a Chicago-made production. W. S. Van Dyke is directing this picture at the Essanay studios. This is the first time in a number of years that Chicago people have had an opportunity to act as extras in a motion picture, and the Essanay plant has been crowded with those eager to appear on the screen. Carmel Myers, Pauline Starkie, Jane Morrison, Mitchell Lewis, Evelyn Glover and Edward Kennedy are featured. Distribution arrangements will be announced shortly.

Associated Exhibitors

Are newspapers interested in the theatres of their city? That they are is decidedly indicated in an article in a Ludington, Michigan, theatre, where Frank W. Hawley operates the opera theatre. The newspaper, following showing of "Grandma's Boy" takes occasion to point out that patronage is growing so fast that Mr. Hawley should plan for a larger house to care for the crowds.

"Eli, Eli!" the song-play upon which Associated Exhibitors' feature "Breaking Home Ties," based on a novel by H. T. Morey, has been exploited effectively by tie-up with music dealers, the company reports. One theatre played a phonograph in the lobby and played a record of the song to good advantage.

Tom Moore and Ann Forrest will have the leading roles in Will Night's second production for Weber & North. They have started work at the Metropolitan in New York.

Al Lichtman

Here are some of the early bookings on "The Hero," featuring Gaston Glass and John Sainpolis, beginning on February 5: Boston theatre, Boston Strand, Hartford; U. of C., theatre at Palmer, N. J.; State and Royal at Jersey City; Phillips Egypt at Fort Worth, Tex.

Lichtman Officials announce that "Poor Man's Wife," the latest preferred picture, has been accorded an enthusiastic reception at the Criterion theatre in New York, where it is playing an indefinite run at $1.50 top. Hug Reisenfeld arranged the musical pro...

Distribution News

C. C. Burr

LESTER F. SCOTT, JR., is now in the South to close important contracts with leading Southern exchanges for the distribution of the C. C. Burr feature, "Secrets of Paris," a Whitman Bennett special. After closing on this production, Mr. Scott will devote his time to the Edward Slooman picture which Burr is handling, "The Last Hour."

SKIRBOLL BROTHERS announce that they have closed with the Pathe and Hippodrome for presentation of "Sure Fire Flirt," "I am the Law" and "Secrets of Paris."

THIRTY-TWO THEATRES in the New England territory have booked the C. C. Burr-Eward Slooman picture, "The Last Hour," according to Jim Moscow, distributing the feature in that district. Bookings followed a special showing of the attraction.

"SURE FIRE FLINT" did a week's business of $42,000 at the Chicago theatre, according to a wire received by C. C. Burr from Max Babal of Babal & Katz, who thinks it’s a good business, even for Chicago and New York.

Pathe

"THIRD EPISODE" of "Plunder," the Pathé-Bobert musical, heads that company's list of publications for February 11. Some more thrills for your patrons. On the same publication schedule are "Jailed and Bailed," a Hal Roach comedy featuring Paul Parrott and obby Ralston; "The Gliders," and Pepé's Fable; Screen Snapshots No. 19 showing Rodolph Valentino in his home and other celebrities; Pathe Review Nos. 90, which has an Oriental atmosphere; the News Nos. 14 and 15, and Topics the Day No. 6.

LMER PEARSE, in an official communication, extends the home office congratulations to every member of the 12els force for his excellent work during the company's first year, which concluded with the first of this year. The general manager likewise expresses his appreciation for the response on the part of the exhibitors.

State Right Sales

LIERBER of Indianapolis and Gene Marcus of Twentieth Century Film exchange, Philadelphia, have purchased territorial rights to the Principal picture, "Environment." Enterprise Distributing Corporation, the former S. A. Lynch organization, has purchased the rights for foreign countries on the Principal feature, "The World's a Stage," States covered are: Georgia, Florida, Alabama, North and South Carolina, Louisiana, Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Southern Illinois and Tennessee. Harry Ratner closed for Principal.

DISTRIBUTION ARRANGEMENTS are to be announced shortly on the new Burr-Garon attraction, "Success," which is an adaptation of the Broadway stage production of the same name. Ralph Ince directed Brandon Tynan in this feature. Mr. Garson says that Tynan's portrayal is one of the most convincing in recent years.

Cosmopolitan

MARION DAVIES will be seen in her new production "Adam and Eve," which opens at the Rivoli theatre, New York City, on February 11. Robert G. Vignola directed this feature and the sets are by Joseph Urban.

MAGAZINE AND newspaper writers, fifty in number, were entertained by Marion Davies at the Twenty-third Regiment Armory, where a big street scene for her new Cosmopolitan picture "Little Old New York," has been built. More than 1,000 extras took part in a scene there under the direction of Sidney Olcott.

MONTE CARLO scenes in "The Emissaries of Women," made while the Cosmopolitan company was abroad, are one of the spectacular and gorgeous phases of the Vincenzo Blasco Ibanez story. Alma Rubens and Lionel Barrymore are featured and Alan Crossland is directing.

Personnel Changes

JOE SKIRBOLL has been promoted from exchange manager for First National at Pittsburgh to district manager of one of the Western territories. A. S. Davis succeeds Skirboll in Pittsburgh.

METRO HAS MADE the following changes in its exchange staffs: C. R. Oath, branch manager in Omaha, has resigned, as manager at Cincinnati; S. A. MacIntyre returns to Omaha from Atlanta to manage the Nebraska office; J. J. Burke succeeds MacIntyre in Atlanta.

Goldwyn

THE BRENTLINGER CIRCUIT in Indiana has signed up for the entire list of Goldwyn pictures in the current publication group. J. R. Grainger, personal representative of President F. J. Godsol, concluded the negotiations for the producing company. This deal, it is said, gives Goldwyn a record of 100 per cent in Indianapolis.

"MAD LOVE," a Pola Negri attraction, will be published by Goldwyn on March 4. The picture is declared to be one of the star's best. Corinne Griffith has been engaged by Goldwyn to play the lead in Elinor Glyn's "Six Days," which will go into production soon. Jean Hersholt, Sylvia Ashton and Dake Fuller have been selected for the cast of Eric von Stroheim's "McTeague." The title of Marshall Neilan's new picture has been changed from "The Ingrate" to "The Eternal Three." William Orlamond has just been signed to a long term contract by the company. The latest picture in which he appears is "Souls for Sale."

George H. Davis

C. B. C. FILM SALES Corporation has been selected by George H. Davis as the distributor's choice for the production of the H. C. Wells novel, "The Passionate Friends." Mr. Davis states that although he received many flattering offers from national distributors, he did not care to deviate from his policy of going through the independent market.

Jo Rok

"THE COLD HOMESTEAD," the fifth in the series of twelve comedies produced by Jo Rok has been completed and will be distributed by Jo Rok production. Jo Rok and Billie Rhodes are featured, with Frank Alexander and Max Asher in support. Needless to say it is a burlesque on "The Old Homestead."

Halperin Productions

THE HALPERINS, Edward and Victor Hugo, announce that their next production for distribution by American will be "Tea with a Kick," which will feature such players as Creighton Hale, Doris May, Rosemary Theby, Stuart H市场化, Victor Parramount, Robert McKinn and Noah Beery. "The Danger Point" was the company's initial offering.

Doug's Film Is Called Exceptional

In the January issue of Exceptional Photoplays, published by the National Board of Review, "Douglas Fairbanks as Robinhood" is reviewed and listed as an exceptional film. Other pictures accorded honorable mention and also listed are "The Hero," issued by Al Lichtman; "The Princesses," Paramount; "The Hottentot," First National; and "The World's Applause," Paramount.

With the Procession in Los Angeles

By Harry Hammond Beall

PHIL ROSEN, famed as Wallie Reid’s director, has been signed by the Rockett Brothers, to make their production of Abraham Lincoln.

PAUL POWELL, another former Lasky director, has just signed up with Max Graf to make the feature “Fog,” for Metro release.

JACK HOSIE has joined the Universal-stellar forces, having terminated his contract with Sunset productions.

Motion picture stars who are fond of outdoor sports are exultant over the fact that ground has been broken for the new Hollywood Athletic Club building at Sunset Boulevard and Hudson Street.

It seems likely that MALCOLM STEWART BOWLAN, for many years with the Universal publicity department, and more recently its chief, will follow Irving G. Thalberg to the Louis B. Mayer studios when Thalberg joins that organization on February 15th.

Joe JACKSON, publicist chief at Goldwyn, has augmented his staff to a large extent recently and made Tom Engler his aide-de-camp. Among the recent additions to the Goldwyn publicist staff are Ted Taylor, Milton Howe, Mona Gardner, Jim Tully and Lois Hutchinson.

According to Joe Reddy, Pathé publicist, the wedding of Harold Lloyd and Mildred Davis, his former leading woman, will take place within the next few days.

RUTH ROLAND is reported to be planning to enter the field of feature photo plays, having completed her contract on serials with Pathé.

“Oliver Twist” is to be given its Los Angeles première at the Kinema theatre February 19.

Some marriages are made in heaven, but here is one that was made pretty close to it. Roger W. Fowler, cinematographer at D. W. Griffith’s, and Miss Ruth Lux, had their nuptial knot tied on top of Lookout Mountain back of Hollywood last Sunday night.

VIOLA DANA is reported to be progressing nicely from her recent operation for appendicitis and John Fairbanks is recovering speedily from his paralytic attack of a few days ago.

EDFIE CLARK, comedy director, has signed with Sol Lesser at the new Republic for “The Meanest Man in the World,” the Coohan success which Lesser will make with Bert Lytell in the title role.

SHINNY FRANKLIN has been signed by Warner Brothers.

Associated First National has so many producing units busy in Hollywood that John McCormick has moved his office there.

JAMES Q. CLEMMER, pioneer Seattle exhibitor, has been appointed supervising manager of the Kinema theatre. He assumes his new duties immediately.

The circus has come to town! On the back lot of the Goldwyn studios there has risen, as if by magic, a complete and stupendous circus.

The tents alone cover eleven—count ‘em—eleven acres of ground. The smell of sawdust is in the air, there are wagons and horses and animals.

All of this will be burned to the ground in perhaps the most spectacular scene ever filmed. It will be a part of Rupert Hughes’ production of “Souls for Sale,” his novel of motion picture life.

ERNST LUIZ, musical director to Loew’s, Incorporated, and Metro Pictures Corporation, is paying his first visit to the Metro studios in Hollywood. Mr. Luiz will spend about nine weeks in Los Angeles before returning to New York.

MAX FISHER, nationally famous orchestrator, leader and composer, has written a new song which he has dedicated to Violan Dana, Metro’s diminutive star. “True Eyes” is the title Mr. Fisher has chosen for the new number.

VAL HARRIS has been added to the Hu-Stromberg staff and will provide “gip” for the Bull Montana comedies. Harr has written and played in many vaudeville sketches the best known of which is probably “Jerry the Opera.”

From Banff, Alberta, Canada, word comes from Director LAURENCE TRIMBLE of the Trimble-Murfin Productions, the work is well under way on the first of two productions which will be made Canada before the company returns Hollywood.

Bernheim to Replace Thalberg at Universal

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 6—Juli Bernheim, now the assistant theatre manager at Universal City, and a nephew of Carl Laemmle, will replace Irwin Thalberg as director general.

Priscilla Dean, star of “The Flame of Life,” a story of an English mining village. (Universal)
Things Money Won't Buy—

Every exhibitor needs most the good will of his community. Without that his success as a theatre operator is limited. Therein is one of the most difficult problems facing the exhibitor.

How may this spirit of good will be established?
Money won't buy it, that is certain. Elaborate prologues, the best pictures and fine musical accompaniments are responsible factors to be sure, but they alone will not attain the condition most desired.

It is the activities reaching beyond the confines of the commercial side of motion picture presentation that have reaped the greatest results. Naturally, such activities require financing, but the expenditures are but necessary incidental and are overshadowed by the resulting achievements.

To exemplify the foregoing, two letters from exhibitors follow:

Writes Mr. Baker:
Editor, EXHIBITORS HERALD,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sir:
Keep doing little things in your community to attract attention—not to yourself, but to get good will for the boss of our theatre.

In 1921, Christmas, I distributed through the Kiwanis, B. P. O. E. and charitable organizations about 4,000 tickets to the poor of the city and especially to children.

This year I gave less individual tickets at Christmas but gave to every G. A. R. or G. A. R. widow a permanent pass to the theatres for the rest of their lives, if she can stick it out that long. If you could see the smiles on these old people's faces when they come around my place, you could look up the addresses of the G. A. R. in your posts.

(Signed) Dwight B. Baker,
111, Princess and Empire Theatres.
Ottumwa, Ia.

Writes Mr. Swain:
Editor, EXHIBITORS HERALD,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sir:
You would not be allowed to print the finest experience I have had as a motion picture exhibitor.

But will give you the sweetest thing I have ever received from anybody, and when you read it you can readily see that it came from their hearts.

I put a free show on every month at the Orphanage, and the following is what I have received from them:

_The sweetest music ever heard._
_The sweetest perfume ever stored._
_The simple, sweetest, "GOD BLESS YOU._

(Signed) J. W. Swain.
Pastime Theatre.
Columbus, O.

These two exhibitors have placed happiness in the lives of orphans and aged people, and in return they have the good will of their communities. It was the unselfishness of these theatre men, and not the money they spent, that has created that spirit of good will.

To Mr. McKeen:

We are in receipt of a letter from J. D. McKeen, of J. D. McKeen Theatres Company, Morris, Ill., advising us that the United Council of Churches of Morris has adopted resolutions opposing the return to the screen of Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle. We hope that Mr. McKeen has advised the organization of the comedian's decision to abandon his plan of again appearing in pictures.

Some Constructive Advice

CHARLES TOWN, W. VA.—To the Editor: Speaking from a small town standpoint, I question if the exhibitor in one of the larger cities has an idea how difficult the work is for him. In a small business, success means something that has been very near right in that length of time.

First, I have found out that to make your house a success, you must have the pictures your town can stand for. When a film comes to town, after the business with your advertising just as if you were one of the big circus fellows. That’s a sure way of bringing in the public to your doors. When they come that far the next thing to do is not to take all their money for admissions. Make the price attractive. A fair profitable show is the sort of show you should be in your place of business all the time—not here today and gone tomorrow. Cut out the jamming shows. The exhibitor who will keep some of the money for next time and will be sure of getting the rest of it, providing after they get in your house you follow the next most important cog in this wheel of success.

You have done your advertising—now your crook. You do not advertise for a fair admission price—they are in—now do your part to get them back. How?

By having the very best of equipment that money can buy—not simply the best you can afford. Remember this is strictly a business proposition. If you do not have the money in sight for this real honest-to-goodness equipment, go to the banks and borrow it. They will lend it to you if you are in a position. Rutner Webster defines in his book as: “the art of science of harmonic sounds; harmony, a melody; music score or composition.” It does not cost one cent more to have good music than it does to have bad. Play the show as good as you can and you have gained a point.

Up to this time from the advertising—picture bought—good equipment—fair admission—good music—the show is well on the way. The answer to the above is the dear Public upon leaving, after all is over, will you have done your very best to entertain them and have treated them right. If they liked it, they will fall all over themselves to tell their friends. You are not doing it—if you do not like it—after all you have done for them—they certainly won’t make you feel bad by saying “nothing to it.” Treat the patrons of your house as you yourself would like to be treated. Know them all.

The word “Thank you” goes a long way. Try to do the ones that ask for you like human beings and they in return will help you to do what makes a success of any business.

Another very important item in this game is what time you have to spare after looking out for your business. Use that spare time still looking after your business AX, and stand out of the other house in town is keeping up.

“What the Picture Did for Me” is a great thing for an exhibitor but it could be made more effective if the exhibitor if he would play the game “fifty-fifty” and live and work by the one and only reliable rule of business and wish to be done by,” truly making a column for yourself alone to be tucked away in your very own brain on “What I done for that Theatrical Gross? When the Herald column would be different from what it is now. Follow the above dope and (not to be done) for each day will be “Day by day in every way, business is better, better, better”—E. G. Haxson, sole owner, New Opera House, Charles, Town, W. Va.

Razzes the Trade Papers

CURTIS, NEB.—To the Editor: My funniest experience has been to watch the trade papers, which claim to be for the exhibitor, accept my money and that of thousands of other exhibitors, and then not have the guts to stand against the reinstatement of Fatty Arbuckle, had Arbuckle rubbed under my nose and dined on my fellow citizens—both, pro- and anti-theatre— until I am in grave danger of a turned coming off with a laugh, saying that Arbuckle has spoiled his nest and would sink into oblivion and it is a bitter disappoint- ment to see that the public that are being made to bring him back.

In my old home town, the pastor of a church, who did not do so. Without giving the scandal to get to smoking good, the church to the last of the brethren and sisters’ re- conciled and it was kicked out, installed another man in his place and went ahead, hitting on all four, as if the wrong man had not been kicked from the faces of the cynical, the prestige of the church was upheld, and religion in general and that church in particular was more respected than before the accident. All because no one condoned his crime and tried to smooth it over with the church, without even taking a vote of the whole congregation.

The fact that Fatty was acquitted in court is no criterion. We all have seen justice miscarry many times, from the fact that he was not clearly proved guilty. Only a tiny percent of murderers are ever executed and it is notoriously difficult to convict a pretty woman or a wealthy or prominent man.

Admitting for the sake of argument that Arbuckle is a most wholesome and exemplary man, which I have never seen claimed for him, must the entire industry continue to be sacrificed in order that one man may start his career? Better and cheaper that we pension him and keep him out of sight.

When millions have sacrificed their careers, their fortunes, their lives, for less important causes. Of course, it is to be expected that Laemmle would not want to have us forget how Carl’s “Blind Husbands” and some of his other pictures put us on the humor; we have turned against them.—BERT E. FAIRNEY, Electric Theatre, Curtis, Neb.

The Talk-Em-Up Salesmen

RUGBY, NO. DAK.—To the Editor: The funniest thing in the motion picture game with me is the salesmen calling on me. They have all got the best bet of the year. And in three weeks they call on you again and they are with another company, but they still insist they have the best bet of the year.

Another funny thing is why a film exchange manager and president of a film board of trade would insist so strongly on advertising your theater for the Anniversary Week. If I used his pictures, I would have to set out some other films if he ever wants a company would want you to pay for them. If you didn’t want to, they would C. O. D. your next shipment and if you put up a holler they would say the good of trade would uphold them. So what would the exhibitor benefit from it? I ask you, do you think you do them a favor; tie up about $30 for pictures that you can’t use until your contract is ended, and the funniest of all is that this is done in a professional way.

That shows how much they care about the exhibitors. They want the dough along the best you can. It’s laughable when you think of it.—Oscar Trover, Lyric Theatre, Rugby, No. Dak.

The Exhibitor’s Side

MARION, N. C.—To the Editor: Will say that the funniest experience that we have had lately—or rather, it would be the funniest if it were not so darned expensive, we were invited to a dinner to us by a film salesman representing one of the leading producing companies that “the home office has instructed his salesmen to pass the exhibitors who say they are not making any money; they (the New York office) know we are not making any money.”

In other words, these gents live in New York who are enjoying life with their linters and cups, etc., bought with the money that Mr. Frank is making for them, knows more about conditions in the small towns in the sticks than the poor exhibitor does, and is just using these last weeks and using their microscopes to try and find a little surplus in receipts over expenses. Ain’t that funny. Mr. Editor: Page Mr. Smith of Thomasville, Ga., Mr. Silvertone of Fayetteville, Tenn. and Mr. Exhibitor of Athens, Ala., and ask them.

Also, if it is true that the producing companies cannot afford to give the exhibitors lower prices, we wonder if you or anyone one of the exhibitors why it is that the Famous Players-Lasky Corp. could say Mr. Lynn of such companies and that they were not interested in his interests in their combination which he had held for so long a time—House & Justice, Oasis theatre, Marion, N.

A Serious Situation

CHESANING, MICH.—To the Editor: This is a small town about 1,500 population. We have a nice little theatre here and good business. Now the schools are closed and the kids are stuck in one another’s machine and we really do not know what to think about it. I would like to find out how far they can go with it, if they have the power, if they can have a public picture or if it should be for pupils only on an educational basis.

Our principal seems to have a great power over the people and if he wants it, they will get it. I did not know who to write to and if you could help me, would surely appreciate it. I really couldn’t buy pictures without the high price which is a great help to the exhibitors.—W. P. Maill, Crystal Theatre, Chesaning, Mich.

EDITOR’S NOTE—Mr. Maill has been advised to watch the situation closely and perhaps promptly any attempt to establish competition with him. The public school has no more right to enter the theatre business than it has the meat or lumber business.
You are especially invited to contribute regularly to this department.

American Releasing

Timothy's Quest, with a special cast.—A wholesome and good picture for the kids.—Rex theatre, Virden, Ill.—General patronage.

Bluebeard, Jr., with a special cast.—Just a fair picture. No drawing power.—A. Stalder, Spicer theatre, Akron, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

Queen of the Moulin Rouge, with a special cast.—Good, but more fitted for big town.—Rex theatre, Virden, Ill.—General patronage.

The Three Buckaroos, with a special cast.—A fair Western redeemed from being mediocre by being a version of "Musclemen" transplanted to plains. Good scenery, good riding. Too much gunpowder used for present day Western.—P. G. Estree, Fad theatre, Brockings, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

My Old Kentucky Home, with Monte Blue.—Good.—Rex theatre, Virden, Ill.—General patronage.

Associated Exhibitors

Grandma's Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—Absolutely satisfactory from every standpoint, if you can get it at a price you can stand. Harold Lloyd does the best work of his career in Grandma's Boy. But watch your film rental.—W. H. Hardesty, Strand theatre, Kingsport, Tenn.—General patronage.

Grandma's Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—A wonderful comedy. I paid too much, but the picture will do maximum business. Charged fifteen and thirty cents and used a special orchestra.—A. R. Bender, Olympic theatre, Cleveland, Okla.—Small town patronage.

GRANDMA'S BOY, with Harold Lloyd.—Broke all house records for two years. I sat up all night counting the change, if you can get it at a price you can stand. I had not been dreaming.—E. J. Reynolds, Liberty theatre, Pasco, Wash.

Woman Wake Up, with Florence Vidor.—Anyone that is not satisfied with this feature cannot be satisfied. Many favorable comments from those that saw it.—H. L. Freeman, Howard theatre, Alexandria, Minn.—General patronage.

Handle With Care, with Grace Darmond.—Good.—Julius Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

Up in the Air, About Mary, with a special cast.—Very good program picture. Patrons very well pleased.—Veteran Star theatre, Durham, Ont., Canada.—Neighborhood patronage.

WHAT WOMEN WILL DO, with Anna Q. Nilsson.—Very good program offering. Please the audience. Has a race horse scene that is as good as we see in some specials.—E. J. Laqua, Gem theatre, Hancock, N. D.—General patronage.

WHAT WOMEN WOULD DO, with Anna Q. Nilsson.—Good picture. Only fair business.—H. L. McDonald, Royal theatre, Malvern, Ark.—General patronage.

FATAL MARRIAGE, with Anna Q. Nilsson. — Very good.—Julius Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

If I Were Queen, with Ethel Clayton.—A very well produced program picture. Ethel Clayton fits the part. Wardrobe is elaborate. Used trailer to good advantage advertising this.—Thompson Bros. Thompson theatre, Healdton, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Colleen of the Pines, with Jane Novak.—Very good program picture. Full of action and pep.—A. A. Acri, Acri's theatre, Marietta, Pa.—Small town patronage.

Good Men and True, with Harry Carey.—A good picture which pleased all who saw it, but did not draw for me as it should have. Would advise booking it.

Americam Releasing

G. G. May, Isis theatre, Kanopolis, Kan.—Small town patronage.

The Kick Back, with Harry Carey.—Although this is not the best that Carey ever made, still it is good enough to get by. You can get them in and please them with it.—L. V. Feldman, Orpheum theatre, Pipestone, Minn.—General patronage.

The Kick Back, with Harry Carey. —A good program picture. Harry is slipping here. The later Carey pictures don't register quite as well as the earlier ones. This one shows an effort but the story is off. Box office value 50-50.—E. L. Watson, Orpheum theatre, Glasgow, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Hound of the Baskervilles, with a special cast.—Just possible in small town.—Rex theatre, Virden, Ill.—General patronage.

THE FATAL MARRIAGE, with a special cast.—When they tell you pictures "day by day in every way are getting better and better." show them this seven-year-old, with its old-fashioned title. A splendid picture of "Enoch Arden"—Fahrenby and Ellis, Electric theatre, Curtis, Neb.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—A splendid production that has all angles of advertising. We used three sheets around town as traffic cops. Did a nice business.—Thompson Bros., Kozy theatre, Healdton, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—One of the best pictures I've ever played. Ran picture two days to good business in spite of heavy snowstorm and pleased all. Exhibitors will make no mistake booking this. Splendid production.—P. O. Roby, Latona theatre, Williamsburg, Iowa.—General patronage.

The Understudy, with Doris May.—Fine little comedy drama. Will delight this star's followers.—M. L. Guier, Auditorium theatre, Slater, Mo.—Small town patronage.

At the Stage Door, with a special cast. Very good—ultra successes.—Grand theatre, Breece, Ill.—General patronage.

The Snowshoe Trail, with a special cast.—Good picture. Pleased all. Business fair.—F. B. O. Used it with a Chaplin reissue which got the program over. Beautiful scenery and that's about all. We paid too much for it as it's nothing more than a poor program picture.—Miller & Carrol, Gavety theatre, Amory, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Votes Run As Protest Is Entered

As an undiminished downpour of votes for Poet Laureate continues to press to its utmost the augmented staff of this department, the voting is received from W. H. Creal, Suburban theatre, Omaha:

WHEREAS: One Philip Rand has threatened us all in Latin thusly, "Sic itsa bonu est," which translated means, "If you don't be good and vote for me I'll sic my bulldog on you," I hereby give notice that I will institute contest proceedings in the event of his election.

When interviewed and confronted with this statement the judges of election retired into lengthy conference and had not emerged at press time.

cast.—Was not sure what this one would be and was surprised. It was a real good picture with good dancing and a lot of northern life that gave a thrill. The price was right.—R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kan.—General patronage.

Two Kinds of Women, with Pauline Frederick. — Good. — Julius Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Roads of Destiny, with Pauline Frederick.—The poorest I ever ran and I have been dodging my patron a week after Don’t run if you have it looked. Just for it and keep friends in patronage. — Thos. Crawford, Strand theatre, Griswold, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Sting of the Lash, with Pauline Frederick. — Good. — Julius Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Fox

The Yosemite Trail, with Dustin Farnum.—Dustin looked better in this than he has in any Western since The Primrose Lane at the Strand theatre, Muscatine, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Three Who Paid, with Dustin Farnum. — Good. — Raymond O’Hara, Iowa. — Fairly good. The sunsets of the great star. Dustin deserves bigger things. He is worth while. Picture pulls on the name of the star.—J. Carboneau, Monroe theatre, Key West, Fla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Moomshine Valley, with William Farnum.—Patrons thought it fair entertainment but rather depressing. Better close with a snappy comedy.—F. E. Sabin, Maastic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Lights of New York, with a special cast.—Nothing to it. It’s made out of a two reeler and a three reeler of which I could be made. It’s the worst program picture of the Fox service and they sell it for special and 24 sheet misleads as it is no scene in picture that the 24 represents.—Chas. Blaine, Morgan theatre, Henryetta, Okla.—General patronage.

Lights of New York, with a special cast.—A good picture with a moral. But no pull at the box office.—M. L. Guier, Auditorium theatre, Slater, Mo.—Small town patronage.

My Friend the Devil, with a special cast.—A fair value at regular price. Will please about 75 per cent.—E. L. Wharton, Orpheum theatre, Glasgow, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pawt Tickets 210, with Shirley Mason. — Star great. Scenario magnificent but very unpleasing ending. This picture with a better ending would have been 90 per cent good.—J. Carboneau, Monroe theatre, Key West, Fla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Who Are My Parents? with a special cast.—By all means best this picture by your own methods and advertising. The lithographs on this, especially the 24 sheet is nothing to it, but a great picture.—Chas. Blaine, Morgan theatre, Henryetta, Okla.—General patronage.

Rough Shod, with Charles Jones.—Good picture. Patrons seemed to like it. They all like their "Buck." They don’t like Charles, though, and you can’t change it.—F. J. O’Hara, Community theatre, Elgin, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Rough Shod, with Charles Jones.—Good. — I ran a Sennett comedy from Paramount and made a very good program.—Thos. Crawford, Strand theatre, Griswold, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fast Mail, with Charles Jones.—Those that like thrill will like this one. In my opinion Jones has made better picture than this so-called special Did good business the first day, second fell flat.—J. C. Rowton, Orpheum theatre, Quinton, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Monte Cristo, with John Gilbert.—The best of the Fox specials for this year. A really good picture play of a high average. Gilbert does the best work of his career in this. All good comments. Business poor.—E. L. Wharton, Orpheum theatre, Glasgow, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

Honor First, with John Gilbert.—Good picture.—F. J. O’Hara, Community theatre, Elgin, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Honor First, with John Gilbert.—John Gilbert plays a dual role and does it splendidly. It pleased a good Saturday crowd.—M. L. Guier, Auditorium theatre, Slater, Mo.—Small town patronage.

The New Teacher, with Shirley Mason. — Where the star is popular it may do very well. A picture the fans can tell in advance what’s going to happen and not be wrong.—J. C. Rowton, Orpheum theatre, Quinton, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The New Teacher, with Shirley Mason. — Landis, Joseph Dowling, Eva Novak and Julian—Fair.—Rex theatre, Virden, Ill.—General patronage.

Very Truly Yours, with Shirley Mason.—Very fair Mason production. Pleased about 90 per cent of her pictures.—D. A. White, Cozy theatre, Checotah, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Up and Going, with Tom Mix.—Good. — Julius Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

Just Tony, with Tom Mix.—Play the picture for two days. It won’t lay down on you.—F. J. O’Hara, Community theatre, Elgin, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Just Tony, with Tom Mix. — That’s what gets ’em.—Rex theatre, Virden, Ill.—General patronage.

The Fighting Streak, with Tom Mix.—There was something wrong about this picture that didn’t exactly please people. Tom Mix is losing out here. His pictures are rather impossible.—O. R. Roetnuer, Auditorium theatre, Madison, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Arabian Love, with John Gilbert.—We stood ‘em up. Everybody pleased. Second Gilbert picture we have shown and both good.—C. C. Burton, Grimes Opera House, Grimes, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Silver Wings, with Mary Carr.—Lacks the drawing power of Over the Hill. Picture will please. Work by Mary Carr is wonderful.—M. L. Guier, Auditorium theatre, Slater, Mo.—Small town patronage.

Lights of the Desert, with Shirley Mason.—This picture pleased about 90 per cent. Miss Mason’s acting was good and she is very well liked here. Good program picture.—D. A. White, Cozy theatre, Checotah, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Rough Diamond, with Tom Mix.—Very good. Pleased 100 per cent. Mix goes big with me.—O. W. McClellan, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Strength of the Pines, with William Russell.—Ordinary Western. Played to slightly less than regular Saturday night business. A few told us it was good. No kicks—J. L. Greenwood, Orpheum theatre, Weatherford, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Virgin Paradise, with Pearl White.—Pleased all. Pearl is popular here and so is the new picture. This isn't exactly a special, but is good.—O. R. Boettner, Auditorium theatre, Madison, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Virgin Paradise, with Pearl White.—Good picture. Good business.—L. C. Tidball, Isis theatre, Ft. Worth, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

To a Finish, with Charles Jones.—A weak story that Jones tries to make the best of, but poor direction and photography all too evident. Many remarks about what poor material a picture can be made from. Pleased about 50 cents to patrons, Orpheum theatre, Weleetka, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Connecticut Yankee, with Harry Myers.—Good picture. Was received by my patrons.—F. S. Mooney, Opera House, Mason City, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Prison Bar, with Dustin Farnum.—This is a good six reel program Western picture. There was no lost motion or extra footage in this picture. We had a number of regulars and not many to see it. However, don't be afraid to buy it.—Wood & Web, Star theatre, Cortin, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Over the Hill, with a special cast.—Think this is the best picture we ever played. Everybody stayed to see it three times. If you haven't played it, play it extra days. Will stand it.—Geo. J. Kress, Hudson theatre, Roches- ter, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Western Spies, with Charles Sayer.—Sure enough peppy Western with comedy situations. One that will sure go over if you are not in competition. L. C, Saturday night feature.—Thompson Bros, Thompson theatre, Healdton, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

Perjury, with William Farnum.—Good picture. Was told that Farnum does best work in Westerns.—L. C, Tidball, Isis theatre, Ft. Worth, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Treasure Island, with Shirley Mason.—A good old story told in a good way. Played by request.—Clyde Allen, Casino theatre, Anwerp, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

First National

The Dangerous Age, a John M. Staahl production.—Good moral and brings home to us a possible story. Many pa- trons complimented the picture in passing out. Good advertising possibilities for a teaser campaign. A class "A" picture.—Chas, H. Ryan, Garfield theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Ladies of Leisure, a Maurice Tourneur production.—Beautifully produced and was liked by most of our patrons. Some who saw it expressed slight disappointment because certain incidents were omitted. However, these criticisms are made on all book plays.—Henry W. Gass, Gloversville, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Oliver Twist, with Jackie Coogan.—Fair. Will get some of the once-in-a-while audience here. Some kids from regulars. Worth about one-half of what it costs. Have played lots of pictures that could have been played for one-quarter of price.—R. S. Wenger, Victory theatre, Union City, Ind.—General patronage.

Oliver Twist, with Jackie Coogan.—A good picture and did a very good business. Pleased 90 per cent. It is not the extravagantly staged production. An underworld story so there need be no elaboration.—E. W. Warner, Warwick theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Oliver Twist, with Jackie Coogan.—This little star has real talent. Never saw him in a bad picture, and this one is no exception to the mark. Far ahead of the Oliver Twist we showed some years ago. Would like to see a sequel to this picture. Some team.—Henry W. Gauding, Lincoln theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Kindred of the Dust, with Miriam Coon- er.—An exceptionally good picture that pleased 100 per cent. It will stand all the boosting you can give it.—L. V. Feldman, Orpheum theatre, Pipestone, Minn. Neighborhood patronage.

Kindred of the Dust, with Miriam Coon- er.—Good. Had more comments on this as being one of the best than any I ever ran. You can buy it right and it will please.—R. S. Wenger, Victory theatre, Union City, Ind.—General patronage.

Kindred of the Dust, with Miriam Coon- er.—Very good picture and drew well on account of story.—E. J. Reynolds, Liberty theatre, Pasco, Wash.—General patronage.

Kindred of the Dust, with Miriam Coon- er.—Played to big picture the last week due to popu- larity of author and gave good satisfac- tion. The story has not been distorted in the telling but is different and unusual these days.—Frank Atkins, Jr., Atkins theatre, Marysville, Cali.—Neighborhood patronage.

Brawn of the North, with Strongheart.—Run it at least two days. You know how they liked The Silent Call. Ditto for this one. Dog does remarkable work. Advertise it big and you will get a good box office return.—Chas, H. Ryan, Garfield theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Brawn of the North, with Strongheart.—If you've run The Silent Call you'll know what Brawn of the North is. Just about the same, but a big one. Some patrons like, The best Northern scenes ever shown in any picture. It's great.—Chas, Blaine, Morgan theatre, Henryetta, Okla.—General patronage.

Brawn of the North, with Strongheart.—One that starts them talking. Will draw good. Had a few complaints, but that is the most.—P. E. Ryan, McArthur theatre, Union City, Ind.—General patronage.

The Eternal Flame, with Norma Talmadge.—The best work ever done in picture.—It is thrilling to see watching the portrayals of such fine characters as are in this picture. Smelin' Treasure, the best picture, but The Eternal Flame surpasses it. There is no over-acting, not a word too many, nothing overdone. I was surprised at the number of people who came back the second night, though I did not get the business the picture deserved for several reasons.—Mr. W. M. Kimbro, Green- land theatre, Greensboro, Ga.—Small town patronage.

East Is West, with Constance Tal- mudge.—Connie's best. Kept them laughing most of the time. Beautiful set. Summed up it's great. Beatrice, Key West, Fla.—Neighborhood patronage.

East Is West, with Constance Tal- mudge.—If you have not seen East is West, get this one for two reasons: It pays and it satisfies.—Frank Atkins, Jr., Atkins theatre, Eri- ville, Calif.—Neighborhood patronage.

White Shoulders, with Katherine Mac- donald.—I believe that this is the best picture that Katherine MacDonald has ever made and I have played all of her pictures.—L. V. Feldman, Orpheum the- atre, Pipestone, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

White Shoulders, with Katherine Mac- donald.—It's about the best of Miss MacDonald's but no box office value. I cannot understand, but all I can say, is it is a good picture.—C. H. Wilmot theatre, Henryetta, Okla.—General patronage.

Hurricane's Gal, with Dorothy Philips.—Fine picture to good business.—L. C. Tidball, Isis theatre, Ft. Worth, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hurricane's Gal, with Dorothy Philip- pines.—A big picture of the Western drama type. Fine acting, direction, lighting and box office appeal. Went over with a bang. Second day better than the first. Good clean entertainment throughout.—E. L. Wharton, Orpheum theatre, Glas- gow, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

Domestic Relations, with Katherine Mac- donald.—One of the best this lady has been offered in—and she really did some acting. However, she didn't seem

Answering Paul C. Morgan:
I think your suggestion is good, although film exchanges are ready to give the accurate footage of their releases. Of course as a film gets older the small town exhibitors would be benefited if other exhibitors would report number of reels, condition of film, etc. It would be misleading for me to say for example, "Prisoner of Zenda," 10 reels, all full. The exhibitor in Split Lip may not use this film for a year and by then it may be only 7 or 8 thousand feet. That would brand me as a liar.

Answering J. C. Jenkins:
I hope you have played, "The Prisoner of Zenda" you will not be disappointed. As a picture it's all THERE, as a box office attraction, well, you understand Mawrues, that again is a horse from a different color.

Regarding your query as regards the date of release I understand where you will find more stability on a director than a star or production. I think all they make some good, a few bad and some terrible ones, not even excepting the mighty D. W. and after all it's all right to tell your public, as we are doing daily, directed by Rex Ingram. He directed "Foot Horsemens," but that meant nothing in the case of "Trifling Women" or "The Prisoner of Zenda."

Popular authors, well known books, seem to offer more inducement than "a Paramount Picture plus directed by D. W. Griffith plus a star" as these conditions may be different in your town; you merely asked for an opinion and this represents three years of actual experience that runs Hamilton, Ohio, where, as you say, all good presidents come from. Still (very) and by the way, considering the fact that Harding comes from a small town, he isn't doing so bad, is he?

The Chief — A good picture. Another score for Lewis Stone. This will please at regular prices, but is not a special. As usual, the title gets blamed for poor attendance.—E. L. Wharton, Orpheum theatre, Glasgow, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Girl in the Taxi, with Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven — A little old, but in fair condition and it's there with the comedy. Pleased 100 per cent. Book it and they will tell you when they come "Give us another like that."—D. A. White, Cozy theatre, Checotah, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Gypsy Blood, with Pola Negri.—Ouch! This is a salty one. For foreign wp pictures this takes the red hat rack. Play it just before you wish to leave the country. Our patrons went wild, but not with joy.—E. L. Wharton, Orpheum theatre, Glasgow, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Lotus Eater, with John Barrymore.—A Utopian story in this that lulled our audience to sleep. John Barrymore fulfills the part capably, but he should have a heavier role.—Crosby Bros., Lily theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Crossroads of New York, a Mack Sennett production.—If your audience likes excitement, book this one. It is sure there with a punch.—E. J. Reynolds, liberty theatre, Pasco, Wash.—General patronage.

The Primitive Lover, with Constance Talmadge.—Just what you would expect from the title and star. A good average comedy-drama. Something on the order of A Connecticut Yankee, except not quite as elaborate. It will get by at regular prices.—E. L. Wharton, Orpheum theatre, Glasgow, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Woman's Side, with Katherine MacDonald.—We like the star personally but she does not pull, due no doubt to the fifteen worth stories she has been getting lately.—Crosby Bros., Lily theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Cave Girl, with a special cast.—Not much to this one, as beautiful snow scenes are the only redeeming qualities. Our audiences demand something more than a gaudy Chloe & Trevor, Plaza theatre, Lyons, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Cup of Life, a Thomas H. Ince production.—Good.—L. C. Talboll, Isis theatre, F. Worth, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Ten Dollar Raise, with a special cast.—A good picture that did not draw.—Crosby Bros., Lily theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Kid, with Charles Chaplin.—Good special program and good comedy. It will go over anywhere. First National essence on this one is reasonable now for every town that wants to play it.—Anton Janata, Royal theatre, Howells, Neb.—General patronage.

The Rosary, with a special cast.—A picture that can be bought right. Is a box office attraction and will please 100 per cent. Book it up on it Christmas at advanced prices.—J. Pierce, Erie theatre, Antlers, Okla.—Small town patronage.

Bob Hampton of Placer, a Marshall Neilan production.—Hurray for Marshall Neilan! Right there with bolls on. Spectacular Indian scenes, Wesley Barry strong. Small town theatre that can make a hit with this should close up.—A. A. Acri, Acri's theatre, Marietta, Pa.—General patronage.

Scrambling, with Marguerite Clark.—Six full reels. A very cute and lively comedy which should be bought at a reasonable program price. Please.—Our audience generally.—Horn and Morgan, Star theatre, Hay Springs, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Gold and Gold, a Marshall Neilan production.—An old picture, but better than many so-called specials. Just enough mystery and action to be good from start to finish.—Case, Opera House, Paw Paw, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Peck's Bad Boy, with Jackie Coogan.—As one reviewer wrote, "It is sad to think that one day Jackie Coogan must grow up." Everyone enjoyed Peck's Bad Boy.—Small town patronage.

Goldwyn

Sherlock Holmes, with John Barrymore.—Three days to good business. They came, they saw, and went away well satisfied. Not a bad show after all. We were pleasantly surprised to find that the women folks did not stay away as they usually do from pictures of this type.—Fred S. Meyer, Palace theatre, Hamilton, Ohio.—General patronage.

Sherlock Holmes, with John Barrymore.—Business good and several rearrangements. The best picture Liberty theatre, Anchorage, Alaska.—General patronage.

Sherlock Holmes, with John Barrymore.—A splendid picture, but failed to draw for me. Nothing seems to draw now except the producer. He wants to draw more and more all of the time.—M. Kenworthy, Kenworthy theatre, Moscow, Idaho.—General patronage.

Remembrance, with a special cast.—Failed to give general satisfaction. Can not recommend it. We have never seen it and does not draw.—M. Kenworthy, Kenworthy theatre, Moscow, Idaho.—General patronage.

Remembrance, with a special cast.—For a special it is pure unadulterated cheese. Missed the mark entirely. If less money was spent on press sheets and more on production we would get better results.—M. W. Mattock, Liberty theatre, Kennewick, Wash.—Neighborhood patronage.

Golden Dreams, with a special cast.—Good.—Julius Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Golden Dreams, with a special cast.—Good program picture. Nothing more. Supposedly liked it and some didn't.—G. G. May, Isis theatre, Kenosha, Kan.—Small town patronage.

The Sin Flood, with a special cast.—People in this town must have remembered the 1913 flood; evidently the moral lesson embodied in The Sin Flood struck home. The result was a splendid three-day business and everybody went out well satisfied. The picture needs exploitation, but will justify any moderate claims you make for it. Go after this one.—Fred S. Meyer, Palace theatre, Hamilton, Ohio.—General patronage.

The Man with Two Mothers, with Colen Landis.—A good picture, good paper, good theatre. All satisfied.—Elbert L. Conroe, Conroe's Play House, Conroe, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Yellow Men and Gold, with a special cast.—Good.—Julius Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Night Rose, with Lon Chaney.—Chaney is good and draws a crowd here. A feature that you younger folks can't resist and send your patrons away satisfied with. Raised admission on this one. Many comments.—H. Holben, Olympic theatre, Lenox, Iowa.—General patronage.

Doubling for Romeo, with Will Rogers.—A fine program picture. The star an artist.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

From the Ground Up, with Tom Moore.—The best Tom Moore we have run. Will please the average program offering.—S. W. Filson, Opera House, Scott City, Kan.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Old Nest, with a special cast.—The best I ever showed.—Julius Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

This Will Not Occur Hereafter

In the future kindly address my "Herald" to the Empress theatre, Anchorage, Alaska, without my name, as I am not always in town and many of the "Heraldz" have been lost trying to find me enroute, much to my sorrow as I anxiously await every number.

Hoping this will be satisfactory with you and wishing to thank you for the "Box Office Record" which I received on the last mail and sure does come in handy, with best regards,

S. C. RAYNOR, Empress theatre, Anchorage, Alaska.
Hodkinson

Bulldog Drummond, with Carlyle Blackwell.—Full of fast action and mystery. We'll especially appeal to those who like pictures. At Bart's Mecca, Midland, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Other Woman, with a special cast.—Interesting and original theme. Strenuous and not far fetched. No one complimented it. Dual role in a new way.—S. V. Wallace, Idle Hour theatre, Cambridge Springs, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

THE HEADLESS HORSEMAN, with Will Rogers.—Follows the legend exactly and will please all. We ran this as a High School benefit and broke all records at regular admissions. —Unusual cut-out lobby. —Thompson Brothers, Thompson theatre, Headlon, Okla.

Slim Shoulders, with Irene Castle.—Very pleasing picture with a star who certainly draws the feminine patrons. We played the Fashion Show with the picture and did a very nice business.—Frank Atkins, Atkins theatre, Marysville, Calif.—Neighborhood patronage.

Heart's Haven, with a special cast.—Here is another mother story of the faith healer variety that is not being accepted very well through many patrons did not criticize it, neither did they praise.—S. V. Wallace, Idle Hour theatre, Cambridge Springs, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

At the Sign of the Jack o' Lantern, with a special cast.—This is a novelty feature, something different. It made a hit here, kept the audience in a turmoil of laughter. Some thought it the best comedy they ever saw.—J. W. Bascom, Pastime theatre, Sisson, Calif.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Man of the Forest, with a special cast.—You'll go a long way to find a picture that will beat this one, even if the print was more or less choppy.—Clyde Allen, Casino theatre, Antwerp, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Keeping Up with Lizzy, with Enid Bennett.—They all liked this and many told me so. Good entertainment and good moral.—J. W. Bascom, Pastime theatre, Sisson, Calif.—Neighborhood patronage.

Cameron of the Royal Mounted, with a special cast and a Western. —W. W. Bascom, Pastime theatre, Sisson, Calif.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Spenders, with a special cast.—Splendid entertainment in this feature. Please all. Good story with enough comic situations to keep 'em good natured. Good all around feature.—J. W. Bascom, Pastime theatre, Sisson, Calif.—Neighborhood patronage.

Metro

Quincy Adams Sawyer, with a special cast.—A picture for all classes. Better than many super-productions. Entertaining from first reel to end and then you wish for more. The most realistic thrills presented. Book it. Great.—J. Carbo nell, Monroe theatre, Key West, Fla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Turn to the Right, a Rex Ingram production.—Good picture that didn't draw much.—L. I. Smith theatre, St. Worth, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Turn to the Right, a Rex Ingram production.—One of the best we have seen lately and besides, we saw it many times. Did not draw as good as it should have.—Chapin & Lerger, Plaza theatre, Lyons, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Turn to the Right, a Rex Ingram production.—Best picture we had in a year. Our patrons liked this one better than The Four Horsemen. Will please any audience and has interest to the finish.—A. Stalder, Spicer theatre, Akron, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Hands of Nara, with Clara Kimball Young.—Photography very poor. These people don't want to pay for something and get nothing, buy this.—D. E. Davis, Star theatre, Milford, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Uncharted Seas, with Alice Lake. Good picture. Even scenes by the oceanic scenes were better than the ones in Way Down East. I advertised it "with Alice Lake" and all of the kids played in the cast and brought it in. I hope he plays in some others I have booked.—Herzog Bros', Select theatre, Hainesville, Ky.—Small town patronage.

Peacock Alley, with Mae Murray.—Very good. Did not have a kick, only some said would not want a diet of the French part.—Thos. Crawford, Strand theatre, Griswold, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Peacock Alley, with Mae Murray.—Great picture. We have a lot of the others are pictures and never knew she could act. She certainly does work in this picture. We're going to continue with it.-Geo. J. Kress, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Fascination, with Mae Murray.—Please all Murray fans. Type of picture similar to Peacock Alley contains all settings and plenty of opportunity for star to show her dancing ability. No advance in characteristic story保健品, Olympic theatre, Cleveland, Okla.—Small town patronage.

I Can Explain, with Garret Hughes.—Nothing to it. A bunch of junk. About the worst I ever saw.—A. Stalder, Spicer theatre, Akron, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

They Like 'Em Rough, with Viola Dana. Good picture to please patrons.—M. Kenworthy, Kenworthy theatre, Moscow, Idaho.—General patronage.

The Prisoner of Zenda, a Rex Ingram production.—I ran this for 30 miles from here, so we thought we hit the acme of all guarantees when we promised our public a 96 and 441 pictures. And you can bet our patrons the same. Also, pass einmal auf. Four day engagement. Advertised like a circus and had a great one of our patrons for It all. Why good pictures fail to get them this month, I know not. Maybe our patrons are taking the "rate" better and saying, "Every day in every way, they're getting more and more arbitrary." The Prisoner of Zenda is a beautiful picture. So was Orphans of the Storm. The only reason the Ingram picture didn't lose as much money for us as Griffith's is due to the cooperation we have, as we live, we learn—sometimes—Fred S. Meyer, Palace theatre, Hamilton, Ohio.—General patronage.

Paramount

Back Home and Broke, with Thomas Meighan.—Played this as a pre-release on January 5th and 6th. You can play it and not be ashamed to look your patrons in the face when they go out. We were satisfied, old as well as young.—R. A. Shobe, Kentland theatre, Kentland, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Back Home and Broke, with Thomas Meighan.—Very good picture, but too long drawn out. Played it on Saturday. Had to get two-reel Western to use with it. We did not satisfy our patrons the same. B. W. Tritch, Victory theatre, Poteau, Okla.—General patronage.

To Have and to Hold, with Bert Lytell and Betsy Compson.—A very fascinating picture and story. Just ordinary stars are good and excellent action. An unusually fascinating romance. Drew well and grossed 90 per cent. —B. L. Winters, Warwick theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Man Who Saw Tomorrow, with Thomas Meighan.—Don't promise much in this picture. Just ordinary with only fair story value. Runs along with two plots. Not up to the standard of the Westerns.—H. Ryan, Garfield theatre, Chicago, Ill.

The Man Unconquered, with Jack
Holt.—Lots of action and secured to please. Average business.—Ernest Vet-ter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Thirty Days, with Wallace Reid.—The Blazing Brooch tells all house records as to money and attendance in over two years. Third biggest house record in history, and the latest picture being produced by Fox, has not been playing up, but business has been fantastic. Said to be a $150,000 production. —W. W. Shobe, Majestic theatre, sandstone, Idaho.—General patronage.

The Impossible Mrs. Bellwell, with Gloria Swanson.—Business good and gen-eral opinion, “Best picture star has appeared in.”—M. Kenworthy, Kenworthy theatre, Moscow, Idaho.—General patronage.

The Pride of Palomar, a Cosmopolitan picture, and our story of the strong girl with heart touches, sob, photography, and on the strength of the author’s name was a splendid box office attraction from varying types of audiences. A picture that should make friends among the more fastidious of a community. Play it and they will come to see this pass out.—John N. Stewart, Wonderland the-atre, Kaufman, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Singed Wings, with Bebe Daniels.—Attractively beautiful. Entertaining value nil. Story impossible. Without any redeeming feature that we could dis-cover. Scored the poor 11-13th, following Clarence, and did a splendid business for three days. What’s more, they left the theatre saying they liked it. You do-wn’t, I can’t.—Fred S. Meyer, Palace the-atre, Hamilton, Ohio.—General patronage.

Nice People, with a special cast.—A wonderful picture with good acting in it, but not the kind that will do big business for me. Raised admission to fifteen and it was the first night.—A. R. Bender, Olympic theatre, Cleveland, Ohio.—Small town patronage.

Burning Sands, with a special cast.—Good business three days. Comments vary—from the most enthusiastic, to the theatre, Moscow, Idaho.—General patronage.

Burning Sands, with a special cast.—Just as good as The Sheik, but not as good at the box office. The trouble is, if some caliber of picture makes good, the producers flood the market with that style, which makes it doubtful. Should have been a $250,000 production.—Chas. Blaine, Morgan theatre, Henryetta, Okla.—General patronage.

Burning Sands, with a special cast.—Some of the best pictures produced in the past year. Would like to see them in this neighborhood.—J. L. Pitcher, Depot theatre, Homer, Min.-Small town patronage.

When Knighthood Was in Flower, with Marion Davies.—This is a splendid pic-ture for anyone that is familiar with English history. Used orchestra and made some money at fifty-five cents. Played this three days.—R. A. Shobe, Kentland theatre, Kentland, Ind.—Neigh-borhood patronage.

The Ghost Breaker, with Wallace Reid.—Played this the day before this great star’s death. A fast mov- ing, clever, but sad story. Wallace Reid always made. No one will ever be able to take this great star’s place.—Thompson Brothers, Thompson theatre, Healdton, Okla.-homa.

Don’t Tell Everything, with Wallace Reid.—“Wallie” played to a saddest story you ever saw, but the thought of his passing caused a husk. We are all grieved. None can replace him in our hearts.—F. W. Sabin, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Montana.

record. Twenty-four sheet stands are good on this picture.—Thompson Bros., Thompson theatre, Healdton, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Old Homestead, with Theodore Roberts.—Here is another Way Down East picture. It draws and pleased. It’s a $100,000 picture and I consider it one of the twelve pictures like it.—Albert Metzger, Fairy theatre, Knox, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The Old Homestead, with Theodore Roberts.—Excellent picture which pleased everyone, but outrageous film rentals pro-hibit any profit. The exchange get it all and you hold the sack.—Chas. Meighan, Plaza theatre, Lyons, Neb.—Neigh-borhood patronage.

Blood and Sand, with Rodolph Valen- tino.—This is the biggest business attraction since The Four Horsemen. A tremendous success if the exhibitor will advertise and exploit his booking. A strong au-dience picture carrying a plot which holds the interest all the way. A production that will lend prestige to any theatre.—John N. Stewart, Wonderland theatre, Kaufman, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Blood and Sand, with Rodolph Valen- tino.—Failed to break any house records. Considered that the picture has done the picture well directed and acted, but I paid too much rental for fifteen and hotel. —A. R. Bender, Olympic theatre, Cleveland, Okla.—Small town patronage.

Her Husband’s Trademark, with Gloria Swanson.—Very good picture. Patrons brought her story and like it.—J. L. Young, Royal theatre, Garrett, Ind.—General patronage.

Across the Continent, with Wallace Reid.—“Penny Dreadful” and Theodore Roberts helps a lot in putting this across. Have had better Reid pictures, also worse. Round III of the new Leather Pushers and a Century comedy made this a big special bill.—Henry W. Gausing, Lincoln theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Across the Continent, with Wallace Reid.—Drew and pleased much better than some of the other Reid pictures.—Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—General patronage.

The Face in the Fog, with Lionel Barrymore.—It’s a good picture, well taken and that’s all. Lost money on it. People don’t care for such stories any more, at least in my town.—Chas. Blaine, Mor-gan theatre, Henryetta, Okla.—General patronage.

A Bachelor Daddy, with Thomas Meighan.—Here is a real 100 per cent picture if one ever was made. Will please everyone. Will stand admission. This is the type of picture to produce— cheaper than the average, contains no sex stuff or anything anyone can take offense to. Make more of them.—Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—General patronage.

A Bachelor Daddy, with Thomas Meighan.—A delightful picture. The kid-dies are wonderful and make the picture a real assign-ment. It’s the kind of a picture the whole family likes—and that’s what the average exhibitor wants.—Henry W. Gausing, Lincoln theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa.—Neigh-borhood patronage.

A Bachelor Daddy, with Thomas Meighan.—Fine picture. Has received several favorable comments from patrons. No advance in admission.—A. R. Bender, Olympic theatre, Cleveland, Okla.—Small town patronage.

Is Matrimony a Failure? with a spe-cial cast.—A dandy good comedy full of action. Should please any audience, but not much business.—E. J. Reynolds, Liberty theatre, Pasco, Wash.—General patronage.

Is Matrimony a Failure? with a special cast.—Just the kind of picture my patrons like—comedy-drama, but somehow they didn’t get out this time. Those who did come were certainly pleased.—Mrs. W. M. Kimbro, Greenland theatre, Greensboro, Ga.—Small town patronage.

Her Gilded Cage, with Gloria Swanson.—Typical Swanson picture. Not the kind my patrons want. Spent some money advertising this, but failed to draw. Did not raise admission and glad of it.—A. R. Bender, Olympic theatre, Cleveland, Okla.—Small town patronage.

Her Gilded Cage, with Gloria Swanson.—“Very good.” That’s what my patrons said. I shot the price a little and pleased 98 per cent.—Albert Metzger, Fair theatre, Knox, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Three Live Ghosts, a Cosmopolitan production. A very ordinary picture which did not please the majority. Excessive film rental.—Chapin & Leringer, Plaza theatre, Lyons, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Three Live Ghosts, a Cosmopolitan production.—Run this as a substitute for Experience and it pleased. It was full of invention and much interest.—A. Ariz, Ariz’s theatre, Marietta, Pa.—General patronage.

The Bonded Woman, with Betty Compson.—A good little program picture. Will please the average patronage, but not at advanced prices. We got ten and thirty cents and no kicks.—E. L. Wharton, Orpheum theatre, Glasgow, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Bonded Woman, with Betty Compson.—Three-day engagement, January 25-27th. We have just about concluded that it takes junk to make ‘em fall. Strange as it may seem, every really good picture has flopped here since the first of the year; then ordinary trash like The Bonded Woman comes along and does a good three-day business. A few more weeks like the past three and we’ll be occupying a padded cell in Neigh or some other place.—Fred S. Meyer, Palace theatre, Hamilton, Ohio.—General patronage.

The Green Temptation, with Betty Compson.—Just a big elaborate picture with nothing but an impossible story to hold it up. It will not hold the interest. Did not go over here at all.—L. V. Feldman, Orpheum theatre, Pipestone, Minn.—General patronage.

The Green Temptation, with Betty Compson.—Excellent sets, but story is jerky. Poor continuity. Have had much better than this. Well acted, but doesn’t seem to hit the spot.—Henry W. Gauging, Lincoln theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The City of Silent Men, with Thomas Meighan.—Very good. Good moral.—F. N. Harris, Amuse theatre, Hart, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The City of Silent Men, with Thomas Meighan.—Not one of his latest, but it certainly is good. Plenty of action and enough heart interest to satisfy any average audience.—Leuzinger & Amphulry, Carriage theatre, Carthage, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Beyond the Rocks, with Gloria Swanson.—Big fashion show picture. Not as good as a common program picture. Still it is sold as a special. Will not draw.—L. V. Feldman, Orpheum theatre, Pipestone, Minn.—General patronage.

North of Rio Grande, with Jack Holt.—Good Western picture worth one-half what they ask for it.—Chapin & Leringer, Plaza theatre, Lyons, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Boomerang Bill, with Lionel Barrymore.—Very good.—Bert Sarton, Kory theatre, Eureka, Ill.—General patronage.

The Sheik, with Rudolph Valentino.—Second run, one night. Brought this back on account of numerous requests for it. In spite of fact that a blizzard was raging it had packed house. Many drove in several miles to see it again.—P. E. Doc, Electric theatre, Arcadia, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Sheik, with Rudolph Valentino.—Great. Drew a good mid-week crowd. Something no other picture has been able to do. I happened to see a picture of Charles La Rue. If they figure on putting him in Valentine’s place it’s sure good not Paramount. Why not let Fatty “come back”? I don’t notice any difference except in avoidpimp.—O. R. Boettner, Auditorium theatre, Madison, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Bought and Paid For, with Jack Holt.—Good picture which gave general satisfaction.—L. V. Feldman, Orpheum theatre, Pipestone, Minn.—General patronage.

Just Around the Corner, a Cosmopolitan production.—This picture has genuine human appeal and was especially well received by our patrons. The acting of Lewis Sargent, Sigrid Holmqvist and Margaret Sedden was very fine. Pictures like this send your patrons away satisfied and pleased.—Horn and Morgan, Star theatre, Hay Springs, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Male and Female, a Cecil B. DeMille production.—I think every theatre should run it. It’s old, but much better than many features made now.—The Groff, Strand theatre, Griswold, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Passing Through, with Douglas MacLean.—One of the few pictures that pleased them all. Consider it one of the cleverest comedies ever made. Would class this 100 per cent.—J. W. Bascom, Pastime theatre, Sisson, Calif.—Neighborhood patronage.

Footlights, with Elsa Ferguson.—A clean, amusing, beautiful little play that will appeal to all and to high class people particularly. Plot good, a direction fine, acting splendid, costumes pretty. Good for any theatre any time.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

Beau Revel, with Lewis Stone.—Don’t tell my poor old mother that I am an exhibitor, running such pictures. She thinks I am a highwayman and hooligan.—Kahnery & Elson, Electric theatre, Curtis, Neb.—Small town patronage.

O’Malley of the Mounted, with William S. Hart.—The best Hart to date that we have had.—K. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Ocherin, Kan.—General patronage.

While Satan Sleeps, with Jack Holt.—Another good production for those who like wholesome entertainment. One of Holt’s very best.—Thompson Bros, Thompson theatre, Healtown, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Humoresque, a Cosmopolitan production.—It takes a picture like this to get the better class into your theatre.—O. R. Boettner, Auditorium theatre, Madison, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Great Day, with a special cast.—English picture. Like all of them, punk. Lay this one off and don’t pay for it, don’t play it.—Geo. J. Kress, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Inside of the Cup, a Cosmopolitan production.—This is the sort of picture Edward (Hoot) Gibson and support in two typical scenes from his next Universal feature, “A Gentleman from America.”
Welcome to Circle; It Is Enroute

I recently purchased the New Lyndon theatre from Mr. G. D. Vickers. When we closed the deal he sold me his subscription to the "Herald." I say "sold" because he gave me two issues. WeUpon card and they sold themselves. I would not do without them now, so when my subscription nears an end notify me, but never stop sending them.

I have never received a "Box Office Record." Would appreciate it very much if you would send me one. Wishing you many years of success,

L. G. BEECHER,
New Lyndon theatre, Lyndonville, N. Y.

The very thing that makes William S. Hart very strong with 95 per cent of our patrons and absolutely so good with the other 5 per cent certainly predominates this last picture of Bill's. This thing is the impossible fighting and shooting prowess of the actor which he portrays. However, we are strong for Bill because he gets out the biggest houses for him in this town. —Horn and Morgan, Star theatre, Hay Springs, Neb.—Small town patronage.

The Hell Diggers, with Wallace Reid.—Just fair. Not as good as most Reid's. Film poor. So much gone runs the picture. Paramount will lose business if they don't quit sending out such films.—Morganfield theatre, Morganfield, Ky.—Small town patronage.

The Home Stretch, with Douglas MacLean.—Pretty good picture. This star does not fit in this picture at all. Rather unusual story for him.—Geo. J. Kress, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Ladies Must Live, with Betty Compton.—Well done, but altogether too long, and padded like a mattress: No business.—E. J. Reynolds, Liberty theatre, Pasco, Wash.—General patronage.

Back Pay, a Cosmopolitan production.—Well acted picture. Favorable comments. Ran A Trip to Paramount Town with it. If you have bought Paramount's A1 run this two-reeler and feature it. It will do some good and it costs only the express.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

White Oak, with William S. Hart.

A Reply to A Reply to Mr. Stocker

Replying to Mr. C. H. Powers of Dunsmuir, Cal.—I heartily agree with you regarding your article on "Patrons Won't Walk Out." A perfect projection and A1 screen will not hold my patrons when the attraction is not worth while. First of all, the attraction must be worth while, the perfect projection and a good screen.

IVA SHIELDES,
Queen theatre, Tyler, Tex.

Playgoers

Hills of Missing Men, with J. P. McGowan.—A good Western. Suits my trade; made good business.—Frank McClean, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hills of Missing Men, with J. P. McGowan.—Fair.—Julius Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

One Night in Paris, with a special cast.—Keep away, boys, from this one. Poor to the bone. Title and display misleading. People walked out of theatre. Have offered the people their money back, and had to run the serial and comedy only the last of the evening.—L. Rudolph, Violet theatre, Milwaukee, Wis.—General patronage.

Realart

One Wild Week, with Bebe Daniels.—Pleased all of the young folks. This is good comedy, but not up to The Speed Girl.—W. T. Briggs, Unique theatre, Anita, Iowa.—Simple town patronage.

First Love, with Constance Binney.—Five reels. Just a nice little program picture. Taken altogether, Realart are weak, but this one was fairly good.—W. H. Musson, Queen's theatre, Hesper, Ont., Canada.—Small town patronage.

Selznick

Love Is an Awful Thing, with Owen Moore.—Pleasing picture with only fair drawing power. Not a special at the box office.—M. Kenworthy, Kenworthy theatre, Moscow, Idaho.—General patronage.

Reported Missing, with Owen Moore.—Very good picture. This is best Select picture. Pleased 100 per cent.—Anton Janata, Royal theatre, Howells, Neb.—General patronage.

Shadows of the Sea, with Conway Tearle.—Very good for Conway. Don't care much for him here.—M. B. Tricht, Victory theatre, Poteau, Okla.—General patronage.

Why Announce Your Marriage? with Elaine Hammerstein.—This is a very pleasing comedy-drama. The kind that our patrons like, as they told us so.—J. E. Joppa, Opera Hall, Deerfield, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Why Announce Your Marriage? with Elaine Hammerstein—Good comedy. Elaine Hammerstein is getting to be one of my best stars. I have never had her in a sob story. I have never had her working a story...—W. S. Biggers—Unique theatre, Anita, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

Why Announce Your Marriage? with Elaine Hammerstein.—Very good. Everyone was pleased. They ask us for this like it.—A. A. Acri, Acri's theatre, Marietta, Pa.—Small town patronage.

The Refuge, with Conway Tearle.—Very good play. I had 76.5 in cabin theatre. Efficiency producers: Please take notice.—Crosby Brothers, Lily theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.

Chivalrous Charlie, with Eugene O'Brien.—Tremendous drama. Certain patrons said this pleased fair attendance. There is plenty of good comedy and lots of action. Did you hear the business afoot?—Son & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Chivalrous Charlie, with Eugene O'Brien.—Good comedy-drama. Eugene O'Brien, who plays the chivalrous Charlie, is different from the rest of Eugene's pictures. Had poor house as it rained all night.—Herzog Bros., Select theatre, Hawesville, Ky.—Small town patronage.

Evidence, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Pleased our crowd immensely. Good moral, and star is certainly easy on the eyes.—L. G. Gier, Auditorium theatre, Slater, Mo.—Small town patronage.

Evidence, with Elaine Hammerstein.—A real good picture of course, because Elaine Hammerstein plays in it, but at that I don't think it was near as good as Why Announce Your Marriage?—Herzog Bros., Select theatre, Hawesville, Ky.—Small town patronage.

Clay Dollars, with Eugene O'Brien.—This is another fair O'Brien picture, but does not quite come up to some of his other pictures.—Opéra Hall, Deerfield, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Clay Dollars, with Eugene O'Brien.—Good picture. I had a record-breaking crowd on this one, twenty-three with kids and all.—Herzog Bros., Select theatre, Hawesville, Ky.—Small town patronage.

Handcuffs and Kisses, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Real good program picture that pleased everybody.—Crosby Bros., Lily theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Concert, with a special cast.—A very pleasing feature taken in the Canadian Rockies. Photography fine.—H. E. Holm, Olympic theatre, Lenox, Iowa.—General patronage.

The Valley of Doubt, with a special cast.—A good picture that could have been greatly improved. I hear that the producer thought this would spring some original and bring in a "runt" girl and almost "runt" the film, namely theater, Des Moines, N. M.—Small town patronage.

The Safety Curtain, with Norma Talmadge.—Pleasantly received.—Anton Janata, Royal theatre, Howells, Neb.—General patronage.

Children of Destiny, with Edith Hallor.—Very poor story and did not please 55 per cent of our patrons.—L. E. Joppa, Opera Hall, Deerfield, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Greatest Love, with Vera Gordon.—A good picture. Had it booked for December 25th. Christmas picture put to the best crowd ever had. Picture old and put in place of another, but please let just the same. Two others to draggy, but the other four paid up for them.—Hergoz Bros., Select theatre, Hawesville, Ky.—Small town patronage.

Footlighting, with Acri and Olive Thomas.—A very good program picture, although it is old.—L. E. Joppa, Opera Hall, Deerfield, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

United Artists

Little Lord Fauntleroy, with Mary Pickford.—This picture was played on percentage by the star makers. The story had previously killed herself, in this house, in Suda, but this picture was a redeemer. Lots of favorable comments. No kickers.—Miller & Carroll, Gayety theatre, Amory, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Man Who Played God, with George Arliss.—Good picture. Played two days. Bought at a fair price. Did fair business. This star not popular here.—Auditorium theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Dream Street, a D. W. Griffith production.—Good picture. Did not draw big. Title is at fault. Many patrons want small short titles to pull them in. Fair midweek business.—O. W. McClellan, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Birth of a Nation, a D. W. Griffith production.—Griffith should have a statue in the hall of fame for his productions. It is the greatest of the great. I bought it right, advertised less than on any other picture to its reputation to pull, but put on an eight-piece orchestra which practiced the regular score two weeks ahead of time. Had reserved seats on advance sale for both nights. Charged 75-50-25 cents. Cleaned up. performers for scenes. Played O. R. O. the last night. Everybody raved over it. Feel as if John D. had left me his fortune or as if I had discovered Dave, Dave, what inspired you to do it? Why, this isn't a "movie" at all, it's the history of one of our greatest minds. This play will never get old. Many came who had seen it two or three times before.

What is the next biggest one to put over?—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.

We Dreamed a Dream, a D. W. Griffith production, and Little Lord Fauntleroy, with Mary Pickford.—United Artists asked exorbitant prices. We couldn't consider it. The picture is an average one and the results were first and last. They got the money. We got the experience. If United Artists cannot and will not make their prices fair leave them alone. Other exchanges will patronize the people who are willing to make living prices.—W. H. Harman, Strand theatre, Kingsport, Tenn.

Universal

The flirt, with a special cast.—This one did a good week's business and won the approval of most patrons who saw it. David O. Selznick, Film centre, Kansas City, Mo.—Transient patronage.

Top of the Morning, with Gladys Wal- ton.—A dandy little picture that pleases and does no harm. Walton does good work in this, but it's not a special by any chance. Fair business and thirty cents.—E. L. Wharton, Orpheum theatre, Glasgow, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Flaming Hour, with Frank Mayo.—A feature that holds interest practically from beginning to end. Will please everybody.—W. Gauding, Lincoln theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Jilt, with a special cast.—A very good production. A true romance. As other Universal attractions that have been shown here.—H. E. Holben, Olympia theatre, Lenox, Iowa.—General patronage.

The Jilt, with a special cast.—A program picture and that's all. Did not step up to expectations. If you want a good comedy with it or your show will fall flat.—J. W. Andrcsn, Rialto theatre, Cozad, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The TRAP, with Lon Chaney.—Never had a poor Chaney picture yet. Notice some criticized the fight with wood in cabin two. What do they want in a dark cabin at night, an electric light? Suspense, that is what they want and they got it, a big success. It was great.—R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kan.

Forsaking All Others, with Colleen Moore.—Ow, wow and hurray to the trade papers said this is good. Git the hook! Felt like apologizing to my patrons. Filled of purest ray serene. Good cast struggled hard to make something outa nuthin'.—Henry W. Gauding, Lincoln theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Kentucky Derby, with Reginald Denny.—This is a fair offering, but it did not seem to finish right. Patrons somehow didn't want to stick around for much for it and it will make you a little change.—R. A. Shobe, Kentland theatre, Kentland, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Kentucky Derby, with Reginald Denny.—Star drew on account of popularity in Leather Pushers series. Good racing drama with considerable action. Please patrons two weeks. Run do audience fall off second night.—Henry W. Gauding, Lincoln theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Kentucky Derby, with Reginald Denny.—A real live picture from start to finish. Full of action and appeals to all. Rating too high has caused patrons to make any money.—Edward's & Case, Opera House, Paw Paw, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Paid Back, with Herbert Rawlinson.—A good bet for any house. Pleased our folks and make a little money. Would call this a fine program picture.—E. L. Wharton, Orpheum theatre, Glasgow, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

Confidence, with Herbert Rawlinson.—A story in comedy of the war with fate. Reed or Bryant Washburn ever did. All who attended were well pleased. I want more as good as this one.—H. J. Longaker, toward the Alexandra, Millin. —General patronage.

The Long Chance, with Henry B. Wal-thall.—Just a little better than the social spectaculars. A war with hero falling 200 feet over rocks and not hurt much.—S. V. Wallace, Idle Hour theatre, Greensburg, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Under Two Flags, with Priscilla Dean.
EXHIBITORS HERALD

EXHIBITORS

February 17, 1923

Here is an amusing moment in "The Buster" featuring William Farnum, in his new Fox production. The story is by William Patterson White and was directed by Colin Campbell.

Good. Named right.—F. J. O'Hara, Community Theatre, Elgin, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Bearcat, with Hoot Gibson.—No good and an awful print, but what good does it do to tell the exchange. The answer would be, ‘sorry and surprised’.—W. H. Wharton, Orpheum theatre, Grass- wold, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—Good box office attraction. Pleased about 90 per cent. We couldn't see the theatre. Akron, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—Splendid. The first picture I've played since the war that stood them out two days. Used a few stunts that aroused their curiosity to the boiling point. Raised the admission from ten and twenty-five to fifteen and thirty-five cents.—J. R. Rawlinson, Orpheum theatre, Quinotta, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—Absolutely censor proof. Gave general satisfaction and drew capacity crowds for two days.—W. H. Harman, Strand theatre, Kingsport, Tenn.—General patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—A big story well presented. But watch your step on rental. There have been many bigger and better pictures. We soaked our R. V. D.'s to pay for advertising and broke even at twenty and fifty cents.—E. L. Wharton, Orpheum theatre, Glas- gow, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—A 100 per cent show. Holds audience every minute and sends them out with a smile that will take all over town.—E. J. Reyn- olds, Liberty theatre, Pasco, Wash.—General patronage.

The Trap, with Lon Chaney.—Fair picture to fair business. Price too high according to value of picture.—Lyric theatre, Manning, Tex.—Small town pat- ronage.

Step On It, with Hoot Gibson.—Good program picture, but photography is too dark in spots. Some complaints about this.—A. Stabler, Spicer theatre, Akron, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

Step On It, with Hoot Gibson.—Not up to the usual Gibson standard. About half first reel out. Photo in some good scenes too dark.—C. C. Bur- ton, Grimes Opera House, Grimes, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Stop It, with Hoot Gibson.—Good. Good business.—L. C. Tidball, Isis the- atre, Ft. Worth, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Step On It, with Hoot Gibson.—Poor. From Gibson I ever saw. Picture also very dark. Only fair business.—M. B. Tritch, Victory theatre, Poteau, Okla.—General patronage.

Afraid to Fight, with Frank Mayo.—Here is a good one. Best prize fight pic- ture I ever saw. Full of pep all the way through. It sure pleased here.—Herzog Bros., Select theatre, Hawesville, Ky.—Small town patronage.

Afraid to Fight, with Frank Mayo.—A 100 per cent entertainment. If you have not booked it yet, do it now and they will want more like it and will tell you so as they come out of your theatre.—D. A. White, Cozy theatre, Checotah, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Foolish Wives, with Eric Von Stro- heim.—Bought it right. Did nice business with it and it also gave general satisfac- tion. I would call it a good picture at reasonable admission prices.—D. V. Feld- man, Orpheum theatre, Pipestone, Minn.—General patronage.

Foolish Wives, with Eric Von Stro- heim.—Did not like it and did not take good. Good picture. My people do not like this kind.—F. N. Harris, Amuse the- atre, Hart, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Man to Man, with Harry Carey.—I think best Carey and the best fight ever. Should go good second night.—Thos. Crawford, Strand theatre, Griswold, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Man to Man, with Harry Carey.—Per- sonally I consider this the best of Carey's productions, much better than the Fox. It drew well and pleased. Good story with lots of thrills and comic situations. Extra good.—J. W. Bascomb, Pastime theatre, Sisson, Calif.—Neighborhood patronage.

Man to Man, with Harry Carey.—A good Western story. Pleased 95 per cent. Print in bad condition. One of Carey's average pictures.—D. A. White, Cozy the- atre, Checotah, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Conflict, with Priscilla Dean.—Print in bad shape, a lot gone. Good picture.—F. J. O'Hara, Community theatre, Elgin, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Wild Honey, with Priscilla Dean.—
First five reels pure bunk, but two extra Honey, with Priscilla Dean—Great
Honey, with the Fox. —Good theatre, Manning, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Don't Get Personal, with Marie Prevost.—A very pleasing program picture and to us, we do not have to buy the picture in order to show it. We
- seum, Auditorium theatre, Slater, Mo.—Small town patronage.

A Dangerous Game, with Gladys Walton—The first of the Laemmle Nine is a lком. Improvable story, hard to follow. Did not please.—M. L. Guier, theatre, Fort Worth, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

theatre, Manning, Tex.—Small town patronage.

The Scraper, with Herbert Rawlinson—Some picture. F. J. O'Hara, Community theatre, Elgin, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Guttsnipe, with Gladys Walton—Played this poor picture to good crowd.
One more to go and it will tie this for best, the Lyric theatre, Manning, Tex.—Small town patronage.

The Guttsnipe, with Gladys Walton.—Lay off this one, F. J. O'Hara, Commutity theatre, Elgin, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Delicious Little Devil, with Mae Murray.—Was not well liked, but Valen-to's picture is much better. General patronage overdone and many times action drag.—S. V. Wallace, Idle Hour theatre, Greensburg, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Delicious Little Devil, with Mae Murray.—Another program picture sold out, a show that disappointed. Pleaseed 20 or 25 cent. Poor program picture.—J. W. Bacon, Pastime theatre, Sisson, Cal.—Neighborhood patronage.

Outside the Law, with Priscilla Dean—Not a good picture, but film was in terrible shape. I do not think this should be in the Jewel class. It is the best picture that has been made at all—they all—Chas. McElvee, Sigma theatre, Johnstown, Ohio.—Transient patronage.

Dr. Jim, with Frank Mayo.—Very good picture.—Anton Royal theatre, Howells, Neb.—General town patronage.

Desperate Trails, with Harry Carey.—Fair—Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

Second Hand Rose, with Gladys Walton—Good picture, good story, good de-cors.—F. J. O'Hara, Community theatre, Elgin, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fox, with Harry Carey.—Just a poor show, nothing more.—F. J. O'Hara, Community theatre, Elgin, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Wise Kid, with Gladys Walton—Very good comedy-drama. Pleaseed all way.—F. J. O'Hara, Orpheum theatre, Manning, Tex.—Small town patronage.

The Millionaire, with Herbert Rawlinson—Good.—Julius Schmidt, Grand the-teatre, Breese, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Moonlight Follies, with Marie Prevost.—Just a picture; that's all. Nothing to it. —
Orpheum theatre, Pipestone, Minn.—General patronage.

land theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Wonderful Wife, with Miss duPont—Pleaseed, Made a hit. This is the first of this series that we have seen, at the Lyric theatre, Manning, Tex.—Small town patronage.

A Daughter of the Law, with Carmel Myers.—Good.—Julius Schmidt, Grand the-teatre, Breese, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Kindled Courage, Ridin' Wild, with Hoot Gibson.—Hoot never fails to draw a crowd. Best is best and we have nothing to say to it. No censors needed.—W. H. Harman, Strand theatre, Kingsport, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

Playing With Fire, with Gladys Walton—Good.—Julius Schmidt, Grand the-teatre, Breese, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fire Eater, with Hoot Gibson.—Our first Gibson picture. Patrons eat it up. Pleaseed 100 per cent. Good business. Want more like this.—Lyric the-teatre, Manning, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Headin' West, with Hoot Gibson.—Good.—Julius Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Parisian Scandal, with Marie Prevost.—Good.—Julius Schmidt, Grand the-teatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

Vitagraph

When Danger Smiles, with William Duncan.—Plays about 450 reel in nearly 100 per cent. Picture too dark, otherwise good. You can't go wrong on it for a Western. Also ran The Saw Mill Town with Semon. Boy, they are good but we are going to have to pay for those five or six reels.—D. A. White, Cozy theatre, Checotah, Okla.—Neighborhood
patronage.

When Danger Smiles, with William Duncan.—A very good picture. My patrons like Duncan.—Jr. F. Lawson, Barton's Mecca, Midland, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

When Danger Smiles, with William Duncan.—Just fair.—Rex theatre, Virden, Ill.—General patronage.

When Danger Smiles, with William Duncan.—Only fair Western. Showed effects of hurried direction and harkening. They should kick to his Fighting Guide style, mixing com-ey in plentiful doses.—P. G. Estee, Fad theatre, Brookings, S. D.—Neighborhood
patronage.

The Little Wild Cat, with Alice Calhoun.—A satisfactory program picture at a very good Western price.
ness fair.—Custer Carland, Victoria theatre, Frankfort, Mich.—General patronage.

The Little Wild Cat, with Alice Calhoun.—Nice clean picture.—F. J. O'Hara, Community theatre, Elgin, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Restless Souls, with Earl Williams.—A very good picture.—J. W. Anddresen, Rialto theatre, Cozad, Neb.—Neighborhood
patronage.

My Wild Irish Rose, with a special cast.—Two reels in eight months at ten and thirty-five cents. Go after it with plenty of advertising.—J. F. Fierce, Antlers, Okla.—Small town patronage.

The Silent Vow, with William Duncan.—Fine picture of Northwest mounted police in which Robert and Miss Johnson play dual roles. Photography wonderful and story interesting. Pleaseed large Saturday patronage. You won't go wrong on it.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Fortune's Mask, with Earl Williams.—Picture gave satisfaction and drew fairly well. Perhaps not as much business as many higher price productions would at this time of the year. Rental in with business.—Custer Carland, Victoria theatre, Frankfort, Mich.—General
patronage.

Fortune's Mask, with Earl Williams.—Good program picture that pleased an unusual Sunday patronage. Good story with plenty of action.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood
patronage.

Steeltown, with William Duncan.—My, what a riot this would have been ten years ago. Now you can sit back and laugh with the rest, for the hero stuff is spread all over the place, and they will all like it too.—S. V. Wallace, Idle Hour theatre, Spring, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Man from Downing Street, with Earl Williams.—Fair picture. This star does not get the best of luck. With us, God Kress, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Prodigal Judge, with Macklyn Arkuckle.—A very excellent picture, well produced and the story of the man done by a wonderful cast. Story sustains interest and attracts out of the ordinary patronage to the theatre. This picture was run two days with strong opposition. Big basket ball game and other attractions.—
W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

The Sheik's Wife, with a special cast.—
A picture for older class only. Nothing much of anything in the six reels.—S. V. Wallace, Idle Hour theatre. Greensburg, Pa.—Neighborhood
patronage.

Gypsy Passion, with a special cast.—
Good picture that pleased all who saw it and held up fair for two days. Paper is too good and won't attract attention, but picture is sure to please if you can get them in.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood
patronage.

Bring Him In, with Earl Williams.—Williams is good, and should do Western work. A very good picture, and one that is a mounted police picture and gets under the skin.—K. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kan.—General patronage.

Wild Gunning, Inc.

White Hands, with Hobart Bosworth.—
Good program picture that has strong heart appeal. If you are a fight mush busters. Photography is good. Drew a fair Saturday audience. It should pleas anywhere.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Old Oaken Bucket, with a special cast.—Fair picture. Fair business.—L. C.
Fidler, Ixis theatre, Fort Worth, Tex.—Neighborhood
patronage.

The Old Oaken Bucket, with a special cast.—One of the best-liked pictures we have run, with wonderful character turn-and a mob the second. We never have had as many favorable comments on any one picture.—Leizinger & Am施策, Carter theatre, Burleigh, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fire Bride, with a special cast.—
Fair program picture that seemed to please, but it was spoiled by the condition of the film, which was awful. If you can get a good print, it will please.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood
patronage.

A Motion to Adjourn (Arrow), with Roy Stewart.—A good picture. Good print and price right. The second feature that we have used from N. O. office and have found the company O. K. so far to do business with.—Miller & Well, Gayetty theatre, Amory, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Heroes of the Street (Warner Bros.), with Wesley Barry.—A great picture; a potential that will please that everyone. The business very good.—Jas. D. Kennedy, Apollo theatre, Indianapolis, Ind.—Small town patronage.

What's Wrong With the Women? (Equity), with a special cast.—It's a good picture, but not as big as they try to sell it. You can make money if you buy it right.—Blaine, Morgan theatre, Henryetta, Okla.—General patronage.

What's Wrong With the Women? (Equity), with a special cast.—Despites lurid titles, all who saw it liked it because of good acting and moral influence as well as dramatic points, but title kept many away.—E. J. Keillmann, Grand theatre, Topka, Kan.—General patronage.

What's Wrong With the Women? (Equity), with the special cast.—An exhibition picture, not done every angle. Will please 95% at advanced prices.—J. Pierce, Erie theatre, Anthony, Okla.—Small town patronage.

Night Life In Hollywood (Arrow), with a special cast.—A good picture that would have given better satisfaction if story had a good plot. A comedy without any thrill or suspense. H. Daspit, Atherton theatre, Kentwood, La.—Neighborhood patronage.

Barbed Wire (Sunset), with Jack Hoxie.—Tidball of the Hoxie's picture like Barbed Wire they will go over with a bang.—J. B. Laughlin, Bart's Mecca, Midland, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Barbed Wire (Sunset), with Jack Hoxie.—Pleased all. Hoxie takes well here. I brother, book all Hoxie's you can get. All patrons.—O. W. Cellan, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

SHADOWS OF CONSCIENCE (Russell Simpson)—A fine picture of the West thirty or forty years ago. Seven reels. Radio is already beginning to cut in on our business; are spending the money on radio equipment and then staying home evenings to listen to it.—Fahmey and Eison, Electric theatre, Curtis, Neb.

Rags to Riches (Warner Bros), with Wesley Barry.—If this doesn't please your patrons there's something wrong with them. Numerous favorable comments from Lincoln regulars and others. A feature worth Boosting.—Henry W. Garden, Garden theatre, Lincolnton, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Rags to Riches (Warner Bros), with Wesley Barry.—It's a picture that pleases all. It is not the very best of Wesley Barry. It is the special of specials. You can't go wrong on this one.—Chas. Blaine, Morgan theatre, Henryetta, Okla.—Great home patronage.

Where Is My Wondering Boy Tonight? (Equity), with a special cast.—Good picture, but not a special. Please among families. Will do very well. Drew better than the average attendance.—E. J. Laqua, Gem theatre, H ankinson, N. D.—General patronage.

The Clean-Up (Arrow), with William Fairbanks.—Poor picture. Fair business opening.

A scene from "Rob 'Em Good," Hunt Stromberg comedy, starring bull Montana, which Metro Pictures Corporation will distribute.

ness.—L. C. Tidball, Isis theatre, Ft. Worth, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Your Best Friend (Warner Bros.), with Vera Gordon.—All the Gordon fans came out and didn't do big business because plot and settings too much like her other mother pictures.—E. J. Kei lmann, Grand theatre, Topka, Kan.—General patronage.

Your Best Friend (Warner Bros.), with Vera Gordon and Dave Davidson.—A splendid picture of the kind. Both the leading characters in a class by themselves. We satisfied them all with it. We use music score on all special pictures.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

The Unknown (Goldstone), with Richard Barthelme and Louise Allston.—Look when you show this. They are going to tear your seats loose.—F. J. O'Hara, Community theatre, Elgin, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Heart of a Texan (Pinnacle), with Neal Hart.—Very good. Action all the time. Will please any audience.—J. B. Laughlin, Bart's Mecca, Midland, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Isobel (Davis), with House Peters.—The best Curwood I have run and I have run a few. Fruit from—This Crawford and Strand theatre, Griswold, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Why Girls Leave Home (Warner Bros.), with a special cast.—Good picture which pleased the majority. Good box office attraction. Will stand boosting and make good.—L. V. Feldman, Orpheum theatre, Pipestone, Minn.—General patronage.

The Lure of Gold (Pinnacle), with Neal Hart.—Good plot to story and plenty of action. Will go over good where they like Westerns. This is Neal's best that I have run.—E. J. Laqua, Gem theatre, Hankinson, N. D.—General patronage.

Fighting Jim (Banyin), with Franklyn Farum.—This is a very good comedy drama. A Western picture without so much gun play. The kind that is liked here.—E. Joppa, Opera Hall, Deerfield, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Riders of the Law (Sunset), with Jack Hoxie.—Good Western. Good humor.—L. C. Tidball, Isis theatre, Ft. Worth, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

School Days (Warner Bros), with Wesley Barry.—Good show that will please young and old. It has the best advertising card and will go over with the children.—W. T. Biggs, Unique theatre, Anna, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

School Days (Warner Bros), with Wesley Barry.—A knockout box office attraction. Played in Danville and S. R. O. night. All good comments. This pleases all ages and type of person. Will stand a raise in price nicely.—P. O. Roby, Lincoln theatre, Williamson, Iowa.—General patronage.

I Am the Law (Affil. Dist.), with a special cast.—Good. You positively cannot go wrong on this.—W. T. Biggs, Lyric theatre, Laverne, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Shadows of Conscience (Russell), with Roland Simpson.—This fast moving picture was on a Monday and Tuesday and drew a good crowd despite the weather. Picture is the best we have seen all season.—W. T. Biggs, Boettner, Auditorium theatre, Madison, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Trapped in the Air (W. P. E. C.), with a special cast.—Run it on Saturday and made plenty money. Had a dog contest, and I didn't know there were so many dogs in town. It brought all the kid's to the matinee and the grownups at night.—Chas. Blaine, Morgan theatre, Henryetta, Okla.—General patronage.

Man From Hell's River (W. P. E. C.), with a special cast.—Run it on Saturday and made plenty money. Had a dog contest, and I didn't know there were so many dogs in town. It brought all the kids to the matinee and the grownups at night.—Chas. Blaine, Morgan theatre, Henryetta, Okla.—General patronage.

Chances (Goldstone), with Richard Talmadge.—Fair.—Rex theatre, Virden, Ill.—General patronage.

Serials

Breaking Through (Viagraphe), with a special cast.—Western and society serial that has no impossibilities. I call it good.—Chas. Blaine, Morgan theatre, Henryetta, Okla.—Great home patronage.

The Man From Hell's River (W. P. E. C.), with a special cast.—Run it on Saturday and made plenty money. Had a dog contest, and I didn't know there were so many dogs in town. It brought all the kids to the matinee and the grownups at night.—Chas. Blaine, Morgan theatre, Henryetta, Okla.—General patronage.

Winners of the West (Universal), with Art Acord.—This one should make any- one money. Will run the last episode and will say that it is a winner.—Troy Robertson, Lyric theatre, Laverne, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pinnacle), with Ruth Roland.—Showed eighth episode and still going big. Mr. Exhibitor, if you want a serial book this one.—Chas. McEwen, Sigma theatre, Johnstown, Ohio.—Transient patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pathe), with Ruth Roland.—Going good, but poor direction. Not going the right dope. Too much repetition. I have not seen a good serial yet for me, but as the people like it, all good.—Chas. Ewan, Lime theatre, Hart, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pathe), with Ruth Roland.—One of the best serials we have ever run. Everything about this picture and Ruth Roland's popularity increased, with each one. It made us money.—Crosby theatre, Lily theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pathe), with Ruth Roland.—A good looking serial and the people like it here.—Jas. Cantwell, Strand theatre, Ft. Atkinson, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Roland.—On eighth episode and going strong. Best serial to date. (I detest serials, but they get the jack.)—F. E. Safin, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town as well as big city patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—Finished eighteenth episode. Held up well and gave satisfaction. Frank Atkin, Jr., theatre, Kingsport, Tenn.—General patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—Starts well and has every chance of becoming a serial show. Thanks as well as real history touches. Think better even than Winners of the West.—I. C. Longaker, F. E. Safin,突破, Brooklyn, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—Sold the first three episodes to the merchants. The tickets are going well for a second run or short picture of this nature produced. A stimulant for big business and will please your patrons.—J. W. Sabin, Rialto theatre, Cozad, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Sailor Made Man (A.-E.), with Harold Lloyd.—A dandy comedy. Some laugh lines as well as general good humor. Can't beat it.—Fred S. Meyer, Palace theatre, Hamilton, O.

A Sailor Made Man (A.-E.), with Harold Lloyd.—The earliest production that can be seen well, but a lot worse. This is a just and a pleasing little entertainment, emanating from Christy. Worthy on any program and offensive to anybody.—Fred S. Meyer, Palace theatre, Hamilton, O.

BATTLING TORCHY (Educational) with Johnny Hines.—As a rule Torchy comedies have fallen flat, despite Hines' personal appearance. But, boys, don't fall down on "Battling Torchy." It's such a riot that we ran an extra 8-inch ad on the second page of our paper. (We give the name of the theatre, audience and fun that will stand some real exploitation and should bring in all support fans in town.) Every short subject shows, book this with "The Leather Pushers" and you'll have a somewhat monotonous but ideal evening's entertainment.—Fred S. Meyer, Palace theatre, Hamilton, O.

The Romantic Mouse (Pathé), an Aesop Fable.—As usual, the cat was in this (Fox). But it was far too good so far as the rescue of his lady-love (another mouse). It will tickle the kids.—Wood & Corin, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

School Days (Vitagraph), with Larry Semme—all Semme's comedies are good. This one is his best.—K. Kowalski, Detroit, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Battling Torchy (Educational), with Johnny Hines.—This is a very good comedy. Educational comedies are getting.—Royal theatre, LeMars, lowa.—General patronage.

The Rainmaker (Educational), with Lloyd Hamilton.—A veritable scream. Nothing unusually new or original but enough good laughs to make 'em holler. We can cover every white shirts and工 this as a typical Mermaid—because they're all consistently funny.—Fred S. Meyer, Palace theatre, Hamilton, Ohio.—General patronage.

A Rag Doll Romance (Educational), with a special cast.—Good comedy for children. (One group people do not care for it.—Palace theatre, Lone Pine, Neb.—General patronage.

The Scarecrow (Metro), with Buster Keaton.—The search is on for the best Keaton has ever done. Good.—Julius Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Christmas (F. B. O.), with Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven.—A good comedy. Plenty laughs. Some very good scenery and a few good gags. Can't go wrong on this one.—Fred S. Meyer, Palace theatre, Hamilton, Ohio.—General patronage.

A Ladies' Man (Metro), with Bull Montana.—This was our feature for the week. They're all Mademoiselle's Singed Wings. Grab it; it's a knockout. Not just a comedy, but a mirthquake.—Fred S. Meyer, Palace theatre, Hamilton, Ohio.—General patronage.

A Ladies' Man (Metro), with Bull Montana.—Everybody pleased with this comedy. First we have run of this series and like them fine.—Veteran Star thea-Hot Dawg—what a comedy!

If laughs were dollars, this miracle of merriment would make the U.S. Treasury look like an orphan child's bank. Man, oh, Man! The trouble that dog-gone clever bull pup and his newlywed master get into would bring a torrent of laughs even to a tightwad making out a check for his income tax.

But this latest whirlwind is not exceptional—it's merely indicative of the class of every DeHaven Comedy. They're hand-made.

Lloyd.—Excellent comedy.—Bert Norton, Cosy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—General patronage.
The Frozen North (F.-X.), with Buster Keaton.—This comedy is a knockout.
Keaton draws as much for me as the feature itself.—L. V. Feldman, Orpheum theatre, Pipestone, Minn.—General patronage.
The Show (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Like all of Larry’s comedies, fine.
This one brought roar after roar from a large and well pleased audience.
Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Agent (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Good. On a par with other Semons.—Rex theatre, Virden, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.
The Toreador (Fox), with Clyde Cook.—Clyde Cook comedies go well here.
This one especially good.—P. E. Doe, Electric theatre, Arcadia, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Going Straight (Universal), with Mary Pickford.—They came to see Mary, but couldn’t recognize her.
All disappointed.
A bunch of junk, not worth looking unless you’re running a house.—J. W. Bactus, Pastime theatre, Sisson, Calif.—Neighborhood patronage.

Step This Way (Educational), with a special cast.—If you suffer from a headache, plus a stomach-ache, plus all customary and usual ailments, take a look at this comedy.
If it doesn’t make you forget your troubles nothing can or will.
They all but tore the roof off our theatre giving this the o. o.—Fred S. Meyer, Palace theatre, Hamilton, Ohio.—General patronage.

Cheerful Credit (Universal), with Brownie.—Brownie, the dog, does wonderful work in this, as well as all his comedies.
The kids went wild over this and the older people seemed very much pleased.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Off the Trolley (Pathé), with Harold Lloyd.—This one was not up to Lloyd’s standard.
Just flash of comedy in this one and only got that many laughs.
Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinith, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pop Tuttle’s Movie Queen (F. B. O.), with Dan Mason.—This comedy is not to be classed with his Tooenville Trolley comedies.
Mason himself is good, but with nothing to work on.
Story weak and very slow.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Wolf Pack (Universal), with Eileen Sedgwick.—Where in the world did Universal drag this from? Sold to us as a special attraction.—Lyric theatre, Manning, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Wet Weather (Pathé), with Paul Parrott.—Good single comedy—as good as they make them in single reels.—E. J. Lagua, Gem theatre, Hankinson, N. D.—General patronage.

The Bride-to-Be (Pathé), with Paul Parrott.—Paul Parrott was there with the goods in this one.
Everybody was pleased, both the old and the young.
Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

‘Tis the Bull (Educational) a Christie comedy.—Good comedy. Christie Comedies are consistently good.
Mermaid Comedies are about in the same class.—W. H. Musson, Queen’s theatre, Hesper, Ont., Canada.—Small town patronage.

The Star Boarder (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Well liked by our audience.
The monkey does some good work in this.—E. J. Lagua, Gem theatre, Hankinson, N. D.—General patronage.

The Tiger of San Pedro (Educational), with Elhise Norwood.—We were disappointed in this series.
While this story is good it is of the heavy drama type and very slow—no action to speak of.
Does not seem to hold interest.
You will do well to look before you look.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

THREE hundred and seventy-six persons — the country's foremost sporting writers, dramatic and motion picture critics and leading exhibitors, attended the Trade Showing of the "Fighting Blood" series at the Astor Theatre on January 16. These hard-boiled citizens sat there and took the attitude: "Now make us laugh." We did. First they smiled—then they laughed—then they roared—then THEY CHEERED! And then they left the theatre and spread broadcast through newspapers, trade papers and word-of-mouth the most lavish praise ever given any kind of entertainment.

MERELY splendor in outward appearance will not make a theatre chair. There must also be those less apparent but none the less essential qualities of correct construction, skilled workmanship and sound materials that make for dependable and satisfactory service over a long period of time. With so large and important an investment as seating for auditorium and theatre, years, not weeks and months, must be the measure of value.

Theatre owners and managers of longest experience know well that underneath the beauty and good taste of American Seating Company theatre chairs are present always those sterling qualities of enduring value and strength that make for lasting satisfaction and long wear.

THEATRE CONSTRUCTION AND EQUIPMENT

Uses of Slate in Theatres

From Early Use in England as Roofing Material Slate Has Developed Innumerable Uses Because of Its Adaptability, Durability and Firesafeness

NATURE has endowed America with wonderful building materials for sheltering and protecting her citizens and none more wonderful than slate. No other stone in its natural form offers a wider range of uses for motion picture theatre construction either on new projects or for improvements or alterations of old buildings. Slate will give lasting satisfaction in a multitude of picturesque, permanent and economical adaptations. Slate is quarried for each specific purpose to serve through centuries.

Popular phrases such as “slated for” or “clean the slate” acknowledge its natural right for first consideration and sanitary value unexcelled by any man-made substitute.

From an early use in cemeteries it was adopted by early builders as a natural protection from the elements as well as for roofing the oldest buildings and homes of this country. Its sanitary and insulating values became apparent with increased structural demands for permanent materials and requirement of electrical industry for an economical insulating material.

In the industrial series of the Lackawanna Railroad a cleverly captioned advertisement, “New Uses for the Old School Slate” recently emphasized some of the major uses for slate. Designers or owners of motion picture theatres think of school slates, blackboard or roofing slate uses but seldom realize many other purposes where slate renders superior service.

Let us take these up in the order of their appearance on the scene in the course of theatre alterations or construction work.

Some colored slate rock makes very attractive and permanent building stones. For contrast even some of the blue, gray or black can be picturesquely used. Dampproofing by laying thin courses of slate embedded in the walls at a point above the grade level and under the first story joists prevents water or dampness being drawn by capillary attraction into the upper stories in damp locations.

Now the building is ready for roof and for any building there’s no better roof than one of slate. The picture shown of the Bellevue theatre roof is but one of thousands of examples of theatres well protected from the elements by roofs of slate. The slate is used on flat roofs as well as sloping, both in full slate form and as a dust in plastic roofing. A flat full slate theatre roof provides for promenade or outdoor “movies” in the summer time where desired. The recreation pier in Trenton, New Jersey has a roof of this type that has been given hard wear for years.

Some structural uses of slate might be mentioned as the method of so doing is self-evident.

Exterior sills and heads — Interior sills — Column bases — Bases and plinths — Wainscoting — Steps and risers — Cornice supports — Chimney caps.

There are some pleasing decorative uses of slate. Sometimes in the lobby or rest rooms of a theatre, a fireplace appears. The use of slate for the facing and outer hearths of fireplaces was quite common in the early colonial days when it was desired to secure an effect by a contrast of color and at the same time have a permanent non-combustible material.

Slate radiator slabs and drip, in connection with the heating system of the modern theatre protects the floor and can be kept clean and will not stain from the dripping water. Slate slabs, one inch thick, lining recesses for radiators, providing the floor and sill are also of slate, make completely sanitary and non-corrosive enclosure which prevents any warping of the surrounding woodwork.

For warm air or register type heating systems slate boilers around the openings in the walls and floors furnish a non-combustible, clean background to receive the registers and grilles.

The attractive lobby of the Bellevue theatre shown, gives an example of the artistic appearance of a slate floor. The bases and stairs could be of slate too, to make a thoroughly satisfactory water-proof, non-slip floor. Colors black, blue, grey, green, purple, peasan and red in varying shades produce any effect desired. Slate floors can be secured in random sizes from the quarry or even squares or rectangles as shown. They are particularly practical and economical for lobbies, aisles, toilets, smoking rooms, exit pavements and walls.

Copings may be copped with slate rock. The new housing development of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company on Long Island has both slate copings and slate used for trim around the doorways, arches and other openings instead of a light stone. It fits into brick construction for trim very artistically. Lintel and window ledges can be made of slate. Black, green, grey or purple are the usual colors.

For plastering or stucco work a permanent stone lathe is provided by the perforated slate sheets. It can also be used as backing for tile work. On permanent construction work it can be painted and varnished and used in place of wall board and sheetrock.

Besides the customary deadfront main slate switchboard in any theatre there are numerous panel boards, fuse and switch boxes and motor starting or resistance box bases requiring electrical slate. Theatre owners must protect employees as well as these patrons and instead of mounting meters and switches on wood or walls only a piece of sheet asbestos surface, slate panels should be used throughout. If necessary these decorative or protective uses of slate can fit into any color scheme or effect by painting slate or marbling it.

Steam gauges and thermometers and other necessary meters or recording devices can be assembled neatly together on a slate panel in managers' offices or on the lobby where all can see.

For the projection machine booth slate can be adopted where same is built into an old building. Its insulating fireproof, and sanitary qualities make slate particularly suited for such use.

Slate shelving needs no argument around films or in the paper and poster stock rooms where fireproof materials should be used. Where exposed masonry walls occur slate shelving may be built directly into the walls. Even cabinets can be built of slate so that the fireproof construction idea may be carried out. A slate cabinet for tickets and shelving in the ticket office are practical.

The Shawmut National Bank in Boston furnishes a beautiful example of trimming a fine banking room of white marble with slate. The counter tops at the tellers windows are all black slate. Besides being a sanitary hard stone surface which money will not wear down it is extremely durable, it can be broken as plate glass and the contrast against the white partitions and brass grill is very effective. A great deal of dark cloth or felt lining must be provided both for color and to protect the glass. The slate money counter top is cheaper and more satisfactory in every way.

Carrying on the fireproof stability idea slate blackboards both for bulletins and general publicity are fine instead of card board or posters all over the place. A portable blackboard furnishes a quickly available, surface for messages. Varnish and certain other slates make fine tablet materials for carrying permanent name of theatre and marking entrance and exit doors.

It has not been possible here to advise details of how to use slate since there are so many uses. But one thing is to be remembered. Because slate is so non absorptive it will hold a painted or varnished surface seven times longer than wood and thus any color desired can be obtained.

Other adoptions of slate rock in motion picture theatre construction are turning up daily. The National Slate Association has full information on specifications from those utilizing slate which can be made available to theatre owners, designers or anyone desiring to improve existing sites.

It is the civic responsibility of motion picture theatres in their respective communities to exemplify the best in safe, durable and artistic construction. As illustrated herewith slate, Aside from the obvious fireproof, sanitary qualities, is one building material also endowed by nature with colors and qualities to help produce any effect desired by an architect for lasting satisfaction.

Chicago offices of American Photo Player Company have moved into new quarters at 702 South Wabash Avenue. This is along Chicago's film row and in the new headquarters the branch has ample room for the display of its instruments.

Burns Oil
This Method Is Used at New Tivoli, Opened February 1

COAL shortage possibilities hold no terror for the new Tivoli theatre, Michigan City, Indiana, which was opened February 1st under the management of Abe Wallerstein. This is but one of the interesting features of this new theatre seating 1,300 which is also equipped with a Minusa ventilating system by which the air is washed before entering the auditorium. The combination of an oil burning system, eliminating dust and dirt and a washed air ventilating unit will assure patrons of the Tivoli every comfort in heat and pure air.

The oil supply is outside the theatre proper and flows by gravity to the generator which in turn furnishes a steady heat for the boilers.

Henry L. Newhouse was the architect and in many respects the Tivoli revolves the new McVickers theatre, Chicago. American Seating Company furnished the seats, a new style, upholstered in velour with leather seats and padded with curled hair. The carpet padding is also of curled hair. Carson, Pirie, Scott, Chicago, supply the carpets and the cushioned padding was provided by the Blockson Company, Michigan City.

Simplex machines are used for projection and are mounted in two of these, as well as a spot light and a slide machine. Cove lighting system is used with good effect in the dome like ceiling. A Hope-Jones organ and fifteen piece orchestra furnishes the music. The organ is an electrically controlled two manual instrument with stops to produce any effect desired.

The Tivoli is decorated with brocaded silk panels in gold and green, with gold and ivory medallions of light blue. The general scheme of the house is warm gray, and the Adams period has been carried out in pillars and decorations. The dome is decorated in gold leaf.

The exterior of the building is done in glazed terra cotta and presents a pleasing appearance. A large electric sign surmounts the marquee and there are upwards of 1,000 electric lights in the canopy and sign.

The house is well equipped for vaudeville or pictures, a stage 27 feet deep by 65 feet wide being provided. Dressing rooms are on two sides of the stage and accommodate sixty performers. An asbestos curtain is provided and an extra precaution a water curtain has been placed immediately behind this. The electrical effects of the house are controlled back stage by a system of dimmers.

Installs Large Organ

A new Robert-Morton pipe organ was installed in the Globe theatre, Kansas City this week, city officials having approved at a cost $200,000. Installation was unusually difficult, as there was no provision for an organ when the theatre, which seats about 2,500, was built.

Theatre Construction News

New Projects

A development of last week which is of considerable interest to the theatre construction and equipment field was the purchase by West Coast Theatres, Inc., of forty houses comprising the Turner & Dabunken circuit on the West Coast. In announcing the purchase Sol. Lesser, A. L. and Michael Gore and Adolph Ramish made it known that these theatres will be remodeled and improved, making each a playhouse of the highest type.

Lincoln, Neb.—An eastern syndicate has selected a site in Lincoln for the erection of a theatre to cost $250,000 and another at Kearney to cost $100,000, according to John R. Webster, of Albany, N. Y., who has been here in the interests of the transactions.

Seattle, Wash.—A theatre to cost between $750,000 and $1,000,000 will be erected in Seattle, Irving Ackerman of Ackerman & Harris has announced. It will seat 2,500.

St. Louis, Mo.—Construction of the Loew theatre in this city, which was held up because of high building costs according to Marcus Loew, will probably get under way in the near future as new bids have been asked of contractors.

Oakland, Cal.—A community theatre to cost in the neighborhood of a million dollars is planned for Oakland. Edgar J. Linesba, former house manager of the Bishop theatre and later assistant manager of the McArthur theatre, is engineering the project.

San Mateo, Cal.—The Regent theatre here will be thoroughly remodeled and improved by Peninsula Circuit of Motion Picture Theatres, the new management, of which Ellis J. Arkush is head.

Montgomery, Ala.—It is probable that a theatre for negroes to cost $350,000 will be erected here according to Clarence J. Bennett of New Orleans, president of the Theatre Owners Booking Association.

Traverse City, Mich.—A new theatre will be built here by Fitzpatrick & McErlroy, Chicago.

San Gabriel, Cal.—Construction has been started on the Mission Playhouse to be erected here.

Little Rock, Ark.—M. S. McDerm and M. A. Lightman, owners of the Rex theatre, have taken over the Washington theatre in which a new front will be installed, the seating capacity increased to 700 with opera chairs replacing the old benches.

Ownership Changes

Detroit, Mich.—Richard Flynn has taken over the lease and management of the Gladwin Park theatre here.

Little Rock, Ark.—T. B. Chastain, who owns and operates the Newport and Cotton Plant theatres, has taken over the Rex theatre at Brinley from Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dill.

Tiona, Mich.—W. S. Butterfield has acquired the interests of his partner, Clifford B. Swerl, in the Regent and Family theatres.

Honey Grove, Tex.—The Strand theatre here has been purchased by O. Gill of Hugo from Mr. and Mrs. I. G. Kilough.

Livermore, Cal.—A. O. Atkinson of San Francisco has purchased the Bell theatre from Kline & Levy of that city.

Albany, N. Y.—C. H. Buckley and J. F. Farsches, owners of the Leland theatre here, have leased the Clinton Square theatre, formerly run by Fred P. Elliott. Improvements are to be made.

Openings

Lincoln, Ill.—Steven Bennis' new Lincoln theatre here will be completed and ready for opening about the middle of February.

Mason City, Ia.—The Garden theatre has been reopened under the management of S. Nicolle after being redecorated.

Danville, Ill.—The New Court theatre on East Main street has been completed and opened.

Des Moines, Ia.—The Alhambra theatre at Grand near Fifth street will be opened in April according to S. O. Moore, head of the firm financing the project.

Dinuba, Cal.—Manager J. W. Davis has announced that the new Strand theatre here would be opened February 1.

Michigan City, Ind.—The new Tivoli theatre, Abe Wallerstein, manager and director, opened its doors on February 1.

Elks Plan Big Theatre

At Kansas City Kansas

A new $250,000 motion picture theatre and club house is planned by the Elks Lodge of Kansas City, Kan., the building to be an eight story structure with the first three floors occupied by the theatre, which will have a seating capacity of 1,500.

Other new theatres and changes of management announced in the Kansas City territory this week are: Community theatre, Rockport, Mo., opened by American Legion; Jefferson theatre, Springfield, Mo., purchased by S. E. Wilmott; Palace theatre, Spring Hill, Kans., purchased by H. E. McCall from H. R. Payne.

CHICAGO TRADE EVENTS

Michigan City, Ind.
Boasts New Theatre

Tivoli, Seating 1,300 and Costing $300,000 Was Opened
February 1

The Tivoli theatre, the pride of Michigan City, Ind., was formally opened on the evening of Feb. 1. The main palace, which seats about 1,300, was erected at a cost of $300,000, was filled to overflowing with a happy, expectant crowd on the opening night, and Managing Director Abe Wallerstein gave them their money's worth in music, pictures and vaudeville.

The theatre was financed by 200 progressive citizens of Michigan City, and is a credit to the community. It rises two stories ahead of the town and would be a credit to a city twice its size. The Michigan Theatre Corporation is back of it.

Minister Gives Talk

The Tivoli was formally dedicated by the Rev. C. H. Hopkins, who expressed a sincere wish for its success. The Rev. Hopkins, in a year that was one of the strongest anti-motion picture advocates and is now one of their staunchest supporters.

In appointments and finish the Tivoli is one of the prettiest theatres in the country. The construction was under the supervision of architect Henry L. Newhouse of Chicago, who was on hand to assist at the opening last Thursday night.

The exterior of the building is glazed cream-colored terra cotta especially designed for the Tivoli. The theatre is fireproof, with wide aisles leading directly to seven exits on each floor. It has a spacious lobby and the whole is equipped with American Seating Company theatre chairs.

The balcony is reached by marble stairways from the main foyer, and the mezzanine floor and arrangement of approaches resemble closely the McVicker's theatre in Chicago.

H. Hope-Jones Organ

A very complete projection booth, equipped with two Simplex machines, a spot-light and slide machine is in charge of Operator S. C. Blande. A fifteen piece orchestra under the leadership of Howard L. Peterson rendered excellent music. Mr. Peterson also operated the Hope-Jones organ.

M. A. Cushman handled the bond issue for the new theatre. E. E. Bernstein will act as Treasurer in operating the house. The policy of the new house will be pictures and vaudeville, the vaudeville being used Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday. The admission price is 45 cents.

"Only a Shopgirl" Rights

Acquired by S. Greiver

Greiver Productions have taken over rights and their territory on "Only a Shopgirl," negotiations having been completed with the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation. By the agreement, Greiver will handle the feature in the Northern Illinois and Indiana territory.

S. Greiver, head of Greiver Productions, is the first of the C. B. C. "Box Office Winners." "More to Be Pitted," when the series was first announced.

William Sweeney Is Busy Man These Days

Popular Organizer of Local Exhibitor's League Has Plenty of Work

William Sweeney, organizer of the Illinois M. P. T. O., is probably the busiest man in Chicago these days.

In addition to his regular work, he is taking a big part in the fight on daylight saving; cooperating with the Department of Justice in an investigation of the music tax; and, last but not least, has one eye on Springfield, where the legislature is in session.

And He Can Handle It

Tasks of this kind in addition to his regular work might throw the average person. But Sweeney calmly thrives on it. And in the midst of it, he still finds time to take care of the extras, such as answering questions and keeping up his correspondence.

The daylight saving fight is coming along nicely. Theatres all over Chicago are getting signatures to the petitions against continuing this time and report sentiment is swinging back toward Sunday Time for the winter months.

The music tax investigation promises many interesting developments. Up to date, the legislature has done nothing to work the theatre racket. Instead, it has sparse an assortment of unfriendly bills is looked for.

Endorse Elks' Fight on Dope

At a recent board meeting of the Illinois M. P. T. O., resolutions were adopted endorsing the Elks' fight on the dope traffic. Copies were delivered to the Elks lodge, Commissioner of Health Bundesen and the daily newspapers by Joseph Hopp and Adolph Powell.

Universal Employees

Hold Annual Banquet

Employees of the Universal exchange held a very enjoyable benefit affair in the East Room of the La Salle Hotel, on Saturday, Feb. 3. Louis Laemmle was toastmaster and the various salesmen and invited guests were called upon for brief addresses.

During the evening Herman Stern, sales manager, presented Harry Phillips with 200,000 rubles and Lipton Astrachan received 300,000 rubles as prize money for winning first and second place in a recent sales contest. A copy "pinched" Mr. Phillips during the proceedings, but Beadell used his police badge and city hall influence to save Harry. Dancing, music and exhibition dancing ended the evening. The affair was given by the Universal Exchange Benefit Society, an organization formed two years ago by Mr. Stern.

Weber & North Picture

Opens at the Randolph

"Notoriety," produced by Will Nigh, for L. Lawrence Weber & Bobby North, opens in indefinite engagement at the Randolph theatre Sunday. The production is in eight reels and is distributed in this territory by J. L. Friedman of Celebrated Players.

Manager J. L. McCurdy plans to do extensive advertising for the feature.
EVERYBODY had a good time at Abe Wallerstein's opening last Thursday night at Michigan City, Ind., and the new Tivoli is a credit to the town and to its promoters.  * * *

The Great Moustache contest between Spencer and Miller, F. B. O. boys, is drawing to a close, next Saturday being the final day, when the winner will be decided and the twenty-five buck prize. Last week we though Charlie Miller had an edge on A. G., but while Charlie was asleep in the barber's chair he thoughtlessly trimmed off three hairs and now Spencer leads. Thorns of the upper-lip decorations will be carried in our next issue.  * * *

CRESS SMITH, special representative for United Artists, who left Chicago with his family on January 23, arrived at Honolulu Jan. 30, and was in Los Angeles Feb. 6. He expects to arrive at Sydney, Australia Feb. 13.  * * *

CHARLIE CASONANA has returned from New York, where the U. S. salesman spent a week looking at the bright lights.

MORRIS SALKIN, of the Owl theatre, and Harry Goldson, of the Adelphi, inform us they were entertained in Los Angeles by Kalla Pasha, the Famous Players-Lasky star. Pretty sold to some folks.  * * *

JULIUS GOODMAN, of the Broadway- Strand, has his new special Pierce coupe. It's a hard life, mate.  * * *

When we went into Celebrated Players exchange, to get some news we found the salesman's booth transferred into a jungle of wild beasts, with "Bill" Hershberg mixing around with them like they was old friends.

We're green with envy, FRANK HAMMOND of the Vendome theatre, 31st and State streets, dropped in to tell us he had just returned from that oasis, Cuba. Frank aver he was in Havana in style and hearty and healthy. Says they don't even know what that new malady, "moonshine death," is in Havana. Frank lounges while on the Island. He spent his spare moments with Paul De Oto, who is now manager for Universal in Havana. Everybody knows Paul. Ask Frank, maybe he will give you details.

DEL GOODMAN has resigned as United Artists salesman, to join the Fox Film Corp. Del will be given the Australian office of Fox as soon as his transfer can be arranged.  * * *

The Master Advertisers, Al. Dezel, general manager, has moved to new quarters on the second floor, 30 East Eighth street.  * * *

Our old college chum, WALT NEALAND, who tells the world about Goldwyn Pictures, is in Milwaukee this week, exploiting "The Strangers' Banquet" and " Broken Chains."  * * *

At an exploitation stunt LOTS KRAMER, the 20th Century Fox exploiter, advertised he would have Al Hoffman, the F. B. O. champion high jumper, spring out of the eighteenth story window of his hotel at Danville, Ill., and enter the 100 yard dash on Sherman's net, thus advertising "The Third Alarm," but the authorities stopped the exhibition, and Louis only got about four cols., of publicity on it.

The many friends of J. S. McHenry, former advertising manager of The Herald, and once conductor of this column, will be pleased to learn of his appointment as Branch Manager for Fox Film Corp. in Germany. He expects to leave about May 1.

SID DECKER, Universal's "Key centre" salesman, advises that the West Side Business Association of Rockford, Ill., has purchased the old hotel property in the spring a new theatre, seating 2,500, will arise on that corner.

FRANCIS LAEMMLE was given a surprise party by the heads of all departments of the Universal exchange and helped him celebrate a birthday a week ago Saturday night.  * * *

TED SCHLANGER has been made Short Subject manager for Universal.

JAN. CREIGHTON, of the Parthenon theatre, Hammond, Ind., has a successful "First" party at his pretty playhouse.

BEN SEKOWSKY, who busted into the Pporia newspapers more than once, with his Madison theatre exploitation stunts, is now numbered in the Chicago theatre staff. We hear, He's director of public relations or something like that.

Irving Mack has moved to new quarters -787 South Walsh ave, and trailers, posters, heralds, etc., can be ordered at the new location at the same price as before. He'll be there two years at least, he says.  * * *

M. WHITMORE has been added to the Celebrated Players sales force by J. L. Friedman. He handles the Northern Indiana territory.  * * *

CHARLES OLSON, of the Lyric and Apollo theatres, Indianapolis, was a caller on Film Row last week.  * * *

"Notority." Will Night's picture, which Celebrated Players is handling, is at the Randolph theatre this week.

JACK McCANN is now house superintendent of the State-Lake theatre.

WALTER D. NEALAND, the Goldwynner, has returned from exploiting "Broken Chains" at the Blackstone theatre, South Bend, Ind., where the truthful Walt, informs us it did a wonderful business for six days. He also put over the same picture at the Princess theatre, Springfield, Ill. Originally scheduled to open on Sunday Jan. 28, the demand for seats compelled the management to open it Saturday, Jan. 27. As Walt says—"there going some."

And while we're on the subject, the Goldwyn picture "The Stranger's Banquet" goes into the Chicago Feb. 5 for a week's run and on March 12 "The Christian" occupies the screen at the big 5,000 seat house.

"Red" Johnson of the F. B. O. forces is back on the job after a few days' illness.

Celebrated Players is planning a special showing of "The Jungle Goddess," a new serial at Universal projection room, on Thursday.

NATE WOLF has been confined to his home with the flu.

"Bob" TOWN and Charles FRANCIS WALTSH, who are responsible for all Fox film shipments out of the local exchange, don't want to see another Anniversary Week this year. They have been hard working day and night tossing the cans around and eating hot dogs to keep alive.

C. E. ROSS, exchange manager, and W. W. Brumbrug, in charge of country sales, are both elated over the excellent showings made by their men for First National Week—which in itself was a big one.

GAPWELL SEARS, city sales manager, First National, threw his arm out bowling last week and is now rooting from the side lines.

Mr. and Mrs. I. LEISERMAN announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Gladys to Joseph Wolf. Mr. Wolf is a graduate of Northwestern University, and is present with the Pullman Coach Company, in the Southern states. His home is in Tampa, Fla., where his uncle has a controlling interest in a large motion picture theatre.

S J. GREGORY of Hammond, Ind., is at Hot Springs, Ark., for three weeks' rest.

The officers of Jones, Linick & Schafer and theatre managers gave Emil Mayer, former chief accountant, a farewell dinner at the Sherman Friday night. Mr. Mayer leaves soon for California, where he will make his future home.

"BILLS" DANZIEISTERK, assistant to Dan Roche, of Paramount publicity forces, is showing Jack Hallman around town this week. Mr. Hallman is to be exploitation manager at Alhambra, Calif, till the vacancy caused by the death of Max Doolittle.

And by the way Dan Roche has returned to New York City, where he had all sorts of trouble with his own, and has two wagons ready for his "Covered Wagon" campaign.

LOUIS BREECKER has purchased the California theatre on 35th street.

MRS. C. E. BECK, wife of the owner of the Castle theatre, died suddenly on Friday, Feb. 2.

R. C. SEERY, district manager of First National, is in New York attending a convention of district managers. He will be gone a month.

R. C. WILLIAMS of the Majestic theatre, Streator, Ill., attended the auto show last week. Wonder what kind of a car he's getting?

Berman in Chicago

Harry M. Berman, general manager of sales, Film Booking Offices of America, dropped in on the local exchange Saturday. He left for St. Louis on Sunday.

The Only New Thing
In Motion Pictures
This Year!

From exhibitors—from audiences—from critics—from picture experts—comes this comment, again and again, after viewing that great photoplay sensation

D. W. Griffith's
“One Exciting Night”

Here is a picture that has EVERYTHING any exhibitor can ask.
It satisfies box-office demands and also pleases immensely any type of audience.
In all sections of the country it has set new attendance records in theatre after theatre.
It is that "something new" in pictures that exhibitors everywhere are seeking.

Miss Louella Parsons Says
In The Morning Telegraph

"Here is something entirely new—the first picture of its kind I have ever seen.
"D. W. Griffith has never made such an enjoyable picture.
"Never in the history of pictures has there been anything so full of thrills, suspense and everything that makes for one hundred per cent. interest."

More Money From Philadelphia and a Record in Cleveland!

D. W. Griffith’s “One Exciting Night,” his latest picture sensation, did such a smashing box-office business at the Stanton Theatre, Philadelphia, that it brought this letter from Frank W. Buhler, managing director, to Albert Grey, general manager of the Griffith organization:

“We have extended the engagement of this picture owing to its great popularity in Philadelphia.

“'One Exciting Night’ is a picture that appeals to all classes. It has an element of comedy, an element of drama and keeps the spectator interested every minute of the showing.

Big Box-Office Returns and a New Record in Cleveland!

Breaking all house records at popular prices at the Stillman Theatre, Cleveland, Mr. Griffith’s “One Exciting Night” played to $18,138.80 the first week of the engagement. The second week brought $13,679.89.

As a result of the splendid box-office and audience value of the picture, N. M. Schenck, of the Loew organization, sent the following letter to Albert Grey:

“Thought you might like to know that ‘One Exciting Night,’ which completed a two weeks’ run at the Stillman Theatre, Cleveland, has done remarkable business.

“The audiences received it enthusiastically, and I feel sure that it will go equally well anywhere.”

For Two Weeks Broke the Record
Made With "Way Down East" and Also With "Orphans of the Storm"

And REMEMBER! "Way Down East" in stage and screen theatres, has played to twice as much business as any other two pictures ever made!

And this record was made during the most unfavorable weather in years.

$15,000 greater than "Way Down East"!
$8,000 greater than "Orphans of the Storm"!

Read What Joseph Plunkett Says

"Dear Mr. Abrams—I am glad to write you that D. W. Griffith's 'ONE EXCITING NIGHT' did bigger business for us than either 'Way Down East' or 'Orphans of the Storm.' We were compelled to stop the sale of seats many times during the engagement of the picture. It certainly is a great audience attraction, which was plainly shown by the way our audiences received it."

Now Read What "Variety" Had to Say

"Strand—'ONE EXCITING NIGHT!' (Griffith-United Artists.) Seats 2,900. Scale; 30-50-85. Was held over for second week and broke the house record on the business done by both 'Way Down East' and 'Orphans of the Storm,' previous Griffith's that played two weeks at the house. Got close to $29,000 on the week."

"Variety's" report for the first week at the Strand stated that "ONE EXCITING NIGHT" grossed "better than $31,000," adding that it was being held over.
They Love It!

"Superior to anything of the sort the screen has ever known. Through every inch D. W. Griffith's art is most telling.—Moments when one thinks one's heart cannot last—then onslaughts of comedy."—N. Y. Sun.

"Griffith's picture will live among the immortals of the silver screen, for 'One Exciting Night' is one of the best photoplays ever produced."—N. Y. Evening Telegram.

"A magnificent piece of work—indeed a hilarious thriller."—N. Y. Times.

"A masterpiece—women screamed, everybody gasped—and then, the audience went into hysterics of laughter."—Chicago Herald and Examiner.

"Stupendous is the word! You will rise up on the edge of your seat and scream."—Boston Traveller.

"It will be THE popular evening's pleasure this year."—N. Y. Post.

"The audience as one man shivers at 'One Exciting Night'—The action is terrific. All highly successful."—N. Y. Herald.

"Even remembering what the master producer has done before, this surpasses all—and Griffith has added the funniest type of negro comedian."—N. Y. Journal.

"Everybody had a wonderful time."—Chicago Tribune.

"Gale after gale of applause—Titanic—A mighty spectacle."—N. Y. Mail.

"Stunning."—Boston Globe.

Under the title "Picture of the Month" in the current issue of Screenland Mack Sennett's new comedy drama, "Suzanna," is given the place of honor.

"This page is dedicated to the man and woman for whom the program picture holds no appeal," says the announcement. "In this space the ONE OUTSTANDING SCREEN DRAMA OF THE MONTH is presented to their discriminating attention, as proof that the cinema can and occasionally does express real dramatic ideals."

"Warm sunshine beating on the old 'dobe walls; dash- ing caballeros strumming their guitars 'neath a dark-eyed senorita's lattice; brown-frocked padres in the mission garden; Old Spain under blue California skies; and winsome, lovable little Mabel Normand — that is 'Suzanna.'"

DOWN TO THE SEA IN SHIPS"
"Down to the Sea in Ships"
Elmer Clifton's New Production a Masterpiece in Its Line—Replete With Sensations and Human Interest
Reviewed by Roger Ferri

When the ten best productions of the current season are finally sorted out, this Elmer Clifton offering should not be overlooked, for it is one of the most marvelously amazing attractions ever offered owners of motion picture theatres. In its class it stands alone and as an unquestionable masterpiece. Here is a production that is just that and more—a picture with a real heart. It is at the same time a great education and a remarkable entertainment vehicle. Its value goes beyond that of the theatre, for it will create talk and discussion that will live for a long, long time.

Cinematographically, "Down To the Sea in Ships" is that much sought different production exhibitors have prayed for. It is dramatic, sensational, romantic, comical and picturesque, dwelling on a story that is appealingly human.

It is big in everything. You don't have to take any risk when you grab this one, for it is that type of production that will appeal to everybody for it has everything in it—and most important it is in possession of heart-throbs that are gripping and leave a permanent impression that will prompt word-of-mouth boosting.

Elmer Clifton is deserving of much commendation for "Down To the Sea in Ships" for it is what this writer would gamble two to one in predicting that it will prove a huge box office winner. It's a production that will justify the investment of several thousands of dollars in exploitation, for the picture will earn it all back 100 times.

It will be wise distributing agency that will grab this one and a wiser exhibitor who will allow it to bring the silver to its box offices.

For sensations, "Down To the Sea in Ships" is the best bet. And these sensations result from every day hair-raising experiences of whales. And they are not faked. This writer knows New Bedford and many a time was dispatched there by a Boston newspaper to "cover" shipwrecks, etc., in that picturesque locality.

To enumerate the innumerable thrillers depicted in this attraction would mean the use of an entire page. Suffice, however, to say that this picture is so securely packed with dangerously hold feasts in which whales unconsciously play an important role, that it has any 15 episode serial, this writer has seen to date, washed off the board.
NEVER before has a photo-dramatic production made its bid for public approval backed by the weight of critical enthusiasm that has greeted “Down to the Sea in Ships.”

“One of the most interesting pictures ever produced. . . . It combines pretty nearly the best in everything, acting, photography, direction and cast.”—Philadelphia North American.

It is a picture that will do more in a single season to restore confidence and public interest in the motion picture theatre than any other force at work within the industry.

“In this picture, the screen has gained one of its few veritable classics. It is visual literature, hauntingly beautiful. A truly great film.”—Boston Advertiser.

“Down to the Sea in Ships” has been launched with one of the biggest advertising and exploitation campaigns ever put behind a picture. Magazines and newspapers all over the country will be used to arouse interest in this super-production. The opening gun in the campaign is a full page in the Saturday Evening Post (circulation 2,250,000), on March 10th. This will be followed by intensive advertising designed to reach every community of any size in the United States.

“One of the real surprises of the screen season. . . one worthy of a place among the finest of the year. . . . there have been no more thrilling escapades ever caught by the camera . . . a film that will blaze the trail for the new type of pictures that are bound to come.”—Detroit News.

The exploitation possibilities of “Down to the Sea in Ships” are endless in their variety and effect. It is so utterly out of the beaten path, so daring in its conception, so masterly in its handling, that the exhibitor is confronted not with the problem of filling his theatre, but with the immediate necessity of securing “Down to the Sea in Ships” early enough and for a long enough run to satisfy the enormous public demand, that is already aroused for “the master-production of the new year.”

“Probably one of the most beautiful photoplays ever made . . . The enthusiasm grew by leaps and bounds.”—Boston Globe.
The Supreme Thrill of Motion Picture History!

A frail boat and its six occupants towed at express train speed toward three thousand miles of open water, through a sea lashed into foam by a maddened whale.

A sudden turn, a shout, "Look out, he's heading for us!" The oars are splintered along one side of the whaleboat, before the startled crew can backwater, the monster of the deep is upon them!

A flip of its death-dealing "flukes," and both craft and its occupants are tossed high in the air. The boat falls back into the sea, a battered wreck, its crew floundering about in shark infested waters.

Such is the climax of the most astounding piece of realism ever photographed—a motion picture made in the broad reaches of mid-Atlantic, with a 90-ton sperm whale as the principle actor, and the hand of chance directing as fierce a battle between man and mammal as the long history of whaling has ever known.

It required eighteen months to make "Down to the Sea in Ships." It is utterly unlike any production ever filmed, because, it is nature at her most thrilling moments, with intrepid whalers in mad pursuit of the biggest game on land or sea. Incidents of unparalleled daring, enacted apparently within a few feet of the eyes of the astonished audience, seem to challenge belief that the scenes were actually aken by a camera— and at breathlessly close quarters.

Every phase of whaling is shown with startling fidelity—the first view of the big "school," following the word "cry from mast-head, "Blow, blow," the lightning-like lowering of the boats, the dash for the prize, the instant of suspense as the boat-steerer sinks his harpoon to the shank. Then the frantic effort to escape, with a thin curl of smoke arising from the harpoon line as it wraps over the bow, until the whale's dash for the open water and freedom.

For hours the battle is waged in a dull-red sea, before the cry of "Fins out!" tells us that the monster has fought his last fight. Then follows the "cutting-in," and the thousand-and-one processes that for two hundred years have made the New England whaling industry a tradition tenderly fostered from generation to generation.

Yet back of this vivid picturization of daring runs one of the sweetest love-stories ever unfolded on the screen, a romance breathing all of the quaint customs of the most famous whaling city in the world. A sinister conspiracy, its aim the control of as fine a fleet of whalers as ever sailed the seven seas, a hair-raising mutiny and its overthrow of as brutal a master as ever tried a sailor in the rigging, a storm off-shore, the like of which no trick of photography could ever hope to equal, are touches of realism that lift "Down to the Sea in Ships" far out of the category of what we have come to accept as the usual motion picture thrill.

"Down to the Sea in Ships"
Elmer Clifton—Twelve Reels
Reviewed by Lawrence Reid

WHAT will be written in screen history as a masterpiece of its kind is offered in Elmer Clifton’s "Down to the Sea in Ships"—a romance of the golden days of whaling. Taking more than a year to produce, it presents mute testimony that anything extraordinary in production cannot be achieved by working per schedule. Here is a picture which conveys the richest kind of atmosphere, locale color, detail and romance. It is authentic because Clifton went up to the whaling city, New Bedford, and gained the cooperation of its people. The director has gotten away from the beaten path.

This romance of 1850, when the whaling industry was at its peak, is unusual in its departure from the conventions. You might say that it is heroic life as it differs in an accurate manner. Yet Clifton has done it. He has not only brought forth a series of truly sensational scenes such as the sighting of the whales and the pursuit of them, with the subterfuge which covers the Quakers and their faith. The characters, with the exception of the protagonist, are members of the Society of Friends. We are taken into the meeting house and shown the Quakers carrying on their quaint custom. The marriage ceremony is one highly appealing episode.

While the picture brings forth the thrilling incidents of the fifty years with its dramatic moments, it is also interwoven with a romance, the background of which is colored with a rich, warm color and the reminiscences of the dead past. It seems as if it were an education as well as an entertainment. Everything, seemingly, has been done to the period in which it is set. Painted with care is every scene—every incident. It’s a better story as well as a dramatic one. And because it is so unusual in theme, characterization and production, it will be talked about as one of the sensations of the year. The photography is exceptional, and the acting is genuine.

Down to the Sea in Ships

(HODKINSON)

THIS picture of whaling days in New England is one of the most remarkable productions of the season and will undoubtedly prove a box office sensation. Based on an interesting love story, it has some of the most exciting and spectacular scenes yet given to a film entertainment.

DIRECTOR Elmer Clifton set out to make for the Whaling Film Corporation, of New Bedford, Mass., a film production different from anything before attempted. That he has succeeded in a manner more than satisfactory, there can be no question. "Down to the Sea In Ships" is a production that stands in a class by itself and one that, with proper exploitation, should set many a new box office record.

Taking as his theme a delightful love story of Quaker life in the whaling city, when New Bedford was the headquarters of that industry, Director Clifton has cleverly transformed it into a film epic. The photography is nothing short of remarkable and gives rise to wonder as to how much of it could be accomplished.

Worth Millions—and stranded on a park bench. Unlimited resources behind him, and not a penny in his pocket. His credit worthless, his identity lost, his explanation a joke.

Such is the amazing adventure of pompous John Pye Smith, millionaire. Serious to him, but uproariously amusing to every audience. By a perfectly reasonable series of mishaps, this man of millions loses his valet, his baggage, his beard, his pocket money—even his clothes.

Audiences are plunged deeper and deeper into sympathy for the luckless rich man, yet hilariously amused at the experience of a millionaire mingling with down-and-outers as he waits his turn for a hand-out at a charity bread line.

A hand-picked cast and directed with adroit skill to get all the laughs and sighs.

Affording all kinds of exploitation stunts and guaranteed to please them after you get them in.

LINK UP YOUR PICTURE PUBLICITY WITH YOUR LOCAL BOOKSELLER.

Perhaps you have tried it before with indifferent success. However, don't be discouraged by that. Booksellers are now strong for the scheme.

Go to see your local bookseller today. He has just received a broadside from us calling his attention again to this big idea. There are many things you can talk over together and put into effect that will be of mutual interest and profit.

Perhaps you won't get all the booksellers in the town to co-operate with you all the time, but you will get some of them to co-operate most of the time, and, on the whole, it will be worth your while.

As a matter of good business, the bookseller will want to feature your "showing" with his books, as some of the biggest stores in the country are doing every day.

LONA DOONE BOOK
A special edition of the famous classic issued by Aiton Bradley company of Springfield, Mass. This carries a picture of Madge Bellamy on the cover and stills from the play to illustrate the story. It gives full credit to the story. They are working in conjunction with rail and book stores.

LONA DOONE BALLAD
A ballad is published by M. Witmark & Sons and being marketed to every music store and department store in the world. Everybody singing it.

LONA DOONE RECORD
The Victor Company has recorded the ballad and are marketing it everywhere that Victor records are sold. A suggestive window display can be arranged.

LONA DOONE PEARLS
A and Company has adopted the name Lorna Doone to a special type of pearls which are sold in two sizes. Being exploited in jewelry and department stores.

LONA DOONE HAT
The New York Manufacturing Company has introduced a special type of hat in several different colors and is now being marketed throughout the United States as the Lorna Doone hat.

LONA DOONE UMBRELLA
Bier Clogg Company, represented in every city of the country, are exploiting a beautiful umbrella of the latest design and style. They are pushing it in the small towns.

LONA DOONE SHOES
A special model of Oxford has been designed by Miller & Sons, New York. Dealers in every city and town handle this last.

LONA DOONE SHORTBREAD
This is put out by The National Biscuit Company. This brand is already known in coast-to-coast. This company is putting out the most extensive campaign ever attempted. See page for details.

The Odeon theatre, Bartlesville, Oklahoma, hooked up a merchant with the Lorna Doone hats and gave him tickets to present each purchaser. The hats only cost $1.58.

Here's a corking lobby display, tying up with a music store in Los Angeles, displaying the Lorna Doone ballad. It was put up by the Kinema theatre.

Here's another dandy lobby display, tying up with a book store to show the Lorna Doone book, the Madge Bellamy edition. This same tie-up can be made in any small or big town. It is most effective and will draw the crowds. Score another for the Kinema theatre.
The National Biscuit company has inaugurated a gigantic national sales campaign for 1923 to put over the Lorna Doone shortbread—and they are tying up this campaign with the picture.

Every subway and elevated platform in New York carries a three-sheet with a picture of Madge Bellamy advertising the picture in connection with the biscuit.

Every sixth street car, elevated and subway car in the United States, carries a display card to the same effect. Every one of the thousands of trucks and wagons of the company carries a one-sheet poster of Madge Bellamy.

Twenty-five thousand salesmen are working from the main office and branch offices throughout the country to co-operate with retail stores and local theatres to put this over.

The minute you send your name in, giving the date you are playing the picture, they will get in touch with your local merchant and put this over for you. This campaign costs you not a penny. So get busy and grab this chance in a life time QUICK!

Lorna Doone

Here’s a gorgeous window display that will attract every one. This food-stuffs tie-up was obtained by Julius K. Johnston, manager of the Rialto theatre, Omaha, Neb.

This is the way the National Biscuit company is advertising the picture for you. Every one of the thousands and thousands of wagons owned by the company carries a one-sheet of Lorna Doone. These wagons are seen everywhere by millions of people. This exploitation means dollars to YOU.

The Great Solution

The greatest hope for the substantial economic advancement of this business lies in devising some means of obtaining longer exhibition for meritorious pictures.

This is in no way a new proposition; it is, on the contrary, a situation that has been with us a long time, but despite its long existence as a problem of the industry, there has been very little advancement toward a solution of it.

Production, in practically every phase, is vastly more costly now than ever before. Various economies in methods have been effected and others will come, but for every dollar saved there are at least two dollars demanded in its place to keep pace with what the public wants in motion pictures.

The fundamentals of the process of motion picture production are extremely costly, except in very rare instances. Extensive mechanical equipment, buildings and other expensive material facilities are required. A great number of people of unusually high earning power must be drafted to the work. The competition for the limited number of specialists in the various lines necessarily creates an extraordinarily high salary standard.

In addition to all of this there is the increasingly strong demand for the greatest in the literature of the world that is adaptable for screen purposes. The increasing cost of this factor also is inescapable.

Hence, with respect to the really worth-while attractions of the screen, on the average, the future offers hope of nothing in the way of lower film costs. Cheaper pictures could be made—but not without doing violence to the public's good will toward pictures.

Set against this situation we have the fact that thousands of theatres cannot meet higher film costs and, in fact, cannot even continue under the price schedules that have been in effect for some time, unless some unexpected relief occurs.

The situation on the face of it would be an impossible one were it not for the known fact of the limited distribution obtained by the vast majority of pictures. When it is considered that practically without exception every good picture is a possible attraction for every theatre in America, it is shocking to note the comparatively few theatres played by the average good picture.

Generally speaking, the age of a picture has nothing whatsoever to do with its entertainment value, despite the fact that pictures came to be considered as worthless simply because they are old.

A good picture should be considered as new until it has played the particular theatre and community under consideration.

If this could be realized it would have a vast influence upon the future of the business.

As there is no good reason against it and as it represents a tremendous advantage for every branch of the business, it would seem that someone is responsible for allowing this wasteful condition to exist. In looking about to fix responsibility for the situation it becomes apparent that the distributor is chiefly to blame. It can hardly be expected that the consumer—the exhibitor—would make it his business to remember and keep alive good pictures that have been issued some time past when the distributor of these pictures has ceased to exploit, advertise and urge the sale of such pictures.

Materially lower rental costs can be effected for theatres that must have lower costs to survive provided that a greater number of theatres play each individual good attraction. This is a very simple means—and the one practical means of accomplishing the highly desirable end of lower film costs for the exhibitor and greater revenues for the producer.

This Railroad Has Own Film Theatre

The first moving picture theatre in the world is now making daily trips between Chicago and St. Louis, Mo.

A special car fully equipped with screen and projection machines and known as the Theatre Car, is a part of the Chicago & Alton Railroad's crack train "St. Louis Limited," now, and has a regular program the same as any other picture house.

The initial trip of the Theatre Car was made on Monday, February 12, and besides the officials of the road, newspaper representatives from St. Louis and Chicago and a reporter from Exhibitors Herald made the trip. A full report of the success of the innovation will appear in the next issue of the Herald.

Paramount Sells
9 Playhouses in East and South
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is gradually disposing of its theatre interests in the New England and Southern states to exhibitors.

Announcement is just made that Southern Enterprises has sold to E. J. Sparks, Jacksonville, Fla., the following houses: Jefferson and Orpheum at St. Augustine; Beacham, Grand and Phillips at Orlando and Auditorium and Casino at Lakeland.

It also has sold the Majestic at Asheville to C. R. Bamford, New England Theatres, according to the announcement, has sold the Bijou at Barre, Vt., to Margaret McKenna.

This brings the total to between twelve and fifteen theatres which Paramount has disposed of in the past few weeks.

Those Opposing Cohen Plan Hold Slight Lead

Opinions of Theatre Owners of Country Are Published in Full in This Issue

By JAY M. SHRECK
(News Editor of Exhibitors Herald)

Do exhibitors of the country want their own distributing organization? A national survey, conducted by the HERALD to ascertain exhibitor opinion on that question, discloses this division of sentiment among those returning their questionnaires:

42 per cent answered "No."
32 per cent replied in the affirmative.
24 per cent qualified their answers.

Speculation by the entire industry, skepticism on the part of many and favorable reception by others greeted the initial announcement some weeks ago that an exhibitor-owned distributing organization had been launched by Sydney S. Cohen, William A. True and their associates active in the leadership of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

Majority Exhibitor Sentiment Sought in Inquiry

The proposition had received little attention by the bulk of exhibitors since the Minneapolis convention two years ago, when Cohen and his leaders fought stubbornly for endorsement. There was at that time a well defined division in sentiment. In fact, so strong was the opposition that the matter apparently was shelved until a few months ago when Cohen and True toured parts of the country for the purpose of "feeling out" the theatre owners.

Organization of the Theatre Owners Distributing Corporation was accomplished by a comparatively few exhibitors meeting in Chicago. That the industry might know whether or not majority exhibitor sentiment favored this movement, the HERALD sought the views of theatre owners throughout the country.

At this writing questionnaires have been returned by exhibitors operating in twenty-eight states. These returns may be considered representative for they are the views of exhibitors in every territory, and therefore are based upon the diversity of conditions confronting theatre men in different sections of the country.

Rental Issue Assigned As Basis of Need

Those exhibitors answering in the affirmative assign a number of reasons for their endorsement of an exhibitor-owned distributing system, although the rental issue stands out most prominently in the answers. They believe that under the present order of things, production costs are too high, rentals are too high and films contain too much footage. They hold the opinion that with the exhibitors controlling distribution admissions could be lowered. That rentals could be trimmed 75 per cent, and the individual theatre owner would be in a position to compete with the circuit operator and producer-exhibitor.

On the other hand, those who look with disfavor upon the plan contend that cooperative propositions are a failure, that a stronger national organization would accomplish the same results, that Sydney S. Cohen has done nothing as president of the M. P. T. O. A., and therefore is not the man to guide the destinies of a distributing organization. That there are too many distributing companies now, that amalgamation of these systems or organization of a neutral agency would be more beneficial, and that such an organization would not benefit the smaller exhibitors.

Exhibitors Opinions Are Published on the Following Pages
Do Theatre Owners of Country Want Their Own Distributing System?

IN MAKING ITS NATIONAL SURVEY to ascertain the consensus of exhibitor opinion on the Cohen plan to organize an exhibitor-owned distribution system, the Herald presented to theatre owners the following questionnaire:

1. DO YOU BELIEVE there is a place in the industry for an exhibitor-owned distributing system?

2. DO YOU BELIEVE the time opportune for organization of an exhibitor distributing system?

3. OTHER COMMENT on question.

In cases where exhibitors made definite answers to the foregoing, they are so indicated by the numerals, 1, 2 and 3.

B. J. PACIUS, Princess theatre, Proser, Wash., says: Your inquiry in regard to the exhibitors going into the distributing business, the writer has given this matter a good deal of study in the past ten years.

Our conclusion is: It can't be done. Have you ever noticed in the small towns when the farmers have become dissatisfied with the local merchants and operated their own stores? Were they successful? This applies to the exhibitor. Show me the diamonds the small town exhibitors are receiving; the dividends received from United Theatres stock, from the various exhibitors' circuits, or being a blooming subfranchise holder where the big guns in the game are associated with him in buying and distributing. Doesn't the small town exhibitor know that the pulse of the industry is in the small town business the exchanges get today? Where are you, brother exhibitor, if this distributing proposition is to go through? Won't it be controlled by the exhibitors of the large cities and won't they buy pictures that suit their purchase purposes and not the small town pictures? Haven't you found it true that many stars that go to the big cities have played your house at a loss?

You know that it is more difficult to buy for a theatre in a small town than it is for the large houses in the cities. In the city the theatres are classified and buy for their respective patronage. In the small town you have to buy for all classes and the open market of today gives you that privilege.

Several years ago an exhibitors' circuit was started in this Western territory and the writer was the only one who had nerve enough to tell the exhibitors at their convention that the proposition was the "bluff" and I was hailed as a pessimist but three months afterward the circuit blew up like a soap bubble.

In all my experience as an exhibitor I never invested a dollar in any other business than the show business with the exception of one purchase in an exhibitors circuit and this stock certificate isn't worth the paper it is printed on.

When I was a boy an old head told me one day, "Never invest in any proposition unless you can get up in the morning and see where your money is invested and can get home the same day."

I have followed this advice and it has brought success.

STEVE FARRAR, Orpheum theatre, Harrisburg, Ill., says: (1) Yes, if it is properly organized and conducted, it will be a big success, but there is no place for one put forth for personal ends, or for a political advantage. Exhibitors will put their money into a company if they know it will be properly managed and a fair deal given to all, but the question arises, who is going to be the head of this new company. It will take a big man. Adolph Zukor would be okay. A man who can take a company and fight opposition and come to what Famous Players-Lasky is today, could make a wonderful showing with the backing of all exhibitors. I'll put my money in with him.

(2) Yes, we must do something to lower rentals. If the producers cannot do it we must for it cannot go on like this. The public or the exhibitors do not want million dollar productions. The public cannot pay the admission or the exhibitors the rental for these. We cannot pay salaries of $200,000 or $500,000 to stars, the box office won't stand it forever. The public or producers do not want nine and ten reel productions. They want good five and six reel pictures made at a cost of $75,000 to $100,000 and some of the best were made for that. If exhibitor distributing can give us that—it's time to start now.

(3) Who is going to pay the tariff on Jackie Coogan's new contract? The public is expected to, but speaking for mine, they cannot do it and I won't ask them to. I just finished reading an article by Pearl White, giving her reasons for quitting the film. She stated that her contract for last year was $250,000. What a crime to pay a girl like that for a star for pictures such as 'Virgin Paradise' and others she made last year. I think that answers the question. "What's Wrong with the Yeses?"

CLYDE ALLEN, Casino theatre, Antwerp, N. Y., says: (1) Yes, if properly conducted but not the so-called First National Exhibitors' Circuit. (2) Yes. Now or never. (3) Inasmuch as some of the large producers desire to go into the exhibiting end of the game, it's time the exhibitors went into the exchange or distributing end, and go even further in selling, go into producing as well.

ELMER E. GAILEY, Crystal theatre, Wayne, Neb., says: (1) There is no doubt in my mind that a distributing corporation owned by exhibitors would be a great success. If they could get an honest man as president. I speak from experience as I once bought a SHARE of the United States Theatres Owners' Corporation, and ran several of their pictures. I paid $250 for one and I watched the progress at all times. I well know that they had the world by the tail and down hill pull but did not take long for other corporations to sidetrack our president, who took too big a step and landed our exchange in hades. Consequently our organization went into the hands of a receiver, and hence my SHARE evaporated, but the system was right, only the officers in my estimation reaped some rewards. Furthermore, I would never invest a dime in any concern incorporated under the laws of Delaware as there are too many LOOT HOLEs.

(2) Sure the time is always right, if as I said before you could get an honest man at the head of a thing like this, but believe me when you go up against all the other large exchanges you go up against POwers, and by some hook or crook they would cut in. The main question is, When Will We Find the Right Man?

H. G. STETTMUND, Jr., Odeon theatre, Chandler, Okla., says: "Yes, I think there is a ready made place for such a distributing system. We can all

Thanks!

The HERALD wishes to thank those theatre owners who have made possible this comprehensive report on the important question of an exhibitor-owned distribution organization. Questionnaires received too late for publication in this issue of the HERALD will be used at a later date.

— THE HERALD
EXHIBITORS

P. D. RUSSELL, Russell theatre, Somerset, O., says: (1) I think not.
(2) No. (3) The experience with these companies does not seem to be worth while from the standpoint of the exhibitor.

W. E. ELKINS, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss., says: (1) Yes, it is true that this system will mean saving to the exhibitor in film rental. Let this system be strictly cooperative. Don't require an exhibitor to ever buy another film or pay just what you think it is worth at the box office. Let the contract carry a four-weeks' cancellation clause.

BEN L. MORRIS, Temple theatre, Bexaire, Ohio, says: (1) Yes, providing it can be carried out as a strictly exhibitor controlled scheme and not just laid down by the M. P. T. O. A., and as laid out by Mr. True at the Columbus, Ohio, convention.

(2) The sooner the better. There is a tendency on the part of every big distributor to boost prices to the theatre salesman, big or little, with the instruction that they must get "just a little more" for their stuff this year. This in the face of a tendency on the part of every commodity to be cheaper. There is a growing and insist-ent demand on the part of the general public for better pictures which will have to be met in the not distant future.

(3) It has been conclusively shown that the bare necessities are made for $800,000 and with another extreme $100,- 000 added for distribution, would make the biggest kind of a picture, which with an assured showing of every picture showing city, could be sold to exhibitors at about one-fourth the cost now being paid for the same class of production.

In such a competition directors could make the kind of pictures they want to, and give the public what it wants. Only the pictures the exhibitors' organization believes would get money would be pur-purchased, and the rest of the stuff that is forced on us would be put.

J. T. HULSBY, Unique theatre, Pescok, Tex., says: I see no good reason why the exhibitors could not successfully launch and maintain a distributing system with a great saving in the overhead expense that is now inevitable with the present distributing system. Owing to the precarious conditions obtaining in small town theatres I think that an exhibitors' distributing system would be able to furnish such theatres at a more reasonable rental than now obtains with most distributing systems. As all the different systems now maintain numerous exchanges with its high overhead expense it seems to us that something along this line would operate to a distinct advantage to all exhibitors.

BERT SILVER, Silver Family theatre,
Greenville, Mich., says: No. We small town managers have had our experience with First National. I am speaking from experience of fifty years in the theatre business. Managers of such companies are picked from the cities and not one out of a thousand knows a thing about the small town showman. Managers of such companies are picked from the cities and not one out of a thousand knows a thing about the small town show business. I do not believe in exhibitors selling films or producers running theatres, and as long as they do this the small town showman will suffer. Not one out of fifty is now making a dollar. Some of them kid themselves into thinking that they are doing well, but if at the end of twelve months they have made any money, it will be the result of the continuous pressure of the box office. I am not a wise guy. I have been in the business too long. Only the new comers are the wise ones. They can get away with this kind of thing. I have run my show and, of course, I listen and do just as they say. City theatres I can't comment on, but small towns I am sure of. As you well know, organizations of such a proposition is slow—at its best.
E. D. LUNA, Cozy theatre, Lincoln, Ark., says: (1) I have been thinking for some time that the exhibitors are going to have to establish some way to protect themselves as so many producers outside of our territory should we have an exchange of our own. (2) I think now is the time to get busy on such an arrangement. We all should be glad to help in any way I can.

ARTHUR E. HANCOCK, Columbia theatre, Columbia City, Ind., says: (1) Gentlemen: I am not familiar enough with conditions to vouch an opinion. I know that the trouble of co-operation is being put forward to the efforts of Sidney Cohen and those in control of the M. P. T. O. A. While not a member of that organization, I am interested, and think they are doing an excellent job. I, personally, am interested in anything that can be done to stabilize the exchange.
right but I don’t want any stock. (2) Think not yet.

C. E. HOPKINS, Hopkins theatre, Cot- tter, Ark., says: We do not feel that our judgment on this question would be worth your while. We do want to say, however, that since we have been in business, we have found it almost im- possible to get a purchase or sale outright out of the exchanges with which we have had dealings. We do not see any reason why the distribution of films could not be conducted along fair and honest lines as well as any other business, and if an exhibitor owned distributing system is established on this basis, we are strong for it.

W. F. MAILAND, Mascot theatre, Mo- bridge, S. D., says: (1) Yes. (2) Yes.

HOWARD VARIO, Royal theatre, Spirit Lake, Ia., says: (1) Yes, if proper- ly managed and kept free of grifters and profiteers. (2) The exhibitors need assistance now, if they ever did.

CHAS. LEE HYDE, Grand theatre, Bremerton, Wash., says: (1) Yes. (2) The sooner the better. (3) The profit of “middle-men” is seldom actually earned and when morons, or other than the route from actor to public the more profitable our business will be. Anything exhibi- tion can do to get together and cooperate will be a saving to each and the entire industry. Sell each picture separately to each member and then use rental paid as a settling exhibition share in the profit of that particular picture after cer- tain amount has been taken out for overhead and working expenses.

O. W. McCLELLAN, Dreamland the- atre, Pella, Ill., says: (1) Not unless the exhibitors can own the pictures. (2) Yes! Providing they produce them and do not profiteer on the rentals. (3) All exhibitors will not be able finan- cially to take stock in the concern, and to those this corporation must sell the pictures at the right price in order that they who are not stockholders can be able eventually to become a stockholder.

RUSSELL ARMENTROUT, K. P. the- atre, Pittsfield, Ill., says: (1) Yes, if it is carried on in the right way and gives the little fellow a chance. Too many exhibitors have gone broke this winter and a lot more are going broke this sum- mer. Some are doing a great wrong at the exchanges if they continue to kill the little fellows who are the backbone of the picture business. Before the summer is over you will read where more than two firms have consolidated to keep from going to the wall. (2) There is no time like the present and a better time could not be found for the exhibitors to orga- nize their own distributing system.

K. A. BECHTOLD, Opera House, Mar- tinsville, Ill., says: (1) Yes. (2) I would hardly be in a position to say. If his local market is free now could not make a decent living. I have been hoping business would pick up, but it hasn’t. (3) There should be a distributing system which would be something for the big exhibitors as the small town theatre man such as I cannot keep his head above the water. With the high school entertainments and bas- ket ball games two or three nights a week, there is no money left for the ex- hibitors. With steals on the ground the high school took in $84 on a basketball game and the next night, a nice one, I took in $8.48 with a Norman Talmadge picture.

E. D. KEIL, Grand theatre, Topeka, Kan., says: (1) Such a sys- tem is the only suggested remedy for some of the troubles that exist today. Maybe there are better ways out of the difficulty but none have been suggested that I know of. (2) If such a system is to be inaugurated it might as well be new as any other time. (3) The chief difficulty with present methods lies in the waste of overhead in separate distribut- ing systems and the quota fixing by some man in New York who has no concep- tion of what conditions are in the towns where the pictures are to be exhibited.

REX THEATRE, Virden, Ill., says: A number of exhibitors might organize a company and succeed, but a cooperative affair will not succeed. It is socialism, beautiful in theory, but no good in prac- tice.

H. C. HOUSTON, Gem theatre, Sher- iff, Ill., says: The distributing end is ripe. The distributing end is very cor- rupt and the independent exhibitor has not chance to succeed. We need an organ- ization to present these exhibitors that would have a chain of theatres from freezing the little exhibitor out of business. It is unfair competition.

FRED PAULICK, Paulick theatre, Muscoda, Wis., says: (1) I believe there is good opportunity for a good ex- change in behalf of the exhibitor. But will make a statement that a gentle be put to the head. (2) I believe the time is ripe. (3) I am of the opinion that if exhibitors distributing system was run in the proper way it would prove a suc- cess, and especially for a small town. The small town exhibitor has hard time to make both ends meet.

R. V. ERK, Temple theatre, Illion, N. Y., says: Personally I con- sider an exhibitor-owned distribut- ing system is needed. (1) I believe an exhibitor-owned distribut- ing system to a large extent and apparently neither the exhibitors nor producers are going to take the results obtained by this system of distribution. I consider that a stronger exhibitors organization could do much more in bringing about much needed reforms regard- ing uniform contracts, equitable prices, freedom from being forced to take mediocre product to get a few good pictures, etc., than any distributing system controlled by ex- hibitors could ever accomplish. Play dates are as necessary to dis- tributors as product to exhibitors.

Advertising Is '90 Per Cent of Picture Business Says J. D. WILLIAMS

Tells AMPAS That They Should Be Firm in Refusing to Over-Publicize Mediocre Films
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, February 13.—J. D. Williams talked to the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at their last week's luncheon and gave what was voted by the members of the organization to be the most engaging and all-together frank address that they had ever been privileged to hear from any of the important executives in the film industry.

Among the things that Mr. Williams said, these stood out as high-light:-

That advertising is 90 per cent of the motion picture business.

That next to the creator of a production, meaning the director or whoever was most concerned in the production, the publicity and advertising man is the most important in making a commercial success for the picture.

That the best functioning advertising public utility department in any organization is that which is left free to originate and carry out ideas, unhindered by instructions from the department. Mr. Williams said, his practice always had been to leave his publicity man free to do this. By this method the good publicity man secures the best results. A bad one should be fired.

That the most successful film companies, in the large are those who have utilized the best means of publicity.

That the wise executive seeks counsel of his publicity advertiser from the beginning, i.e., even before the play or scenario is selected for production.

That the advertising man should have a voice in the quota of rentals which the sales department places on a picture.

That the advertising man should be free in referring to over-advertise a poor or mediocre picture, even if it has cost an awful lot of money.

Mr. Williams' talk was highly engaging in all its ramifications, which touched on a considerable number of phases of the industry. He made one very definite prediction about distribution costs which, when remembered in light of his success of organizing a nation-wide body of exhibitors, when everybody said it could not be done, is unusually significant.

He said that because distribution costs of today were so high, altogether out of proportion to what they ought to be, that it was certain that within a comparatively brief while, there would be a change, whereby distribution costs would be greatly lowered. The solution, faintly sketched by him, lies in centralized distribution.

Mr. Williams granted upon questioning, that there was nothing new or novel about the idea; that it had been discussed many times in many places, but that it was only waiting upon someone to go ahead and accomplish it. This was the general feeling among his auditors that J. D. Williams would be the man who would do it.

Denig Leaves Goldwyn
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Lynde Denig, who has been with Goldwyn four years, the last two as assistant to Howard Dietz, director of advertising and publicity, has resigned. It is understood that he has been commissioned to write a series of articles for a new national publication.

Sees Mileage Books as Saver of Millions and Big Business Stimulant
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Interchangeable mileage books for first class carriers which will be issued March 15 on order of the Interstate Commerce Commission will save $60,000,000 annually in railroad fares and prove a decided stimulus to industry according to a statement issued by A. M. Loeb, president of the National Council of Traveling Salesmen's Association in an address here.

"Firms will invest the saving in more intensive sales development; they will put on more men, cover smaller towns more often and keep men on the road longer," he declared.

The saving will be accomplished through the issuance of interchangeable scrip-coupon books for the equivalent of 2,500 miles of travel, containing $90 worth of coupons for only $72. These books can be used on about 250 lines. This is said to be the first time that a mileage book of such scope, good on all railroads has ever been put into operation in America.

Michigan Exhibitors to Celebrate Feb. 27
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 13.—Invitations have been issued for the second annual motion picture day celebration to be observed by motion picture theatre owners of Michigan and the F. L. L. M. Club of Detroit Tuesday evening, Feb. 27.

The affair will be held in the ball room of the Hotel Statler. A big representation is anticipated.

To Screen "Backbone"
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—The Distinctive Pictures production corporation "Backbone," at the Strand theatre here Tuesday, February 20, Alfred Lunt, stage star, and Edith Roberts, are the featured players. Many invitations have been issued by President Arthur S. Friend.

When F. C. Hinds, owner of the Cresco Theatre at Cresco, Iowa, wrote a letter to the HERALD two weeks ago charging that the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America is negligent of its duties to the exhibitors, he loosed a warm discussion with himself as the stormy petrel.

Hinds, himself, has received a number of letters. Several have been received by the HERALD. One criticizes Hinds for expecting too much for $52 a year. It explains that, although Mr. Hinds was not informed action would be taken, steps are already underway to fight the threatened adverse legislation.

Independence Has Won Tremendous Popularity

In a letter to the HERALD discussing the situation, Mr. Hinds states that the business representation of one state organization of the M. P. T. O. A. said he was "sorry that I had played into the hands of the association's 'worst enemy,' referring to your publication."

"I replied that the association needed, in my opinion, several fearful bumps; and that the HERALD is not anybody's enemy—just independent," Hinds continues.

Steps Taken to Improve Screen Art

Zukor Will Invite World Leaders to Conferences To Be Held in New York

Laemmle Plans College Endowment to Advance Motion Picture Science

NEW YORK, February 13.—A movement of international scope has been announced by Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, who plans a conference in the near future in New York City of leading novelists, artists, dramatists, editors, educators and people prominent in public life for the purpose of formulating a set of principles to guide the artistic development of motion pictures.

The producer made known his plans just prior to his departure last Saturday for Europe where he hopes to interest European writers and artists in the project.

These artistic standards, said Mr. Zukor, will guide picture producers in discharging their obligation toward the cultural development of the millions of people all over the world who frequent the screen for their principal recreation. A supervisory board of well-known men and women will be appointed by the conference, and its decisions will have the force of a series of decrees amounting to several thousand dollars, which Mr. Zukor will offer at the confer- ence, and will be set in the motion picture's development during the year.

Past Development Technical

"While the artistic progress of the motion picture has been great," said Mr. Zukor, "the greatest development so far in the picture's short career has necessarily been in the technical side of picture craftsmanship and in the stabilization of the industry.

"Today we have pretty nearly attained perfection in photography, lighting, scenery and in the phases of picture production which go into the making of truly beautiful and effective photography. The last two years also has seen the business put on a firm and stable financial basis.

"The big field of picture progress, therefore, lies in developing the screen along the sound artistic lines. Millions of people all over the world not only get all of their amusement from motion pictures, but they also depend largely on pictures for their cultural development.

"The responsibility of picture producers toward the fostering of the sound technical and artistic standards in these people is an immense one. I know producers have tried to meet this responsibility, but the growth of the industry has been so swift that attention has had to be concentrated on the physical development of the picture business.

Hopes for Beneficial Results

"So that in discharging this responsibility, we may have the best advice and guidance available, I am going to invite the leading novelists, dramatists, artists, sculptors, critics, writers and educators to explore the artistic and cultural possibilities of the motion picture in a conference to be held in New York in the near future. It is my hope that these men and women, representing the best in American thought and American taste, will evolve some principles which can be accepted by the motion picture industry as its artistic guide. Our aim is to have a conference to the mutual benefit of the picture what the French Academy is to French letters, what the Royal Academy is to British art and what the Pulitzer Foundation is to American Journalism."

Find Demand for Big Productions

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—That fewer and bigger pictures are demanded by the independent market, which is now on a more stable basis than ever before, is the opinion of the special representatives of Equity Pictures Corporation who met at the home office for the first time to study conditions in various parts of the country.

As a result of this finding Equity's policy is to be governed by the following considerations:

1. Exhibitors in every part of the country are only too glad to sign for independent product, if it is good product.

2. The independent market is on a more stable basis than ever before.

3. The absolute uselessness of factory-made product in the independent market and the absolute necessity of big pictures with strong box-office titles.

4. The advisability of making a few pictures that are worthwhile and the concentration on these few productions for maximum results.

5. The great popularity of productions with all-star casts that really are all-star casts.

Only six pictures for year are to be made and these six pictures to be guaranteed successes for distributors and exhibitors. Equity's latest production is Daniel Carson Goodman's "Has the World Gone Mad?"

William Fait Named Manager of Eastman

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Feb. 13.—William Fait, Jr., who returned a few months ago from Mexico, where he was managing director of the Olympia theatre, has been appointed managing director of the Eastman theatre.

Mr. Fait has been in the motion picture business since the early days of the industry. He started his career in Baltimore, where he was engaged with his father in the operation of the circuit of theatres. Later he went to Utica, N. Y., where he was managing director of one of the largest theatres.

Whitman Bennett to Make Bushman-Bayne Starring Photoplays (Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Productions in which Whitman Bennett and Dean J. Bushman-Bayne are to be featured will be presented by Whitman Bennett, it has been learned. They will be known as F. X. B. Pictures. Mr. Bennett is vice-president and general manager of the organization, which will produce, exploit and publish the series.

While the name of the first picture has not been revealed, it has already been started at the Bennett plant in Yonkers. It is planned to complete it by the middle of March, when it will be presented at first run houses in connection with the sketch involving the personal appearance of the players, which substitutes for one of the roles in this film.

In connection with the sketch, in which the cast enacts one of the reels, it is said that the cost necessary will be simple, so that it can be arranged for any picture house with a fair-sized stage.

Coal Shortage Forces Closing of Theatres (Special to Exhibitors Herald)

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 13.—Lack of coal, and in some cases poor quality, has resulted in some of the motion picture theatres in this section of the state being forced to close. Gas from coal became so obnoxious at the Hudson in Water-vlet, opened December 25 by Elmer Creekam, that, along with other heating troubles, has compelled the house to close.

The Central Park, located in Schenectady, has also closed its doors until such time as coal can be obtained. The Plaza, in Chesterstown, owned by Howard Richard, is also having its troubles along this line.

League Directors House Is Demolished by Fire (Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LIBERTY, MO., Feb. 13.—A fire Wednesday night which threatened the whole city destroyed the Lyric theatre, operated by Mr. Wilson, in one hour. Mr. Wilson, who recently opened M. P. T. O. Western Missouri board of directors who has been acting as business manager. The loss was estimated at $35,000, including an adjoining building.

A high wind made the flames uncontrollable, and a heavy rain an hour. Mr. Wilson, who recently opened M. P. T. O. Western Missouri headquarters in Kansas City, has been confined to home because of illness for the last ten days.

Walter Hagen Featured In Series of Pictures (Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 13.—The first of a series of Walter Hagen productions has been started by Clarence Bricker in which Walter Hagen, golf champion, is a featured player. J. A. Mowat Productions is sponsoring the Bricker's initial appearance on the screen.

"The Man Who Cheated" is the title of the first of these productions, and is said to be an adaptation of a well-known novel by G. B. Manly.

Ban on United Artists Film Lifted by Michigan League

Non-Theatrical Situation Clears Following Number of Conferences in New York Between Officials of Theatre Owners and Distributors (Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, February 13.—The boycott voted two months ago by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan against all United Artists' publications will be lifted on February 15. Word to this effect was received in the office of United Artists, D. W. Griffith, Inc., and Distinctive Pictures Corporation.

Raising of the ban was decided on by the directors of the Michigan state organization, following conferences in New York which were brought about through the initiative of Arthur S. Friend, president of Distinctive.

Review's Incidents Leading Up to Boycott

The Michigan boycott was put into effect as the result of an incident involving the principle of non-theatrical bookings prior to exhibitor bookings. A Masonic order obtained "Robin Hood" prior to any of the Michigan first run houses and immediately the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, Inc., took action.

This action affected the production of Distinctive Pictures Corporation—"Dis- raell," "The Ruling Passion" and "The Man Who Played God"—and the Griffith pictures distributed by United Artists. Mr. Friend sent a special representative, Homer Keen, to Detroit for conferences with W. S. McClaren of Jackson, president, and H. M. Richey of Detroit, vice-president of the Michigan organization. Then Mr. Friend invited the two executives to New York for special conferences and brought about a meeting, resulting in the name of Hiram Abrams, president of United Artists. They also conferred here with Albert L. Grey, vice-president of the Griffith corporation.

Abrams Pledge Support

These New York conferences resulted in the obtaining by the Michigan men of written endorsement of the non-theatrical booking principle for which they were contending. Mr. Abrams wrote to Mr. Richay, under date of February 3, as follows:

"Referring to the Orpheum theatre matter, this is now, and will always be a simple, unfair contest, and will not, so far as we are concerned, have the effect of putting a stop to the theatre owner. To the exhibitors of Michigan you can say this, that acting under full authority, I will not approve of contracts for non-theatrical organizations until such productions have been first offered to the exhibitor, and will not sell to such non-theatrical organization unless the exhibitor refuses to buy such productions."

Friend for Cooperation

For the Distinctive Pictures Corporation Mr. Friend wrote:

"Distinctive Pictures Corporation stands squarely on the principle of cooperation and helpfulness. We are at all times willing to confess the extent to which we need the exhibitors of Michigan and every other state in America, and we hope to make them need us in turn by continuing to produce clean, wholesome, worthwhile entertainment of the highest type. But, we are not able to control the selling of that product you may be sure it will always be sold fairly and honestly, and to those who are permanently engaged in the business of exhibiting motion pictures.

Mr. Grey, for Mr. Griffith, wrote to the association pledging that his organization will not offer a picture for non-theatrical organizations in Michigan until such productions have been offered to the exhibitor. In no event, will a picture be sold for a less price than that quoted to an exhibitor. He concluded:

"I feel that Mr. Griffith should be relieved of any responsibility in this regard, not only because he is an innocent party, but because of the fear that contribu-

Resolution Is Adopted

The meeting of the board of directors of the Michigan league was held on February 6. At this session Mr. McClaren made it clear to the exhibitors that great credit for the negotiations which ended the boycott was due to Mr. Friend, of Distinctive. The board then adopted these resolutions:

WHEREAS, The United Artists Corporation, through its authorized representative, President Hiram Abrams, has con gressed Michigan, has consented to the principle insisted upon by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan in regard to non-theatrical bookings, and has in his letter agreed to follow in principle the same practice in Michigan as in any other state, and

WHEREAS, Distinctive Pictures Corporation, a company affiliated with the United Artists Corporation, has likewise agreed in writing to adhere to the policy of the Michigan exhibitors organization in opposition to non-theatrical bookings.

Now, therefore, be it resolved, that the ban on United Artists pictures be lifted upon February 15, 1923, and that all exhibitors be considered free to book those pictures from and after that date.

Be it further resolved, that suitable notice hereof, and of the written agreements above mentioned be given to all theatre owners.

This victory by the Michigan association of vital interest to exhibitors throughout the country who are finding that non-theatrical competition is making deep inroads into their business.

Nagel Joins Goldwyn Under Long Contract

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 13.—Conrad Nagel, for the past three years a player in Famous Players-Lasky productions, has been placed under a long-term contract by Goldwyn.

It is Goldwyn's plan to cast him in featured roles in a number of its most important pictures. Announcement of his first part under the Goldwyn management will be made soon, it is expected.
Lesser Offers Plan
To Buck "Combines"
Would Erect Many Theatres
in U. S. to Assure Exhibition

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 13.—West Coast Theatres, Inc., has announced the prospects of a movement which, if it materializes, would become national in scope and would result in the acquisition or erection of theatres in many cities and towns throughout the country by the Lesser-Gore-Ramish organization.

The purpose of the movement, according to A. L. Gore, is to assure bookings for producers and stars in territories which are controlled by exhibitors, a condition which he says, forces the producers and stars to sacrifice rental value in order to get play dates. He says:

Oppose Such a "Combine"

"We are naturally against this sort of combine and in view of it we agree to erect in any city or town so controlled by exhibitors, another theatre in which to play the products of the producers and stars not able to enter the territory through the above conditions."

The product especially referred to by the West Coast officials are the pictures of Douglas Fairbanks, Jackie Coogan, Norma and Constance Talmadge, Charlie Chaplin and Harold Lloyd.

Must Guarantee Product

Sol Lesser, in discussing the proposition, said that his company, before entering any certain city or town, would have to be safeguarded the product of "these stars now being held up for low rental value."

The West Coast proposition amounts to a definite application for the motion picture exhibition rights to all the film product of the combination of artists cited in a foregoing paragraph.

Home Headquarters of Warners Enlarged

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Warner Brothers now occupy the entire ninth floor of the Mecca building, 5,000 extra square feet of floor space having been acquired to care for the growth of the company during the past season.

This is the third time the company has been forced to enlarge its space within the past twelve months.

The Question Box
This Week

1. You have read of the plans of Adolph Zukor and Carl Laemmle to improve the artistic and technical standard of motion pictures. Have you an opinion?

2. You have read in this issue of the HERALD the opinions of many exhibitors on the exhibitor-owned distribution plan. Have you sent in your opinion?

3. Carl Laemmle advocates price reduction. Richard Rowland opposes it. What does the exhibitor think?

4. You have had an opportunity during the past week to study the new uniform contract. Does it meet with your approval?

Admission Cut Not Favored by Rowland

Says Lower Prices Would Not Increase Business But Retard Progress

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Richard Rowland, general manager of First National, for one does not agree with Carl Laemmle in the latter's published statements that many theatres would do well to consider a cut in admission price to stimulate business: "The idea of reducing box-office admission prices to increase patronage is a fallacy and in direct opposition to the progress of motion pictures," he declares.

Would Hurt Quality of Films

Explaining his views Mr. Rowland said: "Every day newspapers and theatre patrons are asking for better pictures which in the final analysis means pictures requiring a greater outlay of money, more time for their production and greater artistry. Exhibition standards are constantly being raised to meet the more critical tastes of American and exceptionable pictures are going in for long runs and securing without protest advanced admission prices. In view of these favorable signs our time of any widespread reduction in box-office prices could only result in disaster for the industry by reducing the quality of productions and destroying respect for the screen that has been built up through years of sincere effort on the part of producers, exhibitors and the public.

"The selling price of a theatre's admission ticket is regulated by the cost of production, plus the time and talents put into the same just the same as any other commodity and it is illogical to expect box-office prices to be lowered in the face of continually rising costs of operation of the theatre. In the making of motion pictures it is unlikely that there will ever be a decline in production costs."

Points Out Perils

"It is possible that some theatres might benefit by a reduction in admission prices from causes that are purely local, but it is dangerous to judge an entire industry by such remote examples. One theatre, it has been stated, reduced its admission price one-half and more than doubled its attendance. If such is true, it is a remarkable achievement, but it is possible that other elements entered into the increase in business."
Something tells us that Los Angeles was enthusiastic about the opening of Sid Grauman’s new Metropolitan theatre. To convince those who are skeptical of the press agent’s yarns, the above pictures are published. In the center are Tod Browning, director, and Mrs. Browning, and Wallace Beery at entrance. The Paramount production, “My American Wife,” starring Gloria Swanson, was the initial offering. It is a first run Paramount house.

How’s Business?

Tax reports issued by the treasury department indicate increasing theatre attendance.

Tax collections for December exceeded those of the preceding month and of December, 1922.

The hold-out crowds published on this page illustrate the fact that tax reports do not lie.

These children gave one potato each for admittance to Lyric, Duluth, Minn., during run of Viola Dana’s Metro picture, “Love in the Dark.” The stunt netted 75 bushels of spuds for poor.

Here’s the way they turned out to see First National’s “East Is West” at the Metropolitan theatre, Atlanta, Ga. Enough lanterns to supply a factory were used in advertising feature.
As Others See Them

Two prominent stars pose for paintings by distinguished American and European artists.

W. T. Benda (left), noted artist and illustrator, makes striking portrait of Marion Davies for use on painted signs and 24 sheet stands to advertise the Cosmopolitan picture, "Adam and Eva." When the sign was being painted on Broadway, Benda mounted the scaffold to add the finishing touches. Picture below shows the artist at work.

One of the features of an exhibition of paintings by Tade Styke, French artist now in this country, is one of Pola Negri, star in the Paramount production of "Bella Donna." The picture hangs in the Knoedler Galleries, New York.

Is there any wonder that this photograph extends across two pages? You can't do justice to a big cast in a small photograph. Warner Brothers have chosen a truly special cast for their production of "The Little Church Around the Corner," which is scheduled in this season's product. This illustrates the special value of all star casts to the theatre advertiser. Patrons who go to the theatre because such-and-such a player is on the bill have in this cast a big list from which to choose.
No chance for the film officials to hold executive sessions when Jack Earle's around. Jack is the seven foot four inch giant of Century comedies.

BROADWAY is only Main Street after all, but many things happen on the big street of New York which wouldn't happen at all in Gopher Prairie.

The attention of out-of-town exhibitors was attracted last week to two huge red hearts which had been erected on the marquee in front of Loew's New York theatre. Painted on each huge heart in large letters were the words "Hearts Aflame," and beside each heart was an arrow pointing S. S. W. across the street.

An out-of-town exhibitor stopped, looked the hearts over, and then stepping to the curb, sighted along in the direction pointed by the arrows. Then turning to a New York film man with whom he was headed for lunch, asked: "Has Marcus Loew bought the Rialto theatre?"

"Not that any one has heard of," was the answer.

"Has Famous Players bought Loew's New York?" asked O. O. T. Exhib. "I haven't heard of that either," he was told.

"Then what's the dope? Here's one big broadway theatre boosting business for a competitor almost across the street. We haven't yet got to doing things that way in my village, but we are all willing to get tips from the big town. What's the idea?"

"It may be that the hearts in the uniform contract is already working," replied the New York film man, "but a better bet is that the answer lies in the fact that Harry Reichenbach is exploiting Hearts Aflame.

So there, Gopher Prairie, please take notice...

You all know Bert Adker—that is, the majority of you should know him, for Bert has been one of the most active of those men responsible for the cooperation rendered exhibitors in promoting their programs. Since September, 1921, he has represented Arthur S. Friend, president of Distinctive Pictures Corporation, and during that time he has been a factor in the successful presentations of the George Arliss features, "Distrael," "The Ruling Passion" and "The Man Who Played God." Bert's first work in the industry was with Edwin Thanhouser. After becoming general representative of the company, he aided materially in putting "The Million-Dollar Mystery" into the "million-dollar gross" class.

Lon Young, of Warner Brothers, was reading in one of the dailies of the arrest of a character named Cecil Clovelly, on a charge of bootlegging.

"I know that fellow," said Lon. "He's a good friend of mine. He成本 grave digger, you know, with 'Hamlet' at the San T. Harris theatre. And he's got more trouble on his hands than the prohibition people will make for him, He'll have his head in the grave diggers' union."

Business is geschickt with Robert Edgar Long. He's doing the publicity and advertising for the Yiddish Art theatre, and says, he'll hang on to the job if some penni-noff with more schuss than a guy can deal out, doesn't grab it away from him.

Billy Kane, an exhibitor in Milford, Mass., sends in the following clipping: "That exhibitor property belongs in the film industry, but whether exhibitor or distributor, he can't quite do it.

"Winsted, Conn., Feb. 8.—Frederic C. Walcott, president of the State Fisheries and Game Commission, speaking tonight at a dinner at the Winsted Club, told how 400 half-inch pickerel placed in a pond had eaten one another until in twenty-one days there was only one survivor."

Pete Harrison has a secret. In commenting on the uniform contract, he says: "There is no use in being nervous, that is equitable, but in order to avoid embarrassing the exhibitor representatives and Mr. Hays we refrain from commenting on them now."

Everybody better be good or Pete might tell.

Ben Davis, one of the old timers of the newspaper, publicity and exploitation men, who has recently been in Texas for Fox films, has returned to New York and is doing publicity work for George H. Davis.

"Jimmy" Loughborough is the latest addition to the membership of the A. Lichtman Corp., alumni association, having resigned his position as director of advertising and publicity last week. Morris Kyskind, who has been writing Lichtman publicity for the past couple of weeks, has succeeded Loughborough. The latter has made no announcement of his plans.

Saul Rogers, legal counsel of the Fox organization, sailed last week for England, to attend to some business for his concern in addition to rest up from the arduous labors attendant upon helping to work out the legal tangles of the uniform contract.

The annual ball of the Motion Picture Salesmen, Inc., will be held at the Hotel Commodore next Saturday night. In addition to the dinner and dance an elaborate novelty programme has been arranged.

Charles O'Reilly, accompanied by Mrs. O'Reilly, spent last week in Atlantic City.

The M. P. T. O. N. Y. president took with him a copy of the uniform contract, which he used as an alibi to himself for taking a vacation.

J. Charles Davis, 2nd, posts us from Reading, Pa., with this:

"Followed 'The Streets of New York' and look where I landed. Here for the opening of the Arcadia."

He also says "Regardo's the gang," so we gave them a couple of Beereef.

Repartee between the Gallagher and Sheen of the industry one cold day last week:

"I'm chilled to the bone," said Eddie Bonas.

"Put on your hat," advised Howard Dietz.

Sidney Franklin

SIDNEY FRANKLIN, the director of the Warner Brothers classic of the screen, "Brass," was originally destined by his parents to become a great banker.

Due to sickness, he had to leave school at an early age. His father, who was a banker in San Francisco, offered him an opportunity to learn the business. He accepted his father's offer, but soon gave up his position. He floundered in a hundred different jobs, but he distinctly remembered the time he was a bill collector.

"I got $2.50 a day as a collector," said Franklin, "but it was too tiresome to walk around, so I hired a rig for $2.50 to ride around in, and worked for nothing. But I enjoyed riding, and I stuck to the job three weeks."

Finally, he landed in Los Angeles, and obtained work as an Indian barrel-rider in a Selig animal picture which Cohn Campbell was directing. This was in 1910. At that time it was it to land a screen job, so Franklin conceived the idea of carrying the camera for the photographer if he would let him in the gate. The trick was to get on the inside, and once within the mystic realm it was easy to get on the pay roll for the day.

Mr. Franklin's pocketbook was lean in those days, and he used to walk from Los Angeles to Edendale, then the Selig headquarters. He had his heart set on becoming a director, and his persistence soon won him recognition until today he is one of the highest salaried feature directors in the industry.

Mr. Franklin was born in San Francisco on March 21, 1893. He is married and lives in a beautiful hill top home in Hollywood. He is a nimrod and a champion duck hunter. He has complete faith in the motion picture, and his "East Is West" and "Simiti' Through" with the Talmadge sisters, are testimony of this faith and talent which is reflected in his work. With the completion of "Brass," a Harry Rapl production, he was signed by the Warner Brothers for a term of years.

Strike Censorship Bill from Legislative Program in Iowa

Father of Measure, in Asking Its Withdrawal, Says He Realizes It Could Not Be Enacted—Legal Regulation Gets Setback In Missouri

DES MOINES, IA., February 13.—Representative Gallagher today withdrew his motion picture censorship bill from the lower house of the Iowa legislature. He declared that though he felt the bill to be a good one he realized that it could not be enacted. Unanimous consent was extended for the withdrawal.

This is apparent from a review of the news reports received from the various states in which legislatures are now considering screen regulatory measures. A noticeable change has taken place during the past week with Iowa and Missouri lending a brighter aspect to the situation. The following reports will give you the legislative situation in brief:

Iowa

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

DES MOINES, IA., Feb. 13.—Taxation of amusement admission charges, now before the legislature, is losing strength. The bill is before the ways and means committees of both houses as part of the general program of revenue raising for the state for the next two years, but the chairman of the house appropriations committee, Hauge of Polk county, one of the most influential members of the body, declared that he was beginning to lose sympathy for the measure when he considered what it would mean to the little child or poor family that can barely afford a picture show once a week now, while the cigar in the mouth of the plutocrat, a genuine and unnecessary luxury, went tax-free.

Missouri

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

JEFFERSON CITY, MO., Feb. 13.—The criminal jurisdiction committee of the Missouri house of representatives on Thursday, February 8, received its first-hand information of the hardships that state censorship of motion pictures would work on the industry and the community at large without in any way benefiting the morals of either the pictures or their patrons.

Led by Dr. Burris Jenkins, pastor of the Linwood Boulevard Christian church, Kansas City, former editor of the Kansas City Post, and Mrs. Henry H. Ess, prominent Kansas City woman leader, the opponents of the Committee of Fifty's censorship bill now before the committee whipped into shreds every argument in favor of motion picture censorship advanced by proponents of the measure at their hearing before the committee last week.

"The difficulty about censorship is to find someone competent to censor pictures," Rev. Dr. Jenkins told the committee. "If we could get a censorship board composed of Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and Charlie Chaplin, or if we could get producers like D. W. Griffith and Rex Ingram, then I would be in favor of censorship. But they are not in Missouri."

The kind of censorship board we would get would be composed of the Democratic chairman of St. Louis county or Mrs. So and So, head of the Democratic Women's Club of Deepwater township. Probably we would have a good minder as a third member, an Indian at all respects to the ministers I doubt if we could find one able to judge."

Mrs. Ethel, former president of the Athenaum Club of Kansas City, speaking from her experiences with the Kansas City board of censors and the operations of the censorship laws in the State of Kansas, demonstrated to the committee that censorship merely means political control of an industry without benefiting anyone. She and other women speakers told of the operation in Kansas City of a voluntary arrangement between the exhibitors and representatives of civic and church organization. They said that the city board of censors were merely political appointees.

Tennessee

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NASHVILLE, TENN., Feb. 13.—The state senate last week passed the measure prohibiting Sunday shows where admissions are charged. The bill previously had been adopted by the house.

Kansas

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

TOPEKA, KAN., Feb. 13.—Two bills of drastic nature were dropped into the "hopper" at the Kansas legislative session last week, bills which have acted as "eye openers" to exhibitors of the Sunflower state who have felt confident that there would be no forceful opposition from the senators this year. The bills, if passed, would have been a disastrous blow to exhibitors, one of the measures providing for a Sunday closing law, while the other would prohibit all persons less than 18 years old from attending all places of entertainment without a written consent of their parents.

House bill No. 308, introduced by O. E. Snyder of Atchison, provides that no minor under the age of 18 shall be allowed to attend or frequent any place of entertainment without the written consent of such minor's parents or of the legal representative of such minor made for that special purpose. The word "entertainment" as used in Section 1 shall mean any concert, motion picture show or other.

Five or Six Reel Pictures With Comedy Make Ideal Bill

That Is Opinion of Theatre Owners Discussing Editorial by Martin J. Quigley

THE ideal theatre program—disregarding the merit of pictures—is the one comprised of a feature of five or six reels and a one or two-reel comedy or western. Exhibitors discussing Martin J. Quigley’s editorial, “Five Reels,” which was published in a recent issue of the HERALD, hold that belief, and declare further that they likewise express the wishes of the public.

A NUMBER of reasons are assigned by theatre men for the existing sentiment for shorter footage. First is the increased rental which comes with additional reels. Then there is the objection to padding, exhibitors declaring that the best story can be told in five or six reels. Long features make it impossible to include a comedy on the program and this, exhibitors say, does not meet the approval of the public.

Discerning the subject in a letter to the Herald, Henry W. Gauning, Lincoln theatre, Pittsburgh, writes:

“Why don’t producers quit making features over six or seven reels? Too much padding. Nine, ten and twelve reel features are not wanted by exhibitors who desire to show a diversified program. Don’t like to cancel short stuff when running extra length features and the show is too long if one doesn’t.

“A helluva lot can be told (if to the point) in six or seven reels. Why insist on more reels, padded to a fare-thee-well and then soak the long suffering exhibitor for more kale. Let us have them no longer than seven reels and cut out the padding.”

The following letter from O. B. Sterling, Orpheum theatre, Dayton, Tex., shows that the sentiment for shorter features is growing and is confined to no one territory.

“We wish to say that we quite agree with Editor Quigley as regards his remarks about the length of the pictures. When a picture is made of more than six reels patrons get tired and the eye strain is also great. This detracts from any picture regardless of how good a feature it may be.

“All the youngsters like comedies and some of (indeed most of) the grown folks too, and feel that they have not seen their money’s worth unless the comedy is included.

“A five or six reel feature and a one or two reel comedy or western make the ideal program for the patrons as well as the exhibitor.”

Steve Farrar, Orpheum theatre, Harrisburg, Ill., objects to the long features because of the additional production cost incurred. Here is his letter:

“The public or exhibitors do not want nine and ten reel productions. They want good five and six reel pictures made at a cost of $75,000 to $100,000, and some of the best were made for that.”

Rob House During Show

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., Feb. 13.

Two masked bandits entered the Capitol theatre about 9 o’clock Monday night of last week and after striking C. O. Payne, assistant manager, and H. H. Allen, with the butt end of their revolvers, robbed the theatre of $90. Several hundred persons were watching the show during the robbery.

Court Says Contract Cannot Be Cancelled

Sustains Inviolability of Pact Though Films Had Not Been Played

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Announcement is made by the court of the outcome of a suit instituted by that company against a California theatre corporation in which the court declared null and void the contract regardless of whether the pictures mentioned in the contract had been played.

The RALD TRANSFER THEATRE Vitagraph states that the action was brought against the Liberty Theatre Corporation, which owned theatres in Fresno and San Jose. Vitagraph alleged that the defendant contracted for several Larry Semin comedies for both of its theatres, but later transferred its interest in the theatre to Frankidge, who played one comedy but in paying, attempted to deduct the amount of the deposit on the contract and cancel the contract, asserting that the price was too high.

The Liberty Theatre Corporation, which completed its contract so far as the San Jose theatre was concerned, and renewed it the same terms, was then sued by Vitagraph for $1,000, damages, representing the contract value of the unplayed pictures in Fresno.

Claim First Run Protection

The California defendants attacked the legality of the contract for lack of mutuality and in abatement of damages sought to prove that Vitagraph played the comedies involved in towns surrounding Fresno to the exclusion of the1. They then cancelled, asserting that the first run gave them protection in those nearby towns.

The court decided for Vitagraph and rendered a verdict for Vitagraph for the full amount with interest and costs.

In announcing late last year that it would complete its contract with the defendant, it was stated that the defendant expected exhibitors would live up to the letter of their contracts. A similar case was recently won by Vitagraph in Boston.

MONEY MAKING IDEAS Which Have Been Used Successfully by Exhibitors to Build Up Their Patronage

By RUSSELL ARMEN-TROUT

(K. P. Theatre, Pittsfield, Ill.)

The best means I have found in putting over big pictures and at the same time the price is very low—that is to send postal cards. Be sure that it is a big picture and not a small special, because you can soon queer yourself by sending out cards on a small picture. If you make it a rule to send cards on the big ones, you can bet the people will flock in. Believe me, you will be surprised at the results. But don’t try to fool the people into believing it’s a big one when it’s not. You will hurt your business in the long run.

By C. R. SULLIVAN

(Fair Theatre, Amarillo, Tex.)

Self confidence will do exhibitors a world of good. Try this just once.

Book some extraordinary picture. Double your length of run. Spend twenty times as much advertising as on regular program. Raise your price to fifty cents. And watch ‘em come in. Repeat every other week. I am speaking now of towns under 30,000.

pictorial presentations, public dances, exhibition of strength, power, contortion, pugilism, wrestling, or any other form of physical display, including boxing and blindfold performances.

It also provides that no child under the age of 15 shall be permitted for hire or without hire to engage in any entertainment as described in the preceding section of this act.

This bill provides for a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $500, or by confinement in the county jail for thirty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment. A Sunday closing bill was introduced by O. E. Snyder of Atchison.

Another bill before the house provides for a twenty-cent weekly benefit for every city in Kansas with a population of 5,000 or over. A Senate bill providing for a fifty-cent weekly benefit for every city in Kansas, such boards to be empowered to license all theatres and places of amusements in counties, except in cities of the first or second class, where a city board of public welfare is maintained and to issue or revoke permits of exhibitors. This bill now is in the hands of the welfare committee.

EN ROUTE across America with its exploitation message to the public, the Warner Brothers car stopped at Wichita to assist the Palace in advertising "Heroes of the Street." Not that Stanley Chambers needs assistance, but then, why not?

CONSISTENCE is profitable. H. A. Gillespie, Liberty theatre, Yakima, Wash., is consistent in his lobby displays. The above, for First National's "Kindred of the Dust," is representative of lobby display sequence unbroken year around.

"POOR MEN'S WIVES." Lichtman, was prologued as above by Hugo Riesenfeld for its New York Rivoli run and exploited in whirlwind fashion by the Lichtman organization, a shift in schedule necessitating a seven-day campaign that got results.

DENVER WOKE thoroughly to the fact that "When Knighthood Was In Flower" Cosmopolitan-Paramount, was an attraction worth seeing at the Princess theatre when Homer Ellison, Al G. Birch and Rick Ricketson joined forces in putting over an elaborate exploitation campaign. The latter ruled that window tie-ups would be made only with chain stores. Drug, candy, tailoring, motor, ice cream and restaurant firms came in on the drive. Seats were reserved and the orchestra was augmented. The house was practically made over, with castle lobby and decorated interior. The story is so long that these photographs are presented as telling it more effectively than could our feeble typewriter in the space at hand.

Publicity used was non-hokum but voluminous, building on the essential merit basis. Ads were in keeping, Old English type being relied upon to great extent.

NEW YORK, says the Theatre Visitor, isn’t greatly unlike other cities in exploitation. This S. B. Moss front for Associated Exhibitors’ “Head Hunters of the South Seas” bears him out. It could be used as well in any city.

“BROTHERS UNDER THE SKIN,” Goldwyn, has wrecked the superstition that a long title is hard to advertise by accumulating an exploitation record of striking extent and variety. The above lobby shows an excellent way to score the book tie-up.

TWO GOOD IDEAS, from the Capitol, Detroit, and the Garrick, Duluth, which any exhibitor can use in exploiting First National’s “The Dangerous Age” and “Omar the Tentmaker.” They reach the walking and reading public effectively.

Theatre Letters from Messrs. Bair and Rogers are presented upon the following pages. The photographs attest the adequacy of the exploitation applied.
Rogers Boosts "Dr. Jack" to Lockout Crowd

What has become of the good old phrase, "lockout?" No, it didn't perish in the decade vac of 1922. The business it describes still exists here and there at times, notably at the Mission theatre, Amarillo, Tex., when Ross D. Rogers exploited "Dr. Jack" as described in his letter. Anybody else got a lockout story to tell?

THEATRE EDITOR.

EXHIBITORS HERALD.

Dear Sir:

I am mailing you today two photographs of our front on "Dr. Jack," also a street ballyhoo we used. We used the letter campaign to doctors, nurses, city officials, etc., on "Dr. Jack," all of which resulted in turn-away business. The sad part, however, that we had to pay so much for the picture that it was impossible to make any fair return on the showing.

Ross D. Rogers,
Mission theatre, Amarillo, Tex.

DEAR MR. ROGERS:

Your photographs are eloquent in praise of your method of "lockout," but there is always the point that turn-away business is a good house ad, even if one can't eat or wear it.

Certainly the picture was made-to-order from the exploitation standpoint. The letter stunt looked to us like one of the few sure fire devices of the season.—W. R. W.

Dear Sir:

Enclosed find photo of front on the serial "In the Days of Buffalo Bill." Photo made up at nine o'clock in the morning. Note that I open up at 9:40 for the morning shows. This is the first serial that Jackson has seen in over five years and I am playing to over 1,200 children each Saturday morning. I open with the two reels of the serial, use a two-reel comedy between acts and close with the serial.

Now I know serials are not new, but what about houses that are idle on Saturday mornings? Especially houses that would not use serials on their regular programs.

Furthermore, my Saturday afternoon patronage is not reduced one admission by using the morning show. The second Saturday I ran this show the house across the street ran a Chaplin film with a hill (shoes) at free admission. In the face of this show I played to 82 more than the previous week.

All this patronage was gained by one-sheets and banners, not one ad in the newspapers.

Note: Chief Yellow Fish on top. Real Indian with plenty of relics, tepees, bows and arrows, etc. He helped bring them in.

I am tying up with one of the daily papers to reprint from their files news matter of importance happening "in the days of Buffalo Bill." This particular paper has been in existence for 17 years and this tie-up will make them up to the picture and keep interest from lagging.

I am using an entire page in Sunday's papers. Buy it outright each Sunday and fill this page to suit myself. Thanks to the Herald I give them movie dope hot off the press and inside dope that the API doesn't supply.

C. L. McDonald,
Istrione theatre, Jackson, Miss.

DEAR MR. MCDONALD:

It's hard to reply to your points in the order of their importance, all being so good, we'll start at the first. The method of using the serial is not just like

POLICE GUARDING FILM, "THE CHRISTIAN"

BALLYHOO used by Ross D. Rogers for "Dr. Jack," Pathe, and mentioned in this Theatre Letter.

We've seen a great many of Ross's raids and can't let this one pass by. We'd like to see a copy of the programme and see the turn-away business he's been getting from old files of a stroke of genius. If the newspaper doesn't come through in its great shape well be surprised. The idea is invaluable where house-stopped newspapers are at hand, in connection with many current attractions.

The Sunday page is another splendid idea. It utilizes your public access to the real facts, that the news dispatches so consistently omit and must tend to counteract the effect of the sensational re- torial invention that they so commonly feature. We'd like to see a copy of this page, also.

Altogether we count your letter one of the high spots of the week. Thank you for it.—W. R. W.

Craford Lauds Universal Man For Aid Given

James P. Craford, S. J., Gregory Theatrical Co., Hammond, Ind., devotes his first Theatre Letter to professional exploitation assistance, voting favorably.

His letter reads:

THEATRE EDITOR.

EXHIBITORS HERALD.

Dear Sir:

We notice that you are giving special attention to the work of the film exchange exploitation men and having just finished a campaign for one of the Universal-Jewel picture, "The Flirt," we feel that it is quite in order that we should say a word in behalf of the exploitation ads extended to us by Mr. Hill, publicity manager for the Universal Co., who extended us co-operation in our work with the film while and resulted through our combined efforts in a highly successful run of this picture.

Never before have we attempted an advance campaign confined strictly to teaser work, and the finale Saturday night before the opening, and which consisted of the arrest of the bevy of flirts we used in the campaign, created for us the greatest amount of interest we have ever had aroused in a campaign for a big picture, secured for us a splendid publicity in the newspapers and resulted in a phenomenally successful run of the picture.

JAMES P. CRAIDON, S. J. Gregory Theatrical Co., Hammond, Ind. + + +

DEAR MR. CRAIDON:
It was our good fortune to closely observe the campaign executed by Mr. Hill for the same picture in its Chicago run and we can visualize readily the effect of a similar effort in your smaller community.
Thank you for your contribution to the rapidly growing fund of data on the subject of professional exploitation service. — W. R. W.

Granada Finds Sunday Musical Concerts Draw

Every showman knows music as a passively attractive attendance force in its office as a picture adjunct.
A few showmen make it an active one.
The Granada, San Francisco, is one of these.
D. S. Couner’s letter tells how it’s done.

THEATRE EDITOR, EXHIBITORS HERALD.
Dear Sir:
The Granada and California theatres, two of a chain operating under Herbert L. Rothchild Entertainment, Inc., are presenting, every Sunday, Discovery Concerts which are holding the attention of the public and motion picture people as well.
These concerts were inaugurated by Managing Directors Roth and Farlington for the purpose of giving young artists a chance to prove their ability in the estimation of the public. They have brought to the music lovers of San Francisco many a young artist who has never had a chance to appear before the public and get a chance for recognition. Professional artists of growing and established popularity are appearing on the same program.
These concerts have been so tremendously successful that the management of these respective theatres have seen fit to present them every Sunday as a special and distinct musical attraction.
D. S. COUNER, Granada theatre, San Francisco, Calif. + + +

DEAR MR. COUNER:
Familiar as we are with the great success of the Sunday morning concerts given by Balaban and Katz at the Chicago theatre, we readily understand the reasons for the success of your Discovery Concerts. The name you have given them adds a promise of the unexpected which must be valuable. No doubt many theatres in the country will adapt the idea as a result of your letter, for which we thank you. — W. R. W.

“Exploiter” Presents Case To Exhibitors

The professional exploitation man’s side of the “exploiter” discussion prompted by J. P. Lannon’s Theatre Letter in the January 27th “Herald” is presented in the following letter and article by John Wilschach, “Goldwynner” at Detroit. As in the case of letters from exhibitors, we present both letter and article complete.

THEATRE EDITOR, EXHIBITORS HERALD.
Dear Sir:
I am sending this to you for exclusive use if you wish to use it as it stands, for I have tried to make my arguments in a building manner and if cut it would be as I meant it.
It does appear to me that the good of every body does help. A discussion from my end of the line should be interesting in starting more discussion, which clears the air.
I certainly enjoy your department and you are at liberty to make any remarks, no matter how critical, in printing my essay. Very sincerely — John WILSTACH, Detroit Goldwyn Exploitation Manager.

DEAR MR. WILSTACH + +
While we do not fully grasp the import of your first paragraph, it is customary to present communications printed “as they stand” and in view of the current interest in the topic we are publishing yours in this space despite the fact that the heading, “Theatre Letters,” might be considered a misnomer. We are pleased to know that you enjoy Theatrical. Your essay follows. — W. R. W.

“Does Exploitation Pay?”
An answer to Exhibitors Who Think The Subject Is One Open To Discussion: By John WILSTACH, Detroit Goldwynner.

I notice in the letters written to your publication by some exhibitors, that it is assumed that exploitation is something new, and that it is open to discussion. whatever or not it is of advantage. This is a very narrow view to take for, admitting that exploitation may be new with motion pictures it is as old as the pyramids the Pharaohs built to exploit their fame in as near an immortal manner as possible, and when rightly done has always been successful. — no question of it.

It never seems to have been mentioned that Barnum was the most notable exponent of modern exploiter. He was so versatile that he would call out of curiosity with his display OUTSIDE bally-hoo performances and enticing advertisements of what his show consisted of. The way of genuine INSIDE! I don’t suppose it could be argued that this wasn’t exploitation or that it didn’t produce successful financially.

Years ago in the circus business the Ringling Brothers had a small struggling
The exhibitors if they wished the exploitation of Mr. Ned Holmes and his aids to continue. The answer was YES! As for the Goldwyn office the work of Mr. Bonns and Mr. Dietz with his field assistants has been so startlingly financially successful in the past, there's no doubt what they'll do with THE CHRISTIAN and BEN HUR, and are now doing, Ask Mr. Godsoll or Jimmie Grainger. Yes, exploitation pays. All successful producers and exhibitors "Say It Do!"

Market Notes

Press time reports, too late to illustrate, on exploitation of the new attractions.

Ebb Tide

SHARON, PA.—Sam Friedman of the local theatre, ...similar water tank in his lobby for Paramount's "Ebb Tide" and engaged one of the best local swimmers to show the town how native South Sea Islanders can swim. Needless to say much interest resulted.

The Dangerous Age

CLEVELAND, O.—A tieup with Cleveland newspapers whereby prominent citizens were asked to give their opinion of what they regarded as "The Dangerous Age" obtained several stories in Cleveland papers during the run of the picture at the Allen theatre.

Omar the Tentmaker

NEW YORK.—Tags with little bags of salt attached were used as advance exploitation at the Strand theatre. The line "Salt, the beginning of all wishes on the desert, the charm against evil and the symbol of good fortune" was used as the tieup with "Omar."

Nobody's Money

GREELEY, COLO.—F. K. Davis of the Sterling theatre got a big bunch of German marks and Russian rubles through his banker and enclosed one bill in each envelope to his patrons carrying the title of the picture. This served well to focus attention on the picture.

Oliver Twist

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—W. G. Watts, manager of the Princess theatre tied up with the State Journal in staging a special showing of "Oliver Twist" for the orphans of the city on a Saturday morning. The affair not only drew valuable publicity from the newspaper but a parade to the theatre attracted much attention.

EXID, OKLA.—If you try giving away balloons to advertise Jackie Coogan in "Oliver Twist" have a care. Manager Bob Browning of the Rialto theatre did it and was in danger of being mobbed by the kiddies as they scrambled for them. But he found it publicity of the best kind.

Making a Man

MILWAUKEE.—The Butterfly theatre, with the aid of R. C. Gary of the Paramount exploitation staff obtained the cooperation of ten leading merchants of the town in a page ad on "Making a Man. The names of the merchants were misspelled only the trade marks serving as a clue to their identity. When properly rearranged the solution was good for a ticket to the theatre at the store.

The Sin Flood

ALTOONA, Pa.—A lobby advance teaser painted on a mirror eight feet high was used by Manager F. K. O'Kelley, Strand theatre, for Goldwyn's "The Sin Flood." Medallions of the heads of the six principal members of the cast were used as special lobby pendants and pasted on the mirror.

Singed Wings

WASHINGTON, PA.—For Paramount's "Singed Wings" Manager Nat Walten and F. Morrow of the Washington theatre borrowed a big show case from a local merchant and put in it a candle and a lot of butterflies and moths which played around the flame.

Pink Gods

JAMAICA, L. I.—Cards, which were die-cut to permit insertion of a strip of film were used by Manager Fred V. Greene, Jr., of the Rialto theatre to effectively exploit "Pink Gods." When held to the light a scene from the picture was visible.

East Is West

NEW YORK.—A typical lobby for "East Is West" served admirably in arousing interest in this feature at B. S. Moss' Coliseum theatre. Chinese lanterns, colored lights, and oriental draperies were used to good advantage in the decorations.
"THE THIRD ALARM" at the Astor and "Omar the Tentmaker" at the Mark-Strand are engagements mentioned by Harry E. Nichols, Theatre Visitor, in his comment this week on New York exploitation.

The Theatre Visitor
By HARRY E. NICHOLS
Field Representative, EXHIBITORS HERALD

NEW YORK. Great White Way. Chicago under a microscope and slowed down. Main Street magnified and multiplied. Any place grown up—not changed.

"When you get to New York," said many theatremen who knew I was Gotham bent, "let us know about this, that the other thing." It seems to be the idea that because home offices of film companies are here and most pictures open first in this city, it must be in some essential way of different stuff than other population centers. It isn't. It's only more so and inclined to boast of it.

The average New Yorker is a former resident of somewhere else who doesn't like to be reminded of it. There are also, of course, the professional New Yorkers, who Cou-ize the fact, and the amateur New Yorkers who advertise it most. The bulk of the city is its most distinctive attribute and any atlas gives this in detail.

New York showmanship is very much like the showmanship of any modern American city. It is not, despite a somewhat prevalent impression, the best showmanship in America, some of it registering above and some below that of representative communities. I have been somewhat surprised by the number of inquiries I had had for information pertaining to the leading theatres in Chicago, Detroit, St. Louis, Los Angeles and elsewhere. The conceit which I had been warned to expect has not materialized to any appreciable extent.

Exploitation is practically the exploitation I find in other urban communities, its priority lending practically the only additional interest.

For instance, Nat Roffstein's excellent exploitation outline for "The Third Alarm," F. B. O., was applied to the Astor theatre here with almost precisely the same results it has accomplished elsewhere. The support of the firemen, with the avalanche of publicity that this support produces, contributed to the box office intake in logical proportion to its contributions elsewhere. The press book, justly notable for its comprehensiveness and practicability, applied to New York as well as to the smallest American municipality. Its Astor record is at once a tribute to Mr. Roffstein and a commentary on New York theatricals.

Also, for instance, "Omar the Tentmaker," First National, exhibited at the Strand, drew quite such returns from the dramatical sent out in its behalf as might be expected to draw from the populace of any representative American community.

At the Lyric theatre "Hunting Big Game in Africa" was in its second month when I snapped the pictures reproduced herewith to show the manner in which Theodore Mitchell and J. J. McCarthy had augmented each inflow by use of animal cutouts and lobby frames not essentially different than those in common use in large and small communities throughout the nation.

These photographs were made to reply to the showmen who had asked me to report various conditions. They represent the exploitation news events of the movement and reflect New York showmanship rather well.

* * *

The glossy haze with which many distantly located showmen have invested New York does not survive a visit. Neither does the city seem less important than it is because the haze is dissipated. As a matter of fact, the city that lived up to the expectations of many whom I have met would not be a very desirable place to live. It would be too hectic, too variegated, too miscellaneous for comfort.

The New York I found this year is very much the New York that I left at the conclusion of my last visit. There are a few new faces around Times Square, and many familiar ones. The small talk runs along the same channels, with figures and names changed to suit. Astor gossip swings as before around the same small orbit. Rumor continues to thrive.

It's a good place to see, a place every motion picture man should see, but it isn't what the average exhibitor expects. It's more or less, according to his individuality, and as the first or second Film City (Los Angeles contesting leadership) it is significant.
SHORTHAND

Teaser Strip

Built to Sell

"The Pilgrim"

Built to sell, not merely to look at, the teaser strip is favored in the first National press show for Charles Chaplin's comedy, "The Pilgrim," it is its own recommendation. The reproductions on this page show the first six units, reduced from newspaper column width.

The development in this teaser series is thought by not letter by letter or word by word, and it is pure thought that produces ad sales. The humor is consistent throughout and the copy brief.

It is a long time between Chaplin comedies, so long that a public concern usually finds three in newspaper and editorial comment. Such concern is guaranteed that the teaser strip, or any other of the excellent material combined in the press sheet, will amply repay the cost of its publication.

Hodkinson Man

Supplies Short Subject Data

J. G. Rohills, short subject sales manager for W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, bases upon a close survey of the theatre field an optimistic outlook for the minor length product. He states:

"Of the theatres using short subjects, approximately 73 percent use two reel comedies. What does it mean? It reveals relative popularity of the exhibitors and the public for short reel entertainment. Who created this condition? First of all the producer when he conceived the idea, and good, clean, wholesome entertainment will be more paid for more every day by the exhibitor when he contracts for his short reels.

"During the 'filler' days, the exhibitor simply considered the quality of his feature and would not pay more than "filler" prices for a so-called 'filler' reel.

"Watch him today. You can't stagger him with big prices but he knows that short reels are being made at a cost consistent with the asking prices. He is beginning to build up his short reels with valuable exhibition value so that public know that their desire is being fulfilled.

"So long as producers continue to furnish clean, wholesome entertainment, this form, just so long will the public clamor for them and no longer."

D. W. GRIFFITH recently went abroad for a new actor for his forthcoming pictures and upon his return announced he had signed Ivor Novello to a five years' contract. Griffith made a survey of all the young men actors available in America before seeking talent in Europe, it is said, and explains his final decision thus:

"College training seemed to have blanketed the imagination of students and no actor can survive without a vigorous imagination. There was a heavy quality, one might almost say ponderous, in these young men that is a hardship to any acting progress. Nor were these college men particularly handsome. It was assumed the college men coming from the better-stationed families of the nation, would have gifts for acting as well as medicine, or law, or engineering.

"Why the young men of America who have personal qualifications for acting in motion pictures do not take their opportunities more seriously is difficult to understand. The one Christmas gift any producer in America would like above any other would be the opportunity to employ a first-class young leading man who could be developed into a first-class actor.

"In going abroad for Mr. Novello, we have not gone abroad to fill an emergency need. We have deliberately gone afar because we believed talent existed there and from now on we think you will find directors not scanning the few extra players who may apply, but scanning the world for that rare being, a good young leading man."

Mr. Novello was chosen from among hundreds of actors, and the survey was conducted by Mr. Griffith's staff for two years. If Novello goes big with American audiences it is safe to predict that other directors will consider foreign actors for American pictures. Novello will be seen in an American Releasing film in "The Bohemian Girl." soon to be published. Whether or not he will supplant Valentino in the affections of feminine picture patrons remains to be seen.—J. R. M.

"TRUXTON KING" (Fox) provides an excellent vehicle for John Gilbert, who has the role of an adventurous American, seeking excitement in a foreign country and finding plenty of it. It was adapted from George Barr McCutcheon's popular novel, which was a best-seller several years ago, and there is every reason to believe the film will be a best seller.

"A GENTLEMAN FROM AMERICA" (Universal) with Hoot Gibson as the star is an amusing story of an American doughboy in France, who gets a two-week's leave of absence and gets into all sorts of trouble and romantic adventure. Well directed and very amusing is this comedy-drama, with pretty Louise Lorraine appearing opposite Gibson.

"RACING HEARTS" (Paramount), made under the direction of Paul Powell and starring Agnes Ayres, is a swift-moving, high-gaered automobile story that hits on all cylinders and furnishes good entertainment. Agnes Ayres, the star, is delightful and is given good support by Richard Dix and Theodore Roberts.

"CRINOLINE AND ROMANCE" (Metro), with Viola Dana holds a modicum of entertainment because of its slight and trite story. The star and Claude Gillingwater are good, but the situations are a trifle over-drawn and the story is padded to extremes. This star needs stronger material than this.

"DOLLAR DEVILS" (Hodkinson). This Victor Schertzinger production is an entertaining little story, embracing a cast of popular and capable players in a small town story which involves romance, a crooked oil promoter and a philosophical oil man who is opposed to the effect of wealth upon the community. Should prove generally enjoyable to any audience.

"ONE MILLION IN JEWELS" (American Releasing) presents Helen Holmes and J. P. McGowan in a detective story written along conventional lines. It will no doubt please those who like mystery plays without bothering much about logic. J. P. McGowan also directed this five-reeler.

"THE GRUB STAKE" (American Releasing) is another wild animal picture but in a different locale. This is a story of the Klondike, of an oppressed artist's model, a cruel gambling house proprietor and a stalwart lover. The photography is very good and Nell Shipman, the star, is seen feeding and playing with various wild beasts.
MIGHTY LAK’ A ROSE

(First National)

This first Edwin Carewe production for First National distribution, written by Curtis Benton, is a picture which will bring a throng to the heartstrings of any audience and should prove a strong attraction for any theatre which books it. About eight reels.

Taking his theme from a popular song, Edwin Carewe has made of “Mighty Lak’ a Rose” a film epic that should be a second “Humoresque” in so far as box-office attraction is concerned. And as an entertainment feature, it will appeal to many as being more desirable.

The story by Curtis Benton is an intensely interesting one and there is never a moment, throughout the entire unfolding, when it fails of rapid action. The direction is exceptional and photography and lighting unusually good.

In the selection of the cast Director Carewe exercised rare judgment. The entire picture revolves around the adventures of a little blind girl and in securing Dorothy Mackaill for this part Mr. Carewe made a particularly happy choice. In a difficult role this clever little English actress proved herself a revelation, and with her work in “Mighty Lak’ a Rose” as a criterion it is safe to predict that she has a brilliant screen future before her. Sweet and lovable at all times, she gave flashes of emotional portrayal that stamps her as an artist of ability.

The remainder of the cast contains such sterling names as James Reinie, Anders Randolf, Sam Hardy, Helene Montrose and Harry Short. As “Slippery Eddie” Foster, one of the crooks of “Bull” Morgan’s gang, Harry Short injects a lot of real comedy, so cleverly done as to make it stand out as unusual. Anders Randolf as “Bull” Morgan, and James Reinie as Jimmy Harrison, are both good.

Rose Duncan is a little blind musical prodigy, discovered in an orphanage, which she leaves when seventeen years of age to go to New York to make her home with her uncle. The uncle is killed by an automobile while on his way to the station to meet her.

She is found at the station by “Bull” Morgan, who hard pressed by the police and who uses the little blind girl to help him escape. Knowing of her uncle’s death, he represents the relative and takes the girl to his home. There, Rose’s playing of the violin is, unknown to her, utilized by the crooks, to aid them in their work of thievery. One of the gang, young Jimmy Harrison, although a crook by nature, is inherently honest, and inspired by his love for Rose, decides to go straight. A fight between him and Morgan takes place, during which Rose is injured. Her life is despaired of and this brings about retribution and regeneration of the gang.

Finally Jimmy takes Rose to a famous surgeon who says that an operation will restore the girl’s sight. In order to get the money for this the gang decides to make one more haul. This is done, the money secured, but Jimmy is captured and sent to prison. The blind girl, not knowing that her friends were crooks, is told that Jimmy has died.

Later she becomes a protege of a wealthy musician, studies abroad, and finally makes her debut before a large audience in New York. Her crook friends have been invited, and Jimmy, just out of prison wonder by the stage door just as the concert is over.

Then follows a happy reunion between the former blind girl and the man she loves, but whom she has not seen, and no one can help them all to be happy, to the great strains of “Mighty Lak’ a Rose.” — J. S. S.

Hoot Gibson in A GENTLEMAN FROM AMERICA
(UNIVERSAL)

A pleasant little comedy-drama written around an American doughboy’s experience in France during the last months of the World War. Not a dull moment in it. Story and scenario by Raymond Schrock. Directed by Edward Sedgwick. Five reels.

The wonder is that there are no more stories written around our American soldiers’ experiences on the other side. It would seem to be a fruitful field for this type of comedy-drama and the war theme need not be neglected.

“A Gentleman from America” contains a wealth of amusing incident and moves along with a joyous swing that holds the attention. It was an ideal role for Hoot Gibson and his pleasing personality helps considerably in getting the role over. It should fill the bill wherever comedy-drama is appreciated.

A very competent cast, including Tom O’Brien, Louise Lorraine, Carmen Phillips, Frank Leigh, Jack Crane, Rob McKenzie, Albert Presco and Rosa Rosanova appears with Mr. Gibson. Clear photography and excellent atmosphere is provided, and the mob scenes are especially well handled.

Dennis O’Shane, an American fighting in France, and his pal Johnny Day, get leave for two weeks and visit a Spanish settlement. In a mix-up with a gang of plotters, they lose their uniforms, and dressing in the costume of a Spanish bandit, a notorious character who robs the rich and helps the poor, they succeed in saving a little orphan’s daughter from an unwholesome marriage and is proclaimed ruler of the principality. Then his Sergeant appears and he is put on “K. P.” for being “A. W. O. L.” But it all ends happily.

AGNES AYRES IN RACING HEARTS
(PARAMOUNT)

Here’s a capital automobile story, chock full of action and one of the best staged and most exciting automobile races ever screened. It fairly raises you out of your seat. Many opportunities for exploitation in this one. Directed by Paul Powell. Seven reels.

We feel sure you’ll like this latest Paramount picture, which is all about a pretty girl, a good looking hero, a stubborn father and rival automobile manufacturers. Agnes Ayres plays some of the best scenes in the entire career. And you’ll like Richard Dix, a natural and thorough actor, with a winning smile and a wonderful personality. Add to this Theodore Roberts, with a pocketful of cigars, stubborn owner of a manufacturing plant; Robert Cain, as Claxton, in hisemploi, and tripod; Warren Rogers, as Jimmy Britt and J. Farrell MacDonald, as Silas Martin, a banker. A flash is given also of Jim Murphy, who poses breezily as a driver of high-speed cars, out of a job.

The story is quite ordinary, laced on the old theme of rivalry between two automobile families, and yet by careful handling and an especially well handled automobile race, is made to live and become actually interesting, as well as very human and real.

There is a “spill” near the finish of the race that’s a real thriller and the blaze film fan that doesn’t get a “kick” out of that race is dead from the neck up.

The story runs thus: Virginia Kent, known as “Ginger,” Kent forges a letter of instructions to the foreman of her father’s plant, which permits her to hire outside help and build a racing machine, while her father is in Europe on a business trip. Roddy Smith, son of a rival manufacturer, is hired as an expert mechanic by Virginia. The machine is finished and he has tentatively agreed to drive it in the Vanderbilt when his father exposes him to Virginia. She hires James Adams, her suitor and superintendent in the factory to drive the car; but he plans to lose the race, and thus ruin his father. At the last moment he is exposed, and Virginia drives the car.

On the home stretch of the last lap of the race her gas gives out, and Kent, who is driving his father’s car, pushes her over the tape, but wrecks his own car. Of course the romance started in the factory is continued and it all ends happily.
the bee incident was funny as well as the rival suitors pulling on opposite sides of Emmy Lou.

NELL SHIPMAN IN

THE GRUB STAKE

(American Releasing)

Interesting animal stuff raises this feature out of the ordinary class. A story of the Klondike, in which there is much attractive scenery and occasional human touches. Directed by Bert Van Tyule from a story by Nell Shipman. Eight reels.

There are points about "The Grub Stake" that will appeal to lovers of out-of-door pictures, for it is a tale of the snow covered country of Alaska, and depicts many of the trials and hardships encountered in that land of gold and snow. The story is rather conventional, but has been adequately told, has several good situations and an especially thrilling climax.

Of the acting the best work is done by the star although the entire cast is a hand-picked one and render good support.

The photography is very good and if the feature is cut, a sound, dramatic picture will result. There are almost too many scenes of animal life, which, though interesting in themselves, tend to show up the action and detract from the main theme.

Faith Dugès, an artist's model, meets a wealthy man in Seattle who "grub stakes" her and finally persuades her to go with him to the Klondike. There she is compelled to become a dancer in his saloon. She is informed by another inmate that the man who she regards as her husband is already married. Faith and her father leave at once for the interior with a guide. A storm overtakes them and her father falls ill. The guide is sent for aid. Faith becomes frightened and runs from a mountain lion, wandering for days amid the snows of the upper mountain. Finally she is discovered by a youth, an artist, who takes her to his mother's cabin. Her husband swears out a warrant for her father for stealing his dogs. Being too ill to be moved, the Mounted police wait for him to get well. In the meantime gold is discovered, the old guide goes to town to file a claim, falls into Faith's husband's hands and is kept locked up until they can jump the claim. The north-west mounted attempts to aid Faith and is overthrown. The guide arrives in time to disperse the claim jumpers and it all ends happily.

Scene 7. Faith playing with bears and other wild animals, who have grown to love her in the woods, are quite numorous throughout the feature.

VIA RADIO

(Educational)

This interesting one-reel subject, sponsored by the School for America, explains in a concise manner how the radio has linked worlds together by means of powerful broadcasting stations located throughout the world. It is not burdened with technical terms and is interesting to layman and radio fan alike. Several of sonic waves is explained, pictures are given of the large broadcasting stations both inside and out and with the present radio vogue spreading this radio subject should prove a good drawing card in almost any neighborhood.
way. Especially pleasing also is the photography.

Truxtun King, an American seeking adventure and excitement, becomes involved in a political argument in Graustark, where he is losing. He discovers a plot to kill the heir to the throne and becomes acquainted with the youngster's aunt Loraine. The revolutionists kidnap the aunt and also confine King in a cell but he manages to elude Jim Biggers, the six-year-old ruler, but also the country from the hands of the plotters. He also Marries the beautiful aunt.

SPECIAL CAST IN

DOLLAR DEVILS

(HODKINSON)

This is a pleasing feature, well told and carrying a good degree of entertainment. Not a heavy type of drama, however. It contains an excellent cast, is well produced and should give general satisfaction. Written and directed by Victor Schertzinger. Six reels.

Those who seek wealth must beware lest they themselves become the object of pursuit by little dollar devils which have a tendency to upset old friendships and the tranquility of their lives. This is the theme of "Dollar Devil," and the plot is brought in an interesting production in which such players as Joseph Dowling, Eva Novak, Hallam Cooley, Callen Landis, Lydia Knott, Ncy Farrel and Miles McCarthy give excellent interpretations of exciting roles.

The story runs along a smooth and pleasing vein with action laid in a small town and involving mostly quaint, every-day people. There is humor and pathos a sufficiency in the battle of a poor and bashful boy against a slick oil promoter and the man from his sweetheart becomes intimated.

The story opens with the arrival in Hurling, a sleepy burg, of Helen Andrews, accompanied by a Bruce Merlin whom she has met on the train. Having acquired a city "polish" and dress, she forgets her old sweetheart, Jim Biggers. Merlin starts promoting oil operations and has everybody investing their money except Zannon McCarthy, a shrewd old man who believes that wealth is a curse because of the tendencies it has to revolutionize the calm of the village.

He sells Biggers, however, to obtain he drilling contract and later the two discover that Merlin is a crook and about to make his getaway with the money he has collected. They kidnap him and force a confession of, his trickery, when suddenly afterward, Dan cells begins bringing oil. A boom follows and the lives of all the inhabitants are changed with their wealth. The peace and friendliness of the village is gone. Everybody is being pursued by the little dollar devils.

There comes a day when the wells go dry. Zannon McCarthy is happy. Life in the village resumes its normal pace. And while Biggers' sweetheart has eloped with Merlin, the hero is not so bad a fellow as she that he loves but her sister instead. There is a happy ending pointing out that happiness and friendship do not go hand in hand with the scramble for wealth.

SPECIAL CAST IN

ONE MILLION IN JEWELS

(AMERICAN RELEASING)

A serial in five reels, this picture will hold the attention and satisfy those who like excitement and don't care "what all the shootin's fer," so long as things keep moving. Featuring Helen Holmes and J. P. McGowan, and directed by Mr. McGowan.

This picture gets off to a good start with two of a band of crooks being nabbed at the Customs House, brought before "Burke" of the revenue force, and allowed to go that he may thus locate the girl, "Helen Morgan," played by Helen Holmes. "Burke," of course, is depicted by J. P. McGowan, whose strong face is well suited to the role of the tenacious detective. Helen is one of a band of jewel smugglers, and is seeking to outwit Burke. Burke discovers that Helen is on shipboard with two of the gang, and that she has the jewels, a million dollars with unanswerable story. Helen, liking Burke, is jealous of his attentions to "Sylvia Ellis," a girl he befriended on a slumbering expedition and a title informs us that she plans to outwit Burke through the girl. To this end she cuts open several chocolate creams, places the million dollars worth of jewels in them, on the bottom layer, and gives the box to the girl. Sylvia offers Burke the box, and when he decides to investigate the lower layer. Helen prevents, offering him her piece. This naturally arouses the suspicions of the alert Burke, and when, later, searching Helen's room, he finds the knife Helen used in cutting open the creams, with candy still on it, he puts two and two together and knows he has but to find the candy box to find the jewels. But Sylvia has the box in her trunk. Helen invites Sylvia, mother and father, et al., to her palatial home, and there, after a search by her accomplices, locates the still untouched lower layer, substituting another similar box.

The rest of the story shows how McGowan unravels the mystery, gets the jewels and discovers that Helen cares for him.

Audiences liking detective and mystery plays that provide excitement, without bothering much about logic, will probably enjoy this exceedingly.

STARLAND REVIEW

NUMBER 19

(F. B. O.)

Perhaps the most interesting part of this F. B. O. short subject is the portion devoted to W. T. Benda and his artistic and famous masks. The picture shows how Benda makes his masks and the startling effect they produce when worn with frightful and gargoyle-like features. Scenes from "The Love Child" and "Sue Dear" are interesting bits also.

HE RAISED KANE

(UNIVERSAL)

This is the eighth of the new series of "Leather Pusher" tales that Universal has issued, and Director Harry A. Pollard puts Reginald Denny and his sparring partner through as severe a fight as the series has contained thus far. Incidentally the story brings father and son together again, and the young man learns that "dad" knew all along he had entered the ring. Elmor Field and Melbourne MacDowell appear opposite Denny.

OUT OF PLACE

(FOX)

Al St. John's latest consists principally of antics around a mud-hole, not a new idea, but one out of which the agile Al gets a few laughs. His carrying of an immense packing case on his back while riding his trusty bicycle, is another bit that is quite funny, especially when it is found the box contains a full grown horse.
With the Procession in Los Angeles

By Harry Hammond Beall

SAMUEL VAN RONKLE of New York, is here to enter the film-producing field at Universal City with a series of executive-depicting the romantic happenings and mishaps of the comic strip family in which Andy Gump, chinless wonder, is the paternal figure.

MILDRED HARRIS, the former wife of Charles Chaplin, is to return to motion pictures. Miss Harris has been signed by Graf Productions to enact the leading feminine role in "The Frog," which they are to produce for Metro release. Paul Powell will direct.

Registration of actors for Erich von Stroheim's "Fatty" production of "McTeague," the novel of San Francisco's life by Frank Norris, has begun here. The principals will be engaged in Los Angeles, but hundreds of San Francisco and Oakland people will be used.

Eventually all arts and businesses will join the movies or rather their representatives come, realizing perhaps, the superior attraction of the picture profession financially. The latest outside recruit to fill an executive position picture position is J. Rousnassville, well known local automobile dealer who has associated himself indifferently with Fred Caldwell in the managing of Fred Caldwell productions, a series of Hollywood stories being filmed at the Fine Arts Studios.

ARE WARNER arrived this week from New York.

Hollywood civic pride can't be downed. It became known that Henry MacRae, veteran director and producer, who is heading a cinema expedition to the Far East to film customs and traditions of the oriental peoples, will have his automobile, camera cases, etc., inscribed with Japanese, Chinese, South American and African phrases, announcing the fact that his outfit hails from Hollywood, and extolling the industrial and natural merits of the Southern California community.

NEWLY ELECTED officers of the Motion Picture Directors' Association are to be given their installation as the annual ball of that organization at the Hotel Alexandria on February 15. Officers just chosen for the coming year are: Fred Nino, director (corresponding to president); Rowland V. Lee, assistant director; Jack Ford, technical director; Philip E. Rosen, secretary; Norval MacGregor, treasurer.

Trustees elected were King Vidor, William Worthington, Joseph De Grasse. Howard Mitchell was elected Inner Guard, and Duke Worne, Outer Guard.

Sanford Productions have shot the final scenes in their late "Pete Morrison" feature titled "Making Good." These scenes were taken at the "Tournament of Roses" at Pasadena, and the football game between Pennsylvania and the University of Southern California.

TAMAR LANE, who came to California a year ago with the Selznick forces as West Coast publicity director, has decided to permanently locate in Los Angeles, and with that end in view is leaving the Selznick organization to establish his own publicity offices.

Though young in years, Lane is one of the oldest members of the house of Selznick, and left the post of dramatic editor of the Boston Evening Record to join the company. He was also prominent in Massachusetts as an exhibitor.

JAY CHAPMAN is the new publicity director for Palmer Photoplay Corporation.

Following the receipt of its copyright registration in play form, Charles Chaplin has announced that the title of his first serious motion picture production will be "Public Opinion." The production which is already well under way, and which has temporarily been called "Destiny," will be in ten reels, and though written and directed by Chaplin himself, will star Edna Purviance in the leading role and will be released through United Artists.

SYNNIE FRANKLIN, who has just finished directing the Warner Brothers classic of the screen, "Brass," has been signed for a number of years to produce for the Warner organization.

JESSE D. HAMPTON has announced his plans for the product of a series of Rex Beach stories. He has acquired the rights to all of the author's works and will pre-

1923 to Be Banner Year, Says Grainger

Goldwyn Official Arrives on Coast After Survey of Country

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 14.—Radiating optimism from every pore, James R. Grainger, vice-president and general manager of Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, is here conferring with officials at the Goldwyn plant. His optimism for the film industry is the result of six weeks' intensive investigation made during a tour of all the key cities with the exception of the Pacific Northwest. Since December 1 a decided upward trend in business has been noted, he believes.

"Productions are the thing," says Mr. Grainger. "It is no longer the question of who's in a photoplay, but if it is a strong production. This is the way Goldwyn sizes up the situation and it is to be a year of productions at our Culver City studios. "I have never seen exhibitors manifesting such a bullish spirit and I look for 1923 to be a banner year for the industry, for producer, distributor and exhibitor. Goldwyn's plans for 1923 have already been announced and there will be no cut-throat, but likely expansion to meet the exhibitors' demands for big productions."

A. F. Breeglintz, vice-president and general manager of Consolidated Theaters Company, serving several of the bigger Indiana cities with an annual buying power of $2,000,000 and a big user of Goldwyn productions, is to join Grainger here and the two will proceed on a tour of the San Francisco, Seattle and Portland exchanges before returning East.
Production Progress

Distinctive Pictures:

All scenes have been shot for "Backbone" and the picture is now being edited at the new Distinctive studios in the Bronx—formerly the Biograph plant. Edward Soman directed the picture which has Alfred Lunt and Edith Roberts in the leads.

Harmon Weight is getting under way with "The Ragged Edge," the Harold MacCrack novel which will, be the second publication on Arthur Friend's big schedule for 1923. This is also being made at the Biograph studios. The structure will come entirely into the possession of Distinctive as soon as the independent companies now using other stages have completed their shooting.

Plans Are Progressing rapidly for another series of productions to be made by C. C. Burr, president of Mastodon Films. The first series of "big six productions" will be completed with the distribution of "You Are Guilty." There will be eight or more pictures in the next series, and the first of these is practically ready for production. Mr. Burr plans also to enlarge his short subject department, with the All Star comedies being produced for distribution through W. W. Hodgekiss Corporation at the rate of two a month. There is a possibility that in the new series there will be three of the Johnny Hines feature comedies which have met with approval throughout the country.

Independent Pictures:

Jesse J. Goldburg, president of Independent Pictures Corporation, is making arrangements for the first production to be published by that organization.

In addition to this, Premium Picture Corporation is engaging players for features which Mr. Goldburg's concern will distribute.

Weber & North:

Conferences with distributors will be held by Sam Sax, sales manager for Weber & North, during his trip through the Southwest. He has worked out an effective selling campaign on Will Night's "Notoriety," and will discuss this with the state right men distributing the picture.

Goldwyn:

James P. Grainger, on his swing around the exchanges, aimed in closing for many first run showings of "The Christian," which among other places will show at Balaban & Katz Chicago theatre, Chicago; Capitol, Cincinnati; B. F. Keith house, Providence; Strand, Dayton; Southern, Columbus; Broadway-Strand, Detroit; State, Pittsburgh; Rialto, Washington, and Capitol, New York.

Blair Coan:

An interesting expose of how photographs of the dead are made in their spirit form is promised as one of the unusual incidents in the Blair Coan production, "The Little Girl Next Door" produced in Chicago which is now in process of editing. The incident is a part of the story and the exposure a natural portion of the solution of this love and mystery drama. Andre Barlatier, photographer expert, was especially engaged by Mr. Coan because of his knowledge of methods of achieving this result of similarity in the features of dead in spirit form. Mr. Barlatier is said to be responsible for some of the photographs presented by Sir Conan Doyle in connection with his work on spiritualism.

Personnel Changes:

George W. Hinton has resigned from the Kansas City Paramount sales force to become branch manager of the Hodkinson office there. He formerly was manager for Associated Producers.

A. J. Simmons and O. W. Whitaker have been added to the Associated Exhibitors sales staff at Kansas City. They will be under the direction of Dan Martin and will cover the Kansas territory.

State Right Sales:

Sam Sax, sales manager for Weber & North, has sold the Will Nigh special, "Notoriety," to Lou Berman, head of Independent Film Exchange, Philadelphia, for the territory comprising Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia. Eighty per cent of the country has been sold.

Christie:

February Comedies of Christie to be issued through Educational exchanges include "Second Childhood" and "A Hula Honeymoon." The latter was made in Honolulu and features Henry Murdock and Babe London. Bobby Vernon stars in "Second Childhood."

To Christie goes the distinction of providing the first comedy for Grauman's new Metropolitan theatre. "In Dutch" played there the second week, there being no comedy on the program for the first week.

Jimmie Adams is the latest comedian to be engaged by Christie. He will be featured in "Green as Grass" to be issued in March, which Scott Sidney is making. Adams has been featuring in Mermaid comedies.

Warner Brothers:

A BIG NATIONAL advertising campaign, which Warner Brothers state will involve the expenditure of $3,000,000, will be launched on the coming series of eight feature productions. A per advertising, a national billboard campaign and space in leading national fiction and fan magazines is scheduled. The purpose of the magazine advertising is not only to imbue the names of the Warner classics in the public mind but to have the company's trade mark "classics of the screen" definitely identified with Warner Brothers.

HOUSE RECORDS were broken by "Rags to Riches" at the Ritz theatre, Detroit, according to word received here, Warner Brothers from Manager Charles Komer. A similar situation is reported by Charles Goldsby, manager of the Wiz-ard theatre, Baltimore, Md., on "The Beautiful and Damned." + + +

"BRASS," the Harry Rapi production of four Book Adams, has been completed and a print received by Warner offices in the East. This feature is from Charles G. Norris' novel.

CAMEO THEATRE, New York City, has booked the Hodkinson production "Down to the Sea in Ships" for an indefinite run starting February 18. This will be the premiere showing of this picture of whaling days in New York.

HANFORD MACNIDER, past commander of the American Legion, and William P. O'Connor, national chaplain, recently viewed the "Ex-Kaiser in Exile" and enthusiastically approved the two reel production of Hodkinson reports.

MUCH PUBLICITY is being accorded the Hodkinson-Literary Digest "Fun from the Press" film paragraphs. Not only are approximately 15,000 of the magazine's canvassers boosting these mirth provokers but 25,000 street cars are carrying cards and 600 newspapers throughout the country advertisements on them.

F. B. O.

PRECEDED BY COMPREHENSIVE publicity. "The Third Alarm," according to F. B. O., duplicated the success of its New York premiere when it opened at Grauman's Million Dollar theatre in Los Angeles. This is said to be the first time that an independently produced and distributed picture has played at the Grauman house. Fire Chief Scott assisted in putting the picture over, having granted permission to place three sheet cutouts in front of forty odd fire houses. Also, one man from his department was detailed to devote his entire time to assisting F. B. O. exploitation men. A three horse fire engine, manned by two firemen, was used as a street ballyhoo.

Gene Sarazen, champion golfer, Jock Hutchison, a former title holder, and Bob Edgren, noted sport writer and cartoonist, appear in a number of scenes in one of the rounds of the H. C. Wittner "Fighting Blood" series. + + +

TWO STORIES, Wyndham Martyn's "The Man from the Desert," and Eugene Manlove Rhodes' "Lubly Ge-Ge," will be combined as the next vehicle for Harry Carey.

Louis B. Mayer

ALVIN WYKOFF has been signed by Louis B. Mayer to take charge of photography on the Fred Niblo productions for Metro. Wykoff formerly was with the Cecil B. DeMille forces.

J. ROBERT RUBIN, treasurer and legal counsel for Louis B. Mayer, has returned East from important conferences on the Coast with Mr. Mayer. Several announcements of interest are expected to be made shortly.

WHY MEN LEAVE HOME, the Avery Hopwood play, has been purchased by Mayer for John M. Stahl's next production.

Fox

NEW PRINTS, POSTERS and accessories have been prepared by Fox on these specialties: "Evangeline," "A Tale of Two Cities," "Les Miserables," "Ali Baba & The Forty Thieves," "Treasure Island," "The Babes in the Wood," "Jack and the Beanstalk," "If I Were King" and "Madame X." The "Wonderful Limp." This has been done, states Fox, because of the growing demand by exhibitors, educational institutions and civic and social organizations for the list of these subjects. Here is an illustration of the possibilities of "Longer Exhibition Life." + + +

FOX ANNOUNCES "Does It Pay?" with Hope Hampton for publication on March 1. This picture tells the story of the irresponsible and disastrous situation which has crept into the homes of many of America's prominent families.

SIXTEEN PAGE exploitation book complete with useful suggestions; twelve page press book containing unusual features, a 24 sheet, a 6 sheet, 3 sheet pictorial posters, two styles of heralds, a four page folder in color, lobby cards, slides and the like are among the advertising and exploitation aids prepared for "Does It Pay?" which will be published on February 25.

Burr Nickle

FIVE PRODUCTIONS have been completed by Burr Nickle and Mr. Nickle has left the West Coast carrying prints of each. Trade showing will be held in Chicago and New York. The pictures include "Sunken Rocks" from E. Temple Thurston's story, "Tansy" from the novel by Ticker Edwards, "Bargains" from the stage play by Edward Irving and the first of the new two-reel series "People and Things" called "With the Sea Elephant: Expedition" and "Rambling Through Old Japan."

Playgoers

PLAYGOERS' February 23 publication, "Supreme Passion," a dramatic, historical, romantic, and screen novel, has been selected by the Motion Picture World for their annual film of the year feature for 1923. The question is: "Will Dink Deacon, the new juvenile in his current First National picture, "The Pilgrim," be the next Big New Star?" Production Progress has received a flood of letters from musical dealers all over the country asking for tie-ups with the feature. There are great possibilities.

SPECIAL PRODUCTIONS with several well known players in the cast, will tend to stabilize the motion picture industry, in the opinion of Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, who is on the Coast supervising filming of No. 2 in the list of twelve specials. The first was "The Ninety and Nine." The second is "The Little Mermaid" and has in its cast: Earl Williams, Cullen Landis, Wanda Hawley and Alice Calhoun.

UNIQUE AND ATTRACTIVE posters, the work of J. Norman Lynd, well known cartoonist, are being issued by Vitagraph on the new Larry Semon comedy, "No Wedding Bells."

SOME OF THE BIG houses which have booked the Lichtman-Preferred picture, "The Hero," are: Finkestein & Rubens' Strand at Minneapolis, Lyric at Duluth and Astor at St. Paul; Granada at San Francisco; Capitol at Houston, Tex.; Temple at Toledo, Rowland & Clarke's Blackstone at Pittsburgh, and the Bijou and Capitol at Atlantic City.

RUTH CLIFFORD has replaced Harriet Hammond in the cast of Tom Forman's production, "April Showers," owing to the illness of Miss Hammond. Eve Unsell has finished editing "The Girl Who Came Back," which will be published by Lichtman in the spring. Miriam Cooper, Gaston Glass, Kenneth Harlan, Joseph Bowing and ZaSu Pitts are in the cast.

METRO COMES to bat this month with four publications. The first, "Crinoline and Romance," starring Viola Dana, was issued on February 5. May Murray's new production "Jazzmania," which Robert Z. Leonard is presenting, was published on February 12. "The Famous Mrs. Fair," Fred Niblo's production of the successful stage play, will follow. And C. V. Clancy and Clara Young's latest, "The Woman of Bronze," completes the schedule with publication set for February 26.

"JAZZMANIA!" That title should suggest valuable tie-ups to exhibitors playing the picture. Metro announces that it

THE SOUTH WILL BE well represented in the exteriors of D. W. Griffith's new production, "The White Rose." The producer has selected forty-seven locations in five Southern states and with his company is touring Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and Florida. Mae Marsh, Ivor Novello, Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton. Porter Strong.

Associated Exhibitors:

LEAH BAIRD'S first of three specials for 1923 is "A Democracy's Failure," which will be published on March 18. The story by Dorian Neve concerns a woman who obtains a divorce in Reno but regrets her action when the husband and the man who fascinated her are shown to her in vivid contrast. Wallace Worsley directed.

DOUGLAS MacLEAN and who have witnessed shooting of some of the scenes for "Going Up," declare that it will be one of the biggest things the star has done. Lloyd Ingraham is directing MacLean in this screen version of the popular musical comedy which will be the star's first for "A. E."

Lucille LaVerne, Joseph Burke and Charles Mack are working in Florida. The picture will tell one phase of life in the South.

THE BOX OFFICE REPORT issued by United Artists on the four weeks runs of Nazimova's "Souls" at the Criterion theatre, New York, gives $38,133.50 as the total gross receipts. The company points out that the capital business possible, owing to the size of the house, would have totalled only $34,472.

Billy Engle, well known comedian, has been added to the Century comedy forces. He appears in the first two March publications. His next picture will be "A School for Dumb Bells."

YOu Exhibitors who plan presentation of "The Message of Emile Coue," must not overlook the widespread publicity which has been accorded the French disciple of autosuggestion. E. W. Hammons, president of Educational, which is handling the short subject special, places a million dollar value on the advance publicity. And we don't believe he has overestimated it. Educational, to further promote the picture, will conduct a comprehensive exploitation campaign.

AFLOw OF ADVANCE bookings have been received by Educational on "The Message of Emile Coue," the home office reports. Within a few days after the initial announcement that Educational would handle the picture, most of the key cities had been closed for first runs. The distributing company says it believes that it has established an Educational record in booking a short subject attraction. When the picture plays four Kunisky houses in Detroit it will be supplemented by Christie comedy, a Hamilton comedy and KinoRegards.

THE GUMP FAMILY—Andy, Min and Chester—are coming to the screen again, but not in cartoon form. Samuel Van Damm, producer, is now at Universal City to engage a human counterpart for the figures made famous in the Sid Smith cartoons, published daily in the Chicago Tribune and other papers of the country. These two reel comedies will be distributed by Universal.
L. Jones of Malad City, Idaho, has taken over the Malad City Opera House and has renamed it the Strand.

Good business is reported by J. Morton, owner of the Overland theatre, Nebraska City, Neb., since opening the house after its remodeling.

Lehr Brothers have purchased the interest of Morris Reichman in the Palace theatre, St. Louis, Mo. Their string now includes the Strand, New Broadway, Peerless, Yale and Palace theatres.

Olin L. Hawk, formerly with the Motion Picture Supply Company, has been named manager of the Strand theatre, Mechanicville, N. Y. He succeeds J. E. Fitzgerald, who has been transferred to the newly Strand at Hudson Falls.

J. D. Pfraggaist opened his new Liberty theatre at Kelso, Wash., last month to good business.

Recently noted along St. Louis’ film row were the following visitors: C. E. Brady, Broadway theatre, Cape Girardeau, Mo., and Theo. C. Davis, of Missouri, Mo.

W. N. Haines of Los Angeles has been engaged as the organist at the Monarch theatre, Porterville, Cal., of which C. C. Howell is manager.

William Mueller of Jefferson City, Mo., opened his new theatre, said to have cost $125,000, on February 1. “The Old Homestead” was the initial attraction.

Edward R. Crawford, former manager of the Lincoln theatre, at Troy, N. Y., has been selected as house manager of the Strand theatre which will be opened by Strand Operating Company on February 22. Uly Hill, managing director of the Strand, Albany, will undoubtedly look after both houses.

H. Roy Huggins has taken over the Southern Illinois territory for Vitagraph. He succeeds Harry Pettner, who is to sell short subjects in the northern part of the state for Pathé.

J. B. Hunter, manager of the Regent theatre, Charlotte, Mich., is planning to sell his theatre. He is figuring on acting as business manager for Baby Dodo, the six year old girl with a remarkable memory.

Word comes from Oklahoma City, Okla., that Jack Peyton is doing a dandy business with his new picture machine repair shop. In addition to this Peyton is handling a line of outfitting.

J. C. Hewitt, Strand theatre, Robinson, Ill., is back on the job after being laid up with one of those colds which are so popular now days.

The stork was a visitor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Phil Cohn, of the Lyric theatre, East St. Louis, Ill., and left a nice baby boy.

Charles Rose, who has been handling two houses owned by Myer Schine in Oneonta, N. Y., has been transferred to Oswego, N. Y., and handles four theatres owned by Mr. Schine.

American Releasing:

THE OTHER SIDE, a domestic drama of “spiritual unfoldment,” is now in production on the Coast for distribution by American Releasing Co. Hugh Dierker is producing the picture with Pat O’Malley, Frizzi Brunette, David Butler, Harmon McGregory, C. A. Hughes and Myer Schine. Herbert Standing, Edward Kimball and Helen Lynch in the cast.

DOES THE PUBLIC want original screen stories or novels? American Releasing holds that the novel is steadily intruding itself in the favor of both the producer and the public. In this respect American compact, fortunate for it is sponsoring a number of pictures based on novels by literary notables. For instance, “Seraphim of the Blue Chaps” and “The Prince and the Pauper,” by Mark Twain; “Timothy’s Quest,” by Kate Douglas Wiggins; “Mildred,” a continuation of “The Three Musketeers”; “His Wife’s Husband,” “Sisters,” by Kathleen Norris, and others.

Cosmopolitan:

THIRTY-TWO THEATRES in Chicago played “When Knighthood Was in Flower” starring Marion Davies and James Cagney, simultaneously. It was necessary to call upon New York in order to provide sufficient prints for the houses.

FREDERICK AND FANNIE Hatton, playwrights, are making the screen adaptation of “Cain and Mabel” which will be produced by Cosmopolitan. This is an H. G. Wells story. An all star cast will be used.

THE REAL MONTE CARLO, not a studio reproduction, is seen in “The Emancipation of Women,” the Vicenta Blasco Ibanez story which Cosmopolitan has produced with Lionel Barrymore, Alma Rubens, Hugh Herbert and others.

To get these scenes the entire company was taken abroad. Alan Crosland directed the piece.

Pathe:

THE STANLEY COMPANY of Philadelphia has for the first time, according to Pathe, run the same bill day and date at two of its theatres, the Coliseum and the Pennsylvania Theatre. The two pictures were Harold Lloyd’s “Dr. Jack” and “Fruits of Faith,” and the theatre the Coliseum and the Victoria. Here’s interesting news for those who have, or will book “Dr. Jack.” “It broke the house record during its run at the new theatre, Back Bay.

Thanks to Mr. Adams

The Public Rights League is indebted to Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich., for the excellent screen message published this week. We hope that other theatre men will contribute to this valuable service.

The Monache Program—

How may an exhibitor in one state be of service to a brother exhibitor in another state in fighting the reform element?

Here's the answer: The Empress theatre, Fremont, Neb., forwarded to the Public Rights League an editorial from the Evening Tribune of that city. In the January 27 issue of the Herald, the editorial, a strong indictment of hypocrites, was published in this department, and carried to theatre owners in every state. On our desk is a copy of a program published by the Monache theatre, Porterville, Cal. Virtually the entire second page is devoted to a reprint of the Tribune editorial.

That instance illustrates how a Nebraska exhibitor served a theatre owner in California, and, perhaps, theatre owners in other sections of the country. You likewise may aid your brother exhibitors by contributing to this department.

The Public Rights League is grateful to the Empress management for its interest in forwarding the editorial. This department wishes to congratulate the Monache management for its farsightedness in publishing a program which is being devoted so effectively as a medium for combating those who would retard the progress of the industry.

The Monache theatre is making judicial use of its program. Are you?

Wrote Mr. Charles:

Editor, EXHIBITOR'S HERALD,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sir:

I have just read your editorial in regard to the comment of Douglas Fairbanks on the activities of Mr. Hays. I thoroughly agree with Mr. Fairbanks and I think the public in general has the same opinion as to what the producers expect of him.

I do not believe the moving picture industry will be able to escape the bitter criticism that is being given to it by the people of this country until producers, exhibitors and publishers of trade papers stop opposing a reasonable censorship program and its opposition to Sunday closing.

In Wisconsin the barbers association are opposed to barber shops being open on Sunday because it hurts their business. The moving picture industry favors doing business on Sunday because it helps their business. It seems that neither has any regard for the real meaning and intent of the Sabbath. This may sound rather old fashioned to you but I do not see how anyone can defend you when you openly encourage violations of the law in every state and every community where a Sunday closing law is enforced. Why don't you advocate the repeal of such laws and stop encouraging violations? I think every time you do that you ought to be punished and given a term in jail. That is rather strong language but that it just what you deserve.

Yours truly,
(Signed) L. P. Charles,
Grand Opera House,
Chetek, Wis.

Let's Hear from Others

We have written to Mr. Charles presenting the matter as we view it, and therefore will not devote much space at this time to further discussion. We do wish to make it clear, however, that at no time has the Herald encouraged violation of city, state or federal laws. This department was founded for the purpose of maintaining a free screen and to aid exhibitors in that movement. The Public Rights League urges repeal of coercive laws, but it also urges strict observance of those laws placed upon the statute books. This department believes that discriminatory laws are unfair and that exhibitors are within their rights when they test the validity of such laws. The Public Rights League will be pleased to publish further comments from exhibitors on this important question.

Screen Message No. 95

The dictionary says a censor is a fault-finder, one who censures or blames. That definition certainly fits like a bilster. Don't ask them what the good pictures are—they don't know. But they can tell you all about the doubtful ones for sixteen, you back. Here is the at- censurate(rather patent—the one who enjoys screen entertainment—that advocates censorship.

League Notes

James H. Cooper, manager of the Criterion theatre, Chetek, Wis., will co-operate with the Federation of Women's Clubs in a plan which will replace professionals on the Criterion stage with young local artists. These performances will be given for their services, the money to go into a scholarship fund for their education. There is food for thought in the Criterion plan. It is one means of crystallizing public sentiment.

* * *

Although Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle has announced his decision not to return to the screen, this comment by the Rev. J. W. Bagley, city censor at Camden, N. J., is worthy of publication:

"I am willing to take my chances of Heaven with Roscoe Arbuckle rather than with some ministers I have known. The fact that a man went wrong doesn't mean that he should be crushed forever. The minister is usually hyper-censorious, hyper-sensitive and hyper-critical in his relations to poor, struggling humanity. Arbuckle has been sinned against as well as sinning."

"Why not put the man out of business who would compel young women to park their corsets before they are allowed on public dance floors. We have a number of wooden men in our pulpits and if they ever sneeze they will fill their churches with sawdust."

From Mr. Adams:

Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich., has just forwarded to us a current issue of the Ingham County News which publishes a column and a half letter from Mr. Adams on the subject of censorship. The Mason exhibitor has given the reformers and the public something to think about. We only wish we could reprint the letter in full in this department, but space limitations make that impossible. We promise, however, that next week you will have an opportunity to read the pertinent facts he presents. Great Stuff, Mr. Adams.

How About Direct Buying?
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.—To the Editor: I am inclined to believe that if all the exchanges would do away with roadmen, it would mean quite a saving to the exchanges, as it would enable exhibitors to obtain films at a lower rental although I realize in a great many instances it is not anything to speak of regarding pictures, now becoming popular. How about the public? Remember, brothers, that "Jones pays the freight" and Jones is becoming disgusted more every day with the business. Look at the increase of stage attractions in the city houses. If the people have to pay about so much to see a screen production, they don't see it. They stay at home.—A. D. Branham, Jewel theatre, Hooker, Okla.

Admission Prices In Columbus
COLUMBUS, OHIO.—To the Editor: In the city of Columbus, there are seven first run theatres showing motion pictures. I will not try to relate the working conditions of the houses, but I will try to figure out why certain of these theatres cater to the better class of patrons and why they are not as far away as to the admission prices they charge.

The Majestic theatre, of which I speak first and which is managed by me, always tries to figure what the public want or rather what we think they want and the Majestic charges the following prices: Boys and girls 10 to 40 on the lower floor until 6 p.m., daily. Evenings, the prices are 40 cents in the balcony and 50 cents on the lower floor, war tax included. The theatre is a first class house and have reference to, sells all seats in the afternoon at 15 cents, including war tax, and 15 cents in the balcony and 25 cents on the lower floor in the evening.

Now I may be entirely mistaken but I think it is a crime to sell such pictures as the "Prisoner of Zenda," "Tillring Women," "The Kid," "Grandma's Boy," "Dr. Jack," "Smilin Through," "The Eternity Plan," "One Day As a Vase of "Oliver Twist," "East Is West," "The Old Homestead," and many others at 15 cents and 25 cents in the afternoon and 15 cents and 30 cents at night. Why any of us were to go into a soda fountain and purchase an ice cream soda, it costs from 15 to 25 cents. Why can't we house first run pictures giving anywhere from one and one-half hours to two hours entertainment in a theatre that is worth 40 or 50 cents and in many cases even more. I say that you are underselling your merchandise which but hoy day a picture house calls film and that these houses do not appreciate it one bit. When you have a poor picture on your screen for a week, you can tell by the way people pass in and out, and jammed your doors the week before when you had a good picture, are not there. The theatre is out of business.

It and always will be my policy in the face of such opposition to sell the public the pictures that play the Majestic at the price they ask and don't allow anybody tell you that the price keeps them away. It may keep a few away but when you hear it of a quicker than praise said for your theatre but experience has taught us that the public will come back if you have got what they want and they not come into your theatre if your price was 10 cents and you did not have the kind of pictures they want or if they were to go next door and pay 40 or 50 cents if that house had the kind of pictures they desire to see. That is why I for one say that if you have what the public wants, get a fair price for what you have as when you do not have what they want to see, they will not be at the ticket box where you have it.

We have proven this time and time again at the Majestic. In spite of this so-called opposition and the hardest times by holding pictures two, three and in several instances four weeks and made the public pay the price that was claimed by the exchange brokers and say that they did not get their money's worth.

Mr. Exhibitor, I say, "Don't undersell your entertainment." The public does not appreciate. But don't oversell your entertainment, either. We have pictures running in the Majestic during the summer time (when our policy is different than during the season) the very same pictures that film companies were charging tremendous prices for and claimed they were specials, but our better judgment told us that, although the film company was under the impression they had a special that we could sell to the public at 40 or 50 cents during the season, we knew that such was not the case again, I say when you know you have the picture and there are plenty of them, take off at least 25 cents for the brokers that came after you, get the fair admission price and don't undersell your merchandise. You will get no thanks from anyone. You will get the public quicker than when the public is more discriminating than ever before. The attraction, I believe, means more to the theatre today than it did yesterday, and providing it is within reason.—Howard Frankel, Majestic theatre, Columbus, Ohio.

Exploitation Intoxication
VIRDEN, ILL.—To the Editor: My idea is to discourage the big picture idea, avoid over exploitation—it is not only impossible, it is only ridiculous. I say that you have to sleep off the next day. Encourage the idea that your business is a simple, good, standard entertainment every day. What would you think of an ice cream dealer who would spend a lot of money telling you that he was going to be the biggest ice cream dealer in the town? I am talking small town stuff.

Of course, I know little about running a small town show. The film peddlers admit it.—Rex theatre, Virden, Ill.

More Funny Experiences
SEAFORD, DEL.—To the Editor: After being continuously in the movie business since 1907 and one among the oldest in the business in small towns, if there is anything funny in the small town business, I have failed to see it. It seems to me to be just one old thing after another. New ones come in and drop out after a few months to open the way for some other one that knows all about the business. Last week the public was on the 33rd is now making the fight. It may be funny but I fail to grasp it that way.—J. N. Wright, Auditorium theatre, Seaford, Del.

CHICAGO, ILL.—To the Editor: I have had no funny experiences but I have had some idolates ones with exchange managers.—MAURICE CHOWNSKI, Newberry theatre, Chicago, Ill.

HALLS, TENN.—To the Editor: I have not been in the business long enough to write, but really it's funny or disgusting to see how some people—good and bad—whatever and who really know nothing of the quality of a picture, criticize your show or cut you down and have you print a picture to show, although they have only heard one else say it was good.—L. BLEASINGAM, Halls theatre, Halls, Tenn.

Associated Exhibitors

Grandma’s Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—Without a question the best money maker released in years. I played it four days at advanced prices and held up better than any picture I have ever played. If petitioned all kind of a rental you will make money.—D. Filizola, Empress theatre, Fort Scott, Kan.—General patronage.

Grandma’s Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—If there was anybody that didn’t like this they must have left by the rear exit, for all those coming in House front way told me how they enjoyed it. In my case at least it was a good buy.—Harry Hayes, Dawn theatre, Hillsdale, Mich.

Grandma’s Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—A good picture that should please everyone, and rental too high.—Grafton Nutre, Royal theatre, Republic, Kan.—Neighborhood patronage.

F. B. O.

Captain Fly-By-Night, with Johnny Walker.—A melodrama after the order of a number of the Fairbanks features. It is a good program offering if your patrons like melodrama. Fast moving with lots of adventure.—Tom Foster, Star theatre, Stanley, Wis.—General patronage.

Boy Crazy, with Doris May.—Just a good clean program picture with a faint strain of comedy.—H. Peterson, Colonial theatre, Radford, Va.—Small town patronage.

Boy Wazoo, with Doris May.—Fair little flapper picture with nice photography and cute little star. Put something strong with it.—S. M. Southworth, American theatre, Canton, N. Y.—Neighborhood and College patronage.

Good Men and True, with Harry Carey.—Best of the last four Carneys in story and setting. Yola Vale, in support, also made good impression. Picture pleased and drew against strong competition of all kinds of athletic and show “doings.”—P. G. Este, Fad theatre, brookings, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Good Men and True, with Harry Carey.—Fair program picture. Carey has no drawing power here.—H. C. Douglas, Sherrard, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Good Men and True, with Harry Carey.—A good Western that will certainly please the patrons. The first part towards the end it makes up for this weakness. If you play Westerns, get this one.—Mr. Eklon, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—Good very good and many good comments. One on, does the theatre good. Boost it to the limit. All will be satisfied.—W. F. Loibl, Chimes theatre, Cedarburg, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—A good clean picture with an unusual amount of human interest. Pleased at least 80 per cent. A little sad for some, but we can stand a lot more of this caliber. Business good.—A. V. Stewart, Majestic theatre, Paris, Ill.—General patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—One of the best pictures I’ve ever played. Can picture two days to good business in spite of heavy snow storm and pleased all. Exhibitors will make no mistake in booking this splendid production.—P. O. Roby, Latonia theatre, Williamsburg, Iowa.—General patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—Gentlemen, here is a picture that you should run even if you only break even. We made a little on it, but we know it added much more than the profits to the prestige of our theatre. They rave about spectacular, awe-inspiring masterpieces, million-dollar sets, big stars and a lot of other stuff like that, but here is a story of simple folks, in the everyday life of such folks, and it is as far ahead of the average so-called special as a Packard is ahead of the old high-wheeled bicycle. The cast is perfect.

No better policeman could be found than Ralph Lewis. Claire McDowell was a perfect mother type. Johnnie Walker carries his part with a wholesome personality that is rare among screen artists. Ella Hall staged a perfect comeback after an absence of three years from the screen. We all remember her in the Universal serial of the long ago, The Master Key. She has lost none of her charm. And Emory Johnson, the older son, shines both as an actor and director of this picture. A master director, he added the little touches of humor at just the right time. Instead of titles that would detract rather than add, like the time-worn Dawn, he pictured it instead. His supreme artistry is shown in the sets, and in the beautiful ending of the picture. We can say without a doubt that In the Name of the Law is the best picture we have screened in our ten years of exhibition experience. It pleased 100 per cent. Book it and be happy.—R. B. Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kan.—General patronage.

The Foolish Age, with Doris May.—Fair program picture. Nothing to rave about.—H. C. Douglas, Sherrard Show Co., Sherrard, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Foolish Age, with Doris May.—A light comedy offering. Fair program merit and will amuse.—Tom Foster, Star theatre, Stanley, Wis.—General patronage.

The Snow Shoe Trail, with Jane Novak.—Fine picture, holds their interest. Good print.—E. C. Banting, New Lyndon theatre, Lyndonville, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

The Snow Shoe Trail, with Jane Novak.—A poor picture, no patron age. F. B. O. seems to want to help the exhibitor more than any other company.—P. O. Roby, Latonia theatre, Williamsburg, Iowa.—General patronage.

The Snow Shoe Trail, with Jane Novak.—A carking good program picture.—H. A. Larson, Majestic theatre, Oakland, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Queen of the Turf, with a special cast. —Brother exhibitors, this is a lemon and a rotten one at that. Last few minutes of last reel is fair, but the people won’t see it for the few who haven’t walked out will be asleep. Lay off it.—E. C. Reeves, Strand theatre, Cookeville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Queen of the Turf, with a special cast. —There was a chance to make a good picture of this one, but someone missed. A better cast would help some; as it is, it is about nothing.—Johnson Bros. Johnnie Grant theatre, Ripley, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Queen of the Turf, with a special cast. —Too much plot and not enough race. Plot too thin.—H. C. Douglas, Sherrard Show Co., Sherrard, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Sentiments

Allow me to endorse the article coming from Mr. Mason, in your February 16th edition in which he plays the outburst of poetry, if it can be called such.

The outlook has been pessimistic to a degree that tried to make a device in the result of “The Boot” only used as an excuse to get the stuff printed.

I evidently was too dull to take me other than what Social man that read out what I knew to the time we played them we had forgotten a half of the reports. For this gentleman’s enlightenment of how soon Tennessee exhibits pictures I am sending in a few reports on some pictures that we played a few months ago, some so-release of which, but then we are not so busy trying to write poetry as to forget our obligations to our patrons.

I do not wish to have it thought that I am lacking in appreciation for the report on “The Boot” any way its presentation, which it was presented, but I would have spent my time in writing of a youthful feature, not a slapstick comedy. I say the above to all the young men as I take it that poetry writing is a trade as well as exhibiting motion pictures. I feel that if the poetry writers can not make a living at their theatre we should be charitable enough to show them that their aid line. However, we wait for a chance in such matters as the benefactions of these modern Shakespeareans. We’re too busy to study deep stuff and therefore it is not read.

I have written the above hurriedly without a thought of it before now but it will probably voice my sentiments.

P. S. You have a wonderful paper piece. We all like it.

This picture is very tame indeed. Whoever said the flood scene in this picture was enough to turn one out the night before—Geo. C. Starkey, Opera House, Montour Falls, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Billy Jim, with Fred Stone—Fair Western—Darford—Hasn’t much drawing power—H. C. Douglas, Sherrard Opera House, Sherrard, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Good and Evil, with Lucy Doraine—This is indeed a good one and if you book it invite your patrons in. It will give them something to think about besides fried chicken and a dull wine. It is a show that is worth any one’s time—H. F. Sembler, Colonial theatre, Radford, Va.—Small town patronage.

First National

The Dangerous Age, a John M. Stahl production.—A wonderful feature. Played Sunday and Monday to good business—A. I. Latts, Royal theatre, Ashland, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Oliver Twist, with Jackie Coogan—This is one of the greatest pictures released in years, from a picture standpoint, but as a money maker it falls short. We played it three days at advanced prices and barely broke even, all because we paid too much for it. Buy it right and you will come out with it—D. Fillodo, Empress theatre, Fort Scott, Kan.—General patronage.

East Is West, with Constance Talbot.—Best picture Connie ever made. People that never raved about her in previous pictures cannot praise with due to that she was great in this. Folks that saw the stage play say the picture is even better and that’s a lot. Personally, I enjoyed the film a foot of it.—Hays, Down theatre, Hillsdale, Mich.

East Is West, with Constance Talbot.—Played two days. Picture well liked.—A. I. Latts, Neighborhood patron. Never a mistake. Used two full page ads and told them it was a Chink picture, but they came anyway.—C. L. McDonald, Majestic theatre, Jackson, Miss.

Sonny, with Richard Barthelmess.—Good picture. Barthelmess always good. Would have been better four years ago.—Chet Miller, U. S. A. theatre, Sidney, Neb.—General patronage.

The Light in the Dark, with Hope Hampton.—This is a nice clean picture. Not as good as some she has made, but the exhibition value of this picture will get by with it and it will please 75 per cent.—D. Filizola, Empress theatre, Fort Scott, Kan.—General patronage.

Skin Deep, a Thomas H. Ince production.—Inskin Legion on a membership campaign and I put out 18x24 cards all over the city connecting the two ideas, member one to another. Skin Deep. These cards were placed by the Legion and got good positions in all windows. The picture was fairly pleasant.—C. L. McDonald, Majestic theatre, Jackson, Miss.

Brawn of the North, with Strongheart.—Not as good as The Silent Call, but good featured picture. Will get by with it and it will please the better class pictures.—A. I. Latts, Royal theatre, Ashland, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Brawn of the North, with Strongheart.—A splendid western story. The dog is great. Hled everyone who saw it. Book it if possible.—H. C. Dewkell, Palace theatre, Iowa City, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Kindred of the Dust, with Miriam Cooper.—A very good picture. One that creates comment that is favorable for it. Played three weeks on an average business at regular admission prices during this run.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.

The Masquerader, with Guy Bates Post.—An offering that is high class in every way, acting, story and production up to expected standard, it had box office behind it. Although we were not over, before showing this subject we had seen same and got behind it with big advertising campaign and was rewarded by large and satisfied audiences during the run at advanced admission prices.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.

The Hottentot, a Thomas H. Ince production.—This is the greatest racing comedy feature we had for months. Book it with much optimism. Average business.—A. I. Latts, Royal theatre, Ashland, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hurricane’s Gal, with Dorothy Phillips.—Good picture that is not the greatest, but more than a lot of them do these days.—Chet Miller, U. S. A. theatre, Sidney, Neb.—General patronage.

Forwarding Fred Meyer Proposition

Fellow Exhibitors:

Here's a idea I threatened to show you in the Herald several weeks ago. I can get quite all the kicks out of it myself, so I'm going to let's all think it over, write the "Herald" any suggestions you have on it, and let's see what we can frame up.

It seems to me that this bunch of square shitters that have to support pictures to each other ought to get to know each other better. I'm sure it's a good idea good idea of what each other is like through reports, pecs, etc. Would you like to think what we could do if we all got together once or twice a month and talked everything over on a table.

That's my idea.

I think we could agree on some date for all of us to take a little run into Chicago, which is the most centrally located city and would be most easily reached by everybody. We could all put up at the same hotel, agreed on in advance, and move onto the "Herald" office en masse, as 'twere, and there we could have a well-organized meeting. We could do the rest of whatever we wanted to do after we got there.

Now that's the outline. It's the details of the thing that seem to me to need talk- ing about, and that's what I suggest we all do—talk about it, think about it, write about it. Or do you think the idea is any good or if I'm all wrong?

What say?

Had nothing but kicks, which is seldom on this star's plays. Don't play it if they give it to you.—H. Powers, Strand theatre, Dunsmuir, Calif.—R. T. town patronage.

Gas, Oil, Water, with Charles Ray.—Probably the worst picture that we have ever shown with the exception of Intrigue. Business good, which makes it still worse for the house. Lay off this one if possible.—A. V. Stewart, Majestic theatre, Paris, Ill.—General patronage.

Molly O, with Mabel Normand.—Picture pleased fairly well.—W. H. Hardman, Royal theatre, Frankfort, Kan.—General patronage.

Two Minutes to Go, with Charles Ray.—One of the very few good pictures that we made for First National. An impossible print, though “every day in every way” their prints are getting poorer and poorer. (De Moulton to Fred Huind, Cresco theatre, Cresco, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Man, Woman, Marriage, with Dorothy Phillips.—This is one of the best pictures that I have played. Everyone spoke well of this one. I always play the pictures with the good clean moral and a lesson to all on Sunday.—H. G. Schmidt, Palace theatre, Long Pine, Neb.—General patronage.

Good References, with Constance Talmadge.—This picture will please any audience. Connie is sure there all the time in this one. Lots of comedy.—C. H. Simpson, Princess theatre, Millinocket, Me.—General patronage.

My Boy, with Jackie Coogan.—A knock-out. Lots of comments. No kicks. Patrons well pleased.—P. S. Nielsen, Rex theatre, La Mora, N. D.—Small town patronage.

One Full Valley, with Charles Ray.—Very good picture. Please well.—A. Larson, Majestic theatre, Oakland, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Steel Iron, with Charles Ray.—Told very well. Crowd acted as if they were actually at ring side watching a prize fight. Patrons well satisfied.—W. F. Laight, Cedarburg, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Leopard Woman, with Louise Glaum.—Good picture, but not nearly as good as Love with the same star.—H. Daspit, Atherton theatre, Kentwood, La.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Child Thou Gavest Me, with a special cast.—Fine picture, but did not draw for me. Paid too much for it.—J. W. Andresen, Rialto theatre, Cozad, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Song of Life, with a special cast.—Am not going to say it is a 50 per cent picture, as I did not stop everybody and ask them, but my own opinion is it's one picture that you have to hide from your patrons. It sure has the mother love appeal all right.—Bill Jones, Campbell's theatre, Spencer, Ind.

The Primitive Lover, with Constance Talmadge, Louis Frana, Olympic theatre, Calmar, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Cup of Life, a Thomas H. Ince production.—A splendid picture with an entirely different story. It pleased those that saw it, but failed to draw. If you can get them in it will most assuredly please.—W. F. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Her Social Value, with Katherine MacDonald.—Very good picture. Should please anywhere.—H. A. Larson, Majestic theatre, Oakland, Neb.—Small town patronage.

A Broken Doll, with Monte Blue.—A good picture. Although old, it pleased most of my people.—Grafton Nutter, Royal theatre, Republic, Kan.—Neighborhood patronage.

Stranger Than Fiction, with Katherine MacDonald.—This is a strange one all right. Nothing to first reel. Should cut out.—H. C. Douglass, Sherrard Opera House, Sherrard, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Kid, with Charlie Chaplin.—Who has been saying that specials have to be new to get the money? The Kid is the oldest picture this theatre has ever run and it shows in that a lot of people than any other picture this house has ever run. We didn't have to tell them it was old—they all knew it. We played to more people than Way Down East, Emilie Through, The Sheik, The Old Nest, Over the Hill, or any others—which we politely claim is going some—because every one of those named were not slouches when it comes to drawing power. We played The Kid and others when they were brand new. We played still others when they were quite old and we never could see that the brand new ones drew in key more business. Now, The Kid, the oldest one we ever played, beats them all. And the advertising was only the ordinary amount we use for pictures of this caliber—so the picture did it. The print?

Wecould not have received a better one if The Kid had been released yesterday.—Fred Hinds, Cresco theatre, Cresco, Iowa.—General patronage.

The Child Thou Gavest Me, with a special cast.—Another good one. It's a love story, but differently worked. Please my small audience.—Wm. Koons, Garden theatre, Vicksburg, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Silent Call, with Strongheart—Excellent. Everybody well pleased. Dog is a wonder. The boys praised and pleased 100 per cent.—R. C. Metcalf, Cosy theatre, Tyndall, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Fox

The Love Gambler, with John Gilbert.—This is a good program picture.—Geo. Hake, Lyric theatre, Belmont, Iowa.—Transit patronage.

The Love Gambler, with John Gilbert.—Good picture with Gilbert putting over a Western role in pretty fair shape. Cast of players in support looked well also.—P. G. Ewalt, Twin theatre, Rushville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Love Gambler and A California Romance, with John Gilbert.—John Gilbert bids fair to be one of my best drawing cards. These two pictures were suited admirably to a patronage that likes Western out-of-doors stories. There is plenty of action and considerable interest.—H. L. Fox, Tokio theatre, Morehouse, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Nero, with a special cast.—Very good picture. Patrons very well pleased, but had very few to please. Rotten business.—G. Strasser Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Nero, with a special cast.—The greatest spectacular picture ever made. A bigger and better picture than Queen of Sheba. Please almost everyone who saw it.—R. R. Callen, C. Dewkell, Pastime theatre, Iowa City, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Lights of New York, with a special cast.—Two separate stories with no connection with each other. The first one is a dream but must say that the director is to be complimented for the way he handled it. Instead of those endless yawning and awakening with one of those made-to-order smiles, it is in a very realistic manner and accomplishes amusingly amusing incidents follow. A good moral is brought out. The second is love story, pathetic in the start but with happy ending. All who spoke about the picture commended it.—H. L. Fox, Tokio theatre, Morehouse, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Boss of Camp 4, with Charles Jones.—Fine action picture. Please.—C. L. McDonald, Majestic theatre, Jackson, Miss.—General patronage.

A good house and pleased patrons. While

borhood patronage.

Moonshine Valley, with William Farmun.—Good for westerns, but no story for Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Moonshine Valley, with William Farmun.—Will please the Farnum fans. You know you love them all, no matter what you have.—Chet Miller, U. S. A. theatre, Sidney, Neb.—General patronage.

Moonshine Valley, with William Farmun.—Personally would class this as a good average picture and believe it will go over good where Farnum is popular.
However, it was a failure here. Only grossed rental.—J. C. Rowton, Orpheum theatre, Quinton, Okla.—Neighborhood
patronage.

Do and Dare, with Tom Mix.—Tom Mix pulls them into the theatre and all of his pictures are good.—Louis Frana, Olympic theatre, Calmar, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

My Friend the Devil, with a special cast.—Used as Christmas program. I believe it pleased most of my patrons, as I have heard no comments to the contrary on it and several complimented me on it. The picture is a little long and apparently is placed in places, but on the whole entertainment at the Farnum, L.
Fox, Tokio theatre, Morehouse, Mo.—
Neighborhood patronage.

Who Are My Parents? with a special cast.—The boys will like it, in the style
Monte Cristo, Nero and the others.
Wrong title on it. Two days to fair business.—Olen Reynolds, Pearl theatre, Hyter, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

The New Teacher, with Shirley Mason.
—Cute little picture. Even better than The Lights of New York! Ha, ha! The lights were the bunk.—E. E. Gailey, Crystal theatre, Wayne, Ncb.—General patronage.

The New Teacher, with Shirley Mason.
—A very pretty play put over as Shirley love story, however, pleases way up at the theatre. Earlville, Ill.—Neighborhood
patronage.

Monte Cristo, with a special cast.—
This is a high-class production of this great Dumas story. It is done well and done right. You know what kind of a story it is and if that type pleases, it is one of the best. The main objection is its length, two reels too long. It has to be raced to get in two shows and is not worth running but one show a night. It drew fairly satisfactory business.—Ben
L. Morris, Temple theatre, Belaire, Ohio.—
General patronage.

Trainin’, with Tom Mix.—Once a good Mix picture, but poor print spoiled the show. Fox has poor film always.—R. C.
Metzger, State theatre, Mount Vernon,
Ia.—Neighborhood patronage.

Trainin’, with Tom Mix.—About on the average, but it is not equal to one of which it has appeared.—Tom Foster, Star theatre, Stanley, Wis. General patronage.

Honor First, with John Gilbert.—Fair picture, but not as good as The Love
Gambler or A California Romance.—H.
L. Fox, Tokio theatre, Morehouse, Mo.—
Neighborhood patronage.

Silver Wings, with Mary Carr.—Good picture, but there have been too many other pictures released lately, I ran them all. Lost money on this one.

This Box Needs No Headline

You have never made any mention as to legality or lack of legal status of "Post Laureate." I am using my blank from this Herald—but am sure my reader would like to vote, since the last attempt of Mr. J. C. Jenkins (regarding the condition of the Policemen) was made by the Exhibitors and all the Operators.

We hope our patrons will desert us as we have enjoyed every bit of it, though not qualified to contribute any large amount. I feel the content has created more interest and brought all us Exhibitors into the limelight. The Exhibitors Herald lends more opportunity to Exhibitors to show their cooperative friendship and purely personal feelings, almost drawing us into the "Herald." In variably turn to "What the Picture Did for the Department" for mention on to other "personal" departmen t, "Letters from Exhibitors" and "Theatre Letters" and it is the one to decide which is the most valuable department of late.
"Money Making Ideas" or "What the Picture Did for Me." I file every number and read them closely. I feel this is the very first opportunity. I wouldn't be without the "Herald"—or be sure to let me know when it comes due, as I don't remember my first issue and naturally didn't start to filling till I learned what an asset they are to the small Exhibitor. I am so glad to see the interest is growing steadily increasing. I will not be a "darker" any longer and will give the "Herald" to the honest upstanding exhibitors and unto others as you would have them do unto you—and send in my reports hereafter.

The Semi-annual Box Office Record is more than an experiment, I think in reporting to give number of reels, and all running gross, to also mention most important stars, and also if "State Rights" to mention name of distributors would be a great help to all small Exhibitors. Another thing would be good, in the interests of the people as average program pictures and how much.
With his help and the help of every sta-and every subscriber and reader, and a wonderful success. I have no doubt you

Strange Idols, with Farnum.—Will get by as a program picture.—Tom Foster, Star theatre, Stanley, Wis.—General patronage.

Strange Idols, with Dustin Farnum.—
Farnum liked in Westerns, but this picture fell flat. The woman pictured on the three sheet with a ruffle around the middle helped ruin the box office receipts for us. Tell the producers to please dress the stars and leading ladies a little more as those who would like to have, their wives and sweethearts dressed.—O. B. Sterling,

A Rough Diamond, with Tom Mix.—
This is an A-1 picture. Mix always goes

The Strength of the Pines, with Willliam Russell.—Will get by and that is all.
This star has done better.—Tom Fox,
State theatre, Stanley, Wis.—Gen-beautiful.—Baskett, Idaho.—Russell

Sky High, with Tom Mix.—One of Mix' best pictures with some of the best mountains and canyon scenery I ever saw.—H.
Daspit, Atherton theatre, Kentwood, La.
—Neighborhood patronage.

Just Tony, with Tom Mix.—By far the best thing "Tony" ever did. Tom was just among those pictures where the scene was best, but whoever trained the horse should get the medal. Exceptional business both days with first change of Buffalo Bill.—
Fred Hinds, Cresco theatre, Cresco, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Just Tony, with Tom Mix.—Had a record house on this. On my heralds I gave a brief review of the story and had them distributed four days ahead of showing.

L. Hoy Fox, Tokio theatre, Morehouse,
Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Sell Made Man, with William Russell.—This is not as good as this star has made. If Fox would spend a little more money in stories and setting, Russell is capable of doing his part. It is just a fair program General.—B. Filzola, Empress theatre, Fort Scott, Kan.—General patronage.

The Last Trail, with a special cast.—
A good Zane Grey story by Dandy Western that pleased our people.—H. G. Stettmund, Odeon theatre, Chandler, Okla.—
General patronage.

The Last Trail, with a special cast.—
Good Zane Grey play. Well liked by everybody.—L. G. Beecher, New Lyndon theatre, New Lyndon, Ind.—General patronage.

The Ragged Heires, with Shirley nothing, but pleasing.—Tom Foster, Star theatre, Stanley, Wis.—General patronage.

Singing River, with William Russell.

New Ones I Have Seen

HEARTS AFLAME—Have seen this one and am anxious to run it. Wonderful fire and a clean up picture for the melodrama loving small towns.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS IN ROBIN HOOD—Truly remarkable film and will be fully repaid its investment. The old farm when rental price is mentioned to me. I enjoy Douglas Fairbanks even though I cannot afford to run them.

H. S. ROBBINS,
Robinson theatre, Grand Haven, Mich.

Goldwyn
Hearts Aflame, with a special cast.—A positive hit. Story, cast, wallup, everything that means success. Go after it. The accessories are not as good as they might be, but tell your people in your own words that here’s something real. More power to Reginald Barker.—Larry Hayes, Dawn theatre, Hillsdale, Mich.

Don’t Neglect Your Wife, with a special cast.—Personally I thought this so poor that I made it a point to have business elsewhere when the show was over.

The North Wind’s Malice, with a special cast.—This is a dandy picture. Please almost 100 per cent. The snow scenes in this one are excellent. Print on this was in No. 3 condition. J. G. Held, Sterling theatre, Farmont, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Road Called Straight, with a special cast.—This sure is good if it is old. Makes them like Westerns if they want to or not. Short subject, Harold Lloyd in Get Out and Get Under. It’s great.—Jack Snyder, Casino theatre, Rich mond, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

The Telephone Branding, with a special cast.—If you have not played this one book it. It will stand all the boosting you will put out and also will stand a raise in admission. A 100 per cent attraction and my patrons told me it was a fine show. Business just fair. Advertising 24 sheets, six and lobby. Patronage all classes.—A. Mitchell, Dixie theatre, Russellville, Ky.—General patronage.

The Branding Iron, with a special cast.—This picture will please all classes of people.—Louis Frana, Olympic theatre, Calmar, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

An Unwilling Hero, with Will Rogers.—If Will Rogers is as well liked everywhere as he is here, he must be threatened with a violent attack of popularity. We had only a small crowd and there had been lots of “doin’s” in town during the week, but those who came out enjoyed the show.—C. E. Hopkins, Hopkins theatre, Cotter, Ark.—Small town patronage.

Hold Your Horses, with Tom Moore.—This was very good. Please 100 per cent.—Louis Frana, Olympic theatre, Calmar, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Godless Men, with Russel Simpson.—A picture good enough for most any house. Photography up to average.—C. E. Liminger, Grand theatre, E. Palestine, Ohio.—General patronage.

Earthbound, with a special cast.—We booked this because we found comment to justify a grade of 80 per cent for it. Just before its arrival we read a lot more comments so unfavorable that we were prepared to crawl under the floor while our patrons departed. We were agreeably surprised. Several remarked, “Good show.” One lady said, “Good, but twenty-five cents.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

The Road Called Straight, with a special cast.—This sure is good if it is old. Makes them like Westerns if they want to or not. Short subject, Harold Lloyd in Get Out and Get Under. It’s great.—Jack Snyder, Casino theatre, Richmond, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

The Called Straight, with a special cast.—This picture will please all classes of people.—Louis Frana, Olympic theatre, Calmar, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

An Unwilling Hero, with Will Rogers.—If Will Rogers is as well liked everywhere as he is here, he must be threatened with a violent attack of popularity. We had only a small crowd and there had been lots of “doin’s” in town during the week, but those who came out enjoyed the show.—C. E. Hopkins, Hopkins theatre, Cotter, Ark.—Small town patronage.

Hold Your Horses, with Tom Moore.—This was very good. Please 100 per cent.—Louis Frana, Olympic theatre, Calmar, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Earthbound, with a special cast.—We booked this because we found comment to justify a grade of 80 per cent for it. Just before its arrival we read a lot more comments so unfavorable that we were prepared to crawl under the floor while our patrons departed. We were agreeably surprised. Several remarked, “Good show.” One lady said, “Good, but mighty deep." We call it a good show ourselves.—E. E. Hopkins, Hopkins theatre, Cotter, Ark.—Small town patronage.

Earthbound, with a special cast.—Out of the ordinary, but too slow and dramatic to please an audience that is looking for action.—H. Daspit, Atherton theatre, Kentwood, La.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hodkinson

The Headless Horseman, with Will Rogers.—My people liked this picture very much. Drew well from the schools. Rogers will make a hit in any town. I think the best plot I have seen in the Table Rock, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Rip Van Winkle, with Thomas Jefferson.—Very fine. Nothing better ever shown on screen. Now, you small town rulers who take a crack at this, don't say "Rotten," if you don't pack the house for "Rip" has the goods in this, the film is there, and if you lose it's not the fault of the film or W. H. H. That's sure.—Bill Jones, Campbell's theatre, Spencer, Ind.

Keeping Up With Lizzie, with Enid Bennett.—While it satisfied for most part, I didn't like it. Perhaps the story was drawn. Poor direction.—J. J. Kudlacke, Swan theatre, Swanton, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Dwelling Place of Light, with a special cast.—Pleased very few, but is much better for factory town than farming community. Small crowd, due to bad location. I think this picture is better for a big business, theatre, Ripley, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

The Mysterious Rider, with a special cast.—I can't call it a good picture, but I can't call it a bad picture either.—I. Kaplan, Excelsior, Midland, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Sage Brusher, with a special cast.—I read a great many favorable comments on this picture on "What the Picture Does For Me," but as for myself, I cannot call it a good picture.—Geo. C. Starky, Opera house, Montour Falls, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Riders of the Dawn, with a special cast.—Poorest business in months. Film in very poor condition. Failed to draw. Don't buy it unless you can buy all my reels were two-thirds full.—R. C. Metzger, Cosy theatre, Tyndall, S. D.—General patronage.

Lichtman

Rich Men's Wives, with a special cast.—This is the best picture that I have shown for some time. Will not make any mistake in booking this picture.—Louis Frana, Olympic theatre, Calmar, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Rich Men's Wives, with a special cast.—Good picture which can be classed as a special. Fair box office attraction.—L. V. Feldman, Parthenon theatre, Pipestone, Minn.—General patronage.

The Hero, with a special cast.—Poor program picture. Booked as a special two days, and took it off the second day.—A. L. Latts, Royal theatre, Ashland, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Shadows, with Lon Chaney.—Here is one of the best pictures I have ever run and I have been in the business for the past fourteen years, so have run quite a few in my time, but I don't pay too much for it as it is not the best as a money maker, but it will please 100 per cent if you can get them in.—D. Filizola, Empress theatre, Fort Scott, Kan.—General patronage.

Metro

Turn to the Right, a Rex Ingram production.—Rex Ingram is putting up as good a feature as any of them. This feature pleased my audience better than any comedy. Give us more like it. Every theatre should run this feature.—S. A. Berger, Star theatre, Jasper, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Turn to the Right, a Rex Ingram production.—Best picture I ever ran. Metro pictures are consistently good.—A. R. Bird, Opera House, Arlington, la.

Turn to the Right, a Rex Ingram production.—We were afraid that a couple of previous amateur attempts at the stage play locally would hurt this. It didn't. Played to exceptional business on New Year's day—also the next day.—Fred Hinds, Cresco theatre, Cresco, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Enter Madame, with Clara Kimball Young.—Star not very popular. However, her work was good. Story unusual. May draw if advertised well. Think they will like it if you can get them in.—A. V. Stewart, Majestic theatre, Paris, Ill.—General patronage.

The Hands of Nara, with Clara Kimball Young.—This is not the best of Clara Kimball Young, but not the worst. If you will get the Christian Science church behind this picture it will please and make you some money.—D. Filizola, Empress theatre, Fort Scott, Kan.—General patronage.

Trifling Women, a Rex Ingram production.—A real production in every way with work of the whole cast excellent, but story gruesome. Not a big drawing card with me.—S. M. Southworth, American theatre, Canton, N. Y.— Neighborhood patronage.

There Are No Villains, with Viola Dana.—As usual Miss Dana is very pleasing in this picture. I consider it a good program picture.—C. H. Simpson, Princess theatre, Millen, Ga.—General patronage.

The Idle Rich, with Bert Lytell.—Fair program offering. Satisfied majority.—F. E. Sahin, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Peacock Alley, with Mae Murray.—A picture that will please the ladies. An absorbing love story. It is neither immoral nor suggestive. Charged twenty and a half cents and had a good house.—H. L. Fox, Tokio theatre, Morehouse, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Peacock Alley, with Mae Murray.—Did not take in the price of the picture. A very good plot and the story itself does some very good acting, but title and the display of the priceless er—limits simply put to the bad. If you have a discriminating audience lay off this brothers.—O. B. Sterling, Sterling theatre, Dayton, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

changes that I have dealing with I think this will most assuredly please. Miss Lake not so popular here.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fourteen Lover, with Viola Dana.—About as nice a program picture we have ever run before. It's a comedy drama and if you run it, boost it. It will please.—H. A. Larson, Majestic theatre, Oakland, Neb.—Small town patronage.

They Like 'Em Rough, with Viola Dana.—Good entertaining comedy-drama, good print, good business.—W. H. Montgomery, Royal Theatre, Norborne, Mo.—Small town patronage.

They Like 'Em Rough, with Viola Dana.—Viola in a different role. Pretty fair picture.—Olen Reynolds, Pearl theatre, Hymera, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The Four Horsemen, a Rex Ingram production.—Very good. Of all the exchanges that I have dealing with I find Metro to be the fairest (Omaha World).—Geo. Hake, Lyric theatre, Belmont, la.—Transient patronage.

The Prisoner of Zenda, a Rex Ingram production.—Flopped to me and was not enjoyed by small town patronage. Paid too much for this one. Be careful.—H. E. Robbins, Robinhood theatre, Grand Haven, Mich.

Fright'n Mad, with William Desmond.—Three reels wasted, telling nothing at the start. Other three reels a rather novel Western. Will do, but that's all.—Fred Hinds, Cresco theatre, Cresco, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Conquering Power, a Rex Ingram production.—Fair, but no drawing power.—L. C. Tidball, Isis theatre, Ft. Worth, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Match Breaker, with Viola Dana.—Not much to do except to run this picture. Lost money on this one.—A. Stulder, Sooner theatre, Akron, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Four Horsemen, a Rex Ingram production.—Great. If you have not played it, get it. Will go better now than it went up.—S. W. Filson, Opera House, Scott City, Kan.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fourteen Lover, with Viola Dana.—Did good business on this one and pleased the fans.—P. E. Doe, Electric "Jailed and Bailed" is the one reel Hal Roach comedy scheduled for publication by Pathe on February 11. Paul Parrott and Jobyna Ralston are the featured players.

Paramount

After the Show, with Jack Holt.—A very good offering, but did not show drawing power.—Tom Foster, Star theatre. Stanky, Wis.—General patronage.

Just Around the Corner, a Cosmopolitan production.—Good picture, good business, and all were pleased.—E. E.
Doe, Elks Theatre. Wayne, Neb.—
General patronage.

Just Around the Corner, a Cosmopolitan production.—An excellent story, but clung to the top of the head. The paper, especially the one-sheet, is of the weepy sob stuff sort. Personally I think these special love, "poor working girl" themes are through as business getters.—J. H. Cooper, Amuuzu theatre, Scottville, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Over the Border, with Betty Compson.—
A Northern picture that is worth while and stars that will help pull the satisfied crowd who sees it. Snow scenes unsurpassed, and the characters will make you sit up and take notice.—E. C. Reeves, Stra Strand theatre, Cookeville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Over the Border, with Betty Compson.
—C. Ed. Wood story. Made special with two excellent stars and wonderful backgrounds. The paper is fine and draws well. You can boost it.—J. H.
Cooper, Amuuzu theatre, Scottville, Mich.
—Small town patronage.

The Crimson Challenge, with Dorothy Dalton.—This is a good Western picture, far above the usual mass. See it.—H. E.
Roberts theatre, Tonawanda, N. Y.—
Neighborhood patronage.

The Dictator, with Wallace Reid.—I went after this strong and was well repaid. Walter Long's comedy stuff is different. Sheer entertainment. Fine paper, 22x28 is a business getter. One sheet has two small cut out possibilities you should not miss.—J. H. Cooper, Amuuzu theatre, Scottville, Mich.—
Small town patronage.

Too Much Speed, with Wallace Reid.
—This picture drew me the biggest Saturday crowd this ever attended since I am in the business. Good auto race in this picture.—S. A. Berger, Star theatre, Jas-pier, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Helter Diggers, with Wallace Reid.—
Patrons liked it fine. Pack ed house to capacity in spite of steady downpour of rain all day and night.—A. E. Collins, little Hour theatre, Richmond, Ind.—
Neighborhood patronage.

The Helter Diggers, with Wallace Reid.
—A melodrama that will average up with the usual Reid attraction. Patrons begged for more after the show.—Star theatre, Stanley, Wis.—General
patronage.

Her Husband's Trademark, with Flor-ria Swanson.—Has all the elements that go to make a successful Saturday night picture. Gowns, a touch of Western, a dash of drama—action, a little romance,

The Green Temptation, with Betty
Compson.—Six reels. Good picture. Costs holds interest. Work of star good. Any theatre can get by with this one.—Walter H. Musson, Queen's theatre, Hesperer, Ont.—Small town patronage.

The Green Temptation, with Betty
Compson.—One that pleases everybody.
Better than a lot of the specials. All paper excellent. Will stand a raise in price. Work of star good.—J. H. Cooper, Amuuzu theatre, Scottville, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Ladies Must Live, with Betty Compson.
—A picture that will only please the average audience. Not a very good one.
If you can keep up with it, a little long drawn out.—J. E. Elkin, Elm theatre, Gardeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Back Pay, a Cosmopolitan production.
—Some show—way above the average.
Not a bad thing, and it is in a small town.—Wm. Koons, Garden theaatre, Vicksburg, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Back Pay, a Cosmopolitan production.
It pleased those that saw it, but failed to draw.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Abnerlen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Whistle, with William S. Hart.
—This is a good picture and would have been better if Hart had not made a fool of time when he was out on a construction job. Will please Hart fans.
S. A. Berger, Star theatre, Jasper, Ind.—
Neighborhood patronage.

The Whistle, with William S. Hart.
—Not the sort of picture they expect from Bill and they are disappointed. Below average production. Greatest waste of ink and stock. The one sheets must have been done with a broom.—J.

The Whistle, with William S. Hart.
—Expected our patrons would be disapp-tioned as Hart was off during shooting of the contrary it pleased all. Story the least bit disconnected.—H. G. Sweet, Royal theatre, Royal Center, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The Bronze Bell, with a special cast—
Amsherry, Carthage theatre, Carthage, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Exit the Vamp, with Ethel Clayton.—
Nothing but compliments from us in this picture. Personally, it's way above the average.—F. E. Sahin, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Exit the Vamp, with Ethel Clayton.
—Ethel Clayton always brings me extra business. Had a packed house on a Thursday night, which is only a rare occurrence.—S. A. Berger, Star theatre,
Jasper, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Exit the Vamp, with Ethel Clayton.
—Extra good program picture. Special Hollywood cast.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General
patronage.

The Hell Diggers, with Wallace Reid.—
Patrons liked it fine. Packed house to capacity in spite of steady downpour of rain all day and night.—A. E. Collins, little Hour theatre, Richmond, Ind.—
Neighborhood patronage.

The Hell Diggers, with Wallace Reid.
—A melodrama that will average up with the usual Reid attraction. Patrons begged for more after the show.—Star theatre, Stanley, Wis.—General
patronage.
Six reels of nothing. I can't understand why some exhibitors rated this as a good picture. The poorest Paramount picture I ever played. Admission ten and twenty-five cents in No. 1 shape.

P. G. Held, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Bronze Bell, with a special cast—Can't say much for this feature. Plot wonderfully mixed up and hard to follow. Some good acting, however.—H. G. Sweet, Royal theatre, Royal Center, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The Call of the North, with Jack Holt.—If I could get two hundred plays a year as good as this one, my success as a showman would be assured. Exquisite scenery. Made Bellamy very appealing. Jack Holt a real hero. Play is the story of Stewart Edward White's Conjuror, and they are sure closely. Everybody liked it. Book it.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

The Call of the North, with Jack Holt.—Very good Northern picture. Will please anywhere. Better than some specials.—R. C. Metzger, Cozy theatre, Tyn dall, Ill.—General patronage.

Humoresque, a Cosmopolitan production.—I have been running some of the older Paramounts and they are sure bringing out the people. You can buy these right, small town exhibitor, and get thousands of patrons in Humoresque alone.—A. K. Roth, Crystal theatre, Silver Creek, Neb.—Small town patronage.

The Ordeal, with Agnes Ayres.—Pleased about 75 per cent. Nothing to have back.—D. F. Wolfe, Princess theatre, Lansing, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Midsummer Madness, with a special cast.—This is a splendid picture. Don't be afraid to yell your head off on this one.—Geo. C. Starkey, Opera House, Montour Falls, N. Y.— Neighborhood patronage.

The Great Impersonation, with James Kirkwood.—Not up to Paramount standard. Pleased 75 per cent.—D. F. Wolfe, Princess theatre, Lansing, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Paying the Piper, with a special cast.—A good picture, but nothing wonderful. Will please most of the people here.—Starkey, Opera House, Montour Falls, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Beyond the Rocks, with Gloria Swanson.—Very ordinary picture. The two stars drew very well on the first night, but, oh boy, the second night was the smallest they have played for some time. Nothing in this picture warrants the rental they ask for it.—C. H. Powers, Star theatre, Dunsmuir, Calif.—R. R. town patronage.

Enchantment, with Marion Davies.—Very good. My patrons liked this one very much and did good business with it. All patrons well pleased.—A. S. Spradling, Opera House, Merna, Neb.—General patronage.

The Cradle, with Ethel Clayton.—Very good. Star well liked. Did good business. Outdoors as requested.—A. S. Carlos, Bijou theatre, Jeannerette, La.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Ghost in the Garret, with Dorothy Gish.—Pretty fair picture. Drew a few scattered "laffs." Could be improved 100 per cent if the film wasn't so dark. Poor business. Paramount never did mean anything to me and doesn't look like it ever will.—G. F. Rediske, Star theatre, Tayegate, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Rent Free, with Wallace Reid.—Rather amusing in spots, but on the whole I would say it is just a fair program picture.—J. H. Cooper, Amuzu theatre, Scottsville, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Conquest of Canaan, with Thomas Meighan.—Meighan is becoming a good drawing card for me. I had good business and will please.—S. A. Berger, Star theatre, Jasper, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Burglar Proof, with Bryant Washburn.—This is an old one we've been hanging out on, but we've got a good contract. But it did very well with Lloyd in Get Out and Get Under. With one half the population sick and the other half waiting on the sick ones, it's hard to tell what the drawing power of any picture is.—A. N. Miles, Eminecum theatre, Eminence, Ky.—General patronage.

Terror Island, with Houdini.—Excellent melodrama. Houdini is certainly there with the stunts. If the famous hand-cuff king is making an appearance in a neighboring city here is your chance to clean up. Advertise as pure melodrama.—H. F. Hillyer, Pastime theatre, Reserve, Kan.—Small town patronage.

The World's Champion, with Wallace Reid.—Good. Reid picture. Different from the star's previous ones. The boxing angle is all a joke.—R. C. Metzger, Cozy theatre, Tyn dall, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Scarlet Days, a D. W. Griffith production for the Bijou theatres.—Program picture. Old as the hills, but Griffith's master hand has made it interest holding and thrilling. Book it.—M. Hillyer, Pastime theatre, Reserve, Kan.—Small town patronage.

A Spanish Jade, with David Powell.—A lemon. Leave it alone boys.—Walter H. Messen, Queen's theatre, Hesperia, Ont.—Small town patronage.

Victory, with Jack Holt.—Very good story of the South Seas. Settings good and interesting plot.—M. Hillyer, Pastime theatre, Reserve, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Always Audacious, with Wallace Reid.—Pleased a small crowd. The weather too heavy to tell from one picture.—Johnston Bros., Johnsonian theatre, Ripley, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Huckleberry Finn, with Lewis Sargent.—Another old one, but strictly O. K. and an excellent box office attraction. Offers tie-ups with schools and clubs. It will please the majority, especially the kids.—M. Hillyer, Pastime theatre, Reserve, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Behold My Wife, with a special cast.—Excellent picture. A picture worthy of a showing in the best of theatres. Bound to please. Buy it and boost it.—R. C. Metzger, Cosy theatre, Tyn dall, S. D.—General patronage.

The Idol of the North, with Dorothy Dalton.—Compared by many to The Flame of the Yukon, which cannot justly be done. Far below the latter and a poor imitation.—R. C. Metzger, Cosy theatre, Tyn dall, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Three Word Brand, with William S. Hart.—Picture went over good. Many said it was the best Hart picture for a year. It has story, punch and scenery.—W. H. Hardman, Royal theatre, Frank fort, Kan.—General patronage.

Don't Tell Everything, with a special cast.—Pleased a big Christmas audience and another big one the next day. A good star combination. Very satisfactory offering.—Fred Hinds, Cresco theatre, Cresco, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Home Stretch, with Douglas McLean.—Ordinary program picture, Douglas McLean popular here and his pictures cost generally please.—H. G. Sweet, Royal theatre, Royal Center, Ind.—Small town patronage.

A Prince There Was, with Thomas Meighan.—Average Meighan picture doing average business.—R. C. Metzger, Cosy theatre, Tyn dall, S. D.—General patronage.

Expericence, with Richard Barthelmess.—This is a fair offering, but does not class up with the more recent efforts of this star.—Tom Foster, Star theatre, Sturgis, Wis.—General patronage.

The Law and the Woman, with Betty Compson.—Provided a good Saturday night show. Drew a little above the average for this time of year and pleased.—A. N. Miles, Eminecum theatre, Eminence, Ky.—General patronage.

Back Home and Broke, with Thomas Meighan.—Two days excellent business. Patrons raved over the Meighan picture. Many said it was worth a dollar. We sold it for 25 cents, however.—C. L. McDonald, Majestic theatre, Jackson, Miss.

Back Home and Broke, with Thomas Meighan.—One hundred per cent entertainment. Big business and highly pleased patrons.—Bruce Fowler, Indiana theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.—General patronage.

Singed Wings, with Bebe Daniels.—Didn’t exactly please this star’s following.—Chet Miller, U. S. A. theatre, Sidney, Neb.—General patronage.

Singed Wings, with Bebe Daniels.—This picture did a surprisingly good business three days and seemed to please. Some of the characters, particularly the clown, were most unpleasant and could have been changed, making a much better picture. Story well mounted and supporting cast excellent.—Ben. L. Noth, Temple theatre, Bellaire, Ohio.—General patronage.

The Pride of Palomar, a Cosmopolitan production.—This picture did well for us and would consider it a good drawing card for any house.—Dan Buss, Star theatre, Tonawanda, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Old Homestead, with Theodore Roberts.—I raised admission to ten and thirty cents on this. Did not get the patronage the picture deserved. It was not as high as I expected. Perhaps expected too much.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric theatre, Harrison, Ark.—Small town patronage.

The Old Homestead, with Theodore Roberts.—One of the sure fire pictures for a small town audience. Clean, humorous and the cyclone carries a real wallop. Chet Miller told me it would do.—Larry Hayes, Dawn theatre, Hillsdale, Mich.

Kick In, with a special cast.—Good business and patrons enjoyed picture very much. Unusual fine supporting cast and splendid direction.—Bruce Fowler, Indiana theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.—Good patronage.

While Satan Sleeps, with Jack Holt.—Patrons liked this fine. Excellent story Good business two days.—C. L. McDonald, Majestic theatre, Jackson, Miss.

While Satan Sleeps, with Jack Holt.—Very fine and pleased all patrons.—H. S. Robbins, Robinhood theatre, Grand Haven, Mich.

While Satan Sleeps, with Jack Holt.—Pleased and drew well. All seemed satisfied with picture.—S. M. Southworth, The American theatre, Canton, N. Y.—Neighborhood and college patronage.

The Impossible Mrs. Belieu, with Gloria Swanson.—Rather a hit according to our patrons.—C. L. McDonald, Majestic theatre, Jackson, Miss.

When Knighthood Was in Flower, with Marion Davies.—This is a great big wonderful costume picture and will draw where people like and know English history.—Dan Buss, Star theatre, Tonawanda, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

When Knighthood Was in Flower, with Marion Davies. —On Artistically "Knighthood" is all its sponsors claim it to be. There is no doubt but that all circles have come to us proclaiming it one of the greatest productions ever made. But alas, and also alack, theatres cannot exist very long along purely artistic lines. It was selected as our Third Anniversary attraction. I think the 57 that saw it went away well pleased and highly impressed with its lavish splendor. Financially the five-day end

Good business two days.—C. L. McDonald, Majestic theatre, Jackson, Miss.

On the High Seas, with Dorothy Dalton.—Just a program picture.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greeneville, Mich.—General patronage.

Her Gilded Cage, with Gloria Swanson.—A mighty good program picture. Not one that you could raise prices on, however, Gloria is slipping here. Does not draw like she used to.—D. E. Fittin, Lyric theatre, Harrison, Ark.—Small town patronage.

The Good Provider, a Cosmopolitan production.—These Cosmopolitans all seem to have that "Well tailored" touch. To say the work of Dore Davidson is good is an insult. It is not work as art such as is seldom seen these days. He made them laugh and then they cried, and it takes a wonderful artist to make these hard boiled audiences cry. A slice of life the older folks like and boost. Does not take so well with the younger people, but there is a good reason. It holds a brief against a lot of them and they realize it when they see it. The solid middle class patrons went out of their way to tell me how good it was.—J. H. Cooper, Amuzu theatre, Scottville, Mich.—Small town patronage.

One Glorious Day, with Will Rogers.—There is not a star on the screen better liked in my town than Rogers, and when they saw his name on the paper they came to see him. He is worth the price of admission. This is a sure enough crazy play, but it has much action and a great many laughable incidents. Rogers is a college professor who through spiritualism gets out of his real self and goes on a rampage cleaning up the town, much to the astonishment of his staid reforming brethren and to the enjoyment of the audience. We only ran a news with this, but no one seemed to miss the usual Saturday night comedy as Rogers' stunts were comedy enough.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

Pathe

Nanook of the North, with a special cast.—A wonderful educational film. A great picture to work with the school. Buy it if you can. Nothing like it.—H. C. Dewkew, Pastime theatre, Iowa City, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Killer, with a special cast.—Excel- lent feature, doing well at the Ever, Pastime theatre, Reserve, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Her Unwilling Husband, with Blanche Sweet.—Did not please very much. Out first of Blanche Sweet.—A. C. Betts Powers theatre, Red Creek, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

The Devil to Pay, with Robert McKim.—A picture packing a punch and a mighty good moral. As good as they get them in this type of program picture. Works well there.—M. Hillier, Pastime theatre, Reserve, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Rogues and Romance, with a special cast.—Just a fair program picture. Title poor for drawing card and exploitation. —M. Hillier, Pastime theatre, Reserve, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Playgoers

The Family Closet, with a special cast.—Taken from the Saturday Evening Post story, "Black Sheep," made a very good offering and seemed to follow the title. Pretty close, I think a different title would have been better.—K. A. Bechtold, Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Family Closet, with a special cast.—Fair.—Julius Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

The Hills of Miss Ing Men, J. P. Mc- Gowen.—This picture pleased and espe- cially the people. K. Roth, Crystal theatre, Silver Creek, Neb.—Small town patronage.

The Pasteboard Crown, with a special cast.—Bold.—M. Schwartz, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

Face to Face, with a special cast.—Here is a fine picture that pleased 100 per cent, but did not draw any extra business. We had some wonderful program pictures from Pathe but they will not draw. Try them out, they are good.—A. Anderson and Wetherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Discontented Wives, with J. P. Mc- Gowen.—An interesting picture, little semi-Western that has a little slow, getting started, but finishes pretty well. The audience seemed to be pleased so figure it O. K.—K. A. Bechtold, Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Across the Divide, with a special cast.—So much of it night scenes. Too dark. Does well, will tell again in second day.—O. W. McClellan, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Tropical Love, with Ruth Clifford.—Beautiful story of the tropics well told. Star and supporting cast very good. Advertising, photos, slide and paper.—K. A. Bechtold, Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Ruse of the Rattler, with J. P. McGowan.—Very good. All pleased.—O. W. McClellan, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Anne of Little Smoky, with a special cast.—Dandy picture. Plenty of action. Good stars. Audience well pleased.—O. W. McClellan, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Realart

One Wild Week, with Bebe Daniels.—

USING THE RADIO in "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," the new Preferred picture which Al Lichtman is distributing.

Five reels. Just an average program picture. A few laughs. Have run worse ones than this.—Walter H. Musson, Queen's theatre, Hesper, Ont.—Small town patronage.

Her Winning Way, with Mary Miles Minter. Contrary to our expectations, this one pleased a fair crowd. Quite a little better than the average comedy.—Johnson Bros., Johnsonian theatre, Ripley, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Too Much Wife, with Wanda Hawley.—Fair program picture.—R. C. Metzger, Cosy theatre, Tyndall, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Bobbed Hair, with Wanda Hawley.—Previous reports on this one was "rotten." Certified and found correct.—Walter H. Musson, Queen's theatre, Hesper, Ont.—Small town patronage.

Selznick

Love Is an Awful Thing, with Owen Moore.—A light comedy drama which seemed to please. Average program calibre.—R. C. Metzger, Cosy theatre, Tyndall, S. D.—General patronage.

Love Is an Awful Thing, with Owen Moore.—Seemed to please people and furnish many laughs. Not as good as Reported Missing, I judge.—Average average.—H. S. Robbins, Robinson theatre, Grand Haven, Mich.

Reported Missing, with Owen Moore.—Absolutely the best comedy I ever played. It's a screaming hit. If you can buy it right like I did, you can clean up. Don't be afraid of the tropics. Benet. Acting is fine. Your house good.—C. H. Simpson, Princess theatre, Millen, Ga.—General patronage.

Chivalrous Charlie, with Eugene O'Brien.—Failed to draw, but pleased those that did make the supreme sacrifice. Nothing but impossible stuff all the way through.—J. W. Beatwright, Radio theatre, Ozark, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Man Who Lost Himself, with William Faversham.—Good. My patrons like this one well. Did well considering opposition.—A. S. Carlos, Bijou theatre, Jeanerette, La.—Neighborhood patronage.

Worlds Apart, with Eugene O'Brien.—It pleased my audience. Did normal amount of business. Will say it is good.—George Murphy, Majestic theatre, Ft. SUMMER, N. Mex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Why Announce Your Matrimony? with Elaine Hammerstein.—Good picture full of comedy. Kept them laughing all through the picture. Acting is fine. Pleased all. Film was in poor shape. If you ever get a good print, book it.—
Anderson and Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

One Week of Love, with a special cast.
—One of the best pictures of the year. A money maker. It has a wonderful love story that it produced and has some very beautiful scenes.—H. C. Dewkell, Pastime theatre, Iowa City, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Conceit, with a special cast.—We can't get them out with Selznick pictures. Some of them have been so poor that the people have turned up their noses upon seeing the posters.—J. Keopman, Arena, Opera House, Amenia, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Love's Masquerade, with Conway Tearce.—Star good but picture too short. Failed to please.—A. A. Aeri, Aeri's theatre, Marietta, Pa.—Small town patronage.

The Prophet's Paradise, with Eugen O'Brien.—If your patrons like oriental this will go over as it is up to the average. Business no good on this one for me. Advertising, paper, photos and slide.—K. A. Bechtdell, Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Out of the Snows, with a special cast.
—One-eighth of footage gone. Had some good story that it produced and has some interesting value of the picture.—George Murphy, Majestic theatre, Ft. Sumner, N. M.

After Midnight, with a special cast.
—A good story spoiled with too short an ending. Why don't they learn to put a good ending on all pictures; that is the most important part of the picture.—J. W. Beaverweight, Radio theatre, Ozark, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Her Only Way, with Norma Talmadge.—Very good. My patrons like her pictures. Did good business with this one. A. S. Carlos, Bijou theatre, Jeanerette, La.—Neighborhood patronage.

Up the Road with Sally, with Constance Talmadge.—Took very well. Many good comments. Light comedy drama. Print in very good condition. A realie.—W. F. Loibl, Chimes theatre, Oak Park, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Her Only Way, with Norma Talmadge.
—A fairly good offering. Nice night, but failed to draw. The high school here has something on from one to four nights a week and gets about all the house change this people make up. A Bechtdell, Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Moth, with Norma Talmadge.
—Some said it was the poorest thing I ever put through my machine, while others said they liked it. Personally I didn't think it was worth a tinker's d— so there you are.—J. W. Beaverright, Radio theatre, Ozark, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

United Artists

A Doll's House, with Nazimova.—Handed right, this one should make you extra money. Owing to its story and author it appeals to the class that seldom comes to the "movies." For this same reason a lot of your regulars will come and rave over it because it is the kind of thing you have to do if one is to be above the masses in appreciation of the arts. The teachers of the high school and the Study Club helped me put it across and I established a box office record for Fridays with it. Make all your appeal center on the classic angle of it. A real thing. Made new patrons for me.—J. H. Cooper, Amuzo theatre, Scottville, Mich.—Small town patronage.

One Exciting Night, a D. W. Griffith production.—Played two weeks. Picture too long when people were coming. Took two and one-fourth hours. Held people in house too long; a disappointment on this account. First week fair, second week poor.—Howard Frankel, Majestic theatre, Columbus, Ohio.—General patronage.

The Nut, with Douglas Fairbanks.
—Anybody is a nut to run such rotten pictures and pay the price. A regular hold-up.—Lyric theatre, Earlville, Ill.

A Tailor Made Man, with Charles Ray.
—The film in Ray picture in a long time. This one was real entertainment. We were able to buy this picture at a reasonable price. Hiram must have a chance of heart.—E. S. Brewer, Strand theatre, Oviedo, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Tess of the Storm Country, with Mary Pickford.
—The first of the Ray pictures in a long time. This is a real story. We could have bought it for less, but felt it was good enough for us to buy.—E. S. Brewer, Strand theatre, Oviedo, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Universal

The Flirt, with a special cast.—One of the finest pictures we have played. While it is absolutely new, having not at this writing played San Francisco theatres, went after it hard, and believe me we did the business and the picture will back all publicity you can say for it. Universal is sure a square corporation. They didn't ask us for our house on this one. Get it and clean up as we did.—C. H. Powers, Strand theatre, Dunsmuir, Cali.—R. T. town patronage.

The Altar Stairs, with Frank Mayo.
—Program picture that drew well and pleased.—H. A. Larson, Majestic theatre, Oakland, Neb.—Small town patronage.

The Altar Stairs, with Frank Mayo.

All Night, with Carmel Myers.—This one played to a good week's attendance and won favorable comments from patrons.—David Harding, Liberty theatre, Kansas City, Mo.

Under Two Flags, with Priscilla Dean.
—Business was terrible, but the picture is there. Will easily stand a raise and will be enthusiastically received by the average fan. Don't pass it up.—F. E. Sabin, Rex, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Woll Law, with Frank Mayo.
—Too rough and no story. Would have made a fair two reel semi-Western.—J. H. Hooks, Palace theatre, Thomas, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Woll Law, with Frank Mayo.
—A good program picture. Did fair business on it. If you want a good program picture, book it.—Jack Snyder, Casino theatre, Richmond, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

The Black Bag, with Herbert Rawlinson.
—This was sent us as a substitute and it is above the average program picture. Has lots of action and comedy situations in it. We can recommend it.—C. H. Powers, Strand theatre, Dunsmuir, Cali.—R. T. town patronage.

A Dangerous Game, with Gladys Walton.
—A very good picture. You won't have any kicks on this one. Gladys is a crowd getter for me.—J. N. Phillips, Ideal theatre, Table Rock, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Lone Hand, with Hoot Gibson.

The Lone Hand, with Hoot Gibson.
—Pleased Saturday crowd very much. Gibson's work very pleasing and pictures have been clean and snappy. More luck Trimmed, with Hoot Gibson.—When it comes to people who watch a popular star you have to take off your hat to Universal and Hoot Gibson. None better.—J. B. Laughlin, Bart's Mecca, Midland. Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Another Man's Shoes, with Herbert Rawlinson.—This is a good picture. Well played and pleases the majority of patrons.—N. H. Keller, Movieland theatre, Deep River, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

The Jilt, with a special cast.—Very ordinary program picture. Pleased about 50 per cent.—W. H. Montgomery, Royal theatre, Norborne, Mo.—Small town patronage.

The Jilt, with a special cast.—This is another good program picture that will please the majority.—H. A. Larson, Majestic theatre, Oakland, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

Out of the Silent North, with Frank Mayo.—A good picture and should go good any place. Sorry that we can't get more like it. Drew better than any picture during the month of December.—J. W. Boatwright, Radio theatre, Ozark, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Lavender Bath Lady, with Gladys Walton. Good program picture. Drew well.—H. A. Larson, Majestic theatre, Oakland, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

Paid Back, with Gladys Brockwell.—Very disagreeable picture. Didn't like it at all. Neither did my patrons. Glad it was a "one nighter." Marriage, love letters, scandal, South Seas, brute, fever, died, hiah.—R. E. Sahin, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Her Night of Nights, with Marie Prevost.—Fair picture and did fair business although it was too long. Too bad we had to brag too much on it. Some dandy colored photos.—H. L. Fox, Tokio theatre, Morehouse, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Trap, with Lon Chaney.—Punk. I told my people The Trap would catch them and I guess they believed me when they saw it. Brothers, buy this as a program offering or just let it lay. I wish H. Hooks, Palace theatre, Thomas, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Trap, with Lon Chaney.—Not much to it. People expected more action as this is the trailer between both houses. Miller, U. S. A. theatre, Sidney, Nebr.—General patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—You know how 'tis, when your patrons come out laughing. A picture for any town or city. The forest fire is the best and greatest scene that I have ever seen in motion pictures.—Wapato theatre, Wapato, Wash.—General patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—Good picture, but rental too high for small place.—H. C. Douglas, Sherrard Opera House, Sherrard, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—Played this two nights to big crowds at $3 and $5. Pleased very well. Fire scene simply great.—H. A. Larson, Majestic theatre, Oakland, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—Universal has here a picture to be proud of. It is as good as any Curwood or Northern I have seen with possible exception of The River's End and Back to God's Country. The chief thing about this is the story; it's a good one. Though not as big as some specials in spectacular interest, there are lovely scenes, splendid cast, Virginia Valli is fine, fine direction, a dandy forest fire, a good scrap, laughable incidents, clever titling and in all an evening of pure entertainment. The price asked was only drawback to an otherwise 100 per cent report. It is not big enough to be rated in class with the great headliners, but it is decidedly worth booking and boosting. Try to get a reasonable price. We put on fine music and charged fifty and twenty-five cents.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

Don't Get Personal, with Marie Prevost.—A good comedy drama that will please all classes.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kans.—Small town patronage.

Foolish Wives, with Eric Von Stroheim.—Had very good business on this picture. Good drawing card, but will not please all.—S. A. Berger, Star theatre, Jasper, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Headin' West, with Hoot Gibson.—Regular Western with plenty of action. This type always pleases majority here.—W. F. Loibl, Chimes theatre, Cedarburg, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Man to Man, with Harry Carey.—Pretty good, but not in it with others we have placed of this type. Little extra business and apparently pleased the most of them as I didn't hear any kicks as they left the theatre. Ocean, Redlite, Star theatre, Ryegate, Mont.—Small town patronage.

The Galloping Kid, with Hoot Gibson. —We can bank on a crowd when we put Hoot Gibson's picture out in the lobby. He always makes good.—J. N. Phillips, Ideal theatre, Table Rock, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Galloping Kid, with Hoot Gibson.—As good as the average of "Hoot's" shows. Shown with Round 6 of Leather Pushers to good business.—Olen Reynolds, Pearl theatre, Hymera, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The LAVENDER BATH LADY, with Gladys Walton, and THE GLUTTONOUS CAUSE, with Tom Santschi.—Used these two with Maude, the Mule in THE CABBY, in variety at a ten cent drop in prices for that night only. Made a good program. Business also good.—W. RAY ERNE, Rialto Theatre, Charlotte, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Red Courage, and The Bear Cat, with Hoot Gibson.—Not enough of the film left to tell how it was. Universal seemed to do put rotten prints. Am done.—A. R. Bird, Opera House, Arlington, la.

Moonlight Follies, with Marie Prevost.—Rainy night. Small crowd—no comment. Would not have put this on in a place where we had seen it first as there is a small section of it that we consider immorally suggestive.—C. E. Hopkins, Hopkins theatre, Cotter, Ark.—Small town patronage.

The Millionaire, with Herbert Rawlinson.—When they all applaud a picture I figure it is going good. They sure applauded this one. Plenty of action.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kans.—Small town patronage.

The Millionaire, with Herbert Rawlinson.—Good picture from start to finish. Great business in every place. Opera House, Odell, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Confidence, with Herbert Rawlinson.—Very good comedy, with Olen Reynolds, Pearl theatre, Hymera, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Dr. Jim, with Frank Mayo.—Good program.—J. H. Hooks, Palace theatre, Thomas, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Don't Shoot, with Herbert Rawlinson.—Better than the ordinary program picture.—Thos. G. Norton, Town Hall theatre, Allegany, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Human Hearts, with House Peters.—In my opinion this is the best heart interest picture released in many months. Business had on account of weather.—J. C. Rowton, Orpheum theatre, Quinton, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Man Who Married His Own Wife, with Frank Mayo.—Not as good as some he has made. Plot is dependent upon too many made-to-order settings. However, it is something different and there are several tense situations.—H. L. Fox, Tokio theatre, Morehouse, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fire Eater, with Hoot Gibson.—Good show. Hoot gets the business and EXHIBITORS HERALD February 24, 1923

This is a good picture. Book it and advertise it strongly. If they like Westerns you can't go wrong on this one. Short subject, Larry Semion in School Days. It's a scream, and you can buy them right. — Jack Snyder, Casino theatre, Afton, Iowa. — Small town patronage.

Slaves of Pride, with Alice Joyce—Miserable affair; of no interest. Heavy domestic drama. Worst picture ever run from point of view of entertainment. Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho. — General patronage.

The Little Minister, with Alice Calhoun.—This was a very good picture. Miss Calhoun is a favorite in this town. You can't go wrong on her pictures. Short subject, Big Fat Comedy. Not much good; lay off of them. — Jack Snyder, Casino theatre, Richmond, Iowa. — Small town patronage.

Trumpton Island, with a special cast.—Here's a picture that fooled us. We were afraid of it, but after seeing it. Oh, boy, what a knockout. Played two days to good business, put spot on a second day. You won't go wrong on this one. — Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb. — Neighborhood patronage.

Trumpton Island, with a special cast.—The scenes in this picture are beautiful and the acting is very good, but the plot is weak. Personally we do not see why a good old Methodist bishop or Baptist elder or even a good old hooded and coated K. K. K. wouldn't look as well and act as stately as the Catholic regalia featured in so many pictures.—O. B. Sterling, Sterling theatre, Dayton, Tex. — Neighborhood patronage.

Wild Gunning, Inc.

White Hands, with Hobart Bosworth.—This is a good picture. It's an adventure picture and enough action to make it good.—H. A. Larson, Majestic theatre, Oakland, Neb. — Small town patronage.

The Old Oaken Bucket, with a special cast.—Very drabby. A very weak offering. — Tom Foster, Star theatre, Stanley, Wis. — General patronage.

The Right Way, with a special cast.—One of the most powerful prison dramas of them all. Worth all the advertising you can give it and sure to make them talk.—Bill Jones, Campbell's theatre, Spencer, Ind.

The Blot, with a special cast.—Poorest business for a long time. A good picture, but not entertaining and the name means nothing. Good for schools and churches. — P. C. Metzger, Cozy theatre, Tyndall, S. D. — Neighborhood patronage.

The Girl from God's Country, with Nell Shipman.—This is a real one. It keeps the audience on the edge of their seats.—H. C. Douglas, Sherrard Opera House, Sherrard, Ill. — Neighborhood patronage.

The Girl from God's Country, with Nell Shipman.—This girls, is good and a safe buy. Business good with plenty of rain. Many compliments from patrons.—H. F. Sembler, Colonial theatre, Radford, Va. — Small town patronage.

State Rights

What's Wrong With the Women? (Equity), with a special cast—Boyals Boys! Here is one of the best pictures that ever came down the pike. We played it two days to the best business in months and months. Story is true to life, full of heart interest and has food for thought and reflection. It's one of those pictures that each audience talks about to car advertising. Those that see it the first night urge their friends to see it next night. People can't wait over a night that have not been inside the doors for months. We carried newspaper ads, Distributed heralds. Two days before showing Crawford called and called every number in town. When the party called says, "Hello," you say, "What's Wrong with the Women?" They will say, "What." Then you repeat what you just said and hang up.—G. Steitmund, Jr., Odeon theatre, Chandler, Okla. — General patronage.

Flesh and Blood (W. P. E. C.), with Lon Chaney.—Not so good as many of the Chaney subjects. He is overdoing the crooked stunt a little. Many of his scenes are not very good. Supporting cast is very good and business of three days was fair.—Den L. Morris, Temple theatre, Bellevue, Ohio. — General patronage.

Ashamed of Parents (Warner Bros.), with a special cast.—Very good picture. Poor business.—G. Strasser, Wonder theatre, Plymouth, N. Y. — Neighborhood patronage.

Barbed Wire (Sunset), with Jack Hoxie.—Too disconnected to suit my patron. It might please an audience that doesn't care what they see so long as it's pictures.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kansas. — Small town patronage.

Barbed Wire (Sunset), with Jack Hoxie.—How this fellow ever got into the pictures is a mystery to my patrons. He may be a good fellow, but an actor—he gets little in his shows. Our show leave the theatre on him.—C. L. McDonald, Majestic theatre, Jackson, Miss.

The Crow's Nest (Arrow), with Jack Hoxie. This picture proves to the average Western fan (and the woods are full of them). Personally I thought it entirely too much overdrawn even if it was a Western. He does too many unreasonable stunts for one man.—E. C. Hove, Strand theatre, Cookeville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Crow’s Nest (Arrow), with Jack Hoxie.—Second of the Hoxie series and much better than the first, though both pleased good houses.—J. B. Laughlin, Barr’s Mecca, Midland, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Rags to Riches (Warner Bros), with Wesley Barry.—A great picture. Boost crowd in a year; all pleased. Buy it right, boost it and make some money. It takes hodlers eight days to get them in.—R. C. Burton, Strand theatre, Ransom, Kans.—Small town patronage.

Rags to Riches (Warner Bros), with Wesley Barry.—Good picture. Very poor business.—G. Strasser Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Ten Nights in a Bar Room (Arrow), with John Lowell.—Drew the best houses I have had in months and pleased every man, woman and child that saw it. Death scene of child the most touching I ever saw.—H. Daspit, Atherton theatre, Kentwood, La.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Man from Hell’s River (W. P. E. C), with a special cast.—Just fair. Failed to see why they featured Rin-tin, the dog, as he didn’t do anything at all until the last two minutes of the feature.—C. L. McDonald, Majestic theatre, Jackson, Miss.

Why Girls Leave Home (Warner Bros), with Anna Q. Nilsson.—Boys, you should have seen this Thursday. The picture is there and over. Used trailer to advertise it three weeks in advance. If they had run a good ad before these are best advertisers.—R. C. Burton, Strand theatre, Ransom, Kans.—Small town patronage.

A Dangerous Adventure (Warner Bros), with Grace Darmond.—The guy that sold this sure had sand. It’s the biggest frost in all the land. It’s a picture that our crowd wanted badly. Lay folks, lay off.—V. G. Bollman, Castalia theatre, Castalia, Iow.—General patronage.

Parted Curtains (Warner Bros), with a special cast.—Here is a mighty fine picture. Seemed to please all of a small crowd we had. Rate a dime. Can’t wait up that idea years ago. We just keep open for the fun we have now.—R. C. Burton, Strand theatre, Ransom, Kans.—Small town patronage.

Judgment (Arrow), with Ellen Richter.—A very good period picture with artistic acting all the way through, but too high class to be appreciated by the average country town audience.—H. Daspit, Atherton theatre, Kentwood, La.—Neighborhood patronage.

Sunset Jones (American), with a special cast.—A good Western that is somewhat slow in some parts, but Charles Clary’s acting and the story make up for it. Pleased a good Saturday attendance.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omak and get Neighborhood patronage.

A Motion to Adjourn (Arrow), with Roy Stewart.—A good comedy drama that will please a not too exacting audience.—H. Daspit, Atherton theatre, Kentwood, La.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Heart of a Texan (Pinnacle), with Neil Hart.—This is a class of a picture that will please. Good clean story of the out-of-doors. If you want a picture with action and thrills get these Neal Hart pictures and you will not be disappointed.—D. Filizola, Empress theatre, Fort Scott, Kans.—General patronage.

The Splendid Lie (Arrow), with Grace Davison.—A good program picture that will please the average audience.—H. Daspit, Atherton theatre, Kentwood, La.—Neighborhood patronage.

Boomerang Justice (Russell), with George Larkin.—It is a different Western, moves fast. Have shown pictures of all leading stars in Western pictures and this is as good as any of them.—George Murphy, Majestic theatre, Ft. Sumner, N. M.

A Stranger in Canyons Valley (Arrow), with Edythe Sterling.—A good entertaining Western with a good star who rides and acts as well as some of the best Westerns we have seen.—H. Daspit, Atherton theatre, Kentwood, La.—Neighborhood patronage.

Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight? (Equity), with a special cast.—This picture should be played in every town, especially the small town theatre. Make them give you this picture so you can play it. You will have to get them to give you something some time so don’t let them rest until you get this picture.—S. A. Béane, Star theatre, Jasper, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight? (Equity), with a special cast.—A fair picture and will bring out a lot of people who are not regulars. The story goes over fairly well. Will make money for you.—L. A. Filliol, Photo Play theatre, Grand Rapids, O.—Neighborhood patronage.

Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight? (Equity), with a special cast.—Best drawing card we have had in two years. Old ladies came out to see the “Wandering Boy.” Advertise it well and you won’t go wrong.—A. F. Affelt, Liberty theatre, St. Louis, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight? (Equity), with a special cast.—Played two days following Who Are My Parents? to better business. Good drawing card.—Olen Reynolds, Pearl theatre, Hymera, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight? (Equity), with a special cast.—Boost this, Fellow Exhibitors, and show your patrons a good clean picture. Good title, attractive advertising. All there. Received nothing but favorable comments after a raise in admissions.—O. B. Sterling, Sterling theatre, Dayton, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Unknown (Goldstone), with Richard Talmadge.—This is a good idea, to feature a troop of acrobats and still have a little story.—Dan Buss, Star theatre, Tonawanda, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Dangerous Paths (Arrow), with Neva Gerber.—Seemed to please the majority of my patrons, but personally I thought it was very poor, very cheap and trashy.—H. Daspit, Atherton theatre, Kentwood, La.—Neighborhood patronage.

Shadows of the West (Pioneer), with Hedda Nova.—A nice picture of the West also dealing with the Jap problem as you find it today. If your patrons like this style of picture you can’t go wrong on it. Had several nice comments on it.—K. A. Bechtold, Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Curse of Drink (Bond), with a special cast.—Very good picture, Good business.—G. Strasser Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Man Worth While (Pioneer), with Romaine Fielding.—A fairly interesting story of the Northwest, but failed to draw. Advertising papers, photos and Titles.—K. A. Bechtold, Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Ranger and the Law (Graphic), with a special cast.—Good Western. Fair business.—G. Strasser Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Love’s Protege (Pioneer), with Ora Carew.—Opinion divided on this one.
Personally I thought it poor, but a few women, I am told, enjoyed it. I wouldn't advise anyone to use it unless absolutely necessary.—S. G. Ilhe, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Rangeland (Steiner), with Neal Hart. —Just average Western. Same old stuff that we have seen for a couple of years. George Murphy, Majestic theatre, Ft. Sumner, N. M.

The Heart of a Texan (Steiner), with Neal Hart. —Good story, good photography. Fairly fast paced, and average Western.—C. E. Liminger, Grand theatre, E. Palestine, Ohio.—General patronage.

Black Panther's Club (Equity), with Florence Reed.—No business on this. Heard a few good comments. Picture lavishly made, but something lacking.—W. W. Loth, Chimes theatre, Cedarburg, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

His Enemy the Law (Triangle), with Jack Richardson.—If this had been made by a modern concern and released this year it would have been a special. As it is, it is a $6.60 program picture and a mighty good one.—R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kan.—General patronage.

Go-Get-'Em Hutch (Pathé), with Charles Hutchison.—Are on Episode No. 6 and business is way off. Just a series of stunts around a bunch of ships. Good business in H. H. Broads, Palace theatre, Thomas, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pathé), with Ruth Roland.—We are up on No. 12 and business is getting better. This is about the best one to date. The people are starting to be fed up with Robinson Crusoe, which sure set the serial business back a lot.—R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kan.—General patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord. Started off hot, but falling off. Too much history. Won't producers ever learn people do not go to the theatre to learn.—E. C. Liminger, Grand theatre, E. Palestine, Ohio.—General patronage.

White Eagle (Pathé), with Ruth Roland.— Held up to fair business. Just fifteen weeks around an old hill full of caves. I don't see why they came to see it.—J. H. Hooks, Palace theatre, Thomas, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Short Subjects
De Haven Comedies (F. B. O.), with De Haven.—Like the Plum Center Comedies, these are brand new and easily 100 per cent. Better than former releases by other concerns with this team. Get Twin Husbands and tell musicians to take a rest, as music will not be heard.—Harry Husted, Fox theatre, Bishop, Calif.—Neighborhood patronage.

De Haven Comedies (F. B. O.).—Have used two of them and received two of the best business of the year.—A. A. Spradling, Opera House, Merna, Neb.—General patronage.

Educational Comedies.—All good. Best average satisfaction with old and young we have had in nine years at bat.—Harry Musellmann, Auditorium theatre, Osceola, Neb.

Educational Scenics and Outings.—These are good, educational and entertaining.—Julius Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Fun from the Press (Hodkinson).—A splendid reel with lots of catchy rhymes. Will get lots of laughs and will fit in well with most programs.—Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

International News (Universal).—I ever saw, although I never showed but one other news.—Julius Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The OLD SEA DOG (Pathé), with Snub Pollard.—We call this a good comedy, at least our past and present. Not as far out as it seems silly, but if it wasn't it might have been a dummer, who knows?—CLYDE ALLEN, Casino Theatre, Awtwerp, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Leather Pushers (Universal), with Reginald Denny.—These Leather Pushers are great. Get them in on the first round of the new series, and you will like them. They will bring extra business.—S. A. Berger, Star theatre, Jasper, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Leather Pushers (Universal), with Reginald Denny.—Have played second Round of the new series and find that they are still as good as they were in the first six, and that's going some. The best pugilistic two-reelers ever made. Get them out on the First Round and they will be the big draw this year.—H. Holland, Bishop theatre, Bishop, Calif.—Neighborhood patronage.

Mermaid Comedies (Educational).—Fifty-fifty, with Reginald Denny.—Julius Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Our Gang Comedies (Pathé), with Our Gang.—Why pay a little royalty when these make old and young roar? Try a few and find out. You don't have to mortgage your theatre.—Bill Jones, Campbell's theatre, Spencer, Ind.

Our Gang Comedies (Pathé), with Our Gang.—These are very good comedies and draw out extra attendance.—A. K. Koth, Crooked Creek, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

Plum Center Comedies (F. B. O.), with Dan Mason.—Run this house thirteen years and know that the best comedies I have shown. Exceptionally fine for small towns. Price right, pictures clean and appealing.—Start with Pop Tuttle's Movie Queen.—Harry Holland, Bishop theatre, Bishop, Calif.—Neighborhood patronage.

Son Comedies, with Larry Semon.—This boy sure delivers the stuff that brings them in. Only good comedy I have been able to buy and break even last year.—I don't ask all your receipts for these.—R. C. Burton, Strand theatre, Ransom, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Sennett Comedies (First National).—Great ones to let alone. The poorest Sennetts (also applies to Turpin's) I've ever seen. Have used three. Every print in town. Better to get a second or third print after the first one is gone.—B. S. Meineke, Orpheum theatre, Scottville, Mich.—Large town patronage.

Sport Revue (Goldwyn).—Exactly as title implies, highly interesting, entertaining and instructive, making a splendid filler.—Harry Husted, Fox theatre, Bishop, Calif.—Neighborhood patronage.

Toonerville Trials (First National).—First Toonerville we have used and it gave good satisfaction. Educational com-

You Can’t Go Wrong on a Plum Center Comedy
The Two Traders (Pathe), an Aesop Fable.—The cat is in this, too, but it's very entertaining. The kids all enjoyed it.—Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Choose Your Weapons (Educational), a Christie comedy.—Very enjoyable. It resembled a medal of all the big costume plays in vogue, jumbled into slapstick.—H. J. Longaker, Howard theatre, Alexandria, Minn.—General patronage.

The Getaway (Universal), with Neal Hart.—We have been using these two reel Westerns for some time and they are getting better. The 1922-23 releases are fine. They can be bought very reasonably.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Haunted House (Metro), with Buster Keaton.—Went over fine. Patrons like Keaton comedies.—Veteran Star theatre, Durham, Utah, Canada.—Neighborhood patronage.

Henpecked (Universal), with Lee Moran.—These Comedy Series give you the best variety of comedies you can buy. My patrons like them.—S. A. Berger, Star theatre, Jasper, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Special Delivery (Fox), with Al St. John.—As good as the Lloyd comedies. Al St. John does some great stunts in this picture.—Custer Carland, Victoria theatre, Frankfort, Mich.—General patronage.

The Bell Hop (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—We pay more for Semon comedies than any others because we know that Semon will bring out more people than any other two reel comedy. This was no exception.—Horn and Morgan, Star theatre, Hay Springs, Neb.—Small town patronage.

A Rambling Romeo (Educational), with a special cast.—A neat and clever two reel comedy of good entertainment value. Not a roof raiser, but a dandy plot comedy of the best class well acted and directed.—E. L. Wharton, Orpheum theatre, Glasgow, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

That Son of a Sheik (Educational), a Christie comedy.—If you have played The Sheik don't fail to play this comedy. It's great.—Lyric theatre, Crete, Neb.—General patronage.

The Newly Rich (Pathé), with Snub Pollard.—A real comedy. Two reels of good honest funny business. As good as a lot of so-called 'special' comedies and don't cost but a third as much. Snub and his gang have a terrible time in this.—E. L. Wharton, Orpheum theatre, Glasgow, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

Golf (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. Another Semon knockout. Everybody well pleased. Brought roar after roar from audience. If you haven't run any Semons try 'em, they are great.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Supply and Demand (Pathe), with Johnnie Jones. Should be called a drama or comedy-drama. Not up to Our Gang stuff. The kids are okay, but story not humorous enough.—Bill Jones, Campbell's theatre, Spooner, Ind.

My Hero (Fox), with Lupino Lane.—The part can certainly put it over them all. They are among the best.—Lyric theatre, Earlville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Get Out and Get Under (Pathé), with Harold Lloyd.—Most folks say they like Lloyd better than any other comedian, but he doesn't draw any better. I can't get enough extra people in to pay the difference in film rental.—A. N. Miles, Eminence theatre, Eminence, Ky.—General patronage.

The High Sign (Metro), with Buster Keaton.—Buster is sure pleasing. This one is the best yet.—S. A. Berger, Star theatre, Jasper, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hokus Pokus (Educational), a Christie comedy.—One of the best of this brand. Has a plot, some slapstick, and a thrill or two.—A. N. Miles, Eminence theatre, Eminence, Ky.—General patronage.

You and Me (Universal), with a special cast.—This is a real comedy for the kids. Grown ups will chuckle at this comedy. Some good acting for the cast, which are all children.—S. A. Berger, Star theatre, Jasper, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Shipwrecked Among Animals (Universal), a comedy.—These are the comedies they like. House in a room from start to finish.—J. B. Laughlin, Bart's Mecca, Midland, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hello! Mars (Universal), with a special cast.—This comedy is impossible, but it sure gets the laughs. I had them coming back to see it over and over again.—Century Comedies are pleasing my people.—S. A. Berger, Star theatre, Jasper, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pop Tuttle's Movie Queen (F. B. O.), with Dan Mason. These comedies were enjoyed by everybody. Sub-titles very good.—W. F. Loibl, Chimes theatre, Cedarburg, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

“CAN A WOMAN LOVE TWICE?”
the most brilliant picture of her career

Story by Wyndham Gittens
Directed by James W. Horne

LIKE a rare piece of exquisite tapestry that leaves its impression forever in the memory of lovers of the beautiful, so will this wondrous photodramatic masterpiece be remembered for years to come.

It is a production for people who appreciate the finer things of life. It is bigger, better, finer in every sense and particular than any motion picture of its kind.

Here is the rare jewel of magnificent drama that will make YOUR theatre the mecca of thousands—who will be given a new enthusiasm for picture-going. Gentlemen, this is one of the finest productions you've ever been offered. You owe it to the prestige of your theatre, as well as to your certain profits, to book it and boost it to the limit. Equipment Men Set Date for National Convention in July Motion picture equipment dealers and manufacturers from all parts of the country will gather at Chicago July 12, 13 and 14 for the national convention of the Association of Motion Picture Equipment Dealers of America, which will be held at the Congress Hotel. This date was decided upon at a conference of the board of directors held in Chicago on Thursday, Friday of last week.

Seven of the officers of the association, which was formed at Indianapolis last July, were present at the meeting, the remaining two being unable to attend because of engagements. These, however, forwarded papers to be read at the sessions.

A number of important matters affecting the distributors and manufacturers were discussed and prepared for presentation at the national convention, which it is expected that virtually every equipment distributor in the country will be present. According to Leo E. Dwyer, president, the organization has gotten a strong start in the six months of its existence and is functioning in a manner that indicates rapid progress and growth.

B. A. Benson of the Amusement Supply Company, Chicago, and others will shoulder the responsibility of carrying out the details in connection with the forthcoming national conference and a "round of action and entertainment from start to finish" is promised.

Those who attended the directors' meeting were: Leo E. Dwyer, Theatre Supply Company, Cincinnati; B. A. Benson, Amusement Supply Company, Chicago; Otto Dieckman and Harry Bugie of Dwyer Brothers, Cincinnati; Harry Dutton, Equipment Supply Company, Chicago; Joe Hornstein, Hollens Cine Equipment Company, St. Louis, and C. E. Cornwall, Charleston Electric Supply Company, Charleston, W. Va.

Other equipment dealers, who sent papers to be read at the meeting, were William Oltkow, Southern Theatre Supply Company, Atlanta; Sid Lewis, Rialto Theatre Supply Company, Minneapolis; H. G. Mohrbach, Denver Theatre Supply Company, Denver; Henry J. Smith, Hollis Smith-Morton, Pittsburgh; C. D. Strubel, Yale Theatre Supply Company, Kansas City, Mo.; Samuel Lewis, Lake Theatre Supply Company, Salt Lake City; W. C. Denney, Argus Enterprises, Cleveland, and Harry K. Lucas, Lucas Theatre Supply Company, Atlanta, Ga.

The slogan "Good projection is your main asset" was adopted at the meeting.

THEATRE CONSTRUCTION AND EQUIPMENT

Small Theatre Requirements

Building Suggestions Which Are Recommended for Houses Having a Seating Capacity of 300 or Less

SAFEY factors and efficient arrangement in small playhouses is no less important than it is in the larger theatres. While a small playhouse does not involve as many phases which make precaution as necessary as the larger houses, there are nevertheless, a number of important things which must be kept in mind regardless of the size of the theatre.

In a special division devoted to theatres having a seating capacity of 300 or less, a number of items are pointed out in the building code recommendations by the National Board of Fire Underwriters. The recommendations of this body are as follows:

1. No motion picture machine shall be installed or operated in any building that does not abut directly upon a street; nor shall any machine be operated in connection with any exhibition room contained in a building occupied as a hotel, tenements, etc., unless there is a separate means of egress where the exhibition room and motion picture machine are separated from the rest of the building by unperforated fireproof walls and floors and in no case shall the main floor of such exhibition room be more than 4 feet above or below the adjoining grade level. To overcome any difference of level on the ground floor, the aisles may be covered by a floor of not less than one foot in ten feet. No steps shall be permitted. Exit doors shall be at the same level as the sidewalk.

2. If the walls of the auditorium contain wooden studs, they shall be protected with metal lath and not less than 3/4 inch of cement or cement-tempered plaster, or be covered with 1/2-inch plaster boards and plastered with 1/2 inch of plaster or covered with metal. The joints shall be properly filled with mortar. The ceilings of all such auditoriums having wooden construction, and the ceilings of any basement or cellar which may exist under such auditoriums, shall be protected with metal lath and cement plaster or with 3/4-inch plaster board and covered with plaster or metal as above specified for protection of walls.

3. All motion picture exhibition rooms shall be provided with at least two separate exits, one of which shall be in the front and the other in the rear, both leading to unobstructed outlets on the street. The aggregate width in feet of such exits shall not be less than one-twentieth of the number of persons to be accommodated therein. An exit shall be less than 5 feet in width, and there shall be a main exit of not less than 10 feet in total width.

If an unobstructed exit to a street can not be provided at the rear of such buildings, either an open court or a fireproof passage or corridor shall be provided from rear exit to the street front, of at least 4 feet in width for exhibition rooms accommodating fifty persons or less, and 6 inches additional for each additional fifty persons accommodated by such room. Such passage shall be constructed of fireproof material and shall be at least 10 feet high in the clear. The walls forming such passage shall be at least 8 inches thick of brick or other approved fireproof material. If there be a basement the wall on the auditorium side shall extend at least 6 inches below the cellar bottom or may be carried in the cellar on iron columns and girders properly fireproofed. The ceiling of said passages and there shall be a fireproof floor shall be of fireproof construction.

If unobstructed rear exit or exits to a street are provided, the said exit or exits shall be of the same total width required for the front court, not less than 4 feet, and shall be kept free and securely fastened to the floor. They shall be so arranged that there will be not more than ten seats in a line between aisles, nor more than four between any seat and an aisle. All aisles shall lead directly to exits and all exits shall be directly accessible to aisles. No aisles shall be less than 3 feet in width where it begins, and shall increase in width toward the exits 3 inches for every 10 feet in length. All exit doors shall be arranged to swing outward and be provided with fastenings that can be opened readily from the inside without the use of keys or any special effort. Such doors shall not be locked when the room is open to the public.

Every exit doorway leading from the room shall have over the same on the auditorium side the word "EXIT" in letters not less than 6 inches high, or an illuminated sign with letters of the same height. Where illuminated signs are not provided there shall be at least one green light over each exit doorway. The exit doorways shall be numbered with figures not less than 6 inches high. Lights used in marking exits or lighting passageways, stairways or balconies leading from them shall be of the type not likely to start wires, switches or fuses located in room, compartment, booth or enclosure containing lights used in marking exits or lighting passageways, stairways or balconies leading from them, and shall be controlled from the ticket office.

Fairbury, Nebr.—Pike & Magnies have completed plans for the erection of a theatre to cost $20,000 here.

Syracuse, N. Y.—Robbins Enterprises of Utica is negotiating for the purchase of the Grand Opera House here. If the deal goes through the old theatre will be razed and a new playhouse and block erected.

Corinth, Miss.—A theatre to cost $200,000 will be built here by B. F. Lid- don, owner of the Gem theatre, who has purchased a site 50 by 200 feet. Plans have not been drawn.

St. Louis, Mo.—Razing of property on Eighth street and Washington avenue has been started for the construction of the new $1,000,000 Loew theatre which will seat 3,400.

Waterloo, Ia.—The Regent theatre here has been purchased by the Beck- Walker Company of Mason City. The house will be remodeled, work to start early in March.

Beaumont, Tex.—The interior of the Kyle theatre here was recently damaged to a considerable extent by fire and rebuilding is planned for the near future.

Ownership Changes

Princeton, Mo.—P. O. Jones of Carrolton, has purchased the Grand theatre here from斯玉 tragedy of E. A. Donahue. Improvements are planned.

Madison, Wis.—J. A. Keyes, who owns a number of theatres in Indiana, has pur- chased the Grand theatre here from Paul Morgan.

Kansas City, Mo.—The Olive theatre, St. Joseph, Mo., has been purchased by Mr. Meade of the Elks and the West- Baxter Springs, Kan., has been acquired by Robinson & Garber.

Cortland, N. Y.—Michael Bloom of Fulton, N. Y., has purchased the Cort- land Opera House from J. S. Burnham.

TWO LETTERS OF INTEREST

L. Jones, of the Star theatre, Madal, Idaho, mail the following interesting suggestion regarding radio:

"If you operate a theatre where radio is a new thing Tent The" the S. E., one week. Then advertise radio concerts with pictures. I got wonder- ful results."

From Corinth, Mississippi, we are in receipt of the following commu- nication:

"B. F. Iddon, owner of the Gem theatre, has purchased a lot 50 by 200 feet for the purpose of erecting a the a tre some time this spring to seat 1,200 to 1,400. No definite plans have yet been made, the de- tails of construction being under consideration."

Million Dollar Loew

Theatre Project at St. Louis Is Begun

Wrecking of the colonial building on the site of the new Loew State the- atre is complete Eighth street and Washington avenue, St. Louis, Mo., is now under way Very shortly after the clearing of the ground, construction work will start. Marcus Loew was in St. Louis last week arranging the details for the new house, which will seat 3,400. It is estimated to cost $1,000,000.

The site has a frontage on Washington avenue of 135 feet by a depth of 167 feet. At first the structure will be only three stories high, but will be fixed so that four additional stories may be added later. On the Washington avenue side there will be four large and one small store room.

The lobby leading from Washington avenue to the grand stairway, 100 feet back, is to be 40 feet wide and two stories high. The stairway will be 20 feet wide and of marble and bronze and lead to a bridge entering the theatre on the mezzanine floor with its 37 by 100 foot promenade. The rotunda is to be circular and large The theatre will include a nursery and hospital Thomas W. Lamb, New York City, is the architect.

Effective directional signs help to clear lobbies quickly and enable you to handle more people in the rush hours. Plowman GLO-LETR signs for aisles, rest- rooms, checkrooms, bal- conies, telephones etc. are the best for this purpose.

1,800 Seat House to Be Erected in Kansas City

A new motion picture suburban house fireproof and with a seating capacity of 1,800, will be erected at Thirty-sixth street and Broadway, Kansas City, Mo. by E. J. Willett and others. The new house, which will be named the Broadway theatre, will cost about $350,000, including store room space, and will have a frontage of 192 feet on Broad- way. The theatre, the main floor, balcony, foyer, children's play room, lobbies and lobbies will be in Georgian detail.

A modern cooling system will be installed, in addition to a heating and ventilating system. The house will be of reinforced concrete. The architects, Olde & Gornall, are preparing the plans which will be ready in time to prevent any interruption in a continuous con- struction program.
Valentino to Talk at Delmonico in St. Louis
On “Americanization”

ST. LOUIS, MO., Feb. 12.—Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Valentino have been booked for a six days’ run at the Delmonico theatre, St. Louis, scheduled to start today. Valentino is scheduled to deliver an address on “Americanization,” while his presence will give a solo dance. They will be accompanied by their own orchestra.

Valentino’s Americanization speech was prepared for use in raising funds for the Italian-American Republican National party, an organization interested in the Americanization of Italians.

RALPH SIMMONS, Hodkinson manager, had the right idea about this Winter weather. He says all exhibitors and exchanges ought to move south in the winter and back to Chicago in warm weather.

ROY ALEXANDER, Universal’s peppy manger at Kansas City, reports that his mother is quite ill.

The Chicago & Altam Railroad, which is showing motion pictures to its patrons on the limited trains between Chicago and St.
Louis, has contracted to take the entire Universal service beginning March 1.

Joe SMITH, the genial poster boy in Universal’s exchange, is passing out the cigars.
It’s a girl and both boy and Mrs. Smith are doing nicely.

A new 400 seat house, the Court theatre, will soon open at Danville, Illinois, under Manger Davidson.

JACK ST. CLAIR’s joke about burying the five film salesmen took first prize in the oratory contest last Saturday night at the La Salle, when the Universal bunch got second.

En. BRICHTO, former city salesman,
First National, is now covering the middle southwestern territory in Illinois for First National.

J. M. JACOBY is handling the Warner
Brood products exclusively out of the First National exchange.

Ask “Bill” DANZGER to tell you about his experience while in Freeport, Ill., recently where he put over “When Knighthood Was in Flower” at John Dittman’s Lindbergh theatre for Paramount. It’s worth listening to.

WALTER HYLAND, who is always pulling strings around the Universal exchange in the shape of service, scored again with International News pictures of the Ski jumping at Gary, Ill., on Saturday, Jan. 21, these being shown through Mr. Hyland’s enterprise on Jan. 22, in all the theatres hereabouts.

A. J. OERISK, of Whiting, Ind., will open his new Capitol theatre, seating 1,000 peodons, on March 1.

Zionsville, Ind.—G. S. Binley has purchased the Swain theatre here which he has renamed the Zionsville theatre.

Which Wins?

Last Saturday marked the close of the Great Mustache Contest between
(right). F. B. O. salesmen, and to avoid splitting hairs, as it were, the judge of the contest (which is ourself) decided it was a draw. The money—$25 which was posted some time ago, is to be used in a good cause, namely, to buy the judge a dinner.—J. R. M.

Post Office Asks
Film Shippers Aid

The Post Office department has sent out the following notice directed to exhibitors:

As a general rule, motion picture films are moving on a regular schedule from place to place for exhibition and display on previously arranged dates, and failure to arrive at destination on time not only seriously inconveniences the addressee, but entails a consequential loss upon the shipper, as the films are exhibited upon a rental basis.

We are requested by the Post Office Department through the Chicago Postmaster to advise exhibitors of the fact that parcels of films when remailed must bear legible addresses, and that if the old labels are not removed the new label or address should be so placed as to completely obscure or obliterate the original address.

With this cooperation on the part of exhibitors, the mis-sending of film parcels should be reduced to a minimum.

Narrow Escape

Erwin Wagner, employed to change the lamps on the immense sign of the Chicago theatre, had a narrow escape from death last Thursday, when he fell from the top of the 90-foot sign. His foot caught in a rope, however, and he hung forty feet above ground until the fire department rescued him.

Returns to L. A.

P. A. Powers, director general of Film Book Offices studios, Los Angeles, who returned to California after a month’s sojourn in New York, spent last Wednesday in Chicago with local manager J. J.
Sampson.

Metropolitan Company
In Detroit Moves Into Film Building Quarters

DETROIT, MICH., Feb. 13.—In order to care for its growing business, Metropolitan Motion Picture Company, producers of industrial, educational and advertising motion pictures, has moved into new and larger quarters in the Film Building here. The deal was headed by Maurice Caplan and in addition to handling commercial photography produces the Detroit Free Press Film Weekly, which is now being used at theatres throughout the state.

This enterprise, which has grown to its present proportion, was started here in 1914 as an advertising slide business by Mr. Caplan. Two years ago with George Weeks and Robert S. Bailey the Metropolitan Company was formed. Mr.
Caplan has since purchased the interest of his partners and is now sole owner.

III. M. P. T. O. Aids
U. S. Dept. of Justice

Owing to numerous complaints in regard to the activities of the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers, in Illinois, the M. P. T. O. of Illinois has arranged with the U. S. department of Justice to get the answers to questionnaires now being distributed to exhibitors through the state.

The attorney general is ascertaining whether or not the A. S. A. C. P. have violated the federal laws, namely, the restraint of interstate commerce through their activities.

Every exhibitor is urged to answer the questionnaire at once and return it to the office of the I. M. P. T. O.

Tiffany Official Here

M. H. Hoffman, general manager of Tiffany of Justice Productions to get a look at the local Metro exchange last Thursday.

Miss “Babe” Hopkins has been appointed private secretary to C. C. Wallace, Paramount manager.

Frank Mantzke of the American Releasing Corporation has a banner 60x10 reading “The Gumbate” on display at the Coliseum six-day bicycle race. This banner will be seen by more than five thousand people. A good medium for advertising the d big super-special, we call it.

F. T. Welter of the Grand Opera House, Wausau, Wis., announces he has recently taken over this house from C. S. Cone and is remodeling same. Mr. Welter was formerly at Sturgeon, Bay, Wis.

Huntsville, Ala.—Charles A. Crute, manager of the Lyric theatre, has acquired full ownership of the house and is planning many improvements for the house.

Eureka, Cal.—The Rialto, Orpheus and
State theatres here have been acquired by George M. Mann and Frederick Frisk of San Francisco from W. H. Clark and Howard Clark, the latter to manage the houses.
CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By J. R. M.

SID MEYER, manager of Fox exchange, made a business trip to Milwaukee last Wednesday, returning Thursday.

The D. & F. combination of Fox salesmen (Delaaney and Flaherty) is proving a hard one to side-step. Both are now working the North and West city territory.

MILTON FELD, managing director of the Newman theatre, Kansas City, had the noted K. C. artist "Debauer," draw a beautiful portrait of F. B. O.'s exploiter, Louis Kramer, in pastel, and label it "he of the refined bull." The picture now occupies a prominent place on the mantel of the Kramer domicile.

MAX WEINTZEN, owner of the Fontanelle Feature Film Co., Omaha, Neb., stopped off in Chicago last week to call on Sid Meyer, of the Fox exchange.

Oscar Osbourne, Metro manager, Omaha, Neb., has been transferred to Cincinnati.

RICHARD A. HEALY of the Monogram, Marion and Casino theatres, has developed into a regular radio bound, it is said. "Dick" has three sets in his home at 55th and Sullivan streets, and when he gets them all tuned up you can hear music in seven different languages. It's a case of "three o'clock in the morning" every time Charlie Miller, the F. B. O. salesman, drops in to see "Dick" because you can't leave 'til the last concert's been sung.

Bill Hollander denies that he arranged the spectacular fall of a sign boy last Thursday from the top of the Chicago theatre sign, and had him hang twenty minutes head down for the benefit of the crowd.

SAMUEL McINTYRE, metro manager, Omaha, was a Chicago visitor last week. Mr. McIntyre was en route to Omaha, Neb., from Atlanta, Ga., having just been transferred back to his old stamping grounds.

JACK MCDERMOTT writes us that he would like to hear from some Chicago Loop hounds. He's back with Consolidated Film & Supply Co., "the Universal of the South," as Jack puts it, writing publicity. He asks "How does Jack Willis do it?" Says he learns he's still up and kicking. "It must be that smiling disposition."

FRANK ISMAEL, Metro salesman, was bitten by the fly bug and after a week's battle, is back on the job.

WALTER BEADELL has taken over the Avenue theatre, 3112 Indiana ave. He will play pictures and vaudeville.

Another theatre for colored patrons is being built at Thirty-first and State streets. It will be known as the Booker T. Washington, and will open about March 1.

S. A. SHIRLEY, district manager of Metro, is back after a trip through his territory.

ERNIE KEE of the Park Manor theatre, got a haircut last week. The thing worried the Universal boys, so rather than up-set 'em he had it done.

E. H. CHRISTIE of the Christie Bros., owners of the Elmo theatre, has purchased the Ben Hur theatre, Cicero st. and Jackson blvd.

FRANK MANTZKE, resident manager, American Releasing Corporation, has just returned from Ft. Wayne, Ind., closing a contract for George Belsan and his entire company to play week of March 16.

American Releasing Corporation's Chicago office closed down a few weeks back. R. Lubliner & Trinz and Ascher Bros., for "What Fools Men Are" and Betty Hylte's first picture under the American Releasing banner, "The Rich."

The New Lincoln theatre, Lincoln, Ill., under Manager Beines opened on Lincoln's birthday, Feb. 12, with "Quincy Adams Sawyer."

Jack Schwartz finally got out of Erie.

Ben Reingold, resident manager of Goldwyn, says the Chicago office is making history these days, having broken all records for business on current productions. January was the biggest month in the history of the office.

Walter Neiland, Goldwynner, with the assistance of Saml. Gerts, is certainly telling the restaurant patrons of Milwaukee and our fair city about "The Stranger Banquet." Two hundred Chicago restaurants are using special menu cards, napkins and toothpicks, and 47 eating houses in Milwaukee.

At a prize fight in Milwaukee last week Walter Neiland was hired to announce the contestants, but was so imbued with his product he announced the coming of several Goldwyn pictures at the Merrill theatre, before he announced the prize fights.

SAM SHURMAN, former sales manager Chicago office of Goldwyn, has been promoted to resident manager of the Milwaukee office. On Saturday the Chicago boys presented him with a nifty smoking outfit. He takes charge of this new office Feb. 13.

Al Solber, the First National publicist, is to have an assistant bowler and exploiter. Hal Oliver, erstwhile Boston rep of First National, will arrive on Friday and the entire Eddie Cantor show will be at the train to meet him.

Joe Lyon's face was wreathed in smiles last week when he returned to the Fox exchange with a contract in his pocket that meant real dough. He signed up the Pastime theatre, John R. Thompson's Madison street house, for all the Fox features. Atta boy, Joe.

WILLIAM HEISENBERG, owner of the Colonial theatre, Danville, Ill., was a caller at the Fox exchange last Wednesday.

I. Gettelson, in charge of country sales, F. B. O., is looking for more key cities to conquer. He's sold "The Third Alarm" in so many of them, it sounds like a fireman's nightmare, out in the country.

Al Solber, First National's boy wonder, is telling Quincy, III., about "Oliver Twist" this week, and also Ferriornans about "The Hottentot" in his own dignified way.

Exhibitors hereabouts are guests of the Chicago theatre management, to see "Mighty Lak'a a Rose" all this week.

CHICAGO UNIVERSAL SALES STAFF GREETS Wm. Duncan and wife—as he passed through en route to California to make a new type of chapter play. Those in the group are: Front row (left to right)—Harry Igel, F. O. Nielsen, Louis Laemmle, Mrs. M. V. Bennett, Princess theatre, Whiting, Indiana—signing contract for Herman Stern, Chicago manager—Mrs. Duncan to the right of Mr. Stern, William Duncan, I. Leserman and Master Richard Laemmle, son of Louis Laemmle.

Last row (on table)—Harry Phillips, Carl Leserman and J. P. Denton.

Mr. Hiram Abrams,

Dear Mr. Abrams,

I am sure you will appreciate a line relative to the exhibitor's value of "One Exciting Night."

Personally I think it is one of the best pictures I have ever seen, and I have yet to find one patron of our theatres who is not thoroughly satisfied in every way. The exploitation possibilities are numerous and with the splendid assistance that you have given our publicity department we have put over campaigns that made the public go into the theatre and see a picture that more than measured up to everything that you or we said about it.

"One Exciting Night," in my judgment, is a 100 per cent box-office draw and will get money for any exhibitor, be he per anywhere who puts behind it and lets his public know that he has a regular picture.

I hope we may have the pleasure of playing a lot more Griffith subjects, and if they are as good from every standpoint as "One Exciting Night," we will be more than satisfied.

With kindest personal regards, believe me,

Very cordially yours,

D. W. Griffith

Who’s Doing the Big Things in this Industry Today?

What company is smashing through to big success at the box-office?
What company is stepping out and corralling the greatest directors and players?
What company owns the biggest story vehicles?
What company is being most talked about by exhibitors? By critics?
Who’s doing the Big Things Anyway?

SMASHING through to real money—watch “The Christian” pile up profits! It’s taking the country by storm. Look around and see what pictures are turning in the big money. Neilan’s “The Stranger’s Banquet,” Holubar’s “Broken Chains,” R. A. Walsh’s “Lost and Found,” “A Blind Bargain”—what company has the line-up of box-office attractions that picture for picture are the best buys offered to exhibitors today?
What company has brought together the greatest aggregation of talent ever assembled under one banner? The Giant Directors of the industry are in this gathering: Marshall Neilan, von Stroheim, Rupert Hughes, Allen Holubar, Maurice Tourneur, Hugo Ballin, R. A. Walsh, Clarence Badger. And to this notable list is now added Victor Seastrom, Europe’s foremost director. Look over these players, at the height of their popularity: Pola Negri, Mae Busch, Claire Windsor, John Barrymore, Lon Chaney, Colleen Moore, Cullen Landis, Claude Gillingwater, Blanche Sweet, Antonio Moreno. You know what they mean in a cast of players. Add to these Frank Mayo, Conrad Nagle and Hobart Bosworth!

THE shopping public that looks for names in electric lights! Who’s giving them the biggest names in the entire field of motion pictures? These are big things in store for exhibitors: Erich von Stroheim’s “Greedy Wives;” Pola Negri’s latest sensation “Mad Love;” Marshall Neilan’s biggest offering “The Eternal Three;” Hugo Balin’s knock-out, the immortal “Vanity Fair;” King Vidor’s production of “Three Wise Fools;” Elmer Glynn’s “Six Days;” the famous stage success “The Merry Widow” directed by von Stroheim.

Big things! There’s only one “Ben Hur,” the most prized moving picture vehicle in the entire world. Everybody’s waiting to see it on the screen. There’s no subject in pictures more talked about than who will direct it! You know the company that bought it. You know the company that believes no vehicle is too big to use, if it means success to exhibitors. You know who coined that slogan: Big Pictures Pay Big Profits. “BELLA DONNA” is the ONLY American picture Pola Negri has yet made. ALL of her other pictures were made in Europe.

In “Bella Donna” you’ll see a new and undreamed of Pola Negri—a star of first magnitude in a production made with all the resources that only Paramount can supply.

Miss Negri’s second American picture will be “The Cheat,” a George Fitzmaurice production adapted by Ouida Bergere from the story by Hector Turnbull.

How's this for an eye-catching ad?

It's the four column press book ad on "The White Flower."

You can imagine how it would stand out in your local paper, can't you?

Paramount press book ads are used by the largest and smallest theatres in the world. You get them in all sizes, in cut or mat form, at your exchange.
Coincident with the first showing of "The Beautiful and Damned" at Loew's Warfield, Saturday night, January 13, the sidewalks were jammed with crowds both above and below the theatre. The line, four deep, extended up Market Street and around the corner of Taylor Street to Turk. This is unusual, to say the least, to draw such a crowd the first night. But Sunday night following, the same situation was duplicated. This still more unusual.

THE WIZARD

THREE RECORD WEEKS AT

PROVIDENCE, R. I. — (Special) — Warning Brothers’ “Beautiful and Damned” came within an ace of setting the Metropolitan Theatre last week. This Georgian metropolis turned out en masse for this production, which was highly praised by the press.

ATLANTA — (Special) — Warner Brothers’ “Bless This House” has firmly established for itself a firm place in the public favor. The popularity of the motion picture is so strong that it has compelled the theatre to hold it over for extended runs.

ORIGINALLY BOOKED FOR ONE WEEK, ONLY MANAGER TOM GOLDBERG WAS TWICE COMPULSORY TO HOLD IT OVER FOR EXTENDED RUNS.
The romance of a beautiful heiress and a poor boy who believes the girl's family responsible for the failure and disappearance of his father.

A broken engagement, a hero crushed by his father's disgrace, a heroine struggling under the sting of her lover's reproach, a villain scheming to marry her money and a child help untangle the affair, gives to "Clouded Name" enough romantic mystery, plot, suspense and thrills suit every audience.
The artistry of "The Tents of Allah" is comparable to the pictorial perfection of "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood."

Massive walls and towers, graceful mosques and minarets; exotic Morocco with all its lure and bizarre beauty. The extravagant luxury of the Sultan's palace; the slinking squalor of narrow, water-front cafes. Cloud-banked skies and wind-swept wastes. Life with the wandering tribes of desert bandits, plunderers of caravans.

Scale of wild adventure and intrigue. Fero- cious fighting, passionate romance, powerful drama, glorious entertainment.

Beautiful, stirring and distinctly different.

'The Tents of Allah" boasts of Monte Blue in a characterization which rivals his marvellous Danton in D. W. Griffith's "Orphans of the Storm"; Mary Alden in her greatest mother role, different and romantic.

It presents a supporting cast of tremendous dramatic talent: — Mary Thurman, Macey Harlam, Sally Crute, Frank Currier, Charles Lane, Martin Faust and others.

It reveals the adventures and romance of an American girl who brought seven years' bad luck to Morocco and of a daring young desert bandit who plundered caravans for riches but who had never stolen a woman.

P.S. Harrison Never Wrote a Stronger Review on a Picture Than This One

Feb. 10, 1923  HARRISON'S REPORTS

"The Bohemian Girl"—Ivor Novello and Gladys Cooper

Great moving picture successes are usually ushered into the motion picture market with flares and trumpets. Occasionally, however, one comes into it unannounced. Such "The Bohemian Girl" seems destined to be; for it possesses a combination of elements that are rarely found in one picture; elements that appeal to the cultured class as well as that move the multitude; to the foreigners as well as to the native born Americans.

To cultured people this picture will have a strong appeal, because there is hardly a person of this class with even a trace of love for music, but has either attended the opera, upon which the picture has been based, or been charmed by its sweet strains of music played by a band or by an orchestra.

The multitude it will move, because of the abundance of human interest in it, particularly in the second half. The father's finding of his long lost daughter, for example, who was stolen from him by a band of gypsies when a baby, cannot help but move such people, as it will the cultured ones; the passion ate but true love hero and hero feel for each other, the heroine's love not diminishing even after she has found her parents and been restored to her rank, is bound to win the admiration of everybody; the revelation to the hero and to the other characters that the hero is not a gypsy but a Polish nobleman, too, will touch and please.

"The Bohemian Girl," founded on the opera by William Balfe, deals with a young Polish officer, who escapes the Austrians, conquerors of his country, with his life. In Bohemia, he joins a band of gypsies. He saves the little daughter of an Austrian nobleman. Invited to a dinner, and asked to toast the Emperor, he is not harmed, but ordered to leave. His gypsy companion, however, is imprisoned. The Gypsy escapes, and takes the nobleman's little daughter along, whom he raises. Years afterward the hero and the stolen girl, heroine, fall in love. But the queen of gypsies, being herself in love with the hero, plans to bring about a break in the nobleman's match. They are again camping near the nobleman's grounds. The queen gives the heroine a memento, stolen by the gypsy, which the heroine wears. This stolen memento brings关于 the arrest, but also to her recognition by her father. The father refuses to his daughter permission to marry the man she loves, whom he thinks a con to marry the man she loves, the hero, angered at the insult, reveals that he is not a gypsy, but a Polish nobleman.

The father now consents to their marrying.

"The picture has been produced in England. Mr. Novello is as sympathetic and a capable an actor as Novello is as sympathetic and as capable an actor as Gladys Cooper. The picture has been there is on the screen today. Some of the settings are magnificent.—American Releasing Corp., Feb. 14; 6,462 ft.; 73 to 92 min.

"Fury" is making one of the biggest hits of the season at the big New York Strand Theatre on Broadway. Sunday great crowds blocked the sidewalks trying to get in. The S. R. O. signs were out, and at 9 o'clock the ticket sales were stopped. The New York critics call it one of "Our Dick's" greatest pictures.

YOU CAN'T BEAT IT

"Here's a movie combine hard to tie, much less beat; Richard Barthelmess, plus Dorothy Gish, plus Henry King, plus 'Fury,' a working good story. Sure makes us write success. A picture to be proud of."—New York Evening World.

CLASSIC MELODRAMA

"A classic among melodramas of the sea. Real pathos; exciting fights; as beautiful scenes as anything seen this year; acting near perfection. A rare mixture of popular sea stuff and the stuff of human life. Barthelmess reaches heights he has missed before—magnificent acting. The whole cast is splendid."—New York Sun

"A picture which impels the appellation Great.' The furor."—New York Evening World.

EXTRAORDINARY INTERACT

"In characterization and atmosphere the film is extra. Barthelmess acts with the naiveté and poise which have endeared to thousands. Miss Gish is of the most amusing and vivid performances of her career."—New York World.

REACHES GREAT HEIGHTS

"Reaches great dramatic heights beautifully played by Barthelmess and Miss Gish. Fine character acting."—Cincinnati Commercial-Times.

EVERY FOOT COUNTS

"It is so far and away the best screen sea story that all other dates are automatically null. Nine reels and not a superfluous one of the finest films—"—Philadelphia Evening Ledger.

RESISTIBLE DRAMA STAR IRRESISTIBLE

Barthelmess and Miss Gish irresistible a film of great scenic beauty and fine dramatic appeal. —St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Read Variety's Report from Philadelphia

"Philadelphia, Feb. 7.—Despite some of the worst weather of the winter, there were sensational turnaways for 'Fury.' At the Karlton it did the biggest business of any picture this season, and is one of the biggest money makers the house has had in 18 months' existence."

IN LINE TWO HOURS

"Its success is assured. Sunday fans stood in line from one to two hours." —San Francisco Examiner.

EPIC OF SCREEN

"Go to the Strand and see 'Fury,' the sea epic of the screen. A stirring story with scenic delights. The story catches the interest with the first few feet and increases to a thrilling climax." —New York Evening Mail.

Norma Talmadge reaches the height of her dramatic career, enhancing by her incomparable artistry a story aflame with love, a picture startlingly beautiful in its panoramic scenes of the exotic East with its spectacular splendors.

Here are reunited the screen's greatest lovers, for Eugene O'Brien plays opposite Miss Talmadge, heading an exceptional supporting cast.

The picture has been produced with all the care and lavishness of the Joseph M. Schenck productions, and was personally directed by that master artist, Frank Lloyd. The story is known to millions, being adapted by Frances Marion from Robert Hichens' famous novel and stage success. Photographed by Antonio Gaudio and Norbert Brodin, it is a treat to the eye.

A Bad Vindication

Exhibitors, in their struggles for a workable and constructive organization, have received a very scant reward.
They have built on false hopes time after time and in several instances when their goal seemed almost at hand something has occurred to set the whole proposition back.

A very discouraging situation is revealed in an incident of last week when it was seen that the executives of the national headquarters wanted to put the Chicago organization in the position of a concessionaire with respect to the exhibition which is contemplated in connection with the coming national convention.

It appears that the president of the organization demanded that the Chicago unit pay $15,000 for the privilege of holding the contemplated exhibition. The leaders of the Chicago unit meanwhile assumed the position that the proceeds of the affair were to be devoted to expenses in connection with the convention, entertainment of delegates and other kindred matters, and that it would not be their individual enterprise.

The entire incident reveals the lack of those things which must be present in any workable organization. Successful organizations in other lines would stand aghast at learning how such a controversy could come up. A national convention in which no better spirit of mutual understanding and cooperation exists than is evidenced by this incident is practically a waste of time for all concerned because it practically assures a week of wholesale argument and friction.

Lyman H. Howe

The connection of the late Lyman H. Howe, who died recently in Boston, with the now tremendously popular travel picture entitles his name to be placed in the list of those who have contributed in an important way toward the advancement of the standards of motion picture entertainment.

The travel picture has been for sometime and will always continue as an important adjunct to the story picture. It is a type of picture that has a definite appeal to practically every class and character of mankind. In bringing the distant and interesting places of the world to the millions who would never otherwise visit them, the travel picture does a valuable service in increasing mankind's knowledge of the world in which we live.

Lyman H. Howe should be and will be remembered for his pioneering service in this wonderful branch of motion picture entertainment.

O'Reilly's Retirement

Mr. Charles L. O'Reilly of New York seems determined to retire from all activity in connection with the exhibitor organization matters upon the expiration of his present term of office as head of the New York state exhibitors.

Mr. O'Reilly likes political and organization activities, both of a civil nature and also those in connection with the affairs of theatre owners. He is especially well qualified for this sort of work. Yet he is determined to quit.

Speculation on the causes leading up to Mr. O'Reilly's determination to get out of organization activities presents a situation which should cause serious reflection among theatre owners who realize that they must have leaders if their organization is to survive.

The explanation of Mr. O'Reilly's abandonment of his previous connection doubtless is that he has found it all a thankless task; that the conditions he has been compelled to face have discouraged him from attempting to carry on.

While we feel that Mr. O'Reilly's years of service has entitled him to the rest he is seeking, at the same time we hope that some change of circumstance will prevent the organization from becoming bereft of his counsel and assistance.

A BOUT the only thing they didn't find in old Tutankhamen's tomb, who died early in the spring, about 3,900 years ago, was a five-reeel super-production. There's a lot of 'em that might have come from King Tut's grave but so far nobody's claimed that distinction.

However, it is now up to the press-agents to use the publicity Tut's getting, and we'll be looking for a story built around his royal reputation.

Won't the customers who read the subtitles aloud have a fine time pronouncing "Tutankhamen." Wow.

I see by the Old Testament (M. I. Vand) that if "I, Lyman Friedman, IS the Celebrated Players and is covering Northern Indiana ter tory." This is a very funny news, info-much as Joseph L. Friedman IS the Celebrated Players Company, and has a large staff of salesmen working for him.

And that's quite a contract—covering Northern Indiana. Now if it was Rhode Island, or Delaware, it wouldn't be so hard but Indiana takes a lot of territory, and its already pretty well covered—with sand.

Chicago has a novel way of settling its labor troubles. The head of the The ducing the labor leaders by one.

Chicago is to get eight wines and beer. That is, the play by Aaron Hoffman under that name is soon to open at the Woods theatre.

Hurray for Idaho

The Great Poet Laureate Contest— which has been raging for weeks in another department of The Herald—has come to a close. This isn't news that should properly be reported in this col, only the fellow who won was Phillip Rand, of Salmon, Idaho, thus showing that Idaho produces poets as well as beet sugar and Senator Borah's.

By the way now that film is down to two cents a foot, there'll probably be a lot of new companies formed.

Uniform Contract Aroused Interest from Exhibitors

Several State Organizations Condemn It in Resolutions
—New York Theatre Owners Ask That It be Given Fair Trial

The uniform contract, temporarily at least, has superseded every other topic of exhibitor discussion.

With the exception, every theatre owner who has expressed an opinion on it states that it is "not perfect." A large group accept it as an earnest step in the right direction. Another large group declare it is unacceptable. And a still larger group of theatre owners remain silent—apparently waiting for it to be put to the test of being in force.

State Organizations Condemn Its Provisions

The ink had hardly dried on the signatures to the contract before four units of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America had voted their disapproval of the document—Western New York, Connecticut, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

In view of Sydney S. Cohen, president of the M. P. T. O. A., avoiding the ratification meeting, the action of two of these units—Western New York and Connecticut—is taken to mirror his attitude on the contract. The Connecticut organization endorses Cohen's distributing proposition at the same meeting it rejected the Uniform Contract.

Signers Defend Terms

S. A. Moross, secretary of the T. O. C. of New York City, and Bernard Edelheit, chairman of the uniform contract committee of the T. O. C. C. issued statements this week defending the form of the contract urging exhibitors to give it a fair trial.

"Let us be fair to the uniform contract," is the plea of Edelheit, as he has stated on several occasions, it is not 100 per cent of what we sought to accomplish in favor of the exhibitor. It was not possible to accomplish all of that on the first attempt but it is certainly a step ahead. "So much is gained by having a uniform contract for still further achievements in the future."

"The contract as a whole is a vast improvement. If any contract ever written before in this industry," states S. A. Moross. "It should be accepted in good faith by all parties in the industry."

Present Exhibitor Discussion

With a view to being fair to both proponents and opponents of the new contract, EXHIBITORS HERALD has called a conference of the leading motion picture organizations to discuss the question. W. M. Roob of Port Washington, Wis., was the first exhibitor to raise a question as to one of the provisions in the contract. S. A. Moross was invited to answer him. A wire was received from the Wisconsin exhibitors, telling of their rejecting the contract, and a short time after Hiram Abrams, president of the uniform contract committee, answered Wisconsin's objection.

Letter from C. Ross Riley of Oberlin, Kan., objecting to another provision of the contract, was also received. His letter arrived too late to invite any postponement of the contract to answer it.

The HERALD columns, as always, are open to any comments on the question from exhibitor readers of the publication.

Will Be Up at Convention

It appears certain that the uniform contract will be one of the important questions at the next National Exhibitors Convention of the M. P. T. O. A. in Chicago May 19 to 26.

A number of exhibitor leaders, declining to make statements for publication, have declared in informal interviews that they regard the Uniform Contract a good thing as a general proposition, although they object to one or more provisions of it.

It is stated that it is to be expected that state organizations will hesitate to bind themselves until they are certain the majority of members approve the contract.

O'Reilly to Address

Amplas in Exhibitors

Views of New Contract

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York, has been invited to be the guest of honor at the luncheon of the Chicago Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., this week, and to address the members on the subject: "The Uniform Contract from an exhibitor's viewpoint."

Herbert Crocker, who is the toastmaster of the luncheon, figured that the advertisers were keenly interested in the application of the new contract and invited Mr. O'Reilly to give the association his views on the effect it will have on the industry generally, and on the exhibitor specifically.

Mr. O'Reilly has made an intensive study of the contract since it was proposed and represented the exhibitors of the state in its preparation, and was believed by Mr. Crocker to be best qualified to explain its benefits to the advertisers.

The Question Box This Week

1. You have read of the first railroad theatre car. What do you think of the plan to exhibit pictures on trains?

2. You have read objections to the uniform contract and explanations by those prominent in framing it. What is your opinion?

3. You have read of the official call for the national convention of the M. P. T. O. A. In your opinion, what subjects should be dealt with at the conclave?
Questions and Answers on the Uniform Contract

On Section 17

(Letter received from W. M. Roob, managed, Grand theatre, Port Washington, Wis.)

PORT WASHINGTON, WIS.—To the Editor: Your issue covering the New Uniform Contract is very interesting. Inasmuch as the main reason was to eliminate deposits, I call attention to Section 17. It eliminates, so far as the exhibitor, upon execution of the contract, pays down an amount as "paid on account." Question: What is the difference? It's nothing but the same kid with a new name. Then Section 20. The distributor can demand $100 to $500 from an exhibitor who fails to bring about arbitration by merely giving two weeks notice of termination from the fact that he can't keep on passing the buck and you'll be right back in the old rut again. They started a real game of checkers.—W. M.
Roob, manager, Grand theatre, Port Washington, Wis.

On Section 12

(Wire received from the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin.)

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—To the Editor: Board of Directors of the Wisconsin Theatre Owners in session February 13 unqualifiedly protest against the adoption of the so-called uniform contract. Paragraph 12 would give to producers headed by Will I. Hay's absolute control on screen of the country, which control could be sold for fabulous sums for political or other propaganda. This alone is sufficient to condemn the whole contract.

Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin, Milwaukee, Wis.

On Section 16

(Letter received from R. Ross Riley, manager, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kan.)

OBERLIN, KANSAS.—To the Editor: This has been a joke to me for some time:
It is a clause in the new contract referring to the advertising matter, as follows:

SIXTEENTH: All advertising matter used by the exhibitor in connection with the exhibition of said photoplays must lease from or through the distributor and must not be sold, leased or given away by the exhibitor.

This clause was taken from the standard contracts of some distributor for we have seen it before and it has no place in the Uniform Contract. Unless it can be crossed out, it is a holdup. The distributor claims they are making no money on the advertising and yet they want you to buy it of them, when you can get it of any advertising exchanges for half the price they charge for it. Why should they care if they are not making anything on it whether you get it from them or someone else?

And after you do buy it from them (they don't rent it any more and give you credit on its return) who are we to nobody else's. So why should you not give it away or sell it if you wish? No law could keep you from it. When you buy this thing it is yours to give it to anybody you please with. I know where I can get advertising at half the price they will charge and when you go back and get credit on more.

So don't it look like a joke to you?—

Editor's Note.—Mr. Riley's letter arrived too late to ask any of the exhibitor signs of the new-form contract agreement to answer it, in time for this issue. The answer, if obtained, will appear in an early issue.
Missouri Beats Censorship
As N. Y. Repeal Fight Opens

Sunday Closing Attempt Fails in Indiana—Reformer Rebuffed Elsewhere—Oppressive Measures Are Offered in Other States

Setbacks are being experienced by the reform element throughout the country.

Missouri is the latest state to repudiate 'the reformer, the censorship measure before the legislature of that commonwealth having been killed last week. Announcement that the censorship bill before the Iowa legislature had been killed was made last week's issue of the Herald.

Interest in reform matters now centers upon New York State where a hearing will be held on March 6, on measures providing for the repeal of censorship in that state. Following news reports describe the present status of the legislative situation:

Missouri
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Feb. 20.—The house committee on criminal jurisdiction last week virtually killed the censorship bill sponsored by the Committee of Fifty, when it voted unanimously to report the measure unfavorably. Although an unfavorable report means that the idea is dead, good faith was given to the blue noses who will endeavor to revive the bill on the floor of the house. Little is known of enactment, however, is expressed.

In fighting the measure, the industry had the support of a large delegation of Kansas City women and senators, who came to Jefferson City last week and publicly denounced political censorship.

Would Stop S. R. O. Sales
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Feb. 20.—Representative O'Brien of St. Louis has presented a bill to the legislature which would prohibit the sale of tickets after the theatre is filled. Penalty for violation would be a fine of $1 to $500.

To Vote on Sunday Shows
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

WEBSTER CITY, Ia., Feb. 20. This town will decide by referendum on Federal Censorship Loses in Debate

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 20.

—Secretaries of senators and congressmen, who form what is known as Little Congress, settled the question of federal censorship of motion pictures in a stirring four-hour debate at one of the regular meetings. The ants won by a big majority.

Senators and congressmen crowded the caucus room of the Capital to hear the arguments. The opponents of the question argued that the present federal law was adequate to prohibit the shipment in a state of objectionable films and declared that this law, which covers newspapers and books as well, was as far as the federal government should go in this direction.

There are 500 members in the Little Congress and the body prides itself that it is not controlled by any small organized minorities and does not have to worry about re-election.

April 3, the question of Sunday motion pictures, a petition bearing 1,300 signatures and demanding repeal of the blue law has been presented to the council.

Face Daylight Saving Fight
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

ST. LOUIS, MO., Feb. 20.—Riverview Club has presented a resolution to the Board of Aldermen asking that daylight saving time be observed between April 1 and November 1 of each year. Similar measures have been defeated in the past.

New York
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 20.—The first move of importance toward the probable repeal of the motion picture censorship law in this state is committee to meet Tuesday, March 6, when a public hearing will be held before the ways and means committee on bills introduced in both houses of the legislature calling for immediate repeal of the obnoxious law.

While the hearing is supposed largely to determine public sentiment and govern the committee in so far as reporting the bill out of committee, a vote on the floor of the house, there is no question but that the bill will be reported on Public interest in the matter is too great for one to think that the bill might die in committee.

Whether or not the bill can be passed is another question. The bill stands one climb by one. The assembly is Republican by five. While the bill, engineered by Senator James J. Walker, is being passed in the upper house, there are grave doubts that it can be passed by the assembly. The fight will center in the lower house and gives every evidence of being the most bitterly fought of any arising from the introduction of measures.

Campaign for Sunday Shows
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 20.—Ren- schers, across the Hudson from Albany, has started a campaign for Sunday shows. Petitions are being circulated by exhibitors. The common council will consider the question in the near future.

Indiana
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 20.—An effort to amend the Memorial day bill on second reading to include all forms of amusement, such as motion picture shows and theatres, failed in the house of representatives of the state legislature by a vote of 61 to 28. The bill passed third reading in the

$1,500 Added to Pennsylvania Treasury as Result of Special Drive—Outlook Bright for Great Convention at Oklahoma City

Pre-convention activities of the state units of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America are becoming prevalent.

Oklahoma this week issues a call for a two-day convention of the Theatre Owners and Managers Association of Oklahoma, has issued a call for a convention of the organization to be held at the City Auditorium in Oklahoma City on March 1 and 2. A busy two days has been planned by "Josh," as he is familiarly known to exhibitors of the state, and other officials of the league.

In connection with the convention, and a feature of it, will be the exposition in the main hall of the Auditorium, the banquet, which is scheduled for second night, and a dance.

The banquet and the dance will be free to all members of the organization. As an added attraction, Henry B. Wal- thall and Mary Charlston will be in attendance.

In sending the call broadcast, Secretary Billings writes: "Bring your wife or sweetheart and let's have the greatest convention the Theatre Owners and Managers Association ever held."

In a postscript, he writes: "Thanks to you fellows that have kicked in; if you haven't, why not?"

Pennsylvania

(First National Franchise Holder, 20.)

PHILADELPHIA, PA., Feb. 20.—An intensive drive for dues, conducted during the early part of this month, netted $1,500 in contributions and pledges for the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey, and Delaware.

Seven teams backed the severest weather in three years in their drive to put the state unit on a sound financial basis. Additional members also were signed.

Secretary Aarons is authority for the statement that the organization now boasts a membership of more than 300 theatres.

Comprising the teams which made the successful drive were:

Team No. 1—Dr. S. M. Norris, captain; Ben Petree and Ben Shindler.

Team No. 2—George Kline, captain; David Barrist and John Bagley.

Team No. 3—Bill Butler, captain; Sam Hyman and Sam Kanior.

Team No. 4—Lew Pizar, captain, Harry Stevenson and Charles Dutkin.

Team No. 5—Charles Rapoport, captain; Sam Stiefel and Elliott Goldman.

Team No. 6—W. C. Hunt, captain; George Aarons and Morris Bromberg.

Team No. 7—C. H. Goodwin, captain; Columbus Stamper and Sam Stiefel.

Griffith Considering Plant in New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, LA., Feb. 20.—Reports that D. W. Griffith may soon have a studio in New Orleans are current. It is known that a committee of financiers has been negotiating with Mr. Griffith for some time regarding a plant here to be used in a winter production. Sites which would serve the purpose have been found and funds necessary for promotion of the structure have been pledged, it is said.

While in New Orleans with his company, which is filming "White Rose," Mr. Griffith was the guest of the city at the annual Mardi Gras pageant.

Wilson to Tour State For Missouri League

KANSAS CITY, MO., Feb. 20.—C. R. Wilson, a member of the board of directors of the Missouri organization who is acting as business manager temporarily, and Charlie Sears, president, have completed plans whereby Mr. Wilson will start on a tour of the state this week in effort to double the membership of the M. P. T. O. M. Upon Mr. Wilson’s return to Kansas City, which will be about two months, a business manager will be employed to assume charge of the new headquarters at Eighteenth street and Baltimore avenue.

Storm Halts DeMille Visit to Lonely Isle

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 20.—The exploration trip which Cecil B. DeMille and his party had planned into the Ti- buron Islands have to wait until summer. A seventy-mile gale which the Paramount producer’s cruiser "Seaward" ran into in the gulf region played havoc with the yacht in a thirty-six-hour bat- tle and forced abandonment of the trip.

DeMille returned here by rail but de- clares that he is going to make the trip to the uninhabited isle this summer. In the meantime he is going to start work on production of the "Ten Command- ments."
Do Theatre Owners of Country Want Their Own Distributing System?

HERE IS THE ANSWER

THE “HERALD” THIS WEEK presents additional opinions, voiced by exhibitors, relative to the Theatre Owners Distributing Corporation, launched recently by Sydney S. Cohen and William A. True. The first installment of the survey conducted by this publication was carried in last week’s issue.

IN MAKING ITS NATIONAL SURVEY to ascertain the consensus of exhibitor opinion on the Cohen plan to organize an exhibitor-owned distribution system, the “Herald” presented to theatre owners the following questionnaire:

1. DO YOU BELIEVE there is a place in the industry for an exhibitor-owned distributing system?
2. DO YOU BELIEVE the time opportune for organization of an exhibitor distributing system?
3. OTHER COMMENT on question.

In cases where exhibitors made definite answers to the foregoing, they are so indicated by the numerals, 1, 2 and 3.

W. M. WARD, Starlight theatre, Corn ing, Ark., says: (1) Yes, I believe there is a place, but doubt if the expense involved would compensate the exhibitors in the long run. This would be something similar to the farmers union. It starts out fine but where does it end? Usually worse off than before. Some one person wants to run it for their own selfish end, and this has been proven in some theatre organizations.

(2) I do not believe the place can be organized but as long as producers go into the exhibiting end why should we not have the same privilege? But here is the drawback, the exhibitors are not organized themselves as they should be, and as long as they are not how could they be expected to cooperate as they should?

(3) The exchanges and producers are accusing the exhibitor of this and that and he musn’t do as they say. I know there is a lot of wrong but I also think a lot of exchanges are far from right. As for service, it is all right for them to send in a film torn and substitute a picture on you.

* * *

P. G. ESTEE, Fad theatre, Brookings, S. D., says: (1) Yes, on an equitable percentage basis. Never so long as the “get all you can” policy is maintained by all classes of distributors. Not so long as “take all or take none” of our pictures is the slogan. (2) No. (3) I do not believe in percentage as it would now be handled. Handled by the exhibitors’ organization it might succeed.

* * *

J. LEE STONE, Victory theatre, Mount Airy, N. C., says: (1) No, not in this territory. There are enough exchanges with their expenses, and the exhibitors must finally pay the expenses of the exchanges. (3) No. (5) Exhibitors should try to reduce expenses, not increase them. Better try to get the producers to reduce the footage. Features should be limited to five reels and some even to three reels. All that made moving pictures popular at the start was the fact that it did not cost much and did not take long to see them. And then they go crazy and pay such ridiculous prices for some one to play them. The idea of paying Jackie Coogan $500,000. Not only sounds foolish, but is foolish.

* * *

F. H. HARRIS, Amuse theatre, Hart, Mich., says: (1) No, I believe that we have a lot of other things to do, such as music tax, tax on admissions. Our energy is needed there. No more bluffs as there has been in some cases. We are not treated very badly and it is up to each exhibitor to insist on not paying more than he can afford. There is too much jealousy. Where there are two exhibitors in a city, each one tries to beat the other fellow to show the big pictures first, so the salesmen get fancy prices. I find the best way is to tell salesman NO in big letters, sell it to the other fellow. There are lots more just as good as yours.

(2) To second question NO. Too much chance for the big fellows to fatten

Thanks!

up themselves and all relations and friends. They will not let the little fellow to help them. For me I have seen too much of that kind of work. Fat salary to sons, sons-in-law, brothers and others and the stock holders to pay. Not for me. There is one thing I see we do not need, all the high priced salesmen. Sometimes I have had four all traveling together, each one trying to sell me. I can buy from exchange better than from salesmen as they do not know but little of what you want. Say they will write in and let you know. Ten to one if he gives you dates the booker changes them. So I cut them out.

If you buy let them pay exhibitor's expenses. Treat them as buyers same as the furniture manufacturers do in G. K. They have two big showings per year and buyers from all over the United States come in. Now something like that will save a lot of money. We all buy 3 to 4 months' program at a time, so why not go to a central point and see the big pictures screened. Let us keep up with the times. Automobile manufacturers have these shows and dealers' conventions. Henry Ford calls all dealers into central places and pays all expenses, so the film exchanges could do the same. All get together and if an exhibitor buys, pay all or part of expenses as to the amount he buys. I am sure it would pay one-half of the salesmen. Just have a good time at the expense of the people they sell for, that I know. As there is not one that calls on me but what wants to hurry and get a booking and get in to Muskegon or Grand Rapids or perhaps in summer up to Twin City or Petoskey as they have a friend they want to see.

J. J. KUDLACEK, Swan theatre, Swanton, Neb., says: (1) Personally, I am not needing one. (2) Do not feel competent to answer. (3) Cooperation can be overdone. If exhibitors want exchanges and producers to stay out of the exhibiting end, why then an exhibitors' distributing organization?

WILLIAM H. CREAL, Suburban theatre, Omaha, Neb., says: (1) Yes. Perhaps the exhibitors in the West do not feel the necessity as much as they do in the East, where there is a scarcity of good pictures for the first run houses, and where the big pictures are monopolized by the producer-exhibitors. (2) This time of year I do not feel the way. As a matter of fact, according to my best information, things have almost reached a crisis, as the producers have broken their promise not to buy or build more theatres, and film rental is ever mounting higher and higher. (3) I believe such an organization if it is desired, could obtain good pictures, and is honestly and efficiently managed.

C. A. MOORE, Auditorium theatre, Hume, Mo., says: (1) Yes. (2) Yes. (3) Yes.

T. A. SHEA, Palace theatre, McGehee, Ark., says: (1) No. (2) No. (3) Two

R. L. BEHLER, Royal theatre, Garretson, S. D., says: (1) Personally I don't think there is. Why don't producers produce, and exhibitors exhibit? All exhibitors need is organization. (2) I do, if producers are going to try and hog it all. (3) If producers would run things on a business proposition, like exhibitors do, there would be no hard feelings, and everyone would get along fine. Too many skin games are the case and when they fall through it makes them sore. If anyone is in business they and make a business out of it.

W. A. WHITE, Jefferson theatre, Jefferson City, Tenn., says: (1) Yes, indeed. (2) Yes. (3) I think it a necessity as a matter of self protection.

E. J. STUART, Best theatre, Lakeville, Conn., says: (1) No. (2) No.

A. F. KEHR, Princess theatre, Ogallah, Neb., says: (1) Yes, providing it is put on a solid foundation. (2) You can never put anything over that you put off. (3) From what I have learned through reading about the exhibitors' distributing corporation I would say that it is the only way we exhibitors will be able to hold our own. We are all now working for the different distributing corporations without compensation.

J. H. RANKIN, Mission theatre, Clayton, N. M., says: (1) Yes, if the exhibitors will stand back and support. (2) Yes, sooner the better. Later on there are liable to be no independent exhibitors. (3) Should this go into effect, I suppose the big corporations will gobble it up.

S. L. LOCKETT, Auditorium theatre, Atlanta, Ga., says: (1) I do. (2) Yes. (3) P. S.: Of course, if the plan will be broad enough for a colored exhibitor's consideration, I am over-anxious. (5) Being an operator of a house for colored patrons only, and running only the higher class films, I am in the raffle of all this going on in which with all colored houses and comments in this territory. I also feel that I am speaking for the higher class houses and am making now for the good of Better Photoplays.

JOSEPH HOPP, Rosenfield, Hopp & Co., Chicago, Ill., says: (1) Yes. (2) Yes. (3) In voting yes on two above questions, I do from two standpoints, viz., First—It is called "exhibition value" of films the exhibitor is too often forced to pay a greater rental than the producer actually pays for—resulting in a greater loss than profit on "fair price" films amount to. It also stops reduction of admission prices to a point where the picture theatre is "the recreation of the masses." Second—Exhibitors have the same right to distribute and produce, as the two latter have in competing in the exhibition end. It would merely equalize things.

C. C. HUBERT, Opera House, Newark, Del., says: (1) Yes. (2) Yes. (3) To get a real attraction an exhibitor must pay such a rental that it is impossible to make any profit, or he is compelled to buy 40 or 50 pictures to get not more than six reel attractions.

C. W. LANCASTER, Grand theatre, Eastman, Ga., says: (1) Yes. (2) Yes. If there ever was. The film companies will take your money and deposit and if you lose up will come back. Always have some excuse to offer.

P. L. BEHLER, Imperial, Atlantic City, N. J., says: (1) Yes, provided the organisations all work together. (2) Yes, I think it is good. (3) Of course, I think everyone should work for its success—Good faith. Does Good Faith exist in our days?

A. J. HALEY, Hillside theatre, Chicago, Ill., says: (1) Believe that there are enough distributors and organisations now, but if an exhibitor organisation system was formed it would be the start of another period in the moving picture business. (2) Yes.

MARK M. HANSEN, Victory and Lyric theatre, Oxnard, Cal., says: (1) No. (2) I do not want it. I believe theatre owners should be running theatres and not try to run an exchange. On the other hand I don't believe it right for an exhibition to own any theatre or any interests in any theatre, and something should be done to break such a combination. (3) I believe this franchise is absolutely the bunk. It might be O.K. at the moment you buy it, but if the exchange doesn't think it gets enough out of you you generally lose and the exhibitor is the goat. Please answer this note and let me have your opinion.

PHILIP RAND, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho, says: (1) Yes, provided exhibitors may refuse to play any pictures that they do not want to run. To have half of few men in New York which must be played in Idaho is suicide. That is the main fault in the First National subfranchise. I want to pick my own pictures.

(2) No. We smaller fellows are not ready for it as we need more light on the question.

(3) This company has already organized, elected their own directors and made their own plans. A real exhibitor releasing company should meet and elect officers in a democratic manner and give all a chance to have his say from its very inception.

R. ROSS RILEY, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kans., says: (1) I do not think there is a place in the industry for an exhibitor owned distributing system, because except for a distributing business it is impossible. They are shownmen, not distributors. We have a pretty good idea of what would happen in First National. They were supposed to be controlled by exhibitors, but there is not a bigger trust in the business today, unless it be Parmount. I wonder if the truth was known how much exhibitors have made money by buying the franchise.

J. C. McKee, Electric theatre, Bolivar, Mo., says: (1) I believe such a thing is possible. (2) See no especial reason at this time more than has been in the past. (3) Personally I have not expericed as I said above it seems possible, at the same time it is doubtful whether it will prove of any real benefit to the small town exhibitor.

ROBERT M. HARRINGTON, Star theatre, Lathrop, Mo., says: Being only a little three night a week showman
I do not feel competent to express an opinion that would carry any weight.

P. G. HELD, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Neb., says: (1) I don't believe that there is at the present time. It seems to me as if there is plenty of competition.
(2) I do not. (3) An organization of this kind might be a good thing if there was not enough competition, but at the present time it seems to me as if there is competition plenty.

W. D. PATRICK, Cozy theatre, Florala, Ala., says: (1) Yes, since some of the producers and distributors are getting into the exhibiting end of it. (2) YES.
(3) I think there is room for something to be done at once, as the outlook in Atlanta claim it costs more than $6 per picture to make shipments out to the exhibitors, when I feel sure that same could be handled for at least $1 to $1.50 per picture, as it does not cost any more to handle a good picture than it does a cheap picture, and I can get all the pictures I want out of some of the cheaper and older pictures at $1 per reel. I think every picture SHOULD BE DONE AT ONCE FOR THE SMALL TOWNS.

L. P. CHARLES, Grand opera house,
Checotah, Okla., says: (1) You can't trust the promoters. (2) You can't trust the promoters. (3) You can't trust the promoters.

CROSBY BROTHERS, Lily theatre,
Buffalo, N. Y., says: (1) Yes. (2) Yes.
(3) There will always be room in the industry for a distributing company that is square shooting and honorable in its dealings with theatre owners. With few exceptions the distributing companies ever justly earned the little fee and practically gave the film to the larger theatres. We know that theatres in Buffalo with seat-capacities of 1,500 to 2,500 pay as little as $25 for featured names, but those (200 to 400 seats) are charged $10 for the same. In one instance we paid as much for a serial as a 2,500 seat house.

A. L. LIGHTER, Orpheum theatre, Mellen, Wis., says: (1) No, not for the small town exhibitor. (2) No.
(3) An organization as above will not help the small exhibitor who does not have enough money to buy the necessary stock. How can it help him then?

MILLER AND CARROLL, Gayety theatre, Amory, Miss., say: At this early stage of this new enterprise, far be it from us to condemn or commend an undertaking of this kind. We believe Mr Cohen has the necessary "gray matter" to put this project over, but, still, on the other hand, we do not believe that any man that is not familiar with the trials and tribulations of the small town exhibitor has any idea what

TWO VIEWS of the Chicago & Alton "theatre car" which made its initial run between Chicago and St. Louis on Lincoln's birthday. An all Universal bill was presented, the feature picture being "The Flame of Life," starring Priscilla Dean.

Chicago Train Launches First Railroad Theatre Car

Motion Pictures to Be Presented Regularly If Commerce Commission Sanctions It

By J. RAY MURRAY

(Staff Representative of Exhibitors Herald)

FOR the first time in the history of the film business and of railroading, motion pictures were successfully shown on a moving train between Chicago and St. Louis on February 12, 1923. Lincoln's birthday. The experiment was made on the Chicago & Alton railroad.

THAT the innovation was a success was attested by the delighted passengers on the train, both going to and coming from St. Louis. The train used for the experiment was the "Red Limited" and it is proposed to make the "theatre car" a part of its regular equipment, as soon as the Interstate Commerce Commission sanctions it.

A steel coach, especially equipped for the purpose, was used as a theatre. Two Acme projectors were installed and a Day-lite screen suspended near the ceiling, giving a picture 5 feet by 4 feet. The power for the projection machine was taken from the car battery and was without flicker or vibration of any kind.

The program given on the initial trip consisted of an International News reel, the Baby Peggy comedy, "Peg o' the Movies," and the six reel Universal-Jewel production, "The Flame of Life," starring Priscilla Dean.

"The Movietorium," as the C. & A. calls its theatre car, can accommodate forty-five persons, and they gave three shows each way on the eight hour trip. A neat trailer reading as follows was used to introduce the pictures at each show:

"This is the first moving picture theatre ever operated on a train for the pleasure of its passengers. The event may become history. After the show we will be glad to receive your impressions of this novel form of travel entertainment. George J. Charlton, Passenger Traffic Manager, C. & A. railroad."

There was keen competition among the film concerns to sell the railroad pictures for its moving theatre, but Herman Stern, assistant general sales manager for Universal Pictures Corporation, Chicago, finally won out. Regular programs were printed and distributed through the train and everyone on the Limited visited the theatre car on route.

Those who accompanied the theatre car on its initial trip were: Fred McQuigg, dramatic editor, Chicago Evening American; Miss Genevieve Harris, Chicago Evening Post; Miss Edmund Camp, managing editor, Visonal Education magazine; R. E. Woodmanse, editor, Illinois Tradesmen, Springfield, Ill.; D. F. Barrett, Post-Di!patch and St. Louis Star; H. L. LaMèrtha, St. Louis Globe-Democrat; H. S. Monk, St. Louis Times; W. G. Powers, Globe-Democrat, St. Louis; B. E. Walker, advertising manager, Chicago Daily News; Dudley Walker, advertising manager, Chicago Evening Herald; Maj. L. A. Boening, sales manager, St. Louis; Larsen, factory superintendent, and D. D. Swem, sales department of the Acme Motion Picture Projector Company.

The following Universal exchange officials were guests of the railroad on the trip: Herman Stern and wife, assistant general sales manager; L. L. Lerman and wife, country sales manager; Louis Lammie, sales promotion manager, and Walter L. Hill and wife, director of publicity and advertising; Barney Rosenthal, manager St. Louis; N. E. Steinberg, sales manager; Morris Engle, director publicity St. Louis.

Those who acted as hosts from the Chicago & Alton railroad were: George J. Charlton, passenger traffic manager; C. R. Davidson, assistant general passenger agent; D. M. McNamara, general agent, St. Louis; R. A. Pearce, general agent, Chicago; and Merle W. Dancy, general agent, Peoria.

"A. E." Progress Is Shown by Dividends

Kane Organization Pays Deferred Dividend As Well

As Regular One

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—Impressive evidence of the wisdom of policies adopted by Associated Exhibitors, Inc., when Arthur S. Kane took active charge of its activities as president, March 6, 1922, is seen in the action of the directors, last week, in declaring two more dividends.

Complete All Payments

One of these declarations is for 2 per cent dividend for the first quarter of 1923 on Associated's preferred stock, to stockholders of record as of March 25th next. The other calls for an accrued and deferred dividend of 2 1/2 per cent for the four months of 1923 to stockholders of record as of December 31, 1923. These make complete the payment of all dividends from March 1st, 1921, when the corporation began business, to the end of the first quarter of 1923.

During its first year the activities of the young company were devoted largely to the perfection of its working organization. Not only were no dividends paid in that time, but, at the end of the twelve months, in March, 1922, the company's figures showed an actual loss on operations. But through 1922 and up to the present, with Mr. Kane in active direction, not only has Associated paid all current dividends as they have come due, but it has prospered sufficiently to pay all accrued and deferred dividends for 1921, dating from its organization.

Expansion Is Planned

"We contemplate a considerable expansion of our activities during 1923, and we are confident that our success will continue without a sign of interruption," President Kane declares.

Seeks American Film

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—Odd Biornstad, owner of a leading theatre in Stockholm, Sweden, has arrived in America to purchase films here for distribution in Scandinavia. He is making his headquarters at the office of E. S. Manheimer, 130 West 46th street.
Famous Players May Face Trust Inquiry This Spring

Federal Trade Commission Files Amended Complaint Which Calls for New Answers—Hearing Tentatively Set for April 5

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 20.—Interest in Federal Trade Commission inquiry into the affairs of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation was revived this week, when the Commission filed an amended complaint against the corporation and the individuals and concerns, who have already answered the previous charges.

Hearings May Take Place This Spring

The amended complaint provides that hearings will begin at Washington the morning of April 5, "or as soon thereafter as the same may be reached." It is unlikely that the hearings will begin on April 5, but it is possible that the inquiry will be underway this spring.

Gist of the Complaint

The gist of the complaint is that "the respondents, Adolph Zukor, Alfred L. Lasky and Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, have conspired and conferred, together and with the respondents Jules Mastbaum, Alfred S. Blaik, Stephen A. Lynch and Ernest V. Richards, Jr., and Realert Pictures Corporation, the Bradley Company of America, Stanley Booking Corporation, Black New England Theaters, Inc., Southern Enterprises, Saenger Amusement Company, Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky, Jules Mastbaum, Alfred S. Black, Stephen A. Lynch and Ernest V. Richards, Jr., have conspired and conspired..."

In a result of the conspiracy, it is declared, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is the largest theatre owner in the world, and in one week in the year 1920 more than 6,000 American theatres, or approximately one-third of all the motion picture theatres in the United States, showed nothing but Famous pictures, and about 67 cents of every dollar that was paid to enter moving picture theatres is paid to enter those theatres which displayed Paramount pictures.

The complaint, as amended, goes into details regarding the manner in which this alleged control is exercised, and is based on the respondents and asserts that coercive measures were resorted to in compelling exhibitors to book and exhibit motion picture films produced or distributed by Famous-Players-Lasky Corporation.

Bernheim and Boushey Are Made Managers at "U" City by Laemmle

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 20.—Official announcement is made by Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, of two important appointments at Universal City. Julius Bernheim is the new director general and Homer A. Boushey has been made production manager.

Bernheim is succeeding Irving Thalberg, who recently joined the Louis B. Mayer organization. He has been with the company some time, and was business manager the past twelve months.

Mr. Boushey is a veteran in the business and since Essanay quiet producing has been associated with George K. Spoor in the Spoor-Thompson Machine Company of Chicago.

Sales Drive Marks Anniversary Of Film Booking Offices

Year-Old Organization Has Made Remarkable Growth Under Leadership of P. A. Powers

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, February 20.—Film Booking Offices of America is one year old this month. Under the leadership of P. A. Powers, managing director, the organization has forged ahead during the last twelve months until today it holds an enviable place among the larger producing and distributing companies of the industry.

In observance of its rapid growth, the company this week announces its first anniversary sales drive which will be conducted under the personal direction of Mr. Powers. The drive will extend through March, and it is the hope of the managing director to reach every theatre in the country with F. B. O. product during the anniversary period.

Mr. Powers announces that $7,500 will be distributed to the branches, the prizes having been proportioned so that every member of the three prize winning exchanges will share in the award. In the case of ties the amount of the original prizes will be awarded to the tying contestants.

In addition to the cash awards, a silver loving cup, standing three feet high, will be presented to the exchange showing the best record of bookings during the drive. This cup will be retained by the sales campaign branch until the sales campaign next year, when it will pass into the hands of the new leader. The exchange winning it three times will get permanent possession of it.

“Our growth and our present strength,” said the F. B. O., managing director, “after only one year’s existence, is proof enough of the loyalty and energy of the sales organization which Harry Berman has built up. We found, when we first announced our plans for a first anniversary drive, that the spirit of the home office was reflected in each and every exchange; that the enthusiasm shown for our present F. B. O. product here in New York, was equalled and exalted by the men in the field. It will be with a very willing hand that I will sign the checks aggregating $7,500 payable to this loyal and capable sales force. They are carrying out in every way the policy of exhibit service which I announced as the foundation of the Film Booking Offices one year ago.

“Our sales force has been instructed in this drive, with only one slogan: ‘contracts.’ It is our object to bring F. B. O. into every theatre in the country; to introduce ourselves and our product and to prove our claim of service, to the smallest and largest exhibitors. As a year-old organization we have not had the opportunity of meeting the number of friends that should be ours, but this first anniversary drive will widen our circle until it embraces the smallest theatre in the farthest town.

“Fortunately we are able to offer exhibitors during this first anniversary drive the finest array of productions which we have ever had in our history. They include such proven box office attractions as ‘The Third Alarm,’ ‘Thelema,’ ‘Fighting Blood’ and ‘Canyon of the Fools.’ Our prospects for the coming months are even finer, as our publication in Collier’s Weekly, and ‘Daytime Waves,’ a forthcoming special, has a vital theme and a tremendous appeal. These are only a few of the features and short subjects, built upon the idea of ‘entertainment plus exploitation,’ which will be issued through F. B. O., within the next few months. Others will be ‘The Fourth Musketeer,’ another H. C. Witwer story starring Johnny Walker; ‘Westbound 99,’ Emory Johnson’s big railroad drama; ‘Divorce,’ a new Jane Novak picture produced by Chester Bennett; ‘Crashin’ Through,’ Harry Carey’s next Western drama, and our regular Plum Center and Carter DeHaven comedies.

Film Booking Offices of America came under the control of P. A. Powers late in February, 1922. J. J. Schnitzer became vice president and Harry Powers, director of exploitation and publicity director. In July Harry M. Berman took over the office of general manager of distribution, and at the same time the name Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation was abandoned and the name Film Booking Offices adopted.

In addition to a thirteen-story home office building, there are thirty-one exchanges throughout the country; and a huge studio, known as the R-C Studios in Los Angeles, where F. B. O. productions are filmed.

Emil Offeman is in charge of production at the R-C Studios with Edgar Forest and Wyndham Gittens at the scene end. The studio publicity is handled by Hyatt Dab, formerly of the home office.

Half Million Dollar Damage In Fire at Cosmopolitan Plant

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Studies of Cosmopolitan Productions, 127th street and Second avenue, suffered a loss of between $500,000 and $1,000,000 by fire early Sunday morning. The electrical equipment, scenery and almost the entire wardrobe were destroyed. Several portraits, one said to be valued at $80,000, which were borrowed for production of “Little Old New York” were consumed. Most of the damage was confined to the main stage room, in which a ball room set had been constructed the day before. Huge electric cables stretched along the ceiling interfered with the work of the bremen.

Marion Davies’s dressing room was badly damaged and all of her costumes were destroyed. No films were lost.

Tork of rebuilding the plant will start at once, and members of the staff of “Little Old New York” is being pushed in three other studios. Company offices have been established in Columbus Circle.

“U” Sales Cabinet

President Carl Laemmle of Universal has named personnel of new sales cabinet, members of which will have power to sign contracts and authority on other matters. Members of cabinet will carry title of general sales manager and will operate under supervision of General Sales Manager Art Schmidt (center, above). Other members are: Left, top to bottom, Cleve Adams, H. M. Herbel, Herman Stern and Edward Armstrong. Right, top to bottom, Ned Depinet, Clair Hague, Jules Levy and Joe Friedman, in charge of five reel features.

Wesley “Freckles” Barry, the star of several Warner Brothers features, meets Gifford Pinchot, new governor of Pennsylvania, during Barry’s personal appearance engagement at the Regent theatre in Harrisburg with “Heroes of the Street.”
He doesn't look like a prize fighter, does he? It's George O'Hara and he isn't a real professional fighter, but he's might convincing in his portrayal (above) of a mit champion in H. C. Wittwer • F. B. O. "Fighting Blood" series, first of which has been published.

Here is a panoramic view of a set which is declared to be the largest ever constructed in a motion picture studio. It occupies a floor space of 200 feet by 300 feet. No studio, according to Cosmopolitan Productions, was large enough

It's finished! That's why Maurice Tourneur (center), Anna Q. Nilsson and Milton Sills are beaming. Tourneur has just finished "The Isle of Lost Ships," a fantastic tale of the Sargasso sea in which Miss Nilsson and Mills share honors. The picture was produced at United Studios on West Coast.

Poor, poor Harry! Harry D. Wilson ran for president of Wampas. So did Joseph Jackson. And what's more, "J. J." won. In honor of Wilson's defeat members of Sol Lesser production forces decorated his desk and here is defeated gentleman in his office morning after. By-the-way, Harry was elected vice-president.
to hold the set so it was necessary to construct it in the Twenty-third Regiment Armory in Brooklyn, N. Y. You will see this set in Marion Davies' next Cosmopolitan special, "Little Old New York," which is nearing completion.

Viola Dana in her characterization of Emmy Lou in her new Metro starring vehicle, "Crinoline and Romance."

Fred Niblo, director of "The Famous Mrs. Fair," which Louis B. Mayer will present through Metro, has an impromptu conference with Marguerite de la Motte, one of the leading players in the feature, at the door of a portable dressing room. Buddy Messenger in his new Century comedy, "Smarty," finds that shaving isn't as simple as it looks, especially when the razor has a saw edge. Director Edwards handled the megaphone on this picture, which has in support of the young star, Myrtle Sterling, Tiny Ward and others.
Hugh Dierker, head of Hugh Dierker independent productions, and William H. Jenner, West Coast representative of American Releasing Corporation, which is distributing the product of the Dierker company.

A group of Los Angeles bankers, all prominent members of the Rotary club of that city, call upon Emory Johnson at the big studios of Film Booking Offices to compliment him upon the success of his most recent production, "The Third Alarm."

Rex Ingram, the director of Metro successes. His latest is "Where the Pavement Ends," which he produced in Florida.

Dorothy Mackall who is a featured player in the First National film, "Mighty Lak'a Rose."

Director George Melford has Lewis Stone just where he wants him for a scene in "You Can't Fool Your Wife," a Paramount picture. But Stone isn't a bit perturbed for there's that magazine story he's been trying to read for the past week and this is first peace he has had.
Six beauties appearing in the symbolic phases of B. P. Schulberg's new Preferred picture, "Poor Men's Wives," which Al Lichtman is distributing. Gasnier directed the picture which is the sequel to "Rich Men's Wives," a film which has been meeting with success throughout the country.

Gene Sarazen, golf champion (center), looks over contract under the terms of which he will be featured in seven one reel comedies embodying golf instructions by Warner Brothers. Harry Rapf (left) will supervise. Jack L. Warner stands at right.

Charles de Roche and Beneva, the police dog actor, who make their bow to America in Dorothy Dalton's new production for Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, "The Law of the Lawless." De Roche was brought to this country from France only recently by the Paramount organization.

ARTHUR FRIEND, president of Distinctive Pictures Corporation, gave the members of the A. M. P. A. a new line of thought at last week’s luncheon of the advertisers. Mr. Friend, who is known as one of the keenest thinkers in the industry, was the guest of honor, and the new line of thought was that a doctrine of personal responsibility is the only basis upon which the industry can move forward and upward to its proper position as the eighth art.

Everyone was an adherent to this doctrine, said Mr. Friend, and thus everyone includes producers great and small, artists, directors, advertisers and exhibitors—in fact, all connected with the industry.

“The obvious truth of today is that we must all accept full responsibility for our several parts in this industry,” said Mr. Friend. “The fact that a producer makes a picture and gives it to his cameraman to direct, his director, in casting his picture, does not excuse him for putting out a dull or inartistic photoplay. He can plead that the director was incompetent, that the man or woman engaged for the lead fell down on the job, that his cameraman botched the lighting, but these things—neither sin nor downfall of the world in putting out inferior work.

“The same principle should be practiced by exhibitors. No exhibitor who is the owner of a motion picture theatre has a direct obligation to the neighborhood in which he operates. He has a clientèle. This clientèle should be held personally responsible for the sort of picture he shows, and he should not be allowed to plead that he bought without knowledge of the fact he was getting. ‘Exhibitors should be as careful in the selection of their programs as the producer should be in the making and distributing of features and short subjects.

“If this practice were indulged in for a considerable length of time, the healthy enforcing of a true revenue, in both receipts and in that other great factor—good will—would soon reveal justification of this policy.

“Practice of this principle is the only means of maintaining motion pictures in their true category. Motion pictures are an art form, an entertainment, and they should all strive to keep it away from standardization, which would destroy all qualities of beauty, imagination and artistic achievement.”

And while we are on the subject of the A. M. P. A., it might be apropos to state that the boys are working hard on the program of what they expect will be an event so far ahead of any past performance as to make “The Truth” dinner as good as the development of new subject. Each member is racking what he intimitates refers to as his brain for some new and novel idea by means of which to direct a gift of satire at his boss.

At the last meeting of the show committee, WALTER EBEBERHART, who modestly admits that his forbearance in keeping off the legitimate stage is what permits John Barrymore to enjoy his present popularity, was struck with an idea. So forcibly did this idea hit him that he fell right off his chair. Walter didn’t get a chance to tell his great idea, but Vic SHAPIRO has ordered Eberhardt’s staff to work into the “Naked Truth” program.

MAUROBONIN TOOMES, the demon press agent of Century Comedies, is getting into a bad habit—or rather her apartment is. Twice within one week bad taste has entered the Toombe’s habitat and carted away some of the treasures. Now, it is said, the D. J. P. A. sleeps with a police whistle clutched tight in his chincle of a revolver in the other. She is quoted saying:

“They may take my jewels and wealth, but I will guard those still of Baby Peggy with my life.”

And now this from the prolific and truth-loving typewriter of Old Reliable Bax-more.

“Russell Gravin, the five-year-old actor under contract to C. J. Burr, is a versatile young man. Besides acting extraordinarily well, he sings, recites, knows several languages and likes to write poetry. But he finds time to play, too, as his rosy checks and active body attest.

“If there is anything we just love, it is to read poetry written by a five-year-old actor, and we are going to wait with bated breath for Barra to send us an installment, even if we have to pay bootleggers’ prices for the last.”

And speaking of press agents, ALLAN ROCK says:

“I don’t know whether or not anyone is safeguarded from the wind for this screen, but he sure would be a big attraction. And oh, baby, what a press agent that guy has.”

Four BOXES declares positively that he will not wear a derby hat. He says they are too hard to sleep in.

ARTHUR S. KANE, head of Associated Exhibitors, has been to Palm Beach for six weeks of recuperation. Great excitement was caused in film circles by the rumor that he had forgotten to take his golf clubs, but this can be authoritative denied.

For real class among the publicity persons, commend us to those birds on the west coast. As Exhibit A, get this which reaches us via a handsomely engraved card:

“Mr. HARRY D. WILSON respectfully calls your attention to the fact that he has severed his connections with the Jackie Coogan Productions and is now with Principal Pictures Corporation (Sol Lesser Productions). He wishes to assure you of his sincere thanks for the splendid co-operation he has always enjoyed at your hands and hopes in his new relations to continue in your good will.

All right, Harry, we’ll continue that good will stuff, but it is really too bad that you want to go to expense of an engraved card just for us.”

Coming through a side street a few days ago, Jotta Lowery, busly star and producer of “Lost in a Big City,” saw a truck stuck in a snowdrift, the rear wheels turning impotently. Getting a foothold in the gutter, Lowery put his arm on the truck, and to the amazement of the driver and curious passers-by, gave the vehicle a shove that freed it.

“What’s the idea?” his companion asked.

“Keeping in trim for my next picture,” said Lowell, “can’t afford to soften here in town.”

ARTHUR LOEW, who was operated upon recently for appendicitis, is recovering rapidly and is expected by his physicians to be better than new within a few weeks.

Official Call Is Issued For Convention of M. P. T. O. A.
Al Steffes, Visiting in Chicago, Refuses to Say Whether He Will Seek Presidency—Favors Removing Headquarters from New York

The official call for the fourth annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America has been issued by Sydney S. Cohen, president. As exclusive representatives of the HERALD two weeks ago, the sessions will be held in the Chicago Coliseum on May 21 to 24.

Two months remain for the various state organizations to hold conventions and elect their official representatives to the convention. Under the constitution, delegates and alternates must be elected at least one month prior to the convention and written certification of the names must reach the national president two weeks before the opening session.

Move on to Reunite Entire Country

Already, there are indications that the earnest members of the organization are trying to bring back into the fold the various delegations, which withdrew from the organization at Washington a year ago. It is understood they are to be assured not only of admittance to the floor of the convention, but an active part in the deliberations.

Several surprising developments are in the making. There have been a number of "harmony" moves attempted during the past few weeks by various leaders. None came to fruition but each reflected the trend of the times.

Steffes Visits Chicago

A full house and a small group of exhibitors from Minneapolis paid a visit to Chicago during the past week. Steffes said there was no particular purpose to the trip—that they simply wanted to get away from business for a few days, and climbed on a train.

Trade papers representatives got a thrill, when "Will H. Hays of Sullivan, Ind." registered at the Congress hotel the same day the Steffes party were at the hotel. Hays could not be located, however, and Steffes expressed surprise when he was told Hays was in Chicago. The exhibitor leader departed for Minneapolis Friday night apparently without getting within nodding distance of the head of M. P. T. O.

Steffes dropped into the headquarters of the Illinois M. P. T. O. before leaving; shook hands all around, and then was on his way again. The call was purely social.

Silent on Presidency

The Minneapolis leader has frequently been mentioned as the most likely candidate for the presidency of the M. P. T. O. A. Many exhibitor leaders have freely predicted that Steffes would shun the organization if placed in the executive chair.

A direct question as to whether he would be a candidate was put to him. "Not being on the witness stand, I don't have to answer," he evaded, laughing.

"I will say this," he continued, "I expect the Chicago convention to bring out a larger and different type of previous convention and I look for a reuni ed and strong national organization to result. I intend to submit an amendment to the convention, which will permit its being amended at any convention, and I believe any objectionable features of it will be changed. I consider it a good constitution considering the short time in which it was prepared but I know it isn't perfect.

Wants Headquarters in Chicago

"I will say too that I would like to see the headquarters of the M. P. T. O. moved to Chicago. I think it's a logical place for it to be centrally located, and I have always felt that in New York, there is too much rumor, small talk and busyness."

He was asked his views on the question of a paid manager for the organization, who would practically direct its affairs.

"I'm against it," he replied. "The exhibitors could not afford to hire a big enough man for the post and an incompetent manager would be a disaster. I am in favor of a capable paid secretary, but believe the business should be run by men who have their money in the theatre business."

He believes too, that the next president of the M. P. T. O. should be from somewhere west of the Hudson river."

Sees Two Big Topics

Steffes declared that he believed the two big topics of discussion at the convention would be the new Uniform Contract, and the distributing organization plan of Sydney S. Cohen. He declined to comment on either. He said that film rentals, too, would be one of the important questions brought up.

Niblo Finds Mexico Is Ready to Aid Producer

(Los Angeles, Feb. 20.—On his return here from a trip to Mexico City, Frank Niblo, major film producer, declares his intention of producing Prescott's 'Conquest of Mexico' at some future date, so impressed was he with Mexico as a locale for picture making. The Mexican government, he explains, is enthusiastic for the project to be made there, for by that means it hopes to advertise to the world that Mexico is not the arid, bandit-ridden land it commonly is supposed to be. Capital in abundance, Mr. Niblo was informed, may be obtained from the financial leaders of the country, who join the government in the desire that the beauties of Mexico be spread before the eyes of the world.

Start Theatre To Aid Business

(Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 20. —J. P. Roeck, son of the unpretentious town of Cox, Mo., have an ideal method of bolstering up their merchandise business with the arrival of the pictures. Mr. Roeck and his son, who operate a general store, a blacksmith and repair shop, as well as feed the grist mill, have established a motion picture house for the mere purpose of "keeping the trade at home."

A 10-cent admission is charged, which means scarcely more than an even break in the theatre end of the plan, but an average of $200 worth of merchandise is sold every Saturday night, Mr. Roeck says.

Spokane Exhibitors To Fight State Tax

Organize to Oppose Proposed Tax of 10 Per Cent on Gross Receipts

Spokane, Wash., Feb. 20.—In a united effort to combat an adverse legislation, and particularly the proposed 10 per cent tax on gross receipts of theatres of the state as embodied in senate bill 134, Spokane theatre owners and managers organized the Spokane Allied Amusement association, at a meeting at the Davenport hotel last week. Dr. Howard S. Summer was appointed chairman.

Pantages Representative Talks

The new association will include all of the various amusements industries of the Inland Empire, affiliated to combat adverse legislation. It will be affiliated with the Washington State Allied Amusement association, which in turn is being affiliated in a national amusement organization.

"No theatre in the United States is making 10 per cent of its gross receipts," said Ellery B. Front, general representative of Alexander Pantages and one of the organizers of the association. "It is a physical impossibility for the theatres to absorb this proposed tax."

Committee Is Appointed

An executive committee of six was appointed to draft laws and constitution of the organization. The members of the committee are: W. Allender, Charles Stillwell, Ray Grombach, Maurice Oppenheimer, Charles York and Dr. H. C. Lambach. The association includes all of the local theatres and the four film exchanges, Universal, Hodkinson, Pathé and Interstate theater and will also include other amusement industries.

Want to Read Titles

(Mexico City, Mexico, Feb. 20.—Titles for future pictures to appear on the screen long enough for the audience to read them. A number of complaints have been received by the municipality at the speed with which titles are removed and as a result an order has been issued to all motion picture houses that the practice must stop, under threat of penalty.

March 3, 1923 EXHIBITORS HERALD 45
Special to Exhibitors Herald

New York, February 20.—A survey conducted by Pathe among newspaper editors of the country discloses a growing popularity for the short subject, and supports the contention of Martin J. Quigley, editor and publisher of the HERALD, in his editorial, "Five Reels," published in the January 23 issue, that because of this increasing public interest the exhibitor "must have feature pictures that do not run to extraordinary lengths."

PATHE forwarded questionnaires to 350 selected newspapers in typical smaller cities and towns covering all sections of the country. These two questions were asked of each editor:

1. Is the value of short subjects increasing?
2. Do patrons favor a complete bill of shorts?

Of the 231 editors responding, 226 answered "yes" to the first query and 3 answered "no." To the second, 124 answered "yes," and 117 answered "no." * * *

Following are the comments of many of the editors responding:

E. V. Durling, New York Globe—"Most large daily newspaper offices want only two reels for their circulation, and when producers try to stretch the material to five, they are doing the motion picture industry much harm. The great majority of moving picture theaters depend on neighborhood patronage, and the patrons turn to the legitimate plays at the legitimate theaters. The owners of these theaters should strive to compete with the well-known slogans of a Brooklyn vaudeville millionaire, "always a good show." One of the means of setting a standard of interesting entertainment is the use of short pictures . . . ."

Margaret J. Toomey, Dunkirk, N. Y. Evening Observer—"The value of short subjects made with the same care as feature pictures receive, and not used as mere "fillers" and "junk," can be increased. We would hate to think of the Pathé News repl, for instance, being taken from the program."

R. L. Hall, Wickersham, N. Y. Gazette—"In my opinion the value of short subjects is increasing."

E. M. Collins, Troy Observer Publishing Company—"For my own part I would prefer to have programs of short pictures in place of some of the alleged "features" which are antagonizing in the extreme to "the box.""

Evening News, North Tonawanda, N. Y.—"I think the trend of short subjects is increasing."

Charles W. Elios, Johnstown, N. Y. Daily Journal—"I'll say the folks like shorts! I know I do. Pictorial News is the one true feature. Give me more pictures, the government has more work to do."

New York Evening Picture Show—"Short film subjects are favored more by the eye than brain and uzl and change that each requires. Therefore, producers, and exhibitors of short subjects who combine to give their patrons really good value, need never fear competition in any other way, for the public will be with them . . . ."

Roland Burke Hennessy, New York Star—"We must recognize the fact that the short reels are exceedingly popular with the public. I have known specific instances where folks have gone to theater with the purpose of seeing one or more of the Pathe shorts. This fact, in itself indicates that many folks go to the picture houses to see short features instead of merely going there and accepting these subjects because they happen to be on the program. In the final analysis it is the public that will decide—and the concerns that is able to serve the public disposition sufficiently.

MONEY MAKING IDEAS Which Have Been Used Successfully by Exhibitors to Build Up Their Patronage

By L. A. PILLIOD

(Photoplay theatre, Grand Rapids, Ohio)

The most successful thing I ever did to build up a weak night is "Family Night"—that is, children admitted with parents free. I have been using this night for about a year and can state that it will increase your receipts for the night and will not detract from another night. It helps out your sales change, you would not get otherwise.

I also use a monthly program. I have the ticket girl address these out, which she does by using the box numbers instead of the names. You can get the number of boxes in your post office and Rural Routes from the postmaster, also the near routes of the surrounding towns; and, by using the numbers, it will shorten the time it would do the business just as well as writing out the full address. I never skip a person, as you can never tell what your program will do for you. I always try to get out as many as possible.

The results may not be as fast; but if you keep it up, you will find many new faces at your door each night. Try and cover as much territory as you can, as a monthly program gives people a lot of pictures to pick from. I use the same kind of paper to print programs on that they use for sale bills, made into a form like a mailing card and sometimes enclose heralds in same by using a paper clip.

"Othello" Copy

Echoes Interest
In Shakespeare

Rare acumen is displayed in the advance newspaper advertising for "Othello," a film version of Shakespeare's play with Emil Jannings in the title role which Ben Blumenthal is to bring to the New York Criterion February 25th, a two column display at hand showing the manner in which the current interest in stage productions of Shakespearean drama is turned to the picture's benefit.

The text of the all type ad reads:

To the Lovers of Shakespeare:

Seeking the most brilliant productions of Shakespeare known in a generation.
The magnificent presentation of "The Merchant of Venice," by David Belasco, with (Concluded in third column)

Practically no exhibitor ever quits the theatre business. A few try it. Scarcely permanently. The reason is the public. Recent reports on a great picture disclose in unique clarity the unfathomable quality of the picture clientele that is accountable for the phenomena.

Undoubtedly no showman in the nation would have asked a better opportunity for exceptional exploitation than that presented to exhibitors who had not used the picture when "Photoplay Magazine" awarded its annual medal to "Tol-able David." Clearly, here was a ready-made gold mine. Exhibitors snapped it up, advertised the picture as the winner of the medal and drew capacity business.

The four contributors to "What the Picture Did For Me" who have reported such treatment of the picture reveal the secret of the theatre's fascination for the showman when they uniformly state that patrons sought them out to ask "How come?" adding that the picture is, of course, a fine production.

The thrill that lies in this sort of thing is the attraction of the theatre. No other business offers a parallel. Exhibitors quitting the business quickly learn that and return. The result is a practically permanent exhibitor personnel, which is the theatre's greatest asset and the reason for this discourse.

The length of the feature necessarily determines in some degree the content matter of the modern theatre program. With an eight-reel production as its feature the California theatre, Los Angeles, presented the following material.

1. "Light Cavalry" Overture.
4. "The Chariot.".
5. "California Topical Review and Magazine.".
6. "Topics of the Day.".

The California program is the second in a series which The Theatre will publish with a view toward arriving at a standard for the ideal motion picture performance.

Theatre Hold On Exhibitor Is Explained

Clean Competition

Competition is, as the adage has it, "the life of trade," as long as it is clean and no longer. A really upward flying attraction is a wholesome interest. Nobody relishes a brawl—or brawlers.

Chicago cases illustrate the difference. About a year ago, patently baseless and apparently inspired, rumor had it that a new and formidable theatre was being built up quickly. A ignometrically, somewhat obscurely, the gossip seemed to receive artificial stimulation at intervals. The subject theatre spent thousands of dollars Still the gallup and the interests credited by citizens with its origin lost heavily through withdrawal of support on the part of disgusted patrons believing themselves "in the know." Dirty competition operates like that.

Of another type is the case of two opposing theatres offering somewhat similar stage entertainment in support of picture programs. The one features a ballet frequently, the other regularly. The former inconspicuously competes with one of its most attractive feature pictures a very well done and genuinely humorous burlesque on classic costume. The thing really entertains and but very subtly casts the suggestion that the ballet as an institution is mainly "bunk." The public smiles, awards the theatre credit for cleverness and clean tactics, and governs its attendance at the opposing theatre according to its individual reactions. In the end it undoubtedly will be revealed that the "look in" on a clean fight vouchsafed the public will make more business for both houses.

The Theatre stands for clean competition as possibly the motion picture theatre's best advertisement.

Hayes-Barker Incident
New Film History

There's always "something new under the sun." This week it is revealed in a Theatre Letter from Barry Lawrence, Dawn theatre, Hillsdale, Mich., presented upon a subsequent page.

Mr. Hayes exhibited "The Storm" some time ago and reported it to "What the Picture Did For Me" in the "Herald" for October 21, 1922. Reginald Barker, director of the picture, read the report and wrote a letter about it to Mr. Hayes.

Mr. Hayes subsequently exhibited "Hearts Aflame," a Metro production, also directed by Mr. Barker, and reproduced Mr. Barker's letter alongside one of his own to the Hillsdale public in his reply. His advertisement headed "A Double Guaranteed Attraction." The ad is presented with Mr. Hayes' letter in this issue.

Just exactly this has not been done before, although the "Herald's" stimulating influence upon every department of the industry has been manifested countless times in a similar manner.

Personal Accounts of Constructive Showmanship
Contributed by Readers of “Exhibitors Herald”

Circuit Chief
Writes Defense Of Exploiter

Defense of the “exploiter” as a theatre asset is the subject of the following communication from Herman A. Schwahn, general manager of the Eau Claire Theatre Company of Eau Claire, Wis., which operates a circuit of seven theatres in that city and Chippewa Falls.

Again the service of a Goldwyner is cited in example.

THEATRE EDITOR,
Exhibitors Herald,
Dear Sir:

Just why this discussion of the merits of exploitation was started is rather hard for me to understand, but my experience with exploitation men has been both pleasant and satisfactory so that I feel called upon to say a word in favor of the new craft.

In my opinion the exhibitor who does not favor the entrance of exploitation men into the game is the exhibitor who when they have arrived on an assignment has blocked their every move, and is naturally disappointed at the results of their visits. He in my opinion is much like the exhibitor who continues to use plain type ads, when he could just as readily sell himself of the supply of mats on hand at every exchange, and make his ads doubly attractive.

The exhibitor is here to stay in the film game, and the wise exhibitor is the one who makes use of him. My most recent experience with exploitation was in association with the showing of “The Strangers’ Banquet” at the Grand Theatre here. William H. Branch of the Minneapolis Goldwyn office reported to assist us. I told him to go ahead and do anything that he wished. I will just tabulate the results:

1. Arrangement was made with the Eau Claire Baking Company by which they wrapped 10,000 heralds, carrying the message, “For Your Banquet. Use Old Home Bread, for The Strangers’ Banquet,” go to the Grand Theatre with their bread. The 100 grocers handling their bread all carried window cards in their windows, and their delivery trucks carried 2 ft. banners advertising the picture.

2. Window displays were secured from seven leading merchants.

3. The Eau Claire Telegram staged a contest for the best menus and recipes for “The Strangers’ Banquet.”

4. The Eau Claire Leader ran a two-column story on spring fashions by Claire Windsor, which attracted a great deal of attention from women readers.

All this accomplished besides the regular advertising speaks better than anything for the value of exploitation. My suggestion to the boys who don’t believe in it is—give the exploiters a free rein, instead of squawking about not wanting to spend a cent of extra money the minute they hit town.

FOLDER BUDGET Of Good Ideas;
Likes “Herald”

A folder that is a veritable budget of good ideas is submitted this week with the following letter by H. C. Snyder, Gem theatre, Earlville, Ia., a newcomer to the circle of Theatre Letter writers. Welcome, Mr. Snyder.

THEATRE EDITOR,
Exhibitors Herald,
Dear Sir:

Enclosed are a couple of our folders and pass-outs we used in putting over First National Week. The Herald hits the spot with us and is far superior to any trade magazine we receive. We read it from cover to cover.

Every Showman
May Profit by Meyer Example

Every showman in this broad land can read and profit by Fred S. Meyer’s letter description of the method by which he makes newcomers to Hamilton, O., friends of the Palace Theatre.

The Theatre advises nation-wide adoption of the plan as a means of increasing patronage and heightening prestige.

THEATRE EDITOR,
Exhibitors Herald,
Dear Sir:

I am trying something new. You might let me know what you think of it.

The other day one of the mail carriers stopped me on the street and told me that a certain party had just moved into town from Columbus. He said, “They don’t know anything about theatres. No doubt Larry Hayes, Dawn theatre, Hillsdale, Mich., reported on "The Storm" to "What the Picture Did For Me" in the October 21st issue and received from Director Reginald Barker the letter which is quoted above by Mr. Hayes in one of his advertisements for his theatre, "Hearts Aflame." His Theatre Letter gives the details. The above advertisements measured, left, five columns, right, four columns.

Report Yields Hayes Capacity Crowd Builder

How a report on "The Storm" printed in "What the Picture Did For Me" yielded its author advertising material which resulted in "real business" for "Hearts Aflame" is told by Larry Hayes in the following letter.

Reproduction of the advertisement in question is given hereafter.

THEATRE EDITOR,
EXHIBITORS HERALD.
Dear Sir:

Am enclosing a few reports and also my ads on "Hearts Aflame" and the Ambassador Orchestra, which was some bill. Due to an eleventh-hour change in bookings, I had to use the orchestra Sunday only, but they came to hear them, believe me.

The letter from Barker is authentic and I think I made the best possible use of it. The point is that on one of the coldest days this year we did real business on the combination, proving once and for all that attractions and nothing else will bring them in and satisfy. And—that's that.

LARRY HAYES,

DEAR MR. HAYES:

There's more than one good reason for reporting to "What the Picture Did For Me," isn't there? For showing exhibitors what your report on "The Storm" in issue of October 1st enabled you to do in an advertising way for "Hearts Aflame" some three months later, many thanks it's a great piece of copy, say what you will.

Letters from directors, stars and others to exhibitors as a result of reports and also contains a new development, but the bulk of those regarding which exhibitors write us are of quite different character. Have you received any of that kind? They, too, are interesting, and valuable, I think most useful for ad copy.

Your experience illuminates clearly one of the indirect but hardly secondary effects of the report department. It discloses as seldom disclosed, due to its essentially personal nature, the bringing together of industrial forces which the report department accomplishes.

Thanks for telling us about it. And write again.

George, Henry, Draw Crowds to Animal Feature

George Rea, a part of whose good showmanship it is to make everybody call him by his first name, aided by Henry, his trusty assistant with whose exploits you are familiar, did a great many things for Warner Brothers' "A Dangerous Adventure" which resulted in the kind of business the theatre thrives upon. George tells about it in a letter that snaps along as breezily as his ad copy, which is of the snappiest, breezest and best.

Here it is:

THEATRE EDITOR,
Exhibitors Herald.

Dear Sir:
Just mailed you photo of lobby and street ballyhoo on "A Dangerous Adventure." It stopped 'em and most of 'em came in and they looked, they saw and were pleased.

One of the bon heads in lobby had a flasher back of red eyes which topped off the best animal lobby the Colonial ever had.

Here is a picture that is truly a thrilling novelty sensation that pleases and draws. It has zebras, lions, tigers, leopards, hippos, monks, alligator and most all the other animals you can think of, to say nothing of a peach of a storm, earthquake, volcanic eruption, tights and, well, I wish you'd go see it and let me know whether or not you got a thrill.

Prices 10 and 30 cents.

DEAR MR. REA,
Colonial theatre, Washington C. H., O.
P. S. "Henry" still working fine.

DEAR MR. REA,

The photos arrived and are duly reproduced herewith, which surely completes the story. Wish you'd leave us a corner to be a reply to how and then. As it is we can only promise to go and see the picture when opportunity arises and close by asking that you give our regards to Henry.

“Sonny” Troup Turns Interest On Hippodrome

L. J. Burkhart, Hippodrome theatre, Crestline, O., capitalized the juvenile angle of "Sonny" in preference to the patriotic element and at a cost of $5 got excellent returns. His initial Theatre Letter gives details.

THEATRE EDITOR,
Exhibitors Herald.

Dear Sir:
I am sending you a picture of my parade for "Sonny." These signs were made on the back of old window cards. I bought horns for the children at a racket store. They made more noise and attracted more attention than a brass band. The whole thing cost only five dollars and proved a real money getter.

L. J. BURKHART,
Hippodrome theatre, Crestline, O.

DEAR MR. BURKHART,
So far as we've noted, you are the first to capitalize the juvenile side of "Sonny" instead of the patriotic side, and we believe the juvenile side is for many reasons the most productive. Thanks for the photograph, which is reproduced herewith, and the letter. Welcome to the circle.

SHORT SUBJECTS

Pearson in Comment on Featuritis

Elmer Pearson, general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., one of the largest dealers in short subjects, in a statement issued prescribes an effective antidote for the theatre malady christened "featuritis." Mr. Pearson's statement reads:

Entertainment is that thing that satisfies that universal craving for something different.

The word different is just another definition for variety.

Every exhibitor knows that the public give their patronage to the show that offers the greatest variety.

Not only should we strive to offer the greatest possible daily variety, but we should offer as great a difference as possible between each successive change of program.

For instance, let us discuss a given case of an exhibitor troubled with ingrained formality. His program consists of a dramatic feature of five or six reels, a one reel comedy, an occasional news reel, or something of that nature to make up about eight reels.

About the only thing he advertises is his varied program. Naturally, patrons come to look upon that as his principal bid for their attention.

Now everybody knows that all drama construction is limited to about eleven (?) or seventeen (?) basic principles, consequently a sort of sameness manifests itself to a public who are asked to look at 365 dramatic feature pictures per year.

Is it any wonder that the public gets a sort of satisfaction in the many of whom get out of the picture habit entirely, or only come once or twice per week.

How much more refreshing to the public and the Box Office it would be if every exhibitor would get entirely away from that featuritis for at least two changes out of every seven and offer his patrons an entire diversion.

Today's output offers ample opportunity for such diversification.

For instance:

- Our Gang Comedy
- Range Rider Maloney, Western
- Pathe News
- Hal Roach Comedy
- Fables & Topics

Such a program can be made up in numerous variations from the many short subjects on the market and will bring the patrons out for an additional night of the week upon which you book.

The person who gets all the feature drama he desires on two visits per week to a theatre will be delighted with an opportunity to come a third time for such a program as above.

How do we account for the popularity and success that the serial picture enjoys?

Ask one of the regular serial exhibitors, and he will tell you without hesitation that the serial adds from 15% to 25% to his weekly office receipts, money that he could not get into his house in any other way.

Don't you just see that his patrons would not come that additional day to see an additional typical feature picture, but since the serial and attendant program is another variety of entertainment, out they come.

In many cases that same serial exhibitor is making use of a short subject program on another change of his week, and is thereby adding some more money to his week's receipts. Give the public the variety they crave, and you will get much more of their patronage.

Sid Grauman gives the bulk of his lights to Christie Special, Educational comedy; "Pardon My Glove." Grauman knows what pays.

DIGEST of PICTURES of the WEEK

GEORGE ADE in March Cosmopolitan under the caption, “They Can’t Always Subsist on Maple Syrup and Cayenne Pepper,” has this to say about pictures and censors, most about censors:

“... Talking about the current releases and the world’s largest jury. How would you like to be the Simon Legree of a cinema drama production, getting ready to burn up $250,000 and face the task of turning out a play guaranteed to delight the farm hand, the Federation of Women’s Clubs, the mill workers in a steel town, the metropolitan critics, the girls employed in the five and ten cent store and the Board of Censorship of the state of Pennsylvania?

“What if you knew that screen dramas approved by all of the come-up-higher leagues had flopped in the open market, while those which had been toasted by every highbrow vigilante as cheap and vulgar had brought Rockefeller profits through the holes in the glass windows?

“Stop roasting the men who make motion pictures and lavish upon them your profuse sympathy. They are trying to serve Mammon and mammon at the same time!”

“THE BOHEMIAN GIRL” (American Releasing) is an English adaptation of the famous opera, with Gladys Cooper, Ivor Novello, Ellen Terry, Constance Collier and C. Aubrey Smith in the leading roles. The time-worn story has been artistically presented, with many picturesque backgrounds and elaborate sets.

“THE PRISONER” (Universal) is Herbert Rawlinson’s latest. It was adapted from George Barr McCutcheon’s story “Castle Craneycrow” and furnishes a full hour’s entertainment of romance, adventure and thrills. A splendid cast appears in support of the star.

“JAZZMANIA” (Metro) presents Mae Murray in another fantastic bit of screen entertainment that should prove a good box office attraction. It is elaborate in appointments and very well directed. Edmund Goulding furnished the story and Robert Z. Leonard directed.

“THE MESSAGE OF EMILE COUE” (Educational) is interesting and should prove a good attraction because of the wide-spread publicity given the French chemist from Nancy. It was directed by John McCutcheon and is in three reels. It consists of pictures of M. Coe expounding his theory—the power of imagination.

“A CLOUDED NAME” (Playgoers). Romance and mystery are ably combined in this entertaining feature which boasts Norma Shearer, Gladden James and Little Yvonne Logan in the cast. A well told and interesting story in five reels. Scenario and direction by Austin O. Huhn. A Logan Production.

“ADAM AND EVA” (Cosmopolitan - Paramount) offers first-rate entertainment of a light order. It was adapted from a successful stage play and gives Marion Davies excellent opportunity to display her versatility. The direction of Robert Vignola is especially pleasing. The Venetian fete scenes, beautifully tinted, furnish ideas for a ready-made prologue.

“THE LITTLE CHURCH AROUND THE CORNER” (Warner Bros.) is one of the most carefully directed and well staged melodramas that has reached the screen in some time. Every detail of this Charles E. Blaney stage production has been faithfully reproduced and amplified and the result is a highly pleasing photoplay. Money can be made with it if properly advertised.

Three tense scenes from “The Lion’s Mouse,” a Producers Security production made under the direction of Oscar Apfel for Hollandia Film Corp., which will be distributed through W. W. Hodkinson Corp. Wyndham Standing and Marguerite Marsh have the leading roles.
MAE MURRAY IN JAZZMANIA
(METRO)
A fascinating and completely satisfying Mae Murray-Tiffany production, beautifully staged, care-fully directed and a sure-fire box-office attraction. This star never appeared more alluring than in this fanciful story. She is surrounded by a most excellent cast. Directed by Robert Z. Leonard from a story by Edmund Goulding. Eight reels.

The adventures of a high-spirited little Queen of an imaginary principality furn-ished the basis for this unique screen comedy-drama and gives Mae Murray another vehicle typical of her former films. It demonstrates the alarming effects of jazz music and jazz dancing on our foreign neighbors, and furnishes an ex- cuse—if one be needed—for Miss Murray to give up a series of exhibition dances that are artistic and beautifully executed. In sets nothing quite as elaborate has been presented upon the screen since Douglas Fairbanks' 'Robin Hood.' In fact several interior and exterior shots measure up to anything that has been presented heretofore. The camera work is excellent all the way through, the work of Oliver T. Marsh. The story is not without its thrills, its well handled mob scenes and its love making. An odd twist to the plot gives Rodney LaRocque the leading male role, or lover part, when the interest has be-come centered upon Edward Burns, as "Sonny" Daimler, a reporter. Why it was thought best to shift the importance of the two lovers is not quite clear. How- ever, both do good work, as well as Robert Frazer as the loyal captain of the queen's guard; Jean Hersholt was ef-fective as the villainous Prince Otto, and Lionel Belmore gave a finished performance as Baron Bolo.

The picture offers many suggestions for exploitation such as a "jazz week" a "queen contest" and a style show. Talk it up. It will bring big returns if properly advertised and proved to be the most entertaining and honest attraction.

The story concerns Queen Nixon, in a little European country, who is betrothed to a scoundrel Prince Otto, threaten-ing a revolution unless she marries him. She is persuaded by an American newspaper reporter to flee the country in an airplane and in descending near Monte Carlo the airplane is wrecked. Here she meets Jerry Langdon. In America she falls completely under the spell of jazz music, but the arrival of Bolo forces her to return to her country to save it from ruin. Prince Otto having contracted to sell its valuable oil wells to an American banker. The people are wild with joy at her return. Prince Otto is put in his place and Jazzmania becomes a Republic, with Nixon as its first Presidentess. Of course she marries Jerry and he be-comes first citizen of the country.

MARION DAVIES IN ADAM AND EVA
(PARAMOUNT)
This Cosmopolitan production gives Marion Davies an excellent oppor-tunity to shine at her best in a pleasing story, well produced and carefully directed. It should prove a money-getter. Adapted from Guy Bolton's and Geo. Middleton's comedy. Directed by Robert Vignola. Adapted to the screen by Luther Reed.

Seven reels.

While "Adam and Eva" is quite a step down from "When Knighthood Was in Flower," there is this to be said about it: Marion Davies is just as charming and winsome as in the Charles Major story; and it is as well made, pleasing and thoroughly entertaining.

The idea of a pampered, spoiled daugh-ter of a wealthy Wall Street broker, coming to her senses when she thinks her father has been ruined on the mar-kets by getting a living for herself, is not entirely new; but, as here worked out, is vastly enter-taining, and T. Roy Barnes, Tom Lewis, Richard Collier, Lenore Aubert and Luella Dear furnish excellent characterizations of a light order. There is love interest for the flapper, and more dazzling gowns for the stylish dress devotee. Artistic sets and good photography mark the production throughout. It had its pre-miere in Chicago at the New McVicker's theatre and was roundly applauded.

The story concerns Eva King, who runs up bills at every Fifth Avenue shop while her father puts up his last securi-ties to ward off disaster. Father has quite a household, for besides the ex-travagant Eva, there is her sister Julia with a fashion-plate husband and his assistant who came to "spend a couple of weeks and stayed fifteen years." King's South American representative, Adam Smith, arrives home and asks to be relieved of his job and in an impulse, King goes to South America and leaves Adam in charge of his house-hold. Adam makes them live within their means and a few weeks later he tells them that the elder King is ruined, they all go to a farm and become use-ful citizens, raising beets and chickens. Uncle Horace gets a job selling insur-ance and Julia's husband becomes a clothing salesman, Eva's two suitors, one a doctor who figured a wealthy wife would be a great advantage, and the other a fortune-hunting lord, lose inter-est in her. Father's sudden return exposes Adam's trick to force them all to work, but it ends happily when Eva declares her love for Adam, who has elected to remain down on the farm.

SPECIAL CAST IN A CLOUDED NAME
(PLAYGOERS)
This is an entertaining feature, combining romance and mystery. The plot is well developed, moves swiftly and holds interest throughout, with a cast of capa-ble players doing excellent work in the various roles. Scenario and direction by Austin O. Huhn. Length, five reels.

"A Cloomed Name" is a high-grade program attraction. The plot is not exactly new, involving as it does, a man whose mind becomes clouded through a blow on the head; but the story is well ex-ecuted, and the picture should prove good entertainment as well as a thriller. There is a good element of romance for those who like their photoplays thus savored and perplexing. There are also a few enduring and mysterious curiosities until the final footage.

In the cast are such players as Norma Shearer, Gladden James, little Yvonne at Neil, Charles D. Ryan and Fred Eckhart.

The story works up to the solution of the mystery involving a young woman in love with each, the mother of the girl having been found dead in a mysterious manner simultaneous with the disappearance of the boy's father.
THE MESSAGE OF EMILE COUE
(EDUCATIONAL)

Interesting to those attracted by the Coue idea of "self-mastery through auto-suggestion," as it gives his essential thought underlying his cure. Directed by John McCutcheon. About three reels.

To the many thousands of people all over the country who read with interest the newspaper accounts of the visit of the little man from Nancy, France, and who could not attend his lectures, this authorized version of his theory of auto-suggestion as a cure for many ills, will undoubtedly be a saving card.

As M. Coue refused to appear in any commercial picture illustrating his theory, this authentic version becomes rather more of an illustrated lecture than a motion picture. We see M. Coue himself as he talks animatedly to an absorbed group of listeners. His intense and personality radiates from the screen. His eyes glow with light.

The structure consists of his theory as he proceeds to expound it, i.e., the power of imagination. Coue claims that imagination is greater than will. An illustration of this is given: one man says to another, indicating a plank lying from a doorway down to the sidewalk: "You can see that plank." The one addressed scoots at the suggestion and walks it with ease. When the same plank is placed some hundred feet above the ground, it is another story. The man refuses to walk it, his imagination telling him that he will fall and be dashed to death.

Sleep walking is used as another illustration of the domination of the unconscious self over the sleeping conscious.

Arnheim's famous formula "Every day in every way," etc., is repeated frequently, the knotted string being used as an illustration.

Because of the wide interest taken in M. Coue's message this short length feature should find a welcome on most screens as an educational subject.

A TOUGH WINTER
(PATHE)

Smub Pollard "nushes" home with the bacon with this highly entertaining and laughable comedy. It is the best in many ways of this comedian's late comedies. The fun is fast and furious and the winter stuff, particularly scenes at the "North pole," are original and very funny. Smub is a bum without a cent but with a good heart. He befriends two youngsters who are thrown out of their little home on Christmas day by a grasping landlord. Finally Smub marries the girl, and they go to the North pole to live. The landlord then discovers the girl is his own daughter and he hires dog sledders and goes to get her. There is more plot than usual and the whole is a very pleasing, clean comedy.

PEG OF THE MOVIES
(UNIVERSAL)

This Century comedy starring Baby Peggy is chiefly to exploit the versatility of the diminutive star but so well is it done that it will hold its own. Peggy poses as a "vamp," impersonates Harold Lloyd, with bone-rimmed glasses and silly smile, and as an excellent imitation of Charlie Chaplin. There is no plot to it, but it will please all who are interested in this wonderful child actress, and that includes almost everybody.

HERBERT RAWLINSON IN THE PRISONER
(UNIVERSAL)

Another George Barr McCutcheon story to reach the screen and a good one. It is full of suspense, adventure and love interest and has been given good production. The photography by Bert Reynolds is excellent and the direction by Jack Conway very good.

Length, 4,795 feet.

This picturization of "Castle Cranecrow" gives Herbert Rawlinson, Eileen Percy, June Elvidge, George Cowle and others an excellent vehicle and under Jack Conway's direction it has been attractively staged and well produced. A tense, adventure and plenty of thrills and will be found a diverting hour's entertainment for any house.

Rawlinson has the leading role, that of Philip Quinten, a young American, in Vienna, who finds romance awaiting him when he meets Dorothy Garrison, played by Eileen Percy. She is engaged to Prince Ugo Ravorelli, whom Quinten recognizes as a scoundrel and who was mixed up in an affair in South America. The Prince tries to involve Quinten in a duel, but Philip is too sharp for him and exposes him. The Prince urges a hasty wedding and Dorothy consents. As they stand at the altar the lights suddenly go out and when they again come on the bride has disappeared. Philip with the aid of friends has kidnapped Dorothy and taken her to a lonely castle. One of Ugo's men follows and learns the hiding place. Dorothy is obdurate and refuses to speak to Philip, or Lord and Lady Bob, who are his accomplices in the plot to save Dorothy from Ugo. Finally tiring of her own company she agrees to accompany the trio on a tour of the underground passages. During the trip she tries to escape, but becomes lost in one of the passages. Ugo's man sees her and tries to take her away but Philip arrives in time to balk the plot. Dorothy learns she really loves Philip and they are married on the spot.

SPECIAL CAST IN THE BOHEMIAN GIRL
(AMERICAN RELEASING)

An outstanding English production with a very well chosen cast of prominent players. Picturesque backgrounds lend the proper atmosphere to this adaptation of the famous William Balle opera, and Director Harley Knolles has made the most of the time-worn story. Length, 6,460 feet.

Harley Knolles, who made this excellent version of the famous opera, "The Bohemian Girl," deserves considerable credit for this production. It possesses besides a number of scenes by a bear and dramatic value, beautiful sets and some very good photography. With a cast maintained by an experienced group of players as Gladys Cooper, Ivor Novello, Ellen Terry, Constance Collier, C. Aubrey Smith and Henry Viscardi, it is a story more worthy of them could not have been obtained. However, for those who like stories of gypsy life, carefully presented, with picturesque backgrounds, "The Bohemian Girl" answers every purpose as entertainment. With the proper music it would be a treat to see and a very pleasing evening's entertainment.

The photography is good, with many artistic and effective lighting effects. The scenery, in the woods being especially beautiful. The marble halls and interiors are also in good taste and quite elaborate. Ivor Novello, as the hero, has sufficiently scored himself by the Gypsy Queen and Henry Vibart excellent as Count Arnheim and Gib McCauley is a competent Prince.

Arline is the little daughter of Count Arnheim, governor of an Austrian province who lives in feudal splendor near a forest, where a Gypsy tribe encamp, with her lieutenant, Devilshoof. He comes by chance upon Thaddeus, a young Austrian soldier. Devilshoof protects the youth and offers him the concealment of gypsy garb. Arline escapes from the tyrant and saves Thaddeus, who with Devilshoof returns her to her father. It is in the midst of a banquet and Thaddeus, a Pole, refuses to drink a toast to the Austrian emperor. Thaddeus is ejected in disgrace and Devilshoof vows to have revenge. He returns and, when the chance comes, carries Arline away. Twelve years of wandering finds Thaddeus part of the gypsy caravan, and among his companions is Arline. Count Florestain, a friend of Arline's father, is robbed of a medal which he had been promised by a certain friend who yield it to their Queen. This jewel the Queen gives to Arline when the girl sets out for a fair where she sells fortune-telling. Among her customers is Thaddeus, who recognizes his medal and orders the arrest of Arline. She is taken to the castle of the Count, who is her judge. Count Arnheim is moved to gentleness he cannot understand and when the gypsy girl tells him her cause he雷霆s the sympathy of the old nurse, who instantly recognizes her lost darling.
Popularity of Short Subject Growing, Says Editor

in advance, to fully prepare for it, will be the one to

A. F. Everett, The Record, and Times-Democrat, Stroudsburg, Pa.—"An occasional program of 'shorts' has been a decided novelty, besides cultivating a desire for more of it."

Frank C. Cooper, Bronx Home News, N. Y.—"There is no doubt in my opinion that the desire for short subject material has been more than ever prevailing as a decided novelty, besides cultivating a desire for more of it."

Joe Kelley, Screen Editor, Detroit Times—"It is surprising to see how much interest is being shown by the public in the new fad of short subjects. Just a few weeks ago, it didn't seem to be getting any attention from the public, but now they are flocking to the theaters to see them."

K. Hamerman, Milwaukee Leader, Milwaukee, Wis.—"The feeling in this neck of the woods appears to be in favor of short subjects. The long drawn out film has lost its novelty, and unless it is exceptionally good, fails to register. The average movie fan, if there is such an animal, prefers a program consisting of a four or five reeler: a snappy comedy and an educational or news picture."

Willard E. Carpenter, Lincoln Evening Courier, Lincoln, Nebr.—"Lincoln audiences want to go and see a picture, a good comedy and the News feature."

Homer Mooney, Nevada State Journal, Reno, Nev.—"I think the great majority of people appreciate the 'shorts.' They are just as much a part of the program as the feature film. The public enjoys them and looks forward to them."

G. B. Foster, Spokane Daily Chronicle, Spokane, Wash.—"I believe it is a good thing to have a certain amount of novelty in the program. The public is certainly interested in the value of the photoplay program. I have had some experience in this field and I am always expecting to consider its program complete without at least a couple of short features. The two features are very often the most genuinely entertaining subjects on a program. I am well pleased with the Pathe Review and the Pathé News and in Spokane the News stands out above other similar reels."
With the Procession in Los Angeles

John Jasper, the good "skipper" of the Hollywood Studios, is wearing the smile that won't come off these days. What with his plant running to capacity and with the studio's Santa Monica property increasing in value by leaps and bounds, the genial G. M. of the big lot spends a greater portion of his time each day running to the banks with healthy deposits. Among the various companies renting space at the Hollywood Studios are the following: Mowatt Productions, J. K. McDonald, Douglas McLean company, Richard Thomas, Maescher and Carlton King productions.

After considering hundreds of manuscripts of original stories and scores of novels and plays, Maurice Tournier has at last decided upon a well known English novel as the vehicle for his next feature production for First National. "The Brass Bottle," written by P. Anstey and for three years one of the most popular plays on the London stage, is Tournier's selection. The continuity is being written by Charles Maigne. The production will be presented by C. M. Levee.

Baby Peggy, Century's five-year-old wonder star, is soon to appear in five part comedy-dramas if present plans do not misfire. And the tiny starlet is to have special exploitation and everything just like Jackie Coogan, we are informed. The productions of Baby Peggy have met with such unusual success throughout the country that it is believed that five-reelers, with the child star, will be equally well received by the exhibitors and the public.

Fire at the Goldwyn plant, last week, destroyed the interior furnishings of sculptor shop and properties to the value of $2,000. Prompt action on the part of the Culver City fire department saved the shop and adjoining buildings. A giant gold tooth which was to have been used as a dentist sign in the new Von Stroheim production was lost entailing a week's delay in production which will increase the loss sustained by Goldwyn by several thousands of dollars.

George Fitzmaurice, prominent motion picture director, for the past five years a member of the Famous Players-Lasky directorial staff, is preparing to say "good-by" to his many associates and friends on the Paramount lot in Hollywood. With Mrs. Fitzmaurice, professionally known as Ouida Berger, secretary of the productions starring Pola Negri which her husband directed, the celebrated couple will conclude their services at the Vine street lot not later than May first.

In co-operation with Samuel Goldwyn, the Fitzmaurices as joint producers, will make elaborate special production in the future, and on June first or thereabouts they will sail for Europe to film exterior scenes for the initial production which will be ten reels in length.

Allen Holubar, noted director, and his talented wife Dorothy Phillips are to separate professionally now that "Shalure the Woman," their second big feature for First National, is finished. Holubar is about to sign a long term contract with one of two of the leading producing and distributing organizations while Miss Phillips is likewise considering a number of tempting offers with different concerns. With but few exceptions, the popular star has been almost constantly under her husband's direction in the motion picture field since the couple deserted the stage for the screen some few years ago.

Kenneth Harlan is training daily with Leach Cross, former lightweight contender, at the Schulberg studio for his role in "April Showers," in which he plays a principal part. Harlan participates in a real "he-man" prizefight in this picture and he engaged the erstwhile ring favorite to teach him the fine points of the boxing game. The star is somewhat of a scrapper and when the big fight scene is eventually 'shot' there will undoubtedly be some real blood shed on the Schulberg lot.

Irene Dalton, well known screen comedienne, has been engaged by Al St. John, Fox star, to play feminine leads in the comedian's productions. Miss Dalton, a striking brunette formerly played under the Christie banner.

Frank Mayo, former Universal star and more recently in the independent field, has signed with Goldwyn contract, according to an announcement by Abraham Lehr, vice-president in charge of production activities at the Culver city studio.

According to a wire received by Al Christie, the string of show dogs of his brother, Charles E., has been "framing dead" in New York, where the canine trophies of the well known producer are sojourn ing at this time. At the N. Y. Sporting Show, The 1923 Scottish Terrier event for fourth place and other entries of Christie did equally well in other classes.

Hopie Brown, daughter of Clarence Brown, former manager of the local Orpheum stage, has been signed to play a couple of champions in the Scottish Terrier event for fourth place and other entries of Christie did equally well in other classes.

The "400" of Los Angeles and environs turned out en masse for the annual ball given at the Alexandria Hotel, Saturday evening, Feb. 17, by the Motion Picture Directors Association. Stars, directors and others of the picture world, social leaders and other representative citizens of this city crowded the ballroom to capacity at one of the most lavish and brilliant affairs of the current season. Gowns and jewels valued at thousands of dollars were graced by the stars in attendance. Music was furnished by Max Fisher's famous orchestra, Marshall Neilan's stringed jazz band and a host of orchestras and quartettes. A delicious buffet supper was served at midnight.

"Klieg eyes" combined with a bad cold, are believed to have been conquered in the case of Edward Martin, picture character actor of the Hollywood colony, who has been under a physician for several days. It was feared he would lose his sight.

Charles C. Pettijohn of New York, general counsel for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, is a visitor in this city. Following a few days sojourn in Hollywood, Mr. Pettijohn will depart for Texas, Oklahoma and Missouri, in which states, J. S. Connolly, Washington representative of the Hay's organization, has been in the field for some time in connection with his chief's arrival. Mr. Pettijohn refused to discuss the censorship situations in the various states he has visited.

Theodore Kosloff, noted Russian dancer and screen star, departed hurriedly for the East this week on a trip inspired by political news from Russia, it is rumored. While in New York, he will confer with his brother, Alexii, and enjoy his first vacation since his entry in the picture business.

World rights to an anti-dope picture, "The Greatest Menace," recently produced by Spyros Scribante, independent company, Hollywood, have been disposed of to Mayer & Quinn, a newly organized distributing firm. Mr. Scribante was formerly the stage manager of the Louis B. Mayer studios while his associate was at one time manager of the Kineama Theatre here.

Scenes from the Educational-Christie comedy "A Hula Honeymoon" in which Henry Murdock is a featured player. The company went to Hawaii for the settings shown.
Hodkinson

IF YOU WANT TO get a line on costumes and customs of a century ago you will find these faithfully reproduced in "Down to the Sea in Ships," Hodkinson promises. In fact you will see the real thing, for in making this romance of sailing days Elmer Clifton had the cooperation of many prominent quakers of New Bedford, Mass. One of the Quaker gowns shown in the picture is 150 years old. A wealth of historical things of interest is revealed in this production, Hodkinson states.

ON MARCH 9 Hodkinson will publish "Just Like a Woman." This feature has been produced and directed by Miss Grace Haskins, said to be the youngest feminine producer in the field. Man- guerite De La Motte, Ralph Graves and George Fawcett are in the cast.

OFFICIALS OF the Hodkinson organization express themselves as being very much gratified at the showing being made by their product throughout the country. Not only are feature productions booking extensively, but there is a big demand for the All Star comedies as well, they report.

Fox

THOMAS A. EDISON has four favorite screen stars, and one of these is Tom Mix, Fox star. So said the electrical wizard in an interview on his seventy-sixth birthday.

FOX ANNOUNCES that according to reports from exhibitors "The Village Blacksmith" is receiving the wholehearted acceptance of audiences throughout the country. Jack Ford directed the opus, which has in its cast Virginia True Boardman, Ida Van McKenzie, Dave Butler, Gordon Griffin, George Jackalborough, Pat Moor, Tully Marshall, Caroline Rankin, Ralph Yeardsley, Henri de la Garrique, Bessie Love, Helen Field, Mark Pennant, Lon Poff, Cordelia Callahan, Eddie Gibbon and Lucille Hutton.

ARRANGEMENTS ARE BEING perfected for the showing on Broadway of Fox's screen version of the A. S. M. Hutchinson story, "If Winer Comes," Harry Millarde directed this picture in England and arranged the actual scenes described by the author.

Hugh Dierker

WORK HAS BEEN STARTED by Hugh Dierker on the first four special which he will produce for distribution through American Releasing. The initial film will be "The Other Side," an original story by Thelma Lams. In the cast are David Butler, Fritzunde Brunette, Helene Lynch, Charles Clary, Herbert Standing, E. M. Kimball, Pat O'Malley.

Above are two mirth-provoking scenes from Larry Semon's new Vitagraph comedy "The Barnyard!"

Vitagraph

"MY WILD IRISH ROSE," the Vitagraph special, was presented at the Alhambra theater in Toledo to aid in a drive for funds for the Little Sisters of the Poor home. It ran for a full week, the Alhambra management donating twenty per cent of the gross receipts to the cause. A premiere preceded the picture's opening, at which the marchers sang "My Wild Irish Rose," the song made famous by Chauncey Olcott.

DURING THE RUN of "A Front Page Story" at the Temple theater, Toledo, an effective newspaper stunt was obtained. Each day the Toledo Blade ran a two-column scene from the production with a brief synopsis of the story, with which they tied up their Want Ad section.

State Right Sales

GREOLE ENTERPRISES has purchased Will Nigh's production, "Notoriness," for Louisiana and Mississippi through arrangement with Sam Sax, sales manager for Weber & North, who is now on a tour of the south. The picture has been booked to play the Saenger circuit.

Paramount

PRODUCTION WAS STARTED last week at Palm Beach, Fla., on Dorothy Daltons new picture, "Fog Bound."

Irvin V. Willat is directing the star, David Powell, Maurice Costello, Martha Mansfield, William David, Warren Cook and Jack Richardson in the picture.

EXTERIORS FOR THE NEW Thomas Meighan picture, "The Nest-Do-Well," have been completed in Florida under the direction of Alfred E. Green. The company is now at the Long Island studio for interiors.

PARAMOUNT AND "Publishers" Weekly," a leading publication of the book trade, are cooperating in going direct to book dealers with an advertising campaign, the purpose of which is to urge the dealers to take the initiative in cooperative exploitation of pictures based on literary work. The current issue of the magazine carries a double-page advertisement on Joseph Hergesheimer's novel, "Java Head," and the George Melford production.

F. B. O.

SIX BIG SPECIALS, in addition to a number of high class star and all-star productions, are announced for publication during the coming year by P. A. Powers, managing director of Film Booking Offices. Emil Offeman, production manager, said Edgar Forrest, will cooperate with Mr. Powers in building up the ambitious production schedule.

First of the specials will be "Daytime Wives," by Lenore Coffee and John F. Goodrich. Emil Chautard will direct Deryles Perdue and Wyndham Standing in this society drama. "Divorce," a Chas- ter Bennett picture starring Jane Novak, is another of the specials, production upon which has commenced. Another will be "Blow Your Own Horn," from a play by Owen Davis. It is a story of a returned soldier. A Broadway stage success, "Lights Out," is scheduled for early production, as is "Jerry Comes Home."

Other pictures scheduled are: "Temple of the Giants," by Herbert Wilf Richie, a story of the outdoors; "Judith of Boehemia," a story of the Bohemian quarter of London "Born of the Cyclone," a story of Gypsy life. The foregoing films will be preceded by "Westbound 99," an Emory Johnson production, just completed and "Woman Love Twice?" an Ethel Clayton...
Here are two striking scenes from the new Playgoers' production "The Supreme Passion."

: American Releasing :

FOUR PRODUCTIONS distributed by American Releasing Corporation are accorded honorable mention in the January number of Exceptional Photoplays, the bulletin issued by the National Board of Review. The pictures are "As a Man Lives," directed by J. Scarle Dawsley; "One Million in Jewels." with Helen Holmes, directed by J. P. McGowan; "Outlaws of the Sea," a John Branton production, and "Solomon in Society," featuring Brenda Moore.

GEORGE BEBAN has been urged by the Italian censor general to include Italy in the tour he is making with "The Sign of the Rose." The suggestion followed a performance at the Fugazi theatre, where the company and picture has completed a two weeks' engagement.

THE FIRST FOREIGN deal has been consummated by Equity Pictures Corporation on its new special production, "Has the World Gone Mad?" The deal, which was closed by Louis Baun, vice-president of Equity, and Jacob Glucksman, covers virtually the entire South America, including the countries of Argentina, Paraguay, Chile, Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador. The purchase followed a screening for Mr. Glucksman after which he declared the picture to be all that Equity claimed for it, and complimented Daniel Garson Goodman for the fine work he had done. Mr. Glucksman is also the purchaser of Equity's latest success, "What's Wrong With the Women?" In purchasing "Has the World Gone Mad?" Mr. Glucksman declared that the picture is assured of success in his territories because it not only deals with the troubles and eccentricities of American life, but because it is applicable to the society life of any country in the world today.

JACK WEIL has succeeded J. B. Dugger as manager of the St. Louis exchange of Goldwyn, and H. L. Hollander replaces Roy Churchill as manager in Omaha.

HARRY STRICKLAND, veteran film man, has been placed in charge of the American Releasing branch in St. Louis.

H. S. GANS, formerly with F. B. O. in New York, has been made manager of American Releasing in Albany, N. Y. The company's offices in Albany have been moved to the Enterprise building.

: First National :

FOUR PICTURES WILL be issued by First National in March. They are "Scars of Jealousy," a Thomas H. Ince production with a star cast; "Refuge," starring Katherine MacDonald; "The Isle of Lost Ships," Maurice Tourneur's production of Captain Marriot's South Sea Island adventure story, and "Daddy," the next to the last feature Jackie Coogan will make for First National. "Slender the Woman," an Allan Holubar production, is scheduled for April publication.

EDWIN CAREWE AND a large company of players are headed for Zion National Park, Utah, where scenes for "The Girl from the Golden West" will be made. This it will be remembered, was David Belasco's great stage success and later and operatic triumph for Enrico Caruso. The picture cast will include J. Warren Kerrigan, Russell Simpson, Sylvia Beamer and many others.

FINAL SCENES are being made in San Francisco by Frank Lloyd on "Within the Law," the First National picture in which Norma Talmadge is the star, while up in the Canadian northwest Lawrence Trimble is making "White Fangs" from Jack London's story.

: Warner Brothers :

"BRASS," the Harry Rapf production directed by Sidney Franklin will be published by Warner Brothers in March. According to the distributors more than two million people have read this Charles G. Norris novel. Director Franklin predicts that it will be one of the outstanding box pictures of the year.

IN EXPLOITING "The Little Church Around the Corner" Manager Reid of the Strand theatre, Providence, R. I., used fifty of the best twenty-four sheet boards in the city, as part of an extensive campaign. This picture is adapted from Charles Dana Buck's play and the novel by Marion Millard.

WARNER STUDIOS are being enlarged for production of the eighteen new screen classics of the company. Filming of these will start next month and will follow on the heels of completion of "Main Street," last of seven productions of this season.

: Universal :

AT ITS PREMIERE at the Criterion theatre, New York City, Charles J. Brahm's Universal Jewel Production, "Driven," definitely established itself as one of the biggest pictures of the season, Universal reports. The picture was also screened by the Exceptional Photoplay Committee of the National Board of Review to a select audience of New York literary, stage, screen and other personalities.

: Al Lichtman :

THE FIRST EIGHT Preferred pictures to be distributed by Lichtman corporation have been booked by the Capitol theatre, McKeesport, Pa. Contract for the eight was signed after the success of "Rich Men's Wives" and "Shadows" at the Capitol. The eight include: "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," "The Hero," "Poor Men's Wives," "Are You a Failure?" "The Girl Who Came Back" and "April Showers."

BROADWAY LIKED "Poor Men's Wives," the Gassner picture for Lichtman. At the Criterion theatre, the feature drew large crowds, often in the face of inclement weather. Lichtman officials announce that during the second week's run there was a turn-away sale on every night but two.

"THE HERO" was booked for a special presentation at the George M. Cohan theatre, New York, on February 11 by B. F. Keith. Mr. Keith recently took over the theatre for Sundays and "The “Wake up, there is a burglar in the house!”

“Wake up yourself and quit dreaming.”

“Wake up. Why have I been awake for two hours worrying that burglar prowling about the room.”

The dialogue about the burglar occurred about 3 o’clock Wednesday morning between Richard R. Biecheley, owner of the Osage theatre, Kansas City, Kan., and his wife at home. Mr. Biecheley realized his wife was not dreaming when he heard the back door slam. It was the burglar beating a retreat with $55, wrapped in coin wrappers, ready to take to the bank, and a check for $76.

J. D. Harthorn has purchased Frank Walker’s interest in the California theatre at San Pedro, Cal.

Sam Bradley of Willisville, Ill., has purchased the Martin theatre, Red Bud, Ill.

J. C. Hewitt of the Strand theatre, Robinson, Ill., is back on the job again. For several days he was confined to his home by a severe cold.

Women Have Plan to Take Censorship Out Of Politics in N. Y. (Special to Exhibitors Herald)

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 20.—During the last week or so, prominent women’s organizations in New York state have taken active interest in motion picture censorship matters. The Albany Women’s Club, a powerful organization in the Capital City, is in favor of a plan which would divorce motion picture censorship from politics and place it under the control of the state department of education. The New York City Federation of Women’s Clubs has adopted a resolution for the retention of censorship in this state. Mrs. Russell Headley, president of the Albany Women’s Club, has this to say concerning censorship:

“While I believe that there should be some sort of motion picture censorship, I am also of the opinion that no censorship at all would be better than the present brand. Politics should have nothing to do with motion picture censorship.”

Tamar Lane to Have Own Offices on Coast (Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 20.—Tamar Lane has severed his connection with the Selznick organization and will establish his own publicity offices here, making his headquarters at United Studios in Hollywood. He has been west coast publicity director for Selznick since the forces moved here about a year ago.

It is his plan to act as personal business representative to stars, directors and authors as well as devote his time to magazine and newspaper work.

Seattle, Wash.—Louis R. Lurie, Los Angeles real estate operator, has purchased the Orpheum theatre at Third avenue and Madison street for reported $400,000. Mr. Lurie has announced that $100,000 will be spent in improving the house.

No Change of Control Is Looming for Pathe (Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—A report published in an Eastern financial paper to the effect that a possible change of ownership was in prospect for Pathe is branded as entirely unfounded and absolutely contrary to fact in a statement issued by Bernard Benson, vice-president of Pathe and a partner in the firm of Merrill, Lynch & Co.
Let's Have a Message

Last week Roy W. Adams, Pastime theater, Mason, Mich., supplied the Public Rights League with a message for this department. Let's have contributions from other exhibitors. It doesn't matter whether they are original or excerpts from newspapers or speeches. Let's have them.

Screen Message No. 96

Bishop Thomas F. Gallor of Tennessee says: "Any measure which tends in any way to reduce individual liberty about the theater must be carefully considered before it is put into effect. Such measures should be based not on the opinion of a group of people, but on the united opinion of the public."

Hot Shots From Adams

A rapid fire gun—that's Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich., when he looses his prolific pen in praise or condemnation of anything. Appended is a letter written by him and published by the Ingham County News. It's a writer who knows his business. Every exhibitor who is fighting censorship will want to read it. Because it is so long we are publishing it in 6 point type. But it's worth reading anyway.

He Writes:

"I want to hand out a few hard facts, right straight from the shoulder. If you're thin-skinned or easily offended, don't read any further.

"Last Friday's papers carried the news of another screen censorship bill, fathered by Senator George M. Congdon of Detroit. On the face of it this is all very nice and pretty. All sin, vice and suggestive scenes are to be done away with on the screen; consequently there will be no more wickedness in the world, neither in books, magazines, newspapers or daily life. The lion shall lie down with the lamb without getting its back teeth in the wrong place. The millennium will be here, and we'll all go to glory in a golden chariot."

"But listen! Do you know what censorship really is? It is a German, a Russian, an institution. If you please, sponsored, in this country and this state, only by a very select and very small group of publishers and borrowers! That isn't very much better than us common folks just what we want to do. "But to return to the movies! Oh dear no! Some of them—right in this town—boast that they have never been in a motion picture theatre. That's why they know so much more than we do about the sins of the sinful screen. That's why they make such good censors. The dictionary says the censor is a fault-finder, one who censures or blames. That definition certainly fits a liar, but don't ask them what the good pictures are—they don't know. But they can tell you about the doubtful ones for sixteen years back."

"Just now they are asking us for a new state department of motion picture censorship, with a board of three members and a train of inspectors, clerks and deputies longer than a prize pig's pedigree. Three people to inspect about thirty million feet of film, purge the poison from the prints, and preserve the purity of the purely parochial populace. Three people to inspect thirty thousand reels of new movies! What is the educational, social, industrial, novelty and propaganda films? Three political appointees to give someone a know and impartial judgment on all this film. Impossible! If you want to make me the man or woman capable of this task, I'll give them. You will see such a film as the gorgeous tail-feathers of that fabulous bird, the phoenix, which was so rare that it never existed.

"Now I'll tell you a story. It's a true story, and admit that what makes me sore is the fact that I'm the only one who knows it. Some years ago a group of colleges and universities and art schools put up a fund to establish an institution. Let me say in all sincerity that if these people ever start on the screen to tell these films they won't leave much of it but the covers when they finish censoring it.

"Let's get down to brass tacks. If anyone comes to me with a petition for censorship, let your conscience be your guide. If you honestly believe that you don't know enough to know what is good for your community, and you want to hide the films and some chairs and counters to do your thinking for you, at my expense, why, sign, sign, on the dotted line! Bear in mind, however, that the citizens of Massachusetts buried censor-

From Mr. Hunt:

A cracking good editorial, published in the Pacific Record Herald, Medford, Ore., has been forwarded to us by George A. Hunt, theatre owner of that city. It discusses the censorship question in a new light. There is a treat for you in this editorial. Watch for it next week.

Public Speaks:

Again the public has spoken. This time at Arcadia, Cal. The result of a referendum this month gives the city Sunday pictures by a vote of 150 to 70. And yet the reformers are brazenly broadcasting that the public wants Sunday closing. Can you beat it?

More Joy:

Iowa is free of the censorship curse for another two years. Sponsor of the bill in the legislature of that state has withdrawn his measure. And the withdrawal wasn't a herculean task either, for his request was given unanimous approval by the legisliative body.

Not So Good:

Tennessee has voted Sunday closing. So has the New Jersey senate. The New Jersey situation is a serious one. While the bill prohibiting Sunday theatres was enacted, another measure barring Sunday baseball was killed. There's something wrong there.
LETTERS From Readers

A forum at which the exhibitor is invited to express his opinion on matters of current interest. Brevity adds forcefulness to any statement. Unsigned letters will not be printed.

Sorry to Lose Arbuckle

CLINTON, I. D.—To the Editor, I am a reader of the Herald every week and I enjoy every department. I am anguished to see the letters that contributed in regard to Arbuckle and the welfare and uplift of the films. This week's Herald announces that our Fatty will not act in any more pictures, which I am very sorry to hear and I think many others are. If this thing was put to a vote by the theatre-going public, I'll wager you would see Arbuckle pictures out quicker than it would take to release a new reel.

This week's Herald also contained a letter from Mr. Fairney regarding this subject and also stating that he is not able to understand why the movies do not make up the club and go after Fatty with the rest of the Uplift squad. Now in my estimation, Mr. Fairney is like the sliding note over the counter, who wants all the people to come to his show for it takes all the people to fill up the theatre and that is where he gets his. But when he books his pictures for ALL the people(?) he listens to the uplift gang of the town.

There is a good general class of people to show to and if you watch audiences, you will notice the ones that come from the laboring class of the people that come to town shopping and buying things are the ones who like a picture of the nature of light comedy drama and western and some sensational stuff. These people, if you will notice, will be at the theatre at the rate of three nights a week and it is very likely that every night will be there on the average of five or a week.

Now the social class or the wives of the business men and the business people themselves, the socially class, are the ones that want the Valentino and O'Brien stuff and you find them in the theatre one or two weeks or on an average of three times a month.

The former are of the class that spend the money and want to see Arbuckle and the latter are the class that want some story, like Arbuckle and in plain words knock the pictures that the people who really support the shows want.

Yet, he listens to the fellow who is in business in the same town and comes past his lobby and says: "This Mac Murray picture you had the other night was sure a dandy!" Well, maybe it was but how many less did you have in on it that you lost a lad of your class, Bill Hart or Tom Mix or any other one of that nature?

And what was there to any picture of the nature of Mac Murray, DeMille or a Fox special or any other so-called special after the set is taken out? I have been in and around the picture show game for the last twelve years and I have yet to see them come back anything like strong on the screen, I think.

People of what we commonly call "the better classes" are the ones that idolize and mourn the loss of Wallace Reid. It is very sorry to have the picture world lose him but, if you have young folks to send to the theatre, which would you prefer that the theatre have, this kid, this kitten whom we can make you laugh when you feel blue, an all around good fellow that made his money and kept it turning over, or would you rather go to see pictures of a dope addict, one of the worst things that the picture world will ever have? I would say let Arbuckle make pictures and amuse the people and stop the issue-making of any Reid pictures from now on.

Let each exhibitor put a ballot at the door of his theatre and let each patron vote for or against any film and then see where the voice of our Uplift counts.

In regard to the letter of Mr. Mandell of Champaign, Ill., about how there are school competition to contend with, may I suggest that he go direct to the exchanges, from whom he buys and has contracts and make his protection due him. Surely, they would rather have him for a customer every day or week for a year than they would some one who would use one picture a week some weeks.

Also, I notice a letter from Mr. ThoVEY telling how he was hung on an anniversary week. I personally think that a man is soft who will use his own money to buy pictures with the advance and lend of a nationally known corporation. Why didn't he put on a week for the theatre and call it Lyric Week and advertise for himself and no one would have been disappointed.

Well, I hope that the above will put a few to thinking and will help a little in the game and I will be glad to answer or reactivate anything that I have not made clear in the letter of Mr. Green, Rivoli theatre, Clinton, Ind.

Reporting on Pictures

OBELIN, KANS.—To the Editor: As about all I have sent in to the Herald has been reports on pictures, I might as well air a few opinions regarding other things that deal with films. The last item that I read was a letter from E. J. O'TARA, who does not believe one should "swell up and run over" in his praise of a picture. I wonder what he will think of my report on "The Name of the Law." We can't all be alike because a picture please one person and I believe I have seen enough pictures during my exhibition experience of ten years to know a real show.

I can't think of all the people using the clipping to boost the price of a picture. If you don't think the picture is worth the money, never the less the people will never have any trouble in turning them down and don't take their word for the picture being a knockout. I have seen some good pictures that you can buy right. My motto in reporting pictures is "Tell the truth as you and your patron see it." Did you ever wonder why a patron come to you and roar because you ran a picture so fast that they could not read the titles, when you know that the machine was running normal speed? Well, you know the reason—that some careless operator had torn part of the title strip off and when the machine was patched, it was too short to read even if the machine was barely turning over.

It looks like the film inspectors would look for something in the news but in new ones or cut the old one out entirely. I would rather have them guess what was being done on the news and let the leader be on for fifteen or twenty feet. You even find it on some new films.

I would like to go to so much trouble to make fine artistic pictures and then put the entire cast at the first of the film, all the rest would be of introduction as they appear in the picture. It surely makes people mad to try and remember who is who. Lots of them will see a familiar face and wonder who it is, for they cannot remember from six to sixteen names and who those names represent in the play. I wonder if some one would give up a signed request from exhibitors and send it to these producers, if they would pay any attention to it? Why don't you call their attention to it in the Herald?—R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kans.

Wants Plausible Stories

PITTSBURGH, PA.—To the Editor: The public appears to be getting sour on the intangibility and improbability of stories, stories that never happen in real life. And it's about time to register a kick at that. Some of the stuff that is woven into an ad, a plausible story, can make the ears bleed with tears from the eyes of a 3,000-year old mummy.

Why, there's plenty of honest-to-goodness material in the gamut of human experiences, without resorting so often to bare-faced exaggeration and unadulterated for himself in his life. And some of that story that 6 or 7 reels should be enough for any feature. Eliminate the padding.—Henry W. Gaubing, Lincoln theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa.

On National Advertising

JACKSON, MISS.—To the Editor: One of the really big problems that happen around this town is when the patrons ask the manager of the theatre when we will get to see the lastest show advertised in the Saturday Evening Post. The play in question is invariably made by a certain big company, who by means of an ad in the Post, has taken the market, but is advertised in the Post as a 1923 picture and is not released at the time advertised.

I can't let them all know about the release dates but I can use the trade journal to show the one who asks me when the play will be released that it is in the market, and in particular should put the release dates opposite the picture named. What about the Herald, Mr. Exenter, Majestic-Istotine theatre, Jackson, Miss.

Those Were the Good Old Days

CUSTER, CITY, OKLA.—To the Editor: Funny experiences are a thing of the past here but still it is funny to think back a little way and remember how they used to flock in with just a comic or ad cost advertising. Now you can give them the best features and use all the means you think of in the paper and you are a lucky boy if you come out ahead, after the expenses are paid.

Isn't it funny, too, to have some salesmen who have never seen a picture and know that picture will do for you in your town when that same fellow never ordered a picture. Oh well, sometime when you get hooked and book this said picture, expecting to knock them cold, and usually the big special is a very poor program picture. Funny isn't it? Yes, funny for the fellow who does not have to pay the bill.—C. A. Kelley, Rex theatre, Custer City, Okla.

On the Music Tax

MORGANFIELD, KY.—To the Editor: We wish to inform our patrons of our experience with the use of music in our theatre.

We have tried to stay off of the "taxable music" and although we have used the utmost precautions, we find that we have unknowingly infringed in the use of music in our theatre. We find that some music marked "tax free" is really controlled by the society. Practically all of the late music is controlled by the "tax free" label. We have been trying to stay off this music in order to avoid paying the music tax, but we now wish to inform our exhibitors to take out a license for the use of this music, since it is the only safe way to use music in your theatre.—Duncan & Milk, Princess theatre, Morganfield, Ky.
American Releasing

Daring Danger, with Pete Morrison.—
Boat in the water, a Western get this one. G. Durbin, Majestic theatre, Perry, Ill.—Small town patronage.

What Fools Men Are, with a special cast.—Good program picture. Not a special by any means. Do not pay big price for it.—T. W. Young, Jr., Frances theatre, Dyersburg, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

When the Desert Calls, with Violet Henrion.—Great picture, but public scenes to have its fill of deserts and SHEIK pictures.—Will R. Winch, Wigwam theatre, El Paso, Tex.—Transient patronage.

The Belle of Alaska, with Jane Novak.—Fair Northern play that drew good Saturday business.—J. B. Stine, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.—General patronage.

Sisters, with a special cast.—Splendid picture and did fair business.—Will R. Winch, Wigwam theatre, El Paso, Tex.—Transient patronage.

My Old Kentucky Home, with a special cast.—Ran this at Philip, S. D. They report liking it very much and I can recommend it as a sure box office attraction. The name gets them and the picture actually pleases all.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. Dak.—Small town patronage.

My Old Kentucky Home, with a special cast. —The sincerity and cleanliness of this picture are commendable. Very amusing and exciting. Get a good reader for rapping effect and get this picture for a good sized and well pleased audience at advanced prices.—H. W. Schimke, Grand theatre, Philip, S. D.—Small town patronage.

My Old Kentucky Home, with a special cast.—One of the best pictures we ever had, Monte Blue fine, also rest of cast, Kentucky derby realistic.—J. B. Laughlin, Bart’s Mecca, Midland, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Associated Exhibitors

Grandma’s Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—Died a fine business on this one. Everyone satisfied. Many comments. You’ll have to take it hat off to Lloyd, the greatest of all comedians. If you want to make money book all the Lloyds.—A. J. Paul, Royal theatre, Galion, Ohio.—Small town patronage.

Grandma’s Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—Very good. Give us more like it.—Anton Gilles, Gilles theatre, Wapeton, N. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Grandma’s Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—Very good. Better than Dr. Jack. Good stunt picture.—W. L. Behler, Royal theatre, Garrett, Ind.—General patronage.

Till We Meet Again, with Mae Marsh. —The very best picture we have run in a long time.—H. L. McDonald, Royal theatre, Malvern, Ark.—General patronage.

The Rider of the King Log, with a special cast.—Did not please many, although there is some scenery in this picture. Could be made into five reels instead of seven.—E. J. Laqua, Gem theatre, Hancockson, N. D.—General patronage.

Silas Marner, with a special cast.—

Very good. Used this in connection with the school. A matinee got all the kids.—R. K. Lang, Lyric theatre, Cobb, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Handle With Care, with a special cast.—Nothing to it.—H. L. McDonald, Royal theatre, Malvern, Ark.—General patronage.

F. B. O.

The Third Alarm, with a special cast.—Will please all who see it. Really thrilling and should prove above average.—C. Oldham, Oldham’s theatre, McMinnville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Thelma, with Jane Novak.—Played to a very satisfactory Sunday business. Picture pleased all. Several comments. Photography, scenery wonderful.—A. J. Haley, Hillside theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

If I Were Queen, with Ethel Clayton.—A splendid good picture, but failed to draw for me. Played two days to packet business in three months. No fault of the picture.—G. May Lynn theatre, Kanopolis, Kans.—Small town patronage.

If I Were Queen, with Ethel Clayton.—Very delightful picture. A little out of the ordinary of the regular run of pictures. Interesting throughout. Have found F. B. O’s product to be very good this season.—A. J. Haley, Hillside theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

THE THIRD ALARM, with a special cast.—A very good audience picture with a climax that will raise them out of their seats. The fire scene is wonderful.

Put this on with our local fire department and made a little money, although we showed during a blizzard first night and 20 below zero second. No limit to advertising possibilities.—Leuzinger & Amberg, Carthage theatre, Carthage, S. D.

Up and At ’Em, with Doris May.—Good comedy-drama full of pep. Got many laughs. Film in good condition. Business good in spite of bad weather.—F. O. Roby, Latona theatre, Williamsburg, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Queen of the Turf, with a special cast.—Only a program feature. Horse race not a real one.—W. L. Buck, Gem theatre, Waterville, Minn.—Small town patronage.

The Kick Back, with Harry Carey.—Just a fair program picture and not up to Carey’s standard.—George Vaughan, Grand theatre, Dunnville, Ont., Can.—General patronage.

Good Men and True, with Harry Carey.—Not a consistent plot, but should please the less critical.—C. Oldham, Oldham’s theatre, McMinnville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a spe-Special Cast. — Buy this one and buy all advertising offered. It drawn like a picture.

Get the people out and please all.

W. L. Buck, Gem theatre, Waterville, Minn. — Small town patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast. — Good picture. Sure to please this class of patron. The Moline, Moline, Ill. — Small town patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast. — Good picture. Sure to give a real report on this as the exhibitor who was supposed to circuit this to me in his criminal carelessness gave me a reel of coming in a place of a fifth reel of the show. Show looked like it was all right though and they have good publicity on it. — E. B. Beale, Strand theatre, Pierre, S. D. — Small town patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast. — Good picture. Sure to please this class of patron. The Moline, Moline, Ill. — Small town patronage.

First National

The Hotentott, a Thomas H. Ince production. — You can't go wrong in boosting this one to your patrons. Very good competion with E. Ince's Steeplechase. Our patrons enjoyed it. — Chas. H. Ryan, Garfield theatre, Chicago, Ill. — Neighborhood patronage.

Fury, with Richard Barthelmess and Dorothy Gish. — A picture that is almost perfect as far as cast and direction and with a vastly valuable story. This is the so-called rough sea stuff, as the story brings out some mighty fine characters, the hero being cut from 100 pounds more by the entire cast. Richard Barthelmess carries away the honors with Dorothy Gish close second. Business good two days. Exhibition very high to me for. — W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind. — General patronage.

Oliver Twist, with Jackie Coogan. — Fair business. Price too high on this kid's picture to make any money. Lay off this unless you get it at a reasonable price. — R. Marsden, Jr., Noble theatre, Marshfield, Ore. — Small town patronage.

Oliver Twist, with Jackie Coogan. — This is good, but they want too much for it. — W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Rochester, Ind. — General patronage.

The Bond Boy, with Richard Barthelmess. — Very heavy drama. Needs strong competition, it is a very poor business here and I think it is overvalued considerably. — Dwight B. Baker, Circle theatre, Ottumwa, Iowa. — General patronage.

The Eternal Flame, with Norma Talmadge. — A truly great picture that brought more favorable criticism than Slinin' Through, notwithstanding the fact that our patrons do not follow period pictures. — Crosby Bros., Lily theatre, Buffalo, N. Y. — Neighborhood patronage.

The Eternal Flame, with Norma Talmadge. — Good picture but not worth price asked. Should be bought for less money than it is now renting. — J. F. Jones, Municipal theatre, Malad City, Idaho. — Neighborhood patronage.

Minnie, a Marshall Neilan production. — I have sold six reels and they all costing right down right low and confess that I believe this to be a very poor picture. My notion is, if it is cut to five reels and sold at one-third what the exhibitor is selling it for, it might get over, but it came to me with high exhibition value, therefore I turn it charged advanced admission to the public which is an outrage. There was never any excuse in the world for thinking this is a special picture. — W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind. — General patronage.

Sonny, with Richard Barthelmess. — Picture good. Star does well, but too high rental for us. An exhibitor who has to continue with First National has my sympathy. — E. S. Brewer, Strand theatre, Owosso, Mich. — Neighborhood patronage.

Fools First, a Marshal Neilan production. — A fairly good picture that pleased a fair business. — George Vaughan, Grand theatre, Dunnville, Ont. — General patronage.

The Masquerader, with Guy Bates Post. — Just a fine picture. — B.F. Thomas, principal interest in acting of Post, which is good. — M. W. Mattechick, Liberty theatre, Kennewick, Wash. — Neighborhood patronage.

Star Dust, with Hope Hampton. — A good picture and well liked by those who had read the novel, as the picture did not alter the story. — E. S. Brewer, Strand theatre, Reinbeck, Iowa. — Small town patronage.

Star Dust, with Hope Hampton. — Whether this followed the book or not is the least of my worries, as it pleased my people. All this walling and gnashing of teeth was probably nothing but press agent bunk anyway. — Wm. E. Tragodoff, Paris theatre, Neillsville, Wis. — Small town patronage.

A Question of Honor, with Anita Stewart. — The best Stewart we have used. Went over fine and drew second night Close to special. — W. L. Buck, Gem theatre, Waterville, Minn. — Small town patronage.

Tolable David, with Richard Barthelmess. — A good picture, except it was about two reels too long. It looked to me that for every one in the family that was killed or died off they stuck on another reel. Made me think this one winning the gold medal. Some of my patrons asked me confidentially why it got the medal, and I couldn't tell them. — Palen, Royal theatre, Neillsville, Wis. — Small town patronage.

Rose of the Sea, with Anita Stewart. — Good program picture. Will satisfy, that all. — D. F. Brown on second day's showing — George Vaughan, Grand theatre, Dunnville, Ont., Can. — General patronage.

The Rosary, with a special cast. — Best picture for anyone. Will split your wide showing power. — C. E. Bailly, Lyric theatre, Webster, S. D. — General patronage.

The ROSARY, with a special cast. — Most everyone we have talked with just loved this picture. We succeeded in giving our town's first community Christmas in our theatre through the splendid aid of First National and the people certainly appreciated it.

We used all the proceeds on Christmas tree and made but no profit because attendance was less than expected. — B. G. Sigsbee, Star theatre, Heppner, Ore. — Small town patronage.

Dinty, a Marshall Neilan production. — Lights off until just before show time and then we found out that Dinty had been all shot to pieces and the hodge-podge we screened was a travesty on entertainment. War isn't the only thing that is phoney. — H. O. F. Hall, Grand Gorge, N. Y. — Small town patronage.

Stranger Than Fiction with Katherine MacDonald. — One of the poorest Macs we have ever seen. A piece of work that hard to sell in my town. — L. Jones, Star theatre, Malad City, Idaho. — Neighborhood patronage.

The Sky Pilot, with a special cast. — One of the best Westers we ever had. Pleaded 100 per cent and the class you cannot afford to pass up. — Edwards &
And the March "Record" Will Be Bigger, Better Than This

I am reminded that I have never acknowledged either of the two "Box Office Records" I have received, but let me assure you that they are two of the most valuable assets I have in my business. I can't remember advance reports on all pictures—nobody can—but it's no trouble to look them up in the trade familial newspapers in with a bargain list of word-beaters.

Another thing, the reaction of small town crowds all over the country is worth a lot more to me than the impression of the individual first-nighter regarding a picture. Sometimes his verdict for good or bad is entirely reversed by that of the box office.

ROY W. ADAMS,
Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.

I want to say a word about your "Box Office Record" to the effect that it is the one controlling factor in my choice of trade papers, as it seems to be the only one worth while. I do not see how you can beat the proposition of printing honest-to-goodness reports from bona-fide exhibits, and not relying merely on whether, for instance, Laurence Reid feels well or sick when he reviews a picture.

Thanks for the real help this little book offers. To be candid, it interests me more than reviews published in the main publication, which, for me, constitutes more a sort of newspaper.

WISTER M. ELLIOTT,
Star theatre, Vandergrift, Pa.

Received two "Box Office Records." Have placed one in my deposit box at the bank. The other one is hidden so no film salesman will get his hands on this one.

"The Box Office Record" has saved me from being stung on bum features several times. I always look up pictures that I have booked and see what others have to report and if they are bum features I can cancel them. I sometimes find the reports in the book, I never failed to find them in "What the Picture Did for Me" or somewhere in the "Herald."
will go over where Westerns are liked. Change Charles' name back to "Buck" and sailing would be pretty.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

BosS of Camp 4, with Charles Jones.—A good Jones picture that pleased, but a lot of my patrons spoke about how some of the movie stars always look about a dozen huskies in every script that is shown at the theatre. Jones of "Camp 4"—Gus Cook, Crystal theatre, Dundee, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

THE PRIMAL LAW, with Dustin Farnum.—If we had known in advance what kind of a picture this was we would have raised our price, because it had many of the so-called "dreadful" knocked for a row of crepe-de-chene ash cans.—Miller & Carroll, Gayety theatre, Amory, Miss.

Lights of New York, with a special cast.—Business dropped horribly the second day. Picture only fair. Not a special.—W. Wartz, Colonial theatre, Hagerstown, Md.—Neighborhood patronage.

Monte Cristo, with John Gilbert.—Wonderful picture, fine acting. Well advertised. Used it two days, and lost money. With Waterman, step, Brother, R. N. Navary, Pleasant Hour theatre, Verona, Penn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Monte Cristo, with John Gilbert.—Did not pull for me. Good picture; good acting. These old historical plays do not pull. People are living for today and not decades ago. Small towns, no use to try it.—Monte Cristo.—O. W. McClellan, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, III.—Neighborhood patronage.

Lights of the Desert, with Shirley Mason.—If Shirley means anything in your town, our patrons will like this picture.—Wm. E. Traagsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wisc.—Small town patronage.

Lights of the Desert, with Shirley Mason.—Shirley always gets the crowds for us. Sold out and patrons begged for standing room.—Mrs. D. C. Turney, Mil- ler theatre, Bonesteel, S. D.—General patronage.

The New Teacher, with Shirley Mason.—A fine picture by C. F. Kriegbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

The New Teacher, with Shirley Mason.—Very good picture, Patrons well pleased. With C. F. Kriegbaum.—G. Strauss Sr., Emblems theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Nero, with a special cast.—Beautiful picture, but any zaniness of the business. Public does not seem to want spectacles any more.—Will R. Winch, Wigwam theatre, El Paso, Tex.—Trans- sient patronage.

Nero, with a special cast.—Good picture, but did not hold up. Business dropped hard last days.—Thos. Burke, Liberty theatre, Cumberland, Md.—Neighborhood patronage.

Nero, with a special cast.—Can't say too much for this one. In every way it is a wonderful production. Splendid acting. Most gorgeous sets and well produced. They liked it from beginning to end. We had more nice compliments that we understood it would not stand up to a splendid business. School teachers recommended it to the pupils. Church folks pulled it down.—W. E. W. theatre, Arlington, Mass.—Neighborhood patronage.

Nero, with a special cast.—Lacked here. Business good.—W. Wartz, Colonial theatre, Hagerstown, Md.—Neighborhood patronage.

OVER THE HILL, with a special cast.—The picture may be old, but the genuine worthwhile moral tone of this picture will always be new.

Billy Sunday could not shake the town more than "Over the Hill" did. Ran two nights. Second night I invited every child in town to be my guest, admission free. They were all there and there were adults enough to pay out big at that. Best advertising I ever did.—H. W. Schinke, Gem theatre, Philip, S. D.

Honor First, with John Gilbert.—I can't see why we are losing this picture with Miss Farnum, and others, for he is no actor. This show is X G.—H. L. Selers, Strand theatre, Steeletown, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Moonshine Valley, with William Farnum.—I heard a little girl remark as she left the theatre, "Well, Bill Farnum went crying to his mother." That plain the picture better than I could do it. Business fair.—J. B. Stone, Wonder- land theatre, Chilton, Ind.—General patronage.

Catch My Smoke, with Tom Mix.—One of the best of the series. Business good.—Thos. Burke, Liberty theatre, Cumberland, Md.—Neighborhood patronage.

Romance Land, with Tom Mix.—A highly improbable and uninteresting picture, exploiting Ireland without any sus- cise. Mix should do something soon or his following here will cease. Charged thirty and cents and ran Fox News, Fox News get good letter each issue, but prices remain the same.—P. E. Morris, Regent theatre, Cleveland, Miss.—General patronage.

Calvert's Valley, with John Gilbert.—A very good picture. Patrons liked it as it was different from the average.—Gus Cook, Crystal theatre, Dundee, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

West of Chicago, with Charles Jones.—A well produced Western with romance, pep, scraps, speed, 'n everything. My crowd enjoyed it one and turned out in fairly good numbers, even to the weather to see it. I guess that's the "acid test" from we exhibitors' view- point.—J. B. Stingle, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.—General patronage.

In Arabia, with Tom Mix.—Did half as much business as on former Mix pic- ture. Unless Mix is ready to retire, he had better get back to his old style pic- tures. Fans won't stand for this stuff.—Will R. Winch, Wigwam theatre, El Paso, Tex.—Transient patronage.

The Yosemite Trail, with Dustin Farnum.—Good picture. Beautiful scenery and star pleases my patrons.—Gus Cook, Crystal theatre, Dundee, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

While Justice Waits, with Dustin Farnum.—A very good picture. Ran as a program picture, and did good business. Will R. Winch, Wigwam theatre, Garrett, Ind.—General patronage.

Arabian Love, with John Gilbert.—Many seemed to think this picture as good as The Sheik; anyway, everybody was pleased. Some liked it and this one and not a "dead" foot of film in it.—Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Cor- nell, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Crusader, with William Russell.—Played to very good business under adverse conditions. An interesting outdoor type of story with action that pleases good average audience.—B. Stine, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.—General patronage.

Pardon My Nerve, with Charles Jones.—Best Western picture this star ever made. Good for any program house.—T. W. Young, Jr., Vaudelette theatre, Dy- cersburg, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Trooper O'Neill, with Charles Jones.—One of "buck's" extra good ones. If a fellow could get "Buck" and Tom Mix at a fair price without having the two Farnums, Russell and Gilbert rambled down his throat as excess baggage, this wouldn't be such a cruel world after all.—Wm. E. Traagsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wisc.—Small town patronage.

PAWN TICKET 210, with Shirley Mason.—Can always depend on a Mason picture as good and clean and interesting pictures to be world beaters for spectacular ef- fects, daring gowns, etc., but they have the human touch and we can make more money by giving pictures to human beings.—P. C. Es- tee, Fad theatre, Brookings, S. D.

Sky High, with Tom Mix.—Good pic- ture, but print in poor condition. No title, rainy, and sprocket holes torn out. Business fair on account of cold weather.—O. Rohn, Latona theatre, Williamsburg, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fast Mail, with Charles Jones—
Rea Lists Ten Great Photoplays

Here are ten great pictures from every angle which played my house since October 5th to S. R. O. every day and pleased my patrons 100 per cent.

MANTEL LIGHTER—Four days at 20 & 40c.
ON THE HIGH SEAS—Three days at 18 & 30c.
BACK HOME AND BROKE—Three days at 10 & 30c.
The VALLEY OF SILENT MEN—Three days at 18 & 30c.
The STORM—Three days at 20 & 40c.
BROADWAY ROSE—Three days at 18 & 30c.
Peg O' MY HEART—Three days at 20 & 40c.
HEARTS AFLAME—Three days at 20 & 40c.
HER GILDED CAGE—Three days at 18 & 30c.
The OLD HOMESTEAD—Six days at 20 & 40c.
The OLD HOMESTEAD breaks all records ever held for me any place by any picture.

George A. Rea
Colonial theatre, Washington C. H., O.

but he 'still is unable to get through a production without tearing his shirt half off so as to show his muscles.'—H. M. Reitz, Strand theatre, Lamont, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Connecticut Yankee, with Harry Myers.—Best picture made this last year. Gets the money.—C. E. Baill, Lyric theatre, Webster, S. D.—General patronage.

A Connecticut Yankee, with Harry Myers.—A big picture in every way. Very satisfactory entertainment to big business for two days. Can praise it highly.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winona, Ind.—General patronage.

A Connecticut Yankee, with Harry Myers.—Great. Get them in and it will please, 100 per cent entertainment.—C. C. Clendenen, Amusus theatre, Marlinton, W. Va.—Small town patronage.

Over the Hill, with a special cast.—I'll admit that I got this picture for showing now under protest. I did not believe it would get by, but will say that we booked it for two days and had capacity business, at slightly raised admission prices. It has been said before and I say it again this is one of the great pictures of the age, as a general, as an entertainment. A lesson well worth remembering.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winona, Ind.—General patronage.

Over the Hill, with a special cast.—A good picture and pulls like a mustard plaster. Can't go wrong on this one and it can be bought right.—C. C. Clendenen, Amusus theatre, Marlinton, W. Va.—Small town patronage.

Goldwyn

Brown Chains, with a special cast.—Plenty of action and fairly good story. Dandy business, for one day only.—R. Marsden, Jr., Noble theatre, Marshallford, Ore.—Small town patronage.

Brothers Under the Skin, with a special cast.—A very good domestic comedy which got over well with our patrons and seemed to please. However, it did not swell the box office cash box to any extent.—L. K. Rice, Auditorium theatre, Winston-Salem, N. C.—Transient patronage.

A Blind Bargain, with Lon Chaney.—Business terrible on this one.—R. Marsden, Jr., Noble theatre, Marshallford, Ore.—Small town patronage.

Sherlock Holmes, with John Barrymore.—Picture slow. Crowd poorest in six months. Picture would not draw in our neighborhood. Played two days. Lost plenty. Cannot make much on Goldwyn specials of this year.—A. J. Haley, Hillsdale theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Sherlock Holmes, with John Barrymore.

EVER-LASTINGLY EXCITING

March 3, 1923 EXHIBITORS HERALD 73

As a thriller it is there from every angle, but that's all it is,—just a thriller. Stay away, it is too expensive to see.—B. Baker, Circle theatre, El Paso, Tex.—Transit patronage.

A Fool There Was, with a special cast.—A good picture which did not hold up. Patrons thought it was a reissue.—Will R. Myers, Pagamum theatre, El Paso, Tex.—Transit patronage.

A Terror There Was, with a special cast.—I am still wondering whether or not this should be classed as entertainment. The story is New Orleans, illegal circus, but flat on a three-day run. Sent Bill Fox most of the receipts.—J. B. Stone, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.—General patronage.

Just Tony, with Tom Mix.—Fine. Please everyone. A whale of a puller.—W. B. Baker, Circle theatre, Ottumwa, Iowa.—General patronage.

Just Tony, with Tom Mix.—An exceptional picture. Played to big Sunday. Monday business and everyone pleased. This is the mixed picture race for star hon- ors in this. A picture that will pull applause in any house.—J. B. Stone, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.—General patronage.

Just Tony, with Tom Mix.—A fast moving six reel Western wherein a horse really plays the lead. By far the great- est Mix picture ever made. Will pull up two days and really will stand an advance in admission. Book it by all means.—J. B. Stone, Dreamland theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

For Big Stakes, with Tom Mix.—Software.—West good two days with a serial. Tom Mix is sure a winner.—O. W. McClean, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Self Made Man, with William Rus- sell.—A program picture that will get by it your patrons like Russell. My patrons prefer him in rough stuff rather than dress suits.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Shackles of Gold, with William Far- num.—Very ordinary program subject that failed to make a hit with Farnum admission quite poor. Our best arranged offering a prize to the party selecting the poorest story for the Far- nums.—J. B. Stone, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.—General patronage.

Thunderclap, with Mary Carr.—This picture filled my house and pleased everybody.—W. T. Lyford, Gem theatre, West Helena, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Up and Going, with Tom Mix.—Went big for two days. Everybody pleased. Mix virtually goes big with us.—O. W. McClean, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Night Horseman, with Tom Mix.—One of the best Mix pictures to date. Has a great story, but they came to see this picture and were pleased.—Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Western Speed, with Charles Jones.—Good. Best we have had. Pulled big. Brothers, book all the Jones you can get.—O. W. McClean, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Western Speed, with Charles Jones.—A typically good "Buck" Jones Western with plenty of action.—Wm. E. Trags- dorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Western Speed, with Charles Jones.—A dandy. Go after it. Will sure please.

—Harry Hobloth, Maxine theatre, Inlay City, Mich.—Small town patronage.

A Virgin Paradise, with Pearl White.—Nothing virgin in this antediluvian of- fering. Sold as a special and really only for its old prices. Very poor. Box office returns bad.—Rosen- field, Hopp & Co., Spencer Square the- atre, Rock Island, Ill.—General patronage.

Shame, with John Gilbert.—Lay off of this one. Long drawn out, morbid story. Don't be misled by Northern scenes. Found very much overdone, but he was liked.—G. Durbin, Majestic theatre, Perry, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Gleam O'Dawn, with John Gilbert.—This picture not as bad as some say it is. Will go over at regular prices with a good comedy.—Harry Hobloth, Liberty theatre, Marlette, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Gleam O'Dawn, with John Gilbert.—Pleased about 90 per cent. This was Gil- bert's first appearance here, but he was liked.—G. Durbin, Majestic theatre, Perry, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Jolt, with Johnnie Walker.—Clever picture. Not known here and did not draw but no fault of picture. Good program picture.—A. F. Affelt, Liberty theatre, St. Louis, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Bar Nothing, with Charles Jones.—This picture was probably a good picture in its day, but the print that we received from the New Orleans office was terrible. Just about half there. But "Busk" al- ways gets us money or else helps us to break even.—Miller & Carroll, Gayety theatre, Amory, Miss.—General patronage.

EXHIBITORS HERALD
March 3, 1923

MORE—Held the audience to the last. Good production. Drew well.—S. M. Southworth, American theatre, Canton, N. Y.—Neighborhood and college patronage.

Sherlock Holmes, with John Barrymore.—Didn’t do very much with this one. Too many old reels off stage.—R. Marsden, Jr., Kohle theatre, Marshallfield, Ore.—Small town patronage.

When Romance Rides, with a special cast.—A good program picture, but no special. Picked 70 per cent of the patrons. Did a fair business, as many had read the book. Raised admission, but would not have raised the admission if I had seen the picture first.—H. E. Holben, Olympic theatre, Lenox, Iowa.—General patronage.

When Romance Rides, with a special cast.—Did a little extra business on this one. Has good drawing power, especially with the men. A good racing picture. Book it.—A. F. Affelt, Liberty theatre, St. Louis, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Golden Dreams, with a special cast.—A good picture, poor business.—Rae Peacock, Mystic theatre, Stafford, Kans.—Small town patronage.

Golden Dreams, with a special cast.—Good program picture. Not as convincing as most of the Zane Grey stories, but will pass most anywhere.—Adam Hornung, Opera House, Victor, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Night Rose, with Lon Chaney.—Good entertaining picture.—Adam Hornung, Opera House, Victor, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Man With the Two Mothers, with Colleen Moore.—Very good Irish picture. Plenty of comedy and a very pleasing cast.—Adam Hornung, Opera House, Victor, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

Always the Woman, with Betty Compson.—Many said they did not care for this picture; too foreign.—Adam Hornung, Opera House, Victor, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

Bunty Pulls the Strings, with a special cast.—Stay off this one. No good. Not worth the exchange charges.—O. W. McClellan, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Godless Men, with a special cast.—Good sea picture. Even women said it was good. Pretty rough in spots. Film in good condition.—O. Troyer, theatre, Rugby, N. D.—General patronage.

From the Ground Up, with Tom Mooney.—Wish they had more of the “Willie Gang” comedy and have not received so many favorable comments in a good while.—Adam Hornung, Opera House, Victor, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Poor Relation, with Will Rogers.—This was too sad to be enjoyed by many. Although the story was well produced and good photography, it was too near starvation to be amusing or entertaining.—Adam Hornung, Opera House, Victor, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

Be My Wife, with Max Linder.—I did not think this would be very good, but to my surprise many people told me it was the best comedy I had had for a year.—Rae Peacock, Mystic theatre, Stafford, Kans.—Small town patronage.

A Tale of Two Worlds, with a special cast.—A very good picture for a change. It’s something different. Gives the people a chance to see how business is conducted in China. Chinese acting is good.—Henry Saubers, Fad theatre, Fairfax, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Penalty, with a special cast.—Good picture, but not as strong. Audience atti- tude as to good or bad.—O. W. McClellan, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Highest Bidder, with Vivian Martin.—Sure was no box office attraction for me.—O. Troyer, Lyric theatre, Rugby, N. D.—General patronage.

The Man From Lost River, with a special cast.—This is another very good picture which pleased all. Print in very poor shape.—G. G. May, Isis theatre, Kanopolis, Kans.—Small town patronage.

The Man Who Had Everything, with Jack Pickford.—About as near nothing as a picture could get.—Pickford at about his worst.—Don’t know why it was a hit for her part.—O. Troyer, Lyric theatre, Rugby, N. D.—General patronage.

Dangerous Curve Ahead, with a special cast.—A disappointment to the best business I have had in eight months. Many comments and they were all good ones.—Rae Peacock, Mystic theatre, Stafford, Kans.—Small town patronage.

Hodkinson

Free Air, with a special cast.—A delightful story that has had real direction. Players not well known, but very capable. Like other Hodkinson’s it failed to connect for me at the box office. Two days to pass.—J. B. Stine, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.—General patronage.

Bull Dog Drummond, with a special cast.—Picture failed to draw the women. Business very poor indeed.—Thos. Burke, Liberty theatre, Cumber- land, Md.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Headline Horseman, with Will Rogers.—All right if you get the school with you. Too slow for ordinary audi- ence.—Harrington theatre, Imlay City, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Heart’s Haven, with a special cast.—Would greatly please the local Scandinavian audience, but I had to show it to a flock of coal miners. A very well produced story with but a limited appeal. Sure drew a blank for me. First day double the second.—J. B. Stine, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.—General patronage.

Morgan and Meyer Will Find a Way

To Mr. FRED S. MEYER, Palace theatre, Hamill, Mont.

Your contentsions are good. However, they bring out the very point that we wished to emphasize, that is to say, we have, from six to eighteen months ahead of us. We are in a small market, and must strictly up-to-date pictures. In fact, we do not even dare to show them, as it gives us the advantage to read what exhibitors like you are saying any article that is published in your and our particular case we would be benefited by knowing the number of reels and their size at the time you used them. If they were smaller when we used them then we would not brand you a liar—but would know that we had been "gyped" not out of a part of the picture.

As regards the number of reels in each picture, it is probably true that most distri- butors would be tempted, to make them a little longer, but very few take the pains to do so and the matter of placing the number of reels in our individual reports would eliminate the necessity of having to write about this information or to book short subjects without the knowledge of the length of the feature. We feel sure you will in the future reply to our suggestion. Any further comment will be gladly accepted.

PAUL C. MORGAN, Star theatre, Hay Springs, Neb.

HEARTS’ HAVEN, with a special cast.—A very beautiful picture and one that should be run with the churches or on Sunday afternoon. It will please any audience, but has such a good lesson that it makes good material for any church. We highly recommend.—Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.

The Man of the Forest, with a special cast.—Very good Western. All Zane Grey stories go good with my patrons.—J. W. Andresen, Rialto theatre, Cozad, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Cameron of the Royal Mounted, with a special cast.—A good picture. Will please any audience.—Harry Hobolt, Liberty theatre, Marlette, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Thorns and Orange Blossoms, with a special cast.—A picture worthy of any exhibitor’s notice. Not a really super- special, but far above the average program picture. Good enough to stand ad- vance in prices. Price right. Can’t go wrong.—M. Reit, Strand theatre, Lamont, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Rich Men’s Wives, with a special cast.—At the request of Zane Grey stories, but we have run a year. Satisfied 100 per cent. Every- body said it was great. Did a fine business three nights. A good motion picture.—A. J. Paul, Royal theatre, Galion, Ohio.—Small town patronage.
Metro

Love in the Dark, with Viola Dana.—Played this to a Sunday night audience and pleased all, besides making money. —Mrs., C. T. Turner, Miller theatre, Bonnerel, S. Dak.—General patronage.

Trifling Women, a Rex Ingram production.—As a production it is ace high, double A. At a small town box office magnitude. Of my first night it was 50 per cent less than normal, my second night was 50 per cent less than first night, my third night was a compre- hensive wallop on the jaw. Entire engagement didn't draw film expenses. Leave it alone if you are running a small town house. The title will kill it and Rex Ingram's name won't save it. Prediction: I will play The $5 Baby to more money than I did Trifling Women because of the title. It'll bet this cold storage plat on that proposition and it won't cost me a cent of money. If you buy Trifling Women, but it right or leave it alone, and this isn't saying anything against the picture either. It's a good one, but it won't draw in the small town.

J. C. Jenkins, Auditorium theatre, Ne- and, Nebraska.—General patronage.

June Madness, with Viola Dana.—One of the best this star has ever made. A good picture for any house if not bought too high. Personally, I bought the picture too high, but it will please all—T. W. Young, Jr., Frances theatre, Dyersburg, Tenn.—General patronage.

Turn to the Right, a Rex Ingram production.—Cannot add anything to the favorable comments that have gone before. The story may be a little far fetched and the humor akin to slapstick, yet it serves to entertain.—Chas. W. Lewis, I. O. O. F. (Grand and Gorge, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Turn to the Right, a Rex Ingram production.—Played this one to very poor business three days. Lost money. It was a good picture, but I didn't draw it. —Paul, Royal theatre, Galion, Ohio.—Small town patronage.

Peacock Alley and Fascination, with Ma Bessie Love and Alphonso.—Peacock Alley is in good shape, but fell down when I put it on. Fascination. A few enthusiastic ones differ, but a good picture in the way it is put on. —The box office story was that we can't put on this type of picture and make money. Mae Murray fine.—B. G. Sigsbee, Star theatre, Heppner, Ore.—Small town patronage.

Sherlock Brown, with Bert Lytell.—A clever little picture, but nobody came to see it. This is the last of the Metro—program stuff that was wished off on me when I got The Four Horsemen. If any month picture ever made me blush, this month will make me blush. I'll bet no one ever talk me into any more of such foolishness. I know that I am not hitting on all six. Dana, Lake and Lytell may knock 'em dead where they are known, but for me they were a total loss, with no insurance.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Forget Me Not, with Bessie Love and Gareth Hughes.—In a class by itself. A real story, fine direction, exception- al acting by Bessie Love and Gareth Hughes. —J. B. Laughlin, Bart's Mecca, Midland, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Enter the King, with Clara Kimball Young.—Much better than The Hands of Nara from very nature of the story, but not much of a bill for a town of 10,000 or under. Only for "select" audiences. —Sterling theatre, Greeley, Colo.—General patronage.

The Promise of Zenda, a Rex Ingram production.—Good picture of its kind, but will not get small town exhibitors any money.—Ora Musser, Gibson theatre, Batesville, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

There Are No Villains, with Viola Dana.—Pleased what few saw it—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Don't Write Letters, with Gareth Hughes.—Who in this world told Mr. Hughes that he was a movie star? The story in this picture is good if they had someone to play it. We've got cotton pickers in Georgia that can do better than Hughes, H. Simpson, Princess theatre, Milen, Ga.—General patronage.

The Four Horsemen, a Rex Ingram production.—The best picture of the season. Best mid week business.—E. S. Bowser, Strong theatre, Owosso, Mich.

Uncharted Seas, with Alice Lake.—Acting all right. Story illogical. Adver- tised Valentino and got out fair crowd, but many seemed disappointed.—B. G. Sigsbee, Star theatre, Heppner, Ore.—Small town patronage.

Broadway Rose, with Mae Murray.—Interesting picture and lavishly produced. Cannot account for the exceptionally poor business. —T. G. Thompson, Grand theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—General patronage.

The Face Between, with Bert Lytell.—A fair program picture which pleased the very few that saw it. They simply will not come to see this bird.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

They Like 'Em Rough, with Viola Dana.—They liked this very well.—H. L. Sellers, Strand theatre, Steelton, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Paramount

Kick In, with a special cast.—Good story, played very well. Played in newspaper and cleaned up with it.—R. Marsden, Noble theatre, Marshfield, Ore.—Small town patronage.

Kick In, with a special cast.—A good crock story. Admirably produced, with thrilling scenes intermingled with pathos. Our second night light, but picture pleased those who came. Ran Lupino Lane in The Pirate with it and charged forty and ten cents. Attendance below usual. Mark McDuffee, Gen. E. Morris, Regent theatre, Cleveland, Miss.—General patronage.

Kick In, with a special cast.—Go the limit on this one, but watch your price in rental. The best Paramount in the "X."—T. W. Young, Jr., Frances theatre, Dyersburg, Tenn.—General patronage.

Kick In, with a special cast.—Excellent picture. Business very fair for weather. —W. Wurtz, Colonial theatre, Hager- town, Md.—Neighborhood patronage.

Kick In, with a special cast.—A wonderful picture. Pleased 90 per cent of our patrons. Others want the high- brow society dramas.—Geo. W. Keys, Majestic theatre, Johnson City, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

When Knighthood Was in Flower, with Marion Davies. Remarkable picture in every way.—C. Oldham, Oldham's theatre, McMinnville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

When Knighthood Was in Flower, with Marion Davis.—Last picture of the season's very best bets. Played two days to crowded house. You can't go wrong on this one.—W. V. Wilson, Seco theatre, Rockville, Md.—Neighborhood patronage.

When Knighthood Was in Flower, with Marion Davies.—Played to splendid business with increased admission. Marion Davies' first real production. Should make money for all exhibitors.—Bruce Fowler, Indiana theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.—General patronage.

Thirty Days, with Wallace Reid.—Very good comedy material. Played after Reid's death and had biggest two nights in past couple of years except for holidays. By the way if you showed Forever at advanced prices, bring it back next week. One of the biggest Sterling theatre, Greeley, Colo.—General patronage.

Thirty Days, with Wallace Reid.—Poor picture but business good. Probably attracted by recent publicity given this star.—W. Wartz, Colonial theatre, Hagerstown, Md.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Outcast, with Ellie Ferguson.—One of her best and gave good satisfaction.—L. Jones, Star theatre, Malad City, Idaho.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Outcast, with Ellie Ferguson.—If you are having no agitation for local censorship, play this for it is truly as good, if not better than Foottight. Even that which a censor might object to is nicely handled.—Sterling theatre, Greeley, Colo.—General patronage.

The Outcast, with Ellie Ferguson.—One of Miss Ferguson's best. They liked it and told us so.—Geo. W. Keys, Majestic theatre, Johnson City, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Making a Man, with Jack Holt.—A better than ordinary picture, but not a special feature. Jack Holt has never been a drawing power for this city. The pulling power of this picture was a big disappointment and brought a decided loss.—Rosenheim, Hopp & Co., Fort Armstrong theatre, Rock Island, Ill.—General patronage.

The World's Applause, with Bebe Daniels.—Not up to the standard of the other Wm. De Mille pictures, but re-cardless of this it was a worthy picture.—U. K. Rice, Auditorium theatre, Winston-Salem, N. C.—Transient patronage.

The World's Applause, with Bebe Daniels.—Good show to a satisfactory business.—R. Marsden, Jr., Noble Theatre, Marshallfield, Ore.—Small town patronage.

Clarence, with Wallace Reid.—Very clever comedy which should please.—C. Oldham, Oldham's theatre, McMinnville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Clarence, with Wallace Reid.—Showed this following Sunday after the star died and came close to the attendance record. That shows, I think, how popular this screen actor was. The picture is very good and will not disappoint.—Wm. H. Creal, Suburban theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

IS MATRIMONY A FAILURE? with a special cast.—Brought the house down. The way they laughed made my piano player mad, as he could not be heard. Much better than "Three Live Ghosts."—W. Cruickshank, Classic theatre, Mitchell, Ont., Canada.

To Have and to Hold, with a special cast.—Fine story, good acting, plenty of heart interest, and plenty of action. One of the best pictures I've ever run.—C. F. Kriegbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

To Have and to Hold, with a special cast.—Here is one of the finest costume pictures produced this season. It has a beautiful romance and plenty of action to satisfy all. Theodore Kosloff and Raymond Hatton are conspicuous in the cast and do exceptional work. Business was satisfactory.—Wm. H. Creal, Suburban theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Pride of Palomar, a Cosmopolitan production.—Very good. It's a picture that leaves a mark. You think of it long after you see it.—Anton Gilles, Gilles theatre, Wahpeton, N. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Pride of Palomar, a Cosmopolitan production.—You gave it a good showing this week and we very strongly and we appreciate that's a mighty broad statement. We advised "Bust motion picture of its type ever made or seen none," and audience agreed with us. Such a statement is rare with us.—Sterling theatre, Greeley, Colo.—General patronage.

The Ghost Breaker, with Wallace Reid.—Cannot say much of the picture, but it drew large crowds. Second run in this city.—G. Thompson, Grand theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—General patronage.

The Ghost Breaker, with Wallace Reid.—Played this one to fair business. A good average program picture.—A. J. Paul, Royal theatre, Galion, Ohio.—Small town patronage.

Back Home and Broke, with Thomas Meighan.—Did a very, very fine business for four days which is an extra long run, by a day, for business good. Probably will make big business next week with merchants suggesting ways to help those "back home and broke."—Sterling theatre, Greeley, Colo.—General patronage.

Back Home and Broke, with Thomas Meighan.—Best picture Meighan has made.—C. Oldham, Oldham's theatre, McMinnville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Back Home and Broke, with Thomas Meighan.—This is positively a knockout and will make big business for days to come. It is the biggest thing as far as a starring vehicle that Meighan has ever had.—Don't pass this one by if you have the chance.—Soak your watch.—U. K. Rice, Auditorium theatre, Winston-Salem, N. C.—Transient patronage.

Back Home and Broke, with Thomas Meighan.—Please 100 per cent.—Anton Gilles, Gilles theatre, Wahpeton, N. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Back Home and Broke, with Thomas Meighan.—Fine comedy, please 100 per cent. Poor business on account of extremely cold weather. Meighan is coming again.—Geo. W. Keys, Majestic theatre, Johnson City, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Old Homestead, with Theodore Roberts.—Good picture; good acting. A picture that should appeal to an honest-to-goodness human being.—C. Oldham, Oldham's theatre, McMinnville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Old Homestead, with Theodore Roberts.—Here's an honest-to-goodness photoplay treat. If they don't like this one, tell them to stay away from pictures this future. Frankly, I put it on three, but still showed to very satisfactory business. May require some boosting, but is more than worth the extra effort.—J. B. Stine, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.—General patronage.

Anna Ascends, with Alice Brady.—Nice picture but absolutely no draft. Business very bad.—W. Wartz, Colonial theatre, Hagerstown, Md.—Neighborhood patronage.

Anna Ascends, with Alice Brady.—Played this one two days. A good program picture. Will satisfy the average.—A. J. Paul, Royal theatre, Galion, Ohio.—Small town patronage.

On the High Seas, with Dorothy Dal-
A thrilling scene in Tom Mix's new Fox production, "3 Jumps Ahead." This is a Western story directed by Jack Ford.

---

All patrons enjoyed this one and many stopped to tell us about it—T. G. Thompson, Classic theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—General patronage.

On the High Seas, with Dorothy Dalton—Played this one to good business. Although it was such a poor production, it raked in a few dollars. A. J. Paul, Royal theatre, Galion, Ohio.—Small town patronage.

Singed Wings, with Bebe Daniels—Good picture, but could have been cut down about a reel, I think.—C. F. Kriegbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

The Man Who Saw Tomorrow, with Thomas Meighan—Played this one day to average business. Just an ordinary program picture.—A. J. Paul, Royal theatre, Galion, Ohio.—Small town patronage.

Pink Gods, with Bebe Daniels—Fine picture, but could have been cut down about a reel, I think.—C. F. Kriegbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

Burning Sands, with Milton Stills—Good picture, but does not compare with The Sheik.—L. Jones, Star theatre, Malad City, Idaho.—Neighborhood patronage.

For the Defense, with Ethel Clayton—You can bank on Ethel Clayton for a good program picture. Better than the average. She is always the same and we are very sated that she will not be with Paramount any more.—Horn and Morgan, Star theatre, Hay Springs, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Is Matrimony a Failure? with a special cast—Rated by my cash customers as one of the best comedies in many moons. And it drew next to the poorest day business in the past month. The answer? I'll give it up; I don't know.—J. B. Stine, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.—General patronage.

Ebb Tide, with a special cast.—Just a good picture, but not a special.—L. Jones, Star theatre, Malad City, Idaho.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Impossible Mrs. Bellevue, with Gloria Swanson.—Very good.—Anton Gilles, Gilles theatre, Wheelton, N. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Manslaughter, a Cecil B. DeMille production.—Good. Best Meighan I have run. Story holds out fine. Settings beautiful. It is a rage Paramount picture.—Ora Musser, Gibson theatre, Batesville, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Manslaughter, a Cecil B. DeMille production.—9,061 feet of a good interesting story. It is so good that the time of unreeling goes by as fast in your mind as an ordinary five reel picture would consume. Recommend it to your patrons as class A entertainment. —Chas. R. Ryan, Garfield theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Woman Who Walked Alone, with Dorothy Dalton.—Very fine picture. Poor drawing title. Did small business for me, but picture pleased all who saw it.—V. C. Cruickshank, Classic theatre, Mitchell, Ont.—Canada.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Crimson Challenge, with Dorothy Dalton.—A fair Western.—C. F. Kriegbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

The Crimson Challenge, with Dorothy Dalton.—Wow! Talk about your "Shoot 'Em Up" Western, here's one. If your patrons like Westerns, give 'em this. It will satisfy them. Mine were.—C. S. Ford, Princess theatre, Reinbeck, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

The Man Unconquered, with Jack Holt.—Good. Everyone went away pleased, and good at the box office.—G. S. Brinley, Zionsville theatre, Zionsville, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The Siren Call, with Dorothy Dalton.—Not much of a drawing card and not very pleasing.—S. M. Southworth, American theatre, Canton, N. Y.—Neighborhood and college patronage.

The Valley of Silent Men, a Cosmopolita production.—Good for scenery, but this type of picture fails to satisfy in this territory.—L. Jones, Star theatre, Malad City, Idaho.—Neighborhood patronage.

Beyond, with Ethel Clayton.—Nothing extra. Theme from a spiritualistic standpoint. Pleased possibly 25c.—W. A. Peterson, Scenic theatre, Mt. Vernon, S. D.—Rural patronage.

Beyond, with Ethel Clayton.—If your patrons enjoy going to a funeral they will enjoy this picture immensely.—P. R. Matson, Crystal theatre, Flandreau, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Daughter of Luxury, with Agnes Ayres.—Not the type of picture they like in my town. No action, poor story, and poor direction.—Blood and Salt—J. Noble theatre, Marshall, Ore.—Small town patronage.

The Lost Romance, with a special cast.—Didn't draw anyone in for me to speak with and of some of them walked out.—O. Troyer, Lyric theatre, Rugby, N. D.—General patronage.

The Young Rajah, with Rodolph Valentino.—It will get you the money, but be careful, don't offer too much. The scenario is not of the good ones and you must not disappoint your patrons.—J. E. Carbonell, Monroe theatre, Key West, Fla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Young Rajah, with Rodolph Valentino.—Not as good.—L. Jones, Star theatre, Malad City, Idaho.—Neighborhood patronage.

The World's Champion, with Wallace Reid.—Played this to good business and a satisfied crowd. This picture is better than Rent Free.—C. S. Ford, Princess theatre, Reinbeck, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

The World's Champion, with Wallace Reid.—Went over great. Seems as though more people want to see him now than before his death. Always was a good bet here.—R. L. Behler, Royal theatre, Garrett, Ind.—General patronage.

The Face in the Fog, with Lionel Barrymore.—Have heard a thing or two about the world against the Barrymores—but, my Gawd, why don't they leave them on the stage where they belong? This subject got me as much as any other Barrymore play would, which was about one-half my normal business.—J. B. Stine, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.—General patronage.

North of the Rio Grande, with Jack Holt.—Did remarkable business against stiff opposition. No much here, it's a real Western where a .45 decides all arguments and Holt is at his best.—V. C. Cruickshank, Classic theatre, Mitchell, Ont.—Canada.—Neighborhood patronage.

Across the Continent, with Wallace Reid.—Was late in playing this one. A Splendid light entertainment that greatly pleased the Reid and Roberts fans. Fair business.—J. B. Stine, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.—General patronage.

Enchantment, with Marion Davies.—Played this Christmas week and it drew strong business in spite of my competition and much opposition. Personally I thought the picture deserved it. Seven reels.—V. C. Cruickshank, Classic theatre, Mitchell, Ont.—Canada.—Neighborhood patronage.

Wealth, with Ethel Clayton.—A good program picture that will please. A very good cast.—H. J. Trainer, Pastime theatre, Mound, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Lane that Had No Turning, with

At the End of the World, with Betty Compson.—A fine picture. A real plot that held interest throughout. Hartford, Oldham's theatre, McMinnville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

At the End of the World, with Betty Compson.—Everybody liked this. E. L. Graef, Opera House, Fort Wayne, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Rent Free, with Wallace Reid.—Fair picture that packed the house because of the sudden desire of a very capable, clean cut and talented actor who leaves a host of admiring friends. Crosby Bros., Lily theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Prince There Was, with Thomas Meighan.—Just a fair program picture. Not as good as some of his other pictures. C. S. Ford, Princess theatre, Reinbeck, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

A Prince There Was, with Thomas Meighan.—A very good picture and very well acted. Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—Small town patronage.

A Prince There Was, with Thomas Meighan.—Fair picture to poor business. Bad weather. E. E. Gailly, Crystal theatre, Wayne, Neb.—General patronage.

The Sheik, with Rudolph Valentino.—All reports on this are O. K'd by me. I got a bad print, which is unusual for Paramount. I think the shell shocked me. W. C. Cruckshank, Classic theatre, Mitchell, Ont. Can.—Neighborhood patronage.

Get-Rich-Quick-Wallingford, a Cosmopolitan production.—Nothing special about it. Just an ordinary five reel stretched to eight. Cast unknown, which provided a drawback at box office for me. W. C. Cruckshank, Classic theatre, Mitchell, Ont. Can.—Neighborhood patronage.

Passing Through, with Douglas MacLean.—Just a fair picture. Will please the kids. Not up to the MacLean standard. H. J. Trainer, Pastime theatre, Blue Mound, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Back Pay, with Seena Owen.—Almost as happy as a Chinese funeral. Story badly overdrawn, and poor Seena has to shed tears as big as gum-drops. An entertainment it just isn't. Lost money on two day showing. J. B. Stine, Wonder-land theatre, Clinton, Ind.—General patronage.

Saturday Night, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—I played this one week later, after playing Fool's Paradise. It's great. Brother Exhibitors. If you haven't played these two pictures, buy them, boost them, and cash in.—C. S. Ford, Princess theatre, Reinbeck, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

Saturday Night, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—A big picture, but not a good one for advanced admission. It doesn't satisfy the crowd nor draw the second night like many cheaper less pretentious pictures do.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—Small town patronage.

Just Around the Corner, a Cosmopolitan production.—A good picture with a good story. Advertising paper on if poor. A sob 1-sheet never attracts any body.—M. W. Mattechek, Liberty theatre, Kennewick, Wash.—Neighborhood patronage.

Saturday Night, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—Very good picture. Book it and boost it, as it is sure to satisfy.—E. L. Graef, Opera House, Hortonville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

The Young Diana, with Marion Davies.—Wonderful picture, but did not draw. Lots of good work. E. L. Behler, Royal theatre, Garrett, Ind.—General patronage.

Footlights, with Elsie Ferguson.—Good entertainment. E. L. Graef, Opera House, Hortonville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

White Oak, with William S. Hart.—Not up to Bill's standard. Drew good, but did not satisfy.—C. S. Ford, Princess theatre, Reinbeck, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

The Testing Block, with William S. Hart.—Not as good as Hart's former pictures and he doesn't draw as well as he did in the past.—H. J. Trainer, Pastime theatre, Blue Mound, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Over the Border, with Betty Compson.—Very pleasing and well liked Northern story, well produced and well acted. Tom Moore really the star, though Miss Compson does fine. Played to fair business two days.—J. B. Stine, Pastime theatre, Custer City, Okla.—Small town patronage.

The Woman God Changed, a Cosmopolitan production.—A fair picture to poor business. Rental too high for a small town.—H. J. Trainer, Pastime theatre, Blue Mound, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The woman God Changed, a Cosmopolitan production.—A good play that should please.—C. S. Ford, Opera House, Custer City, Okla.—Small town patronage.

The Cradle of Courage, with William S. Hart.—Odd picture. I was pleased to please those who came out. You can't get them out, no matter what you put on. Still used to be a good bet here, but fell off something awful on this one. A. L. K., Gem theatre, Hankinson, N. D.—General patronage.

The Easy Road, with Thomas Meighan.—Good picture, poor business. Rae Peacock, Mystic theatre, Stafford, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Three Live Ghosts, a Cosmopolitan production.—Flopped on me. I played it a year and a half, and with my luck it was good it should have been much better. Was dark in places. It's all right if you buy right. E. L. Behler, Grand theatre, Mitchell, Ont., Canada.—Neighborhood patronage.

Three Live Ghosts, a Cosmopolitan production.—Lay off this one. Boys. Supposed to be a comedy but not even a smile in it.—D. F. Wolfe, Princess theatre, Lansing, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Cowboy and the Lady, with a special cast.—Program; business the same.—T. G. Thompson, Grand theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—General patronage.

The Cowboy and the Lady, with a special cast.—Played this one two days to average business. Just a program picture—nothing to rave about.—A. J. Paul, Royal theatre, Galion, Ohio.—Small town patronage.

The Cowboy and the Lady, with a special cast.—Was a very good one and that's all.—E. Jones, Star theatre, Malad City, Idaho.—Neighborhood patronage.

Beyond the Rocks, with Gloria Swanson.—We advertised the two stars. Swanson and Valentino— and made some money on this, but it is far from the special Paramount claims for it. However, most everybody was satisfied.—E. L. Graef, Opera House, Hortonville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Beyond the Rocks, with Gloria Swanson.—An average program picture sold as a special.—P. R. Matson, Crystal theatre, Flandreau, S. D.—General patronage.

Beyond the Rocks, with Gloria Swan-

S

New Ones I Have Seen

TILL WE MEET AGAIN (Associated Exhibitors), with Mae Marsh.—Did not play this, but saw it, and aside from the ending, which was very sudden, was a very fine entertainment. It drew good business.—W. C. Cruckshank, Classic theatre, Mitchell, Ont., Canada.
son—I cannot understand why this picture received the "razz" as much as it did, as Beyond the Rocks went over fine here according to comments.—C. W. Longacher, New Glarus theatre, New Glarus, Wis.—General patronage.

Fool's Paradise, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—A wonderful picture. Capacity business and a well pleased audience. More what could you desire? I used the alligator stunt advertising and, oh, truly, sure worth a picture that no one should pass up. Book it your next chance.—C. W. Longacher, New Glarus, Wis.—General patronage.

Fool's Paradise, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—This is a real picture. Dorothy Dalton in the best role we have ever seen her. Many said this was one of the best pictures we ever had in our house. We did not boost admission prices but could have done so and our patrons would have been thoroughly satisfied.—Horn and Morgan, Star theatre, Hay Springs, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Experience, with Richard Barthelmess.—This is a good play. Many of our people are still talking about this play. Very good moral.—E. L. Graef, Opera House, Hortonville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Experience, with Richard Barthelmess.—An allegorical masterpiece, exceptionally well played and having an excellent moral. Photography and art titles excellent.—Horn and Morgan, Star theatre, Hay Springs, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Civilian Clothes, with Thomas Meighan.—This picture went better for us. A fine picture for any theatre to show.—O. Troyer, Lyric theatre, Rugby, N. D.—General patronage.

The Green Temptation, with Betty Compson.—A good picture, but did not do as well as we had hoped.—C. W. Longacher, New Glarus theatre, New Glarus, Wis.—General patronage.

The Green Temptation, with Betty Compson.—Very good program picture with enough material in it to please all kinds of patrons.—Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—General patronage.

Appearances, with a special cast.—Drew no crowd at all for me. Lost money on it, but, too bad.—O. Troyer, Lyric theatre, Rugby, N. D.—General patronage.

One Glorious Day, with Will Rogers.—Did not like it, more didn't.—G. S. Brinley, Zionsville theatre, Zionsville, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Cappy Ricks, with Thomas Meighan.—Good show. Everybody liked it.—E. L. Graef, Opera House, Hortonville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Cappy Ricks, with Thomas Meighan.—Like all Meighan pictures, this one was received with much enthusiasm. Very good story and excellent supporting cast.—Horn and Morgan, Star theatre, Hay Springs, Neb.—Small town patronage.

A Bachelor Daddy, with Thomas Meighan.—Fine entertainment for the whole family. Made more like.—Ora Mussner, Gibson theatre, Batesville, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Burglar Proof, with Bryants Washburn.—Not much to it. Poor box office attraction.—O. Troyer, Lyric theatre, Rugby, N. D.—General patronage.

The Conquest of Canaan, with Thomas Meighan.—Not up to the Meighan standard. The story is poor. The supporting cast is good.—H. J. Trimmer, Pastime theatre, Blue Mound, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Golem, with a special cast.—Worst we have ever seen anywhere at any time and we have run some that one could smell!—C. Oldham, Oldham's theatre, McMinnville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Wise Fool, with James Kirkwood.—I thought by reading the reports on this one that I had a real one, but instead I found another long draggy play which makes you glad when they are over, and the people you told what a knockout you had forget.—C. A. Kelley, Rex theatre, Buster City, Okla.—Small town patronage.

Three Word Brand, with William S. Hart.—Just a fair Hart picture.—E. L. Graef, Opera House, Hortonville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

The Great Moment, with Gloria Swanson.—Not so good as a drawing card, but a pleasing picture. More action than usual at this star's productions. I believe Elinor Glyn's name hurt more than helped.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—Small town patronage.

Her Own Money, with Ethel Clayton.—Good clean picture and well liked. Good business.—C. S. Ford, Princess theatre, Reinbeck, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

Rebecca of the Sunny Brook Farm, with Mary Pickford.—I went back and dug this one up and it pleased as well as it did the first time. People liked it and nothing about it to condemn it on its age.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—Small town patronage.

The Mystery Road, with David Powell.—Foreign stuff and it's no good.—H. J. Trimmer, Pastime theatre, Blue Mound, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Travelin' On, with William S. Hart.—Not a real good Hart picture, still it is better than White Oak. Bill is getting old and sure is awful slow on the draw. The only thing that saved Bill from getting killed in this picture was that he wrote the story.—C. S. Ford, Princess theatre, Reinbeck, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

Too Much Speed, with Wallace Reid.—Very good. Not a dull moment in it. Book it and boost it. It's "the bee's knees." Too bad Wally had to do the role! R. K. Lang, Lyric theatre, Cobb, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Too Much Speed, with Wallace Reid.—A good speed picture. Theodore Rob- erson makes plenty of fun. Drew very well on account of Reid's death.—C. A. Kelley, Rex theatre, Custer City, Okla.—Small town patronage.

Humoresque, with a special cast.—Book it, boost it, talk like you never talked before and have the S. O. sign handy. Nothing but compliments. A pleasure to show this sort of a picture. Full house on a bad night.—R. K. Lang, Lyric theatre, Cobb, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Whistle, with William S. Hart.—A good picture, but why do they put a Western man in a sad play when everyone expects to see Hart with a gun and a big hat. Don't let them make you think this is all action.—C. A. Kelley, Rex theatre, Custer City, Okla.—Small town patronage.

The Call of the North, with Jack Holt.—Good picture. Well liked. Good business.—C. S. Ford, Princess theatre, Reinbeck, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

The Call of the North, with Jack Holt.—A good program offering. — C. W. Longacre, Theatres, New Orleans, Wis.—General patronage.

The Gilded Lily, with Mac Murray.—If Mac Murray makes many more like this picture we can watch for his future life.—O. Troyer, Lyric theatre, Rugby, N. D.—General patronage.

The City of Silent Men, with Thomas Meighan.—A New God Sunday program for请了. Pleased all, and you can buy it right.—Mrs. D. C. Turney, Miller theatre, Honested, S. Dak.—General patronage.

Gilda, with Gloria Swanson.—Very good picture, but wouldn’t consider it a special. Rental too high. Lost money.—D. F. Wolfe, Princess theatre, Lansing, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Sheik, with Rodolph Valentino.—Probably is a pretty good picture when it is all through, but clipped it to me on eight spoors when five would hold all the film nicely. Just enough film on two spoors to ask the “bub” enough film to give the operator time to “load” the other machine. Film old and patched with several hundred. Vet didn’t hand out to the exhibitors. Didn’t draw any extra business. Lost money, although it was bought at a fair price. —D. J. Redige, S. P. theater, Rye, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Pathé

Dr. Jack, with Harold Lloyd.—One of Lloyd’s best feature comedies to date. My audiences screamed at this one from start to end. Played it seven days to fine business, which is more than I can do.—Many comments on this one.—A. J. Paul, Royal Theatre, Galion, Ohio.—Small town patronage.

Dr. Jack, with Harold Lloyd.—Good. Nice business, but didn’t make much on account of high rental and poor weather.—E. E. Gailey, Crystal Theatre, Wayne, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Nanook of the North, with a special cast.—This is a picture that every theatre, large or small, should run. It is much more than many new dramas and an educational that all enjoy seeing.—Adam Hornung, Opera House, Victoria, B. C.—Neighborhood patronage.

Nanook of the North, with a special cast.—Extra good educational picture that holds the interest. Ran a special matinee to school children, at five cents on this occasion.—S. D. Volger, American Theatre, Kimball, Neb.—Small town patronage.

The Killer, with a special cast.—A poor title, but a real feature. Don’t be afraid of it. It’s good.—R. K. Lang, Lyric Theatre, Cobb, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Other Men’s Shoes, an Edgar Lewis production.—An old one, but one that has a good story and is well produced so worth the price to a fan; if you haven’t used it.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. Dak.—Small town patronage.

Realart

Dawn of the East, with Alice Brady.—Very nice—picture. Alice Brady is getting better in this town.—C. H. Simpson, Princess theatre, Millen, Ga.—General patronage.

Dawn of the East, with Alice Brady.—An excellent picture that paid well.—G. S. Brinley, Zionsville theatre, Zionsville, Ind. Small town patronage.

The Speed Girl, with Bebe Daniels.—One of Bebe’s best. Did good business.—G. S. Brinley, Zionsville theatre, Zionville, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The Love Charm, with Wanda Hawley.—Here’s a real solid picture. It pleased better here than lots of big specials. Doesn’t drag for a moment. It’s a gun running tale.—W. Cruickshank, Classic theatre, Mitchell, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Everything for Sale, with May McAvoy.—Just fair. Will go over good with good comedy. Don’t promise anything big and everyone will be pleased.—W. Cruickshank, Classic theatre, Mitchell, Ont.—Neighborhood patronage.

The March Hare, with Bebe Daniels.—Fair. Nothing big, but will please majority.—C. A. Kelley, Rex theatre, Cusier City, Ohio.—Small town patronage.

Selznick

One Week of Love, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Excellent picture, but disappointing at the box office. Weather also helped.—Dr. William Merrick, Paramont theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

One Week of Love, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Very nice picture with everything to make it entertaining. Elaine is very good as her usual.—G. C. Brush, Musser, Gibson theatre, Batesville, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

One Week of Love, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Very good, but a bit draggy.—J. C. Winters, Oldham’s theatre, Batesville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

One Week of Love, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Played this one to fine business.—J. C. Winters, Oldham’s theatre, Batesville, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Love is an Awful Thing, with Owen Moore.—Good comedy. Not pronounced, but a good picture.—Ora Musser, Gibson theatre, Batesville, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Man of Stone, with Conway Tearle. Very poor here.—C. Oldham, Oldham’s theatre, Mcleansville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Man of Stone, with Conway Tearle.—Very good realistic picture. It pleased large business on one of the coldest nights of the winter.—Crosby Bros., Lily theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Woman of No Importance, with special features. It is a good picture that pleased the older patrons, but did not please the young people, especially a certain few. Not enough insistence in its appeal to please them, but if they will consider the lesson this feature taught they will profit by it as it is true to life.—H. E. Holben, Olympic theatre, Lenox, Iowa.—General patronage.

The Referee, with Conway Tearle. Where do they get this wonderful stuff?—Poor showings run on.—Behind-the-scenes no punch. Lay off this one.—C. C. Criminal, Amusu theatre, Marlinton, W. Va.—Small town patronage.

John Smith, with Eugene O’Brien.—Good comedy drama and pleased.—Crosby Bros., Lily theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Reckless Youth, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Real good program picture. Elaine is getting better and this picture in every way.—Crosby Bros., Lily theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Man’s Home, with a special cast.—Harry Morey’s best effort, and it pleased a large audience.—Crosby Bros., Lily theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Evidence, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Not Elaine’s best, but will please. Picture a bit too educational.—Paul O’Conner, Olympic theatre, Lenox, Iowa.—General patronage.

The Daughter Pays, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Not as good as her other pictures, but not many complaints—two or three only.—Henry Hobolt, Maxine theatre, Inlay City, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Bucking the Tiger, with Conway Tearle.—Pleased most of audience. Film in bad shape.—W. T. Lyford, Gem theatre, West Hill, Ark.—General patronage.

Romance and Arabia, with Constance Talma.—No pulling power, but a good picture.—Harry Hobolt, Maxine theatre, Inlay City, Mich.—Small town patronage.

United Artists

A Tailor Made Man, with Charles Ray.—Very pleasing.—It has very good story, cast and good action and good drawing power. Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—Small town patronage.

The Man Who Played God, with George Arliss.—Great.—The Ring of Passion are certainly great shows and you can go the limit on them in your recommendations. Will make good money, but are a credit to your theatre.—Dwight B. Baker, Circle theatre, Otumwa, Iowa.—General patronage.

The Man Who Played God, with George Arliss.—Not a great box office picture but pronounced by our patrons as great entertainment. Will make good friends for any theatre.—Bruce Fowen, Indiana theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.—General patronage.

The Three Must-Get-Theres, with Max Linder.—Nothing much to it. My patrons are not pulling the ticket; they did not think I would have such a farce run. Showed it at advance prices on account of having to pay such a big price for it, which made lot of my patrons sore.—A. F. Kehr, Princess theatre, Ogallala, Neb.—Small town patronage.

A Doll’s House, with Nazimova.—Picture very good.—Not a box office theatre, Webster, S. D.—General patronage.

The Ruling Passion, with George Arliss.—Good picture to fair business. Not a knock-out, but a good picture.—Crystal theatre, Wayne, Neb.—General patronage.

The Three Musiceteers, with Douglas Fairbanks. Brought this back for a second run and it drew well and is certainly one of the most pleasing entertaining pictures I have ever seen.—Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—Small town patronage.

Through the Back Door, with Mary Pickford.—One of her best. Made good money on this one.—C. E. Bailey, Lyric theatre, Webster, S. D.—General patronage.

The Love Flower, a D. W. Griffith production.—A very fine picture. Scene... and photography beautiful. The cast is very good—H. J. Trainer, Pastime theatra, Blue Mound, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Love Light, with Mary Pickford. —Very fine picture. —Col. W. F. Dungan, Col. W. F. Dungan theatre, Waterville, Minn.—General patronage.

The Iron Trail, with a special cast.—A very good patronage. —Phil. Matheney, Paramount theatre, Rex Beach.—Adam Hornung, Opera House, Victor, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Mollycoddle, with Douglas Fairbanks.—This is old, but good. They want too much jack for their stuff. All you ever can get on United Artists. —E. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Universal

The Flirt, with a special cast.—A splendid picture. Business very good and everybody satisfied.—R. Marsden, Jr., Noble theatre, Marshall, Ore.—Small town patronage.

The Flirt, with a special cast.—All that trade papers are claiming for it. George Nichols as "father" really gets away with the "maiden." It should be booked up more in the publicity.—Sterling theatre, Greeley, Colo.—General patronage.

The Lavender Bath Lady, with Gladys Walton. —Not up to Walton's standard. Did not please at all.—E. J. Laqua, Gem theatre, Hancock, N. D.—General patronage.

Top Man Monday, with Gladys Walton.—A fine program picture. Pleased 100 per cent. Walton very popular here. Many coming as there are a lot of friends and family here, it is booked intern your Irish patrons.—H. E. Holben, Olympic theatre, Lenox, Iowa.—General patronage.

Ridin' Wild, with Hoot Gibson.—A good picture. Not like most of the Gibson pictures, but nevertheless a good one.—R. B. Corwin, Rialto theatre, Dundee, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Forsaking All Others, with a special cast.—The cast very good in this, but nothing to the picture. Poor entertainment.—J. W. Andresen, Rialto theatre, Cozad, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Paid Back, with Gladys Brockwell. —Just a picture and that's all.—C. A. Kelley, Rex theatre, Custer City, Okla.—Small town patronage.

The Ghost Patrol, with a special cast.—A good program picture, but nothing entailing same to be touted as a special. People didn't like it and business on same poor.—Rosen Inter, Hop & Co. Spencer Square theatre, Rock Island, Ill.—General patronage.

The Power of a Lie, with a special cast. —A good program picture for anybody over 14 years of age. —Universal picture. People walked out on this one. Something unusual in this town.—R. Marsden, Jr., Noble theatre, Marshall, Ore.—General patronage.

The Scarlet Car, with Herbert Rawlinson.—Good program picture. It is an election picture.—A. W. Sage, Masonic theatre, What Cheer, lowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Under Two Flags, with Priscilla Dean.—A great picture in which the star does some meritorious work, but she always does. The picture is a box office attraction.—J. Carbonell, Monroe theatre, Key West, Fla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Under Two Flags, with Priscilla Dean.—Interesting story, star well liked. Thor- ough advertising, shown two days. Several favorable comments. Put on at regular prices. Paid too much for it.—B. G. Sighe, Star theatre, Heppner, Ore.—Small town patronage.

Under Two Flags, with Priscilla Dean. —This is a wonderful picture. Every bit as good as its aunts. —George Vaughan, Grand theatre, Dunville, Ont., Can.—General patronage.

Wild Honey, with Priscilla Dean.—Very good picture and drew better than ordinary business. Snowstorm during showing so could not really tell its drawing power.—George Vaughan, Grand theatre, Dunville, Ont., Can.—General patronage.

Wild Honey, with Priscilla Dean.—Not as good as "Conflict," but the one thrill worth admittance.—W. L. Buck, Gem theatre, Waterville, Minn.—Small town patronage.

Wild Honey, with Priscilla Dean. —First five reels bunk. Other two very good. Pleased about 40 per cent.—E. W. Harrell, Royal theatre, Rison, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Human Hearts, with House Peters.—Lost money, but not fault of picture, which pleased practically every patron who saw it.—Personal high rental coupled with "20 below" weather one night of showing.—P. G. Estes, Fad theatre, Brookings, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Human Hearts, with House Peters.—Excellent picture that pleased, but failed to draw as well as it should in good weather.—Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—General patronage.

Human Hearts, with House Peters.—Very good picture. Played two nights and pleased about 90 per cent. A good picture for a small town.—F. Affelt, Liberty theatre, St. Louis, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—Can't see where they could make much money on this to make the rental as high as they are asking. Had a snowstorm here so did not get them out.—E. J. Laqua, Gem theatre, Hinkson, N. D.—General patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—Mighty fine picture, but failed to draw a record house. Just average business. Just broke even. Does not pay too much for it and you will come out all right.—G. F. Rediske, Star theatre, Ryege, Mont.—Small town patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—Did as much business as we did on The Sheik. Patrons as well as myself thought it a greater picture than The Sheik. Universal was booked in some boxes by M. J. Babin, Fairyland theatre, White Castle, La.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—One of the best. Many held again. Raved don well with all Jewel Universal.—W. T. Lyford, Gem theatre, West Helena, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—You can't go wrong on this picture if you advertise it well. Played two days and had many compliments and pleased patrons.—A. F. Affelt, Liberty theatre, St. Louis, Minn.—Small town patronage.

Wolf Law, with Frank Mayo.—Fair picture. Mayo does good work for the light story he had to work with. Fair crook. Too much local stuff here.—E. J. Laqua, Gem theatre, Hinkson, N. D.—General patronage.

Wolf Law, with Frank Mayo.—A good Saturday feature with action and good outdoors scenes.—W. L. Buck, Gem theatre, Waterville, Minn.—Small town patronage.

The Galloping Kid, with Hoot Gibson. —Not as good as some. Didn't seem to end very right.—Hankinson, N. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Don't Shoot, with Herbert Rawlinson. —A good program picture. It is the right kind of story for this small town. Really a very, Pleasant Hour theatre, Verona, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Don't Shoot, with Herbert Rawlinson. —Good extra good. A crook story in six reels. Poor attendance on Saturday night. Cold weather.—C. A. Kelley, Rex theatre, Custer City, Okla.—Small town patronage.

Caught Bluffing, with Frank Mayo.—Good program picture which drew me better than average business for Monday afternoon.—E. G. May, Liberty theatre, Kanopolis, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Caught Bluffing, with Frank Mayo.—A very good program picture.—Harry Howser, Liberty theatre, Marlette, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Kentucky Derby, with Reginald Denny.—Excellent picture. Business very satisfactory.—Last week's highest.—W. W. Wartz, Colonial theatre, Hagerstown, Md.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Married Flapper, with Marie Pre- tiss. —One of the funniest pictures. Too bad Universal has lost Marie.—Win. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

The Married Flapper, with Marie Pre- tiss. —One of the funniest pictures. Too bad Universal has lost Marie.—Win. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.
Vitagraph

The Ninety and Nine, with a special cast.—A very interesting picture of melo-drama. Returns to the table splendidly corrected and the kind of story that holds the audience. Those who see it first day will have a perfect idea of what Mrs. Vetlesen, Rosenthal, Hopp & Co., Fort Armstrong theatre, Rock Island, Ill.—General patronage.

My Wild Irish Rose, with a special cast.—All well pleased. Satisfactory attend-ance, though not large. Many fa-vorable comments.—B. G. Sigbee, Star theatre, Heppner, Ore.—Small town pat-onage.

My Wild Irish Rose, with a special cast.—Played this during the holidays to fine business two days and it seemed to please them all. Would class it among the best of the season's product as an audience picture.—J. B. Stine, Wonder-land theatre, Clinton, Ind.—General patronage.

It Can Be Done, with Earl Williams.—Very poor. Did not take film rental in two days.—George Vaughan, Grand theatre, Dunnville, Ont., Can.—General patronage.

The Ladder Jinx, with Edward Hor-ton.—Had a very good house about this one, as I had read some hooks, but it is not a good comedy. A little too long drawn out, perhaps, but I wish others had no worse faults. Poor business two days.—J. B. Stine, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.—General patronage.

A Woman's Sacrifice, with Corinne Griffith.—Very fine program picture. Has some fine snow scenes. Why is it that Vitagraph can sell us pictures like this for half of what other firms are offering?—Andreasen, Rialto theatre, Cozad, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Prodigal Judge, with Jean Paige.—Fairly good entertainment.—S. D. Vogler, Kimball, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Too Much Business, with Tully Marshall.—A very good comedy subject that seemed to please. Good cast, and action laughable throughout. It failed to live up to the title in the very business two days.—J. B. Stine, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.—General patronage.

Too Much Business, with a special cast.—Very good high class comedy. Patrons pleased.—S. D. Vogler, American theatre, Kimball, Neb.—Small town patronage.

The Silver Car, with Earl Williams.—A fair program picture that you can get by with—H. G. Stettmull, A. W. Sage, Masonic theatre, What Cheer, Iowa.—Neigh-borhood patronage.

Flower of the North, with a special cast.—Same cast as Talk of the Title. Fine fair crowd. Only remarks indicate that a good looking star would improve pic-ture considerably.—B. G. Sigbee, Star theatre, Heppner, Ore.—Small town patronage.

Peggy Puts It Over, with Alice Cal-houn.—A bright snappy comedy drama of the clean type. Star was very good, and story was funny. Much of the story made more for laughs than thrills. Rural comedy is always good.—R. Ross Riley, Pigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kan.—General patronage.

Black Beauty, with Jean Paige.—Tied this up with one of the churches, and several of the church people told me they were very pleased with it. Although a good picture and good for a church tie-up, it is a little slow for the regulars.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

The Heart of Maryland, with Catherine Calvert.—The first Vitagraph program to play this house in five years and in spite of the huge downtown it broke even. This is not a war picture, but a fine love story, and the star is very good. Price is right. Print good.—Miller & Carroll, Gayety theatre, Amory, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Steel Heart, with William Duncan.—A good semi-Western play. Has lots of thrills. H. G. Stettmull, Masonic theatre, What Cheer, Iowa.—General patronage.

Closed Doors, with Alice Calhoun.—Just a picture, that's all. Did not draw.—George Vaughan, Grand theatre, Dunnville, Ont.—General patronage.

The Girl in His Room, with Alice Cal-houn.—A nice little feature.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neills-ville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

State Rights

What's Wrong With The Women? (Equity), with a special cast.—Business barely fair. Title was no asset to me as in days gone past.—Dwight B. Baker, Circle theatre, Ottumwa, Iowa.—General patronage.

SURE FIRE FLINT (Mastodon) with Johnny Hines.—This picture is in great demand at the present time. Patrons hadn't enjoyed it I would just as leave they wouldn't bother asking me to get anything. When people don't laugh when they see this they must be unmammified or ossified.

You will not need a comedy with it as the feature comedy is enough for anybody at one sitting.—Wm. H. Creal, Suburban theatre, Omaha, Neb.

Flesh and Blood (W. P. E. C.), with Lon Chaney.—Average picture. Chaney not a drawing card here.—W. Wartz, Colonial theatre, McCotontown, Md.—Neighborhood patronage.

Flesh and Blood (W. P. E. C.), with a special cast.—A picture of medium grade and not worth the high rental for it, at least to a small town ex-hibitor.—Edwards & Case, Opera House, Paw Paw, III.—Neighborhood patronage.

Night Life In Hollywood (Arrow), with a special cast.—This is an excellent test on the strength of review in Exhibitor's Herald and was sadly disappointed. Can't see how any well meaning reviewer could rate this picture as outrageously crude and boomerangs on your reputa-tion. My people saw it and received it. Wouldn't advise any one to pass it up. We are very sorry we showed it, but blame reviewer for our false step. Used Clyde Cook in High and Dry and charged forty and ten cents. No business second day. P. E. Morris, Regent theatre, Cleveland, Miss.—General patronage.

Night Life In Hollywood (Arrow), with Jack Hoxie.—One of the best pictures of the season. P. E. Morris, Regent theatre, Cleveland, Miss.—General patronage.

Clyde Cook in The Left-Handed League (Western).—Good story, well told. P. E. Morris, Regent theatre, Cleveland, Miss.—General patronage.

Night Life In Hollywood.—This is the one of the best Westerns I ever saw. Don't be afraid to book it. It is as good as any Western I have ever seen.—A. W. Smith, Masonic theatre, What Cheer, Iowa.—General patronage.

Back Fire (Arrow) with Jack Hoxie.—Did the best business with this picture and the best business of the week. A. S. Miller & Carroll, Getary theatre, Amory, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Ten Nights in a Bar Room (Arrow), with John Lowell.—Did not draw the crowd for me and did not seem to please the patrons. T. H. Turner, Noblesville, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The Cyclone of 1923 (111) with George Arliss.—The Cyclone is still in. Quest for leisure, with two—P. E. Morris, Regent theatre, Cleveland, Miss.—General patronage.

Clycone Bliss (Arrow), with Jack Hoxie. Good Western. Pleased Western fans. It's old, but a good one. Book it, but don't pay much for it.—O. W. McClellan, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

School Days (Warner Bros.), with Wesley Barry. If you have not played it, get it. R. W. C.此前 Strand theatre, Steetton, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

School Days (Warner Bros.), with Wesley Barry.—Very good picture, but not good enough for the amount you are getting for it.—A. W. Smith, Masonic theatre, What Cheer, Iowa.—General patronage.

The Lure of Gold (Steiner), with Neal Hart and George Arliss.—Good Western. Neal Hart had a good looking leading woman this time and the picture was a fair Western. Some titles were very short, and this helps spoil a picture.—R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kan.—General patronage.

The Man from Hells River (W. P. C.) with Charles K. Stammings.—A good picture, but not up to the other Curwood's we have played. —W. C. Lewis, I. O. O. F. Hall, Grand Gorge, N. Y.—General patronage.

The Lure of Gold (Steiner), with Neal Hart.—Good picture. Drew well. Gave satisfaction. Hart draws well for us.—O. W. McClellan Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

More to be Pitted Than Scorned (C. B. C.), with J. Frank Glenden.—Good picture, and one of the best we have had, and drew good business.—George Vaughan, Grand theatre, Dunville, Ont., Can.—General patronage.

The Crow's Nest (Arrow), with Jack Hoxie.—Good picture. Drew well. Brothers, this is a good one and buy it. Don't pay a fancy price. Hoxie takes well with us.—O. W. McClellan, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Ranger and the Range (W. P. C.), with James Lincoln. Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Ranger and the Range.—A fine picture, but I have one of the finest of the Westerns I ever saw. Don't be afraid to book it. It is as good as any Mix pictures, and cheap rent.—A. W. Smith, Masonic theatre, What Cheer, Iowa.—General patronage.

Cupid's Brand (Arrow), with Jack Hoxie.—Went big. Hoxie is a favorite here. O. W. McClellan, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Out of the Dust (McCarthey), with a special cast.—About four and a half reels; couldn't make head or tail of it. Neither could patrons. Film the limit in conditions. People walked out and stopped others coming in. I went for a walk.—George Vaughan, Grand theatre, Dunville, Ont., Can.—General patronage.

The Desert Cyclone (Arrow), with Jack Hoxie.—Did very well for a Saturday program, but picture weak. As poor a Hoxie as I ever had. Fellers, don't give us any more for it.—O. W. McClellan, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Go Get Him (W. P. C.), with William Fairbanks.—Good Western feature and well directed. Also fine fights. Kids and men enjoyed this. One fellow in the audience was so excited that he couldn't help cheering.—H. E. Holben, Olympic theatre, Lenox, Iowa.—General patronage.

The Lure of Gold (Steiner) with Jack Hoxie.—Don't have a better picture. Like the story and action of it. H. E. Holben, Olympic theatre, Lenox, Iowa.—General patronage.

Serials

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—It gives me my best crowd. It's a fine picture. I use it Fri. and Sat. by itself.—G. L. Blasingame, Halls theatre, Halls, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—Just finished this serial and say that it held up better than the average. Ran a Century comedy and two of our 2 reel chapter plays and it made a good program. If they like serials in your town they ought to like this.—Wm. E. Tragos, Tragos theatre, Nettlesville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—Have played two serials and get good attendance.—V. T. Lyford, Gem theatre, West Helena, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Adventures of Tarzan (Serial Stock) at Cuno.—Just finished over with a bang for Sunday matinee; followed it with Son of Tarzan. Tie up with book stores. Prints in good shape. Holds up good.—George Vaughan, Grand theatre, Dunville, Ont.—General patronage.

The Ropin' Pool (Pathé), with Will Rogers.—Played this with Dr. Jack and it caused just as much favorable comments as Dr. Jack. We advertised it as the highest priced short subject playing in our theatres the past year.—Sterling theatre, Grecley, Colo.—General patronage.

Golf (Vitagraph), with Larry Semmon.—Not Larry's best, but it's a good comedy.—F. Kreighmann, Grand theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

Young Sherlocks (Pathé), an Our Gang comedy.—Very good comedies and people are enjoying them. —W. A. Petersen, Star theatre, Mt. Vernon, S. D.—Rural patronage.

Young Sherlocks (Pathé), an Our Gang comedy.—Very good comedies and people are enjoying them.—W. A. Petersen, Star theatre, Mt. Vernon, S. D.—Rural patronage.

Our Gang Comedies (Pathé).—They are the best we ever got hold of. Johnny Jones is very entertaining and comical, but not so downright funny. We are using them together, alternating, also Hornung, Opera House, Victor, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Leather Pushers (Universal), with Reginald Denny.—Unsuited to our house. Will not return the women away and draw the roughnecks.—T. G. Thompson, Grand theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—General patronage.

The Leather Pushers (Universal).—Good for old time slapstick, laugh-producing, original stunt comedies, Larry makes a great trick, backed off the map at our house.—W. A. Petersen, Star theatre, Mt. Vernon, S. D.—Rural patronage.

A scene of comedy and cleverness in the latest Equity special, "Has the World Gone Mad," produced by Daniel Carson Goodman.

Comedy.—Made 'em howl for joy, and ask for more like this one.—Rae Peacock, Mystic theatre, Stafford, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Short Weight (Universal), with Brownie.—Not much of a comedy, yet the kids seemed to like it.—Rae Peacock, Mystic theatre, Stafford, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Bone Dry (Pathé), with Paul Parrot.—Here is a dandy one reel comedy. Something different in it than usual. It got the laughs, which is unusual for a one reeler.—E. J. Laqua, Gem theatre, Hankinson, N. D.—General patronage.

A Punched Prince (Metro), with Bull Montana.—Montana comedies are stepping right out. This is the second one I have shown and these comedies are right up in the class with the best short subjects on the market. They are carefully produced and bring out comedy that gets a laugh.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.

A Sailor Made Man (A. E.), with Harold Lloyd.—A very pleasing picture that drew well on a second run.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—Small town patronage.

A Sailor Made Man (A. E.), with Harold Lloyd.—This is what I call a real comedy. Everybody came out smiling. Had lot of comments.—A. F. Kehr, Princess theatre, Ogallala, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Dynamite (Educational), with Lloyd Hamilton.—One of the best comedies we have seen yet. Don't pass it up. It's there.—C. W. Longacher, New Glarus theatre, New Glarus, Wis.—General patronage.

Bang (Educational), with a special cast.—Here is another scream of a comedy. Very exceptional.—C. W. Longacher, New Glarus theatre, New Glarus, Wis.—General patronage.

The Messenger (Vitagraph), with Jimmy Aubry.—A good two reel comedy with cheap rental.—A. W. Sage, Masonic theatre, What Cheer, Iowa.—General patronage.

Man vs. Beast (Educational), with a special cast.—Here is a real feature in two reels. Exploit it properly and it will have box office value. Very interesting and entertaining.—Bruce Fowler, Indiana theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.—General patronage.

Henpecked Harry (Pathé).—Get this one and invite all the married men without backbone to come and see this. Fido will do the rest.—Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Oceans Swells (Educational), a Christie comedy.—Just starting Educational comedies. They seem to please the majority.—Mrs. Lola Bell, Queen theatre, Lonoke, Ark.—Small town patronage.

Fruits of Faith (Pathé), with Will Rogers.—Three reels but with a better punch than most seven reels. As many favorable comments as our feature.—Bruce Fowler, Indiana theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.—General patronage.

A Case of Identity (Educational), with a special cast.—Some way these pictures don't give the same thrill the stories do. Maybe they should have been made in U. S. A. instead of England. Just fan.—R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kan.—General patronage.

The Counter Jumper (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—A good slapstick comedy, entitled to be featured. Patrons liked it and talked about it. Went bigger and better than the feature drama, helped at box office.—Rosenfield, Hopp & Co., Port Armstrong theatre, Rock Island, Ill.—General patronage.

Newly Rich (Pathé), with Snub Pollard.—Fairly good.—Rae Peacock, Mystic theatre, Stafford, Kan.—Small town patronage.

The Four Seasons (Educational).—A most beautiful educational. Used this with Will Rogers in The Ropin' Fool (Pathé)—a good one, two reels) and Movie Chats. A fine program that pleased a good Saturday night crowd.—B. G. Sigsbee, Star theatre, Heppner, Ore.—Small town patronage.

Torchy's Frame Up (Educational), with Johnny Hines.—Good comedy.—C.
CRASH!

The storm-driven schooner shuddered sickeningly as it struck the reef. From stem to stern she trembled like a wounded thing. Canvas ripped and timber splintered. High up in her gale-swept rigging the angry cries of the two fighting demons blended in the exulting shrieks of the hungry hurricane. Shot-swift rain and spray tore at their faces. Furious thunder boomed even above the pound of hull-breaking seas. A sudden, blinding, Heaven-rending flash of lightning revealed the forms of the two men—fighting to the death atop the dizzily swaying mast. They are Another American Seating Company Installation!

Order Number Two

GRAUMAN'S Egyptian Hollywood Theatre, one of the finest theatres on the coast, was ORDER NUMBER TWO from the same owners and their satisfaction is doubly clinched by still a third order, now nearing completion, the Metropolitan Theatre of Los Angeles.

The sincerest testimonial of satisfactory service rendered in a quality product delivered, is not the first order but order NUMBER TWO.

The latest American Seating Company installation is the thirtieth successive installation, one of the largest and best known theatre circuits in the world, the Orpheum Circuit.

Re-orders speak more eloquently than mere words.

Features That Build Patronage

Considers Problem to Begin With the Choice of a Site and to Be Closely Allied With a Strong Spirit of Cooperation Between Architect and Ownership

By HARRY M. CRANDALL
Crandall's Theatres, Washington, D. C.

IF ALL of the exhibitors of motion pictures in the United States were to be asked what they deemed the most important factor in the conduct of their business, it is probable that a majority would reply, "Good pictures." I do not agree with this view, although I do not under-estimate the value of a high quality of photoplay entertainment. A minute analysis of our development of a chain of fifteen theatres of the first class in the Washington, D. C., territory, convinces me that an exhibitor's most valuable asset is the good will of the public.

Public good will, we have found, is predicated upon something more personal, more intimate, than merely a sense of having viewed a good picture. It embraces perhaps almost subconscious knowledge of a combination of elements that have resulted in the individual's entire complacency during a given period of relaxation—personal comfort, courteous attention on the part of efficient, but not obtrusive, house attaches, attractive surroundings, good music and finally diverting screen entertainment. Not one of these elements of public satisfaction is ignored in the conduct of any one of our theatres.

For the last fifteen years we have considered our problem to begin with the choice of site for a theatre and to be closely allied with a strong spirit of cooperation between architect and ownership.

There is not a Crandall theatre now in operation that has not the advantage of a four-way draw. That is, every Crandall house, no matter whether in a business or a residential section, has potential patronage radiating from it north, south, east and west. It was largely for this reason that we organized our Public Service and Educational Department last June to make each Crandall residential house the actual as well as the ostensible community center in its respective neighborhood. Site selected, the problem progresses to the stage where the architect is called upon to submit rough sketches of the most practical utilization for theatrical purposes of the plot of ground in question. Since physical comfort is the prime requisite of the patron's enjoyment, every energy is bent toward making the theatre conform in design to the most practical handling of large crowds as well as architectural unity. This invariably entails the use of large floor areas for lobby space and promenade lounges in addition to the rest and smoking rooms for ladies and gentlemen. We make this provision here found in the standing crowds, waiting to gain access to the theatre for the beginning of the next performance, are even more susceptible to the annoyances of physical discomfort than patrons seated in the house.

The arrangement of our auditoriums, however, is not slighted in our constant aim to make our houses better liked than any of our theatres in the idea that frequent loss in number of seats on the floor, we have insisted that ample "leg room" be left between rows, and that aisles be a little wider than the law requires; also that broad cross aisles be left for the easy movement of individuals or existing audience.

The next important feature of house construction to be looked to is the sight line from every seat to the screen. In many of our theatres all seats are sold for the same price—all, consequently, must be equally desirable from the standpoint of screen visibility. I do not recall a single case of request for refund at any of our theatres on the idea that the picture could not be clearly viewed from the seat occupied. This, I consider a tribute to our zeal in promoting good will and adding everything in our power to the sense of enjoyment that leads to the establishment of permanent patronage—particularly desirable in the case of the neighborhood theatre playing possibly as many as four or five changes of bill a week.

Through the agency of the Theatre Committee, organized as an auxiliary of the Advisory Board of the Public Service and Educational Department, under the competent directorship of Mrs. Harriet Hawley Locher, we learned that the public is surprisingly ignorant of the mechanical processes necessary to project a picture upon the screen. Some of them even thought that the film width as the image reflected upon the silver sheet and none had any definite notion of what a projector was like. This suggested the thought to Thomas W. Lamb, of New York, who at the time was engaged in preparing plans for our new Tivoli theatre, now under construction in Washington, that the public would look upon it as a remarkably interesting innovation that would add fame to the theatre if they might be per-rated. The arrangement permits the actual operation of the projection booth without inconvenience or effort.

After considerable discussion pro and con, the plans were so altered as to place the projection room in the front of the main floor, on a direct line with the screen, with only a fireproof, fireproof glass partition separating it from the promotion lobby. By this arrangement, it will be possible for patrons of the theatre to view every step in the projection of the program, thus adding to the already fixed appeal. Our friends that we have no secrets from them. Our publicity is our partners and every effort is made by every member of our organization to make them feel that it is upon this theory that our business is conducted. The Tivoli, which will be the finest theatre in the national capital and one of the handsomest in America, will be the only house in Washington with a visible projection room. There are only two others on the continent so equipped.

Materials, decoration, color schemes.
turned cannot fail to view the actual operation of every work and designer, of course, but should be subordinate in the mind of the owner to the baste need of creating and maintaining the goodwill of the patron by thoughtful attention to the fundamentals that contribute toward the successful running of the thescial comfort. For, after all, the best pictures to be had—and we have them—will not be permanent if following of faithful patrons if an uncomfortable seat produces an inevitable backache, entrance to the auditorium presupposes having one's feet trampled on or past experience has proved that there may not be any chance of seeing the screen even after a seat is gained.

Good will is the exhibitor's biggest asset. It should be definitely and systematically planned for before the excavation is started!

Caring for the Theatre Piano

Regular Tuning of Instrument Is Urged by W. F. McClellan, Secretary of the National Association of Piano Tuners

E\n\n\n\n\n\n\n\n\n\n\n\n\n\nEvery feature about the theatre calculated to amuse and please the patrons has its particular friend and caretaker except piano. The violonist will muffle up his fiddle and carefully put it away in a box when he shows is over.
The bass fiddle is placed away in a canvas bag, likewise the harp and kettle drums. The clarinet is oiled up occasionally and carefully put away in a neat little case, made purposely for it.

The piano player, of all the musicians employed by the management, is the only one who can not tune, regulate, and care for the instrument he plays, for, strange as it may seem, piano playing and piano tuning don't as a rule go together. If the one who is playing the piano is a good musician, a good pianist, he, generally speaking, is a poor tuner and repairman.
The pianist being unable to perform that valuable, necessary and important service, the piano is allowed to deteriorate into a deplorable condition, as it is only looked after occasionally, and the tuner is never called in until a string is broken or some of the action parts refuse to respond, no matter how badly it is out of tune. So long as the mechanism will continue to operate, that seems to be all that is required.

It would not be asking too much of the management to have the piano tuned and looked over once a week or even twice a week, considering the use that the theatre piano is put to, and what is required of it. The present system or policy of calling in a tuner when some part of the mechanism gives out or as the occasion might seem to demand, is bad for all parties concerned, as the conditions which the tuner has to contend

Talk about unusual jobs,—how would the electric signs in New York, count them, classify them as to type and size, count the lamps and find out how many of each size are used and then reduce the whole thing to a graphic chart

The job is not longer open for the work

There are 9,577 electric signs in New million lamps of various sizes. The charts tell just how many signs are on each street and avenue and how many sockets are in each sign. They tell also the class of business.

Officials of the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners are urging members of the organization to respond as early as possible to the questionnaire broadcast throughout the state for the purpose of assisting the department of justice in collecting data on the American Society of Authors, Composers & Publishers. Here is the questionnaire mailed to all members:

NAME: (Theatre and Owner)
Address:
Orchestra or many other personnel are you paying "Music Tax" to the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers? If so, how much?

Is the above amount based on seating capacity, if so, how much per seat?

Is this "Music Tax" payable in advance?

What percentage of representatives of the society do you deal with?

Have you been threatened because you refused to pay the "Music Tax"? If so, how many times?

(Also attach to questionnaire copy of threatening letters, if any.)

What is your opinion as to the "Music Tax"?

What effect, if any, has this had on your business?

Do you know of anybody forced out of business through the activities of the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers?

Do you know of any motion picture house which has been closed because they did not pay the tax to use licensed, copyrighted music? If so, give details.

Do you know of any orchestral leader, member or manager exempt from employment tax because the manager or owner would not use licensed, copyrighted music? If so, explain.

If there is a person who you may have at your command not covered in the foregoing, kindly furnish same under remarks.

ZERO WEATHER MAKES INROAD ON PATRONAGE

Business Holds Up Unusually

Well, However, in Face of Blizzards, Cold

Theatre business in Chicago last week was badly bent. Had it been entirely crippled no one would have been much surprised, as the city was visited by its worst cold snap of the season—a string of night long lasting three days and three nights. As the thermostat fluctuates with the zero mark the early days of the week.

Week-End Business Good

Fortunately, Saturday and Sunday saw the backbones of the cold weather breaking and theatre patrons who had been contending to survive close to the family hearth ventured out and filled the auditorium and lobbies for a typical weekend business.

The surprising revelation of the past week is the fact that the icy blasts that held the city in its grip failed to hurt the attendance at the theatres to the extent anticipated under the conditions. Reports from various sections of the city point that the big productions on hand, which had played the larger loop houses shortly before, brought out a good attendance in neighborhood sections.

Milder Weather Here

With the beginning of this week milder weather was on hand and business picked up quickly. The fact that business last week did not suffer more than it did is regarded generally as a tribute to the drawing power of current attractions.

Mr. Brentlinger resigned it was said, because he did not wish to leave Indianapolis. A sales office will be continued here.

The manager of the company’s Evansville office has also resigned, it was reported.

PRODUCER ACQUIRES NEW SCREEN STORIES ABOUND

(Ne W York, Feb. 26.—C. S. Clarke, who produced “The Headless Horseman” with Will Rogers for Hodkinson, has returned from a three months’ visit to Europe. He is bringing back with him material for three productions which he acquired abroad.

While in France, he visited Blasco Ibanez and met leading producers. He is considering making his next picture abroad as a result of a study of production costs there.

POPULAR SCREEN STAR, Neva Gerba, who is making personal appearances at Chicago theatres, and Frank Zambrano who distributes her pictures hereabouts. Miss Gerba appeared at the Peoples, Atlantic, Shakespeare, Gold and Julian theatres last week.

Branch of Automatic Ticket Opened Here

Office Will Handle Company’s Product Through Entire Middle West

The Automatic Ticket Register Corporation of New York have opened a Chicago branch at 732 South Wabash Avenue. D. H. Finke of the New York office came here to open the Chicago office.

Will Cover Mid-West

The sales department of the Automatic Ticket Register Corporation’s Chicago office, will cover the entire middle west on both registers and tickets.

Mr. Finke announces that an expert service department has been installed, in which it will be possible to give service on all styles of ticket machines that are being used.

New Machine on Display

The latest 1923 Gold Seal Automatrick model, which has just been put on the market, and is the result of fifteen years’ experience is now on display in the salesroom of the Chicago office.

John J. Jones III

John J. Jones, booker for the Jones, Linick & Schaefer theatres, is ill at the Wesley Memorial hospital with an abscessed ear. Mr. Jones was taken sick with the flu a week ago.
CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By J. R. M.

TOM NORTH, special representative of Mack Sennett, was a Chicago visitor last week. He's working on "The Shreik of Arabz," a Ben Turpin picture and "Su- zannah," Mabel Normand's latest United Artist's production.

* * *

Jack Leo, vice-president of Fox Film Corp., together with his wife and two daughters, passed through Chicago last Friday en route to California.

* * *

Joe Lyon, popular Fox salesman, is on the sick list.

* * *

Capt. Nicholas McDonald, who suffered the loss of his right hand last Wednesday, while taking a flashlight photograph for the herald-examiner, was a former employee of the Fox film company.

* * *

William Layman, Fox bookkeeper, is on the sick list. Flu.

* * *

Al Galles, Lee Woodruff and Mort M. Kruger, former Select salesman, have joined the Celebrity Players sales force.

* * *

R. T. Smith is now on the Educational sales staff. Formerly sold Selznick pictures in this territory.

* * *

Richard Walton Tully was registered at the Congress Hotel, Sunday. He is en route to California, Mort Blumestock, his personal representative, accompanied him.

* * *

Earl Hudson and family, of the Associated First National offices in New York, passed through Chicago, Friday. Earl will be located on the West Coast and will handle publicity for Edwin Carewe productions.

* * *

H. H. Hurn, Central division sales manager, Hodkinson, is back from a trip to Minneapolis, where he signed up Finkelstein & Ruben Theatrical Enterprises for a long run on "Down to the Sea in Ships." At Duluth it will play the Lyric, the Garrick in Minneapolis and the Garrick in St. Paul.

E. E. Reynolds, manager, shares the credit for booking the 44 houses with Mr. Hurn.

The new LeClaire Theatre, at Moline, Ill., will open with "Jazzmania" and the new Mae Murray picture on Feb. 24. Sam Levine, former Jones, Linick & Schaefer employees, will manage the new house.

* * *

J. A. Steenson, branch manager, Vitagraph, called on A. H. Blank, of Des Moines, last week, and extolled the merits of "The Ninety and Nine."

* * *

Speaking of Vitagraph, they'll all be bustling around getting business for "A Front Page Story" and "The Ninety" pictures. C. O. Roberts is in Wisconsin; H. R. Smith has been in Indiana; and S. T. Marks hit Southern Illinois last week.

* * *

"Bill" Danziger, you know, of Paramount, bet one of the Famous Players salesmen last week fifty bones he could sell a certain exhibitor in Indiana, and the salesman "took him up." Well, "Bill" sold him and now the salesman has to exploit Danziger's picture or lose the fifty.

* * *

Dai Roché has been in Kansas City, Detroit and Pittsburgh, and Lord knows where else, telling folks about "The Covered Wagon," the Paramount picture that is soon to be released.

* * *

Harry Ascher, of the Ascher Bros., just got back from a trip to Boston, Mass., last Friday.

* * *

Ask Harry Phillips, the "L." salesman, what became of the Dunn fountain pen he used to sport? Harry made $4 on a deal but now is barred from getting another pen cause Santa Claus has crossed his name off his list.

* * *

Sol Ehrenberg, of the Service Sign System, who had his tonsils removed last week, is back on the job.

* * *

Neal Agnew, supervisor of sales for Famous Players, Chicago office, has been transferred to Milwaukee where he becomes Branch manager.

* * *

Forges Post of the American Legion, composed of ex-service men in the film industry, gave a delightful get-together luncheon and entertainment Feb. 19, at Eagles Hall, 2447 West Madison St. Out of about 300 who attended, though, only two film boys were present—Commander Charles Kamp and Nate Wolf.

* * *

The affair was a complete success however, notwithstanding. Several interesting addresses were given by representatives of the National Legion headquarters, as well as by representatives of the Ladies Auxiliary. Six vaudeville acts, dancing and a five-piece orchestra furnished the entertainment. Nate Wolf found something in the cloak room and had to be forcibly restrained from making a lengthy speech afterward. Commander Kamp distinguished himself as an orator it is said.

* * *

Hal Olver, new First National exploiter, has arrived in our midst and will display a complete line of new and fancy Spring exploitation stunts soon. In the meantime he is getting acquainted with police headquarters and the press, through letters of introduction endorsed by Ned Holmes.

* * *

Roy Alexander, Kansas City manager of Universal, was called home owing to the sudden death of his mother last Wednesday.

* * *

Sam S. Shurman, branch manager of Goldwyn, Milwaukee, was confined to his hotel in Chicago for a few days laid up with an attack of flu.

* * *

District supervisor George A. Hickey, has just returned from a tour of northern cities. Milwaukee and Minneapolis, where he reports business is on the increase. There is a big demand for "The Christian" and Mr. Hickey predicts it will prove one of the sensations of the season.

* * *

Louis Kramer, F. B. O.'s five-wire exploitation man, doesn't overlook a bet when it comes to grabbing space in the local papers. Last week he announced that the Barbee theatre lobby where "The Third Alarm" is holding 'em out, was insured for $3,000 to cover the fire paraphernalia piled up there.

* * *

J. J. Sampson, manager of F. B. O.'s exchange, announces the appointment of Edwin "Red" Johnson as assistant country sales manager, who will hereafter aid I. Gettleson in directing F. B. O. country sales.

Typical views of Gopher Prairie reproduced at the Warner Brother's studios for that company's production of Sinclair Lewis' widely read novel "Main Street." Monte Blue and Florence Vidor have the roles of Dr. Kennicott and Carol. Harry Beaumont is directing this production.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

AWAY from the ordinary routine of screen play. A worthwhile offering—should appeal to everyone. Is a real live piece of excitement. Is going not only to pass but thrill. Go the limit on promises, the picture is all there!

FILM DAILY

VIVID picture of life—holds the interest in a tight grip from start to finish. Scenes so realistic they possess powerful appeal. Should have a 100 per cent appeal.

HARRISON'S REPORTS

THE PICTURE carries an appeal that should be there largely felt regardless of the locality in which it is shown. It has been carefully carried out in detail and proves consistently to be a worthwhile attraction. The story is swift moving and excellently directed.

Your Audiences Have Never Seen Such a Picture As "Salome"

Here is the golden opportunity for exhibitors who want a film that is far above the commonplace.

Nazimova's "Salome" is different, fascinating, alluring, beautiful and far above the average.

Your audiences have never seen such artistic settings as "Salome's."

They have never seen costumes like "Salome's."

They have never seen situations like those in "Salome."

They have never seen acting like Nazimova's in "Salome."

They have never seen emotions like "Salome's."

Not even has any capitol of Europe ever seen a picture as unique and different as "Salome."

Lover of the Desert
The Supreme Passion

"The Supreme Passion" tells a story as poignantly beautiful as the poem that inspired it.

It revolves around a beautiful young girl who finds that love is too frequently inspired by mere physical beauty. As she wishes to be loved with a deeper affection, one that will never fade, she puts her lovers to a severe test to prove their sincerity.

Besides romance the picture has stirring moments of action and speed.

Fairbanks - Triangle

One of the uncanny, amazing facts about moving pictures is their life. A year or a hundred years from today, today’s picture will be as fresh, just as young, just as alive as it is now.

Fancy seeing your great grandmother in a pinafore and with her hair in a braid,—climbing a cherry tree!

Douglas Fairbanks is a great actor. One of the most magnetic that has ever crowded a theatre.

Not the least of his charm comes from his perennial youth—the vigor, the laughter, that bubbles up and overflows; that shines through his smile and sparkles in his eyes.

Six years ago, when the Triangle-Fairbanks pictures were made—the pictures that gave him fame—he was six years younger than he is today. Full of love, laughter and thrills, the pictures he made then haven't aged a minute.

A new edition of the most attractive Fairbanks pictures made—under Griffith's supervision—for Triangle, reconstructed throughout, will be ready very soon.

Thousands of people have never seen them. Thousands of others have—and want to see them again.

Many of the largest and finest theatres have been built since these wonderful pictures were made.

They will be put out on a basis that means Profit to Exhibitors.

We want to talk business to responsible men who know how to see a picture with a profit to wise exhibitors.

Important Facts

The Herald's inquiry into the attitude of theatre owners toward the proposition of an exhibitors' distributing corporation has disclosed a number of interesting facts. As was to be expected a large number of exhibitors, dissatisfied with conditions, would welcome a radical change in the existing system of distribution. From communications received this sentiment seems to be in favor simply of some kind of a change and does not accord definite approval to the proposition that has been put forth.

A surprisingly strong sentiment approves of things just as they stand, subject only to definite modifications with respect to prices the exhibitor is charged. A sufficiently large percentage of the communications received disclose a suspicion of either the dependability or capability of those who have been identified with the new proposition so as to obviously render it a chance of getting the support of a large number of exhibitors exceedingly dubious.

Aside from the light shed upon the exhibitors' distributing proposition the inquiry also has yielded considerable important information on other matters. The theatremen make plain that they are becoming rebellious toward being compelled to shoulder the burden of unnecessary and exorbitant expenditures in the production end of the business. Press agents who send out stories spotted with huge figures had better take heed.

Sensational Titles

The industry must permit itself to grow away from some of these so-called box-office titles. There are many instances of fine productions being immeasurably cheapened by the sort of titles that are tacked onto them. The lard title, unless it happens to be very clever, has no excuse for being used at all in this day of the industry.

These titles become an actual barrier to the attendance of a vast number of occasional theatre-goers who feel that a product so described is too cheap and tawdry to merit their attention.

Allen Holubar, for instance, has just completed a very fine motion picture entertainment based upon a story called, "The White Frontier" — a title which may not be a perfect picture title but it at least would not discredit a worthy production. This title, however, has been supplanted by, "Slender the Woman," which unless we miss our guess, will be interpreted by many exhibitors as a case in which an effort has been made to salvage a weak picture by the use of a sensational title — a thing which is far from the truth because the new Holubar picture is one of the most interesting and entertaining of the season.

A good opportunity for this industry to show that it is sincere in its effort to do bigger and finer things is in the elimination of some of these catch-penny "box office" titles.

An Author's Complaint

Two big names in current American literature — Peter B. Kyne and George Ade — are assuming opposite positions in a warm little controversy that is being waged between producers and the picture business. Perhaps an explanation of the divergent viewpoints may be found in the fact that Ade is meeting with much success in his picture work while Kyne, for one reason and another, has not fared so well.

Both men have faced the same conditions and the same picture men and both, doubtlessly, are sincere, but in the case of Mr. Kyne two important facts seemed to have been overlooked. One is that, except in very rare instances, the successful transition from one means of expression to another involves years of work and preparation and the other is that a great element of luck necessarily attends the product of an author whose stories are done into pictures.

Mr. Kyne seems to blame the industry and producers for many things that are altogether beyond their control.

Re-Takes

J. R. M.

Life for a child star in pictures is just one darn personal appearance after another.

The trouble with this personal appearance stuff — in the case of a child star — is this: He can't send a substitute. Now a dog star can remain at home in his nice kennel and enjoy three square meals a day, while some poor hound that looks like him is making "personal appearances" all over the country. 'Cause even the country newspapers can't get an expost — sorry — outa him, or even any "diet" about California.

Neely's a Comedian

I see where Neely Edwards wants to start a col. in Camera magazine, similar to our "What the Screen Did for Me." Neely is going to call his: "What the picture did to me." That is provided he can find enough actors affluent enough to raise two cents to send in their experiences.

We Hope So

See the Chicago Daily News: "If the moving picture rebels make good, the conventionalized movie will go out and take its deadly formula along with it."

Maybe

They're going to use motion pictures to teach the Chicago youngsters 'readin', ritin', and 'rithmetic.' Won't be able to keep 'em home now.

The N. Y. Telegraph says they will be taught "grammer" also. Let us hope the subtitle writer studies spelling and gets it right, eh?

Screen Lover — Kale Lover

See where Rudy Valentino is up to his old tricks. He signed a contract to dance another week at a Chicago dance hall but got a "shiklery" streak and demanded double pay. So he moved to another part of town.

Weekly Fable

Once there was a lover in a screen comedy who had a bunch of beautiful flowers which he was going to present to his sweetheart, and they didn't fall into a pail of black paint and were pressed to his said sweetheart's nose.

Oh Joy

Chicago is going to have a silent night for radio fans. Now, if the theatres will have "silent nights" for the subtitle readers — everything'll be lovely.

A Big Contract

Jack Conway, out on the coast, is making a picture called "What Wives Want." It's only a six reeler, too.

Bill Proposes
$50 Charge on Films Censored
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NASHVILLE, TENN., Feb. 27.—The most drastic censorship and tax bill ever introduced is now before the general assemby of the state legislature. The measure provides for a levy of $50 on every picture reviewed, whether that picture be in one reel or forty. It is estimated that this would bring a revenue of $111,000 annually.

The bill provides further that every theatre must pay a 5 per cent tax on gross receipts as "a privilege tax for showing pictures censored by the censorship boards." The total of paid by theaters to fourteen and would increase the percentage paid to 21.25 per cent of gross receipts.

The censorship commission would comprise nine members getting a total salary of $19,800 annually. Hamilton of Sullivan introduced the measure.

Goldwyn Gets Hearst Films;
Cosmopolitan Buys Theatre
Paramount Still Has Number of Company's Pictures
For Distribution—Rumor Hearst to Acquire Chain of Houses in Big Cities
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, February 27.—One of the biggest changes in distribution arrangements was made last week when official announcement was issued that a contract had been signed whereby Goldwyn Pictures in the future would distribute all Cosmopolitan productions.

Coincident with the announcement of the switch from Paramount to Goldwyn, came the announcement from the Hearst offices that the Park theatre in Columbus Circle had been acquired by Mr. Hearst on a twenty-one year lease. It will be remodeled into a photoplay house and renamed the Cosmopolitan. The theatre will be used exclusively for the New York presentation of Cosmopolitan pictures.

Rumor Hearst Will Establish Chain of Theatres
According to Broadway rumor, the acquisition of the Park is but the first step by Mr. Hearst in establishing a chain of motion picture theatre in a number of the larger cities of the country. This could not be verified at the Hearst offices.

The distribution of the Hearst product heretofore has been through Paramount, and this arrangement had been in force so long that it had been looked upon as a fixture.

Question of Films Involved
According to the best information obtainable, the switch will be made at once, and the question of what films as yet undelivered are to be turned over to Paramount is to be decided this week.

Paramount in announcing its new list of thirty-one specials scheduled the following Cosmopolitan pictures which have not been published for distribution:
"Adam and Eva," "The Nth Commandment," "The Go-Getter" and "Enemies of Women.

All but Two Turned Over
All of these, with the exception of the latter, have been turned over to Paramount, "Little Old New York," which is said to be one of the most ambitious productions yet attempted by the Hearst organization, is about two-thirds completed.

It is believed that the only question at issue in the change of distribution channels is whether "Enemies of Women" and "Little Old New York" shall go to Famous Players under the old contract, or to Goldwyn under the new.

French Government in Move to Aid Industry;
Will Hit U. S. Films
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—A movement has been started by the French government, it has been learned here, to encourage the output and betterment of pictures made in France. In this connection it is planned to remove many of the taxes now imposed on producers.

In a statement by Count De Lasteyrie, minister of finance, he declares motion pictures are more deserving of governmental subsidy than were the book publishers because, while only about 80,000,- 000 people in the world read French, films command an audience of 300,000,- 000.

As a return for this favorable attitude on the part of the government toward motion pictures exhibitors have been asked to guarantee that at least 25 per cent of the pictures they show will be French productions. The average now is about 15 per cent.

COLUMBUS, O., February 27.—War between the ministers and the motion picture shows is under way in this state. The Rev. J. H. T. Gordon, Logan county representative in the Ohio general assembly, introduced a bill to deny to the exhibitors jury trials when they have been accused of violating the law. His ground was that they often are acquitted.

REPRESENTATIVE William Wiley of Mercer county followed it up with a bill waiving the theatre requirements on motion picture shows owned by organizations not ostensibly in the business. The exhibitors say that in certain cases they face actual competition from schools and churches, which buy films from the producers on the same terms as the exhibitors.

The projectors are from the Motion Picture Theatre Owners’ Association of Ohio would have to organize a political department. There is a certain element organized, politically speaking, which has been and is attempting to act for every church in Ohio in constantly attacking motion picture exhibitors.

This has gone on for ten years. This group never has shown a desire to utilize the wonderful possibilities of the motion picture in co-operation with theatre managers as a body. It has never offered anything of a constructive nature. Hundreds of progressive ministers of all denominations do co-operate with our members locally. This is natural, because their members are our patrons. We could not operate without their patronage.

“This is the idea led by the Lord’s Day Alliance. It does not speak for all Ohio and church members, and the screens will tell the story when we are ready. We have been ‘carved’ to death and now they desire more laws and seek to legalize the commercializing of public schools in competition with big investments in taxable property. Their present attack means ‘fight to exhibitors.’

Principal Picture to Make Big Feature of "Uncle Tom’s Cabin"
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 27.—Work will be started immediately on a massive production of Harriet Beecher Stowe’s famous story, “Uncle Tom’s Cabin,” by Sol Lesser president of Principal Pictures Corporation. The entire story will be made in Los Angeles and the picture will be one of the biggest ever made by Lesser and his associates.

Experts on ammonia process for ice making will be engaged to transform the studio of the Lesser organization into huge ice fields and frozen rivers. The entire studio area of Principal Pictures Corporation will be used for this production.

“Uncle Tom’s Cabin” was made by the World Film Corporation ten years ago. “Oliver Twist” was made many years ago and Lesser has just issued his Jackie Coogan version of the Dickens story. "Any Mr. Lesser, that survives generation after generation and that is read and re-read by the public, is deserving of everlasting life on the screen.

Lunt Begins Work in Leading Role of New Distinctive Feature
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Alfred Lunt, stage star, apparently is going to stick to motion picture work. Having completed his first work before the camera in the leading role of “Backbone” for Distinctive Pictures Corporation, Lunt has started work on another Distinctive production, “The Ragged Edge,” in which he will also essay the leading male role.

The interiors for “The Ragged Edge,” which is based on Harold MacGrath’s novel of the same name, have been filmed at the Distinctive studio here. The exteriors will be shot off Miami, Fla., to which city Howard Estabrook, assistant production manager, has already gone to arrange preliminary details. Lunt is on his way there. Harmon Wright is directing the picture.

With the start of “The Ragged Edge” company, J. N. Naulty, studio manager for Distinctive, will have sets ready for the third of the Distinctive features.

The Question Box
This Week

1. You have read Jack Nivelle’s article on publicity. What is your opinion on this subject?

Boost O’Reilly for T. O. C. Election
Friends Confident Retiring State Leader Will Be Nominated

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—When the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce meets Thursday, it is generally believed, Charles L. O’Reilly, now president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York, will be nominated without opposition for the presidency of the T. O. C. C.

Has Announced Retirement

Mr. O’Reilly has announced his retirement from the business of the state body and also that he will at the same time retire from all exhibitor leadership activities. Recently, however, he has been importuned to become a candidate for the position of head of the T. O. C. C. and while he has made no public statement, many of the most active members believe when his name is placed in nomination, he will yield.

The consent of Mr. O’Reilly is sought as a solution of a situation which is believed to threaten the harmony which has prevailed since the organization of the T. O. C. C. three years ago. The organization of the Associated Booking Corporation, which was heralded at first as a T. O. C. C. movement, provoked the threat of a break in the harmony.

Believe Election Certain

While many of the theatre owners who joined the A. B. C. ranks are members of the T. O. C. C., the latter named organization made a clean break from the booking corporation. The booking corporation was not a part of the T. O. C. C. Also many of the most prominent members of the T. O. C. C. declined to accept membership in the booking corporation.

The Final Test of a Magazine Is: “Do Subscribers Read It?”

Almost anyone you meet will say he takes a dozen magazines, but on questioning, you will usually find out that he reads only one or two. In the motion picture trade paper field, there is one paper which is not contented with subscribers—it insists on readers. The following letter from Ed. Lake, owner and manager of the Lake Theatre, Baker, Mont., is a typical testimonial:

“Enclosed is my check for renewal subscription. I could not run my theatre without the knowledge your HERALD brings me. I cannot place its valuation to my theatre. Every number for the past three years, I have filed away.

“I consider that EXHIBITORS HERALD has done more for the small town exhibitor than all of the other trade papers put together. It is my salvation and the exhibitor reports have made me many a dollar. In fact, my wife and I read the HERALD from cover to cover. Believe me, we enjoy cutting out ‘What the Picture Did for Me,’ and it is interesting to look at our scrap book. We can easily turn to the record of each picture. Keep the HERALD coming.”

The Funny Side of Exhibition

By A. L. PICKER
(Rex Theatre, Ironwood, Mich.)

A funny incident was one where I booked a Wild West picture on percentage and the ballyhoo used was that any wild horse would be saddled and driven by ‘Toots,’ the famous broncho buster. This famous broncho buster was a nice neat little fellow who couldn’t ride a merry-go-round horse. He claimed that the advertisement would get the business so I let him go.

About 5 p.m. who should appear on the corner but a wonderful little horse with about six men trying to hold him and heading toward the theatre. I hunted up the famous broncho buster and in order for me to make good the advertisement I put a few of the little glasses of jurisprudence into him before breaking the news. About this time our broncho buster could ride anything. We put him on the horse and I didn’t think that a horse could run so fast. When our famous broncho buster came to in the hospital the first thing he asked me:

“Did it hurt the business?”

By C. R. SULLIVAN
(Fair theatre, Amarillo, Tex.)

Years ago the writer booked the picture “America,” made by World Film Corporation. The picture was taken in the Hippodrome of New York. Practically one half of the picture was taken out of focus.

Never in my life, to this day even, have I ever looked at such wonderful paper on a film. Consequently we billed “America” like a circus and raised our price.

The first day matinee we played to a fair crowd, but they couldn’t see half of the picture on account of the focus.

I had to do something so I had an architect duplicate the Hippodrome, six sheet size, giving all different measurements, etc. Then I arranged a little spiel which I did every show. I told ‘em how large the Hippodrome was and how far the camera was from scenes, etc. Well, sir, we got by and played to jammed houses for three days.

You may not think this funny but, Mister, if you had made those talks I did for three days you would think it was funny that you were still alive. Of all the films I have run, “America” tops the list as being a louse.

"Exhibitors’ Herald is certainly to be most highly complimented upon ascribing exhibitors’ views on the new exhibitors’ distributing project. In my opinion, this is one of the greatest steps forward in the industry that any trade journal has made for some past time."

Harry M. Warner Gives Views on Use of Posters for Picture Exploitation
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—In connection with the eighteen new productions of Warner Brothers for the coming season an open poster art competition which will involve every art institution in America will be launched by the Warner organization. Its purpose is to obtain original ideas for lithographs and to stimulate interest in the art of motion picture billboard advertising.

Warner Explains Use
While there has been a cry against posters by a number of exhibitors who charged that they were misleading Mr. Warner makes the following explanation of the value of posters:

"In a great many instances a picture that has been produced with exacting care and possessing a theme with a universal appeal demands a poster treatment that is a distinct departure from any scene that may be in the completed print. In other words, the picture lends itself to an artistic as well as a commercial poster. Its treatment may be expressed in an allegorical poster.

"To make posters from scenes in the picture is all very well in its way. It has been done for years, so much so that it has become stereotyped. For this reason we will endeavor within the very near future to infuse into the making of posters some new and totally different ideas. We want ideas that are original, ideas that will help exhibitors."

"It is claimed that the most injurious thing for a theatre to do is to put out a poster that does not contain a scene from the picture. They claim it destroys the confidence of the public.

"While I agree with them that most of the posters should show scenes of the picture, at the same time we should not delude ourselves with the idea that that is all that is necessary to capture the interest of the public.

Will Elevate Films
"In the past the public has been educated to see posters with commonplace scenes. That is why today it is difficult to convince a great many people that the motion picture is an art worthy of the highest commendation, an art that is destined to chronicle the great achievements of mankind for future generations."

Laemmle Scholarship
Plan Widelyavored
100 Schools Already Entered in Contest—Presidents Voice Approval
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Carl Laemmle's plan of a college endowment for the best motion picture scenario written by an undergraduates in the United States, is meeting widespread approval. Announced only a short time ago almost 100 institutions have definitely lined up for the competition and Mr. Laemmle has received scores of letters from college presidents and executives voicing enthusiasm over the idea.

Many Prominent Schools Enter
Under the plan $2,500 will be awarded consisting of an endowment to the winning student, $1,000 to the endowment fund of his college and an additional $300 to be paid for the screen rights to the winning scenario. Equal awards will be made to two or more students in case of a tie.

Among the prominent institutions which have entered for the Laemmle scholarship are the following:

Brown University the University of California, Carnegie Tech, Columbia University, University of Chicago, Colgate University, Columbia University, Dartmouth College, Hamline University, Harvard University, Indiana University, Lehigh University, University of Maryland, Mississippi A. & M., University of Missouri, University of Montana, University of Nebraska, University of North Carolina, Notre Dame, University of Pennsylvania, Rensselaer Polytechnic, Syracuse, Union College, Vanderbilt, Washington State College, Williams College and Yale.

Will Stimulate Creative Effort
Typical of the many letters of acceptance to the terms of the competition which Mr. Laemmle has received is the following from President C. H. Clapp, of Montana State University:

"I think the type of stimulation to real creative effort that your scholarship will give is most commendable, and the State University of Montana will be very glad to participate in the scholarship contest.

New Chicago Theatre
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 27.—Max Balaban and Morris Katz of Balaban & Katz, owners of the Chicago, Tivoli, Riviera and Central Park theatres, and lessees of the Roosevelt theatre, Chicago, have announced their intention of erecting an Egyptian theatre in Chicago similar to Grauman's Hollywood. The two Chicago exhibitors are spending some time at the studios.
You Say You’re a Warner Star? Let’s See Your Fingerprint

Almost every girl who comes afoot of the law poses as a motion picture actress, a practice which casts a stigma upon the industry. Sam and Jack Warner, production managers of Warner Brothers, have evolved a plan which they believe will check this practice to a great extent. Players engaged for the company’s eighteen “screen classics” will carry small cases containing photographs and fingerprints for identification purposes. Those players who have appeared in “The Beautiful and Damned,” “Little Church Around the Corner” and “Brass” have endorsed the idea. Above left: Monte Blue registering his fingerprints; right: the identification page. Below, right: Claire Windsor displaying the small case carried for identification purposes.

Two interesting figures in picture-land. June Mathis, recently appointed editorial director by Goldwyn, and Erich von Stroheim, engaged to direct features for the company.

Richard Walton Tully who becomes production manager of two new companies which will produce features for First National. These two units are in addition to his own company which will start soon the adaptation of "Trilby."

Earl J. Hudson, well known throughout the industry and long a member of the executive staff of First National, will be associated with Mr. Tully as business manager of the two new units. Mr. Tully, Mr. Hudson and others associated with the producer, arrived in Los Angeles last week to begin production activities.

Andree Lafayette, the French beauty who has arrived in Los Angeles to play the role of Trilby in Richard Walton Tully’s screen production of that name. James Young will direct her in the feature.

The comedian showed them on the Metro lot how he gazed at the Statue of Liberty on his arrival from Italy.

Bull Montana, star in the Metro-Stromberg comedy, "Glad Rags," as he looked seventeen years ago when he arrived in U. S.

Dorothy Mackaill, little English actress, whose work as the blind girl in the First National feature, "Mighty Lak a Rose," has been highly commended in film circles, says that in spite of this she must wait three years before she is supremely happy. Her greatest ambition is to be an American citizen. She has been in this country two and a half years and last week she took out her first naturalization papers.

The beautiful Maryon Aye is the latest to put her signature on a Principal Pictures contract. She will have important roles in forthcoming pictures produced by Lesser organization.

Mae Murray in two striking poses in scenes from her newest attraction, "Jazzmania," the Tiffany production which Metro is now distributing. Robert Z. Leonard directed and is presenting the feature. A review of this picture was published in the March 3 issue of the "Herald."

John Barrymore, the distinguished screen and stage star, who has been engaged by Warner Brothers for the featured role in "Beau Brummel," the successful stage play by Clyde Fitch.

Norman Kerry's work in leading male role in "Merry-Go-Round," forthcoming Universal-Jewel attraction, has won him five year contract with Universal Pictures. He will next be featured in role of "Phoebus" in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." Following this, according to Universal, he will be starred in his own right. Kerry has been in pictures a number of years, having had important parts in "Soldiers of Fortune" and other films.

The WEEK in NEW YORK

COPYIES of the uniform contract are in demand among the members of the A. M. P. A. since Charles L. O'Reilly addressed them at their regular lunchon last week. Prior to that the publicity and advertising men figured that the contract affected them only in an indirect way. They changed their minds after hearing the president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York, and now they are coming up on the contract.

The clauses most affecting the advertising men, Mr. O'Reilly said, were sections Twelve and Sixteen. The second clause of section twelve provides that in all advertising and publicity the exhibitor shall adhere to the form of announcement contained in the advertising matter furnished by the distributor.

This, according to Mr. O'Reilly, will do away with a lot of ill-advised advertising and publicity which finds its way to the public from the hands of a certain class of exhibitors who think they can outwit the box office by using advertising and publicity furnished by the company. No honest exhibitor, who wants to play fair with his public, need fear this clause, said Mr. O'Reilly.

This clause, he said, was of especial importance to the advertising men, in that it forced them to be still more on their guard in the matter of writing honest publicity and advertising. Section sixteen provides that all advertising matter used by the exhibitor in connection with the exhibition of photographs furnished from or under the distributor and must not be sold, leased or given away by the exhibitor.

This, Mr. O'Reilly said, referred chiefly to lobby stands, paper, etc., much of which as now used is doing an exhibitor more harm than good. He made the assertion that practically all of mounted paper now in use is stolen goods, and that honest exhibitors need fear this clause no more than clause Twelve.

Mr. O'Reilly then paid a high tribute to Billy Hays for the part he had in bringing about the adoption of the contract, which with all was said, was not much better than anything ever offered to the exhibitors, and any man with honest interest in his business could not fail to appreciate it.

Incidentally, Mr. O'Reilly bitterly as-sailed the "peanut politicians" who were staking up agitation against the contract, and stated that it was the policy of "peanut politics" which was responsible for the disorganized condition of the exhibitors of the country today.

PETE SMITH, after spending some months letting the wide, wide world know that "Robin Hood" was a good enough man to spend money to see, has folded his tent and silently departed for the wilds of Los Angeles. As Pete boarded the Century last Saturday he was heard to say: "It is really worth while to stay away from Los Angeles for five months. The longed-for stay away is the more I appreciate getting home again."

************

And now about another of those coast guys: Every time HARRY WILSON comes to town, he is impounded by trade press people for his picture, and Harry says, and we'll let it go at that even if our memory doesn't serve us that way. And now Harry comes to bat with this:

"Last week I mustered sufficient courage to attend the private rooms of our still many of our old friends for the pictures which I take pleasure in sending you. Of course, I had to give the photographer a bottle of gin to make me look handsome, so I look first for one that has been proven that the lens of the camera does lie."

After a halt in the photo I am not prepared to go on record that the camera lies. And where does he get off at when he "takes pleasure in sending" along a picture of a bandit?

MAUD ROBINSON TOOMBS, the demon press agent, has qualified as Yojeman Detective, first class, and is about to pin a medal on herself. Recently a bold bad burglar got into the habit of robbing Maud Robinson's apartment. Recalling the "Experts of Yojeman Territory", a famous detective now performing for Universal, Maud Robinson evoked a trail for the thief.

With all the secretiveness and care of a press agent welcoming a cinema star he planned a trip out of town. It worked. He vanished and she found him in a couple of detectives, and standing by, surprised "John Smith, colored," in the apartment getting ready to take up the rugs and close down the autographed pictures of Baby Peggy and other articles of value.

"John Smith, colored," was escorted to the hoosegow, and later sentenced to three years for burglary. Mrs. Toombs says she qualified for the detective role by practicing three years with her typewriter until it lands in print.

NED HOLMES, exploitation chief for First National, was the busy man last Saturday. From early in the morning until the office closed for the day he constituted himself a reception committee to receive the almost constant procession of messenger boys bearing telegrams congratulating Ned on the first anniversary of the opening of the exploitation department.

And many contend that it was all wrong. The wires should have congratulated First National on the acquisition of Ned Holmes.

FRED BREEN, the clever cartoonist who has been making good pictures for First National for a long time past, has now gone out on his own. He has established offices at 25 West 46th street and will conduct a free lance art department.

MORRIS RYKISN, who is now dealing publicity and advertising for the Al Lichtman production office, has adopted a new slogan. After delving into the archives he has discovered that Lichtman had eight pictures last year and eight publicities. Mrs. Lichtman says his new slogan is "Fewer Pictures."

John S. Spargo.

Remember the jokes about actors being stranded? Well, when Frank Borzage was stranded in Los Angeles about eight years ago he couldn't get even one laugh out of the fact that he was broke and far from home. Now he is one of the important directors of the industry and is making a series of pictures for the First National.

Borzage was born in Salt Lake City. At fourteen he left the mining industry to take care of himself when he prepared to stir the world with his acting. He went barnstorming. Besides acting, he helped the show along by ballyhooing and other odd jobs that would lure the good town folks into the theatre. He was stranded many times but always succeeded in getting back home until he was stranded in Los Angeles. Then he decided he would not even try to get back to Salt Lake. He had heard much about the movies. He got a job as extra at the Universal lot. Then he went to see Wilson Ince. Mr. Ince told him: "You're not a character man. You're a leading man. Wait around."

Borzage was still living on the lean of the land. His clothes were so bad that he was hoping Mr. Ince would cast him as a "bum." But Mr. Ince didn't. He cast him as a "stage door Johnny." Borzage was perplexed. He had no clothes for the job. A friend took him to a tailor. He ordered $1,000 worth of fine clothes. (To be paid, you know, weekly.) Joyously he opened his envelope at the end of the first week. He received—thirty-five dollars! Thirty-five dollars! and he had one thousand dollars' worth of clothes on his hands. He soon got a raise to fifty. Borzage remained with Ince two years and a half.

He rose quickly. His salary increased. His clothing debt faded. And what is more important he still has some of the clothes. He then graduated to Cosmopolitan. Most folks know the rest.

Now he's his own boss. He and Arthur Jacobs will do the kind of pictures that they believe will have a wide public appeal. His first will be "Tarrays," from the magazine story by Dana Burnett. Borzage and Jacobs are now on the coast.
Rothafel Back From Vacation in England; Found Friendly Spirit
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—S. L. Rothafel of the Capitol theatre has returned from a brief vacation to England. He spent four days in London and declares that the outstanding impression of his short visit was the cordiality and friendly feeling existing toward the American film industry.

"The bugaboo of antipathy toward American films is unfounded," he said. "The spirit of cordiality they showed was marvelous and serves to remind us that British film interests are trying to boycott American productions. They received me simply as one of them and gave me an ovation I shall never forget."

Mr. Rothafel observed that the majority of the popular films current in London were American films. "However, there is no reason," he qualifies, "why the English should not make as good films as we do. Perhaps the reason that they have not done so heretofore is due to the fact that their directors do not as a class quite rank with ours. The actors are equally as good as ours and the Gaumont plant I went through was one of the most remarkable printing plants I have ever seen."

Radio Cuts Attendance At Eastern Playhouses
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 27.—Owners of motion picture houses in this section of the state are frank in saying that there are indications that their business has been hurt by the present radio craze. One exhibitor claimed that radios had decreased his经营理念 by fully ten percent. Residential theatres are being particularly hard hit.

The radio craze hit Albany and Troy particularly on account of the nearby broadcasting stations of Schenectady and Troy, which enables the nearby towns to pick up by ear, without any loss of signal, the cheapest of homemade sets. There are thousands of such sets in this section of the state.

Claims Perfection of Color Picture Process
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—P. D. Brewster, engineer and inventor of East Orange, N. J., claims he has perfected his pastel color photography and challenges anyone to prove that he cannot reproduce exactly the natural color of all kinds of tone and texture.

In photography by the Brewster process a special camera, containing two special negatives but only one lens, is used. An ordinary color machine is used in projecting the picture.

Poses as Roy Stewart
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 27.—Word has been received at Universal from its Washington office that a man posing as Roy Stewart of Universal, has been operating in and around Washington and attempting to cash checks for various amounts. President Carl Laemmle has issued a letter of warning and taken steps to apprehend the impostor.

Tully Directing Production Of New First National Units

Earl Hudson Goes to Coast as Business Manager Of Companies—French Beauty to Star In Production of "Trilby"
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, February 27.—There have been many rumors about Richard Walton Tully's official status with First National. To set at rest all of these reports, the majority of which were unfounded, First National has issued an official announcement on Mr. Tully's new association with the company.

The producer is to make two more pictures for the distributing company, according to Harold A. Rowland, general manager of First National, and in addition he becomes production manager of two new units which will produce a number of films from popular novels and stage plays.

Hudson Becomes Business Manager of Companies

Earl J. Hudson, long a member of the executive staff of First National, has been appointed business manager of the two companies. He will be located at production headquarters on the West Coast. Both Mr. Tully and Mr. Hudson will begin immediately on Louis Film Salesmen's Club: Jack McBrine of Paramount; Claudio McKean of Fox; Bob Werth of Metro, Lew Bent, Edward Asher, of DeMille, Ralph Paramount, and U. M. Dailey of W. H. Hodgkinson. Tom McKean of F. B. O. is president and Lester Bona of First National is secretary.

Cabanne Heads Trust Estate to Make Film
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

ST. LOUIS, MO, Feb. 27.—William Christy Cabanne, director, has interested many prominent St. Louis business men in a $50,000 trust estate to produce a special picture in New York City. If the production is successful, Cabanne plans to open a motion picture studio in St. Louis to be backed by a local company.

He stated a few days ago that approximately $58,000 of the trust estate stock has already been subscribed and he hopes to complete negotiations in time to start production about May 1.

The trust agreement provides that Cabanne's life is to be insured for $250,000. The trustees shall have sole power in managing the enterprise. It will be known as the William Christy Cabanne Motion Picture Trust, Limited. The trustees are Cabanne, Col. George W. Goode and Former United States District Judge Henry S. Priest.

"Get-Together" Parties Started by Exchanges
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

KANSAS CITY, MO, Feb. 27.—More than 300 employees of Kansas City film exchanges staged the first of a series of "get-together" parties last week. Meeting at Hollywood, a cafe in the heart of the film colony, poster clergies, managers, assistant managers and all who went to Independence, a suburb of Kansas City, Saturday night, where a memorable party was staged in an old stone mansion.

Lee D. Balsley, Universal exploitation man, and Miss Mabel Warren, secretary of the Kansas City Film Board, sponsored the party, which probably will become a monthly affair.
Lent Programs Are Suggested By Review Board

Gives Exhibitors Opportunity to Win Friendship of Local Church Congregations

A MOVEMENT has been launched by the National Committee for Better Films of the National Board of Review, the purpose of which is to create a closer bond of friendship between the theatre and the church. As a basis of this campaign, the National Committee has selected a list of pictures "stimulative of religious thought and reading" for presentation during Lent and Religious Book Week, March 4 to 10.

In this campaign, the National Committee is cooperating with the religious book week committee of the New York Association of Book Publishers, which is circulating the National Committee's list of pictures among thousands of librarians, booksellers, churches and schools.

The movement has been commended highly by prominent religious workers, among them being Dean Charles N. Lathrop, executive secretary of the Christian social service department of the protestant Episcopal church, who writes: "I have been looking over the list of motion pictures which the National Committee for Better Films is suggesting for use during Religious Book Week and I feel that they brought together a remarkably fine collection of religious subjects. I not only want to recommend them but I want to express my enthusiastic appreciation of this effort and my earnest desire to do everything I can to make the plan for the use of those pictures during Religious Book Week, March 4-10 and the balance of Lent, a huge success."

MONEY MAKING IDEAS Which Have Been Used Successfully by Exhibitors to Build Up Their Patronage

By FRED HINDS
(Cresco theatre, Cresco, Ia.)

The film bill was cut in two here by changing every other day in stead of everyday, without materially affecting patronage. We did this in 1921 and were probably one of the first theatres similarly situated to do it, although it is quite general at the present time.

We tried a dozen ways of building up our two weak nights, but the only one which proved successful was our contract for "In the Days of Buffalo Bill." Up to the time we started this serial, the days had never paid expenses.

Now they are showing a profit.

By ROY W. ADAMS
(Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.)

"Family Night" promised too much trouble for the doorman, so instead I have secured the co-operation of the merchants here in giving with each dollar in trade a coupon good for reduced admission on Tuesday or Thursday, my weakest nights. This is not a new idea; other exhibitors have used it before, and two years ago I worked a modification of the same plan with good results. I just planted this scheme and will report on it later.

Two Albany Theatres Will Be Discontinued
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 27.—Two of the city's smaller motion picture houses will shortly close their doors. The Broadway, a downtown house, which has been run for several years by Weidman brothers, closed February 24, and will be remodeled into a clothing house.

The Pearl operated by Walter Powers, and almost directly across the street from the larger Colonial, is also to give way to a business block.

Offers New Tax Plan
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

JEFFERSON CITY, MO., Feb. 27.—A bill which will prove costly to the exhibitors of the state was introduced in the Missouri senate by Senator Gordon of Clay County. The proposed bill would assess a license fee not less than 10 cents a square foot of billboard space annually. The tax would be collected by the city or town collector, who would be required to issue license tags to be placed on the billboards licensed. The owners and operators of billboards would be required to give a surety bond that the billboards would be properly constructed and maintained in a safe condition.

Favor S. R. O. Measure

JEFFERSON CITY, MO., Feb. 27.—Senator Fickett's bill prohibiting the sale of theatre tickets after every seat has been disposed of was reported favorably by the committee. A similar measure has been approved by a house committee.

Kill Chain Theatre Bill
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

JEFFERSON CITY, MO., Feb. 27.—The private corporations committee of the Missouri house of representatives has voted to kill the chain-store bill designed to legislate out of existence chain stores, restaurants, theatres, etc., in Missouri through a system of exorbitant licenses. The committee voted 5 to 2. A duplicate measure introduced in the senate by Senator Irwin of Jefferson City was reported favorably by the senate committee without argument. In view of the house committee action it is doubtful whether it will be called up.

OLYMPIA, WASH., Feb. 27.—The senate committee on revenue and taxation has introduced a measure providing for a tax of 10 per cent on all theatre tickets for the purpose of raising $1,250,000 annually for the common school funds of the state.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 27—Senator Greene of Newport has introduced a bill to legalize Sunday opening of theatres. It has been referred to the judiciary committee.
THE THEATRE
A department of practical showmanship

"Laugh Week" Is Anybody's Money Getter

"Laugh Week," invented and directed on a national scale by Arthur S. Kane, has been stepped down to local magnitude and applied profitably by H. A. McClure, Strand theatre, Emporia, Kan., whose Theatre Letter giving details, with illustrations, is presented this week. As modified, the idea is a practically sure money-getter for the first showman in every community to adapt it.

Mr. McClure's localized adaptation of the idea permits wide range of picture selection and includes a newspaper advertisement that should win prominent position in practically any publication. There is no expense except such as is normally incurred in such extra advertising as may be done for the occasion.

Ready money ideas that will work out as satisfactorily for the big and little theatre, in whatever community, are few and should be preserved. The "Laugh Week" suggested by exhibitors using the localized "Laugh Week" use the prefix, "First Annual," and make it a regular feature of house policy.

Chicago Proves Rothstein Plan Is Practicable

Official Chicago's unprecedented cooperation with Barbee's Loop theatre in the exploitation of "The Third Alarm" after the plan outlined by Nat Rothstein, F. B. O. exploitation chief, proves conclusively the soundness of the group appeal campaign theory of which Mr. Rothstein properly may be called the leading exponent. It is generally conceded among exploitation experts that "what works in Chicago will work anywhere."

"The Third Alarm" ran two weeks at Barbee's, during which time Louis Kramer of the F. B. O. Chicago office worked hand in hand with Fire Commissioner John F. Cullerton in promoting many advertising feats not previously recorded. A fire parade of old and new apparatus was given at two hour intervals; a fire boat made a demonstration; a "Third Alarm" fire drill was held in all the schools; fire boxes and hydrants bore cards signed by the commissioner; the first curb box house in city history was permitted; Mr. Kramer directed the publicity of Commissioner Cullerton's co-incident fire prevention campaign.

Several pictures showing aspects of the campaign are reproduced upon subsequent pages. The theatre business report attests the value of the work done, and the coming week is to work for the box offices of theatres in the territory to play the picture later.

Theatre Report

Better Theatre Platform No. 12

Staff Credit

Nobody advertises "The Pilgrim" without mentioning Charlie Chaplin. Many exhibitors advertise projection, music, service, without mention of staff "stars," accountable for same. There is no good reason for the discrepancy.

Showmen concealing the identities of those whose theatre's greatest assets, good publicity, is a matter of(customary. As a matter of fact the good staff "star" deserves a better salary than one whose work is mediocre. Business long ago learned that special talent warranted special compensation. The antiquated fallacy that denial of its claim is in any sense economy exists today in but a few isolated quarters.

No less evident is the fact that the theatre which credits its "stars" reaps a no less rich and much more definite reputation for merit than the house that hides the component lights of its constellation under the bushel of a theatre signature.

While a reputation for good pictures is always the theatre's greatest asset, good theatre presentation of good pictures is the greatest secondary contributor to that reputation. Advertising that separates the weak from the good in the public mind, fixing where due credit and the responsibility that goes with it, at once magnifies the total effect and provides outlet for the unavoidable occasional and else wise serious "kick."

On the Bill at The Stratford

The Stratford, located in one of Chicago's most densely populated residential sections, must fashion its program to meet the requirements of a clientele embracing practically the whole scale of humanity. The following is its bill for the week beginning February 26:

2. "Current News Events."
3. "Melody of Popular Italian Melodies."
4. "New Leather Pushers."
5. "Al Swee't Melodies Singing Band."

The week's program is representative of the entertainment consistently offered by this theatre in its essentially cosmopolitan patronage.

Rea Suggests Symposium on Exchange Men

George Rea writes:

"There is always talk about the producer, the exhibitor, the exploit-eer, the musician, the projectionist, the what-not, but how seldom do you ever hear of the exchange manager, or is he not the exhibitor's best friend? . . . Is he not the one that has the theatre at heart more than anyone else next to the exhibi- tor? . . . I'd love to hear through the 'Herald' more about the exchange manager from exhibitors."

Mr. Rea's Theatre Letter is given complete on page 44 of this issue. In it he enumerates more or less commonly rendered exhibitors by exchange managers, closing with a glowing tribute to his "pick of exchange managers."

As is customary, The Theatre forwards Mr. Rea's suggestion to readers for such disposition as is deemed warranted.

Crandall Staff Triumphs Over Shallow Stage

Without stage equipment and with merely a six foot clearway and two small side stages at its disposal, the staff of Harry M. Crandall's Metropolitan theatre, Washington, directed by John J. Payette, scored a distinct victory in the production of prologues for "Skin Deep" and "Oliver Twist." Photographs reproduced in the "Herald" for March 3 showed results.

For "Oliver Twist," a "Dickens' Reverie" was staged, opening disclosing the author at his writing table visualizing the story, characters, which were depicted by players. For "Skin Deep" a Flanders dug-out was depicted in one panel, a doughboy quartette singing the songs popular in war time, and a Red Cross nurse appearing in the opposite panel. The nurse was impersonated by Miss Evelyn C. Lewis, who represented Washington at the Atlantic City pageant last year. Nelson B. Bell, a member of the Crandall organization who had acted as a judge in her selection, obtained her cooperation.

The Metropolitan's problem is one faced by many theatres built solely with picture requirements in mind. The manner in which the Crandall staff has overcome these obstacles to prologues thus placed in its way is of especial interest to theatres of this type, although houses with full stage equipment may find it good business to utilize similar methods at intervals by way of variety.
Robinson Hood Boys of Chivalry was an order organized by Pete Smith to exploit "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" during the run at the Pitt theatre, Pittsburgh. They were everywhere, including in the newspapers.

East

United States, a big country, admits of interesting territorial exploitation study.

Consider the East:

- Electric lights in abundance few posters.
- Trick publicity in wide assortment.
- Small newspaper advertisements.
- Prestige policy.
- Elaborate presentation.
- Premieres pomp.
- Second run oblivion.
- Big auditoriums.
- Small lobbies.
- Low grade ballyhoo.
- Quick perception of box office values.
- Money wisdom.

So might a "modern" subtitle writer describe the film theatricals of the New York sector.

On Stage or in Film "Peg o' My Heart" draws. Photo shows the Metro picture's effect on the New York Capitol sales.

Poor Men's Wives," Lichtman. Was advertised as above in the lights of the Criterion theatre, New York. It's a live title.

The Tie-Up Direct between First National's "Lorna Doone," Towneau production, and the National Biscuit Company's production, as worked out in New York. The corner is 42nd Street and Sixth Avenue.
EVERY OLD HOMESTEAD should have a radio, says the window display obtained by the Clinton theatre, Plattsburgh, N. Y., for the Paramount production. As radio is here, the thing to do is to make it work.

OMAR WORE A TURBAN, but hats advertised "Omar the Tentmaker," First National, for the Garrick, Duluth, as above.

OMAR WORE A TURBAN, but hats advertised "Omar the Tentmaker," First National, for the Garrick, Duluth, as above.

West

Los Angeles, most prominent Western city filmatically, necessarily colors a resume of Western showmanship.

Such a resume might read:

Big newspaper displays...successful theatre press agents...hard work...unflagging interest...novel ideas...extended runs...exploited orchestras...costly street ballyhoo...quiet lobbies...mass appeal...widespread cooperative advertising drives...star emphasis...expensive prologues...picture pre-eminence...short subject exploitation...profitable bombast.

The West proves its youth in the enthusiastic seriousness which is its showmanship's chief characteristic.

LITHOGRAPHIC KICK was applied to the front of the DeLuxe, Hutchinson, Kan., as above for Warner Brothers' "Rags to Riches."

"MADAM I AM ADAM," which reads either way, has nothing to do with this, the first window on Paramount's "Adam's Rib," by the Paramount-Empress, Salt Lake City, but suggests a newspaper feature of some promise.

HOTTENTOT COLLARS are being marketed by the Lion collar people, The Kinema theatre, Los Angeles, capitalized the fact in this window display while the First National picture, "The Hottentot," was in run.
BOOKS, BOOKS, BOOKS! Theatre news is full of them. This book window was used in Albany for the Paramount-Cosmopolitan picture, “When Knighthood Was in Flower,” shown at the Leland theatre.

AUSTRALIA AGAIN shows how it advertises pictures. The theatre is Hoyt’s, at Sydney, and the picture is Fox’s “The Yosemite Trail.” Note the characteristic use of the boxed cutouts. America might try that out.

South

A comparatively unspotted territory, the South runs almost as “solid” in its showmanship as in its politics.

It is marked by:

- Original ideas
- Practicality
- Standardization of methods
- Even progress
- Brilliant lobbies
- Strict newspaper copy
- Absence of hokum
- General initiative
- Dignified presentation
- Personal appeal
- Business methods
- Program unity
- Experience

Unexcited seizure upon new methods, calm direction of business toward profit, sane showmanship, express the theatre of the Southland adequately.

EXHIBITORS HERALD

CHICAGO'S FIRE COMMISSIONER extended invaluable aid to J. J. Sampson, manager, and Louis Kramer, exploitation representative, of the F. B. O. exchange in exploiting "The Third Alarm" at Barbee's Loop theatre.

ANCIENT APPARATUS loaned by the Chicago Fire Department was permitted to stand in front of Barbee's for two weeks. The lobby was insured for $5,000. Louis Kramer directed fire department publicity in return gratis.

MORE BOOK STUFF. This time the picture is Goldwyn's "The Christian," and the theatre the Wells, at Norfolk, Va.

Central

Central United States, dotted with rival industrial centers, presents in its theatre a singular uniformity. Frequent intercourse may explain it.

These things obtain:
Progressive spirit...sharp competition...big auditoriums with big lobbies...extravagant exploitation...varying newspaper copy...changeable program policy...read acceptance of new ideas...prompt abandonment of the obsolete...thermometrical admission scale...short runs...chronic excitement...speed...elaborate presentation...business impatience.

Showmanship fairly "hums" in this sector.

FOR THE FIRST TIME in Chicago a theatre, Barbee's, was permitted a special curb box office. See story on first page.

A REAL STRANGERS' BANQUET attended by stage celebrities and others in the city gave foundation for much publicity when the State, Pittsburgh, played Goldwyn's picture of that title.

CHICAGO'S FILM ROW is decorated currently by this exchange window display for Hodkinson's feature, "Down to the Sea in Ships." It is one of the best viewed recently in this much exploited sector.
Rea Suggests Symposium on Exchange Men

George Rea, most prolific Theatre Letter writer, this week states his belief that too much talk is heard about this, that, and the other figure in the business and too little about the exchange manager, whom he terms "the exhibitor's best friend." Mr. Rea adds the suggestion that other journals voice their sentiments through "Herald" columns.

THEATRE EDITOR,
EXHIBITORS HERALD,
DEAR SIR:

There is always talk about the producer, the exhibitor, the exploiter, the manager, the projectionist, the what-not, but how seldom do you ever hear of the exchange manager.

Is he not the exhibitor's best friend? If you have a poor print, or a picture flops, or anything else isn't just right, isn't he the one that has to hear your kicks and help to bear your troubles? Is he not the one that has the theatre at heart more than anyone else next to the exhibitor? When you want cooperation, or a picture for a private show, who gives the exhibitor this? and countless other things?

These men are nearly all the finest fellows in the land. I'd love to hear through the "Herald" more about the exchange manager from exhibitors.

And here is my pick of exchange manager—Mr. M. A. Malligan, Paramount office, Cincinnati, O. A real prince if there ever was one. There is nothing within reason that he won't do for the exhibitor. He is a real live-wire showman and knows your troubles and your joys. Cooperation is his middle name. A visit to his office is as good as a week's vacation. You come away running over with pep. And he's as honest as the day is long.

GEORGE REA.

Colonial theatre, Washington, C. H. O.

DEAR MR. REA:

With the "exploiter" discussion not yet definitely disposed of, with the mails groaning under the burden of exhibitor letters on the uniform contract and exhibitor-distribution, with the "Box Office Record" going to press and new Theatre Letter writers springing up every side, we present your letter with some concern for the already sorely taxed capacity of Heraldo columns. But that's our worry. The topic is unquestionably a live one, hence is passed along in the customary manner. The circle may be depended upon to dispose of it in the usual thorough and decisive fashion.—W. R. W.

The best shot subjects cost more money, for the very good reason that they are worth it. They can be sold to the public on the same principle.

A few exhibitors have tried it with striking results. The policy should be general.

Money for All
In Individual
"Laugh Week"

Here's a money idea for everybody, told better than we can tell it by its creator in his first (we hope not last) Theatre Letter. We won't delay delivery of it to compose a more elaborate introduction.

Here's to:
THEATRE EDITOR,
EXHIBITORS HERALD,
DEAR SIR:

Herewith attached a window card and our opening ad on "Laugh Week." We used this to buck a big revival meeting and it went over with a bang.

We secured a story in the paper stating that we were going to station a checker in the theatre to check the number of laughs and unless a hundred were registered at HALF PAGE ad by E. E. Bair on “When Knighthood Was in Flower,” Paramount-Cosmopolitan, referred to in his Theatre Letter, presented this week. Mr. Bair recently joined the circle of “Herald” Theatre Letter writers.

Have been closed most of the winter, due to diptheria quarantine. This has been lifted, but there is yet so much sickness, bad roads, and so many basketball games (my deathly competitor) that it is hardly worth while for me to keep open once a week.

Please advise when my subscription to the Herald expires as in or out of the picture game, I cannot be without it.

E. M. Milhon,
Cozy theatre, Hazelwood, Ind.

DEAR MR. MILHON:

You increase our amazement. It is dumfounding enough that a theatre may be operated in a city the size of Hazelwood, but that the program of such a theatre should contain as many advertisements as even the most startling. Even with Monrovia to work with, we don’t see how you do it.

We have reproduced the inside of your program so that other showmen who sell program space could have it as an inspiration. Your letter, disclosing the obstacles over which you have triumphed, should operate similarly. In closing we are moved to wonder what you could accomplish in a regular man’s sized community. Ever think of trying it?—W. R. W.

Wodetsyk Uses Reverse Angle for Valentino

J. C. Wodetsyk, Regent theatre, Kalamazoo, new Theatre Letter writer, side-stepped the obviously difficult task of finding an exploitation man to double for Rodolph Valentino by reversing the process and hiring one to advertise himself as not Valentino. The reverse English touch is good. The photo shows how it was worked out.

Mr. Wodetsyk’s first Theatre Letter reads:

THEATRE EDITOR, EXHIBITORS HERALD.

Dear Sir:

Am enclosing some material and trust same or part of it may prove interesting enough for your valuable column.

I might add that I look forward to the exploitation photos in the Herald regularly and find them of mutual benefit.

I have been a circus press agent, managed and ahead of recognized New York theatrical productions, and was with the old World Film Corporation as well as a num-

ADVERTISING by reverse English the presence of “All Night” at the Regent, Kalamazoo. Read Mr. Wodetsky’s letter for details.

A few days ago I mailed you photos, etc., on the opening of the New State theatre, this city, and I trust you have received same by this time. I am enclosing a copy of my box office statement and will ask you to pass judgment on same.

Also notice that I am “joining the force” which has certainly built up “What the Picture Did for Me.” Expect more of this stuff. Also find enclosed half page ad on “Knighthood.”

E. E. BAI R
New State theatre, U. Riehsville, O.

DEAR MR. BAIR:
Woe is us. You must have forgotten to enclose the statement. Anyway, it didn't arrive, so we can't pronounce it this, that or the other. But we can, and do, welcome your report to “What the Picture Did for Me.” and your half page ad, which is reproduced herewith. We'd like more ad both reports and advertisements frequently.

Of course by this time you've received and read the copy that had your previous contributions in them. Very glad to make you a member in good standing of “the force.”—W. R. W.

Norfolk Tries Window Display On “Christian”

Window displays based on book's figure with increasing prominence in the theatre correspondence of the day. The following letter is illustrated by a photograph reproduced on page 43.

THEATRE EDITOR, EXHIBITORS HERALD.

Dear Sir:
Enclosed is a photograph of one of our window tie-ups on Goldwyn's “The Christian,” which we played a week beginning February 13th. We charged 35 and 50 for this picture so we used extra advertising and exploitation. We used plenty of 24, 6, 3 and 1-sheets, besides thousands of heralds and a special souvenir book mark. We had the assistance of Goldwyner Wm. N. Robson. The press representative of the Wells interests, Mr. Ray Lewis, assisted in the campaign, which was in charge of this office and Abie Leon, assistant manager of the Wells theatre.

The book marks were distributed through the schools to every pupil in Norfolk and surrounding towns. Mr. Lewis took advantage of the controversy between Bishop Manning and Dr. Grant in New York to point out the fine acting of Richard Dix in “The Christian.” We used various other devices, such as having the billing of the show imprinted on restaurant menus, etc.

This book store is on the main corner of town. We used teasers in the papers three days before we started regular advertising.

J. J. MADDEN
Wells theatre, Norfolk, Va.

DEAR MR. MADDEN:
The picture of your window display is reproduced upon page 43, this issue. Thank you for the same, and for the letter. Write again.—W. R. W.
SHORT SUBJECTS

"Message of Coue" Draws Big Display

"The Message of Emile Coue," Educational short subject, drew more space in last week's Chicago papers than any other single film production.

It should.

If it hadn't it might be concluded that since the short subject is a lost project—which it isn't.

Balaban and Katz are using the subject beginning February 26 at the Chicago, Tivoli, Riviera and Central Park theatres, located respectively downtown, South, North and West. First copy broke the preceding week when substantial announcement of the fact was appended to the regular advertisements for these theatres.

The attraction divvies space with the remainder of the programs in the current ads and a special ad, two pages deep, not in the amusement section, is given over entirely to the picture.

The recent series of four lectures at Orchestra Hall was probably the best attended performance of any kind ever given in Chicago. Thousands went to Orchestra Hall and waited in vain for a possible chance to buy a ticket at a premium. Stage space was sold until the speaker was left barely elbow room. Holders of tickets were offered as high as $100 for their privileges.

The picture will collect a great deal of this overflow money without a doubt.

And in other communities where the French chemist did not appear it is probable that no less ready sale awaits the attraction.

On a purely box office basis the attraction is clearly a landmark in short subjects. In other cities as well as Chicago exhibitors have displayed full realization of its commercial value and are exploiting it on similar scale.

It is easily the greatest short subject "bet" to date. If it teaches exhibitors the value of short subject exploitation it will be infinitely greater. —

Pathe Man Gives Clue To Serial Popularity

The secret of serial popularity is told succinctly by Edgar O. Brooks, serial sales manager for Pathe, in the following statement:

"No form of motion picture can outclass the fifteen episode serial in essentials and cut deepest into human life and are therefore of paramount interest from day to day. Eagerness for knowledge about 'what will happen to-morrow,' or next "A" is a common desire which never relaxes its efforts toward satisfaction.

Journalism—the daily newspapers—is so founded on that rock, and in fiction, printed or pictured on the screen, no interest is sustained like the interest in the expertly arranged story 'to be continued in our next.'" —

Mayor Attests News Reel Aid

Unique tribute to the influence of the newscast upon public relations of the nation is paid Fox News in the following letter to Fox Film corporation from E. R. Cockrell, mayor of Fort Worth:

Greatly appreciate:

I am taking this means of expressing to you my sincere appreciation of your work in putting our city on the public map and of the publicity which you have given has been of high class in every respect, and I consider that the Fox Film Corporation has done much toward the civic development of Fort Worth. You have repeatedly shown yourself to be wide awake and entirely in sympathy with every forward-looking, progressive step which has been taken by the city in its administration, including, a big police review, which was photographed in parade. I am fully recommendable when you accompanied the West Texas Chamber of Commerce representatives to Mexico City last year. You gained further favorable mention for this section when you exploited your famous Honey Ball under your direction and also when you were awarded a handsome medal for producing the best animated short film of 1922. I am looking forward to seeing our views of your modern Sewage Disposal plant now under construction which you recently photographed. I am anxious of you my friends of any service possible to you and your company, and with warmest personal regards, I am:

Sincerely yours,

NEWSPICTURES

DIGEST of PICTURES of the WEEK

Did you know that there are over 300,000 people employed steadily in all branches of the picture industry; that the wages paid employees annually at the studios amount to over $75,000,000 and the approximate cost of pictures produced last year amounted to $200,000,000? More than 600 feature films were produced during 1922 and 1,500 short subjects, news reels and scenes. Of these about 84 per cent were made in California; 12 per cent in New York and 4 per cent elsewhere in the United States.

It is estimated 50,000,000 persons attend motion picture shows every week in the 15,000 theatres now operated. The seating capacity for one show is 7,605,000 of these 15,000 houses. The paid admissions amount to $520,000,000 annually. The number of persons employed in film theatres is 105,000. The average number of reels per show is eight. The average number of houses running six or seven days a week is 9,000, while about 1,500 are open four or five days and 4,500 only open one to three days.

The average cost of making a feature film is $150,000 with the present high cost of materials and high salaries. The film companies spend annually about $5,000,000 advertising in newspapers and periodicals, and another $2,000,000 for slides, posters and other accessories. It cost $2,000,000 for lithographs and $3,000,000 for other printing and engraving last year.

These are interesting figures and will make valuable data for the exhibitor who wants facts and figures for his local Chamber of Commerce, or Board of Trade. It will give them some idea of the magnitude of the film business.—J. R. M.

"THE WHITE FLOWER" (Paramount) is a colorful tale of Hawaii, written and directed by Julia Crawford Ives, upon the original locations. Betty Compson and a competent cast make of this a sincere and very interesting film. There is a touching love story and several highly dramatic moments that register well.

"THE BUSTER" (Fox) with Dustin Farnum does not boast much originality in plot construction or development. It concerns an Eastern girl who goes to the West and is tamed by a stalwart cowboy, after he whips a villain who has tried to kidnap her. For those who like Westerns and do not concern themselves with the logic or freshness of the story it will fill the bill.

"THE MIDNIGHT GUEST" (Universal) presented with a cast comprising Grace Darmond, Mahlon Hamilton, Clyde Fillmore and Mathilde Brunclage, offers first-rate entertainment of the crook reform variety. It was directed by George Archainbaud and is five reels in length.

"THE BOLTED DOOR" (Universal) with Frank Mayo, Phyllis Haver, Nigel Barry and Kathleen Kirkham, is a well-made screen play with a convincing climax. It was adapted from a story by George Gibbs, and through director William Worthington's direction holds the interest for the five reels.

"THE WOMAN OF BRONZE" (Metro) with Clara Kimball Young, is a poorly-made version of the stage success of Margaret Anglin. While interesting in parts it does not convince, nor win one's sympathy. Quite a disappointment after "Enter Madame," in which star shown.

"THE BISHOP OF THE OZARKS" (F. B. O.) is an adapted prison reform story, written by Milford Howard, who also plays a dual role in the picture. Finis Fox directed, and Derelys Perdue, a newcomer, is the heroine. The story is long drawn out and quite amateurish in spots.

Above are three scenes from the Rex Ingram production "Where the Pavement Ends," which Metro Pictures Corporation will distribute. The story is by John Russell with Alice Terry and Ramon Novarro in the featured roles.

REVIEWS

BETTY COMPSON IN THE WHITE FLOWER
(PARAMOUNT)

Written and directed by Julia Crawford Ives, this story of Hawaii presents an interesting combination of good acting, scenic beauty and colorful tale. Its greatest merit is the sincerity that pervades the acting, theme and treatment. One of the best vehicles this star has had recently. Six parts.

Betty Compson plays the role of a half-bred Hawaiian girl in "The Flower" a girl who believes in all the superstitions of her forefathers. The picture contains interesting and fascinating scenes of ceremonies and customs. It is drenched in by the Hawaiians, an appealing though not always convincing story and some unusual scenes of an active volcano's crater.

There is a touching love story and Miss Compson is rendered good support by Edmund Lowe, as an American youth; Bob Rutherford; Edward Mandel as John Markham, her father; Leon Barry as Panahi; Arline Pretty, as Ethel Granville, engaged to the American boy; Sylvia Ashton, as Mrs. Bolton; Arthur Hoyt as Bolton and Lilly Phillips. As Bernice Markham. The picture's greatest asset is the excellence of the acting. Both Miss Pretty and Miss Compson commend both sympathy and admiration and hold the interest throughout. Leon Barry made a good villain and Edmund Lowe in the hero role was quite pleasing. The production through is thoroughly effective, the sets are very good and the continuity smooth running. The picture was made in the Hawaiian islands, therefore the atmosphere is correct.

The plot is based on an old superstition, Konia Markham is told by an uncannily forti teller she is to marry the first man who presents her with a white flower. Panahi, in love with Konia, has paid the faiki to tell her fortune thus. However, before Panahi gets to Konia, Rutherford has handed her the bouquet from his pocket. Panahi seeing that Konia is in love with the American, tells her he is already engaged and attempts to break up the match. Konia employs the fortune teller to "pray to death" the girl. Bob is engaged to his real love. With last moment, begs forgiveness, and then finds that the American girl has broken her engagement and is sailing for home. Thus the atmosphere is brought.

The picture made a distinct hit with patrons at McVicker's theatre, Chicago.

NO LUCK

Lloyd Whitlock, a familiar name in a role that calls into play the old dream finish. It got plenty of laughs at the Chicago theater where it was on the bill with "What a Life," a thoroughly enjoyable. His spectacular dancing and the storm, that rivals in intensity the old Homestead and "One Exciting Night" are its outstanding points. Many beautiful sets have been employed and quite a cast appears in the comedian's support in "No Luck."

FRANK MAYO IN THE BOLTED DOOR
(UNIVERSAL)

A well-made screen play with a pleasing and convincing climax. Phyllis Haver, former bathing beauty, appears to advantage opposite the star and is given good support by Nigel Barry and Kathleen Kirkham. Directed by William Worthington from a story by George Gibbs. Five parts.

This is the last of Frank Mayo's Universal productions and no doubt one of his best. The picture offers excellent entertainment although the story is founded on quite a novel with the love affair of a young mechanic and a society girl. It has many interesting moments, however, and ends up with a good climax. The story does not contain much dramatic action, although the final scene is excellent in this respect. The characters are well portrayed in a human and interesting manner, the continuity is good and technically the picture is well produced.

Mayo has the role of Brooke Garriott, the protege of a wealthy man, Oliver Judson, whose niece, Natalie Judson, he wishes Garriott to marry. Natalie, however, is in love with Rene DeLand, a fortune-hunting suitor. At her uncle's death Natalie learns that she must marry Garriott or lose a half interest in the estate. She married Garriott but keeps her boudoir door bolted, continues her flirtation with Rene. The triangle situation becomes more tense. Finally Garriott agrees to give her her freedom and relinquish his share in the estate. He takes Rene into believing that Natalie's fortune has been squandered by lawyers and that she is penniless. Rene's sudden coldness convinces Natalie that Garriott really loves her, and she unbolts the door.

Mayo is excellent in the role of the mechanic, and puts over part with conviction and sincerity. Phyllis Haver was charming and wore many beautiful gowns in the role of Natalie Judson. She plays with spirit and aside from a rather smudgy make-up is pleasant to look at. Nigel Barry scored as the fortune hunter. Rene Christy, who has completed the cast in the role of Judson.

The story was adapted to the screen by Edward Randolph and Chester Kline. Kline's photography was excellent.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG IN WOMAN OF BRONZE
(METRO)

A weak imitation of the stage play of Margaret Anglin. Miss Young does not put the emotion nor feeling into the play that it demands. Adapted by Hope Loring and Louis Lighton from the novel by Henry Eistaemaecher. A Harry Garson production directed by King Vidor. Six parts.

"The Woman of Bronze," with Clara Kimball Young in the leading role, is quite a disappointment after her splendid work in "Enter Madame." Neither the star nor the director seem to have grasped the spirit of the stage play upon which it was adapted. It fails utterly to stir you to the emotional heights expected and lacks the dramatic punch or conviction necessary to put it over.

Clara Kimball Young, as Vivian Hunt, does not win one's sympathy and she does not rise to the highly emotional role. Lloyd Whitlock was fair as the tempestual artist-husband and John Bowers pleasing as Paddy, the friend of Vivian. Katherine McGuire was unsuited to the role of Sylvia, the baby vamp part the screen version required. Edward Kimball played Papa Bonelli well and Edwin Stevens, that splendid character actor. whose death occurred recently, appears in the role of Reggie Morton, father of a shipwrecked crew. This was the best performance of the lot.

Vivian Hunt has been her husband's inspiration in all his work until her cousin Sylvia comes to live with them. Then Leonard, her tempestual husband, falls in love with Sylvia and Vivian is forgotten. Paddy Miles, a friend of the family, helps Vivian in her trouble. After a while Leonard discovers that his real inspiration is Vivian and he comes back to her. She has suffered through his neglect and goes to Italy, where Leonard follows after gaining success and winning a prize, and there is a happy reconciliation.

THE WISE CRACKER
(FOX)

This two reel comedy is built along rather familiar lines. It employs all the old, time-worn gags ever used by Mack Sennett for his followers. It is an Uncle Tom's Cabin play. Si Jenks plays the wise village youth who leaves home and mother to join Lee's troupe. He plays Simon Legree. Old Tom and Liza crossing the ice all in one evening. There are lions and a treadmill finish which vivifies it up somewhat.
MILFORD HOWARD IN BISHOP OF OZARKS
(F. B. O.)

An odd mixture of prison reform, "second sight" and crook reformation in this adapted story by Milford Howard. It was directed by Finis Fox, with scenes laid in Alabama for the most part. Fair program picture. Six reels.

This Film Booking Office feature introduces Dorothy Picoule, a new center of the screen, whose stage name is determined by popular vote in one of the monthly magazines. She has charm and a pleasing personality and her dancing is a bright spot of the picture.

The story "The Bishop of the Ozarks" was adapted from a book by Milford Howard, who also plays a dual role in the screen version. Mr. Milford's acting is stilted and unreal and at no time does it get over very forcibly. Others in the cast are Cecil Holland, as Dr. Godfrey and William Kenton, as Dr. Burroughs.

The story concerns Tom Sullivan who escapes from prison and attempts to hide in a cabin, occupied by the Rev. Chapman, en route to the Ozark mountains with his daughter to teach the gospel. The minister changes clothes with the escaped prisoner and as he steps to the door of the cabin, the guards come up and kill him. Tom assumes the name of the Rev. Chapman and soon becomes known as the Bishop of the Ozarks. The Governor of Alabama asks him to come to the state's prison and conduct the work of prison reform. Tom takes Margery with him, who believes she is his daughter. Two suitors seek Margery's hand and there is a conflict between the two. Finally, the minister disappears: and the girl, with the greatest triumphs over evil and there is the happy ending. Lightly scenes showing fortune telling mediums holding seances are introduced throughout the early footage.

SWEETIE (CENTURY-UNIVERSAL)

This latest Baby Peggy comedy resembles at times a trailer for the diminutive belle. It has little or no plot and serves principally to exploit her first as a little news-girl, then as a street musician with a monkey and barrel organ and finally as a poor little rich girl. Baby Peggy is cute, she is natural, but she needs real comedy material to put her over. It isn't sufficient to have this little star make faces, powder her nose, use a lipstick, dress in odd costumes and upset a household. Apparently she is suffering from poor direction and a lack of good comedy material.

GRACE DARMDON IN MIDNIGHT GUEST
(UNIVERSAL)

A skillfully executed crook and mystery drama that will please the regular theatre patron. It is quick in action and has a pleasing combination of underworld atmosphere society surroundings, and love interest. Written by Rupert Julian. Directed by George Archainbald. Five reels.

The principal story value of "The Midnight Guest" is the crook reform angle. Those interested in such themes will find very entertaining and well acted.

Grace Darmond heads the special cast, which includes Mahlon Hamilton, Clyde Fitchmore and Mathilde Lirandage. Miss Darmond makes a sympathetic figure as the underworld girl who is befriended by a society man and who eventually falls in love with his friend, a globe trotter. The photography is very good and the interiors are pleasingly lighted. Credit is due the director for keeping the interest up and for having done so much to make the story seem plausible.

The story concerns Gabrielle Mark, a girl of the tenement district, who goes with her sweetheart, a crook, to rob a beautiful home. She is apprehended in the library by the owner of the house, and his friend notifies the police. The girl's crook friend is arrested and sent to prison, but she is saved through the benevolence of the man of the house. He establishes her in his home, and with the passage of several years she enters society. She falls in love with a globe trotter, and learning of a wild party he is staging, she calls at his home to persuade him to desist. He dismisses the guests and she retires for the night. Her crook friend, having escaped from jail, enters her room, just as her benefactor enters the house with her future. The crook shoots the man who had befriended her and the globe trotter finds true happiness with Gabrielle.

THE CHAMPEEN
(PATHE)

This latest "Our Gang" two-reeler is a knock-out. In fact it is several knock-outs combined in one, for its all about a little colored boy who becomes a fight promoter to raise a little easy money. And how neatly he does it with the aid of two pugnacious characters, both in love with the same little girl, makes up the story. The fight is a scream and when the city fellow walks out with the girl and breaks up the fight, there's a near riot. The youngsters are as natural as can be and act with that unconscious energy that can only come from a group of enthusiastic and experienced actors. Book it, if you're in the market for a comedy that is bound to please.

DUSTIN FARNUM IN THE BUSTER
(FOX)

Just a picture. Not a new situation, a thrill, or a real "kick" in it. Directed by Colin Campbell. Written by William Patterson White. Five reels.

This is about the weakest of the Dustin Farnum pictures thus far. It's the old, old story of the Eastern girl who arrives at the Western city, is made a Western girl and becomes a Western heroine as a result. It's the story of a Westerner who decides to tame her. She demands that she be taken on a camping trip, but refuses to wash the dishes. There is a villain who makes a bet that he will have the girl riding into town on his horse within a week. The hero stages a fake kidnapping but the villain overthrows the plot, grabs the girl and makes off with her. The hero follows, knocks the villain over a cliff and wins the girl.

Dustin Farnum made the most of the hero role—Bill Correll. Doris Pawn played Charlotte Rowland, the Eastern girl with a French maid. Lucille Hutton was the maid, Yvonne, and Francis McDonold the villain. Swung. There's lots of scenery and a typical fight on a hiwpcetice.

THE ALARM
(FOX)

At St. John and his trick bicycle, assisted by a fat boy and a pretty girl, get plenty of fun out of this story of life in a small town. AI and his partner are hired to paint a cottage. Of course everybody gets smeared up with paint. The cottage catches fire and there is a scramble to gather ladders, hose, etc., to put it out. It ends with Al and his partner riding away loaded with their paraphernalia. Slow motion pictures are used for a laugh while Al is chased by a dozen little devils. Quite up to St. John's other two reelers in originality and funny situations.

Two interesting scenes from Elmer Clifton's production "Down to the Sea in Ships" in which Raymond McKe and Marguerite Courtot are the featured players. It's a Hodkinson picture.
EXHIBITORS

F. B. O.

"ALIMONY," SCREEN STORY by A. T. Locke, has been purchased by Film Booking Offices. Emil Offeman, company production manager, has not yet announced the cast for this society drama. "Flaming Waters" by E. Lloyd Sheldon, and "The Miracle Baby," by Frank Richardson Pierce also have been acquired.

ETHEL CLAYTON'S new picture, "Can a Woman Love Twice?" which is F. B. O.'s current publication, is a story of the days following signing of the armistice. But, the company stresses, there are no gruesome battle scenes presented. Vice-President Schnitzer calls this the most powerful drama in which Miss Clayton has appeared.

EMIL CHAUTARD IS WELL into the second week of filming on "Daytime Wives," the F. B. O. special featuring Dorothy Petrie, Wyndham Standing and Grace Darmond. "Pop Tuttle's Pole Cat Plot" is the current Plum Center comedy starring Dan Mason. Warner Baxter, recently placed under a long term contract by F. B. O., has been loaned to Thomas H. Ince for one picture.

Kesolute Film

"THE GREATEST MENACE," a new production which is said to hit a body blow at the drug evil, will be issued on a state right basis by Mayer and Quinn. The picture features a star cast of prominent players and tells a story of a young man who becomes enmeshed by the drug horror, whose sister, also a addict, takes up the fight to save him. A strong love element is declared to be an outstanding feature. The story was written by Angela G. Kaufman and adapted by Albert Rogell, who also directed. In the cast are Ann Little, Robert Gordon, Wilfred Lucis, Harry Borthurp, Rhea Mitchell, Andrew McClellan, Mildred June and others.

Louis B. Mayer

"DAUGHTERS OF THE RICH" has been selected as John M. Stahl's next production for Louis B. Mayer. Shooting will commence on this First National publication as soon as the cast is assembled. Six months in all probability will be spent on the successor to "The Dangerous Age."

Fox

GROSSET & DUNLAP have arranged with Fox for special photoplay editions of "Truxton King," the George Barr McCutcheon story in which John Gilbert stars, and "The Custard Cup," featuring Mary Carr.

Principal Pictures

GUY BATES POST is now in production at the Thomas H. Ince studio on his initial picture for Principal. It is the adaptation of the James Oliver Curwood story, "The Man from Ten Strike," and is the first of the pictures to be made by Courland Productions in association with Sol Lesser. E. deB. Newman and Robert Thornby are the officials of Courland.

Hodkinson

"DOWN TO THE SEA IN SHIPS" played to the greatest crowds ever assembled for the opening of a picture at the Century theatre, Baltimore, Md., according to advices from Hodkinson and Managing Director Tom Sorriero. The unusual business accomplished on this Elmer Chilton story of whaling days was obtained without the stimulation of long preliminary exploitation. Mr. Sorriero's prologue consisted of a cyclorama effect, showing a picture of a lighthouse in the distance with flashing lights. A wafting, rigged vessel was shown near the footlights and sailors sang songs, at the conclusion of which their sweethearts appeared to kiss them good-bye on their journey "Down to the Sea in Ships."

Universal

UNIVERSAL PROMISES a new series of "Leather Pushers." The stories, now being written by H. C. Witter, will be published in Collier's. Universal is arranging for publication of the third series simultaneously with the appearance in Collier's, beginning in May. The first two series have been exceedingly popular among exhibitors and patrons.

FIVE PHOTOPLAYS are offered exhibitors during March by Universal. First comes "The Bolted Door," a George Gibbs story starring Frank Mayo. on March 5; then "Gossip," a Gladys Wal-

AN INTEGRAL SYSTEM of production has been established by B. P. Schulberg, producing Preferred pictures for Lichtman distribution, to supplant the unit method under which each director has an organization of his own. The new plan places operation of the entire studio under one supervisor who will be aided by experts in charge of departments. As an initial step, the scenario department has been split into two units, the department of adaptations operating under the direction of Olga Printzian, and the department of story producing operating under the direction of Eve Unsell, "April Showers" and "Mothers-in-Law" will be the first pictures produced under the plan.

VICTOR L. SCHERTZINGER has been signed to produce Preferred specials for Lichtman. Title of his first picture has not been announced.

"POOR MEN'S WIVES" has been booked to play the Keith, Moss and Proctor circuits in Greater New York.

Other metropolitan houses have contracted for the film.

POLA NEGRI IS TO PLAY in "Don Caesar de Bazan," story which was to have been produced under the title, "The Spanish Cavalier," with Rudolph Valentino. Jesse L. Lasky states that this will be the biggest thing ever done by Paramount. "Chuck" will be produced opposite the Polish star. The script, which will be altered slightly because of the change in title, has been prepared by June Mathis. No director has been assigned.

ALICE BRADY HAS FINISHED "The Snow Bride" at Manhattan, L. J., under the direction of Henry Kooler. This is a Canadian Northwest story by Sonya Leven and Julie Hersi.

E. E. SHAUER, DIRECTOR of Paramount's foreign department, has received word from Caribbean Film Company of Havana, that a Paramount Week will be held from April 8 to 14 in honor of the fifth anniversary of the company. A. L. Prattchett is manager of Caribbean.

JOHN RUSSELL'S VOLUME of short stories, "Where the Pavement Ends," is being issued by Alfred A. Knopf in a special photoplay jacket, which will be placed on sale simultaneously with publication of the Rex Ingram-Metro production of the same title.

A TELEGRAM to the home office of Metro states that the SL picture, "Omney Adams Sawyer," played to the biggest Monday in the history of Balaban & Katz's Chicago theatre.

THE MOST PRETENTIOUS picture of Graf Productions, Inc., is the hope of Max Graf, supervising director of the company, who has just started work on "The Eye." William Dudley Pelley's novel, Mildred Harris, Cullen Landis, Louise Fazenda, Ralph Lewis and other well known players are in the cast. Paul Powell will direct.

THREE CURRENT METRO pictures, "Peg O' My Heart," with LaBrette Taylor; "Hearts Aflame," the Mayer-Barker film, and "All the Brothers Were Valiant," are receiving enthusiastic praise in newspaper reviews throughout the country. These features look like a winning trio.

FIVE PRODUCERS are busy on forthcoming First National attractions at United Studios. Three more will be "shooting" soon. Edwin Carewe is making "The Girl From the Golden West," Frank Borzage is making "Sands of Time," based on a magazine story called "Terwilliger." Maurice Tourneur is finishing "The Isle of Lost Ships" and James Young has begun "Wandering Daughters." In preparation are Richard Walton Tully's "Trilby," Norma Talmadge in "Aces of Vengeance" and Constance Talmadge in "Dulcy."

WOMEN MEMBERS OF the Congressional Club of Washington selected "Omar the Tentmaker" as the attraction for their annual breakfast held in early February. "It is most interesting and artistic" was the compliment of Mrs. H. Mondell, chairman of the entertainment committee.

"THERE IS NO QUESTION in my mind but what there is a very bright future for Dinky." This is Charlie Chaplin's comment on the work of Dinky Dean who appears with him in "The Pilgrim" for First National. And Chaplin ought to know. Dinky Dean's name is Dean Franklin Reiser, and he is the son of "Chuck" Dean, song writer, playwright and actor.

EXHIBITORS

Educational:

"GARDEN OF GEYSERS," one of Educational's Hodge-Podge series produced by the late Lyman H. Howe, is playing this week at the Capitol theatre, New York.

THE COUE COMMITTEE of New York has given its unqualified approval to "The Message of Emil Coute," a film presentation of the French pharmacist's auto-suggestion theories, which has had its premiere in the country's largest houses. Press comments on the short subject speak strongly commend it.

LLOYD HAMILTON'S new comedy, "The Educator," has just finished a run of two weeks at the Kinema in Los Angeles where it was on the bill with "The Hottentot."

Century:

BOBBY DUNN, NOTED comedian has been engaged by Century and will be seen in "The Poor Doth." his first comedy for that organization, written by Himmel and Eugene de Rue who is directing it.

"VAMPED" Al Herman's second Century comedy has been completed and will be published some time in April. Sig Neufeld, head of Century's scenario department co-operated with Herman on the script.

C. C. Burr:

"THE LAST HOUR," the Edward Sloom production issued through Mastodon is piling up record booking C. C. Burr reports. Following its booking at thirty-two New England theatres by Sam Moscow of Boston word has been received of a number of bookings in leading Colorado theatres by Mountain States Film Attractions.

ARE YOU GUILTY" a new Burr feature will soon have its New York premiere. In the cast of this picture are James Kirkwood, Doris Kenyon, Robert Edesom, Edmund Breese, Mary Carr and others.

Hugh Dierker:

THERE IS ONE THING that Hugh Dierker, who is producing Thelma Lifner's story, "The Other Side," wants. That something is a contraption that will make the wheels of an automobile go in the direction they are supposed to move, and not show reverse action. He says he has been swamped with suggestions for something new in color photography and stereoscopic effects but the automobile wheels is his real problem.

Second National:

ARRANGEMENTS FOR FALL productions by Mission Film Corporation, for distribution by Second National Pictures Corporation, will be completed following conferences on the Coast next month. Dane Hanshaw will represent Second National at the meetings. It is expected that Mission will produce at least four features and one special for fall publication.

Goldwyn:

"THE CHRISTIAN," Goldwyn's Hall Caine picture, was held over for a second week by Manager S. L. Rothafel at the Capitol theatre, N. Y. After the first four days' attendance was so gratilying that Mr. Rothael made this decision, and it is said to have continued unhalted throughout the run.

FOUR PLAYERS HAVE been added to the cast by Jesse D. Hampton for his new production of Rex Beach's "The Spoilers." To date the following players have been assigned roles: Anna Q. Nilsson, Milton Sills, Bryant Washburn, Wallace McDonald, Barbara La Marr, Robert Edeson, Noah Beery, William V. Mong, Ace B. Francis and Kate Price.

AMONG BIG PICTURES which Goldwyn has under way or forthcoming are the following: Rupert Hughes' "Souls for Sale"; Marshall Neilan's "The Eternal Three"; "Three Wise Fools," King Vidor production; and "Red Lights," being directed by Clarence Badger; Victor Seastrom, noted Swedish director, will soon start a big production.

Pathe

ON MARCH 11 PATHE will publish the following pictures: "Plunder," the seventh episode; Paul Parrott and Jofyna Ralston in the one reel comedy "Shoot Straight"; Screen Snapshots showing Baby Peggy and other stars; Aesop's Film Fable called "The Traveling Salesman"; Pathe Review and Pathe News.

Pathé News number 16 shows a striking parade of 30,000 persons in the streets of Munich marching under the emblem of the "German Facisti.'"

WITH HALF OF THE PEOPLE sick with influenza, two days of rain and a drop of 40 degrees in the temperature, Harold Lloyd in "Dr. Jack" nevertheless enjoyed a successful run at the Jewel and Colonial theatres, Troy, O., according to a letter Pathé has received from Manager C. F. Freiher.

NEW ADVERTISING MATERIAL is being issued to Pathe exchanges for the exploitation of Harold Lloyd's two reel comedies for which the company reports a big demand. New prints and a press book are available on the following films: "Bumping Into Broadway," "Captain Kidd's Kids," "From Hand to Mouth," "His Royal Stynxes," "An Eastern Western" and "Haunted Spooks."

United Artists

HERE'S DATA COMPILED by United Artists to illustrate the success which "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" is meeting throughout the country: 101,- 80 paid admissions with gross of $85,- 097.66 in one week at Capitol theatre, New York; attendance of more than 60,000 during week's run at Stanton in Philadelphia; seen by more than 225,000 persons in seventeen weeks at Grauman's Hollywood theatre; records broken at Colorado theatre, Denver; packed house at every showing at Grand Rapids, Mich., Bellevue theatre, Niagara Falls, and in other cities.

PUBLIC OPINION," Charles Chaplin's feature length production starring Edna Purviance, will be distributed by Allied Producers & Distributors. This picture, written and directed by the comedian, will be in ten reels. It is said that through the picture will run a poignant note of human suffering, joy, tragedy and humor.

EDWARD M. LANGLEY, art director for Douglas Fairbanks, is touring Southern California, lecturing in cities and towns in that territory on the work incidental to picture production. The lectures are illustrated with drawings of sets, photographs, models, etc. Should prove a highly effective advertising scheme.

Export & Import

"OTHELLO," SCREEN VERSION of the Shakespearan drama, opened a run at the Criterion theatre, New York, on February 25. This picture, presented by Ben Blumenthal and David F. Howells, is controlled in America and Canada by Export & Import Film Company and Mr. Howells. Prior to the opening a special pre-view was held for stage and screen players and dramatists and motion picture reviewers. Mr. Blumenthal and Mr. Howells produced this feature in Germany under the direction of Dimitri Buchowetzki. Emil Jannings has the title role, others in the cast being Werner Kraus and Ica Lenkeffy.

Weber & North

FOR THE FIRST TIME, according to George Montgomery of Supreme Film Company, handling "Notoriety," in the Los Angeles territory, Sid Grauman has booked a state right picture for his Million Dollar theatre. That picture is the Will Xigh special, "Notoriety," which is handled on the state right market by Weber & North. It is planned to give the feature a presentation in keeping with the high standard set by the Coast impressario.

SUCCESSFUL RUNS on "Notoriety" and prospects of continued and prospective prosperity on the feature, is the report of Sam Sax, sales manager for Weber & North, who has been touring the Southwest.
George Hunt Sends This

George Hunt, Medford, Ore., exhibitor, sends us one of the most interesting, sane and logical preachments on the censorship question which we have had the pleasure of reading. It is an editorial published recently in the Pacific Record Herald of Medford, under the caption, "The Papers and the Pictures."

Read It:

"The Pacific Record Herald has, since its inception, attempted to keep its columns clean, wholesome reading matter. We believe this to be the proper way, hence we welcome the change of public sentiment in its favor.

"We believe that corrupt newspapers are a greater menace to the morals of America than corrupt moving pictures possibly can be.

"We have little patience with the reformer who howls for 'cleaner pictures,' but who refrains from expressing heartfelt condemnation of the vile 'front page' alleged news of the day.

"As a general thing, the quality of the motion pictures shown in a city is far superior to the quality of front page news printed there.

"And yet, the pictures receive all the condemnation while the papers print the 'church notices' on an inside page, reserving their most valuable space—the front page, for the 'advertisement' of the vilest crimes, and the degradation of frail humanity.

"The 'pictures' are, as a general rule, subject to censorship, while the 'press,' because of its privileged character, goes 'scot-free.'

"There are many people in the world today who, while fearing to be seen coming from a theatre where a questionable show may be appearing, nevertheless, read the daily 'front page' rot with avidity and relish."

"Let us be honest with ourselves. When 'front page' news is clean there will be NO further need for censorship of the 'movies,' for without a market for 'rot' its manufacture will cease."

"We are glad to note that in Medford, the class of pictures shown is always above the average. Seldom does a picture find its way into the local houses which is not a high-grade production from every angle."

"Don't forget to slip this editorial in your propaganda file. Maybe you can publish it in your program. We know that the editor of the "Pacific Record Herald" will not object.

Debates:

A debate on the question, "Resolved that motion pictures are a benefit to the public," is to be held in Millard, S. D., on March 2. Arthur Sime will argue the affirmative side of the question. At his request we have forwarded material covering every phase of the subject. Everyone should practice a little Cœursmus and think hard that Mr. Sime will win. The Public Rights League will supply material for debates, addresses and the like to anyone desiring it.

Those Censors:

Those censors of Ohio have gone and done it again. In a recent issue of "Topics of the Day" was a paragraph stating in effect that "the dissatisfaction with censorship is becoming more and more apparent." Immediately the censors got busy with their shears. Call it foresight if you want to, anyhow, Ohio censors are watching their jobs.

Screen Message No. 97

Says George Ade: "Fault-finders are shrieking in eight different keys, forgetting that the screen drama is sweating out its own salvation and does not need the help of hysterical censors."

League Notes

A Good Word:

Speaking before the Council of Cities of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Cleveland, the Rev. John Thompson, pastor of the Chicago Temple, said:

"The cities can never be won to Christianity by Lenten services, nor through tabernacle services under such leaders as W. A. Sunday and Gypsy Smith. We must take a larger view and organize our work like generals an army. We must stop our wild denunciation of movies and theatres."

You Can Help:

The General Federation of Women's Clubs will conduct a national garden week campaign from April 22 to 28. President Harding has endorsed it. You can be of service to your community and you can win many friends by getting in touch with the local club women and cooperating with them in this drive.

Cooperation:

A benefit performance for the poor and needy of Watertown, N. Y., was given at the Avon theatre under the auspices of the Ministerial Union. Charles Sionske, manager, of the Avon, donated the use of the theatre, the services of actors as well as the motion pictures on the bill. Theatre-church cooperation is winning favor in many localities.

Schade's Way:

George J. Schade, owner of the Schade theatre, Sandusky, O., has found a new way of fighting censorship and Sunday closing advocates. He has invited the Rev. W. H. R. Moore, rector of Grace Episcopal church, to deliver a short sermon each Sunday as part of the picture program. Rev. Moore is interested in pictures and believes that he can fight for better screen entertainment by cooperating with the exhibitor, rather than by denouncing the motion picture theatre.

What's Wrong in Small Towns?

FAIRVIEW, OKLA.—To the Editor: For some years, we have been living and working in a very small town, and our comment has been made in regard to the "small town show." In the first place, let us discern just what comprises this part of the industry. From the one show a week town to the three theatre town would be something near a definition for the name "Small town show.

From all over the country comes cries that the little shows are losing out, and by dropping into the small towns and discovering the dusty paper strewn lobbies of these theatres that are shut down, one would be inclined to believe that they really are on the decline. But let us get at the root of the matter. In 1914 the Fairview "small town show was a novelty, people attended by curiosity. From 1914 to 1920 people were well paid for their services in these towns-RF.

The theatre man got his share. Then the decline. During the good times, theatres were built to take care of the increasing fancy that the men have shut down. Hence the dirty vacated lobbies. The industry is now old enough to vote. It is up to the trade to vote for its maintenance.

The question arises, how are we as small town exhibitors going to do any more than we are now doing? Here are a few questions which are important factors on the credit side of your ledger.

Are you showing trash or new productions?

Are you reminding your patrons that you are running new and first class pictures?

Are you buying films just because they are cheap, regardless of story, stars, and who makes them?

Are you spending a little of your time fixing novelty advertising that people will read?

Are you mixing socially with your patrons, helping the charity drives and other things of interest to your community?

Are you thanking your patrons as they enter and leave, and otherwise letting them know that you appreciate their trade?

Are you continually scrapping with your exchanges in regard to contracts, deposits, service, etc.?

Are you fighting the church and otherwise killing music competition?

There are a thousand such questions that might be brought up, but these are the main ones

Many exhibitors still run on the Nickelodeon days and imagine that anything, even though it is so old that it looks like it was raining through a dirty picture, due to wear, will get by. He pays three dollars for the feature from Funk & Co. and thinks he is doing fine. Brother showman, don't you realize that every news stand, no matter how small the town, sells some inexpensive fan magazines, telling all about the new stars, new pictures, etc.? Then nearly every small town distributes from fifty to five hundred daily papers published at their key city with Rudolph Valentino or Norma Talmadge in sixty point type staring the reader in the face, and people read this. They sometimes know more than you do about the new pictures.

Well, you say your exchange asks so much for the late releases that you can not run them against your cheaper ones. But have you tried paying a little more for your service and exhibiting later productions? You might ask your people to show a feature over six months old and a special over a year old.

Then tell your patrons all these facts. They appreciate your showing the pictures and will patronize you more. One of the greatest cries of the public is, "I don't care about the picture. The exhibitor, George Brown, said he saw the pictures two years ago in St. Louis," and probably she did and the said Ethel will tell the whole town about it just to let them know her cousin is from St. Louis, it no other reason.

Don't give them a chance to talk. Run one immediately after your key city even if you lose money on it, at least once every two months.

Most patrons nowadays have their favorite stars. They know the most popular star in your town and show their pictures. Other people have their favorite stars. Do you like these patrons in mind and call their attention to the fact that you will soon have one of their favorite pictures. And I wonder how many of you do it with a two-buff electric playing "Hail, Hail, the gang's all here" during a funeral scene? Some people are delayed by a puppy, someone who knows how to follow a picture. Special music on special nights is a good asset.

You should devote at least one-fourth of your time studying new advertising hook-ups, and putting them into practice. Finally, the idea that your large town brother does not get ideas from any of the trade journals. Many exhibitors get these periodicals and lending them to the operator or maybe the janitor, but the successful man reads them from cover to cover. Remember, that a one sheet and a lobby display are advertising but people don't go out of their way to pass by your lobby to see them. Don't stay on the same old thing. Make something new. You can't spend too much advertising.

You said the town, and should hold yourself in as high esteem as the banker. A lifting hand in charity work as a leader in the commercial club will help you.

Some ticket sellers seem to think that it is the patron's duty to buy tickets from them. They never thank them, or even smile. A patron should never enter a theatre unless he is thanked in a way that he knows you mean it. "A Thank you, call again" sign under the exit light doesn't do the trick. If you want to be helpful and make something, just act that way.

One class is always howling about the exchange price of rentals. Don't you know how much they new newspaper, Give me the value of a picture when they are buying it. Everyone will get stung to some extent, but keep up with the game. It is too much reliance on the bad ones even though you do have to buy them. You can pay twice as much for a picture as you think it is worth in the theatre. When you make a contract don't break it and you will not have trouble with your deposits. Film exchanges have rules the same as every other business, same as the church.

Some few exhibitors are inclined to try to outs the church. This may be done but our experience with it, try to make friends with the church people and the ministers. If they don't approve of a certain class of pictures don't run them. The more you fight the more you lose in this line. It won't hurt you to go to church, mix with the people, let them know that you are a clean fellow. They will watch the morality of the employees and not cater to the "petting parties" gang. Now all these don't and suggestions are probably old to you, but watch the morality of the employees and try to make them into practice. They are only a few of the many items of showman's "LambdaGamma" that make up the theatre owners of the country stand for this hold-up game without a protest, they are a bunch of pikers."—P. S. Nelson, Rex theatre, La Moure, S. D.

A Business, not a "Game"

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—To The Editor: I think that one of the most tragic things in this business, is the present day daily, is the film salesman who persists in referring to our business as the "movie game." With the millions and millions of dollars that are invested by exhibitors, distributors and producers in this business, it is regrettable that we are still affiliating with the "movie game." "A Business, not a "Game." A number of years ago this business was truly a game. But those days have long since passed. We are on a business basis, and the "movie game" is an invention and do all possible to eliminate reference to the "movie game."—F. R. Beitzman, Tacoma theatre, Indianapolis, Ind.

One Thing Kill ing Patronage

COLOMA, MICH.—To the Editor: What seems funny to me is that exhibitors must send a perfectly good check to the exchange for poor prints of pictures that do not merit a place in the middle of a screen; wondering what next when instead of said scene being furnished by the screen is saying: "The End." Said to say, very few of the companies make good.

For your perfectly good check, you get a rotten show, a dissatisfied audience and less business the next night. It may be funny but it's not fair to the exhibitor. I hope some day there will be a way to make the exchange furnish our shows in good condition in return for our perfectly good checks.—Mrs. C. E. Aldridge, Coloma theatre, Coloma, Mich.

Newspaper Scores "Music Tax"

LA MOURE, S. D.—To the Editor: The following editorial from the local newspaper will be of interest, I believe, to theatre exhibitors everywhere:

"Proprietors of 'movie' houses get it in the neck on all sides. They are subject to all sorts of taxes, both state and national, and much of the money is paid by the producers and jobbers of films. A concern of the 'American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers' has notified P. S. Nelson, proprietor of the Rex theatre, that hereafter if he wants to use any of the copyrighted music coordinated, he will have to pay a special license fee at the rate of ten cents per seat per hour. Individual theatres, or even the larger ones in the city, embrace nearly every composer or publisher of popular music in this country. The exhibition is a rather serious matter. However, Mr. Nelson, of the Rex theatre, company, advising them in effect to 'go jump in the lake,' advised the forthcoming conflict, and the theatre owners of the country stand for this hold-up game without a protest, they are a bunch of pikers."—P. S. Nelson, Rex theatre, La Moure, S. D.
American Releasing

Trail of the Axe, with Dustin Farnum. —A very good program picture and well worked out plot. Photographs good. Nearly everyone pleased. —C. E. Liminger, Grand theatre, E. Palestine, Ohio. —General patronage.

Cardigan, with a special cast. —Big business on it. Opposition Queen of Sheba. —Second day better than the first. —Rialto theatre, Ticonderoga, N. Y. —Small town patronage.

That Woman, with Catherine Calvert. —Splendid program picture. Will please the class. Fine characters and make money if not bought too high. —T. W. Young, Frances theatre, Dyersburg, Tenn. —Neighborhood patronage.

The Sign of the Rose, with George Beban. —A good special. Will get the business if you don't go to sleep at the wheel. Don't be afraid to spend and advertise it strong and it will sure get you the money. —H. T. Heppell, Garden theatre, Peoria, III. —General patronage.

Associated Exhibitors

Silas Marner, with a special cast. —Grab this one. Tie up with schools. It's easy. Then watch them turn out. Drew big for me with strong opposition and pleased them all. Print in good condition. Advertising, lobby and six sheets. —A. Mitchell, Dixie theatre, Russellville, Ky. —General patronage.

One Night in Paris, with special cast. —Not up to standard. Crowd was dissatisfied with it. Just a love story portraying very little gay Parisian life. —Chas. McElwee, Sigma theatre, Johnstown, Pa. —Neighborhood patronage.

Martin Johnson's South Sea Adventures, a Martin Johnson production. —Fine. If you have people who like thrills and educational stuff the goods are there. Put out by a company who are very fair and really willing to cooperate. —Bill Jones, Campbell's theatre, Spencer, Ind.

Grandma's Boy, with Harold Lloyd. —Would say this should go well anywhere. Everybody went out with a smile. —Wal-ter H. Musson, Queen's theatre, Hesperia, Ohio. —Small town patronage.

Grandma's Boy, with Harold Lloyd. —Had booked for three days. Missed first day on account of snow storm. Lost money on date. Picture pleased. —J. Wininger, Dickinson theatre, Waupun, Wis. —General patronage.

Grandma's Boy, with Harold Lloyd. —Good business. Played two days to good business. Would suggest every exhibitor run this if you don't have to give your right eye for it. They are asking some dollars for this. I think the theatre, Rochester, N. Y. —Neighborhood patronage.

Her Majesty, with Molly King. —Fair only. Made good plot, characters very well placed. —Chas. McElwee, Sigma theatre, Johnstown, Ohio. —Neighborhood patronage.

F. B. O.

The Third Alarm, with a special cast. —Greatest picture I have run or attempted to run. Pleased 100 per cent such titles loaded in neat stuff, but costume stuff doesn't go here. Star is nothing to draw and business was bumm. —R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oelber, Kan. —General patronage.

The Snowshoe Trail, with Jane Novak. —A splendid picture of the Northwest with beautiful scenery, good acting, and one that should bring results at the box office. —A. W. White, Cozy theatre, Co-chotha, Okla. —Neighborhood patronage.

If I Were Queen, with Estel Clayton. —A satisfying picture from every angle. One of the best of the season. Good business good also. —P. G. Estee, Fad theatre, Brookings, S. D. —Neighborhood patronage.

If I Were Queen, with Estel Clayton. —This picture is a pretty thing, more or less, in a way. There is not much plot, but a flock of court scenes in which the prince and his cohorts have a chance to play. Characters are well drawn and stuff, but costume stuff doesn't go here. Star is nothing to draw and business was bumm. —R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oelber, Kan. —General patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast. —Picture very good. Ran two days to good business. Thrillers well pleased. —F. Paulick, Paulick theatre, Muscoda, Wis. —Neighborhood patronage.

Son of the Wolf, with a special cast. —Laugh for nothing to it. One of the worst I have ever seen. Don't play it. —W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss. —Neighborhood patronage.

When Love Comes, with Helen Jerome Eddy. —Good, clean and well made picture, although neither star nor title drew for us. Cannot see much of it on good pictures. —P. G. Estee, Fad theatre, Brookings, S. D. —Neighborhood patronage.

Queen of the Turf, with a special cast.
Roll Call

Interesting reports on "The Yellow Stain," "The Little Wildcat," "The Mystery of Hapgood," and "The Sagebrush Trail" received this week are withheld because of their contributor's oversight in omitting signature. These will be printed promptly upon receipt of identification by author.

---

I can positively say nothing concerning this picture as it is impossible to describe "nothing."—Geo. C. Starkey, Opera House, Montour Falls, N. Y.—General patronage.

My Dad, with Johnny Walker.—Exhibitors, book this picture, as it is very good from every angle. Played with Dan Mason in Plum Center comedy, Pop Tuttles Clever Catch. Made a fine program at fifteen and thirty cents.—P. O. Roby, Lotana theatre, Williamsburg, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Hound of the Baskervilles, with a special cast.—A very thrilling, mystery story. Glad we booked it.—Leuzinger and Amsberry, Carthage theatre, Carthage, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

813, with a special cast.—Print in good shape. Ran good. Played to a full house. Audience liked it.—B. E. Clements, Strand theatre, Eaton, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Gay and Devilish, with Doris May.—This is a fair program picture. Posters led patrons to believe that it was going to be a little naughty. Came and were disappointed as it was only a common picture with no wild spots in it at all.—H. G. Schmit, Palace theatre, Long Pine, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Nine Points of the Law, with a special cast.—We consider this a very good picture of its kind. Should go over good in every small town.—Leuzinger & Amsberry, Carthage theatre, Carthage, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Nine Points of the Law, with a special cast.—One of those "sweet flowers of innocence that spring from the fields of sin, otherwise dance halls," sort of stories. Nothing bad, and pleased a fair percent with the way it was played. Others disappointed.—P. G. Estee, Fad theatre, Brookings, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Foolish Age, with Doris May.—Nice clean comedy drama. Pleased 90 per cent.—J. W. May, Grand theatre, Shawnee, Ind.—Small town patronage.

A Broadway Madonna, with a special cast.—Here is one picture I know will stand up two days. Pleased 100 per cent. Classical stories and photos. Splendid title. These two alone will get them in. We didn't advance our admission, but could have and they would have liked it just as well.—W. E. Eskin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Broadway Madonna, with a special cast.—Gave satisfaction as a regular program picture.—Giacosa Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

The Stealers, with a special cast.—A splendid high class picture which can be bought right. Will stand two days play.—Geo. C. Starkey, Opera House, Montour Falls, N. Y.—General patronage.

The Barricade, with a special cast.—Personally I liked it fine, but it did not draw, but I believe had I let them know what kind of a picture it was I would have done better and pleased.—R. S. Moore, Gem theatre, Snyder, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Billy Jim, with Fred Stone.—Very good Western drama full of pop and action. Photography and scenery very good. Business good.—P. O. Roby, Lotana theatre, Williamsburg, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Our Man in a Million, with George Beban.—Picture good. Pleased all.—B. E. Clements, Strand theatre, Eaton, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The Brand of Lopez, with Sessue Hayakawa’s "Seattle Minaret," musical act. Business fair, but people don’t like the Jap.—P. O. Roby, Lotana theatre, Williamsburg, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

First National

The Voice From the Minaret, with Norma Talmadge.—A big picture which did a real good business. Despite extreme cold and snow. While not as heavy as The Eternal Flame, it seems to be the type suitable for the patrons. Went over big.—U. K. Rice, Auditorium theatre, Winston-Salem, N. C.—Transient patronage.

The Voice From the Minaret, with Norma Talmadge.—A good picture, but quite ordinary. Worth one-half the price paid.—K. J. Uglow, Strand theatre, Whitewater, Wis.—General patronage.

Fury, with Richard Barthelmess and Dorothy Gish returns with the type of comedy used in Hearts of the World and Barthelmess good as usual.—U. K. Rice, Auditorium theatre, Winston-Salem, N. C.—Transient patronage.

The Dangerous Age, with a special cast.—This picture is what can be called 100 per cent pure and unadulterated entertainment. It is no trick to get the money with this kind of release. Of course, you have to go after it to get a big opening. Then if you play it a week or more it sells itself.—Frank Browne, Liberty theatre, Long Beach, Cal.—General patronage.

The Hottentot, a Thomas H. Ince production.—Splendid comedy. Proved good book business and a very good patronage received.—Glenn A. Cross, Regent theatre, Battle Creek, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Hottentot, a Thos. H. Ince production.—I have looked over my entire list of superlatives and cannot find a word suitable to describe it. I'll bet, now, it hands all the lists for real comedies for the year 1923. Oh, Tommy, please give us more like it. Great business for a week.—Frank L. Browne, Little Theatre, Long Beach, Cal.—General patronage.

The Hottentot, a Thos. H. Ince production.—I have looked over my entire list of superlatives and cannot find a word suitable to describe it. I'll bet, now, it hands all the lists for real comedies for the year 1923. Oh, Tommy, please give us more like it. Great business for a week.—Frank L. Browne, Little Theatre, Long Beach, Cal.—General patronage.

White Shoulders, with Katherine MacDonald.—One of the best productions in which Katherine has yet appeared. However, this lady does not get the box office in this theatre. In the present instance the picture was much better than the attendance.—Henry W. Gauske, Lincoln theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Brown of the North, with Strongheart.—Would have gone better in six reels than eight. Beautiful snow and mountain scenery, but did not equal Silent Call by considerable.—S. M. Southworth, American theatre, Canton, N. Y.—Neighborhood and college patronage.

Heroes and Husbands, with Katherine MacDonald.—Poorest MacDonald yet. Absurd story, no acting. Gave lot. Stroud theatre, Whitewater, Wis.—General patronage.

Omar the Tentmaker, with Guy Bates Piel.—Classic in every way. Many people saw the picture twice. Went over well, although I did not like Mr. Post in the role of Omar. I think he is a comedian, however, and if he gets a real chance he'll prove it. Good business for a week.—Frank L. Browne, Liberty theatre, Long Beach, Cal.—General patronage.

Polly of the Follies, with Constance Talmadge.—An old one with enough advertising in it that they should pay you well for running it, and I would suggest that if you are booked with it, send the exchange an invoice for $50.00 for running it. If you haven't bought it, don't ever buy it: let them keep this class of cheese.—E. E. Gailly, Crystal theatre, Wayne, Neb.—General patronage.

The Light in the Dark, with Hope Hampton.—No good, although they told me it was exceptional. It is, for Hampton. Nevertheless it's poor.—K. J. Uglow, Strand theatre, Whitewater, Wis.—General patronage.

East Is West, with Constance Talmadge.—Exceptionally good. Fine business.—H. E. Yost, West End theatre, Santa Ana, Cal.—General patronage.

Fools First, a Marshall Neilan production.—Just a good picture. Not as good as Neilan's former pictures. Will have

EXHIBITORS HERALD

Suggests New Lists Of Bests

In the February 17th issue under "List of Pictures of the General patronage" note J. R. M. renovates the "Ten Best" idea, also stating another with the whole question on the subject was made by the "Herald" in its compilation as published October 22. This list of ten stars not only act the parts, but are characterized by a leading role. The ten stars are:

1. The Multifaceted Man.
2. The Old Nest.
3. The Sheik.
4. The Woman Mother.
5. My Boy.
7. The Prisoner of Zenda.
8. Saturday Night.
10. File Connection.

Come on in. Let's make it snappy.

PHILIP RAND, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.

This is a good picture and you should make money on it if you can buy it right. We paid a little too much for it, however it will be helpful in the trying of the world war battle field. -Duncan & Veatch, Princess Theatre, Morganfield, Ky.—General patronage.

Trouble, with Jackie Coogan.—This will be a very good picture. The cast players liked it better here in this town. Advertised it big and got results. -R. L. Behler, Royal Theatre, Garrett, Ind.—General patronage.

Trouble, with Jackie Coogan.—Some kid. Sure does some wonderful acting in this one. Everyone satisfied.—A. A. Suszycki, Majestic Theatre, Mauston, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Woman In His House, with a special cast.—Very good drama of heavy type. Will please majority of men and all the women. —Phillip RAND, Majestic, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Twin Bids, with the De Havens.—Very good comedy drama. Will go over well over here where this class of pictures are appreciated. Many good comments. Drew well and we made a little money. Will please 80 per cent. —Crosby & Schwierske, Rex theatre, Colby, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Wedding Bells, with Constance Talmadge.—Some a little better than average. This picture did not please our patronage. It might have if it had all been there, but large amounts were cut out entirely. —Duncan & Veatch, Princess theatre, Morganfield, Ky.—Small town patronage.

Perind, a Marshall Neilan production.—Good picture. Much better than School Days by same star.—Duncan & Veatch, Princess theatre, Morganfield, Ky.—Small town patronage.

Tolable David, with Richard Barthelmess.—Men liked it. Many women did not.—Ray E. Babcock, Galien theatre, Galien, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Tolable David, with Richard Barthelmess.—A fine picture. Did good business on it. Much better than the Seven Days. It stood increased prices all O.K. Book it and advertise it big. -A. L. Veatch, Princess theatre, Morganfield, Ky.—Small town patronage.

Homespun Folks, a Thomas H. Ince production.—This is a very good offering for the small town exhibitor. Lots of acting and directing and good playing. Many comments. Will please most of 'em.—Crosby & Schwierske, Rex theatre, Colby, Wis.—Small town patronage.

The Sign on the Door, with Norma Talmadge.—Splendid dramatic. No one did good work and support was good. Can recommend as good entertainment.—O. C. White, Cozy theatre, Beaumont, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Playthings of Destiny, with Anita Stewart.—Excellent. Some said best picture they had seen. Drew well.—Ray E. Babcock, Galien theatre, Galien, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Golden Snare, with special cast.—Good Northern show. Very much like many more of that kind but will interest to the end. Clean stuff and good go. Good acting by all. Much overdrawn. Why send men and women out in deep snow bare headed and handed. Why not be consistent in show-making? Would call it a 75 per cent show.—Unique theatre, Brinly, Minn.

The Golden Snare, with a special cast. Cudworth, drew well even at Saint John. —L. A. Filiold, Photo Play theatre, Grand Rapids, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

Bob Hampton of Place, with a special cast.—Good. Satisfactory. —Ray E. Babcock, Galien theatre, Galien, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Jacknife Man, with a special cast. —Satisfactory, one of the best. The plot is entirely different than most photoplays. The jacknife man and the tramp played their parts exceedingly well. The child was a little weak but the fullest satisfaction patrons probably 75 to 80 per cent. —Horn & Morgan, Star theatre, Hay Springs, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Invisible Fear, with Anita Stewart.—This is a first class program picture, 6 reels of first class entertainment.—C. H. Simpson, Princess theatre, Millen, Ga.—General patronage.

The Half Breed, with Wheeler Oakman.—Terrible. Pleased nobody and did not draw.—K. J. Uglow, Strand theatre, Whitewater, Wis.—General patronage.

The Fighting Shepherds, with Anita Stewart.—Six reels. Film in poor condition, practically no title, many misframes and badly cut in places. Story well told although the pictures are not the best of picture that Anita Stewart should play in.—Horn & Morgan, Star theatre, Hay Springs, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Scrap Iron, with Charles Ray.—Very good. Will please 90 per cent. One of the best Rays we have run. Lots of action and one of best scrapers have seen on the screen.—Crosby & Schwierske, Rex theatre, Colby, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Scrap Iron, with Charles Ray.—Will pass for a program picture, but the star has nothing to draw your patrons to the theatre. —Edw. W. Werner, Windsor theatre, Canton, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

Woman's Place, with Constance Talmadge.—The usual type Connie picture. Some good comedy. Will go good where Connie is liked. —J. W. Andresen, Rialto theatre, Cozad, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Women's Place, with Constance Talmadge.—Star is well liked and always draws and received many compliments on the picture. —Edw. W. Werner, Windsor theatre, Canton, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

Smudge, with Charles Ray.—A good picture in our estimation.—K. J. Uglow.
Strand theatre, Whitewater, Wis.—General patronage.

Smudge, with Charles Ray.—Fair picture; fair business.—G. Strasser Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Crossroads of New York, a Mack Sennett production.—Very good crook drama, good action and suspense. You cannot go wrong on it.—A. A. Suszycki, Majestic theatre, Mauston, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Crossroad of New York, a Mack Sennett production.—This one serves as a little better than average entertainment, but can't say much for it from box office standpoint. Somehow the title did not mean anything to them and business was not up to standard. I have this to say about Mack Sennett productions, I have never cashed in on a Sennett yet excepting Mickey. Sure am relieved that United Artists got Susanna.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

Courage, with a special cast.—Six reels. —Probably 75% of story very good. Acting excellent, but very poor print.—Horn & Morgan, Star theatre, Hay Springs, Neb.—Small town patronage.

The Wonderful Thing, with Norma Talmadge.—Had many favorable remarks. Personally thought it was good.—H. L. Fox, Tokio theatre, Moxhouse, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Dangerous Business, with Constance Talmadge.—A delicious little comedy, but look out for the censors. I saw and shivered all through the bedroom scene; but the critics were too busy laughing to remember their duty, apparently.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Peck's Bad Boy, with Jackie Coogan.—Very good but paid too much and print in very poor condition.—J. W. May, Grand theatre, Shawnetown, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Inferior Sex, with Mildred Harris.—Good.—Did not please the Western fans.—E. L. Golden, Mt. Vernon theatre, Tallassee, Ala.—Neighborhood patronage.

Nomads of the North, with a special cast.—Another good Cutswood. Drew well for me. A good bet.—L. A. Pilhiol, Photo Play theatre, Grand Rapids, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

One Clear Call, with a special cast.—Very good. You cannot go wrong on this one. Had good many comments on it. Book it.—A. A. Suszycki, Majestic theatre, Mauston, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Small Town Idol, a Mack Sennett production.—Played to a full house. Booked it as a special, but just a regular program picture. Should be cut to about four reels. Pleased about 60 per cent.—E. L. Golden, Mt. Vernon theatre, Tallassee, Ala.—Neighborhood patronage.

Nineteen and Phyllis, with Charles Ray.—Good Ray picture to nice business. Six reels.—F. E. Sabin, Majestic theatre, Eu- reka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Rose of the Sea, with Anita Stewart.—Another no good show.—K. J. Uglow, Strand theatre, Whitewater, Wis.—General patronage.

Rose of the Sea, with Anna Stewart.—Just Stewart's average. Always good here at box office.—A. A. Suszycki, Majestic theatre, Mauston, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Dinty, a Marshall Neilan production.—Pleased 100 per cent. Old, but very good. Get it if you haven't played it. Seven reels.—F. E. Sabin, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Hurricane's Gal, with Dorothy Phillips.—Wish I could get 'em as good as this at least once a month. Good action, shipwreck scenes.—A. A. Suszycki, Majestic theatre, Mauston, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hurricane's Gal, with Dorothy Phillips.—Excellent in every way. A picture of thriller and action through every foot. Any audience would be pleased with this one.—L. B. Lewis, Gayety theatre, Ft. Worth, Tex.—Transient patronage.

Go and Get It, a Marshall Neilan production.—Old picture, but it's good. Did not draw as well as we expected.—H. A. Larson, Majestic theatre, Oakland, Neb.—Small town patronage.

The Silent Call, with Strongheart.—Merits all the praise given it by other exhibitors in this department. Seven reels.—F. E. Sabin, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

The Silent Call, with Strongheart.—Three nights, Capacity business.—Klon- tary Bros., Strand theatre, Warsaw, Ind.—General patronage.

The Yellow Typhoon, with Anita Stewart.—Just a fair program picture and not as good as her former pictures.—H. A. Larson, Majestic theatre, Oakland, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Lessons in Love, with Constance Talmadge.—Another old one, but a good one. Connie means absolutely nothing to our box office. Good trade at moderate prices on East Is West.—Fred Hinds, Cresco theatre, Cresco, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Perfect Woman, with Constance Talmadge.—It pleased, as all of her pictures do. Not one of her best, but it's a fairer theatre.—H. A. Larson, Majestic theatre, Oakland, Neb.—Small town patronage.

The Ten Dollar Raise, with a special cast.—A dandy comedy. Hard to sell but believe you have it. Strongheart (N. B. Kyne), but they'll like it. Old, but we had a very good print.—Fred Hinds, Cresco theatre, Cresco, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Molly O, with Mabel Normand.—A very nice little picture that will please. Don't be afraid of it. I failed to do much business on account of church working against me.—H. G. Schmidt, Palace theatre, Long Pine, Neb.—General patronage.

Fox

The Bells of San Juan, with Charles Jones.—Jones pictures are always good. They have the pep. Patrons well pleased.—F. J. O'Hara, Community theatre, Elgin, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Bells of San Juan, with Charles Jones.—Good average "Buck" Jones pictures.—E. L. Green, Grand theatre, Weleetca, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Yosemite Trail, with Dustin Frame, with William Farnum.—Fairly good Western. Has quite a bit of action. Shows some scenes of the Yosemite Valley. Announced a trip to Yosemite Valley to all of my patrons who came to show that night. Had good results.—H. L. Fox, Tokio theatre, Moxhouse, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Calvert's Valley, with John Gilbert.—No good for me. No drawing power. Laid off this one.—A. A. Suszycki, Majestic theatre, Mauston, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Without Compromise, with William Farnum.—Picture would be good if starred by Mix, Jones, Gibson or Frank- lin Farnum, but who can stand the continual stare of William Farnum? I heard one girl say "I will sure have to scream."—F. J. O'Hara, Community theatre, Elgin, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Youth Must Have Love, with Shirley Mason.—Very good indeed, but failed to draw. Miss Mason pleases as a rule, but hardly draws film rental.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Who Are My Parents? with a special cast.—This picture is jolly and is not the sexy melodrama that the title would lead one to believe, and the original title might have been better. Had many people to tell us it was one of the best pictures shown this year. Has audience appeal in the shape of children and organizations that get picture over. It is well done, stars are good, and all satisfactory.—Ben L. Morris, Temple theatre, Champaign, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

Moonshine Valley, with William Far- num.—Best Farnum I have run to date. Farnum does some great work in this one. Title poor.—A. A. Suszycki, Majestic theatre, Mauston, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Brass Commandments, with William Farnum.—This is the kind of a picture people like Farnum in. Personally, it's the kind of picture I like. However, it is a very good program picture for one night.—R. L. Behler, Royal theatre, Garrett, Ind.—General patronage.

Shirley of the Circus, with Shirley Mason.—This is one of those pictures that catch with audience that likes a simple picture, one that is easily understood. I used a herald of my own composition similar to ones put out by a circus and gave impression that a circus was coming to town. In less prominent type I stated that all the shows put on by Shirley of the Circus at Tokio theatre. I attribute a third of my attendance to the herald. This star usually draws well here.—H. L. Fox, Tokio theatre, Morehouse, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Very Truly Yours, with Shirley Mason.—

A real good one. We might have shown a Saturday programs and Shirley always pleases them.—H. G. Schmidt, Palace theatre, Lom Pine, Neb.—General patronage.

Just Tony, with Tom Mix.—Patrons thought horse great. Very good business.—G. Strasser Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

At the Circus, with Tom Mix.—Considered Tom Mix's best production by patrons. Many pleasing compliments. Manager can wait for 'em to come out on this one.—L. B. Lewis, Gayety theatre, Ft. Worth, Tex.—Transient patronage.

West of Chicago, with Charles Jones.—

Pleasing little picture and went well with my audience.—E. E. Gadey, Crystal theatre, Wayne, Neb.—General patronage.

West of Chicago, with Charles Jones.—

Jones always good and is crowding Mix. Mix will have to hurry or Jones will beat him to it.—A. A. Suszycki, Majestic theatre, Mauston, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

West of Chicago, with Charles Jones.—

First Jones picture here. Twenty-four below zero so we can't tell how he's going to go here, but we hope it will be as well as elsewhere. Good picture.—Fred Hinds, Cresco theatre, Cresco, Iowa.—General patronage.

The New Teacher, with Shirley Mason.—

Why Fox would take a star who is liked as well as Shirley and put her in a bathing suit with an underworld character is beyond me.—F. J. O'Hara, Community theatre, Elgin, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Last Trail, with a special cast.—

Good picture quite cut, but in fair condition.—J. Winninger, Davison theatre, Waupon, Wis.—General patronage.

The Last Trail, with a special cast.—

Did fair business two days, but Fox got the most of its receipts.—Vernon Locey, Temple theatre, Howell, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Ragged Heiress, with Shirley Mason.—A most pleasing picture. One that will play to the older sympathies.—D. A. White, Cozy theatre, Checotah, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Arabian Love, with John Gilbert.—A good picture. It is a sheik picture. Would go better for a mid-week feature than a Saturday program, although ran it on Saturday.—A. L. Veatch, Princess theatre, Morganfield, Ky.—Small town patronage.

Arabian Love, with John Gilbert.—Lots of good comments. Didn't seem to draw but pleased those that came.—J. W. May, Grand theatre, Shawneetown, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Shame, with a special cast.—A very good picture, although title held them away. One that will please majority.—W. M. Ward, Starlight theatre, Corning, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Lights of the Desert, with Shirley Mason.—All agreed on the merits of this picture. It's good entertainment and Shirley is just as nice as—well, we're for her.—F. E. Sabin, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Lights of the Desert, with Shirley Mason.—A very pleasing program picture. Contains good comedy furnished by a woman who cares very little for the village gossips and man-handles the delinquents.—Chas. Born, Elks theatre, Prés-cott, Ariz.—General patronage.

The Fighting Streak, with Tom Mix.—

A good program picture. Mix is the best star for our show on Saturday. Mix is always a good drawing card for us.—A. L. Veatch, Princess theatre, Morganfield, Ky.—Small town patronage.

The Fighting Streak, with Tom Mix.—

Good picture, but lacked the average pep usually found in this star's pictures. Our kids held their seats very nicely.—Geo. J. Kress, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fighting Streak, with Tom Mix.—

Mix always good, but our audience prefers better than others. This one will average up good.—A. A. Suszycki, Majestic theatre, Mauston, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fighting Streak, with Tom Mix.—

Good. Pleased everyone, but not as good as some of Mix's other pictures, but the audience did turn out good to Mix.—R. D. Troutman, Ethel theatre, Ethel, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Rough Diamond, with Tom Mix.—

The usual Mix stunts and comedy. Business fair.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

A Rough Diamond, with Tom Mix.—

Should be liked by any audience as the horse and mule are great. You can boost Mix as well as you can. One is as good as the other.—Wm. Krumholz, Grand theatre, Hallock, Minn.—General patronage.

The Fast Mail, with Charles Jones.—

Had many good comments and only adverse comments were, "It wasn't what I was expecting." They all seemed pleased, but seemed to think there should have been a more elaborate plot. However, I did good business at a 50 cent admittance. Jones always draws well here and a melodrama suits most of my patrons.—H. L. Fox, Tokio theatre, Morehouse, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fast Mail, with Charles Jones.—

Very good picture. Good business one day.—G. Strasser Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Money to Burn, with William Russell.—

A little old, but will please any audi-

Little Miss Smiles, with Shirley Mason.—A clever little picture designed to please the few that came out.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Sky High, with Tom Mix.—Went over sky high. Established a fine start off for our new serial The White Eagle. Chose Mix especially as the one actor who could be mounted upon to secure a good crowd for this opening serial event.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

Extra Extra, with a special cast.—No good for me. Didn't like the picture.—J. W. May, Grand theatre, Shawneetown, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Chasing the Moon, with Tom Mix.—

Here we are again with the old reliable slapstick. Not too interesting, but it is in the whole six reels, but plenty of action and comedy. The titles alone are worth the price of admission.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Chasing the Moon, with Tom Mix.—

They sure come when I have Tom. About average Mix picture.—J. W. May, Grand theatre, Shawneetown, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Without Fear, with Pearl White.—

Nothing to rave over. Glad I have finished the picture. Lay off this one if you can.—D. A. White, Cozy theatre, Checotah, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Virgin Paradise, with Pearl White.—

Pearl does some wonderful acting in this one and believe me she puts up some fight. Played two days to excellent business. Against the good picture ran The Park Resort theatre and Smilin' Through.

Bad weather. Admission ten and twenty-five cents.—Lynn Overton, Majestic theatre, Bangor, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Western Speed, with Charles Jones.
This is the kind that get me Saturday night crowd. Would rather advertise him as "Buck."—J. W. May, Grand theatre, Shawneetown, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Up and Going, with Tom Mix.—Good Western picture, but not as good as some of his pictures. Pleased about 74 per cent.—D. A. White, Cozy theatre, Checotah, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Up and Going, with Tom Mix.—Different from the old Tom Mix. Has a real story, plot 'n' everything. Took well here.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Up and Going, with Tom Mix.—Different from the old Tom Mix. Good picture, but somehow did not please as other Mix pictures.—J. Winninger, Davison theatre, Waupun, Wis.—General patronage.

Any Wife, with Pearl White.—We have read of some exhibitors saying Miss White is no good in features and we don't call this a feature, but this picture was one that certainly pleased our patrons. It carries a good story well acted. In this era of changeable love tangles this picture should appeal to many.—Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

To a Finish, with Charles Jones.—Good jokes drop off.—F. E. Sabbin, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

To a Finish, with Charles Jones.—This picture has or rather carries a possible story and very nicely worked out. "Buck" is there with plenty of action in this typical Western picture. The last 5th red affords enough of action for the entire picture. Book it and don't be afraid if your people like Western stuff.—Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Iron to Gold, with Dustin Farnum.—Have noticed some adverse comments, but it pleased my house and got the money. Give me more like it.—J. W. May, Grand theatre, Shawneetown, Ill.—Small town patronage.

A Connecticut Yankee, with Harry Myers.—A little late in playing this. It pleased because it is something different.—J. Winninger, Davison theatre, Waupun, Wis.—General patronage.

A Connecticut Yankee, with Harry Myers.—For clean entertainment, with thrills, romance and wit combined, this picture is a winner. Played to good business and had nothing but compliments on it.—P. E. Doe, Electric theatre, Arcadia, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Over the Hill, with Mary Carr.—"If you have tears to shed prepare to shed them now." A sea of white handkerchiefs at the start and an ocean of grey wet mops at the close. They came to weep and wanted to weep and weep they did. We used every known article of advertising for carried. The play seems to be well known and pleased all who saw it. We failed to make anything on it, due to high price. Eleven reels. Charged business and twenty-five cents. Special music.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

Over the Hill, with Mary Carr.—All I have to say is "Play the picture, it is very beautiful." They will smile at you going out, although they were crying during the show.—F. O'Hara, Community theatre, Elgin, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Goldwyn

The Strangers' Banquet, a Marshall Neilan production.—Although a "Capital vs. Labor" picture, it is one that has an appeal to all classes and with a very pleasing love story. It holds the interest throughout. A splendid cast well directed and good returns. Why ask for more?—Peters. Frank L. Brown, Liberty theatre, Long Beach, Calif.—General patronage.

The Strangers' Banquet, a Marshall Neilan production.—Good picture, a little too many sub-plots and fighting. Paid too much for this one, although it did a normal business but not due to picture pulling power.—U. K. Rice, Auditorium theatre, Winston-Salem, N. C.—Transient patronage.

The Sin Flood, with a special cast.—Some thought it was great and others thought it was poor. Caused a wider variation of comments than any other picture played. Lost money as usual on this Goldwyn special (?) picture, as I have on their others.—Russell Armen, K. P. theatre, Pittsburgh, Ill.—General patronage.

Brothers Under the Skin, with a special cast.—A wonderful true picture. Satisfied an cent. Acting very good. It's a good Sunday picture. Cleverly directed and acted.—A. Wallerstein, Tivoli theatre, Michigan City, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Remembrance, a Rupert Hughes production.—Good picture, but over exploited. All right if you can buy right for program.—Furneau theatre Co., Par- mele theatre, Plattsmouth, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Come on Over, with Colleen Moore.—A dandy good program picture. Better than some specials. Will please any audience.—S. W. Filson, Opera House, Scott City, Kan.—Neighborhood patronage.

Come on Over, with Colleen Moore.—A mighty clever little program picture full of jokes and true to life thoughts and scenes.—Geo. C. Starkey, Opera House, Montour Falls, New York.—General patronage.

Always the Woman, with Betty Com- mon.—Better lay off this one. Three different stories in one picture, hard to under- stand as they are so mixed up.—W. M. Ward, Starlight theatre, Corning, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Dangerous Curve Ahead, with a special cast.—If you haven't played it and can buy it to show at regular prices, this is a picture that you may be proud to offer any audience.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The North Wind's Malice, with a special cast.—Must have gotten hold of the print that Brother Powers spoke of in the January 6th issue. It sure had the D. T.'s. Hope national contract will provide for this. This Alaskan picture, taken on Lake Champlain, has very pretty scenes. The Jewish comedy relief is good. Sanzits is pleasant. Plot rather slow. Good average northern and clean. A good print would have helped in general interest. Seven reels. Lost money. Rarities and revivals, local stunts, are all cut ting in territorially this winter. We're sure praying for spring.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.

The Glorious Fool, with Helene Chad- wick.—A fair program picture.—S. W. Filson, Opera House, Scott City, Kan.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Man From Lost River, with House Peters.—Something wrong with print I had; badly cut. No doubt it is a good picture when complete.—J. Winninger, Davison theatre, Waupun, Wis.—General patronage.

A Voice in the Dark, with a special cast.—This picture has not been greatly praised by other exhibitors, but for us it drew a good crowd at thirty and ten cents and held the interest of our audi ence better than most of the pictures we have had lately.—C. E. Hopkins, Hopkins theatre, Cotter, Ark.—Small town patronage.

For Those We Love, with Betty Com- mon.—Not much of a feature. Six reels and should be shown in five reels. Betty Comson and Leon Chaney did the best they could, for the story was a very weak theme.—H. E. Holben, Olympic theatre, Lenox, Iowa.—General patronage.

Hold Your Horses, with Tom Moore.—Very good picture. Should please any audience. Will pay you to book it. Advertisement big.—C. McElwee, Sigma theatre, Johnstown, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

Voices of the City, with a special cast.
A picture on the heavy drama order, under the old, etc., the kind that suits the majority of patrons. Excellent acting and a credit to the producer.—O. H. Southworth, Opera House, Adams, N. Y.—General patronage.

From the Ground Up, with Tom Moore.—A good program picture.—W. M. Ward, Starlight theatre, Corning, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Just Out of College, with Jack Pick-"tor.—You won't go wrong on this one if your patrons like comedy-dramas.—D. B. Follett, Star theatre, Gibsonburg, Ohio.—General patronage.

The Night Rose, with Lon Chaney.—A very good picture story of fashionable underworld and will please. Don't be afraid to book this one.—H. G. Schmidt, Palace theatre, Long Fine, Nebr.—General patronage.

Prisoners of Love, with Betty Compson.—Go the limit on this one. It will please 100 per cent.—D. B. Follett, Star theatre, Gibsonburg, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

Prisoners of Love, with Betty Compson.—Fairly good picture, but action too slow to make one interested in this than this one. No padding in five reels and every one good. Pleased my patrons 100 per cent.—Attendance fair.—A. M. Allen, Dixie theatre, Russellville, Ky.—General patronage.

Watch Your Step, with Cullen Landis.—Mostly clever little program picture which will please everybody.—G. D. Starkey, Opera House, Montour Falls, N. Y.—General patronage.

When Romance Rideres, with a special cast.—A Western feature that pleased the Zane Grey fans.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Saw it.—General patronage.

When Romance Rides, with a special cast.—A splendid adventure picture. Zane Grey's name and the fact that it is based on a popular novel, plus a good cast, made a winner.—J. C. Jenkins, Auditorium theatre, Nelig, Nebr.—General patronage.

Hodkinson

Bullfight, with Carlyle Blackwell.—A pleased Star theatre patrons who like action. Drew well, not so much on account of stars as because story had run in local paper. Well made, well acted.—P. G. Espee, Fad theatre, Brookings, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Affinities, with a special cast.—An enjoyable farce, comedy and good entertain-ment.—Chas. Born, Elks theatre, Prescott, Ariz.—General patronage.

The Dwelling Place of Light, with a special cast and labor theme. A good lot of action. Most of the comments were good. Strike scene very stirring. Great punch in the climax.—W. E. Snyder, Idle Hour theatre, Cambridge Springs, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

French Heels, with Irene Castle.—Nothing to rave over. Will get by as nothing.—F. E. Snyder, Elks theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Partners of the Tide, with a special cast.—Very well, story is old and the print we got was in poor condition, our people certainly enjoyed it. It is an unusual picture and pleased us over most any town.—Leuzinger & Amsberry, Carthage theatre, Carthage, S. Dak.—Neighborhood patronage.

Free Air, with a special cast.—I am enclosing two cards, I put out on this subject that brought in a nice return and on the picture this fall in an advertis- ing campaign.—R. S. Moore, Gem theatre, Snyder, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Cameron of the Royal Mounted, with Gaston Glass.—Was a good picture once, but it was all shot to pieces when I got it.—D. B. Follett, Star theatre, Gibsonburg, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

East Lynne, with Mabel Ballin.—I ran this one Sunday and thought I would pull, but did not get film rental. It pleased those who saw it, but did not get the money.—R. S. Moore, Gem theatre, Snyder, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Mysterious Rider, with a special cast.—Played this last August on Home-coming Day and drew biggest crowd of the year. Picture was much praised by women as well as men.—J. L. Meyers, Liberty theatre, Ivesdale, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Rip Van Winkle, with a special cast.—Very good and a good print. This will get you the money if properly advertised.—D. B. Follett, Star theatre, Gibsonburg, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

Metro

Hearts Aflame, a Reginald Barker pro-duction.—A magnificent production due to the greatest forest fire scenes ever shown. The fire scene are worth while and the price of admission.—J. Bonell, Monroe theatre, Key West, Fla.

The Prisoner of Zenda, a Rex Ingram production. A better picture would have been better to find. (Pardon me, Mr. O'Hara, if I seem to give cause to traveling salesmen to raise the price ten dollars on strength of this report, but truth must out.) Read Anthony Hope's novel, then order this up and boost it. This is the kind of a drama that the better class want, expect and seldom find. It may not draw the wild west crowd, but in our town we have to play all types of plays to attract all types of people. Lewis Stone and Alice Terry deserve great praise. We put on extra fine music.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

Broadway Rose, with Mae Murray.—Very good, indeed. Lavishly produced. Well acted, but story has been done too much. Not in a class with Fascination, but will please, however. No money made as picture costs too much.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Broadway Rose, with Mae Murray.—Did good business with rain two days.—T. W. Young, Frances theatre, Dyersburg, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Missing Husbands, with a special cast.—A well played out picture and elegant scenery and costumes, but the story was too deep for the most of my patrons to understand. —Edw. W. Werner, Windsor theatre, Canton, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Hands of Nara, with Clara Kim- ball Young.—Star no drawing power here. Story uninteresting, without enter- taining value.—Chas. Born, Elks thea- tre, Prescott, Ariz.—General patronage.

The Hands of Nara, with Clara Kimball Young.—A picture that will appeal to high brows. Business very poor.—T. W. Young, Frances theatre, Dyersburg, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Peacock Alley, with Mae Murray.—I call this a great picture and my patrons told me so. Drew people that don't often come.—A. A. Suszycki, Majestic theatre, Mauston, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Peacock Alley, with Mae Murray.—Absolutely A-1 and has substance to please all classes.—R. S. Moore, Gem theatre, Snyder, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Fascination, with Mae Murray.—Didn't please as well as Peacock Alley.—J. W. May, Grand theatre, Shawneetown, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Fascination, with Mae Murray.—A-1 from every angle. Ought to suit all classes as it has society, blood and thunder, and comedy. A picture that ought to please all classes. And you have to hand it to Mr. Robert W. Frazier, as personally I think he has Valentinio cheated from every angle.—R. S. Moore, Gem theatre, Snyder, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Fascination, with Mae Murray.—If you have played Peacock Alley you will be disappointed in this. While it is lavishly produced and is a mighty good picture, it somehow does not register a kick like Peacock Alley. If I were going to play them again, I would play Fascination first by all means. Mae is easy to look at and had no kicks at raised admission to good business.—H. P. Thompson, Liberty theatre, Pardeeville, Wis.—General patronage.

Fascination, with Mae Murray.—Extra good production but the exchange got all the money.—D. B. Follett, Star theatre, Gibbonsburg, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

Fascination, with Mae Murray.—Three nights to fair business.—Klontary Bros., Strathmore theatre, Warsaw, Ind.—General patronage.

Enter Madame, with Clara Kimball Young.—Booked for three days. Pulled off on second. The champion of all cheese productions with an all cheese cast. Might I suggest this lemon to the boys who never have 'em walk out! I have one of the highest salaried projectionists in the state, R. C. Dunlap, who has been with me four years. He's the best I've ever seen. I have a $75 a week organist, a new Gardiner enemy gold fibre screen, two Powers 6B projectors, new Wurlitzer organ. They walked out. Drew big.—With the Metro, Cincinnati, about it, and received a reply allowing me a credit of $25 on the picture. Hurried for the Majestic theatre, Washington, C. H., O.

Fighting Mad, with William Desmond.—Just average Western. Nothing to rave about.—A. A. Suszycki, Majestic theatre, Mauston, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Conquering Power, a Rex Ingram production.—Didn't seem to draw. Didn't make any money.—F. W. May, Grand theatre, Shawneetown, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Conquering Power, a Rex Ingram production.—If this pleased anyone they failed to reflect the expression as they came out.—R. S. Moore, Gem theatre, Snyder, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Turn to the Right, a Rex Ingram production.—If all pictures were as good as this one, good day, I wouldn't need to advertise, just open up and bank the dough.—A. A. Suszycki, Majestic theatre, Mauston, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Turn to the Right, a Rex Ingram production.—All the good I could say about this one is not enough. Book it and then turn your great and meet your patrons as they come out and you will feel fully paid.—R. S. Moore, Gem theatre, Snyder, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Glass House, with Viola Dana.—The best with this star for many a day. Pleased, but failed to draw. Her past pictures have killed her here.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Berdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Glass Houses, with Viola Dana.—Very well liked. Good business.—G. Strasser Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Paramount

When Knighthood Was In Flower, with Marion Davies.—Once in a blue moon they come, the truly great, the epoch-making pictures, and we join with the Cincinnati Post and say, "We'll tell the world it's a picture." If you never play another big picture, play this one. If you ever put your personal endorsement on an entertainment, put it on this one. All they say about it is true. The most beautiful picture ever conceived with the most beautiful story ever told. Action, thrills, comedy, and the best acting ever. You will be proud you are an exhibitor. Let 'em know you are proud of "Knighthood." Tell them it cost you a small fortune to play it for them. Expense shows all through this production. Tramp it on with both feet. Paramount pictures. Paramount service and cooperation all in a class by themselves. Six days and the sixth day was the biggest.—George Rea, Colonial theatre, Washington C. H., O.

When Knighthood Was in Flower, with Marion Davies.—The biggest costume picture ever presented. Acting was good and altogether it was a fine drawing card.—A. Wallerstein, Tivoli theatre, Michigan City, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

When Knighthood Was in Flower, with Marion Davies.—A first class production. Drew the largest attendance since The Four Horsemen.—Chas. Born, Elks theatre, Prescott, Ariz.—General patronage.

My American Wife, with Gloria Swanson.—This is a real good picture. Clean cut and entertaining. Scenery and photography excellent. Story good, but could be better. Did fine business on it.—A. Wallerstein, Tivoli theatre, Michigan City, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

My American Wife, with Gloria Swanson.—Gloria and the fine rags certainly bring them in. The picture is well done and seemed to please, regardless of the fact that they used Moreno instead of Valentino. Tony has it over the Italian like a tent.—C. K. Rice, Auditorium theatre, Winston-Salem, N. C.—Transient patronage.

The Old Homestead, with Theodore Roberts.—Here is a real picture and should go big anywhere. It is good for advanced prices.—E. E. Galley, Crystal theatre, Wayne, Neb.—General patronage.

The Old Homestead, with Theodore Roberts.—First class. Splendid in acting, cast, story and manner of production. One of the best storm scenes ever produced in picture.—Chas. Born, Elks theatre, Prescott, Ariz.—General patronage.

Back Home and Broke, with Thomas Meighan.—A great picture with a great moral lesson. A picture suitable for all audiences and one that will draw business at your house.—J. Carbonell, Monroe theatre, Key West, Fla.

Back Home and Broke, with Thomas Meighan.—One hundred per cent picture. Next the biggest, but the most satisfactory picture I have played for years. Have "asked for return date."—Bert Silver, Silvers Family theatre, Greenvile, Mich.—General patronage.

Back Home and Broke, with Thomas Meighan.—Best picture we have had this season. Business good. Patrons well pleased.—Glen A. Cross, Regent theatre, Battle Creek, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Impossible Mrs. Bellew, with Gloria Swanson.—Very good picture.—Parneke Theatre Co., Parneke theatre, Plattsmouth, Neb.—Small-town patronage.

The World's Applause, with Bebe Daniels.—Proved to be a satisfactory offering for three days. Being a William DeMille production, it is rich in superb settings and excellent photography. Kathryn Williams deserves much praise for her portrayal of jealousy and much-to-be-pitied wife of the flirtatious artist husband, whose death is caused in a struggle between the husband's studio. Bebe Daniels and Lewis Stone also give pleasing characterizations. Picture has an audience appeal, even though it is a weak one.—Fred S. Meyer, Palace theatre, Hamilton, O.

The Dictator, with Wallace Reid.—Seemed to please and drew pretty well although Waller has passed.—S. M. Southworth, American theatre, Canton, N. Y.—Neighborhood and College patronage.

Missing Millions, with Alice Brady.—One of the Boston Blackie crook stories and about the best Miss Brady ever had. Well done, well mounted, and convincing...

story.—Ben, L. Morris, Olympic theatre, Bellaire, Ohio.—General patronage.

Anna Ascends, with Alice Brady.—An extra good program picture.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

Singed Wings, with Bebe Daniels.—Gave excellent satisfaction. Action and story a little draggy in spots.—H. Yost, West End theatre, Santa Ana, Cal.—General patronage.

The Man Who Saw Tomorrow, with Thomas Meighan.—A splendid production. Pleased my patrons. With Theodore Roberts and Leatrice Joy in cast made a very good drawing card. Meighan was a showy patronage here.—Thompson Bros., Thompson theatre, Healdton, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

For the Defense, with Ethel Clayton.—As good as the average Clayton picture. Sarah Bernhardt as defense attorney did a fine Pitts, also Mayme Kelso. Feminine contingent was favorably impressed with this attraction.—Henry W. Gauding, Lincoln theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Clarence, with Wallace Reid. — Has both star and story value. Ran it Ash Wednesday, start of Lent, on a religious holiday and had no business, but it was no fault of the picture. Good entertainment.—Chas. H., Ryan, Garfield Theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Clarence, with Wallace Reid.—A highly pleasing picture, but flopped on account of playing it soon after the passing away of the stars.—Chas. Bona, Elks Theatre, Prescott, Ariz.—General patronage.

The Young Rajah, with Rodolph Valentino.—Picture very good. Pleased everyone and received favorable comments on it.—Chas. H., Ryan, Garfield Theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Manslaughter, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—Excellent production.—Parmele Theatre Co, Parmele Theatre, Platts- mouth, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

Manslaughter, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—Produced as a special for your patronage. Has everything the average fan likes in his entertainment. Best of Paramount’s “Famous 8,” although they did not put as much money as other great pictures. Came within 50% of this in their last group. 9,001 feet on ten reels.—Chas. H. Ryan, Garfield Theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

To Have and to Hold, with a special cast.—A very pleasing costume drama with a good story. It gave much satisfaction.—H. E. Yost, West End Theatre, Santa Ana, Cal.—General patronage.

To Have and to Hold, with Betty Compson.—Drew many favorable comments from those who saw it. A costume picture that pleased.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic Theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

While Satan Sleeps, with Jack Holt.—Good picture. Pleaser 90%.—Parmele Theatre, Plattsmouth, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

North of the Rio Grande, with Jack Holt and Bebe Daniels.—Here’s a good Western with two well known stars. It’s only in five reels and should be sold as a program and not as a special. Pleased them all. Attendance good. Advertising, lobby and six sheets.—A. Mitchell, Dixie Theatre, Russellville, Ky.—General patronage.

North of the Rio Grande, with Jack Holt and Bebe Daniels.—As Western this picture classes high, but it seems as though Jack and Bebe are a little out of place. The scenery in this picture is beautiful and some of the shots are wonderful. My people liked it and said so. Don’t let them tell you that it is a big special, for it is not, but it is a mighty good program picture.—H. P. Thompson, Liberty Theatre, Pardeeville, Wis.—General patronage.

Making a Man, with Jack Holt.—Falls short of White Satan Sleeps, but still it is a good one. Business fair.—Russell Armentrout, K. P. theatre, Pittsfield, Ill.—General patronage.

Beyond, with Ethel Clayton.—Good acting by star on a poor subject. Picture has an appeal to women only. Many men walked out on it. Most people don’t care any more for weird acting on the screen.—Columbia theatre, Poynette, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Beyond, with Ethel Clayton.—Drew well and pleased the majority. Has an appeal that reaches most everyone. Not a special, but a good clean picture.—L. A. Biliolid, Photo Play theatre, Grand Rapids, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Hell Diggers, with Wallace Reid.—Poorest Reid we have run, yet passable. We lost more on this picture than on any in six months. Many said they couldn’t feel like seeing poor Wallace on the screen since he was dead, but whether this was the sole cause of this break in attendance I do not know. I have him soon again and will definitely know if his demise is going to hurt his pictures.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

The Hell Diggers, with Wallace Reid. — Had the print been in good shape this one would have good patronage. Played this one after his death and they came to see him. I was afraid that Wally’s death would hurt his pictures, but my patrons turned out to see this one all right. Attendance good. Advertising lobby and six sheets.—A. Mitchell, Dixie theatre, Russellville, Ky.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Call of the North, with Jack Holt.—Just an average 87.50 picture. Cannot understand why we pay so much for this star’s pictures. He doesn’t get them in for use. Paramount should co-star and perhaps we could get our money back at least.—Geo. J. Kress, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Is Matrimony a Failure? with a special cast.—An entertaining six-reel comedy which should have been better made up. Work of all the principals was excellent and picture was nicely produced. Ran When Kane Met Abel, New Leather Pictures, with this.—Sawyer Bros., this theatre have action and punch, but this was not the best by any means. Some of the old scenes is much better.—Henry W. Gauding, Lincoln theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Great Moment, with Gloria Swanson.—Good picture. Had this booked for two days, but did not think it strong enough to hold up. Did our usual Sunday business on it. Paid too much for it.—Geo. J. Kress, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Her Husband’s Trademark, with Gloria Swanson.—Charged ten and thirty-three cents for this one and believe I pleased everyone. Gloria wears a few well gowns that please the women. Plenty of action.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small-town patronage.

Three Word Brand, with William S. Hart.—This was good and not well advertised so did not show well at the box office.—Columbia theatre, Poynette, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Three Word Brand, with William S. Hart.—Great Hart with a good Western due to its interesting plot. Seven reels. All enjoyed it. Many hearty laughs, though not a great deal of action. Hart plays a theatre.—Philp Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

The Great Impersonation, with James Kirkwood.—This gave good satisfaction. Interests well sustained all through the picture. This one is well worth running, boys.—Walter H. Munson, Queen’s theatre, Hesperel, Ont., Can.—Small town patronage.

The Law and the Woman, with Betty Compson.—A fair picture. It is a society picture and will only please the class of people who like this nature of pictures.—Duncan & Veatch, Princess theatre, Morganfield, Ky.—General patronage.

The Crimson Challenge, with Dorothy Dalton.—Exceptionally good Western. Some of the pictures good acting.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small-town patronage.

Her Own Money, with Ethel Clayton.—The weakest Clayton film of a long way. It is not very bad and it’s not very good. In the Days of Buffalo Bill responsible for good business.—Fred Hinds, Cresco theatre, Cresco, la.—Neighborhood patronage.

Her Own Money, with Ethel Clayton.
A picture well worth seeing. Actress well liked in this town. As clean as any could want it—Roy L. Dowling, Ozark theatre, Ozark, Ala.—General patronage.

Moran of the Lady Letty, with Rodolph Valentino. A splendid picture but more suitable for men than women. My patrons like these stars in society pictures.

Good business, as the stars are so well known.—W. L. Ellen, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Bachelor Daddy, with Thomas Meighan. I have received more compliments on this picture than on any I ever ran before. Absolutely the best thing Meighan has ever made. Play it two nights and your first night's crowd will fill your house the second night.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small-town patronage.

A Bachelor Daddy, with Thomas Meighan. Best picture we have had in six months. Star very popular, but even he can do better with high-grade story like this.—C. M. Vail, Blende theatre, Benton, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Bachelor Daddy, with Thomas Meighan. The best comedy-drama we have shown. The five kiddies were the stars. Thomas Meighan and Leonard Joe in the supporting cast.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small-town patronage.

A Bachelor Daddy, with Thomas Meighan. Absolutely one of the finest productions we have played during the past year or more. The human touch given this picture through the children will win the heart of a wooden Indian, and the picture will please the most hardened fan. I never saw a happier bunch of people leave the theatre than went back after the showing. Got many comments, and even telephone calls telling how good it was. It can be bought right and will make you some money if you tell them it's a real picture. Better get it and then play it up.—H. P. Thompson, Liberty theatre, Pardeeville, Wis.—General patronage.

Wealth, with Ethel Clayton. No adverse reports. Many stopped on way out to say, "Fine show." Awful weather so no money, but no fault of attraction.—Unique theatre, Bricelyn, Minn.—General patronage.

The Cowboy and the Lady, with Mary Miles Minter. A pleasing picture well produced. —Chas. Born, Elks theatre, Prescott, Ariz.—General patronage.

Something to Think About, a Cecil B. DeMille production. This is a very nice picture and again we have one more picture named right.—F. J. O'Hara, Community theatre, Elgin, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Don't Tell Everything, with a special cast.—Class A in every respect. Another of the better class of pictures.—C. W. Longacre, New Glarus theatre, New Glarus, Wis.—General patronage.

Cappy Ricks, with Thomas Meighan. Great picture. Please all of my patrons that saw it.—C. R. Miller, Gem theatre, Spur, Tex.

Cappy Ricks, with Thomas Meighan. Here's a good one. If you haven't played it, get it. A little old, but sure to please every one of your patrons.—F. E. Sabin, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small-town patronage.

The Bride's Play, with Marion Davies. —A good picture, but poor paper on it. Not good for our Sunday patrons.—J. Winninger, Davison theatre, Waupun, Wis.—Small-town patronage.

The Bride's Play, with Marion Davies. —A good costume play that pleased the majority.—C. W. Longacre, New Glarus theatre, New Glarus, Wis.—General patronage.

The Charm School, with Wallace Reid. —This picture gave perfect satisfaction. Heard the remark as if the theatre died. "It's a pity that good-looking man died." In fact, we are all sorry in this town, as he was our favorite.—C. H. Simpson, Princess theatre, Millen, Ga.—General patronage.

Exit the Vamp, with Ethel Clayton. Nice little program picture.—J. Winninger, Davison theatre, Waupun, Wis.—General patronage.

Passing Through, with Douglas MacLean. —Will get by, but does not draw. All of Paramount pictures fail to get me anywhere.—H. G. Schmidt, Palace theatre, Long Pine, Neb.—General patronage.

The Sheik, with Rodolph Valentino. While this picture is getting old, I played it to good business.—Edw. W. Werner, Windsor theatre, Canton, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

Ladies Must Live, with Betty Compson. —An eight-reel picture that should have been about four. Nobody liked it, as it was too hard to follow. No good for small towns.—E. L. Graef, Opera House, Hortonville, Wis.—Small-town patronage.

After the Show, with Lila Lee. —Good show for large town. Some scenes should be omitted for small town.—C. M. Vail, Blende theatre, Benton, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Bonded Woman, with Betty Compson. —Very well acted and holds the interest fairly well, but not a very pleasing story.—S. M. Southworth, American theatre, Canton, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Our Leading Citizen, with Thomas Meighan. Seven reels. One which won. A clean and interesting story which pleased very much and is a credit to any theatre. The supporting cast could not be beat. It was fine.—Horn and Morgan, Star theatre, Hay Springs, Neb.—Small-town patronage.

The Home Stretch, with Douglas MacLean. —Good and people all said so. Clean and snappy. Will please. Our book of average is too per cent.—Unique theatre, Bricelyn, Minn.

The Idol of the North, with Dorothy Dalton. —A Western that pleased our Saturday crowd.—J. Winninger, Davison theatre, Waupun, Wis.—General patronage.

Borderland, with Agnes Ayres. —Six full reels. Very well liked by our patrons. Many favorable comments, especially on the scenery. Excellent supporting cast.—Horn and Morgan, Star theatre, Hay Springs, Neb.—Small-town patronage.

The Beauty Shop, with Raymond Hitchcock. —Despite the fact that Hitchcock, Montague Love, Jim Corbett, Louise Fazenda, and Billy B. Van are in the cast, this did not draw. Some of the sub-titles were clever, as were the Fairbanks dancing twins. Outside of that—well, by no means, a world beater. Oo. la la.—Henry W. Gaulding, Lincoln theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Forever, with Wallace Reid. —Played this on day after Reid died and it sure was some beautiful picture, but too sad an ending.—J. Winninger, Davison theatre, Waupun, Wis.—Small-town patronage.

Scarlet Days, a D. W. Griffith production. —Don't amount to much.—A. K. Roth, Crystal theatre, Silver Creek, Neb.—Small-town patronage.

Boomerang Bill, with Lionel Barry.
more.—Good picture, but poor title. Does not draw. Acting fine.—J. Winninger, Davison theatre, Waupun, Wis.—General patronage.

The Whistle, with William S. Hart.—Wish I might never have a worse show in my house. It has everything to make a good picture and will please all but the hardboiled. Different from general run of Harts. Not a Western. Has a good plot and will make friends for any house, especially the ladies. Has father love, mother love, fight, tragedy, humor and a good story. Where do you want to clean as new-mown hay.—Unique theatre, Bricelyn, Minn.

Forbidden Fruit, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—Played this to a good Sunday house. Picture of 1920 model, but fine. Print in good condition.—J. Winninger, Davison theatre, Waupun, Wis.—General patronage.

One a Minute, with Douglas MacLean.—Pleasing light comedy. My patrons thought it a dandy show.—Unique theatre, Bricelyn, Minn.

Fathe

Dr. Jack, with Harold Lloyd.—One hundred per cent. Everyone went out laughing. I thought Grandma's Boy could not be better. My Losing.—Losing front and decorated car to advertise.—Thompson Bros., Thompson theatre, Heidlin, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Dr. Jack, with Harold Lloyd.—Not as good as Grandma's Boy, and did not draw as well, although presented under ideal conditions.—H. E. Yost, West End theatre, Santa Ana, Calif.—General patronage.

Nanook of the North, with a special cast.—Very good educational picture and drew well.—A. K. Roth, Crystal theatre, Silver Creek, Neb.—Small-town patronage.

Nanook of the North, with a special cast.—Wonderful educational, worth everybody's time and money. Did not bill as an educational, but did send comp scores to teachers, who in turn sent the children. Fell down on second night. Paper on this.—Lost money. Unless you can tie up with schools you may be out of luck. Six reels. We charged forty and fifteen cents.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

Nanook of the North, with a special cast.—A most interesting picture. Educational. No story to it, but highly interesting. Most of print in good clear condition.—Parmele Theatre Co., Parmele theatre, Plattsmouth, Neb.—Small-town patronage.

One Hour Before Dawn, with H. B. Warner.—Absorbing mystery story, spooky and satisfying. Well carried out and atmosphere of mystery is very forcible. It's good.—M. Hillier, Pastime theatre, Preserve, Kan.—Small-town patronage.

The Heart Line, with Lea Baird.—Very good. Though a little old it is very good. Film good. Photography very good. Also Harold Lloyd in That's Him made good program at town and twenty-five. Business fair.—P. O. Roby, Latona theatre, Williamsburg, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Heart Line, with Leah Baird.—Fine. Pleased all, drew a good crowd. Leah is sure holding her own. Had special music for this.—O. R. Boettner, Audite, theatre, Madison, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Realart

The Speed Girl, with Bebe Daniels.—A very good comedy feature. Comments good on it. Business off, but no fault of picture.—J. W. Andersen, Rialto Theatre, Cozad, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Little Clown, with Mary Miles Minter.—Nice clean little picture. Pleased the children.—C. M. Vail, Blende Theatre, Benton, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Room and Board, with Constance Binney.—Certainly an old one, but it pleased the majority at 10 and 25c.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay Theatre, Ashland, Kans.—Small town patronage.

A Kiss in Time, with Wanda Hawley.—Good program picture.—J. W. May, Grand Theatre, Shawneetown, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Case of Becky, with Constance Binney.—Subject, hypnotism. Adverse comments from patrons. There are better pictures than this one.—Walter H. Musson, Queen's Theatre, Hesper, Ont., Can.—Small town patronage.

Selznick

One Week of Love, with Elaine Hammerstein.—An A1 audience picture, excellent in story, star and production. A good combination of society, Western and thrill picture that should go well with all classes.—Chas. B. Pollett, Star Theatre, Gibsonburg, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

Under Oath, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Good picture. This star doesn't make any bad pictures.—C. H. Simpson, Princess Theatre, Millen, Ga.—General patronage.

Clay Dollars, with Eugene O'Brien.—My patrons liked it. Small town life.—C. M. Vail, Blende Theatre, Benton, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Wide Open Town, with Conway Tearle.—Good picture. Holds the audience. Will please everybody and you won't have to give your right arm for it either. Book it, boys, and boost it hard.—Geo. J. Kress, Hudson Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Shadows of the Sea, with Conway Tearle.—Popular star in a weak story.—C. M. Vail, Blende Theatre, Benton, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Safety Curtain, with Norma Talbot.—Fair feature, but did not draw. Pleased about 50c.—H. E. Hoben, Olympic Theatre, Lenox, Iowa.—General patronage.

Good Night Paul, with Constance Talbot.—Patrons went wild over this one. Very good business.—G. Strasser, Sons, Emblem Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

United Artists

A Tailor Made Man, with Charles Ray.—Best Ray I ever had the pleasure of running. Ran this on New Year's against hard competition and packed them in.—A. A. Suszycki, Majestic Theatre, Maitson, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Woman's Small, with Mary Alden.—High-class picture. Too high class for the average public. Did poorest business of the season on this one. People want to laugh, not cry.—E. D. Keilmann, This Grand Theatre, Topeka, Kans.—General patronage.

Way Down East, a D. W. Griffith production.—A masterpiece. It's hard to say anything good of this picture that hasn't already been said. A picture with a moral that gets over better than most sermons and helps raise the picture industry to the high standard at which it is aimed. Business excellent.—P. E. Doe, Electric Theatre, Arcadia, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Way Down East, a D. W. Griffith production.—Played this three nights to big crowds. It's all that they say it is—a good picture and a money getter.—H. A. Larson, Majestic Theatre, Oakland, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

Disraeli, with George Arliss.—This one my patrons seemed to like. Ran with comedy. Helped to put it over. Arliss does some good acting. Pleased about 25c.—F. Paulick, Paulick Theatre, Muncoda, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Iron Trail, with a special cast,— FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN and Beverly are at work before the camera again. Here is a scene from their first production for Whitman Bennett.

better vehicles on numerous occasions.—Henry W. Gauding, Lincoln theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa.— Neighborhood patronage.

One Wonderful Night, with Herbert Rawlinson.—Good program picture. Pleased majority.—J. W. And-reasen, Rialto theatre, Cozad, Nebs.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Flaming Hour, with Frank Mayo. A picture that was liked by a large majority of our patrons. And it wasn't heavily paddled, as are so many alleged specials and super-specials(?) Opened

The Social Buccaneer with this. Looks like a good serial.—Henry W. Gauding, Lincoln theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa.— Neighborhood patronage.

The Loaded Door, with Hoot Gibson.—Good Western, Gibson liked very well here. Please about 75%.—D. A. White, Cozy theatre, Checotah, Okla.— Neighborhood patronage.

The Jilt, with a special cast.—A good cast, with nothing to do but stand around.
The first real battle on Universal's program in quite a while. Both of the crowd slept through it waiting for Buffalo Bill.
—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason Mich.—Small town patronage.

A Dangerous Game, with Gladys Walton.—Gave satisfaction as a rule. Story very improbable and several of the scenes very dark, due to doubt to poor lighting while shots were being made. This little lady is all right if given proper vehicle.
—Henry W. Gauding, Lincoln theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Lone Hand, with Hoot Gibson.—
Fair picture. Not as good as the average picture this star makes. However, will get by with a good comedy.—Geo. J. Kress, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.— Neighborhood patronage.

Her Night of Nights, with Marie Pre-cost.—A very good comedy-drama. More people like the star here than I thought.

—W. M. Ward, Starlight theatre, Cornning, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Top o' the Morning, with Gladys Walton.—Not so good, but you can get by with a good comedy. Too weak to depend on for a feature.—L. A. Pilliod, PhotoPlay theatre, Grand Rapids, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Black Bag, with Herbert Rawlin-son.—Excellent program picture.—R. S.
Moore, Gem theatre, Snyder, Okla.— Neighborhood patronage.

Trimmed, with Hoot Gibson.—Picture good. Not up to Hoot's average. Story weak. Drew good one day.—F. J. O'Hara, Community theatre, Elgin, Neb.— Neighborhood patronage.

Trimmed, with Hoot Gibson.—A Good picture. The bear, the jackass and Hoot make a good combination. You won't go wrong with this one.—W. V. Filson, Opera house, Scott City, Kans.—Neighborhood
patronage.

The Married Flapper, with Marie Pre-vest.—A dandy picture that pleased a small crowd. A marvel, but it's in the last reel that is worth the price of admission alone. Try it.—J. W. Boatwright, Radio theatre, Oark, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Trooper, with Gladys Walton.—
Not up to Miss Walton's standard. Poor pictures.—Star good.—D. A. White, Cozy theatre, Checotah, Okla.—Neighborhood
patronage.

Riding Wild, with Hoot Gibson.—Fair. I thought these Gibsons would stand up Friday and Saturday at advanced admission, but they won't take the grade. Has a very good magician's act, and Baby Paulick in The Little Father, who drags it up at fifteen and thirty cents.—Roy W.
Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—
Small town patronage.

Riding Wild, with Hoot Gibson.—A little different from his usual breezy Westerns but seemed to please. Drew good business on about as had a night as possible to have.—Ben L. Morris, Olympic theatre, Bellaire, Ohio.—General patronage.

Wild Honey, with Priscilla Dean.—
Very poor picture. Not pleased 25% of the patrons.—H. E. Holien, Olympic theatre, Lenox, Iowa.
General patronage.

All Night, with Rudolph Valentino.
—Patterson did not like it. Thought it was silly. Good business.—G. Strasser Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.— Neighborhood patronage.

The Scarlet Car, with Herbert Rawlin-son.—All I heard was that Herb imitated
Wally pretty good, but the story hasn't much to it. Just a good program.—S. V.
Wilson, Idle Hour theatre, Cambridge Springs, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Galloping Kid, with Hoot Gibson.
Not quite as good as his other features, but pleased 80% of the patrons.—H. E.
Holien, Olympic theatre, Lenox, Iowa.
General patronage.

Human Hearts, with House Peters.—
Not so bad for an old 'bushy' drama. Only seven reels, while it was billed as eight.
Story is changed from press dope, too.
Looks as though the censors had been nibbling at it. Don't claim too much a charge too much for it. (Or pay too much.)—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theaetre, Mason, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Human Hearts, with House Peters.—
This is as good a picture as anyone would care to look at. Drew almost as well as The Storm with about $10 less advertis-
Mae Murray, in two scenes from her new production "Jazzmania," distributed by Metro Pictures Corporation.

Rawlinson.—Rawlinson is getting to be a good bet for me. This one a very good crook story and one that is just a little different from the ordinary crook story.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kans.—Small town patronage.

Vitagraph

A Front Page Story, with Edward Horton.—The only newspaper picture I have ever seen that was accurate and did not make editors criticize. Everyone laughed, but despite big campaign did not do big business. Cold wave may be to blame.—E. D. Keillman, Grand theatre, Topeka, Kans.—General patronage.

The Ninety and Nine, with Colleen Moore.—Here is a picture worthy of every exhibitor's attention. Will please everyone and make you good money if you buy it right. Play it up as a railroad drama and a real forest fire that makes The Storm by Universal look like a Sunday picnic. The start of the picture has many touching scenes that will please the women. An all around good bet.—C. J. Goetz, Beverly theatre, Janesville, Wis.—General patronage.

One Stolen Night, with Alice Calhoun.—Patrons claim Alice at her best in this picture. Fair business. Costume picture.—G. Strasser Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—General patronage.

Divorce Coupons, with Corinne Griffith.—A good well acted picture and pleased all my people. Alson ran Pair of Kings, Semon comedy. All came out smiling. A 100%.—D. L. White, Coco theatre, Checotah, Okla.—General patronage.

You Never Know, with Earle Williams.—My patrons remarked favorably on this, which is another revolution in a mythical country, but different, and the kid part went over great. Good kid show.—S. V. Wallace, Idle Hour theatre, Cambridge Springs, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

When Danger Smiles, with William Duncan.—Good picture. A little dark in some places.—Edith Johnson is not hard to look at. Duncan draws very well here. Played with Semon in The Stage Hand.—F. J. O'Hara, Community theatre, Elgin, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Guilty Conscience, with Antonio Mo—

ing. Anyone who isn't playing Universal's new programs and specials are missing some of the best product on the market. They are sold at low, low prices, G. G. May's theatre, Kanopolis, Kans.—Small town patronage.

Human Hearts, with House Peters.—Pictures of this kind keep them coming back to your theatre. House makes a hit in any theatre. Just the kind the small towns need.—Wm. Krumholz, Grand theatre, Hallock, Minn.—General patronage.

Tracked to Earth, with Frank Mayo.—This picture pleased 100%. Would advise anybody playing it as it is certain to please. As good as any special we have run.—Lyric theatre, Manning, Tex.—Small town patronage.

The Guttersnipe, with Gladys Walton.—Five reels of nothing; not even enough to it to call it poor.—R. S. Moore, Gem theatre, Snyder, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Don't Get Personal, with Marie Prevost.—I have my first Prevost fliver to see. She is one of my best bets.—R. S. Moore, Gem theatre, Snyder, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Don't Get Personal, with Marie Prevost.—I have my first Prevost fliver to see. She is one of my best bets.—R. S. Moore, Gem theatre, Snyder, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—Good picture but would be better in poor condition. Had to eliminate fourth reel entirely. Drew fair.—Lyric theatre, Manning, Tex.—Small town patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—One of the best pictures I ever ran. Action, scenery, story A1, and title cannot be beat. Forest fires wonderful.—A. A. Suyzen, Little theatre, Mauston, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—One of the best big specials of the year. One of the best horror pictures. Book it and raise your prices. It's worth it and they will tell you so on the way out. Snow and fire scenes have never been equalled.—W. Tholozz, Grand theatre, Hallock, Minn.—General patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—A really good special except that love action in it is too drawn out. Outdoor scenes might be general public. Not as good as it should be. Will make good at box office if properly advertised.—Columbia theatre, Bayonne, N. J.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Trap, with Lon Chaney.—Boys, if you haven't played this one wire your exchange, and boost Lon Chaney as his wonderful pictures. Pleased 100%. Will hold them all the way through.—D. A. White, Cozy theatre, Checotah, Okla.—General patronage.

The Trap, with Lon Chaney.—This is great. Wonderful scenery, wonderful acting, wonderful photography. Played this one against NanoKe of the North in this picture. Did an excellent business. Book it.—Lynn Overton, Majestic theatre, Bangor, Mich.—General patronage.

Shattered Dreams, with Miss du Pont.—Not as good as A Wonderful Wife. No drawing power.—Lyric theatre, Manning, Tex.—Small town patronage.

The Wise Kid, with Gladys Walton.—Light comedy drama which our patrons mildly enjoyed.—J. L. Greenwood, Orpheum theatre, Weleetka, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Foolish Wives, with Eric Von Stroheim.—Somewhat crude picture. Elaborate and good acting. It didn't take with my crowd.—J. Carabell, Monroe theatre, Key West, Fla.

Foolish Wives, with Eric Von Stroheim.—Half the audience said it was great. The other half, poor. Drew one hundred and sixty-four people only in town of 3,200 on two days' showing.—K. J. Uglow, Strand theatre, Whitewater, Wis.—General patronage.

Foolish Wives, with Eric Von Stroheim.—No good for small towns. It doesn't go over, and you will hear about it.—Wm. Krumholz, Grand theatre, Hallock, Minn.—General patronage.

Conflict, with Priscilla Dean.—This feature pleased 100% to the few who saw it. Would advise playing it if audience is not too critical.—Lyric theatre, Manning, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Man to Man, with Harry Carey.—A very good Western production with plenty of life and action to get over. The cattle stampede was great. Very pleasing offering.—Thompson Bros., Thompson theatre, Healdton, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Man to Man, with Harry Carey.—Only jewel we have yet played worth a d—n. Pleased nearly capacity. If you have not played it do so. It will please.—Lyric theatre, Manning, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Across the Dead Line, with Frank Mayo.—This is an excellent program picture.—R. S. Moore, Gem theatre, Snyder, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Across the Deadline, with Frank Mayo.—Would have been good if all there. We got about 3,000 feet for this 5,000 foot feature.—Lyric theatre, Manning, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Headin' West, with Hoot Gibson.—Our patrons are almost always pleased with Hoot. He has the right kind of steam and snap and manages to put a little humor in as well. Generally do average business with these.—Columbia theatre, Bayonne, N. J.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Bear Cat, with Hoot Gibson.—Good Gibson Western. Pleased very small crowd.—Lyric theatre, Manning, Tex.—Small town patronage.

The Man Under Cover, with Herbert Rawlinson.—Rawlinson is getting to be a good bet for me. This one a very good crook story and one that is just a little different from the ordinary crook story.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kans.—Small town patronage.

The Woman Unders Cover, with Herbert Rawlinson.—Popular star in a pretty good story.—C. M. Vail, Blende theatre, Benton, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage. good writing power. Made a little money on a week night and packed them.—David L. Mickey, Electric theatre, Anderson, Mo.—Small town patronage.

State Rights

Heroes of the Street (Warner Bros.), with Wesley Barry.—Picture pleased good crowds all week and proved to be a good box office attraction as it attracted much public patronage.—David Harding, liberty theatre, Kansas City.

More to Be Bitten Than Scorned (C. B. C.), with Alice Lake.—A very good picture. Not as worth-while a production as "Good for a Laugh."—G. Strasser Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight? (Equity), with a special cast.—My funniest experience as a motion picture exhibitor has been to the unsuspecting public tell me what a wonderful picture this was. Gave me my greatest kick. Think I'll have to give them "The Face on the Barroom Floor" next.—H. S. Kohlins, Robinson theatre, Nebraska.——Neighborhood patronage.

Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight? (Equity), with a special cast.—Did an awful flop here. They've had too much of that every day. But one time a director runs out of material he has the boy leave home, fall in love with a chorus girl and finally land in his mother's arms. Arnt alone just as long as time before. The picture, of its kind, is a good one, but it's a very poor "steal on "The Old Nest."—Most imitations are: If you've not had a mother picture for a long while it will sell big.—Fred Hinds, Cresco theatre, Cresen, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight? (Equity), with a special cast.—My patrons liked this picture. Played to very good business for two days. Had weather.—D. H. Follett, Star theatre, Gibsonburg, Ohio.— Neighborhood patronage.

The Soul of Man (Prod. Sec.), with a special cast.—A very good picture. Fair business.—G. Strasser Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Rags to Riches (Warner Bros.), with Wesley Barry.—Can't go wrong on this one. Every one was pleased. It is this star's best picture.—Ward light theatre, Cornning, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Your Best Friend (Warner Bros.), with Vera Gordon.—A great character story with little action. Not much of a wonder part as the Hebrew mother, at which she excels all others. It is an appealing story all the way.—E. F. B. Strawberry, temple theatre, Bellaire, Ohio.—General patronage.

Your Best Friend (Warner Bros.), with Vera Gordon.—I don't know where they get the special part, as I could not see it. Their picture, I made me money, but I lay it to the fact I played it on Christmas.—R. S. Moore, Gem theatre, Snyder, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Your Best Friend (Warner Bros.), with Vera Gordon.—I don't know where they get the special part, as I could not see it. Their picture, I made me money, but I lay it to the fact I played it on Christmas.—R. S. Moore, Gem theatre, Snyder, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

GUARANTEED BOX-OFFICE MOP-UP

— that’s what scores of amazing wires say!!

"THE THIRD ALARM" opened Sunday to phenomenal business despite very unfavorable weather," wires Manager Theophilis, of the Pantheon, Lorain, O. "A most wonderful box office attraction which backs up all claims. Exploitation possibilities unlimited. First time my audience ever applauded."

"THIRD ALARM" opened Sunday capacity business. Went big Monday and Tuesday," wires Goldberg Brothers, Omaha. "You cannot exaggerate on money-making possibilities of this picture. Recommend it as one of surest box-office attractions of season."

J. P. Calla, managing director Strand Theatre, Canton, wires:

... "ALL RECORDS SHATTERED notwithstanding adverse weather conditions ... compelled open theatre ten o'clock each morning ... people stood out in rain last day waiting to get in."

than the average Westerns. — Wm. Thacher, Royal theatre, Salina, Kans.—General patronage.

West Is East (Sanford), with Pete Morrison.—A worth while Western program picture. —Dandy for daily change house.

Trapped in the Air (W. P. E. C.), with Lester Cuno.—Just a fair Western.—J. G. Varnell, Princess theatre, Piedmont, Ala.—Small town patronage.

The Crow's Nest (Aywon), with Jack Hoxie.—Snappy western feature. Plenty of action. One of the best Westerns in quite a time.—Iva Shielles, Queen theatre, Tyler, Tex.—Small town patronage.

West Is East (Sanford), with a special cast. —Something different. It's a Western, society and comedy. Good clean stuff, that will please all. Better than the average Westerns. — Wm. Thacher, Royal theatre, Salina, Kans.—General patronage.

of Oct. 29th, 1923.

The Man from Hell's River (W. P. E. C.), with a special cast.—Would class this as a good program picture. Almost up to the usual standard of Curwood subjects. Patrons all seemed to be pleased. Splendid scenery. — Adolph Kohl, Pastime theatre, Granville, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

The Man from Hell's River (W. P. E. C.), with a special cast.—Very good Cur-

Headin' North (Arrow), with Pete Morrison.—Picture would probably have been good, but print was in very bad condition. Wrongly assembled. Part three should have been in reel two. Progress Feature Mfg. distributors in San Francisco. —C. H. Powers, Strand theatre, Dunsmuir, Cal.—R. R. Town patronage.

Frivolous Wives (Fidelity) with a special cast. The story crewed well, but the people were not satisfied. A one day picture. — A. G. Weigang, Armory theatre, Karnes City, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Frivolous Wives (Fidelity), with Rod-

West Is East (Sanford), with a special cast.—Independents produce such as this and then howl because we do not buy their product. Funk is no name for it. — D. E. Pitton, Lyric theatre, Harrison, Ark.—Small town patronage.

West Is East (Sanford), with a special cast.—Different. It's a Western, society and comedy. Good clean stuff, that will please all. Better than the average Westerns. — Wm. Thacher, Royal theatre, Salina, Kans.—General patronage.

The Better Man Wins (Sanford), with Pete Morrison.—Lots of action in this soaper, and it pleased most of my patrons. Personally thought it poor.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kans.—Small town patronage.

The Better Man Wins (Sanford), with Pete Morrison.—This is the kind of stuff that sells. You can't go wrong on this one. A clean society Western drama. Good enough for the best houses. Good old acting clean all way through. Something different. No bar room stuff. It's got a little of everything in it. — William Thacher, Royal theatre, Salina, Kans.—General patronage.

The Unconquered Woman (Bradford), with Rubye De Remer.—A fair picture. Nothing wonderful. Patrons seemed to enjoy it. — Harry Holohli, Liberty theatre, Mar-lette, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Across the Border (Aywon), with a special cast.—Fair Western picture. —H. A. Larson, Majestic theatre, Oakland, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

Western Demon (Western), with William Fairbanks. — Very good Western of the "wild" class. — G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kans.—Small town patronage.

Broken Silence (Arrow), with a special cast.—If your people like Northw est pictures, get it, for it will please 100 per cent. Fine from start to finish. James O'Hara (Curwood story) and they are all fine. — D. A. White, Cozy theatre, Checo-tah, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Blaze Away (Di Lorenzo), with a special cast.—Best Western picture that I have shown of this star. Give us more like this. My patrons went out praising this picture. — L. B. Greenhow, Strand theatre, Leslie, Ark.—Small town patronage.

Four Hearts (W. P. E. C.), with Dick
Hatton.—A story of intrigue and love, with a little western action. Excellent. Good film.—Helen Drexler, Star theatre, Croton, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

Two Fisted Jefferson (Arrow), with Jack
Hoxie.—This is one you can rely on to please them. — His picture is "good." W. L. Landers, Gem theatre, Batesville, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

East Comes West (Canyon), with Franklin Farnum.—A dandy picture that pleased a big Sunday crowd. — Ralph W.
Crooks, Star theatre, Elgin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Round 3
"Six-Second Smith"

12—Whirlwind Rounds—12

Masterfully Directed by Mal St. Clair with Larry Semon in Solid Concrete and played them all. Both are a safe bet,—H. F. Sembler, Colonial theatre, Radford, Va.—Small town patronage.

White Hutt (Bartlett), with a special cast. No good film, with J. B. Lar- son, Majestic theatre, Oakland, Neb.—Small town patronage.

They're Off (Aywon), with Oday and Ford.—Poorest picture shown in some time. They're Off is a sure diller. The kind that hurts.—Wm. Koons, Garden theatre, Vicksburg, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Desert Crucible (Arrow), with J. J. Hoxie.—Only a fair Western. If your people like Hoxie you will win. Hoxie is a good bet with me.—H. F. Sembler, Colonial, Radford, Va.—Small town patronage.

Flaming Hearts (Metropolitan), with J. B. Warner.—Brother exhibitors. I think when we get a good one it is well to pass it on. Here is one I think we should please any audience. Didn't do much for me, but no fault of picture. —J. J. Sarah, Webster, Walsenburg, Colo.—General patronage.

Atonement (Pioneer), with a special cast.—I do not know how an exchange can have the brass to make you pay even one cent for a dud of this class. I have received a good many circulars and thought I would try out some of their pictures. If all are as bad as this one we should haul them off and burn them. Acting poor. Prints bad. Everything wrong with them. After this the best thing I have seen in a fellow paying some of these state rights people what you can get a good picture for from Fox, Universal, Universal— ever they have had. So far showed fourth episode. Attendance holding up fine. Some real history in this serial.—E. L. Golden, Mt. Vernon, Ia.—Neigh- borhood patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—On the twelfth episode it still maintains a good followin in spite of all and Michigan winter weather. Without this serial I might as well lock up and take a suite of rooms in a Michigan summer. Maybe I'll have to anyway, but Buffalo Bill and Adventures of Tarzan are helping postpone the civil day.—Roy W. Adams, Plattsburg, Mason, Mich.—Small town patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—Promises to be the best serial I have ever seen. Hope Universal will do enough business with it so that they can continue the kind. That old murdering, suicide, black hand, dead body, murder, mayhem is good.—Columbia theatre, Poyntette, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—This is holding up fairly well. So far is it fairly well.—Roy W. Adams, Passavant, Ala.—Neigh- borhood patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—This is holding up fairly well. So far it is very good.—Roy W. Adams, Passavant, Ala.—General patronage.

International News (Universal).—As good a filler for a program as any one could want. This serial has picked up since we began these.—Roy L. Dowling, Ozark theatre, Hallock, Minn.—General patronage.

The Mirror (Universal).—A well-bal- anced serial that has won favorable mention. Has Col- umbia theatre, Poyntette, Wis.—General patronage.

Our Gang Comedies (Pathé).—These kids could get the grown-ups and the kids coming more and more for every one that is shown.—Wm. Krumholz, Grand theatre, Hallock, Minn.—General patronage.

Out of the Inkwell (Sullivan).—Play these, one every other week, and they will please. A dandy one-reeler which cannot be beat, and if you are a good buyer you can buy them right.—Geo. J. Kress, Hud- son theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neigh- borhood patronage.

Pathé Comedies (Lloyd single reels, Lloyd two reels, Pollard two reels, Our Gang Comedies).—The latter are mighty good, and register.—Roy W. Adams, Passavant, Ala.—Small town patronage.

Pollards of the Far South (Vitagraph), with Harry James. —Excellent picture. So far has picked up since we began these. —Roy L. Dowling, Ozark theatre, Passavant, Ala.—General patronage.

Rolland, Atonement (Pathe), with Roland. —Excellent stunt. So far has picked up since we began.—Roy L. Dowling, Ozark theatre, Passavant, Ala.—General patronage.

Screen Snapshots (Pathe).—This novelty should be on every theatre's program every two weeks.—C. H. Longacher, New Glarus theatre, New Glarus, Wis.—General patronage.

Semon Comedies (Vitagraph).—All good bets if they can be bought right.—Parmele Theatre Co., Parmele theatre, Plattsburg, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Sunshine Comedies (Fox).—Pretty good, all.—Parmele Theatre Co., Parmele theatre, Plattsburg, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Universal Comedies (Universal).—We find these one reelers as good as any made, especially the "tramp" comedies, starring Neely Edwards, and price is without exception. —Roy W. Adams, Plattsburg, Mason, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Hello Mars (Universal), with Harry Sweet.—This is certainly a knockout. It is something new. It will please any au-dience.—Roy W. Adams, Plattsburg, Mason, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Torchy Takes a Chance (Educational), with Johnny Hines.—Excellent in every respect. Torchy comedies are very popular with my patrons, parthe theatre, Battle Creek, Iowa.—General patronage.

A Blue Jacket's Honor (Universal), with Jack Perrin.—This two-reel Western is as good as they make them. If your patrons like short Westerns they'll get this.—Lyric theatre, Manning, Tex.—Small town patronage.

A Quiet Street (Pathé), with Our Gang. —This is the first Our Gang comedy we have used. It pleased young and old. Film was in very good condition. In fact, practically all Pathé film that we use is in good shape. We believe we are going to develop a strong following for the Our Gang comedies. They certainly are doing very well.—O. H. L. Daily, Star theatre, Hay Springs, Neb.—Small town patronage.

The Dentist (C-B-C), with the Hall- room Boys.—The best Hallroom Boys we have had in the theatre. If you can get good prints from the exchange.—E. L. Graef, Opera House, Hortonville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

The Reporter (Fox), with Lupino Lane.—Very good two-reel comedy.—G. Stras- ser Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

Holy Smoke (Educational), with Lloyd Hamilton.—A Mermaid comedy that's a dandy.—C. H. Longacher, New Glarus theatre, New Glarus, Wis.—General patronage.

The Detective (F. B. O.), with Dan Mason.—These Plum Centers A have some good laughs and have no question- ing as to their first money being paid out. —Parke, Fad theatre, Brookings, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Rent Collector (Vitagraph), with Lewis Thomas. —Good picture, a real cycle of fun. How does he do it? We are for Larry, as he seldom fails to knock 'em dead. For action, and real fun these comedies are the snake's hips and the eat's meow every week. I am playing them all,—H. P. Thompson, Liberty theatre, Pardeeville, Wis.—General patronage.

Larry Semon.—Very good, although not quite up to Larry's standard. Audience was moderately satisfied.—Chas. McElwee, Sigma theatre, Johnstown, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Ropin' Fool (Pathe), with Will Rogers.—A novel two reeler. Many roping stunts, and slow motion photography.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small-town patronage.

The Frozen North (F-N), with Butler Keaton.—One of Keaton's best. He always delivers the goods.—P. F. Doe, Electric theatre, Aracdia, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Head Waiter (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. The slap stick. Children will like it.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

The Bakery, with Larry Semon.—Got the jact and sent them home asking for more.—J. W. May, Grand theatre, Shawneetown, Ill.—Small-town patronage.

Golf (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Oh, boy. It's a scream. Larry is there with the laughs every time.—F. F. Doe, Electric theatre, Arcadia, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Enchanted Fiddle (Pathe), an Aesop Fable.—We have shown over 100 Fables to date and can safely say this is the most entertaining one of them all. The old man, cat, donkey and all are in this one. You have no idea what a fiddle can do in the right hands until you see this Fable. The moral: It's a poor rule that won't work both ways.—Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

School Day Love (Educational), with a special cast.—A good comedy for children's night, not much for grown-ups.—Palace theatre, Long Pine, Neb.—General patronage.

Touch All Bases (Pathe), with Paul Parrott.—The story seems uninitiated in this day and time, but this one reeler didn't fail to get plenty of looks and that's what counts in a comedy.—Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

On the Jump (Pathe), with Harold Lloyd.—One of the best we have had of the one-reel reissues.—C. F. Hopkins, Hopkins theatre, Cotter, Ark.—Small-town patronage.

Blazes (Educational), with a special cast.—More snap, more pep. Good story, full of laughs. Great audience picture. You can't go wrong on this one.—Garden theatre, Council Bluffs, Iowa.—General patronage.

The Skipper's Sermon (Educational).—Not as good as some Toonervilles, but a fair comedy at that. We have a hard time running two-reel comedies on account of such long features nowadays.—Crystal theatre, Wayne, Neb.—General patronage.

An Idle Roomer (Universal).—Not so bad.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—Small-town patronage.

The Saw Mill (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—It's just the same old story. All Semons are good and satisfy your audience because, as comedies, they are everything that could be expected of them.—Horn & Morgan, Star theatre, Hay Springs, Neb.—Small-town patronage.

The House of a Thousand Trembles (Universal), with Neely Edwards.—Fair; good enough for a filler.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—Small-town patronage.

Henpecked (Universal), with Lee Moran.—Plenty of laughs in this one. Best Moran I have had in years.—A. W. Andreasen, Riato theatre, Cozad, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Little Rascal (Universal), with Baby Peggy.—Very good. —Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—Small-town patronage.

Spooks (Educational), with Lloyd Hamilton.—Plenty of laughs. Mermaids are usually all good.—J. W. Andresen, Rialto theatre, Cozad, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

His First Job (Universal), with Lew Carse.—Pretty slow.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—Small-town patronage.

I Do (A-E), with Harold Lloyd.—This is sure a knockout of Lloyd's latest.—A. K. Roth, Crystal theatre, Silver Creek, Neb.—Small-town patronage.

The Small-Town Derby (Universal), with a special cast.—Here is a special reissue comedy and has a few new ones that get the laughs. The mule does some good work and looks good.—S. V. Wallace, Idle Hour theatre, Cambridge Springs, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

REPORTS GOOD BUSINESS HERE

Strand theatre, Milford, Ia.

From A. Leitch, owner of the Strand theatre, we are in receipts of this picture of his house at Milford, Iowa. Across the top of the picture Mr. Leitch's pen informs us that he did a "wonderful business on Blood and Sand."

The population of Milford is 800 and this building was erected at a cost of $25,000. There are 300 comfortable seats in the theatre which is constructed so that road shows and other stage attractions may also be held. Mr. Leitch declares that equipment and furnishings throughout are of the very best and that the house is thoroughly cozy within.

$350,000 Theatre at Troy, N. Y. Opened

The Troy, the latest house in the Mark Strand group of theatres, located in Troy, N. Y., and which has been in process of construction for the past year, has been completed and is ready for opening with Uly Hill as managing director, Edward H. Crawford, former manager of the Lincoln in Troy will be associated with Mr. Hill as business manager of the new house. The Troy represents a building expense of $350,000. It has a seating capacity of 2,500, so that combined the two comprise among the largest capacity house in the city.

Approximately $250,000 was spent in construction of the Aubert, work being carried on over a period of six months. The theatre represents a solid structure, the roof being tied to the foundation by steel columns with the roof trusses reinforced two ways to eliminate wind vibration. The roof is 140 feet to a plaster partition which gives a softening effect and a high grade of projection.

Caldine number 3 High Tex Range brick was used on all four sides of the house. A handsome canopy, 20 feet long, projects 12 feet over the sidewalk.

The trusses are so constructed that they will stand twice the weight of the roof and the building is thoroughly fireproof, being of concrete with a Monolithic roof. An 8 foot dead air space between ceiling and roof makes possible an even temperature affording uniform warmth in winter and a cooling freshness in summer.

New Aubert an Efficient House

St. Louis, Mo. Theatre Costing $250,000 Is Modernly Furnished and Equipped—Airdome Adjoining Accommodates 2,000

Several features of note make the new Aubert theatre recently opened at St. Louis a theatre of interest from an equipment and construction standpoint. Controlled by Kingsbenton Amusement Company the Aubert is a first run house, charging popular prices and is a unit in a chain of houses to be operated on this policy which will be acquired or built later.

The auditorium of the Aubert is 70 by 135 feet, providing for a seating capacity of 2,000. A perfect view of the screen is obtained from every chair, installed by Heywood-Wakefield company. Adjoining is the open air theatre which will accommodate 2,000, so that combined the two comprise among the largest capacity house in the city.

Two Houses to Be Built

At Little Falls, N. Y.

Building plans for the new theatre which C. R. Moyer, of Herkimer, intends to erect this spring at Little Falls, N. Y., were submitted to state officials here the past week, and approved.

Mr. Moyer's house will cost upwards of $100,000, and Little Falls will have the spectacle of two expensive theatres being erected at the same time, W. W. Berinstein also breaking ground for a new house there in April.

Interior view of the new Aubert theatre, St. Louis, Mo., erected at a cost of $250,000 and seating 2,000. Details of the house are published above.
Spare Parts Safeguard Show

Wesley Trout Suggests Projection Equipment It Is Advisable to Carry in Stock for Emergency Purposes

WHAT provision have you made to take care of a sudden breakdown in your projection equipment? Suppose that in the middle of a feature of a picture, the toggle gear, a driving gear, a pin, belt on the motor or some other part of your projecting machine broke. Would you prefer to have your show ground to a halt or would you have an extra mechanism on hand and be able to carry at least a complete intermittent movement. This is the one part of the projector that is the most liable to break down at any minute.

I firmly believe that it is good policy to carry a small line of various projector parts on hand in the event of an emergency. The question has often been asked of the writer, just what parts should the projectionists carry on hand?

I advise every exhibitor to carry a complete framing carriage on hand, because this is one part of the mechanism that may give you trouble at any time. When you have new parts installed in your intermittent movement I advise that you send the complete movement to the factory to have these parts installed. This is a big job and I advise that the average projectionist not try it himself if he wants an accurate job.

The intermittent sprocket and the take-up and feed-sprockets will wear quickly. The cause of the take-up sprocket wearing so fast is caused by some projectionists keeping their take-up bolt entirely too tight. This will cause your sprocket to become out of line. Take-up bolt should be just tight enough to run the bottom roller when reel is full. Any more than this will simply wear out the sprocket. Too tight of tension on the sprocket when the gate will cause the intermittent sprocket to wear very rapidly. Just enough tension to keep your picture from jumping.

If you are using a direct current motor, carry an extra set of brushes. Be sure and keep an extra set of brushes on hand for your motor generator set as you may need them.

The exhibitor should carry a complete set of condensers on hand, extra pair of carbon holders, a good pair of lugs. New fuses for the motor circuit and the main motor circuit should be carried on hand. In inserting new condensers in the lamphouse you should make sure that they fit loose and do not bind in their holders. If a condenser fits tight in their holders when they expand it will cause breakage very easily. When first using new condensers be sure and use about 25 amperes for about thirty minutes, then increase to full capacity that you use to project your pictures.

Projectors should carry a complete set of belts on hand. The take-up belt soon becomes soaked with oil. By having an extra belt on hand you can put same on quickly in case it breaks. Keep one extra belt for motor drive and one for the take-up and you will avoid a lot of unnecessary trouble. Purchase a good grade of belt and it will last longer and give you less trouble.

I have found that it is a very good plan to carry one upper and one lower sprocket on hand. The lower sprocket will wear quicker than the upper one. Never use a take-up sprocket that has become "undercut" as it will cause you to lose the loop, thereby causing many unnecessary delays. It will pay you to carry two of them on hand at all times. Clean these sprockets with an old toothbrush. Dirt and gum on the lower sprocket will cause the film to jump off and lose loop.

NEW PROJECTS

Westminster, Md.—Work on the new Star theatre being constructed for George Osborne, owner of the Star and the Opera House here has been started. The house will be equipped with Simplex machines, motor generator set, new screen and will have four color lighting system, which will be controlled from the booth. Second Kansas City Theatre Announced: Will Cost $150,000

Almost within a week the construction of a second motion picture theatre on Broadway, Kansas City, was announced last week. It is the Westport theatre, to be erected at the northwest corner of Archibald street and Broadway and will cost $150,000.

*A feature of the new house is that it will seat 1,800 persons in wide upholstered chairs with plenty of room to allow ingress and egress to the seats in all the rows without causing patrons to get up. A large foyer, leading from the main entrance to the mezzanine floor and balcony through wide stairs will be well fitted and furnished. Offices and other reiring rooms will be furnished and fitted adjoining the mezzanine floor.

The lower floor will seat 1,100 persons, while the balcony will accommodate 700. The stage will be exceptionally large for the purpose of accommodating prologues or other stage attractions. One of the finest cooling and ventilating systems will be installed, according to officials of the Amusement Holding Corporation, a Missouri organization capitalized at $250,000 in paid up stock, although detailed plans for equipment have not yet been made.

The decorations will be scheduled to harmonize with the draperies and carpets.

How the new Westport theatre, Kansas City, Mo., will look. From a drawing by Boller Brothers, architects of the structure. This house will seat 1,100.

Acme Projectors

Used on C. & A. Train

Acme projectors used in recent test on Chicago & Alton Railroad’s “Movie theatre Car” between Chicago and St. Louis.

The two Acme projection machines used on the Chicago & Alton’s “Movie theatre car” on the crack train “The Red Limited” between Chicago and St. Louis, proved beyond a doubt that picture shows on moving trains are possible, with the proper equipment.

A steady, clear picture was shown on a screen five feet by four feet, and the best equipped theatre could not boast of better projection. The vibration and swaying of the train did not interfere in the least with the operation of the Acme machines and there was practically no eye-strain in watching the pictures, from any seat in the locomotive coach.

The recent test was in charge of Maj. L. A. Boening, vice president of the Acme Motion Picture Projector Co., L. B. Larsen, factory superintendent and D. D. Swem, sales department representative.

Arrow Send News
“Salesman” on Road

J. Charles Davis, 2nd, assistant to the president of Arrow Film Corporation, has conceived a distinctive sales novelty on “None So Blind,” an Arrow production of the Luxus picture produced by Burton King, and featuring Maurice Costello, Zena Keefe, Edward Earle and Doré Davidson.

Here’s the idea. We think it’s great.

A small phonograph record about three inches in diameter is fastened to a card bearing the Arrow trademark, the name of the picture, and this information: This disc brings you a most important message. Take it home and put it on your phonograph.

We took the disc home and placed it on our phonograph. It brings a message from President W. E. Shallenberger, chairman of the board, which briefly describes the type of picture, the cast and other details of interest to state right buyers.

Arrow’s new “salesman” should produce results.

Seattle Girl Winner in Goldwyn-Photoplay Test

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

SEATTLE WASH., Feb. 27.—Miss Jean Haskell, daughter of J. A. Haskell, investor banker of this city, has been declared the winner in the Screen Opportunity contest conducted by Goldwyn Pictures and Photoplay magazine. The winner had been promised a year’s contract with Goldwyn but because of her exceptional talent Miss Haskell has been awarded a long term contract.

Miss Haskell is a musician, speaks French, and has spent much time studying classical dancing.

It is understood that she will appear before the camera in a minor role as the Rupert Hughes production “Souls for Sale,” after which she will undergo extensive training for motion picture work and eventual stardom.

F. P. L. Signs Ruggles

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 27.—Jesse L. Lasky has announced that Wesley Ruggles, who directed Walter Hiers in his first starring picture for Paramount, has been signed to a long-term contract as a permanent addition to the Paramount West Coast studio.
Exhibitors in America don't have a monopoly on all problems connected with the business of exhibiting pictures. At least, there is one of a serious or less serious nature which they are escaping. They are not compelled to warn their patrons that the fog in the auditorium is so dense today that it is problematical whether or not they will be able to discern the figures on the screen.

Studies Chicago Theatres

That is a London problem—and one which they are making strenuous efforts to deal with by personal appearances. Mr. Castleton Knight, director of presentation for four London theatres who visited Chicago last week, Mr. Knight was presented to an American audience, methods and playhouse construction and design, as his firm has broken ground for in England which will seat 3,000, in the West end of London.

While in Chicago Mr. Knight, accompanied by a Herald representative, visited the MCVickers and Chicago theatres. Mr. Knight was particularly impressed with the presentations at these houses, and he plans to inaugurate effects at the London theatres to compare favorably with those being presented in America. His work in this connection has already attracted attention in England.

Visits were also made to supply houses in the city and before returning to New York Mr. Knight had arranged to inaugurate a more extensive use of trailers in London playhouses.

"It won't be long before theatres in England will be on a par with those in America in every department" he declared. "Progressive showmen are taking a greater interest in exploitation and presentation of big pictures. We have already played 'East is West' and 'Oliver Twist' at the Marble Arch Pavilion and the week I left 'Texas of the Storm Country' was going in".

Kidnapped Charlie Chaplin

While at the Blackstone hotel Mr. Knight met Rudolph Valentino and the two became well acquainted, having their pictures taken together. He also confirmed stories that he had "kidnapped" Charlie Chaplin while the latter was in England, as a result of which Chaplin made a unique appearance at the theatre of which he was manager.

Mr. Knight, who was introduced as "The Reichenbach of England" at a dinner in his honor in New York has been a consistent reader of the Herald's "What the Picture Did For Me" department for the past two years.

English Exhibitor Visits Here to Study the Ways of American Showmen

Here's One on Roderick Ross

Did you ever go shark fishing? Neither had Roderick Ross until his trip to Cuba. The story is told in a copy of the "Evening News," just received from Paul De Outo, Havana manager for Universal.

One Sunday morning, Ross, De Outo and two companions comprised an excursion party into the Gulf stream which carries Havana's garbage out into the ocean and which, incidentally, is alive with sharks.

One of the big fellows followed in the path of the boat, but refused to be enticed by the nice bait which Ross placed on his hook. Becoming rather bored, the Chicago man sat on the gunwale of the boat with his feet hanging over.

To make the story short, De Outo spotted the shark just in time to place a rubber heel on one of Mr. Ross' shoes. And, according to the "Evening News," Mr. Ross is returning to Chicago with his hair "standing straight up, like a pompadour."

Valentino Says Girls Like Him: Hikes Ante Karzas Refuses Demand for More Money; Marigold Signs Contract

Rodolph Valentino, who has been in the limelight the last few months because of his financial and artistic difficulties with Paramount, is improving. Last week he danced at the Trianon ballroom, owned by Andrew Karzas, who also operates the Woodlawn theatre. This week the "shiek" is on the bill at the Marigold gardens.

Therein is the story.

Booked for Another Week

Karzas signs him for another week.

Suddenly Valentino realized he was popular along the lines of Chicago and demanded that his salary be doubled. This Karzas refused to do, saying that the star had got "every penny of the receipts during this week's show." His contract, it is understood, called for $1,000 a night. When the Trianon owner refused more money Ernie Young was engaged for the appearance of the star, at double the salary, it is said, at the Marigold this week.

Says Girls Crazy Over Him

Karzas says Valentino made this statement in demanding that the financial terms of his contract be doubled:

"All the girls in Chicago are crazy about me. They're coming from all over town to see me dance and somebody has got to pay for it."

To which the exhibitor retorted:

"It won't be me. This impossible proposition is the gratitude I get for rescuing him from his trouble in Detroit. Valentino admits that he has been treated better here than anywhere else."

Screen to Benefit From Novel Tieup in Chicago

Grosset & Dunlap, publishers, have arranged a neat tie-up with Marshall Field & Company's book department. Commencing February 28th, motion pictures will be shown from 11 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. daily on "How photoplays are made from Books" and scenes from "The Covered Wagon," "The Strangers' Banquet," "The Christian," "Main Street" and other photoplay editions of Grosset & Dunlap's books.

The demonstration also will be augmented by the personal appearances of Jackie Coogan and Theodore Roberts, and Emerson Hough, the author, will also talk. E. C. Ketcham, representing the publishers, will be in charge.

Treasurer Here

John C. Elisele and wife, treasurer of Fox Film Corp., en route to Los Angeles, spent Wednesday night at the Chicago home of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Valentino. They were registered at the Blackstone.

Arkansas City, Ark.—Budford Theatre Company will start work soon on the construction of a theatre here to cost $100,000.

CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By J. R. M.

NED HOLMES, Chief of the First National exploitation department, New York, is due in our midst about March 12. This will be Ned’s first visit to Chi since he put over “Four Horsemen” at the LaSalle O. H.

And Jackie Coogan is due here March 2, with Pa and Ma Coogan.

Ernie Grug of the Park Manor theatre, has been laid up with the flu.

Izy Gumbiner, of the Banner theatre, 1630 N. Robey street, is another popular exhibitor who is on the sick list.

J. C. Redington, of the Central theatre, LaPorte, Ill., called at the Fox exchange last Thursday.

Walt Neiand, the Goldwyn publicity hound, is springing a new line of stunts on Springfield, this week. Yes, “The Christian” is to play the Princess theatre, March 4, 5, 6, 7. After which the Blackstone theatre, South Bend, will have the same attraction, says Walt.

Frank Young, Goldwyn salesmen, has also joined the furniture movers union.

And Ben Reingold’s got a regular office now right up in front in the Goldwyn exchange.

Joe Koppel’s Village theatre, Wilmette, is the pride of the town now with white gloved ushers, new seat covers and spotless interior. The operator is a radio expert also, and gives patrons the latest music out of the ether every night.

There’s a good one going the rounds about an F. B. O. salesman who approached an exhibitor at Rilesville and told him he should play “The Third Alarm,” to which the exhibi, replied he hadn’t played the first and second yet.

Irving Mass, former assistant manager of Fox exchange, but now in the New York office, discovered the address of the Chicago office after eight months’ absence, and dropped the boys a line. All were greatly cheered up.

M. O. Levy, Fox manager at Charlotte, N. C., also wrote a nice lengthy post card to the home boys last week.

JAMES COLLINS of the Francis theatre, assisted by Paul Rittenhouen of the New Virginia and Wonderland, christened Mr. Collins’ new home at Byron. The thing was a complete success, it is said.

“Bill” Brimmer, who was on the road for First National covering the country territory, resigned last week.

Ernie Grohe was busily engaged showing the treasurer of Fox Film Corp., John Eisele, around Chicago’s theatre district last Wednesday, while Joe Lyon spent the day showing Mrs. Eisele the park system.

Henri Ellman, formerly with Progress Pictures, and well known in Chicago Film circles, is covering the south side for Harry Willard and the Associated Exhibitors.

Clarence Wagner, of the Bugg theatre, is singing “Mighty Lak’ a Rose” these days and getting ready to put over thirty other First National features, which Grad. Sears sold this popular house some days ago.

Louis Kramer won’t dare make Hammond, Ind., for some time for fear of being mobbed. At the Parthenon theatre where “The Third Alarm” played, he advertised for a beautiful and daring girl to jump off the roof. Well about 11,000 people waited all day to see the stunt, but it never came off. One woman was stricken with apoplexy while watching the picture also, but this wasn’t Louis’ fault.

Ralph Crocker, of Elgin, III., also played the F. B. O. fireman’s picture and the Star got the longest publicity story in the local papers ever printed. The fire department also made three runs to the Elgin Watch Works and there were plenty of signs on all the fire plugs and banners across street during the four days’ run.

Sid Meyer, Fox manager, made Des Moines, Davenport and other Iowa towns last week.

Ethel McCarthy, C. E. Bund’s efficient stenag. at First National, is ill.

Tony Phelan is now on the road for Goldwyn, covering the River towns of Illinois and Iowa.

George A. Hickey, Goldwyn’s hustling district supervisor, called on customers in South Bend last week.

Didja see W. H. Tracy, the Universal salesman last week? He’s getting a new set of eyebrows and front hair.

Max Balaban of the firm of Balaban & Katz, is in California hobnobbing with the film producers.

Harry Birch, Fox News correspondent, staged a picture show at the St. Luke’s hospital last Wednesday night for the benefit of Capt. Nicholas McDonald, who was injured while making a flash light picture for the Herald-Examiner. McDonald was a former Fox employe. “The Town that Forgot God” and “The Pirate,” were used and all the patients of the hospital were Capt. McDonald’s guests.

J. J. Sampson is arranging for F. B. O.’s first Anniversary Drive, and is inviting all exhibitors hereabouts to call, as he has something good for them.

Ray Morfa is back with Associated Exhibitors.

A. W. Smith, special representative for Mr. Franklin of Associated Exhibitors, was a Chicago visitor Feb. 19-20.

Ownership Changes

Monteca, Cal.—Paul Guttmann, owner of the Lyric theatre here, has sold the house to J. L. Seiter, who has come here from Fresno.

Grand Junction, Colo.—Rex Amusement Company has leased the Lyceum theatre and hereafter it will be managed by that company through Ole M. Nelson, local manager.

Kansas City, Kan.—The Art theatre, which has been operated by M. Van Praag, former president of the M. P. T. O. Kansas, has been taken over by the Grubel circuit, which operates the Electric theatre of that city.

Two scenes from “The Prisoner,” an adaptation of George Barr McCutcheon’s story “Castle Craneycrow,” in which Herbert Rawlinson is starred. (Universal.)

"MASTERS OF MEN"

by

MORGAN ROBERTSON

The greatest story of the sea ever written!

A thrilling story of he-men, men who wear hair on their chests, whose veins run hot with red fighting blood!

A blunt, vigorous yarn of a boy's fight upward against overwhelming odds, where fight means a hard fist and prime muscle, high courage and a ready wallop!

Shanghaied! Drugged by crimps and flung insensible into the hell hole forward, where sweating, brow-beaten men live like beasts scourged to their tasks with curses and belaying pin.

The sea! The flavor of salt in the nostrils; the odor of pitch in the air, the snapping of wind-swept canvas crackling like a machine gun; the creaking, singing wood straining as she rides the high waves! All the magic and lure of adventure, the Spanish Main and sailormen!

Life! Sensitive boyhood seared by false judgments; a girl's smile and lack of understanding and a boy's pride ground to dust; a boy made sullen by a small town's smug failure to provide a rightful chance; and his struggle to make a man of himself!

Uncle Sam's bluejackets! The fighting men of the greatest nation in the world, and what they think and how they live; their loyalty and cheer and youth, eternal, living, fighting youth! The careless devil-may-care "gob," incorrigible, loyal; impudent and loveable!

Romance! The sea spells romance. Red sunsets turn green waves to crashing mountains of blood; noon suns spread gold upon the bosom of the sea, gold that beckons and calls to youth to gather its riches; never-ending mirages of golden bowls at rainbows' ends. And, the sea gives no riches; only character and manhood, bitterly squeezed out of its cold, hard business.
Wholesome, clean, healthy! A boy's life of adventure, free from tawdry conflicts and sex illusions, based on fact gathered by one who served among men, who loved men, who admired men and who wished young America to so live that he might become a man! The trash of silly, social temptations has no place in this story of a boy who became the master of the man.

The Yankee ever has been master of the sea! Decatur, John Paul Jones---history has written the feats of great American seamen into all time. Here is a story of the making of such men; men who acted and argued later; men out of whom Dewey and Schley and Sampson and "Fighting Bob" Evans were chosen, each for his day's work for the Stars and Stripes. Shifty-footed men, with a right and left punch and a keen eye and a high sense of honor and guts to go the limit!

Dick Halpin is the lad you wanted to be; and I wanted to be! He's the fellow we dreamed of, whose fighting courage we envied. He's the boy that assumed another's petty crime and ran away to sea to live it down, that the girl he loved might not be shamed and humiliated by the revelation of her brother's weakness. He's the fellow you and I used to talk about; that lad of strength and honor we built with boyish imaginations up in the haymow, or while idling with a home-made fishin' rod down by the creek. He's your kind and my kind and because we had fathers and mothers to make our way easier we never managed to be him; but we wanted to and we'll live our dreams again with Dick Halpin in this vivid, living story, "Masters of Men."

A master of men wrote this great sea tale. A man whose life was as hard as the diamonds he cut and who never wrote a line until he had lived beyond an average man's age; a man who took a beating at the hands of a brutal second mate with a smile, and who administered a beating with equal cheerfulness; a man who knew the sea and a sailorman's life; who criticized rightfully Kipling and who wrote his first sea tale to prove that a man who knew the sea could write a better story of the sea; a man who earned little by his pen and who starved while he wrote; the greatest writer of sea stories in all literature.

Morgan Robertson, a master of men, wrote the last word in thrilling sea stories when he wrote

"MASTERS OF MEN."

"BACKBONE" is built on big lines—bigger and better than all the rest!

A great story of undying love—it starts with a swing and ends with a smash: a breath-taking episode in which all the elements of criminal cunning and honest backbone come crashing together.

The picture piles up in ever-growing interest—with surprise and mystery relieved by bits of unique comedy.

They'll sit on the edges of the seats when they see "Othello" is a full-blooded motion picture. It has vitality, it is direct and true, it is a thing of action. It rises by many degrees of excellence above the usual offering on the screen.—New York Times.

"Othello" is acted with surpassing strength. The great German character actor, Emil Jannings, and that other distinguished German, Kraus, combine two superb performances and bring to Broadway what is beyond question the finest acting that is on or to here at this time.—Quinn Martin—N. Y. World.

"Othello" excels in film form. A powerful, efficient work. Emil Jannings as the Moor and Kraus as Iago shine in a brilliantly balanced cast. Technically and artistically pleasing to the mind and eye. A prestige that is given few motion pictures.—Louella Parsons—Morning Telegraph.

"Othello" is presented with all of the splendor and with all of the enormous gatherings which distinguish the foreign productions. Superbly acted with Emil Jannings in the title role. A wonderful production.

Emil Jannings is impressive as Othello. He makes the Moor of Venice more human than we have ever seen him before. A motion picture one should not miss. Superbly acted.—Evening Sun.

Shakespeare-in-the-movies gains new and powerful impetus from this production of "Othello." Jannings looks and acts the part in a manner that is sure to add to his fame. The tragic pathos of his interpretation haunts one. Here is an Othello that seems to live the role.—Evening Telegram.

Here's what the Critics say:

WM. A. JOHNSON, Editor Motion Picture News: "Goldwyn's big Production, 'The Christian,' will go down in history as a masterpiece!"

L. W. BOYNTON, Editor Exhibitor's Trade Review: "The Christian" is a screen marvel. It takes its place with the acknowledged classics of the motion picture. unquestionably the biggest box-office picture Goldwyn has ever released.

ROBERT E. WELSH, Editor Motion Picture World: "'The Christian' is a really great picture without an 'if' or a 'but.' It will make a pile of money."

JOHN SPARGO, Editor N. Y. Exhibitor's Herald: "'The Christian' will clean up. It has everything!"

LOUELLA PARSONS, M. E. Editor Morning Telegraph: "No exhibitor can afford to pass by 'The Christian.'"

FRED SCHADER, in Variety: "One of the biggest box-office winners."

FILM DAILY: "'The Christian' will undoubtedly prove one of the outstanding attractions of the year."

The Nation's Exhibitors Have Learned

How Big A Company American Releasing Is

We have gone through an entire year of operation with very little publicity. We have kept our personal pictures out of the newspapers. We haven’t had ourselves photographed greeting noted visitors or signing million-dollar contracts with stars.

But, by the eternal, we have done more that is of benefit to the exhibitors of the country: more that is constructive and enduring than any other organization has ever done in this industry in a single year of operation.

We have lined up an unbroken weekly sequence of strong, dependable, good quality product.

And the exhibitors of the nation know this. From February 19, 1922 to January 27, 1923, exhibitors of the United States alone have bought in excess of $2,-500,000 in contracts from us on our first forty releases out of the fifty-two pictures actually released and listed in the panel at the left. Within six months from release date the productions released through our distributing channel play in 2,000 or more theatres. The idea that is spread by trust propagandists that an independent distributor does not or cannot gain outlet in the nation’s theatres is a wish—not a fact.

In the foreign field American Releasing has quicker, better, sounder distribution than eleven out of the thirteen recognized distributing concerns—in England, Canada, Australia, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Argentine, Chile, Peru, Bolivia, Uruguay, Paraguay, Mexico and Hawaii. In these countries our pictures are playing in theatres ninety days after their United States' release date or sooner.

Exhibitors in America know that American Releasing is able to supply—and does supply—a minimum of one standard feature-length production each week, with each picture sold on its individual merits in keeping with its individual values.

A GREAT SEA YARN WITH THRILLS, LOVE, PATHOS

"A great sea yarn with all the thrills, love and pathos usually associated with a Henry King production. It is a story that arouses the interest at the start and holds it throughout and will appeal to all who enjoy virile tales of the deep, with no false morals or over-sentimentality. Advertise the return of Dorothy Gish as Barthelmess’ leading woman. This has the virtue of a simple, well-told story, is well acted and produced on a scale worthy of the star and his support. There is good character drawing and everyone contributes his best performance. The fight in a sailors’ inn and another on board ship in the last reel are scenes you won’t forget for many moons. Barthelmess plays with that quiet restraint that has won for him an enviable place among America’s foremost screen stars. Tyrone Power, as ‘Dog’ Leyton, scores a distinct hit. Dorothy Gish plays with spirit. The sea ‘shots’ on the ‘Lady Spray’ are the last word in submarine photography and constitute some of the best features of this well-made motion picture."—The Exhibitor’s Herald.

A PICTURE THAT GRIPS YOU EVERY MINUTE

"A straightforward, well-told story with tense drama suggestive of the surging sea. It is unvarnished in realism, red-blooded in its treatment and will appeal to all who like virile drama. The role of ‘Boy’ Leyton is the star opportunities for some of the best work of his screen career. Director Henry King has given this a fine production. Nor has the comedy element been neglected. This is strikingly brought out in the role of the little water-front slavey in love with ‘Boy.” There is pathos that grips the heart strings. The type of this picture are wonderfully well chosen. It holds the attention throughout, and is one of the star’s best efforts.”—Moving Picture World.

THIS ONE SHOULD GIVE SPLENDID SATISFACTION

"An excellent sea story that should find favor with all the admirers of Richard Barthelmess and Dorothy Gish. Good suspense is developed through the story and a thrilling climax is built up. There are numerous comedy situations that are well placed. This product should give splendid satisfaction. The realism of the atmosphere is actually felt in ‘Fury.’ All of the scenes have been splendidly made and afford practically faultless atmosphere. There are a couple of thrilling fights. Richard Barthelmess does a fine piece of work. Dorothy Gish also splendid. The entire cast of characters, in fact, is excellent and some fine bits of characterization are given."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

RICHARD BARTHELMESS in "FURY"

A First National Picture

Story by Edmund Goulding
Another 'Tol'able David!

The Film Daily

DAGS THE AUDIENCE TO EDGE OF THE SEATS

"In this intensely interesting story, Mr. Barthelmess adds another laurel to his histrionic wreath, as the critics agree. 'Fury' is one of the most colorful sea dramas ever on the screen. The picture has a big appeal because of 'different' in mounting and scenic background. The producers have been unusually successful in transferring the atmosphere of London's Limehouse district to the screen, while the marine end of the production is good because the company has 'shipped' on a regular old sailship. Another feature worth mentioning is the acting as well as literary titling. These titles add much to the entertaining quality of the picture. From a photographic viewpoint, also, 'Fury' is a notable work. The cast is one of uniform excellence. The care with which the personnel was selected is evident. No finer actor could have been found for the role of 'Dog' Leyton than Tone Power. Dorothy Gish as Minnie, a waif, is a height and recalls her character work in 'Hearts of the West.' Dorothy is a real asset to this offering. Not since 'Tol'able David' has Dick had a chance to put up some of his old screen fighting as he presents in this vehicle. His parts are the last work in realism. The picture opens with a thrilling battle between two terrible looking brutes. The scenes drag to the edge of the seats and we predict that most folks will remain there most of the time this one is unwinding. While the action is tense, the picture is not without its comedy relief. 'Fury' is as worth while. It is fine screen entertainment." — Motion Picture News.

HERE'S AN UNUSUAL OPPORTUNITY TO CASH IN

"Not since 'Tol'able David' has Richard Barthelmess had such an opportunity, and not since this famous production of last year has he accomplished such excellent results as he does in 'Fury.' Here is an unusual opportunity to 'cash in.' Barthelmess seems to live the part. You can tell your folks that this is the best thing Barthelmess has done since 'Tol'able David,' and that it ranks high in comparison with that popular production. You can also tell them that Henry King, who made 'Tol'able David,' directed Barthelmess in this, and that he has an unusually powerful cast, including Dorothy Gish. She has never had a better part than in this." — The Film Daily.

"The Balloonatic"
(Keaton-First National—Two Reels)

Buster Keaton rises to great heights in this release, both literally and figuratively, for the frozen-faced comedian goes sailing heavenward in a balloon, where he finds an opportunity for some brand new gags.

He becomes proprietor of a balloon, but first becomes aware of it when it bumps against the lower side of the clouds. In attempting to bring down a duck, he punctures the gas bag, ending in disaster. Even this has its silver lining, however, for he encounters Diana, a blonde beauty, in the person of Phyllis Haver, appearing to advantage in a one-piece bathing suit.

Buster’s courtship and the “balloonatic” events that follow entitle this to a place as one of the most ingenious he has made since “The Boat.” The story element is slender, as it should be when there are so many humorous gags present, and Buster’s work is well up to his usual standard. Phyllis Haver, too, contributes in no small measure to the fun.—L. C. MOEN.

TRUE TO FORM

While the trend of many things in the film trade during recent months has been uncertain, there is one thing that has been as certain as that the sun rises in the east:

It is that Mr. Sydney S. Cohen eventually would find an occasion for declaring that Mr. Will H. Hays is practically all wrong, that the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., simply represents the traditional enemy of the exhibitor in a new disguise and that the theatre owner will surely catch it this time if he doesn't watch out.

The uniform contract fortunately happened along at just about the right moment to give Mr. Cohen his opportunity.

Mr. Cohen's weather eye is turned toward the national theatre owners convention, three months away. He has his distributing proposition which he wants to get into action.

Developments and the lack of developments since the Washington convention have not served to add to the security of his position and his influence with the exhibitors of the country.

Obviously, Mr. Cohen's political fences need much repairing.

There are some striking facts to be given consideration in connection with Mr. Cohen's position at this time.

Because of his refusal to keep his activities within the usually accepted bounds applying to organizations such as the exhibitors' association and his insistence upon playing with commercial propositions such as screen advertising, formerly, and now distributing, he is in reality a potential commercial competitor of the men and firms he assumes to criticize in his capacity as president of the exhibitors' association.

If the mayor of a city was contemplating the establishment of a traction system which was to be operated by himself and his associates any criticism he would have to offer of the existing traction company would have to be taken with large lumps of salt. A similar case is Mr. Cohen's position when he now attempts criticism of companies that may be his future competitors.

Much of such criticism or all of it may be justified but the position Mr. Cohen has placed himself in renders his motive and what he has to say decidedly questionable.

There is nothing to indicate that Mr. Cohen's ambition for political preferment and authority has been satisfied. He may refrain from arranging to get himself re-elected to the presidency but even if he does this he very likely will fix himself into some position like chairman of the executive committee where he will be able to run things pretty much as he has in the past.

It is, therefore, easy to be seen that Mr. Cohen's ambition leads him into a conflict with the Hays organization. He can look to such a conflict to provide campaign material. He can also endeavor through it to effect a revolt against the present distributors which would win recruits for his distributing proposition. There is no mystery at all to what he is about.

But the situation is a difficult one for the theatre owners who are not interested in politics or the other intrigues that center about Times Square. Their efforts to form a fair understanding and estimate of the uniform contract are rendered very difficult when they realize their appointed leader is continually saying one thing and thinking another, and in the meantime trying to put over something that is quite foreign to what he happens to be talking about.

There may be a thousand things wrong with the uniform contract but Mr. Cohen can't fix any one of them because the folks on the other side of the table realize what he is up to.

Re-Takes

J. R. M.

Ha! Ha! The funniest thing of the week was Pennsylvania censors turning down Charlie Chaplin's "The Pilgrim."

Wonder if they know any more good jokes?

That ought to get a laugh outa old King Tut himself.

I see where Marie Prevost was made ill due to drinking bad coffee on location while making a Goldwyn picture called "Red Lights." That ought to be grounds for breaking her contract, eh?

Can't figure whether that's a railroad story, or one of the other kind. It probably'll be changed anyway, so why worry?

Fast Workers

It isn't everybody who can break an engagement, get in the morning papers and then become re-engaged in time to catch the early afternoon editions. But Charlie and Pola did it.

Discretion vs. Valor

At the newspaper ball in New York last Friday they had a beauty contest, but the judges were all married cartoonists and rather than cause any upheavals in certain circles, forgot to cast any votes and sneaked out.

Our Weekly Question

What picture star doesn't think he knows more about picking stories, directing and acting than all the directors and producers in the business?

Looks That Way

There wasn't much said about the rare wines and likkers found in King Tut's tomb, but I see where Nigel Barrie and a lot of other fellows are going to Egypt to open a few tombs, so they must have inside information.

Takes Some Figuring

Ernest Lubitsch hasn't started to work yet. He's still figuring what his weekly salary will amount to in marks, according to Camera.

He Left Out Acting

Jimmie Young, the director, is looking for a lead for "Wandering Daughters." She must be young, slender, beautiful, talented, gifted, funny, serious, comely, and one who can dance, swim, flirt, drive a car, ride horse back, play golf, a saxophone, sing, smoke cigarettes and make biscuits, that ought to be easy for any Chicago flapper.

More of That "P. P.," Stuff

Facts and Comment Affording Close-up of West Coast Production Situation

By MARTIN J. QUIGLEY

(Written at Los Angeles)

UNLESS those who are directing the destinies of the West Coast studios are dead wrong in their judgment there is an era ahead of better and still better business for the motion picture industry.

The picture making capital of the world is today laden with optimism.

Production is progressing on a bigger scale, more substantially and more costly than at any time in the history of the industry.

The so-called little picture is hardly being given any consideration at all. The hearts and minds and hands of the personnel of the studios are set upon making "big stuff"—and heaven and earth are being moved to accomplish that end.

In fact, the one disturbing feature of the situation is summarized in the question, "Where is the revenue to come from to meet the cost of the production plans now in effect?"

Production costs, in every important particular, have not only not receded from the peak of post-war days but on the contrary they are mounting up continually.

The actor question is one of the most serious problems of the production situation today.

Never before in the history of the industry has production been compelled to meet such heavy expenditures for talent. Players' salaries have skyrocketed—and they are still going up. The extensive amount of production now on the boards, together with the tendency for large casts of well-known names, has created a situation in which players, who prior to the present production boom were happy over engagements at practically any figure, are now demanding—and receiving— princely stipends. In the case of a large number of well-known and fairly well-known players each new engagement calls for a demand for a few hundred dollars more in salary and producers whose schedules call for going ahead are compelled to meet the periodic increases.

Another feature that has had an important bearing on this situation is the fact that during the long term of depression which overtook the West Coast production no new talent of any consequence was being developed. Also the situation did not invite actors from other places to take up residence in Los Angeles and in consequence the casts for the big productions now in work must be assembled from what practically amounts to a little stock company of players, the more popular players of which are being worked over and over again in one production after another.

Men like Hobart Bosworth, Conway Tearle, Milton Sills, Lew Cody, Lewis Stone and others are in demand at several studios at the same time. It is not uncommon for men of this caliber to be working in two or three pictures at the same time, dropping a characterization at one studio where they will not be needed for a few hours and dashing to another to take on some other characterization. And usually the actor is getting his full salary from each of the producers he is working for. The same condition applies with reference to women players of prominence.

The situation with respect to stars is somewhat in a different key. Excepting the handful of personalities who represent in themselves real attractions, the star no longer dominates. While the salary rolls of big productions now in the making transcend all previous levels the total expenditure for talent is split among a greater number. Many of the stars of yesterday are signing contracts at half—and less—than previously received. Single picture contracts are being written at very high figures but long term contracts are very few. Several prominent star contracts that have been in effect at sensational figures for some time are being allowed to lapse at maturity without any effort at re-signing.

During the period of depression when production was at a very low ebb stock companies were everywhere discontinued. The lead in this practice was set by the Lasky studio where a great number of players were turned loose.

Under the stress of its present production schedule the Lasky organization is now again building up its stock company and is bidding spiritedly for players. The same condition applies at the Goldwyn studio where a large number of important people have recently been taken on. With the limited number of people there is to draw on the action of these two organizations is rendering the situation especially acute as far as other producers are concerned.

PLAIN statistics do not tell the story of the production boom that is on. This is true because the number of companies working and the number of pictures of various types and lengths fall far short of giving any idea of the extent and elaborateness of the production efforts that have been undertaken.

It is interesting, however, to note that even on the basis of figures all previous records are being broken. Between ninety-five and ninety-eight production units were in action at the moment last month when we were inquiring into this phase of the situation. There were approximately 65 features and special productions being made, 27 short subjects, and four serials. These figures reflect the situation that has been in existence for several months and which, from definite production plans in effect, will continue at least until the early months of next year.

The figures alone do not tell the story because many of the individual productions represented in the totals amount in time, effort and cost to the equivalent of a number of so-called program pictures. Certainly at no previous time has there been anything like the tremendous demand of that now in work. These, of course, may or may not amount to great attractions when they reach the public but they nevertheless are being built up along such lines that there can be no criticism of the fact that every possible effort is being made to make them great attractions.

Not later will this be given to a number of the elaborate production efforts that are being made and at this point we want to refer to a few conspicuous examples.

"On the scale of Robin Hood" seems to be the motto for the makers of these special productions. Universal is producing a tremendous picture based on "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." Charles Ray is making the great effort of his career in "The Courtship of Miles Standish" and in his studio lot has built a duplicate, in so far as available historical data permits, of the good ship "Mayflower" which represents one of the finest and most costly pieces of stagecraft in the history of motion pictures. Rupert Hughes is making his "Soles for Sale," on an heroic scale for Goldwyn. Marshall Neilan's "The Eternal Three" is one of his biggest efforts. Then there is Edwin Carewe's "The Girl of the Golden West," Charles Chaplin directing and not acting in "Public Opinion," Jesse D. Hampton's new version of "The Spoilers," and Warner Brothers "Main Street."

The production brains of the industry have recently evolved two very significant and interesting methods of techine.

The more important of the two is known in studio language as "shooting through glass." This process consists of placing a large plate of glass before the camera. Upon this glass, in the upper portion, is painted a scene which is intended to represent the background of the picture. The players are on the set beyond the glass. As the camera photographs it picks up the painting on the glass and through the clear portion of the glass the action is recorded. Thus the players are registered. The result is a relative depiction of practically any sort of background wanted with the desired action of the story going on in front of the background.

It is doubtlessly one of the most effective and valuable developments that has taken place recently in picture making. In many instances the screen effect is identical with that obtained if a costly setting was built and the cost is only a fraction of what the actual construction of the setting would cost. In addition to the saving on the type of sets that would be possible to construct, it permits the depiction of many scenes that otherwise would be physically or economically impossible.

The process appears to be the result of widespread experimentation that has been carried on for some time. It is being used by many directors and increasingly better results are being achieved.

Perhaps the most significant feature of this development is that it accomplishes an impressive screen effect at a comparatively low cost—a thing which may be considered almost unique in motion picture production.

The method of production techine which recently came into use, and which has not thus far been reported, consists of being able to fix a realistic ceiling upon sets, particularly large ones such as ballrooms, churches and other large requirements. It will be recalled that previously settings lacked one very important requirement for a realistic effect. They were open at the top at least nothing but a suggestion of the ceiling commencing at the top of the sidewalls was ever given. Careful scrutiny of such settings in the past revealed the fact that there was something missing and that something was the ceiling. Spectators doubtless were not conscious of it but the sense of living was affected by the absence of ceilings unquestionably has been a factor in curbing or destroying the desired illusion.

The process which has been evolved to solve this difficulty is an ingenious and highly scientific method.

Ceilings cannot simply be built over walls as is done in actual construction for the reason that such procedure would box in a set and thereby eliminate the possibility of lighting it.

To circumvent the natural difficulties of the matter a miniature ceiling which is in exact harmony in all details with the hall it is supposed to cover, only built on a small scale, is constructed. This is suspended in the air between the camera and the setting that is being photographed. By an ingenious system of adjustment the miniature ceiling at close range is caused to match up exactly with the full sized setting which stands at a greater distance from the camera. The screen effect is exactly that of a ceiling realistically fitted to the roof of the room.

This report on these two technical developments is given with a view of affording a glimpse behind the scenes, revealing a suggestion of the Herculean effort in brains, time and money that is being made to make the American picture, already the technical marvel of the world, still better.

(Author's note: all the production situations and allied matters will be printed in next week's issue.)

Eugene Roth Engaged
By Laemmle to Advise On Exhibitor Affairs

(Special to Exhibitor Herald)

LOS ANGELES, March 6.—Universal has taken another step in its policy of seeking closer co-operation and understanding between producers and exhibitors, this production activity with the engagement of Eugene H. Roth, as personal representative for Carl Laemmle, who recently resigned as associate managing director of Herbert L. Rothchild Entertainments, operating the California, Imperial, Gordon and Por- tola theatres, San Francisco.

As an expert in theatre management and exhibitor problems, he will advise Universal as to what the exhibitors want, and by consulting with production chiefs at Universal City, will help the company make the kind of pictures that theatre owners need.

Paramount Extends Its Exploitation to Mexico

(Special to Exhibitor Herald)

NEW YORK, March 6.—Exploitation activities of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has extended to Mexico City, and E. E. Shauer, manager of the foreign department, and under the appointment of Leon J. Bamberger, assistant manager of the Division of Exploitation, has been sent as representative.

Mr. Bamberger will be temporarily attached to the Mexico City Exchange and his chief activities will concern the exhibition of Paramount Pictures at the Olympia theatre.

Oldest Motion Picture House in N. Y. Burns

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, March 6.—Crystal Hall, the oldest motion picture theatre in New York City, located at 49 East Fourteenth street, is a mass of ruins following a spectacular fire Sunday night which swept through the building with amazing rapidity. The losses amount to an approximately $100,000 damage and injury to thirty firemen.

The 346 seat house, opened about twenty-two years ago, was on the second floor. It was reached by a stairway at the fourth floor, the walls are lined with penny slot machines.

Joins Lichtman Firm

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, March 6.—Samuel Schwartzman, who has been prominently identified with the film industry for the past five years, has been appointed general counsel of Preferred Pictures and Al Lichtman Corporation, according to announcement by J. C. Bachmann.
R. V. Anderson Made Head of New Division in "U" Organization

NEW YORK, March 6.—A new post in the Universal organization, that of sales exploiter, has been created and filled by Richard V. Anderson, formerly sales manager of the International News Reel Corporation, who has joined Universal. Mr. Anderson is expected to devote his time to improving sales methods and in devising means by which Universal's service to exhibitors can be increased and bettered. As sales manager for International News Reel Corporation, Anderson has visited all parts of the country and is well acquainted with representative exhibitors from coast to coast.

He has been in the film business since 1913, when he joined the branch of the General Film Company at his home in Atlanta.

Four Ohio Exhibitors Indicted on Charge of Violating Sunday Law

FINDLAY, O., March 6.—Indictments by a grand jury were returned against E. B. Gilmore, W. K. Richards, E. Marquart and A. R. Kratt, who operate the five motion picture theatres in Findlay, on a charge of violation of the state amusement law by operating their theatres on Sunday.

Following acquittal of Manager Gilmore by a mayor's court on a similar charge some time ago, a Civic League was organized for the purpose of continuing the fight to keep theatres closed on Sundays.

The Sunday battle has been in progress for ten years in Findlay, with success favoring both sides at times. This is the second time a grand jury has indicted managers. They were fined three years ago.

Rumor Hearst Seeking House in Albany N. Y.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 6.—William R. Hearst is said to be seeking a motion picture theatre in the city.

Hearst representatives were here during the past week, looking over an unfinished theatre which was originally intended to house Shubert productions, but which has not been completed owing to the financial tangle of Max Spiegel's affairs.

Washington

OLYMPIA, WASH., March 6.—It is not believed that the revenue measure, which would have imposed a 10 per cent on theatre tickets, will carry again at this session of the legislature. The bill was returned to committee, from which it probably will not emerge, when 200 exhibitors and film men marched on the capitol to protest the measure. Many of the film men were brought to this city on a special train which had been chartered at Seattle. The film interests marched on to the capitol carrying this banner: "Taxation, Ruination, Starvation. Kill the 10 per cent Theatre Tax. Tax Grows, Shows Close."

Kansas

TOPEKA, KAN., March 6.—The Welfare bill, which would create a board of commissioners in each county of Kansas to license theatres and motion picture houses, which was killed in committee last week, has made a reappearance in the guise of a re-drafted measure and has been reported out favorably by the state of affairs committee at the Kansas Legislature. The measure, which now is on the calendar, would prove an unlimited burden to Kansas exhibitors as the very existence of the board would rest with county welfare boards, as far as the operation of a theatre is concerned. However, as this same measure was reported on favorably in 1924, and its proponents had waged a hard battle, about a week ago in another committee, Kansas theatre owners are inclined to believe that a similar fate again will befall it.

Reformer "Slinging Mud" in Attempt to Defeat Repeal

Tax Legislation Killed in Washington—Regulatory Bill Makes Reappearance in Kansas—Censorship Seems Certain of Defeat in Missouri

ALBANY, N. Y., March 6.—Apparently sensing a gaining unrest among the public with reform legislation and possible defeat of their efforts to keep the censorship law on the statute books of this state, the element responsible for its enactment two years ago has resorted to "mud-slinging."

Prior to today's hearing on the censorship repeal measure, the Rev. O. R. Miller, superintendent of the New York Civic League, published in the Reform Bulletin a long tirade in which he virtually evades the main issue in favor of an unwarranted attack on Will H. Hayes.

Charges Big Expenditure in Massachusetts Fight

Miller charges that Hays was instrumental in the expenditure of $150,000 in the recent censorship fight in Massachusetts, declaring that this "illustrates how the 'movies' have entered politics." He charges also that the citizens of the Bay State were hoodwinked into voting against censorship. The $150,000, he claims, was spent by five motion picture companies, while a sum equally as large was spent by the exhibitors and film men of Massachusetts.

Before a crowd that packed every available space in the State House chamber a hearing, lasting upwards of four hours, was held today on the censorship repeal bill. A rejection of the bill shortly will be reported out of the committee. It is sure of passage in the Senate which is democratic, but in the assembly there are grave doubts that it will be able to muster a majority.

A delegation of fifty exhibitors and others prominent in the industry, headed by Charles L. O'Reilly, arrived from New York today to attend the hearing.

Missouri

JEFFERSON CITY, MO., March 6.—The criminal jurisprudence committee of the Missouri Senate put a quietus to censorship of motion pictures in this state when it amended the committee of Fifty's bill to provide for censorship by the governor, secretary of state and attorney general. Of course the reformers don't want that. It doesn't carry any jobs for them at $3,000 per, and the bill in its present shape hasn't a chance to pass. The house committee previously killed the measure.

Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., March 6.—The great legislative serial "Worried Picture Censorship," came to an end this week. The final "fate out" was on a vote of 46 to 4 in the Senate. The big climax came when Senator Harold F. Vanorman of Evansville, moved that further consideration of the bill be postponed.

"I have been lying in ambush for this particular measure," he said. "It was amended in committee so that it is an entirely different bill than the original. It is absolutely the most vicious and pernicious measure that has been introduced this senate. The principle involved is un-American. It is absolutely barbarous."

Miller and Carroll Forward Newspaper Clipping to Back Up Claim for Brother Theatre Owner

R. MILLER and H. A. Carroll, owners of the Gayety theatre, Amory, Tenn., got a thrill a few days ago when they picked up the "Memphis News Scimitar" and read the following headline: "This Fire Had Too Much Competition—Town at Show as Flames Destroy Hotel."

Reading the story under the headline, they learned that the hotel at Hoxie, Ark., was destroyed by fire of unknown origin Thursday night. The building—and all contents were destroyed owing to the fact that practically everyone in town was in attendance at a picture show. The hotel is owned by Dr. J. C. Hughes, who had his office in the building. The hotel was operated by Augustus Andrews. No insurance was carried either on building or contents. It is understood the hotel will be rebuilt.

Here is the clipping from the "Memphis News Scimitar" which caused Amory, Tenn., exhibitors to send a special delivery letter to the "Herald."

In your valuable and estimable issue and request this exhibitor at Hoxie to impart the following information to us and to other exhibitors:

* * *

"What did you do to get this many people in your theatre?"

"What was the name of the picture?"

"The star? The producer?"

"How did you exploit it?"

"What is your seating capacity?"

"The writers of this letter do not know whether or not Hoxie, Ark., is just a wide place in the road or a metropolis to be compared with Little Rock, but we do know, brother exhibitors, that there is one amongst us who has accomplished what we have been trying to do for many moons and have, thus far, utterly failed."

"We respectfully request the above information because it is information that we have sought for fifteen years and have been unable to find. It has apparently been unearthed by this exhibitor. He has a gold mine compared with other exhibitors. The gods have smiled on him and if his system is for sale, he will be able to live in regal pomp and splendor for all time to come."

"We feel that this brother's name should be placed along beside that of other motion picture celebrities because he possesses a mental endowment or capacity that is unsurpassed by David Wark Griffith or Adolph Zukor or either of the writers of this letter, namely, Miller & Carroll, Amory, Miss.—a good town to live in, but a poor place to endeavor to eke an existence out of an up-to-date motion picture theatre."

Asks Aid in Framing Independent Contract
Thomas Seeks Safety From "Jokers" When Selling Wares in New York

Now that Will H. Hays has concluded negotiations for a uniform contract for exhibitors, independent producers are anxious to have him consider the advisability of sponsoring a uniform contract for use between them and the independent distributor.

Thomas Proposes Plan
Richard Thomas, producer-director of Richard Thomas Productions, Hollywood, fathers the idea in the following letter to Martin J. Quigley, publisher of the "Herald."

"Your signed editorial in your publication issue of February 17 relative to the new uniform contract between exchanges and exhibitors has just reached my desk. I am sure the new contract will greatly stabilize picture distribution, but what about a uniform contract between the producer and the independent distributor?"

"Here's an opportunity for Will Hays to keep his promise about aiding the independents—producers, distributors and exchange men. Every day in every way the independents are making better and better pictures."

Would Eliminate "Jokers"

"I am producing the first of a series of pictures with a bona fide production cost of $100,000 for each picture. Must I hawk my wares about New York looking for contracts without jokers or must I quit making pictures?"

NEW YORK, March 6.—As forecast in last week's issue of Exhibitors Herald, Charles L. O'Reilly was unanimously nominated for the presidency of the Theatre Owners of America at the meeting of that organization last Thursday. The expected opposition of the theatre owners failed to materialize, and William Brandt, the only other member whose name was placed in nomination, withdrew and himself, in a glowing speech, nominated Mr. O'Reilly.

Hold Election March 27
S. A. Moross, whose office as secretary is also said to have been threatened by the Cohen element, was also renominated with no opponent. The election will take place on March 27, and insular tactics affect these two important offices, is a mere formality, as no other ticket can be placed in the field.

The full ticket follows:
President, Charles L. O'Reilly; first vice president, Charles Steinor and Herman Yaffa; second vice-president, Abraham Jaffe and Max Miller; secretary, S. A. Moross; treasurer, Hyman Machliss, and executive secretary, Hyman Behrend.

Contest for Vice Presidency
The only contests developing in the selection of the entire ticket were for the offices of first and second vice presidents.

T. O. C. C. Seeking To Retain Walker as Their Legal Counsel
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)
NEW YORK, March 6.—Senator James J. Walker is having difficulty in separating himself from the motion picture industry. Senator Walker decided some time ago to retire from his position as legal counsel of the Theatre Owners of America.

He had previously notified the T. O. C. C. of his intentions and early last week mailed his resignation to be read and become effective at the last week's meeting of the organization. The resignation was read but not accepted.

In the meantime, during the reading of the document there arose a clamor for its non-acceptance. After a number of members pointed out Senator Walker be asked to reconsider and the matter was finally referred to the board of directors for action. It is now endeavoring to persuade Senator Walker to withdraw the resignation.

KANSAS CITY, KAN., March 6.—Mrs. Gertrude Sawtell of Kansas City, Kan., has become chairman of the Kansas motion picture censorship board, succeeding Dwight Thatcher Harris, resigned. Governor Davis announced this week.

Cohen Opensley Breaks With Hays; Politics Seen in Move Broadcasting of Letter Attacking M. P. D. A.
Regarded as Forerunner of Effort to Keep Control of the M. P. T. O. A.

SYDNEY S. COHEN, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, has formally broken off relations with Will H. Hays.

Using the mimeograph and printing press as his ally, he has flooded the country with propaganda evidently aimed to create an "issue" on which he can cash in on the coming Chicago convention and maintain his hold on the M. P. T. O. A.

Hopes to Name President and Control Board
Although Cohen is expected to go through with his public pledge not to seek reelection to the presidency, observers now believe that it is his hope to do so at the same time see to it that the executive committee will be of his choosing. It is believed Cohen aims to seat himself on the executive committee.

Speculation as to who will be the "Cohen candidate" for the presidency has been rife for weeks, but as yet there has been no public indication of who would be groomed. A number of men considered to be efficient were a few weeks ago hurried and an actual break with Cohen has not been discarded on account of open breaks or near-breaks with the Cohen group.

Rejects Chance to Alter Contract
The principle bit of propaganda now flooding the mails is a four-page printed pamphlet headed "Copy of Letter sent to Will H. Hays by Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America."

The most interesting news contained in it is that Will H. Hays, after finding that the officers of the M. P. T. O. A. were dissatisfied with some phases of the "Uniform Contract," sent letters to Cohen on February 7 and 17 inviting the M. P. T. O. to a future public meeting.

Cohen rejects the offer and devotes two pages to criticizing Hays for closing negotiations on the contract with the M. P. T. O. of New York state and the T. O. C. of New York City. He refers to the officers of the two theatre owners as "a few local exhibitors."

Blames Hays for Many Things
Continuing, the letter blames Hays for newspaper comment on the uniform contract; for non-theatrical competition with theatres; for increasing producer-owned theatres; and various other matters.

An indication that the Theatre Owners Distributing Corporation is to be introduced as a counter-controversy is the following paragraph:

We expect to demonstrate shortly that there are no conditions in the contracts and distributors within the industry independent of your organization who are sufficiently far removed to realize that this business cannot be benefited by a continued disregard of the principles of right or wrong, of fair or unfair dealing with the theatre owners, or fairness to our public and to our industry a code of practice and a standard as fair and honorable as that used in any other business.

Complete Text of Letter
The complete text of the letter, intended apparently for general consumption rather than Cohen, is as follows:

Hon. Will H. Hays, President,
Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America, 822 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Dear Mr. Hays: We acknowledge the receipt of your letters of February 7th and 17th, in which you suggest a conference of the contracting theatre owners and the producing and distributing companies which you represent and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, as represented by our National organization.

It is the consensus of our opinion that a conference of this nature should be held, according to the terms of the "Uniform Contract," with all of the theatre owners, and to the exclusion of any other meeting of the companies and the theatre owners cannot, of course, legally make the motion at a time when the problem is pending for solution by the court at this time.

On Saturday, January 17th, a letter was sent to this office containing twenty copies of the proposed contract and it has been placed in the hands of the various members of our organization for the purpose of recommending to our members the merits of the contract. On January 21st, I delivered a letter to your office requesting eighty additional copies of the contract form to be submitted to members of our Executive Committee, presidents of the state organizations and leaders in different parts of the country. These copies were sent to this office on Wednesday, January 31st, and were sent out to our leaders as indicated. In the same letter I stated to you that "you will understand how impossible it will be for us to have a meeting with representatives of any results on Friday of this week as you mention."

But on Friday, February 2nd, two days after those letters were received, a letter from you held your meeting with members of your association and a few members of our organization, whom had been present during our negotiations for a few months in an effort to influence a meeting on February 2nd you adopted the contract form, of your own draft, as published, altered and attempted to apply to the theatre owners of the country this contract. After having done this you now ask us to join you in a conference to consider the contract above referred to. In answer to your reasons for acceleration of the contract, and the sudden and unexpected burst of speed on the contract, your last letter, dated February second, two days after you gave us drafts of this contract to be sent out, may be known to you that still remains a mystery to the theatre owners and the public and unless it should seem necessary for us to take action at this time, or you were to withdraw your letter and the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against one of the members of your organization, a producer and distributor who was at the last meeting of the executive committee of the National organization, we could not at present consider the contract above referred to.

We have most patiently conducted negotiations with you since the 12th day of June, 1926, striving for a more equitable business contract and the execution of certain of our aims with the industry. We have asked the members of your organization and the members of the producers organizations when their representatives were at your office, and could be assembled on short notice and without any consideration of time or money, and the situation was quite different then.

The members of our National Board of Directors and Executive Committee came to New York from various parts of the United States at great cost to themselves in time and money, because of

“Cohemism” Must Go

Secretary of M. P. T. O. of Minnesota Declares Organization Cannot Survive Unless It Cleans House

Fred Larkin, secretary of the Minnesota Division of the M. P. T. O. A., created a sensation this week when he bitterly arraigned Sydney Cohen in a carefully prepared statement for publication, concluding with the declaration: “Cohen and gang must be completely divorced at Chicago, or good night organization.”

Larkin is owner of the Green theatre at Anoka, Minn., and for years has been a close associate of Al Steffes. His declaration is regarded as the forerunner of a break between Cohen and Steffes.

Since the organization of the M. P. T. O. A., Steffes has been one of Cohen’s staunchest supporters. He is generally credited with engineering the floor work at the Washington convention a year ago and forcing the relection of Cohen. ** * * * * * *

“More and more as the time approaches for the convention at Chicago in May, it becomes apparent that the enemies of the exhibitors are, not out, the national organization,” declares Larkin.

He then takes up Cohen’s distribution proposal declaring that its sponsors are “now bickering waiting for the opportune time to put it over” and continuing: “The extraction of the $5,000,000 will start just as soon as they think the exhibitor is in a mood to listen to their overtures.”

Tracing Cohen’s activities, he points out that at the Minneapolis and Washington conventions, all chance for constructive action was sidetracked for “hit-and-run project of exhibitor distribution.”

“I do not want to, nor am I attempting to criticize or question Cohen’s right to organize and operate a distributing organization,” Larkin declares, “but I do feel that if Cohen and those cohorts who are associated with him in this new venture want to become distributors, they should resign as officers of the M. P. T. O. A.” ** * * * * * *

Replying to Cohen’s promise that the distributing organization would reduce film rentals for exhibitors, Larkin asks what Cohen has done about the “music tax.”

“Fight it to the last ditch is the way he would have it handled judging by some of the bulletins he sent out,” he says. “Did he fight it? He did not. He paid it.”

“Had Cohen gone after the music tax in the proper way, and relief can only be secured by a successful suit or amendment of the copyright law, he could, I believe, have rid the exhibitors of this annoyance. Failing in this, he certainly could have made a settlement with the music society and could have secured for us a low rate, instead of forcing us in most cases to pay the maximum.” ** * * * * * *

He points out that Cohen’s method of handling any proposition has been creating a bureau and flooding the exhibitor with “bulletins.”

“Let’s have some more bureaus. We need them,” he continues, “King Solomon had 600 wives. If King Cohen stays in office another year, he will have over 600 bureaus.”

Concluding, he declares that Cohen can make his report for the past year “on a two-cent postage stamp.” He says that in two years Cohen has accomplished just one thing—steamrolling the T. O. C. of New York out of the organization.

Head of “Safety Last Society” Dies in Fall
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, March 6—Harry F. Young, who termed himself the “human spider,” and who formed the Safety Last Society last winter, was killed yesterday when he attempted to scale the side of the Hotel Knickerbocker. Young had reached the tenth floor when his foot slipped and he plunged to the street. Motion picture cameras, stationed at strategic points of advantage, were turned on Young as he fell.

Membership in the Safety Last Society was limited to human flies, parachute jumpers and others who are considered bad risks by the insurance companies.

“Safety Last” is the title of the latest Harold Lloyd comedy for Pathé.

Hits Cohen Plan and Big Salaries

Those who have expressed to the HERALD their opposition to the Cohen plan for a coordinated distributing system, have assigned many reasons for their attitude. Added to those already published is the opinion of Mr. Retz, Strand theatre, Lamont, Ia. Says Mr. Retz:

“I believe that a lot of the trouble with the exhibitor, especially in the smaller town, lies with the exhibitor. Too many of them regard their theatres as a side line and place time to go evenings, and consequently do not put the interest into it that they ought to. There are just as many people to entertain as there ever were, only they are more read up on the subject of moving pictures and will not stand to be fooled. But there are plenty of big pictures on the market today, and YOU CAN BUY them and MAKE SOME MONEY of THEM if you SELL THEM TO THE PUBLIC. But you have got to work at it and regard your moving picture house as a business and not merely a SIDE LINE.

“If the exhibitors organized their own distributing corporation there would only be less than 20 per cent salaries to pay, and WHO PAYS THE BILLS? NOBODY ELSE, ONLY THE EXHIBITORS.”

Cannot Take Catalogs
As Theatre Admission

(Washington Bureau, Exhibitors Herald)

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 6—The Federal Trade Commission has issued an order against the Northwest Theatres Company and the Chamber of Commerce of Missoula, Montana, requiring them to desist from the practice of accepting mail order house catalogs as admissions.

Announcement of the order by the commission states that it found the Northwest Theatres Company, and the Missoula Chamber of Commerce, accepted from children mail order catalogues as payment for admittance to picture shows in a theatre controlled and operated by the company, which catalogues were subsequently destroyed. This plan, it was charged, was carried out for the purpose of removing the mail order house competition with the local merchants.

Gowns to Be Awarded In Exploitation Test

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, March 6—Cecil B. De Mille has announced through the exploitation department of Paramount that five of the elaborate gowns used in his production of “The Ten Commandments” will be offered to exhibitors in the United States and Canada executing the best exploitation on his current special, “Adam’s Rib.” The gowns in turn are to be awarded as prizes for which the exhibitors care to stage for “The Ten Commandments,” which will be published in the fall.

The original awards will be made in each instance in which there is a tie.

Columns Open
To Candidates

The columns of EXHIBITORS HERALD are open to all candidates for the presidency of the M. P. T. O.

The HERALD will be glad to give space to their announcement and the platform on which they will seek the office. Its only suggestion is that both for space economy and readability, the announcements be limited to 1,000 words.

Williams Honored by First National Club

NEW YORK, March 6—More than 100 members of the First National Club paid their respects to J. D. Williams and Mrs. Williams at a luncheon given in their honor, at which Mr. Williams was presented with a handsome traveling bag.

E. Bruce Johnson, manager of the Foreign Department of First National, was the toastmaster and spoke of the great loyalty of the First National employees for Mr. Williams, as general manager of the company.

Advises Philadelphia Houses Not to Pay “Tax” on Music

Censorship Denounced, Commercialism Upheld, in Addresses at Second Annual Get-Together Of Exhibitors in Michigan

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 6.—It begins to look as though the exhibitors in this district, especially within a radius of 50 miles of Philadelphia, are determined to fight a program against payments of the socalled “music tax.” Secretary George P. Arons of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania Southern New Jersey and Delaware, has advised the exhibitors to refrain from paying the $25 annual lift fee of the organization which will defend any action brought against members by the American Society of Authors, Composers & Publishers.

Wait for Test Case to Show Strength of Defense

In one instance, Secretary Arons has met with a degree of success in fighting a suit brought by the society. In view of that exhibitors operating in the vicinity of Philadelphia are waiting anxiously for developments which will test the strength of their defense.

Secretary Arons calls especial attention to the fact that in advising exhibitors not to pay the tax he refers only to those in the vicinity within a 30 mile radius of this city. Theatres operating outside of that territory should pay the tax, he says, and under such fees, he declares, would be returned to the exhibitors should cases pending be decided against the society.

Michigan

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

DETROIT, MICH., March 6.—Four hundred members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan attended their second annual get-together here last week and this is what they heard from the chief speakers:

Denunciation of the censorship move by the State of Michigan.

Condemnation of certain groups within the industry which have cast aspersions on producers as being too commercial.

Explanation of why half million dollar salaries are paid.

Assurance that motion pictures are, in fact, not to be pitied or scorned.

Representative Gathering Present

The meeting brought a representative showing from all parts of the state and half a dozen guests of national importance. The general feeling here is that this year’s banquet and attendant expression of opinion have gone far in solidifying the Michigan managers organization.

The banquet was held in the Hotel Statler and was presided over by President W. S. McLaren of Jackson. With him at the head of the speakers table was Ray J. Branch, president of the F. I. L. M. Club of Detroit.

Former Judge Alfred Murphy was the man who came out flatly in denunciation of “the tyranny of censorship,” declaring that the legislation recently introduced by the legislature was un-American, uncalled for, unnecessary and impertinent. He expressed the belief that the Bible, Shakespeare and all paintings of the masters are just as censorable as motion pictures—but of course, nobody would like to propose to them.

New Corporation to Take Over Selznick Creditors Will Receive Two Year Notes Under Reorganization Being Completed

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, March 6.—Rapid progress is being made in the reorganization of the Selznick Corporation and its fourteen subsidiary companies, including Selznick Pictures Corporation and Select Pictures Corporation. At a meeting of the shareholders for a committee for the creditors composed of Hyman Winik, Ralph B. Itelson, W. J. J. Doolittle of Utica, and Charles Payne, Chicago, was selected.

To Eliminate Subsidiaries

Under the plan of reorganization a number of corporations will be eliminated and a new corporation formed to take over all assets. Creditors will receive two year notes bearing 6 per cent. interest.

This plan was approved by creditors with a view to making the corporation worth $1,000,000. Before the reorganization plan can be put into effect, however, it is necessary that remaining creditors join the majority, the committee states. It is also planned to abolish the distribution channels to cut expenses under the reorganization.

Has Three New Pictures

The company now has three pictures, “Rupert of Hentzau,” “The Common Law,” and “Modern Matrimony,” complete and ready for publication at once, although a distribution medium has not been decided upon. After creditors have paid the remaining assets will be turned back to stockholders of the Selznick Corporation and Lewis I. Selznick is authority for the statement that the remaining assets will constitute a very substantial sum.

Saves Theatre From Being Grocery Store

By Laemmle’s Plan

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, March 6.—Carl Laemmle’s suggestion that exhibitors cut admission prices to stimulate theatre patronage was put into practice by W. H. Peery of Ogden, Utah, president and manager of the Ogden Theatre Company, Inc. The result is told in the following letter, Universal has received from Mr. Peery:

"Business was certainly off with my Utah theatre," had thought of closing or making over into a grocery store when I was fortunate in seeing your article about reducing admission prices to ten cents.

"I tried this as a last resort two weeks ago today and have been playing to capacity ever since, I will never forget you for such a timely suggestion."

Exhibitor Opposition to Extra Footage Is Growing

One Theatre Owner, in Voicing Approval of Editorial by Quigley, Says it in Verse

THERE seems to be no doubt in the minds of exhibitors that but that excess footage in pictures works to the disadvantage of the theatre owners and creates a condition which, they believe, hurts attendance and decreases box office intake.

At least, this seems to be the growing opinion among the exhibitors who have written to Martin J. Quigley, editor and publisher of the Herald, approving of his editorial, "Five Reels."

V. G. Bullman, Castalia theatre, Castalia, La., who expresses a part of his opinion in poetry, writes:

"For a long time prior to the publication of Mr. Quigley's editorial regarding shorter length features, in the January 20 issue of the Herald, I had held the opinion that this was one of the solutions to the burden that is staggering the small town theatres and priced them from realizing more than a bare living wage from their operation. However, I am only the manager of a small town theatre and mighty small one at that, and have felt that it might be out of place for me to express an opinion on a matter that was of vastly more importance to the owners of larger theatres, but if we all wait for George to do it—well, sometimes it isn't done. In many respects it seems to me that the exhibitor himself is to blame for not expressing himself more and enlightening producers regarding the things that would benefit him, and possibly both of them, so if we appear to be out of place, then kindly grant us a pardon.

"Now a meritorious multiple reel program is a corollary, and what the producers have exploited is bound to prove an asset for any theatre, and likewise a five reel production, but the five reel feature as it is being presented has an advantage over the longer picture in that there are several reels less bookings and gives a chance to bolster things up with a good comedy—many times there is less operating expense."

"At the present time it seems that all producers have gone 'fluey' over the long features. Have conceived the idea that by making a program picture into seven or eight reels they can call it a special—dash a lot of highly colored advertising before poor exhib., and get double what the picture is really worth. This in itself would not be so bad providing it were still possible to get five productions of exact quality. But how many do you get nowadays?"

"I firmly believe that the day of the showman is here, that the single reel pictures featuring our very best stars will prove just as big box office attractions as the longer features, and enable both the producer and the exhibitor to cut expenses."

"Let's get back to earth, keep up the high standard of present day pictures, make them shorter, try to shave rentals and then let the exhibitor cut his advertising and get his old crowd back. What say, fellows?"

"We simply can't send this in without adding a little verse to help push a good cause along. Print it if it seems advisable."

"Every day in every way
They are growing longer and longer.
And every day in a shameful way
Our language grows stronger and stronger.
The goose that lays the golden egg,
The fiver-sized feature in which we beg,
Its hung upon an obscure peg,
Now whose to blame—I wonder.

"The Producers say in a pleasant way
That they know the business better.
That a pictured dream to be a scream
Must be better.
But the poor Exhib., (the wades in sin?)
When he plays a program and has to spin,
Thru twenty reels or better,

"His joyous life is one long stride
When he plays a so called 'winner.'
And a picture reel that spreads a mile
But it soon grows thinner and thinner.
When after reels and reels galore,
The crowd casts glances at the door,
And wonders if there's still some more.
Now wouldn't you like a long for a simmer?

"We've only praise for picture plays
That meet a two hour show.
But you sometimes hurts our box
When they're made too long and slow.
So let's plead for picture plays.
Let's set our cap for better days,
Let's cut the cost in seven ways.
To a shorter picture show.

Hay & Nicholas, Strand and Hayne theatres, Fairmont, Minn., oppose excess, favor five of the schedule all out of joint. They say:

"We would like to have features limited to 5,000 feet. We want a chance to offer something for our program than the feature and a comedy. Today we cannot do it. In fact, too often the feature alone consumes our schedule running time and the addition of the comedy throws our schedule all out of joint.

"We have been in this business ever since the days of the one-reeler and it was our observation that the popularity of the picture was created in the days when we built our program out of one and two reel subjects. They were the days when we could so diversify our program that there was something on it for everybody.

"If we had the opportunity today to build up good strong programs of a number of subjects, we are convinced that we could bring back to the theatre many who have now to attend."

"Every day in every way...

Roy McMinn, Capitol Amusement Company, Superior, Wis., says:

"We wish to say that we are in the interests of the entire industry to limit length of features to five or six reels whenever the story will permit."

Company Will Build Theatres in China

Chinese-American Capital To Popularize Pictures

In the Orient

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, March 6.—Plans of the Peacock Corporation, a new company backed by Chinese and American capital, to spread motion pictures throughout China, were revealed by C. S. Kwei, a Chinese newspaper man, at the weekly luncheon of the Associated Motion Pictures Advertising Club. Mr. Kwei said that the company had already purchased eighty pictures for showing in the far east.

Only 100 Houses in China

He pointed out that there are only about 100 theatres in China at present and declared that it is the intention of the Peacock Corporation, of which he is a member, to build many more playhouses.

"We intend to translate your titles into Chinese," said Mr. Kwei. "The Chinaman seldom reads the newspapers but he will see pictures. We intend to train a native corps of about 1,000 in the handling of projection machines and it is probable that before we have erected our theatres we will send out shows in wagons and in this manner pave the way for our theatricals.

Take Films Seriously

Mrs. Caroline Eager, writer, club woman and motion picture crusader, who has just returned from a tour of the world for Associated First National, declares that the Chinese take their pictures very seriously. The American sense of humor is entirely lost and there is no laughter in Chinese theatres. They like high class pictures and receive them in a spiritual sort of manner.

Changes Made Among Goldwyn Branch Heads

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, March 6.—The following changes in the management of its branches has been announced by Goldwyn Pictures:

Effective February 26th, P. M. Deshon assumed charge of the New Orleans office, succeeding J. W. Pope, Jr. On February 19th, H. W. Starrett took charge of the Atlanta exchange, succeeding J. L. Marentette. Mr. Starrett was promoted to the residence managership of Atlanta from the Cleveland branch exchange. A. B. Lamb is now in charge of Goldwyn's Los Angeles branch exchange, having succeeded Seth Perkins.
Life was one whirl of official reception for S. L. Rothafel during his visit in London. He is shown here with Mr. Kaye and Captain Barbor of Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, and Walter Wanger ready to board train for Brighton to attend banquet in his honor.

Missouri exhibitor is guest of Film Booking Offices studio in California. Right to left: Emory Johnson, creator of “The Third Alarm,” F. B. O. special; H. C. Reinke, St. Joseph, Mo., owner of theaters in the Middle West, and Johnnie Walker, star in F. B. O. features.

Ethel Shannon has been signed by B. P. Schulberg for featured roles in Preferred pictures which will be distributed by Al Lichtman.
“Walter, you must be more tidy,” says the pretty bride of Walter Hiers, Paramount comedian. But Walter doesn’t always look this way—only when he’s mussed up for a scene in “Sixty Cents an Hour,” his first starring vehicle.

Emile Coue explaining his method of auto-suggestion in the short subject special, “The Message of Emile Coue,” which Educational is distributing. The picture is being given equal prominence with featured pictures in display advertising of the larger theatres.

The craze for radio has reached the studio. Here are three C. C. Burr players, Johnny Hines, Charlie Murray and 5 year old Russell Griffin listening in. Hines next comedy special is “Luck,” which is expected to duplicate the success of “Sure Fire Flint.”

Think of the days you walked along the street shivering, then envy Viola Dana as she amuses herself on the beach. It’s the life. The star’s two latest pictures for Metro are “A Noise in Newboro” and “Crinoline and Romance,” both of which are Harry Beaumont productions.
Abraham Lehr, vice president of Goldwyn Producing corporation with headquarters at Culver City studios, is making excellent use of his five years experience as chief executive of Goldwyn producing forces. The Goldwyn studios now are the busiest in California with several Goldwyn companies working in addition to several outside units that are using Goldwyn producing facilities. As head of the studio forces, Mr. Lehr is facing a tremendous task and the able manner in which he is carrying on the work is enhancing his reputation as one of the industry’s stellar studio executives.

Jackie Coogan, Metro star, with his parents, passed through Chicago Friday en route to Coast after four weeks in the East where he was feted by the public and state and local executives.

Universal is now producing what it believes will be one of its finest pictures, “The Hunchback of Notre Dame,” the Victor Hugo novel. The center picture shows one of the large sets representing fifteenth century Paris under construction. At the left is Eullalie Jensen and at the right Patsy Ruth Miller, both of whom have important roles in the feature which will be published as a “super Jewel.” Lon Chaney, Norman Kerry and Raymond Hatton are others in the cast.
Noah Beery, villain in many First National attractions, in struggle with Barbara Tennant to entertain First National Week guests at United Studios. John E. McCormick, Western representative of distributing company, Joseph Schenck and Mike Levee were in charge of studio entertainment which was attended by 60,000 fans.

When Marie Prevost became a Warner Brothers star she automatically discarded her bathing suit. Here is Director William Beaudine offering the star his sympathies, and services as a grave-digger, at burial of famous garment.

Here is another link in the chain of new branch offices being erected in all exchange centers by Vitagraph. This is the branch structure at Minneapolis. The exchange is located at 70 Western avenue in the Minnesota metropolis. It is a fire-proof structure throughout.

Quartet of prominent film men on one of sets for Metro-SL picture, "Your Friend and Mine." Left to right: Clarence Badger, director of film; Arthur Sawyer of SL productions; Fred Niblo, Metro-Mayer director, and Willard Mack, author-actor.

"Keep politics out of pictures," protests Will Nigh as he steps in to separate Ann Forrest and Tom Moore from a violent argument during the filming of a scene for Nigh’s second production for Weber & North. Cameramen Jack Brown and Sid Hickox are waiting for action.

Alice Brady, smiling woman seated on sled, and Lefty Flynn, smiling man who looms up in middle of group, pause in the midst of the winter sport to have their picture taken. Their companions are members of the Paramount company which filmed "The Snow Bride" in Canada.

The WEEK in NEW YORK

If Robert Vignola ever makes pictures for consumption in the Far East, it is a safe hunch that they will be comedies. The popular director is now on the last leg of his trip around the world which will bring him back to New York about May 1.

In a letter to Arthur Brailant, his personal representative, Mr. Vignola writes interestingly of his experiences and impressions. He says:

The Far East's American-made motion pictures are in great favor and rapidly growing in popularity, particularly the comedies. The really good comedies just tickle them over with laughter. As for the features, they sit through them very quietly and unresponsively, which would be all right if it weren't for the incidental music they try to play to them. It's really funny to see an emotional scene played to squeaky strings, cymbals and tom-toms. But the comedies go on.

The Japanese theatre made a keen impression on Mr. Vignola, and of it he says:

"In Kinto the performance I saw was really very interesting and intelligent. The sets were almost as good as Urban's, though they had less color and were more angular than Urban's. A circular stage changes the sets before your eyes in a jiffy. One leading lady had a very emotional scene, and, believe me, she played it. Her tones rang so true that she about had us all going."

In Hong Kong a police sergeant was assigned to be with me constantly and he showed me some of the intimate side of life. The police told me to please say that they would have never dared to enter without the law on my side. That sergeant personally knew more hop heads than I ever dreamed existed in this day.

Christmas was spent at sea and Mr. Vignola arranged a special entertainment choosing his talent from among the passengers. He not only acted as chairman of the entertainment committee, rehearsed the entire program and supervised the passenger's participation, but was in two of the numbers as a performer.

Last week's luncheon of the A. M. P. A. was turned into a field day for Wells Hart, promoter for the New York press representative for Sam Harris. Wells was billed as the speaker of the day but, as it turned out, was more spoken about than speaker. Hart was presented to the A. M. P. A. members by Fred E. Baer, the official Barker of the day, who derived a lot of pleasure from being able to introduce a speaker who has long been a member of the organization. Before Hart was given an opportunity to say a few words in his own defense, many lovely and unlovely things were said about him by Harry Reichenbach, John C. Hinn and Victor Shapiro.

In his speech Hart indulged in many reminiscences, touching on his personal connections with many of the famous showmen and publicity men of the past two decades.

One of the distinguished guests at the luncheon was new Studio Kaye, of the Peacock Motion Picture Corporation, which is doing considerable to develop motion picture exhibition in China.

Will H. Hayes was denoted last week during his incumbency as Postmaster General he acquired the title of "General" which is used generally in speaking of him about his offices and in the industry. Last week he was commissioned a Lieutenant-Colonel in the Adjutant General's Department of the Officers Reserve Corps. The department explains that in case of another war, Colonel Hayes will be placed at the head of the army postal service.

Are we to gather from this that it is expected to conduct the next war by mail?

Are Carlos, for more years than a few Eastern manager of production for Fox, has entered into a partnership with Roland West for the purpose of making a screen version of "The Unknown Purple." The production will be made on the coast and distributed in the independent market.

Sam Moross says if the administration bill succeeds in lifting the censorship of motion pictures, exhibitors will be able to show Bill Hart's horses on the screen with their shoes.

And another censorship that Moross is interested in and which is expected will soon be opened is one that deals with censorship of comics. As secretary of the T. O. C. C. Mr. Moross deals out the news of that organization, which is a committee consisting of Louis Geller, Leo Ochs and John Mannheimer was appointed to censor T. O. C. C. news before Moross gave it out. On April 11, Charles L. O'Reilly will be installed as president of the T. O. C. C. and on April 17 when he takes office a censorship abolition will be one of the first matters urged for his action.

Tracy Hammond Lewis suggests that the motion picture director who successfully made a picture of the Einstein theory of relativity should issue one explaining the income tax.

"Othello," the German-made Shakespearean picture, will go on in this theatre for a while before opening at the Criterion this week. The house will then remain dark for a few days during which it will be cleaned before opening Friday night with "The Covered Wagon."

Allan Rock wants to know why a couple of clerks in this office didn't wake up and get some publicity about Pola Negri and Charlie Chaplin on the first pages of the newspapers.

J. Stuart Blackton is back in New York again after two years in England, where he made several productions with Lady Diana Manners.

Who wouldn't have a job like Dick Tucker's, supervisor of production for C. C. Burr? He escapes all the wintry weather of the past few weeks by taking a troupe of ten players by the hand and leading them to Jacksonville, Fl., to film several scenes in Burr's new ALL-Star comedies. And now as soon as he brings them back, he will be himself off to Bermuda to secure some local color. And we have reliable information that certain kinds of Bermuda local color is well worth while.

Lou Marangella comes to bat with the following, for which he has our sympathy:

BARKER EDIES.

Louise Fazenda, the lady with the million dollar look in the Warner Brothers classic of the screen, "The Beautiful and Damned," believes that all speeches are entirely too serious. As a remedy for this sad state of affairs, she pens the following lines to me: She has promptly sent me this note, which she has herself written me out for a sap and trusts that I will remain the same. As a consequence I am sending the dope along with you with my own caption.

SUBTILITI SMILES

My love has flew
He done me dirt
I did not know he was a flirt.
To those not schooled
I forbade
To be so done.
As I was did,
He has came
He has went.
He has left I all alone.
I can never come to he.
He can never went to I.
It can not was.

The taking over of the Southern Enterprises by Famous Players has necessitated a number of changes in Clapp's staff. C. M. Kenter, a veteran of Clapp's staff, has been assigned to Atlanta. Kenter's old assignment has been given to William D. Harwell, formerly the Southern Enterprises Atlanta office.

E. E. Paschall, who was in Dallas for Southern Enterprises of Texas, is retained there. The post in Minneapolis, which has beenvacant since the departure of Max R. Doolittle, has been given to Jack Hellman, formerly managing editor of the Casper, Wyoming, Daily Times, and former sporting editor of the Kansas City Post.

Norim Dixon, formerly Paramount exploiter at Cincinnati, has been transferred to Peoria where he will develop that territory for the newly opened Paramount exchange. John D. Howard, who has been in the Paramount home office for the last five months, returns to his old post at the Detroit exchange.

The daring of Ernest Carewe in driving 95 miles through a raging blizzard in the mountains of Utah probably saved First National thousands of dollars. Carewe was making "Paradise Road of the Golden West" for First National and left early this week for Zion National Park, Utah. His company was to follow the next day. On reaching the park Carewe ran into a terrific storm and he knew he would have to go somewhere else to make the picture. Sixty-five miles was the nearest telegraph station, and Carewe drove the entire distance over mountain roads reaching the station in time to file a wire three hours before the company was scheduled to leave Los Angeles.

New York Arbitration Body Functions Under New Rules

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, March 6.—The joint arbitration board of the F. I. L. M. Club of New York and the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce will resume its weekly hearings this week, operating under a new set of arbitration rules framed in accordance with the provisions of the uniform contract.

Judge Grossman Aids in Formulating Rules

Ever since the acceptance of the uniform contract by the exhibitors of New York, a committee from each of the two organizations has been at work on the new rules. In this they had the assistance of Judge Moses H. Grossman, one of the foremost legal authorities of New York. Many of the new rules are patterned, to some extent, after the text of the Arbitration Society of America.

The new rules, which have been accepted by both the F. I. L. M. Club and the T. O. C. C., were drafted by the following committees:

For the T. O. C. C.—Bernard Edelbertz, Leo Brecher, William Breitman and S. A. Moross.

Following are the new rules in full:

The designation of the parties under these rules shall be as follows:

1.—PARTIES: The party alleging the claim shall be known and described as the plaintiff. The party against whom the claim has been filed shall be known and described as the defendant.

2.—CHAIRMAN: The board of arbitration shall consist of not less than three members as chairman, who shall conduct the proceedings of the board.

3.—COMPLAINT: The submission of any claim to the board shall be made by the plaintiff, filing with the secretary of the board, a complaint which shall contain a brief statement of the facts giving rise to the claim in question.

The secretary of the board shall within forty-eight hours after receiving the complaint, notify the defendant and mail him a copy of the complaint by registered mail.

4.—ANSWER: The defendant shall have five days after the receipt of the complaint, within which to answer the same, either orally or in writing.

5.—NOTICE OF HEARING: Immediately after the answer has been filed by the defendant, or in default of any answer after the time within which such answer should have been filed shall have expired, the secretary of the board shall notify both parties by registered letter, that the claim shall be heard before the board on a certain day, such notice shall be mailed not less than ten days before the day of the hearing.

6.—HEARINGS: Both parties or their representatives shall appear before the board on the day of the hearing and such hearing shall commence as soon as the case is reached and be pressed to a conclusion.

7.—ATTORNEYS: Either party may, if he so desires, be represented at the hearing in person or by counsel.

8.—EVIDENCE: The board shall not be limited to the legal rules of evidence, but shall be governed by the principles of relevant evidence contained in the written contract entered into between the parties.

Any testimony obviously unrelated to the substance of the matter in question, when not consumed and tending to irrelevancy, shall be excluded, but all evidence bearing on the case should be freely admitted.

9.—AMENDMENT: The plaintiff may amend his complaint and the defendant amend his answer at the hearing.

The party, however, against whom the amendment is directed, may claim surprise and if in the opinion of the board such claim is justified, a postponement of the hearing may be granted.

10.—AWARDS: At the close of the hearing, both parties shall retire and the board shall proceed immediately to consider the claim and render its award. Such award shall be in writing and stated clearly as to the amount of the parties is required to do under the direction thereon. In case of a disputed controversy submitted to the board, no award shall be deemed to have been compiled with until all of the directions contained therein, have been complied with.

11.—AMENDMENT: The board may in its discretion, grant an additional hearing.

12.—DEFAULT: Should the plaintiff fail to appear at the hearing of the case, the defendant may move to dismiss the case upon such motion being made, the complaint shall be dismissed.

Should the defendant fail to appear at the hearing of the case, the board may proceed and render such award as it deems just and proper. Such application for rehearing must be in writing and signed by each party and file together with the copy thereof, served by registered mail with the other party and filed with the board, and such application shall be heard forthwith and before the board at the day of the original hearing.

13.—MEMBERS OF BOARD: The members constituting the joint board of arbitration shall serve without salary.

14.—JOINT ARBITRATION COMMITTEE: There shall be an administrative committee by the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce and the F. I. L. M. Club to be known as the joint arbitration committee, to consist of an equal number of members from each side. This committee shall be the general superintendence of the administrative and arbitrating affairs and work of the joint board of arbitration. It shall hire a secretary and such other help as may be required, provide suitable meeting rooms for the hearing of the arbitration and the action of the board's business, and otherwise generally supervise and direct all financial affairs connected with the work of the board.

15.—STRICTNESS: The clerical and administrative business of the board shall be performed and operated by the secretary who shall be paid such salary as shall be determined by the joint arbitration committee and all necessary expenses, keep a record of all cases and awards, and keep other books and memoranda as the board shall from time to time direct. He shall examine the complaints and answer questions on the face of the complaint.

16.—COSTS OF OPERATION: The secretary shall keep a careful and complete account of all cost of operation for conducting the business of the board. Such cost shall be determined and paid out of the funds of the board and shall perform all other services as the board shall require.

Many Prominent Players Added to Goldwyn Stock Company

Emmett J. Flynn to Produce Specials for Corporation, His First to Be Version of Popular Novel

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, March 6.—That Goldwyn is convinced of the desirability of maintaining a permanent stock company from which to select its casts is evidenced in the number of stellar players signed to long term contracts within the past few weeks. The most recent additions to its roster are George Walsh and Ted Edwards.

Simultaneous with the signing of these players, it was announced that Emmett J. Flynn, prominent director of Fox's "Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court" and "Monte Cristo," will produce for Goldwyn, his first picture to be the screen version of a widely read American novel.

Mr. Walsh was given his contract, according to the company, because of his excellent work in "Vanity Fair." Abraham Lehr, in charge of studio production, signed Mr. Edwards after seeing a screening of "Daddy's Love," which Young Edwards produced and in which he has a leading role.

Aileen Pringle, recently awarded a long term contract, will be seen in Goldwyn's production of "The Christian" and "Rupert Hughes' "Souls for Sale." Frank Mayo, formerly starred by Universal, has been signed for a term of years following his line work in "Souls for Sale."

Hobart Bosworth, one of the pioneer film actors and recently seen in Marshall Neilan's "The Strangers' Banquet," in Hugo Ballin's "Vanity Fair," has signed a long term contract, as has Conrad Nagel who has been appearing in Paramount films.

Meighan Brings Joy to Lepers

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, March 6.—The greatness of life for lepers on the island of Canarios off the coast of Panama is to be somewhat relieved in the future by motion pictures. When Thomas Meighan, Paramount star, was in that vicin- imity filming "The Ne'er-Do-Well," he learned of the unfortunate position of the island and on his return to New York purchased a projection machine to be sent there.

Films are to be supplied regularly by Paramount for the entertainment of the unfortunate on the island.

Meighan was recently given a new contract, signing an extension of the earlier agreement.

MONEY MAKING IDEAS Which Have Been Used Successfully by Exhibitors to Build Up Their Patronage

By OSCAR TROYER

(Lyrical theatre, Rugby, No. Dak.)

Starting a serial, 1 always give the school grades a 5 cent or a free matinee, and all 10 cents at night and no children admitted at night unless they are with their parents. It sure starts them off right for me.

By ADAM HORNUNG

(Opera House, Victor, Mont.)

A real good photograph of a well-liked star or a very good scene in his or her best picture, given away, one to each family on one night only as long as the supply lasts, should draw a large crowd early. I'd like to try it if good pictures could be secured reasonably.

By R. L. BEHLER

(Royal Theatre, Garrett, Ind.)

I find that the people here in this town do not want program pictures. We are running big specials and are doing a better business. We buy extra 24 sheets and always make cutouts and frame them. It helps fine. Big fronts, plenty of advertising and good pictures get them now. Go after them.

in which she acquitted herself as Glory Quayle in "The Christian."

William Orlovand, Cecil Holland and Lucien Littlefield, character actors, have been signed. Another beautiful young woman has been given a contract. She is Jean Haskell, Seattle society girl, who won in the Goldwyn-Photoplay Magazine Screen Opportunity contest.

Of the players who have long been members of the Goldwyn stock company who are still with the organization may be named Helene Chadwick, Richard Dix, Kate Lester, Claire Windsor (recently given a new contract), William Iaines and Patsy Ruth Miller.

Goldwyn Expansion Topic of Discussion

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, March 6.—A telegram just received from Mr. J. R. Grammer, now at the studios after a trip which has covered the majorities of Goldwyn's branch exchanges, states that on the way back he found the expansion of activities by Gold- wyn in the big theme in picture circles everywhere.

The consensus of exhibitor opinion is that Gold- wyn is making faster strides than any other company in the industry," states the message. "Everybody connected with the business is talking Goldwyn, thinking Goldwyn—and booking for Gold- wyn product. I never before have seen such a keen interest on the part of exhibitors in the forthcoming production of any film company.

"The Christian" has aroused their enthusiasm and I found them eager for information on "Vanity Fair," "Maid Love," "Lost and Found," "The Eternal Three," "Red Lights," "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," "Creda" (McTeague). Three Wise Fools," "The Spiders," "Ben-Hur" and the new pictures which have not even been placed in preparation yet. The big announcements which Goldwyn has been making almost daily are having a tremendous effect on exhibitor and patron alike. They are watching Gold- wyn.

I found a pretty thorough agreement among exhibitors that the public had started to going to the pictures again, but that they were demanding big productions.

On his arrival at the Culver City studios Mr. Grammer found 800 persons on the pay roll, with the biggest production schedule in the history of the company in operation. The majority of the-as are either actually in operation or preparing feature pictures.

Pictures of the company's stock players will appear in the "Pictorial Section" next week.

Irvin Join's Jacobs

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, March 6.—Clarke Irvin has been engaged as special publicity representative for Arthur H. Jacobs, who is ready to screen the "Ter- williger," Frank Borzage production, the first of a feature series for First National. Mr. Irvin has recently been with Gold- wyn and Warner Brothers. He handled publicity for Lloyd and Chaplin in 1923.
Theatre Letter Vote Favors “Exploiter”

The “exploiter” is an asset. Theatre Letter writers contributing opinions to this department for several weeks run a heavy majority to this conclusion. A review of the letters received reveals the status of the professional exploitation man in relation to the theatre clearly. J. P. Lannon, Isis theatre, Cedar Rapids, opened the discussion of the professional exploitation expert’s value to the exhibitor in a Theatre Letter published in the January 27 issue. Mr. Lannon went on record as in favor of the service, citing an instance in which he had materially profited by the cooperation of a “Goldwynner,” but suggested that others indicate their opinions. * * *

First reply was made by F. E. Johnston, Court theatre, Wheeling, who also cited a successful campaign and who plainly indicated his belief that the exploitation service offered by a number of exchanges is of real theatre value.

The first unfavorable opinion was voiced by O. B. Sterling, Sterling theatre, Dayton, Tex., who expressed his belief that the service was not as well developed as its purpose justifies and that exhibitors were forced to stand the expense of the systems maintained.

Close study of the communications printed reveal a sincere gratitude on the part of exhibitors in cases where the efforts of the professional exploitation men have been rewarded with success. In these letters the word “cooperation” figures prominently and a common meeting ground of mutual interest is evident.

In numerous letters from exploitation men the word figures as prominently, writers stating that their best results are obtained where exhibitors most willingly accept their suggestions and that their troubles lie where indifference greets their efforts.

A number of rather bitter letters from both exploitation men and exhibitors, unsigned and therefore not printed, are not considered in this resume. * * *

It becomes evident after careful perusal of the comment contributed that a great deal of benefit to the theatre may arise out of intelligently executed cooperation between exhibitors and exploitation men. It is likewise clear that not all of the exploitation systems are organized upon ideally efficient lines and that not all exhibitors are so disposed toward the proposition as to facilitate rapid progress toward a more satisfactory condition.

Clear understanding of the situation seems to be lacking in many quarters. There seems to be a more or less common restraint between exhibitor and exploiter and some difference of opinion as to the purpose of the work in hand.

A good many exploitation men seem to concentrate so earnestly upon the picture being exploited that all thought of the theatre is lost. While the error is quite understandable, it is not conducive to common progress. At the other extreme stands the exploiter who seems to believe it his duty to flatter the exhibitor to the end of drawing him into heavy outlay. Between these two ranks the hard-working, constructive exploitation man who confines himself to the serious business of making an engagement profitable. It is this type of exploiter that the exhibitor has endorsed. * * *

As the situation stands there is considerable lost motion that may and should be eliminated. The film companies maintaining exploitation services can do much toward effecting this correction by laying their aims and policies before the exhibitors clearly and definitely. No substantial effort to do this has been apparent.

Exhibitors can do their part toward rectifying matters by registering their requirements as concretely.

The stumbling block that has most impeded progress, apparently, is the rivalry between exhibitor and exploiter as showmen. While this exists there will, of course, be no great advancement. When both parties come to the realization that there is no competition between them and without competition there can be no rivalry, this obstacle should disappear.

Better Theatre Platform—No. 13

Proper Pride

A good theatre is something to be proud of. A theatre its owner is not proud of isn’t worth having. Pride is one of Nature’s strongest accelerators. Nobody ever made a success of a business he wasn’t proud of.

But Bruce Barton, Dr. Frank Crane and their school have rewritten all that many times and better. For the purposes of this Better Theatre Platform, pride may be most profitably considered from a financial viewpoint.

The last five minutes spent on a difficult bit of newspaper copy, the extra musical rehearsal, the hours spent in projection rooms viewing short subjects of every conceivable type in the interests of program variety, the time it takes to solve the puzzle of putting a long title in electric lights presentably—these, and the countless other details observed by the successful exhibitor and ignored by the failure, are in large part the result of a proper pride in the theatre.

Such a pride may arise from a number of sources. One need not own the biggest theatre to be proud of it—if he owns the most attractive, the most ably managed, the most efficient or the most respected. One need not own the theatre that is “most” something, that something being good, to possess this untouted but powerful ingredient of success.

Exhibitors who are proud of their theatres guard them well, thus guarding and perpetuating that pride. Exhibitors who are not proud of their theatres should get rid of them.

On the Bill at The Circle

For years the Circle theatre, Indianapolis, has been regarded as one of the nation’s model theatres. Its program is of corresponding interest.

3. “Topical Rex,”
4. Organ Number.
5. “The Balloonic.”

The Circle departs from common procedure in running the comedy ahead of a dramatic feature. It is the first theatre programmed in this space to do so.
Doubles for Hottentot are not hard to find. This one advertised "The Hottentot," First National, for the Wells theatre, Norfolk. It may be effectively duplicated in practically every territory of the country.

A one-piece setting readily and economically duplicated served the Broadway, Richmond, in its prologue to "East Is West."

Bells of the Sea," sung by a basso in above setting presented "Furry," First National, for the Mark-Strand theatre, Brooklyn.

Amateur Hottentots are in wide use for Thomas H. Ince's First National attraction, "The Hottentot." The tie-up direct shown above is from the O'Klare theatre, Eau Claire, Wis. The stunt can be widely varied.

A "doggy" window for "When Knighthood Was in Flower," Cosmopolitan-Paramount, from the Regent, Springfield, O. A music tie-up.
ORIENTAL FLAIR distinguished the lobby of the Hamilton, Lancaster, for First National's "East Is West," reproduced above.

"WAY BACK WHEN" figures more and more in exploitation. This ancient figure advertised "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" when at the Pitt theatre, Pittsburgh, under guidance of the resourceful Pete Smith.

WRITE YOUR OWN SCENARIO for presenting "Skin Deep," First National, using the Cumberland Strand set shown above. Call it "Taps."

POSTER-MODEL uniformity distinguishes this Duluth book window for "When Knighthood Was in Flower." Note nicety of detail.

DENVER KNEW quite definitely that the Pathé serial, "Plunder," was to be seen every Saturday at the Colonial Theatre. One of the oldest and most dependable stunts used in theatre exploitation assured it.
AND IN BUFFALO, as almost everywhere, books advertise "When Knighthood Was in Flower," Cosmopolitan picture. The theatre was the Cataract.

SHORT SUBJECT EXPLOITATION is improving. Associated Exhibitors' "A Sailor Made Man" was shown at the Orpheum, Wil- liston, N. D., at a special matinee for children attended as shown above. Snapped before opening.

TELLING THE WORLD and telling it properly is good theatre. The New Regent, Harrisburg, thus told the populace that Wesley Barry would be present at the showing of "Heroes of the Street," Warner Bros.

THE FAIR, Chicago, devoted this window to "Quincy Adams Sawyer," the book, when the Metro picture was in engagement at the Chicago theatre.

CLASS APPEAL pays, if economically made. Lichtman's "Poor Men's Wives" was so advertised through silks in its New York Criterion run.

'POOR MEN'S WIVES, or wives of any estate for that matter, are interested in silk. Hence the value of this Fifth Avenue display for the Lichtman picture when shown at the Criterion theatre in New York City.
A VETERAN STUNT of perennial value was executed by Bill Danziger, Paramount exploiter, for the Cosmopolitan production, "When Knighthood Was in Flower," at Duluth, Minn., Lyceum theatre. Enlistments are open.

SEATTLE'S KING, crowned in exploitation of Goldwyn's "The Strangers' Banquet," presented with the key to the city amid due ceremony.

ACTIVE AUSTRALIA, Sydney to be exact, yields this book tie-up used by the Globe for Paramount's "Blood and Sand," now there.

EVEN TUT-ANKH-AMEN was born too late to meet this animal "in person," but he was an active force in the exploitation of Paramount's "Adam's Rib" for Sid Grauman when shown at the Rialto, Los Angeles.

SANS FRECKLES but with personality in full vigor, Wesley Barry helped Warner Brothers' "Rags to Riches" to success in its run at the Rialto theatre, Fort Worth. Wesley's followers at right and left.

FIRE LADDIES of Butler, Pa., made it possible for the Comique to advertise "The Third Alarm," Film Booking Offices special, as above.
THEATRE LETTERS
Personal Accounts of Constructive Showmanship
Contributed by Readers of "Exhibitors Herald"

JOHN W. CREAMER, Strand and Empire theatres, Chillicothe, used the above stage settings for "Grandma’s Boy" and "The Storm." His Theatre Letter, giving full details of construction and operation, is presented this week.

Creamer Gives Simple Stunts
That Attract

Simple stunts that make a hit because of the surprise element are used with good effect by John W. Creamer, Strand and Empire theatres, Chillicothe, whose letter is illustrated with photographs showing presentation of "The Storm" and "Grandma’s Boy."

If you are to play either of these attractions Mr. Creamer’s letter gives full details for adequate presentation. If not, his letter is no less interesting.

It follows:—

THEATRE EDITOR,
EXHIBITORS HERALD.
Dear Sir:
Am mailing you some photos of my recent work. When "The Storm" came around, I played up a stage setting just to be different from the exploitation others used.

With wood wings and foliage borders, I transformed our stage into a forest setting. Our screen sets four feet from the floor, so in front of it I piled chairs, covered them with canvas, laid on the cotton bating, then the powdered snow. The floor was also covered with canvas. On the floor were two baby spots shedding a green glow over the setting (of course not hitting the screen); behind each door, at the end of the footlights, were red bulbs shining thru the art glass. All these lights burned during the feature. Snow covered logs and snow on the wings completed the set.

At appropriate times a soloist sang parts from "I Love a Little Cottage."

Then for a prologue to "Grandma’s Boy" I arranged a very plain setting as the photo shows. The old well was made from scraps of wallboard and painted green. At the other side a strip of white fence with twining flowers, a chair, a bucket, and a stump completed the "props."

The prologue started with all green stage lights. To get the best effect use a boy and girl, each dressed to resemble the main characters in the film; let them enter from behind the fence hand in hand, the boy singing "Don’t You Remember Our Little Home?"

At the words—"When the Silver Moon Was a Smiling From Above" the girl joins in, the green lights dim out, and the couple arc caught in a white spot from the flies for the finale.

These simple stunts make a hit, and our patrons never know what is coming next.

JNO. W. CREAMER,
Strand-Empire theatres, Chillicothe, Mo.

DEAR MR. CREAMER:
Thanks for your good letter and the pictures. We’ve been somewhat puzzled by the protracted silence in the Chillicothe section and are glad to have you again among those present. How’s business. — W. R. W.

Tests Street
Ballyhoo and Tells Result

Quit guessing. Unless you know positively whether or not street ballyhoo pays you undoubtedly use it too much or too little.

Here’s a practical test which any showman can apply.

THEATRE EDITOR,
EXHIBITORS HERALD.
Dear Sir:
Here’s a lobby that cost just $7.50, flowers and all, and the Oh’s and Ah’s it brings forth from the passerby alone is worth what it cost.

And "When Knighthood Was in Flower" is a picture that still makes ’em Oh and Ah after they come inside.

Henry was photographed while he was working the streets for "Knighthood" but he moved and will have to have it all done over, so expect a new photo of Henry soon.

Here is a great way to test out street ballyhoo work. When you have a picture hooked for four to six days, work the street ballyhoo in the last day. I tried this test long, long ago and well—I work the street every day.

GEORGE REA,
Colonial theatre, Washington C. H., O.

DEAR MR. REA: + + +
That’s the simplest and most logical-sounding test for street ballyhoo that we’ve heard. It should definitely settle the matter for a good many showmen who hold the proposition in doubt. Thanks.

Better cut down on Henry’s out supply. — W. R. W.

Poetic Editor
Writes Jingle
Fit for “Copy”

A little jingle volunteered by a poetically inclined newspaper editor and forwarded by Eugene Saunders, Saunders theatre, Harvard, Ill., is presented with Mr. Saunders’ letter. It fits nicely into the ad copy for a number of current attractions.

THEATRE EDITOR,
EXHIBITORS HERALD.
Dear Sir:
Tin B. Emerson, assistant editor of the Harvard Independent, wrote the enclosed and it made quite a little comment. I thought that perhaps some other exhibitor could use it. If you think so, use it. If not, the waste basket with it.

(Enclosure)
Little Boy Blue, come blow your horn
To help us find the Maid Forlorn;
Old Mother Hubbard—perhaps Boy Blue—
Jack and Jill are mist’ring, too.
Lil’ Jack Horner and his Jack Spratt,
Lost, strayed or stolen—think of that!
First place to look, and you’ll find them all.
Over at Saunders’, watching the show.

EUGENE SAUNDERS,
Saunders theatre, Harvard, Ill.

DEAR MR. SAUNDERS: + + +
Little jingles like that occasionally “catch on” and circle the globe. (You’ve heard the one about the Ford for sale dozens of times.) Therefore, we pass it on as per your suggestion. — W. R. W.
Ross D. Rogers, Mission theatre, Amarillo, Tex., used this picturesque and powerful front for "Jazzmania," Metro. His Theatre Letter, giving details rendering duplication a simple matter for others who will play the picture, is presented in this issue.

Rogers Sets Record With "Jazzmania"

A sterling record for thorough-going exploitation of picture contents is established by Ross D. Rogers, Mission theatre, Amarillo, Tex., in his letter chronicle of the campaign for "Jazzmania," given one of its first public presentations under his direction. Exhibitors who will play the picture owe themselves the advantage Mr. Rogers gives them in writing this letter. Every showman who exploits should read it.

THEATRE EDITOR.
EXHIBITORS HERALD.

Dear Sir:

Am enclosing two views of our front for "Jazzmania." We played this on the 9th, 10th and 11th of February, this being one of the first runs in the country.

You will note the three boxed panel effects, one on each side and one in the center, with cutouts used which we had saved from paper on Miss Murray's last picture, "Fascination," the paper on "Jazzmania" not being so well adapted for cutout work. However, on the side panels figures cut from the one-sheets are pasted on. The striped effect was in blue and white, this idea being secured from the herald on the picture.

Now in the center panel, you will note a circle with small openings. Behind this we used a colored circle, to which was attached a small motor, the circle revolving constantly and the colors showing up through the small openings. This attracted a lot of attention and showed up plainly across the street.

To top it all off we secured a Magnavox from a local phonograph store, which was placed in back of the center panel, immediately back of the color wheel (concealed of course). We then wired in a phonograph from away back on our stage, completely concealed, and played jazz records, the music coming mysteriously then through the openings in front of the color wheel, the idea being to tie up the jazz with the title of the picture.

I believe this one of the most artistic fronts we have ever built, and also one that attracted an unusual lot of attention. Soft pastel shades were used, and the effect was pretty. We used beaver-board altogether and the total cost of the front did not exceed $15.

"Jazzmania" is a "dark" of a picture. It has everything that a picture should have and nothing that one should not have—the result, capacity business and immensely pleased audiences. Metro is to be congratulated. Bob Leonard is to be congratulated, but the big honors are to Miss Mae Murray, who in this picture places herself at the front rank of all screen stars as one who can properly handle any type of role assigned to her and in such a way that Mr. and Mrs. Audience go away after seeing her asking when she is coming back again.

Best wishes to the HERALD.
Ross D. Rogers, Mission theatre, Amarillo, Tex.

DEAR MR. ROGERS:

When we inspected Metro's campaign book on "Jazzmania" we were impressed with its utility and scope. We wish, as we often do, that we had an opportunity to get out and put the picture over for a theatre of our own. But your letter is a better campaign guide than Metro put out, and now we are glad we didn't have that opportunity for we are sure our efforts would have fallen short of yours. Many thanks for permitting us to lay it before the exhibitors of America. And congratulations on an exploitation campaign par excellence.

The Biggest Picture of the Year Demands 1000 More Seats!

STANDS FOR GREAT PICTURES

"When Knighthood Was in Flower"

Now in its second big week, Strand, Cincinnati. It's a Paramount Picture now playing.

THE COLONIAL
SELECTED PHOTOPLAYS

The most costly production ever made. $1,000,000 actually spent on it. Breath taking magnificence. 200 actors. Received more press praise than any other pictures. It would be unfortunate to miss it. At The Colonial you have seen these great Paramount Pictures: "Mandalay," "Young Rajah," "Old Homestead," and it is with a great deal of pleasure we announce that the on-coming season affords us with the super 34 Paramount Pictures, the quality of which surpasses that of all other years. Paramount Pictures are not based on a few successes, but a thousand, running over many years. The accomplishments of the world's greatest authors, the ability of the greatest stars and directors.

Knighthood No. 1 this week. Paramount Pictures My American Wife, No. 2, next week.

STOCK MATERIAL, cuts obtainable from the exchange and straight type, were utilized as above by George Rea in a four column advertisement for "When Knighthood Was in Flower," Paramount-Cosmopolitan. His Theatre Letter telling of the engagement, and a picture of his lobby display, are presented upon the preceding page. Mr. Rea's copy is representative of the showmanship which has become the standard for a great many American theatremen.
Wisconsin Man Tells Plan of News Lectures

EXHIBITORS HERALD, Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:

I don't know which department, if any, can use this, but am sending it anyway.

I run a Fox News every Wednesday. Get my sheets about a week in advance so I know what is coming. Pick out the most important item and run a slide on it. The Fox News No. 39 which I ran Wednesday night showed the slides in the Panama Canal. As I spent nearly 14 years of my giddy life down there I conceived the idea of giving them a little lecture before showing them the News.

My News gets here Tuesday afternoon so after the show Tuesday night I ran off the News to get the latest on what it was about. I found the following which, with a little advance lecture, I thought would prove entertaining to my patrons: The Gatun Locks; vessel clearing the upper lock with the aid of the electric mules (as a matter of fact, these mules were designed by a former resident of this burg—upon which I laid stress); views along a portion of the Canal; Cucuracha Slde; Gold Hill—the picture gave a good profile view so I could point out where the French had quit, and where we had begun and finished; the dipper dredges and barges; another coincidence was that the picture showed a big tree to the South of Gold Hill which was exactly opposite to where I lived in Culebra for nearly nine years.

Just about the time I was pointing out this tree the picture jumped to President Harding in Washington. In my short lecture before the picture was thrown on the screen I explained the interest in about 10 minutes. Our weekly paper comes out Wednesday afternoon so the readers had the free front page of interest in the story for Wednesday. As I had Valention on that night, I don't think my lecture drew many additional patrons, but I am sure I didn't bore them very much judging by the big hand they gave me.

My reason in writing this up is due to the fact that there may be a lot of the old-time Canal Diggers now posing as exhibitors and this tip may help them.

Note space allotted to Educational comedy in three column ad used by Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre. Grauman knows.
"THE sameness and lack of novelty in settings are as much to blame for disinterest on the part of movie fans as mediocre and hackneyed stories," contends Anton Grot, the German-Polish art director. Mr. Grot, who has just returned from Europe, expressed his thoughts in these words:

"You must admit that you frequently hear people say, 'I don't go to the movies much any more. They are all too much alike.' Stand outside of one of the Broadway picture palaces or one of the Main street movie shows and you will hear similar criticisms. I have closely observed and analyzed these comments with a view of discovering what prompts them. In this way I believe fan criticisms may be made the basis of constructive improvements in production.

"Most of the fans who criticize the films attribute their lack of interest to the similar channels in which most of the plots seem to run. The old themes are made to do duty time and time again, with a sprinkling of so-called new twists to make them appear original. So, the fans are partly right in their contention.

"But, as I reclined in a loge chair the other evening and viewed one of the current feature releases, I got this impression. Is not there a monotonous sameness in settings? They are beautiful—extravagant, I shall grant. But there is a general similarity, and also a severity of straight lines in the majority of sets.

"Bearing in mind that movies are conveyed to the mind through the eyes, a sameness of settings fails to stimulate the imagination. The eyes become used to conventional settings and these make little impression on the mind. Now, if something new were developed in setting motifs, the eyes would be attracted. Then, even if the story were not so very new and original, the settings would so charm the spectators that they would be more sympathetically inclined to overlook the story shortcomings.

"Here and there in some recent films I have noticed one or two settings that stood out and gave a 'different' effect. In one feature picture starring Mae Murray, I recall there was a circular stairway coming down into a studio apartment. Instead of using stereotyped stairs, the art director had contrived a novelty property which made the whole setting stand out and register to the observing eye.

"I feel sure that many of my fellow art directors, be they with Famous Players-Lasky, Goldwyn, Metro, or any other organization producing the best type of features, will concur with my observations. Perhaps the stars do not think much about the settings. But I should not be at all surprised if my compatriot, Pola Negri, urged her director to use strikingly novel settings in her American-made pictures. And, the fans, ah, I'll wager that they will say, 'That fellow, Anton Grot, may be right.'"

"THE FAMOUS MRS FAIR" (Metro), an excellent adaptation of James Forbes' successful stage comedy-drama. It is a Louis B. Mayer production, directed by Fred Niblo, who has paid especial attention to the high points of the play, and it is intelligently interpreted by a well-chosen cast. A big picture in every way.

"OTHÉLLO" (Export & Import) presents Emil Jannings and an entire foreign cast in an excellent production of Shakespeare's famous drama. It was directed by Dimitri Buchowetzki. In sets, characterizations, photography, and appointments the picture is commendable. It is in six parts, and was made in Germany.

"GOSSIP" (Universal) is an interesting and amusing adaptation of Edith Delano's story "When Carey Came to Town." It affords Gladys Walton excellent opportunity to display her abilities as an ingénue, and she is given good support by Ramsey Wallace and other Universal players.

"CAN A WOMAN LOVE TWICE" (F. B. O.) has strong story interest and is one of the best vehicles Ethel Clayton has had under the Film Booking office banner. There is a cute child in her support that will bear watching. It is in seven parts.

"SAFETY LAST" (Pathe) is Harold Lloyd's latest comedy and undoubtedly will be regarded by many as his best. It is in seven reels, but holds the interest every foot. The story has more plot than usual and concerns a young man employed around a department store, who tries to put up a bold front with his best girl. Mildred Davis appears opposite him.

"THE INNOCENT CHEAT" (Arrow), an entertaining feature with Roy Stewart and Kathleen Kirkham in the featured roles. Will prove quite satisfactory if patrons like theme of story. A Ben Wilson production in about six reels.

"THE TEXTS OF ALLAH" (Associated Exhibitors). An enjoyable production of the "Sheik" type, well acted and well directed. Monte Blue, Mary Alden and Mary Thurman in the cast. Beautiful pictorially, and a feature that should prove satisfactory to most audiences.
SPECIAL CAST IN THE FAMOUS MRS. FAIR
(METRO)

There is little doubt that most audiences will be gripped by this well made, convincing drama of American home life. It is beautifully acted with complete sincerity, carefully directed and there's not a moment when the interest lags. It deserves a place among the year's best pictures. Directed by Fred Niblo, from the play by James Forbes. A Louis B. Mayer production in eight reels.

JAMES FORBES' brilliant comedy-drama, in which Blanche Bates and Henry Miller appeared, will win even greater renown as a picture play. It is a play that will appeal to the majority of film patrons and Frances Marion who adapted it and Fred Niblo who directed it have both contributed their best. The picture is especially well edited. There is not an extra foot in it and the action is crisp and concise all the way through. Much depended upon this, as it was a tally play, and Fred Niblo's long years of stage experience held him in good stead for he brought out the dramatic points of the story with vivid realism. It has all that the stage play had in "punch" and appeal; is well staged and photographed. Its chief point of appeal, however, lies in the excellence of individual scenes, such as where Nancy Fair grooms her lonely little daughter, when she returns from her war work, and the scene wherein Jeffrey declares he will not give up Sylvia, his daughter. There is an affecting, though very effective finish to the picture and one that carries a lasting lesson.

Of the acting the honors are pretty well divided. Myrtle Stedman's Nancy is probably the best bit of acting of this popular screen star's career. She presents a tender, sympathetic and intelligent American mother very well indeed. Huntley Gordon is also excellent as the neglected husband, Jeffrey Fair. His actions are clear and decisive and he wins one's sympathy from the start. Marguerite De La Motte as Sylvia, the daughter, was a revelation. At first a demure little girl, she blossoms into a typical New York flapper and quite carries off the acting honors in the final scenes. Cullen Landis was also good as the son, Alan, as was Ward Crane in the role of Gillette. Another bright bit was Carmel Myers as Angy Bricc, the "vamp" of the piece. Helen Ferguson appears as a telephone operator, and scored in her small part. There was not a weak member in the cast.

Nancy Fair, acted by duty to engage in war work, wins honors and encouragement of her family and townspeople. She is urged to accept a contract to make a lecture tour by Dudley Gillette, and leaves despite her husband's protests. While she is absent Jeffrey seeks the companionship of Angy Bricc, a widow; her son marries a telephone operator and her daughter runs around with the fast set. A mistake in her bookings gives her a week's rest and she returns home, but no one meets her. Her telegram lies unopened upon the table. Jeffrey comes in, she inquires for Alan and Sylvia, but he does not know where they are. Finally the little family is rounded up after Sylvia's attempted elopement with Gillette, and she is assured her parents do love her and Nancy is not going to get a divorce from Jeffrey.

It is a picture that ought to appeal to the best class of audiences and should be advertised big as it is an absorbing story of American social life of today.

ROY STEWART IN THE INNOCENT CHEAT
(ARROW)

This is a fairly entertaining feature, well acted and excellently photographed. Nature of story may find opposition in some quarters. Produced and directed by Ben Wilson.

"The Innocent Cheat" is a production with many dramatic moments telling a vivid story in a forceful manner. It has been well directed by Ben Wilson and in support of Stewart are Sidney De Gray, George Hernandez, Rhea Mitchell and Kathleen Kirkham.

There seems to be a possibility that the story may not prove especially appealing in the more straight-laced communities. It tells of Mrs. Stanhope, whose wealthy and elderly husband, Bruce, leads her a life of frivolous parties among a fast set while she longs for quiet and motherhood. At a party on his yacht he tricks his wife into a compromising situation by locking her in the cabin with another man. She flees and goes to his camp in the north woods. There she meets John Murdock, a railroad engineer. The two fall in love, but as she is married she returns to her husband. He sues her for divorce and during the trial she is indifferent to his false charges until the judge rules that her husband shall have custody of the child. It is then she reveals that the child is not with her husband and tells of her romance in the north woods camp.

Two incidents from "The Famous Mrs. Fair" Metro's splendid adaptation of James Forbes' comedy-drama. Cullen Landis, Huntley Gordon, Marguerite de la Mott and Myrtle Stedman distinguish themselves in the leading roles.
HAROLD LLOYD IN SAFETY LAST
(PATHE)

Get on the band wagon and ride with the rest of the boys, and collect with this latest and greatest Lloyd comedy. You can promise them greater fun than "Grandma's Boy" and "Dr. Jack" which is some promise! It has enough thrills for a serial and you had better heed the warning not to let anyone in with a weak heart. It was written by Hal Roach, Sam Taylor and Tim Whelan, and is a regular three-ring circus. Fred Newmeyer and Sam Taylor directed. Seven reels.

THE CAST

The Boy
Harold Lloyd

The Girl
Mildred Davis

The Pal
Bill Strother

The Law
Nahum Young

The Floorwalker
Westcott B. Clarke

LLOYD is steadily climbing. In every picture he gets better. His latest, "Safety Last," should prove a "mop up." It is seven reels of good, clean fun, and moves with the swiftness and smoothness of half that number. Which is some feat. It has action, thills, laughs and stunts that will send the goose flesh running up and down your spine. But you'll like it. It's all Lloyd. He's in every scene, but you don't grow tired of him.

The charming Mildred Davis assists beautifully. She is The Girl, as usual. Bill Strother contributes an excellent bit as The Pal. Noah Young is a typical comedy policeman, and Westcott Clarke a comical conventional floor-walker. But the picture's moody Lloyd, as The Boy. Here's a brief outline of the story. Our advice is to go and look at it. Then book it.

The Boy leaves home for the big city, where he gets a job in a department store. He's always early, but by mistake sits down in a laundry wagon and when it is opened he's miles from the store. He hurries back, finally being picked up by an ambulance which gets him there ten minutes late. He's carried in as a style dummy, turns the time clock back and rings up. A bargain rush that day nearly costs him his job. His girl comes to visit him. He poses as the general manager of the store and when she insists upon seeing his office he pretends he has fainted and gets the boss to run for water. He overhears the owner of the store offer a thousand dollars for an idea that will attract crowds to the store. He hires his pal to climb to the top of the building and sells the idea to the boss. Great crowds collect to see the stunt. The Pal is chased inside by a policeman and Harold climbs up one story, where his pal is to relieve him and finish the job. The Pal is unable to shake off the policeman and Harold has to go up an other story. As he continues he grows more timid until he reaches the clock, and there he hangs by the clock's hands until rescued. He continues until he reaches the top of the building, and there finds his girl. He walks away, leaving his shoes stuck in the tar of the roof, obvious to everything.—J. R. M.

GLADYS WALTON IN GOSSIP
(UNIVERSAL)

An interesting and amusing story, with the suspense angles well worked out. Star is pleasing throughout and her personality does much toward putting the picture over. Directed by King Baggot from a story by Edith B. Dalano. Five parts.

"Gossip" is quite good entertainment, although built around the more or less familiar capital and labor theme. The development of the plot, however, has been ingeniously handled and the casting and direction have been in competent hands. The characters are very well portrayed and there is a very good dramatic climax.

The story was adapted from Miss Edith B. Dalano's delightful story, "When Carey Came to Town." Why it was thought necessary to give it the commonplace, cheap title of "Gossip" is quite beyond understanding. Surely the original title is more appealing for a Gladys Walton picture.

Excellent success was accorded the dashing July, 1921, version by Ramsey Wallace, Freeman Woods, Albert Brooks, Kate Kent and Edith Yorke. The acting throughout is excellent, and the story's quality and the characterization very good. The story concerns a young girl who comes to town from the South and puts her ingenuousness against so many faction of a weekly newspaper line. A strike is impending in the wealthy man steel mills and she fears the sending of the end of her home to her. She decides to help him. However, the pretty Southern Miss develops a friendship for the strikers and her humanity bridges the gap between the fighting forces. Life is very well with the wealthy man spreads the gossip, and the little Southern girl goes home, but the story ends in a golden knot.

EMIL JANNINGS IN OTHELLO
(EXPORT AND IMPORT)

Emil Jannings seems the Moor of Shakespeare's great drama come to life in "Othello." Unattractive physically, almost as black as a negro, there is a dignity and an underlying tenderness that makes it conceivable that the lily-like "Desdemona" could love him. Jannings plays the part with fine restraint, his outburst of rage when the crafty Iago flaunts before his jealous-crazed eyes the tell-tale bit of cambric, seeming in keeping with the strength suggested by this previous restraint. The director, Dimitri Buchowetzki, has used his vast experience to the best advantage with pictures, for many of the big scenes, and with good effect. Werner Kraus, as "Iago," share honors with Jannings. He plays the part of the sly, devious villain with understanding. His covert amusement at the results of his various machinations makes him appear an incarnation of the Evil One himself. His craven terror when faced by Othello at the last is consistent characterization.

Ica Lenkeffy, the fair "Desdemona," is an excellent type. Her blonde beauty makes a perfect foil for the black Moor. Lya de Putti as "Emilia" and Theodore Loos as "Cassio" deserve praise for their consistently fine work. Miss de Putti puts life into the somewhat minor role of "Emilia." She is very beautiful, her dark loveliness contrasting with that of "Desdemona's" fair charms.

There is a director's interest in the entire production that keeps the audience fully interested. Miss Benteen's playing is so consistent, the screen from start to finish, and, considering the familiarity of the tale, this proves the director's skill. There is no attempt to do other than present a faithful screen version of Shakespeare's play.

This production is one of the best of the foreign-made pictures, and should please lovers of Shakespeare as well as patrons of the theater who look for dramatic entertainment, regardless of its source. It was imported by Ben Blumen-thal and David P. Howell.

THEME: A "sheik" picture but one of considerable interest with many memorable pictures. Monté Rue, Mary Alden and Mary Thurman are most conspicuous in this desert story, which is fine entertainment in theme, atmosphere and direction. Directed by Charles A. Logue. Seven reels.

This is one of Associated Exhibitors' excellent series of "Excitement" pictures. It is a superior one and a worthy one. Coming somewhat at the end of a run of "sheik" photoplays, it is nevertheless a fine piece of entertainment. The story is dramatic, the photography exceptionally beautiful and the work of the cast above reproach.

There is a surprising degree of realistic and vivid desert atmosphere and a strong love appeal with Monté Rue cast as the leader of a desert tribe into whose hands falls a beautiful American girl.

Elaine Calvert, an American tourist in Tangier, uncovers the disfavor of the Sultan when she causes a messenger to be delayed with an offering he is carrying to him. She is befriended by Chidhair, a desert chief who also refuses to recognize the Sultan's power. The Sultan conspires with Azheal, the sheik's brother, and the girl is kidnapped, making it appear that Chidhair was her abductor. Chidhair proceeds to his village and is ordered to be shot by U. S. Marines who have been sent to rescue the girl.

From this point the story works quickly to an exciting climax in which Chidhair and the woman are eventually reunited with his father.

Macey Harlan is the Sultan and gives a creditable performance in this role.

Reformer "Slinging Mud" in Attempt to Defeat Repeal

against Sunday theatres in this city was indicated in a letter sent to Representative Homer Ramey of Toledo by officers of the Toledo Council of Churches this week.

The letter voiced the council's disapproval of Ramey's introduction of the bill in the house legalizing Sunday pictures in Ohio.

The council's letter to Ramey gives the following reasons for having opposed the Sunday show:

"Sunday 'movies' have been endured in violation of state laws partly because grosser evils have prevailed in the larger cities and partly because some good people of the church are honestly doubtful as to what is best to be done.

"Now that the 'movie' interests have forced the issue upon us we feel that the churches will be almost a unit in opposing more liberal legislation.

"We desire to hope, therefore, that this bill may be killed in committee."

Banker Joins Chester Company as Treasurer

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, March 6.—Clarence M. Sherwood, prominent New York financial man, has joined Chester L. Chester as treasurer of Chester International Pictures, Inc., which is preparing to publish a program of comedy, scenic and travel pictures.
Production Progress

Ernest Shipman:

"GLENGARRY SCHOOL DAYS" the Ernest Shipman production opened at the Imperial theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, this week to a big attendance, according to the latest notices. The story of Pauline Garon has a featured role in the picture and her work was highly commended.
The film contains plans of a parliament and a thrilling rescue scene.

American Releasing:

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN and Beverly Bayne starring pictures, produced by Whitman Bennett will be distributed by American Releasing Corporation, it is announced. The first will be "Modern Marriage" from the novel "Lady Varley.
"Mr. Bushman, and Miss Bayne will appear in person, acting an episode equivalent to a reel of the film in larger theatres.

"VENGEANCE OF THE DEEP" an under sea picture just completed in Hollywood by A. B. Barringer is being distributed to American Releasing exchanges. The picture is said to contain many spectacular under-sea incidents.

QUICKSANDS" Howard D. Hawks production with a galaxy of stars will also be issued by American Releasing.
Richard Dix and Helen Chadwick are featured in this story of smuggling along the Mexican border.

Associated Exhibitors:

APRIL 8 HAS BEEN set as publication date by Associated Exhibitors for "Alice Adams," Booth Tarkington's prize winning novel in which Florence Vidor is featured. This is indeed "the great American photoplay," Associated claims, reflecting life in a typical American town.
It is seven reels and was directed by Rowland V. Lee.

WILMER & VINCENT circuit in Pennsylvania, operating leading theatres in Easton, Allen-town, Reading and Harrisburg, has already contracted for "Is Divoce a Failure," first of the Leah Baird specials for 1923. This picture will be published March 18 by Associated Exhibitors.

Fox:

CHARLES JONES is playing the hero role in a screen version of James B.
Hendryx's "Snowdrift" being made at the Associated circuit, in the Fox Northwest story, with a locale in the picturesque land about the Mackenzie river.

"IF WINTER COMES," A. S. M. Hutchinson's novel is now in its second year and is still proving a best seller. This augurs well for the popularity of its screen version of the story, Fox believes. The picture will have a showing on Broadway, New York, before being generally issued.

SHIRLEY MASON is hard at work on a new Fox picture. This one is called "Inside the Door," and a series of novel and entertaining incidents are promised in it. Dustin Farnum is starring in a Western story by Willard Patterson White, called "The Buster," with Doris Paw in support.

The FOX EDUCATIONAL entertainment for March is a picture of Algeria. In this film are shown many interesting phases of life and customs in this North African country.

Hodkinson:

AMERICAN LEGION chiefs recently were guests of W. W. Hodkinson at a screening of the two reel picture "The Ex-Kaiser in Exile." They gave their approval of the film. Hanford MacNider, past national commander, declaring,"Nothing like it. I never saw a day could properly express my commendation of your fore-sightedness and good fortune in securing this picture." Others who voiced their approval were Wilson P. O'Connor, national chaplain of the American Legion, and James H.
Sharp, Jr., assistant division manager.

Hodkinson reports that some of the biggest and most representative theaters have booked the film.

GLENN HUNTER in his next film production for Hodkinson has gone to Deerfield, Mass., for reproduction of a town square of Puritan times for "The Scarcecrow," by Peggy Mackay. He is accompanied by Director Frank Tuttle and an entire company.

State Right Sales:

LEE-BRADFORD CORPORATION has sold the following pictures to state right exchanges; "Sister Against Sister;
"Crossed Wires," a Gladys Walton feature; "Double Dealing," a Hoot Gibson vehicle;
"Skylince of Space," with Roy Stewart;
"The Self Made Wife," with special cast;
"Richard," another Hoot Gibson picture;
"Maude Abbott," with special cast and
"McGuire of Big Snows," with Roy Stewart; "The Six Fifties," with all star cast, and others.

The Cosmopolitan - Goldwyn deal does not change the status of the International News Reel which will continue to go through Universal.

Merry-Go-Round" is expected by Laemmle to be the outstanding picture of 1923. In a statement issued at Universal City where the special is nearing completion, Mr. Laemmle issued a statement in which he said that it would "make a record in filmdom because of the bigness of its theme and the excellence of its direction and entertainment value."

Paramount:

"The Covered Wagon," James
Cruze's adaptation of the Emerson
Hough drama of the West, will open at the Criterion theatre, New York, on March 16, following a special show on March 11 at the Plaza hotel under the auspices of the Film Mutual Benefit Bureau. Admission prices for the first presentation will range from $5 to $10, with boxes costing $75 to $100. One of the most comprehensive advertising and exploitation campaigns ever planned on a Paramount picture has been launched.
by John C. Flinn and his associates. For several weeks a great sign with letters twenty feet and spelling the name of the production has been blazoning across the sky in New York.

“ADAM AND EVA” and “Racing Hearts,” the first starring Marion Davies and the latter, Agnes Ayres, are on Paramount’s March 11 publication schedule.

LEW CODY IS IN NEW YORK to play in Allan Dwan’s “Lawful Larceny.” Scenes of the Panama Canal taken from an airplane, a railroad train and a boat appear in Thomas Meighan’s “The Nearer-The-Well.” Cyril Ring has been added to the cast of “The Exciters.” Pola Negri’s second American production, “The Cheat,” is well under way under the direction of George Fitzmaurice. Jack Holt plays opposite the star with Charles de Roche, Dorothy Cumming, Robert Schable, Charles Stevenson and Helen Dunbar also in the cast.

F. B. O.

FILM BOOKING OFFICES has acquired J. E. Williamson’s “Wonders of the Sea,” for publication. No date has been set. This picture was filmed under water by means of the submarine apparatus built by the producer. The special has its credit a run of three weeks on Broadway, two in the Rialto and one at the Rivoli.

ANN PERDUE HAS BEEN selected as the screen name of the featured player, Derclys Perdue, signed recently by F. B. O. She will make her debut in “Daytime Wives.” Her screen name was suggested by Miss Grace Rosenberg of New York, winner of the contest conducted by F. B. O. and Film Fuu.

“THE FOURTH MUSKETEUR,” starring Johnnie Walker, is F. B. O.’s feature publication for March. It is an adaptation of a Cosmopolitan story by H. C. Wittwer. The story is that of the social ambitions of a prize fighter’s wife.

LEAH BAIRD in scenes from “Is Divorce A Failure” which Associated Exhibitors is publishing on March 18.

VIRGINIA FOX WILL PLAY the leading role in “Now You See It,” production on which has been started at F. B. O.’s Coast plant.

METRO PUBLISHED on March 5 the second of the Arthur H. Sawyer-Herbert Lubin productions, “Your Friend and Mine,” an adaptation of Willard Mack’s play. In the cast are Mack, Enid Bennett, Rosmary Theby, Allene Ray, J. Herbert Frank and Otto Lederer. “Quincy Adams Sawyer” was the initial SL feature.

ARTHUR H. SAVERY is taking a brief rest prior to beginning production on “The Shooting of Dan McGrew,” based on the Robert W. Service poem. Willard Mack, Barbara La Marr and Lon Chaney will be featured. Mr. Sawyer is now celebrating his second year as supervising director of SL specials.

BERT ENNIS HAS BEEN retained by Sawyer & Lubin to handle exploitation on “Your Friend and Mine.”

Sawyer & Lubin

AN UNUSUAL FEATURE, called “Black Shadows” is to be a forthcoming publication by Pathe. This film was made in Solomon Islands, the region along the South Pacific inhabited by “Head Hunters.” Like “Nanook of the North” is deals intimately with life and habits in that territory—said to be the most primitive in the world.

HAL ROACH HAS PURCHASED a ten acre ranch adjacent to his plant to handle increased production for Pathe this year. Eighteen companies will produce under the Roach banner. Among these will be Will Rogers who is slated to make a series of thirteen two-reel comedies.

ON MARCH 18 PATHE will issue “A Pleasant Journey” an Our Gang comdy; “Partners Three” a two-reeler in the Ranger Rider series; a Paul Parrott one reel comedy called “For Sale Kingfisher” and the ninth episode of “Plunder.”

AN INTERESTING announcement is made by E. A. Eschmann, Pathe general manager, in connection with Harold Lloyd’s newest feature comedy “Safety Last.” Mr. Eschmann says that distributors and exhibitors are uniting in a frank get-together spirit on this film, and, admitting that it is in a class by itself, are frank in discussion of their individual problems in making contracts. These problems will be considered to the end that every exhibitor will have assurance of profit under his particular conditions in playing the picture.

Palmer Photoplay

INTERIOR SCENES ARE being filmed at the Thomas H. Ince studios for “Out of the Night,” Palmer Photoplay’s first production. The company under direction of Joseph De Grasse, which includes Lloyd Hughes, Lucille Ricksen, George Hackathorne, Myrtle Stedman and others, have recently returned from Truckee, California, where snow storm scenes were made for this original story by Dorothy Ethel Styles Middleton of Pitts-

Export & Import

DOES THE PUBLIC want screen versions of Shakespeare’s works? According to advice from Ben Blumenthal and David P. Howells, the demand for seats at the opening of “Othello” at the Thomas A. York of Criterion exceeded their fondest hopes. Tickets were sold in advance and by the Thursday preceding the opening on Sunday, February 25, the house was completely sold. A record business for the Criterion is confidently expected.

Al Lichtman

A NEW SERIES OF PICTURES will soon be put into production by Preferred Pictures for Lichtman distribution. B. P. Schulberg has announced. On completion of “Mothers-in-Law” Gasnier will make “The Parasite” from the novel by Helen Martin. Finishing “April Showers,” Tom Forman is due to start “The Broken Wing,” the stage success by Paul Dickey and Charles W. Goddard.

Victor Schertzinger’s first special production for Preferred Pictures will be “A Mansion of Aching Hearts,” based on the famous song by Harry Yon Tilton and Arthur J. Lamb. Actual filming will start in a few weeks.

GROUP BOOKINGS of the next six Preferred Pictures are reported by Al Lichtman for the Broadway Strand, Detroit, three houses in the Wilmer and Vincent circuit and the Schade Theatre, Sandusky, O.
Phil Goldstone

A NUMBER OF PICTURES will be issued by Phil Goldstone Productions in March. They include "His Last Race" with a star cast for March 15; "Thru the Flames" with Richard Talmadge, after which the star will appear in four specials, the first of which will be "The Prince of the White Sea." "Deserted at the Altar" will be issued in Washington, Delaware and West Virginia in March.

Principal Pictures:

"EAST SIDE WEST SIDE" the famous Cromwell Broadway stage success has been acquired for distribution and production by Principal Pictures Corporation. Irving Cummings will produce this feature with Kenneth Harlan in the lead supported by Eileen Ferrer, The James Oliver Curwood story which will star Guy Bates Post will be made at the Thomas H. Ince Studios, because of heavy production at the Principal plant, it is announced.

BRYANT WASHBURN has been added to the cast for an important role in George M. Cohan's "The Meanest Man in the World," which Principal will produce. Bert Lytell has the title role and the cast will also include Blanche Sweet, and Maryon Aye. Eddie Cline will direct.

Thomas H. Ince

SOMETHING DIFFERENT is being tried out by Thomas H. Ince in the adaptation of two novels for fall specials. A screen expert is working in collaboration with the author to insure screen material and camera situations ideal to the motion picture standpoint. Bradley King of the Ince writing staff is collaborating with Vaughn Kester on "The King of the Underworld," while Talbot Mundy, British novelist, on "The Devil's Own."

FIVE INCE PICTURES have been sold to Caribbean Film Company for distribution in Cuba and Porto Rico. They are "Homespun Folk," "Hail the Woman," "The Cup of Life," "Mother of Mine" and "Lying Lips."

C. C. Burr

A TWENTY-FOUR sheet showing Johnny Hines posing with dice, horse-shoes, wishbones, and four leaf clovers, all forming the word "Lucky," the name of Johnny Hines' latest production, is available together with press sheet and much other effective exploitation material, C. C. Burr announces.

LESTER F. SCOTT, JR., general sales representative for C. C. Burr, president of Mastodon Films Inc., will leave for the Southern territory soon with prints of three new features: "The Last Hour," starring Milton Sills and Carmel Myers; "Are You Guilty?" with James Kirkwood and Doris Kenyon and Johnny Hines in "Lucky!"

United Artists:

MARY PICKFORD is ready to begin work on a new picture from an original story, temporarily called "Rosita." Before this has been completed she will begin a second film, "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall." As for her production of "Fauze." Miss Pickford says that she has not given up the idea by any means but is merely postponing it for a later date.

"DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS IN ROBIN HOOD," on completion of its nineteenth week at Grauman's Hollywood Egyptian theatre, has played to $74,643 paid admissions at $1.50 top, amounting to $273,341.90, according to advice received by Hiram Abrams, president of United Artists, from Mr. Grauman. And it is still going strong, is the word issued.

A SPECIAL MUSICAL score has been written for "The Girl I Loved," Charles Ray's second United Artists picture. It includes a song of original composition, which is made the theme of the picture, composed by Louis Gottschalk.

Warner Brothers

A HUGE LIBRARY has been installed by Warner Brothers at the studio on the West Coast. It is in charge of Melvin Hodgins and books of every description of interest to directors and the technical staff will be added to the thousands already purchased by the Warner organization.

THE STRAND THEATRE, New York City, will play two Warner pictures this month. "Brass" and "The Little Church Around the Corner" will have premiere presentations on March 11 and 25 respectively.

EDMUND GOULDING, Frank Dazey and Agnes Johnson, three new members of the Warner scenario staff, have left New York for the coast studios. Mr. Goulding is responsible for the current Wesley Barry picture "Heroes of the Street."

First National:

"THE BRASS BOTTLE" will be Maurice Tourner's second First National picture to be presented by M. C. Levee. This is a story by F. Anstey. Director James Young has chosen Marge Dav for the feminine lead in "Wandering Daughters," a Dana Burnett story which he and Sam E. Bork will present through the same channels.

"DADDY," the next Jackie Coogan publication by First National, was given a test showing at the Strand theatre, Los Angeles, by Sel Lesser. "If that audience was a typical audience, it agreed with me about every point of the picture," says Mr. Lesser. "I feel that 'Daddy' will be a fine successor to 'Oliver Twist.'"

JOSEPH M. SCHENCK is planning to spend half a million dollars in improvement of United Studios at Hollywood. This will not only give producers a wider range for big outdoor scenes but will play a big part in speeding up production.

Metro

REX INGRAM HAS obtained another big story through Metro which he will produce for that company. It is "The World's Illusion" by Jacob Wasserman and depicts society and culture in all its phases. The story was published in 1919.

A SONG CALLED "Dazzmania," which is the title of Mac Murray's new Metro production is being published by Sharp-Bernstein Company, New York. The title page of the song is in four colors and carries two pictures of the star in scenes from the film.
With the Procession in Los Angeles

By Harry Hammond Beall

MARSHALL NEALAN will round out his picture "The Eternal Three" within two weeks at the Goldwyn studio. The finishing touches include a location trip to get scenes in a health resort where the famous surgeon, Hobart Bosworth, meets a beautiful young ranch owner, Claire Windsor, and brings her back his bride. Others in the cast are Raymond Griffith, Bessie Love, Ace Francis and Tom Gallery.

Anna May is to return to pictures after an absence of more than a year, during which time she has been appearing on the stage. Miss May has been cast for a part in "The Fog," a Graf production for Metro, which Paul Powell will direct at the San Mateo studio.

Loaded with enough fur overcoats to make any伍茂生 outshine, with brown, carrying two carloads of equipment and in the gayest spirit ever, the "Wolf Fangs" company left Warner Brothers studio this week for the Feather River Country up north. Chester M. Franklin is directing and in the company is Rintintin, the famous Police dog, who has a large part in the picture.

JANE MURFIN, head of the Trimble-Murfin productions and author of "Little Time" and other well-known stage successes, who recently returned from Canada where the two latest pictures, starring Strongheart are being made by Director Laurence Trimble, will start a third picture soon.

ARE STERN, vice-president of Century Comedies, has returned from the Metropolis. While there he handled the supervising of a new system on releasing the Baby Peggy comedies.

That the complete recovery of DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS' brother, JOLY, who suffered a paralytic stroke recently, may be expected within the next two months is the hope held out by physicians in attendance. Until such time as John can resume his duties as general manager of Doug's film activities, Doug himself will fill the managerial chair.

Choice Productions, Inc., recently took over the Francis Ford plant on Sunset Boulevard and have renewed the establishment "Choice Studio." They are now producing in addition to their serialable series, a new lineup of two-reel comedies touching on a phase of life heretofore overlooked by producers. Tom Mills of O. Henry fame is directing with Bert Mann, formerly with Famous Players, assisting. The cast for the first production of the new series includes J. Frank Glendon, "Billy" Boyd and Josie Sedgwick.

To keep pace with the production activities of First National in this city, the home office of the organization has sent two additional publicity men to the coast to assist in the exploitation of their product. The prospective "Wampases" are Moll Bloomenstock and Fred Stanley.

RICHARD WALTON TULLY's new executive staff includes Ray Collins, who will head the publicity department during the filming of "Trilly," which is to go into production shortly. Collins was formerly a First National exploiter working out of the Omaha exchange, and prior to that time was connected with various local studios as a scenario writer.

BUSINESS is good with Louise Fazenda, for in one week recently she has three important one-year contracts tendered her and still a fourth for the whole of next year. In addition, the comedienne's talents were sought for two Goldwyn productions, "Red Lights" and "The Spoilers." These and a few other offers are being considered by Miss Fazenda, who has just completed her work in "Main Street." Before accepting any of the offers made, the comedienne will fill an engagement at the San Mateo studios, San Francisco, where she will enact an important role in "The Fog" for Metro.

Five special trains will bear theatre owners from all parts of the United States to the Monroe Doctrine Centennial Exposition, which will open in Los Angeles next July. This exposition, which will present to the public many phases of the Motion Picture Industry, will be a novelty in conception and development. Gorgeous pageants will be staged every day and many historical scenes will be presented on revolving floors.

Ground was broken this week for the new administration building which is to be erected at the United Studios. The building will occupy what has formerly been a garden facing Avenue B, opposite stages one, two and three. The new construction work is being directed by H. B. Dygert, C. E., assistant technical director for the studio.

VIOLA DANA, Metro star, who is resting at her home following an operation for appendicitis, was hospitalized how she enjoyed having her appendix removed.

"Well, it could have been worse," she replied, "but I'll never have it done again."

A bungalow is now under construction at the Metro studios to house JACKIE COGAN and his organization when they return to Hollywood to work at the Metro Studios.

ARTHUR H. JACOBS, producer of the new Frank Borzage Productions to be released through First National, is readying an actual camera work. Jacobs has surrounded himself with a lively and efficient organization.

O. O. DULL, familiarly known as "Bunny," will continue as Borzage's assistant with Lee Morin as his assistant. Lyon remains camera-man, with Bob Roberts shooting "second." J. F. Bennett is the director who has recommended that Irving is on the job as publicity representative. Frank Ormston has signed as art director.

The cast for the first Ring Lardner "You Know Me Al" baseball comedy being produced by Lee Morin at Universal City has been completed. Included with the comedian are Mike Donlin, Emil "Irish" Muelas, Bill Dyer and Lillian Hackett. Arvid Gillstrom is directing.

Another big film producing company is active in Los Angeles today; due to the fact that releasing contracts have just been signed at the Pickford-Fairbanks Studios by Frank E. Woods, president of the associated First National Distribution Company, president of the United Artists Corporation and Allied Producers and Distributors.

Associated Authors, made up of Frank Woods, Elmer Harris and Thompson Buchanan, is one of the newest concerns to be established in the picture industry, and promises to be one of the most active, judging by plans now under consideration.

VICTOR SEAstrom has arrived in Los Angeles from Sweden, where he surprised newspaper interviewers with his excellent English and fine pronunciation. He declared that it was his intention to take both Swedish pictures for Goldwyn that would appeal to the American public. He laughed good-naturedly and shook his head negatively when queried as to his opinion on life, the motion picture art, and the relative beauty of American and Swedish women. A good-natured Sphinx, as he were.

Proclaimed as one of the most accomplished directors in all Europe, Seastrom bears a marked resemblance to Hobart Bosworth—and has a gentle, wistful manner.

The day he arrived, he insisted upon being driven straight to the Goldwyn studio at Culver City, seemingly impatient to look over the scene of his future activities.
What Are You Doing?
What are you doing to maintain a free screen in this country? This department will appreciate an outline of any plan you have evolved for effectively fighting the reform element.

A. C. Bromberg's Retort

Tomorrow or, perhaps, some other day, an article will appear in your local newspaper attacking the motion picture industry, demanding censorship or urging enactment of blue laws. Your first impulse is to write a letter to the editor answering the charges made. But, how often do you follow that impulse?

A. C. Bromberg, Atlanta, Ga., exchange man, did.

The result? A two-column story in the Atlanta Journal and a constructive editorial in The Constitution. But for Mr. Bromberg's initiative a tirade by Bishop Warren A. Candler, published in the Journal, might have gone unanswered and the harm it would have done is difficult to measure.

Other exchange men, as well as exhibitors, must follow that first impulse as did Mr. Bromberg. It is a valuable means of combatting the enemy's propaganda. Mr. Bromberg's letter to the editor of the Atlanta Journal may properly be termed constructive publicity. May hundreds of others in the industry be responsible for the publication of such letters.

The editorial published in The Constitution and prompted by Mr. Bromberg's retort, follows:

Read It:

"It is regrettable that the moving picture industry, as a whole, or that this form of entertainment should be even occasionally attacked by men and women of position or influence, and of moral or civic leadership, merely because now and then some screen star figures unpleasantly in a divorce case, or perhaps in a rum party with a tragic ending.

"These individual occurrences, as unfortunate as they are, do not reflect the characters of the tens of thousands of good men and women who are engaged in this great industry, nor do they destroy the educational and inspirational influences of this wing of public entertainment.

"There is scarcely a week that the news dispatches do not carry the disgraceful conduct of some minister, but that does not destroy faith in the tens of thousands of good men in the clergy who are always doing a great and noble work; nor does it weaken the moral influence of the church.

"The same can be said of some men and women in every profession who violate the code of moral laws, but the great works of the professions they represent are thereby not impaired. nor should they be indicted because of the acts of an individual.

"The moving picture is the poor man's theatre by necessity. It is the rich man's theatre most frequently by preference. On the whole there is no more wholesome entertainment possible, and certainly there is no more instructive.

"One feels the quickened impulse to avoid the pitfalls in life through the lesson on the screen; to attain to greater ambitions through the lesson on the screen. One reads and grasps a book in an hour for 25 cents that he would not read at all, or at greater expense. He visits the different countries of the world, sees the greatest attractions of nature, visualizes the native habits of other peoples—through the picture on the screen. He sees the happenings of the world, in action, not merely in the imagination created by reading, through the movie camera.

"These are some of the reasons why schools, churches, clubs, morality institutions, uplift societies, social organizations, all, use pictures to educate and impress, as well as to please and to entertain.

"Certainly pictures should be refined and elevating.

"But it is difficult to understand how any person of broad vision and an understanding heart can censure this great industry, and this still greater factor in America's recreational life, as a whole."

Screen Message No. 98

"The moving picture is the poor man's theatre by necessity. It is the rich man's theatre most frequently by preference. On the whole there is no more wholesome entertainment possible, and certainly there is no more instructive."

—The Atlanta, Ga., Constitution.

A Creed:

Here's a "better films" creed, formulated by the National Committee for Better Films of the National Board of Review which you might pass on to your patrons through your program or your house organ:

I BELIEVE that the best way to improve motion pictures is to select, patronize and advertise the best.

I BELIEVE in special performances for boys and girls and special family night; in educating parents to study their children and to regulate their attendance at motion pictures with intelligent care.

I BELIEVE in the maintenance of the highest standards in the conduct of the motion picture theatres which I will attend.

I BELIEVE in telling the exhibitor when I like his program and why, as well as when I don't like his program and why.

I BELIEVE in the motion picture theatre as a community institution and in community cooperation with the exhibitor.

I BELIEVE in the vast educative, cultural and recreational values of the screen, and in my own ability to add a little to the forces working for its constant elevation.

Fer or Agin?

Mae Tines, reviewer on the Chicago Tribune, has started a column in her Sunday section under the title, "Fer 'Em or Agin' 'Em? What Say You of the Movies?" Comments by the public have been interesting and, in many instances, of a constructive nature. The plain gentry who take such delight in heaping unwarranted attacks on the industry must read these comments with no little chagrin.

Censorship:

There's a lot of truth in this statement from the Cleveland, O., Press:

Censorship gives almost complete satisfaction—to the censors at least. What troubles the censor is the effort to abolish censorship and pry them away from the fat.

A View on the Socalled "Trust"

ROCKVILLE, MD.—To the Editor: I have heard so much about the "N" and the "Big Three" and what not that I just wanted to give you an experience I have had in trying to give my patrons in a little town the privilege of seeing good films. To begin with, it has been my experience during my ten years of exhibiting that the "trust" is the little fellow's friend—in all events they have been mine.

However, I must get down to what I want to say—I tried to book "Robin Hood" after having run "The Prisoner of Zenda" and "When Knighthood Was in Flower" and asked twice the rental I paid for each of the other two mentioned. In other words, would it be possible for the entire population of my little town into my theatre at twice 50 cents in order to come out on the right side of the bargain?

What I want to know is: How do they get that way? I have played "Dong" many a time in my old house whom I call "Flower" and "Little Mary" and I believe it is just as necessary for him to see us once in a while, now that he has "attained" third, whether he wants to see us or not. Why don't they try to build the ladder. You know Famous and Metro never did give away their service and United won't even sell theirs— that is amounts to the same thing—W. VALENTINE WILSON, Theo theatre, Rockville, Md.

Suggests a New Department

SPENCER, Ind.—To the Editor: Why not start a new department on "Rotten Experiences." That will be of interest to readers in my opinion or why not start the shoot with such a film as "Dope" on how to find out the truth on what films are worth to you in the burg you are in and how to get a square deal out of a film company after you have signed the dotted line for about twenty and how to avoid spending half of what miserly profits you make calling up the exchange managers.

Advise how to have a set of brains of your people to start the picture show business (for you will need them) so that you will be able to think for yourself and not have the home offices in New York do all your thinking for you. Then, perhaps, by the time you are ready for the bone yard, you may have enough money you have managed not to let the film companies know you made, to plant you. But what are the wife and baby going to do? All the fancy experiences we have had could be listed in the "sucker class" but we are learning one thing and that is the value of keeping our mouth shut.

You don't see Paramount and First National telling all the inside secrets of their exhibitors do you? You do not but it is no trouble for the chair warmers on Broadway to find out what Bill Jones in Podunk is making as Bill will tell them how many seats, his prices, etc., but Bill fails to tell them that half his population are "tight wads" and the other are cranks, invalids and people whose all bills have been paid and have no New York doing thinking for them. The best thing to do now is to organize an organization that means something.

Ask yourself why everyone of them are doing all they can to not hide and run away when Hodkinson, Vitagraph, Universal and Pathe salesmen call? And are they always adding to what these companies put out? If not, then quit talking about square deals as I know it to be a fake the only square deal we have shown me are more fair in many ways than they get credit for. It is true that they have not done the things that we want, but they don't set well but then how much fairer can be one for instance than Vitagraph, who I know sent one exhibitor a film gratis before he was here, but he never sent Vitagraph extra checks on ones he made money on. Take off your hat to this please and appreciate some thing—BILL JONES, Spencer theatre, Spencer, Ind.

Praises Editorial

DE QUEEN, ARK.—To the Editor: Your editorial, "Fairbanks Mixes In," is so full of good sense that I can see no reason for it to be published in every paper in the United States, from the little town weekly to the big metropolitan dailies.

If only Mr. Fairbanks would pause long enough, in his wild rush for millions, to think who has made him popular and his name known, and his name became a household word, and if he has not forgotten the days when he possessed only his brain and his physical anatomy. The man who keeps his mouth closed unless he has something worth while to say.

Personally, I cut loose from Mr. Fairbanks, and Mr. Chaplin, and a few others who think it takes a million or two a year for them to live decently on, more profitable experiments. I found that I could run my show without them, and I am following the same policy with regard to every star, who after I have spent good money and the producers are with has spent good money to place in public demand, gets it in their heads that they are the whole thing, that the public demands their pictures and that I will therefore have to buy them—good or bad.

I had almost been persuaded to play Mr. Fairbanks' one picture that I had not played that was made prior to "Three Musketeers."—The Nat'l Exhibitor.

For contracts, as a salesman had visited me and made a price that I would have played it at a long time ago. Well the same day this contract came to my desk for my signature, the trade papers reached me and I read of the matter of Mr. Fairbanks' pictures being sold to other than an exhibitor in Detroit. I pitched the contract into the waste basket and tried to forget about it.

When I got home I found that they can run their shows without any particular star or trademarked brand of pictures, this business will get down to the selling of films. When all exhibitors learn to stay with the old reliable Universal, and other companies who refuse to let stars dictate to them and dominate their selling plans, etc., there will be no more contract jumping by stars, and incidentally no more boosting of prices to unreasonable altitudes on pictures.

I would like to see more of these editorial columns or whatever he asks, and on up, so they can make a million dollars a year on two pictures and have ten months in the year to visit friends or other personal affairs, and spend his money, instead of working ten months making ten pictures for, say, a hundred million dollars.

You tell me that I am for the producing companies that run their own business free from the dictation of the few big stars who seem to think they are the whole thing. Some of the distributors handling some of the "big stars" productions have come out lately and stated they do not care to cooperate with me if I insist upon running my show at 5c and 10c admission. Here is the come-back. There are exhibitors handling "the niche" and even are selling me at a fair price and I am making money with their product, so I should want more.

I do not want to be misunderstood in this matter. I believe that honest effort and real talent should be rewarded, but not in unreasonable terms. Nor is it okay if it is really big, but consider the cheese some of these big ones have handed us at "special price."—A. MINDLETON, Grand Theatre, De Queen, Ark.

The People Want New Pictures

MUSCODA, WIS.—To the Editor: It seems to me that the small town exhibitor is a bank for the exchanges. Every time there is a short contract off, any fellow can throw them out and get a little loose change that exhibitor has. I have had as hard as five in one day and they have been better than the other fellow. "A real office letter," only they don't bring the box office with 'em. I can say easily to say you have a nice theatre and lots of seats, but empty seats don't fill the box office. I do lots of good advertising and make a pretty good living in small towns with all kinds of advertising, and they sure know when I come. They can hear me for a mile with my one cylinder. I don't do a nickel of business is not here, you can't hire Harry Carey or Tom Mix to come with their horse and rope to pull up their tent. The weather conditions have something to do with small town business. There certainly ought to be something to relieve the small town exhibitor. I have got lots of good pictures on the market, but you can't buy them right. People read the papers more and they don't want old stuff. That is another problem the exhibitor in a small town has to put up with. The exchanges ought to get off their swivel and answer this little problem. Maybe that would make a difference.—FRED PAULSON, Paullick theatre, Muscodia, Wis.

Asks Tax-Free Scores

TECMUSEH, MICH.—To the Editor: I think that in order to help the exhibitors concerning the music tax, the producer should instead of making up their own sheet music and making it taxable, try to compose it of non-taxable music. They would be doing something worthwhile, but at the same time they would be playing taxable or non-taxable and the Exhibitors Herald is the real paper to put it over with the producers.—F. H. GIV, Bradley Opera House, Tecumseh, Mich.
American Releasing

Timothy's Quest, with a special cast.—Very good picture—which pleased about 90 per cent. A lot of sobs in this picture, but it'll do you good to cry.—M. M. Hansen, Lyric theatre, Oxnard, Cal.—Small town patronage.

Cardigan, with a special cast.—An excellent picture which gave general satisfaction.—L. V. Feldman, Orpheum theatre, Pipestone, Minn.—General patronage.

Solomon in Society, with a special cast.—Pretty fair program picture.—T. W. Young, Jr., Frances theatre, Dyersburg, Tenn.—General patronage.

The Sign of the Rose, with George Be- lenyi, a good picture, but paid big money for it and only drew fair.—G. E. Johnson, Lincoln theatre, Sterling, Ill.—General patronage.

Associated Exhibitors

Till We Meet Again, with Mae Marsh.—Don't pass this up. It is one of the best pictures of the year. Use D. W. Grimes' name in connection with Till We Meet Again, and you will cash in on this one. Admission fifty-five cents.—Ralph A. Wett- stein, Sterrell theatre, Milwaukee, Wis.—General patronage.

Silas Marner, with a special cast.—You can tie up with schools on this one and clean up. They liked it line and public school turned out to see. Attendance good.—A. Mitchell, Dixie theatre, Russellville, Ky.—Small town patronage.

Grandma's Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—Great. Packed them in for three days. Film completely worn out and should never have been sent out. Broke as fast as we could rethread.—B. C. Burden, Gavent theatre, Wilson, Neb.—General patronage.

Don't Doubt Your Wife, with Leah Baird.—Nothing to it. People do not like such pictures here.—H. L. McDonald, Royal theatre, Malvern, Ark.—Neigh- borhood patronage.

The Woman Who Fooled Herself, with May Allison.—Not so bad. Very shallow. The kind that thrives best about when the new one comes out. However, picture had beautiful set- tings. Flopped.—E. E. Bair, State thea- tre, Uhrichsville, Ohio.—Small town patronage.

The Woman Who Fooled Herself, with May Allison.—A real picture. One every exhibitor should get money on.—H. L. McDonald, Royal theatre, Malvern, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

F. B. O.

When Love Comes, with a special cast.—A clean little drama that was enjoyed by most all of the patrons.—A. S. Widaman, Centennial theatre, Warsaw, Ind.—General patronage.

The Third Alarm, with a special cast.—Great. One that will get them in and please at advanced prices.—James Nester, Rialto theatre, Lake Mills, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Thelma, with Jane Novak.—Very good picture, but no pulling power. Jane looked good enough to eat in this.—G. E. Johnson, Lincoln theatre, Sterling, Ill.—Gen- eral patronage.

Good Men and True, with Harry Carey.—Pleased a small Saturday night crowd.—K. J. Ugly, Strand theatre, White- water, Wis.—General patronage.

Don't Blame Your Children, with a special cast. —A good picture with a bad title. Everyone liked it, but a title like this won't bring them in.—G. M. El- kin, Grand theatre, Logansport, Ind.—Transit patronage.

My Dad, with Johnny Walker.—Here is a dandy good picture that makes an exceptional program offering. I paid a special price for it, but had a bunch and only charged regular price and ran it one day. As a result everyone was more than satisfied except me.—Howard K. Robertson, Ben, Rialto theatre, Harlingen, Tex.—Small town patronage.

My Dad, with Johnny Walker.—Fair picture with which people can stand, but won't rave over. Price is too high. We hit once.—G. M. Elkins, Grand theatre, Logansport, Ind.—Transit patronage.

Son of the Wolf, with Edith Roberts.—An ordinary picture with wonderful scenery. Don't tell your patrons that it's anything like the posters describe it. No connection between them and the play whatever. If every exhibitor is having the trouble with F. B. O. that I am they won't be in business much longer.—Howard Allen, Rialto theatre, Harlingen, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Son of the Wolf, with Edith Roberts.—Nothing to it. Good thing Jack London didn't see it.—W. T. Hayes, Dreamland theatre, Providence, Ky.—General patronage.

Colleen of the Pines, with Jane Novak.—Might have been a good show, but got a poor print.—H. A. Douglas, Sherrard theatre, Sherrard, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Colleen of the Pines, with Jane Novak.—-Good picture, full of action and thrills with a good story. Played this with "Maggy and Jiggs" to fair business. Admission fifteen and thirty cents. Film in good condition.—P. O. Koby, Latona theatre, Williamsburg, Iowa.—Neigh- borhood patronage.

The Kick Back, with Harry Carey.—Lay off this one, boys, it's simply not the type for a Western. People expect more from Carey than this. Fair business first night; none the second. If Carey's next pictures don't come better he is done for.—Steve Farrar, Centennial theatre, Harris- burg, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Kick Back, with Harry Carey.—Just a program picture. Not as good as said to be. Paid too much.—W. T. Hayes, Dreamland theatre, Providence, Ky.—General patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—A sob story picture along the lines of 'The Old Nest and Over the Hill', but not as good. But it's better than average picture and title jamps them in. It pleased here, and you can buy it at a price that allows you to make a profit. So get it and boost it.—Steve Farrar, Orpheum theatre, Harrisburg, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—A good program picture. I played this three days to good business at ten and twenty-five cents. Do not try and boost the admission price. Film in good condition.—P. G. Held, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—Very good picture, but print we had in terrible shape. Had many favorable comments on this picture.—M. M. Hansen, Lyric theatre, Oxnard, Cal.—Small town patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—Very fine. I pleased all. Bought...
Thanks for Reports and Kind Words

I am giving you a few of my comments on some of the pictures I have run recently.

I have only recently subscribed to this, and already consider it as indispensable as I do my projection machine.

right.—Jack Tiller, Temple theatre, McCook, Neb.—General patronage.

The Snowshoe Trail, with Jane Novak.—A good buy for us, as our patrons like Northern pictures if they have nice scenery. Have run it for two days.—G.
M. Elkins, Grand theatre, Logansport, Ind.—Transient patronage.

The Call of Home, with Nell Shipman.—A picture that created a good Saturday attendance. Picture has lots of action and flood scene. Climax that makes the picture very pleasing.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Call of Home, with a special cast.—No drawing power and nothing extra for us.—Douglas & M. Sherrard Show Co., Sherrard, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Boy Crazy, with Doris May.—This is a very good production and music, and more than pleased a good audience. Book it.—C. W. Glass, Star theatre, Trenton, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Five Days to Live, with Sessue Hayakawa.—Will please about 60 per cent. Personally don’t think much of it.—D. F. Wolfe, Princess theatre, Lansing, Ia.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fatal Marriage, with Wallace Reid.—Very slow moving picture that did not please our patrons. Acting and story fair; picture good; please elsewhere, but our patrons want more action.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

First National

The Dangerous Age, with a special cast.—This is one of the really good pictures of the year. A picture that should be seen by all. I struck tough weather and lost money, but this picture is sure there and will please 100 per cent.—L. V. Finnegan, O’Donnell theatre, Pipestone, Minn.—General patronage.

The Woman Conquers, with Katherine MacDonald.—A very nice picture with superb ice scenes. Good work by the stars that are appreciated by the audience.—J. Carbonell, Monroe theatre, Key West, Fla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Kindred of the Dust, with Miriam Cooper.—Did good business and pleased all. Well cast. Fine story. A pleasure to play this kind.—Clifford L. Niles, Grand theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Olive Twist, with Jackie Coogan.—Not up to Jackie’s standard. The only one of his pictures that didn’t get any money. Patrons not satisfied.—Louis R. Markum, Tuxedo theatre, Indianapolis, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Olive Twist, with Jackie Coogan.—Picture is a knockout and business was very good. Every kid in town managed to see this one. Give us more of this kind.—Ray G. Frankel, Hippodrome theatre, Newport, Ky.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Masquerader, with Guy Bates Post.—Mr. Post is a talented actor, but somehow the picture does not hit the heights that the plot does. Good business but nobody was enthusiastic over it.—Crosby Bros., Lily theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Masquerader, with Guy Bates Post.—A good picture but they want too much money. If you can buy it right, book it.—W. W. Young, Jr., Francis theatre, Dyersburg, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Heroes and Husband’s, with Katherine MacDonald.—Good society drama and for those who like pretty clothes and just amusement. Goes much better with us than Western or rough pictures.—R. E. Siebert, World theatre, Mineral Point, Wis.—General patronage.

Heroes and Husband’s, with Katherine MacDonald.—Star good to look upon. Story just average. Business fair. Ran it one day. Mighty glad I didn’t run it any longer.—H. W. Buskirk, Temple theatre, Mishawaka, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

SKIN DEEP, a Thomas H. Ince production, in a 30 seat house. Headed 1,437 two nights and still turned them away. Best bet I ever had.—JESS LE BRUN, Cort theatre, Des Moines, Ia.—General patronage.

The Light in the Dark, with Hope Hampton.—Very good and worth while.—R. E. Siebert, World theatre, Mineral Point, Wis.—General patronage.

Star Dust, with Hope Hampton.—A very good production with one of the most realistic railroad wrecks we have ever seen upon the screen. Play up the wreck in your exploitation.—Crosby Bros., Lily theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Star Dust, with Hope Hampton.—Good program picture.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

Omar the Tentmaker, with Guy Bates Post.—A fine show for a good sleep. Had to have usher wake ’em up at conclusion of show.—Hansell, Jefferson theatre, Goshen, Ind.—General patronage.

East is West, with Constance Talmadge.—The best Constance Talmadge we ever ran and by far the best box office attraction. Patrons more than pleased—Good business.—Louis R. Markum, Tuxedo theatre, Indianapolis, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

East is West, with Constance Talmadge.—Here is a movie honest to goodness picture that you can boost to your heart’s content. Constance at her best and Warner Oland excellent. They made this little old house house laugh.—Crosby Bros., Lily theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

East is West, with Constance Talmadge.—Where Constance is known and liked I believe this should not draw, but it fell flat for me. A good many didn’t like it so they stayed away the second night. I paid too much money so, therefore I paid B. W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

East is West, with Constance Talmadge.—Best ever. This is sure a bread winner. Book it.—JESS LE BRUN, Cort theatre, Decatur, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Eternal Flame, with Norma Talmdadge.—Although Norma Talmadge does some of the best acting of her career it is a very poor poor small screen picture. Good business being costume the story isn’t the best suited for small towns.—Bert Norton, Roxy theatre, Eureka, Ila.—General patronage.

White Shoulders, with Katherine Macdonald.—They say this star won’t draw, but I wouldn’t bet a better picture.—Many favorable comments and everybody pleased.—O. Hansen, Jefferson theatre, Goshen, Ind.—General patronage.

Rose of the Sea, with Anita Stewart.—One of the best Stewart pictures we have ever had. Lots of nice remarks and pleased 100 percent. Splendid story and performance.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

The Song of Life, with a special cast.—Fair program picture.—G. Strasser Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hail the Woman, a Thos. H. Ince production, is a great picture. Showed it three days and last night the best.—Nettie M. Snider, Mystic theatre, Albion, Ia.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Crossroads of New York, with a special cast—Fair program picture. Fair business.—G. Strasser Sons, Emblem theatre, Fairmont, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Trouble, with Jackie Coogan.—The only First National star we have ever made a penny on. A dandy good picture. Best we have ever seen of the city. Keaton’s Palaeface spoiled the show.—Snyder Bros., Gem theatre, Earlville, Ia.—Neighborhood patronage.

You’ll Get It If I Don’t Fail

Enclosed find reports on pictures I have run here. I find “What the Picture Did” Report, of interest and a great help in booking, helping the small town man dodge the lemon.

I am looking forward to the March “Record,” so don’t disappoint me.

mess.—This is about similar to Tofable David. It drew less business than “David” but they have operated just as good as in “David” — R. Xavary, Pleasant Hour theatre, Verona, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Salvation Nell, with Pauline Starke.—Fine program picture. Good church picture.—H. C. Jones, Bijou theatre, Laurel, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Salvation Nell, with a special cast.—A very good Sunday picture. Please my patrons 100 per cent. A picture everybody should see and take warning of their future way of living.—Edw. W. Werner, Windsor theatre, Canton, Ohio.—General patronage.

LOVE NEVER DIES, with a special cast.—I figured this one was weak so I did some extra advertising, featuring that it was based on the song “Love’s Sweetness.” But I get the surprise of my life when we almost broke our Saturday attendance record.—O. HANSEN, Jefferson theatre, Loosen, Ind.

Her Social Value, with Katherine MacDonald.—Why do they tell her she can act. This one is like this all the time. Please only the high brow.—Geo. W. Keys, Majestic theatre, Johnson City, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Sign on the Door, with Norma Talmadge.—This week’s best. Playing of Destiny were the only two shows we got for First National Week that there were decent prints on, though.—Olen Reynolds, Pearl theatre, Hymera, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The Child Thou Gavest Me, with a special cast.—Your patrons will like it. Excellent in comedy and a good one to please them all. Ends up with a laugh for all.—Arbor theatre, Broken Bow, Okla.—General patronage.

The Child Thou Gavest Me, with a special cast.—Very good, but no better than A Bachelor Daddy which we paid less for.—Olen Reynolds, Pearl theatre, Hymera, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Not Guilty, with a special cast.—Very satisfying program picture.—N. F. Lobli, Chimes theatre, Cedarburg, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Silent Call, with Strongheart.—Extra good picture. Great scenery. No kicks on this one.—H. C. Jones, Bijou theatre, Laurel, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The Silent Call, with Strongheart.—Another good show that went wrong due to a poor print.—Olen Reynolds, Pearl theatre, Hymera, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The Silent Call, with Strongheart.—A very good picture. Patrons will talk about this dog for a week.—R. D. Taylor, Bourbon theatre, Bourbon, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Man, Woman, Marriage, with Dorothy keeps people away. Ordinary Sunday business. R. Pfeifer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Gas, Oil, Water, with Charles Ray.—Very poor patronage not expected. Said they couldn’t tell what it was all about.—Nettie M. Sinders, Mystic theatre, Albin, Ind.—Small town patronage.

My Boy, with Jackie Coogan.—A good time to run it now as Jackie is getting quite a bit of popularity out of his stupendous offer from Metro. Some patrons don’t like him as they thought it wasn’t right to picture Jackie as stealing, but he is just an American Boy.” Film in good shape.—H. M. Retz, Strand theatre, Lamont, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

My Boy, with Jackie Coogan.—A good picture. Should make money if rental is right.—Brainard & Miles, Argus theatre, Round Lake, Ill.—General patronage.

Peck’s Bad Boy, with Jackie Coogan.—The best of the Coogans, and best drawing card. Can’t class these with big specials, but good entertainment. Cannot pay five times as much for Oliver Twist, however.—R. E. Siebert, World theatre, Mineral Point, Wis.—General patronage.

Peck’s Bad Boy, with Jackie Coogan.—A very good comedy. Will make money if bought right.—H. A. Douglas, Sherrard Show Co., Sherrard, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Peck’s Bad Boy, with Jackie Coogan.—Broke the house record with this one. Played it Christmas night. Rental was too high.—R. D. Taylor, Bourbon theatre, Bourbon, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The Bond Boy, with Richard Barthelmess.—Wonderful. Should please every class of audience at advanced prices.—James Nester, Rialto theatre, Lake Mills, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Bond Boy, with Richard Barthelmess.—This is about similar to Tofable David. It drew less business than “David” but they have operated just as good as in “David”—R. Xavary, Pleasant Hour theatre, Verona, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Scrap Iron, with Charles Ray.—Charles Ray is sure a weak sister. No drawing power. Pleased about 30 per cent.—H. A. Douglas, Sherrard Show Co., Sherrard, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Nineteen and Phyllis, with Charles Ray.—Here’s one you don’t need to be afraid of. One of Ray’s best. Good comedy-drama with a good love story.—P. O. Roby, Latona theatre, Williamsburg, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Silent Call, with Strongheart.—A very good picture. Patrons will talk about this dog for a week.—R. D. Taylor, Bourbon theatre, Bourbon, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Man, Woman, Marriage, with Dorothy
Philips.—A picture in a class by itself. Played to good business for two days. A wonderful spectacular production with a strong story and lesson.—R. Pfeiffer, Prince theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Man, Woman, Marriage, with Dorothy Phillips.—Everyone who saw this spoke highly of it, but I paid double what I should have paid. First National should go at the "stick-up" business.—R. D. Taylor, Bourbon theatre, Bourbon, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The Kid, with Charles Chaplin.—Print badly cut up with entire scenes missing. Many kicks from patrons due to entourages. Nothing to protect exhibitors in new uniform contracts from such treatment.—N. F. Loibl, Chloe’s theatre, Cedarburg, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Kid, with Charles Chaplin.—This picture was second run. Print in good shape and we turned them away. Patrons all well pleased.—Kathrine Dowling, Ark theatre, Logansport, Ind.—General patronage.

Dinty, a Marshall Neval production.—A good picture that your people will enjoy.—Fred W. Peck.—Exceptionally good. Didn’t draw. First National puts out poor paper and holds you up for it.—Snyder Bros., Gem theatre, Earlville, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Dinty, a Marshall Neval production.—Colleen Moore as the mother shared honors with Barry. Very fine picture. Print and supporting cast very good. Buy it.—Katherine Dowling, Ark theatre, Logansport, Ind.—General patronage.

Smlin’ Through, with Norma Talmadge.—The best picture and best crowd since I have owned show. Sure is great.—G. Brinkley, Zionville theatre, Zionville, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Tofable David, with Richard Barthelmess.—Great. Small towns can run it as a special. Book it.—H. C. Jones, Bijou theatre, Laurel, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Tofable David, with Richard Barthelmess.—A good picture and keeps your audience on the edge of their chairs at all times. Barthelmess sure is there. Give us more like this.—Snyder Bros., Gem theatre, Earlville, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Tofable David, with Richard Barthelmess.—Great picture, but did not do so well as Smlin’ Through, but patrons went away saying, “Great acting.”—G. S. Brinkley, Zionville theatre, Zionville, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The Song of Life, with a special cast.—Went over good. Well liked.—Nettie M. Anderson, Mystic theatre, Albion, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Blind Hearts, with Hobart Bosworth.—Did not see it myself, being away from home, but patrons said, “Good show.”—Unique theatre, Briceyville, Minn.—General patronage.

The Sea Lion, with Hobart Bosworth.—A little far fetched, but interesting. Will hold interest through and make friends. Wholesale story. Much more scenery. Trifle rough at times, but not extreme. Put it down 100 per cent.—Unique theatre, Briceyville, Minn.—General patronage.

Fox

The New Teacher and Pawn Ticket 210, with Shirley Mason.—Both very good pictures. Always a crowd on Shirley. We like her here.—A. J. Steggall, Opera House, Fayette, Iowa.—General patronage.

Do and Dare, with Tom Mix.—Not the kind of picture. My patrons like this star in. This was just fair and didn’t please the majority. Give us this star in Westerns.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Do and Dare, with Tom Mix.—A good Mix picture and as usual did nice business.—Louis R. Markum, Dream theatre, Indianapolis, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

In Arabia, with Tom Mix.—Plenty of comedy and action in typical Mix stunt picture. Pleased and what was better drew some extra buzz.—C. Estee, Fad theatre, Brockings, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

In Arabia, with Tom Mix.—The only time Mix ever failed to pull us a full house. Why? We can’t see.—Olen Reynolds, Pearl theatre, Hymera, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Where Are My Parents? with a special cast.—Like all other so-called Fox specials, except Monte Cristo and The Fast Mail, it was a dismal failure at the box office. Too much publicity. Our patrons have a low batting average here.—Will R. Winch, Wigwam theatre, El Paso, Tex.—Transient patronage.

The Yosemite Trail, with Dustin Farnum.—Fair picture and average business.

Beautiful outdoor scenery and plenty of action. Westerns and "he man" pictures are usually popular here.—R. E. Siehert, World theatre, Mineral Point, Wis.—General patronage.

Just Tony, with Tom Mix.—Here is a picture that we are not able to say enough for as it is in a class by itself. There is no other picture like it and to our estimation there never will be. If you have not run this one book it if you have to contract for all the pictures that William Fox has on his list.

We ran it on a Tuesday night with the thermometer at zero and the wind blowing a gale and did more business with it than any other picture we ever ran and we are sure to say that it more than pleased 100 per cent, and that is going some with any picture. Book it and advertise it. It’s great.—CRAWFORD AND NEARY, Idle Hour theatre, Utica, Ill.

Mixed Faces, with William Russell.—I call this just a fair picture. Too much mixed.—A. J. Steggall, Opera House, Fayette, Iowa.—General patronage.

Arabian Love, with John Gilbert.—Gilbert sure made friends with this one. His fine screen personality is bound to keep him “out in front.”—Lesq. G. Durpo, Browne theatre, Limestone, Me.—Small town patronage.

Arabian Love, with John Gilbert.—Sure a good picture of its kind. Star and support very good.—Katherine Dowling, Ark theatre, Logansport, Ind.—General patronage.

The Love Gambler, with John Gilbert.—Say, boys, here is a picture far better than many supposed. Super production. Say, just marvelous. Photographic acting and direction are of the best. Book it. You can’t go wrong.—J. Carbone, Monroe theatre Key West, Fl.—Neighborhood patronage.

Nero, with a special cast.—Big production, but absolutely worthless. Very few care for such stuff and it does not do one any good to see it.—G. E. Johnson, Lin-coin theatre, Sterling, Ill.—General patronage.

Nero, with a special cast.—Very spectacular production done by characters who are particularly good in their parts. But we doubt for the majority of my patrons. This is the third of the eight Fox specials that I have played, and so far I have bore a sizable hole in the famous picture. The police, we hope that you will not emulate it.—R. Navary, Liberty theatre, Verona, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

My Friend the Devil, with a special cast.—Patrons did not like it. Too long. Fair business.—G. Strasser Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Romance Land, with Tom Mix.—A good one from a good actor, Expecially in this part of the country. Mix is a sure box office attraction.—J. Carbonell, Monroe theatre, Key West, Fla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Shirley of the Circus, with Shirley Mason.—Nothing wrong with this picture.—Olen Reynolds, Pearl theatre, Hymera, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fast Mail, with Charles Jones.—A carking good production with plenty of thrills, but not anyways near a special as they claim they be. Would make an above average Saturday show at regular prices. Miss Percy very good in this.—Howard K. Allen, Rialto theatre, Harlingen, Tex.—Small town patronage.

The Fast Mail, with Charles Jones.—Surprise to learn my patrons would not go out to see this picture, do I always considered Gloria Swanson their favorite.—Louis R. Markum, Tuxedo theatre, Indianapolis, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Without Compromise, with William Farnum.—A good program picture.—A. J. Steggall, Opera House, Fayette, Iowa.—General patronage.

Just Tony, with Tom Mix.—Mix is well liked here and this is one of his best pictures. Drew fair crowd.—J. D. Wattrick, Luna theatre, Battle Creek, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage

Just Tony, with Tom Mix.—This is without a doubt the finest Tom Mix picture ever made, according to the many seen by the picture. Ran it two days to very good enough sale. Did not draw. Temple theatre, Mishawaka, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Just Tony, with Tom Mix.—As good as Tom ever made, maybe, perhaps better. There is Tony, that certainly deserves a lot of compliments. Pleased the ladies very much; in general, Westerners never had a better time since. R. Navary, 'Neighborhood theatre, Verona, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Just Tony, with Tom Mix.—Did good business in spite of bad weather. Patrons all pleased.—Louis R. Markum, Dream theatre, Indianapolis, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Oathbound, with Dustin Farnum.—Good program picture with plenty of action, although Farnum no good here. Poor business.—E. E. Gailey, Crystal theatre, Wayne, Neb.—General patronage.

Oathbound, with Dustin Farnum.—A very good picture. The boys race like the devil, and you don’t know how they could win! Flynn about copied the cookies. He is a comer.—O. M. Estelle, Elm City theatre, El Paso, Tex.—Transient patronage.

Lights of New York, with a special cast.—Another Fox flier. It neither drew nor pleased.—Will R. Winch, Wigwam theatre, El Paso, Tex.—Transient patronage.

Lights of New York, with a special cast.—Nothing to it, but called a special, and paid too much for it.—G. E. Johnson, Lincoln theatre, Sterling, Ill.—General patronage.

A Fool There Was, with Lewis Stone and Estelle Taylor.—A wonderful picture and everyone seeing it was well pleased. Poor business.—Louis R. Markum, Laurel theatre, Indianapolis, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Fool There Was, with Lewis Stone and Estelle Taylor.—Produced lavishly and well acted. Disgusting theme of no box office value whatever.—J. D. Wattrick, Luna theatre, Battle Creek, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Fool There Was, with Lewis Stone and Estelle Taylor.—Only fair. Average program picture. Why they call it special, I don’t know. Yes, yes, price is special. Louis R. Markum, Tuxedo theatre, Grafton, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Fool There Was, with Lewis Stone and Estelle Taylor.—A splendid picture and a good deal of discussion among the limited number that saw it, but it failed to stimulate attendance second night, which is to be expected. Some people figured the talk would bring out a few curiosity seekers at any rate, but it didn’t. Never made money with Fox specials with about three exceptions: Over the Hill and The Fast Mail, and then had The Fast Mail taken out from our regular Jones program pictures and forced to pay about fourteen thousand dollars a week in exchange for a Fool There Was and used Our Gang comedy with it.—P. E. Morris, Regent theatre, Cleveland, Miss.—General patronage.

A Fool There Was, with Lewis Stone and Estelle Taylor.—Good picture, but don’t pay too much for it. The people have not forgotten that Theda played in it once.—E. E. Gailey, Crystal theatre, Wayne, Neb.—General patronage.

A Fool There Was, with Lewis Stone and Estelle Taylor.—Mr. Fox would have performed a clever deal if he had re issued the Theda Bara production. That was a well acted and touching picture, and this is a well done failure. Patrons not pleased with it.—R. Navary, Liberty theatre, Verona, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Strength of the Pines, with William Russell.—Here is one that will suit even those who do not like Western pictures. We ran it on a Saturday and it pleased 95 per cent and that is going some, but it sure did it. Run it. You can buy it right.—Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Mass.—General patronage.

Money to Burn, with William Russell.—Good for Russell fans, but not very good for him, but plenty of action.—W. T. Hayes, Dreamland theatre, Providence, Ky.—General patronage.

Queer of Sheba, with Betty Blythe.—This great picture cannot be praised too highly. It offers entertainment that is superb in every sense of the word, and attracts unusual business to satisfactory audience. I certainly would urge all exhibitors who have not yet used this picture to hook it, as it is not being anything made today that equals it.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

Monte Cristo, with John Gilbert.—A wonderful production, well acted, artistically produced. Poor box office attraction. Costume pictures are not liked here. Business very poor.—J. D. Wattrick, Luna theatre, Battle Creek, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

For Big Stakes, with Tom Mix.—We... never go wrong on this star. Mix is the berries for the box office for us. Always a lot of action in his pictures. The ladies here like him as well as the kids and men. This is one of his best.—Crawford & Neary, Idle Hour theatre, Utica, III.—Small town patronage.

For Big Stakes, with Tom Mix.—Not as good as other Mix pictures. Failed to get a crowd.—C. W. Glass, Star theatre, Trenton, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Silver Wings, with Mary Carr.—Why have most of the exhibitors been pan- ning this one? Must have lost money on it? I did too, but it was no fault of the picture. We lost money on most of them expressed themselves and it's the first picture I ever played that pulled more the second night than the first. Revival kept them away. Howard A. Allen, Rialto theatre, Harlingen, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Silver Wings, with Mary Carr.—Good production, but not the type our patrons want. Paid big money and lost heavily.—G. E. Johnson, Lincoln theatre, Sterling, Ill.—General patronage.

Trailin', with Tom Mix.—Good. Mix wins again, better than some of his later ones. Exhibitors in small town with neighborhood patronage can't go wrong with Fox pictures for Saturday night program, although they ought to give an exhibitor better prints.—H. M. Retz, Strand theatre, Lamont, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Thunderclap, with Mary Carr.—Don't pass this one up as this is a wonderful picture. Acting and scenery is wonderful. You can buy it right and if it is advertised it will make you money. Ran it on a rainy night with trouble with the electric power, but pleased 100 per cent.—Crawford & Neary, Idle Hour theatre, Utica, III.—Small town patronage.

Over the Hill, with Mary Carr.—Filled the house both nights. Many expressed opinion as best picture they ever saw.—F. W. Horrigan, McDonald theatre, Philip- psburg, Mont.—Mining town patronage.

Rough Shod, with Charles Jones.—Good action picture. Ran it on a Sat- urday night and it pleased most every- body. But there is just one thing that we do not understand and that is the changing of Jones' name from Buck to Charles, as it does not fit him. He have quit using the name Charles as it does not go with the crowd.—Crawford & Neary, Idle Hour theatre, Utica, Ill.—Small town patronage.

A Connecticut Yankee, with Harry Myrs.—Not bad, but not exceptionally good picture.—J. W. Horrigan, McDonald theatre, Philips- burg, Mont.—Mining town patronage.

Queen of Sheba, with Betty Blythe.—Good feature. Was well liked.—P. S. Money, Opera House, Mason City, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Goldwyn

A Blind Bargain, with Lou Chaney.—This picture did a big business. It built each day. Advertising, "Money Glads theory and you will clean up. Seven day run. Admission fifty cents.—Ralph A. Wettstein, Merrill theatre, Milwaukee, Wis.—General patronage.

Sherlock Holmes, with John Barry- more.—The best of its kind we have ever shown. Raised admission.—E. P. Selz, Queen theatre, Pilot Point, Tex.—Neigh- borhood patronage.

Sherlock Holmes, with John Barry- more.—Good picture, but did not draw. Many did not understand it. Not wild enough to please the class of people we have here.—Parley Bills, Opera House Co. Soldier Summit, Utah.—Neighborhood patronage.

Sherlock Holmes, with John Barry- more.—A fine picture worth a raise in admission. It pleased 90 per cent of my patrons.—Reed & Son, Palace theatre, Wisconsin Rapids, Wis.—General pat- ronage.

Broken Chains, with a special cast.—Get this picture by all means. It is just the kind of red blooded story that makes loyal fans who have tired of the trashy society triangle stories.—Ralph A. Wett- stein, Merrill theatre, Milwaukee, Wis.—General patronage.

Broken Chains, with Colleen Moore.—Belongs where heavy melodrama and sensational pictures are wanted. For me, a lemon.—Jack Tiller, Temple theatre, McCook, Nebr.—General patronage.

Brothers Under the Skin, with a special cast.—I always try to play comedy-dramas on Sunday and here is one I heartily recommend. Picture easy to ex- ploit without going to great expense. Top your ad with "Don't Get Married," etc.—O. Hansen, Jefferson theatre, Goshen, Ind.—General patronage.

Brothers Under the Skin, with a spe- cial cast.—Picture well liked. Good business.—G. Strasser Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Come On Over, with Colleen Moore.—Played this Christmas with Century comedy, Chums, to little better than usual business. A good program.—J. L. Mey- ers, Liberty theatre, Ivesdale, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Golden Dreams, with a special cast.—Used this with High School home talent play and did well over the fine acting of Fritzi Brunette and because of the splendid outdoor scenery.—Levi G. Duke, Brown theatre, Limestone, Me.—Small town patronage.

YELLLOW MEN AND GOLD, with a special cast.—Please a small audience. We selected five Goldwyn pictures from "What the Picture Did For Me," namely: "Come on Over," "Watch Your Step," "When the Rat Comes," "The Man From Lost River," with House Peters.—Went over well through the fine acting of Fritzi Brunette and because of the splendid outdoor scenery.—Levi G. Duke, Brown theatre, Limestone, Me.—Small town patronage.

Snowblind, with a special cast.—Extra good. Audience well pleased.—Nettie M. Sinderson, Mystic theatre, Albion, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Hold Your Horses, with Tom Moore.—100 per cent picture. Tom is well liked here. When we have a Moore, Mix, or a Will Rogers picture all we have to do to get people in is to let them know it is on the billboard.—Parley Bills, Opera House Co., Soldier Summit, Utah.—Neighborhood patronage.

Wet Gold, with a special cast.—A very good picture that caused talk the show. Print was poor in spots. Should draw everywhere.—Brainerd & Miles, Argus theatre, Round Lake, Ill.—General patronage.

The North Wind's Malice, with a spe- cial cast.—Very poor print. Locked in- spection. A good picture spoiled by poor print.—Brainerd & Miles, Argus theatre, Round Lake, Ill.—General patronage.

Yellow Men and Gold, with a special cast.—Another extra good picture. Book to the Hame theatre, House, Fayette, Iowa.—General patronage.

The Invisible Power, with House Peters.—A fine program picture, better than the average.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General pat- ronage.

Always the Woman, with Betty Com- pson.—Leave it alone. It's a lemon.—A. J. Steggall, Opera House, Fayette, Iowa.—General patronage.

The Man With Two Mothers, with a special cast.—A good picture. A pleasant and seemed to enjoy, although there is noth- ing startling about it.—Levi G. Dupper, Browne theatre, Limestone, Me.—Small town patronage.

The Man With Two Mothers, with Cullen Landis.—This is an extra good program picture, clean and entertaining.—A. J. Steggall, Opera House, Fayette, Iowa.—General patronage.

When Romance Rides, with a special cast.—A right good Western. A Zane Grey picture which failed to draw at all.—J. L. Meyers, Liberty theatre, Ivesdale, Ill.—Small town patronage.

When Romance Rides, with a special cast.—Good picture, but believe that it would have improved picture if certain parts had been left out.—L. V. Feldman.
Orpheum theatre, Pipestone, Minn.—General patronage.

When Romance Rides, with a special cast.—Pleased 100 per cent. An extra fine picture for small town. Did a big crowd. Zane Grey’s subjects very popular here. Goldwyn is making some fine productions—H. G. Sweet, Royal theatre, Royal Center, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The Silver Horde, with a special cast.—A very satisfactory picture. Patrons clustered for fear of losing the book to a competitor. Drew a few extra from the country. Seven reels. Film in fair shape. Admission ten and thirty-five cents.—G. F. Rediske, St. Paul theatre, Ryegate, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Dangerous Curve Ahead, with Helene Chadwick—I have yet my first picture that has Miss Chadwick in it to be a bad one. My people sure raved over this one and it pleased 100 per cent. Print was good and price was right. Attendance extra good. Advertising six sheets and lobby.—A. Mitchell, Dixie theatre, Russells, Ky.—Small town patronage.

A Tale of Two Worlds, with a special cast.—A very well directed and excellent production. Especially liked the book to a collector. A whole serves as first class entertainment.—Business good.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

A Tale of Two Worlds, with a special cast.—An older picture that is thrusting. Pleased as well as the new specials. Don’t think they are crying out for old good pictures that you can buy right and make a profit. Goldwyn will use right. If in doubt, try them. I have used about 90 per cent of all the Goldwyn product.—B. C. Brown, Temple theatre, Viroqua, Wis.—General patronage.

Made in Heaven, with Tom Moore.—An old picture, but a new print and a dandy picture. If you have not played these Goldwyn-Tom Moores go back and pick them up.—Clifford L. Niles, Grand theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Made in Heaven, with Tom Moore.—Many favorable remarks on this comedy-drama.—J. I. Meyers, Liberty theatre, Ixevs, Ill.—Small town patronage.

His Own Law, with Hobart Bosworth.—A splendid picture. The star’s friendship to Frenchy made a great hit. Bosworth well liked here.—Parley Bills, Opera House Co., Soldier Summit, Utah.—Neighborhood patronage.

Watch Your Step, with Richard Dix.—Pleased a fairly good crowd. Kept them laughing. Especially good for small towns.—E. P. Selz, Queen theatre, Pilot Point, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Watch Your Step, with Cullen Landis.—Sure a dandy program picture.—A. J. Stegell, Opera House, Fayette, Iowa.—General patronage.

The Night Rose, with Lon Chaney.—A good crook picture. Business at the Peacock, Mystic theatre, Stafford, Kans.—Small town patronage.

Watch Your Step, with Cullen Landis.—Run this New Year’s with Action Pictures and a news reel and as for pleasing the people it tops them all lately as it pleased better than any other picture of special in some time.—J. L. Meyers, Liberty theatre, Ixevs, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Hodkinson

The Headless Horseman, with Will Rogers.—This is a picture for all who have read the story and can appreciate this type of play. You can’t go wrong in playing it and by all means tie up with the kids a special show. It’ll bring you business.—Howard K. Allen, Rialto theatre, Harlinger, Tex.—Small town patronage.

The Headless Horseman, with Will Rogers.—This is a picture out of the regular run of Rogers’ pictures. Advertise it good in the schools and the picture will draw well. It pleased.—B. C. Brown, Temple theatre, Viroqua, Wis.—General patronage.

LAVENDER AND OLD LACE, with a special cast.—Played this Thanksgiving Day. As good as it is old. We make more money on Hodkinson pictures than any others. Nice people to deal with. They appreciate your business. Try them, Brother.—SNYDER BROS., Gem theatre, Earlville, Ia.

French Heels, with Irene Castle.—A good program picture and Irene Castle a clever little actress. Good advertising matter with this one.—Snyder Bros., Gem theatre, Earlville, Ia.—Neighborhood patronage.

No Trespassing, with Irene Castle.—Very good, but not in a class with Slim Shoulders.—J. B. Laughlin, Bart’s Mecca, Midland, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Married People, with Mabel Ballin.—There was nothing much to this. Just a very ordinary picture.—Ralph R. Gibble, Grand theatre, New Hamburg, Ont., Can.—Neighborhood patronage.

Down Home, with a special cast.—A very good picture. Will please most of them.—J. W. Andresen, Rialto theatre, Cozad, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Slim Shoulders, with Irene Castle.—A very well produced and society drama that has nice settings, fine clothes and a few good thrills that appeal to the better class of patrons.—B. C. Brown, Temple theatre, Viroqua, Wis.—General patronage.

Free Air, with a special cast.—Six of our customers must have frozen their ears or something because only thirteen showed up for this and although one fellow kicked out a windowing the floor because he got overenthusiased over the picture.—J. L. Meyers, Liberty theatre, Ixevs, Ill.—Small town patronage.

God’s Crucible, with a special cast.—You will find it a good theatre, here, although a trifle long. Storm seems very realistic. Drew well.—Ralph R. Gibble, Grand theatre, Harrisburg, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Light in the Clearing, with a special cast.—This is a mighty fine picture. I don’t see why it hasn’t made a hit. It’s wrong personed but we’ve done business. A live wire with a big house could clean up.—G. M. Elkins, Grand theatre, Logansport, Ind.—Transient patronage.

Lichtman

Thorns and Orange Blossoms, with a special cast.—This picture stood up very well in the coldest weather that we have had in years. Good picture from well known book and play.—Ralph A. Wettstein, Merril theatre, Milwaukee, Wis.—General patronage.

Shadows, with Lon Chaney.—It is a very good picture and well acted, but is just one of those that just don’t fit in. The comments on it were all to the good.—L. V. Feldman, Orpheum theatre, Pipestone, Minn.—General patronage.

Metro

Quincy Adams Sawyer, with Blanche Sweet.—A very good attraction which drew no more for me than for Friend Meyer at Hamilton. Still claim it is worth while playing and boosting strong, as it will certainly be appreciated if you can once get them. Sterling theatre, Great Falls, Col.—General patronage.

Hearts Aflame, with a special cast.—A positive wow! Story, cast, wallop, everything that means success. Go after it. The Hodkinsons are not as good as they might be, but tell your people in your own words that here’s something real. More power to Reginald Barker.—Larry Hayes, Dawn theatre, Chillicothe, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Trifling Women, a Rex Ingram production.—The title gets them in and the picture pleases most of them, but it’s not a big picture by any means. Buy it watch your step or you will be oversold. Not a “Four Horsemen” by any means.—Steve Farrar, Orpheum theatre, Harrisburg, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Trifling Women, a Rex Ingram production.—This was a good production—we sold well and well deserve the box office disappointment. Rex Ingram’s pictures don’t go over in this town.—D. W. Bieler, Newport, Ky.—Neighborhood patronage.

Enter Madame, with Clara Kimball Young.—Oh, what a joke. Madame entrance and Madame exit. No better gives the manager a break. The Hands of Nara and this one will be enough Clara Kimball Young’s to last me a life time. Boys, look before you buy.—Steve Far-Enter Madame, with Clara Kimball Young.—Just a program picture. I did very poor business and patrons dissatisfied.—T. W. Young, Jr, Frances theatre, Dyerburg, Tenn.—General patronage.

Enter Madame, with Clara Kimball Young.—People seemed to like it. Did not draw.—K. J. Ugly, Strand theatre, Whitewater, Wis.—General patronage.

Kisses, with Alice Lake.—Good little program picture, but no pulling power. Photos killed business.—G. E. Johnson, Lincoln theatre, Sterling, Ill.—General patronage.

Alias Ladyfingers, with Bert Lytell.—If you can get in on this one it will please. My people refuse to turn out to see this star.—W. E. Elk, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Turn to the Right, a Rex Ingram production.—Special is right. An excellent picture. 100 per cent. They don't make them any better, and I lost money on it. Can you believe it?—Ralph L. Gribble, Grand theatre, New Hamburg, Ont., Can. Neigh.—General patronage.

Turn to the Right, a Rex Ingram production.—As good as they make 'em. We have never had a better one on our screen. Advertised well, but not more than price of picture. Couldn't pull them out Christmas week. Play it, boys; price is right.—Snyder Bros., Gem theatre, Earlville, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Turn to the Right, a Rex Ingram production.—Go after it. You can't go wrong. Let's have more like this.—Ar- row theatre, Broken Bow, Okla.—General patronage.

Turn to the Right, a Rex Ingram production.—A real picture. Pleased all who saw it. Business light on account of the severe cold and stormy weather.—R. C. Brown, Temple theatre, Viroqua, Wis.—General patronage.

The Conquering Power, a Rex Ingram production.—I do not see this one myself, and my patrons came out and told me that it was good. I did not look for this at all from the looks of the advertising matter, but it pleased most all of them. Attendance fair. Advertising six and lobby.—A. Mitchell, Dixie theatre, Rus- selville, Ark.—Small town patronage.

The Right That Failed, with Bert Lytell.—Fair picture. Fair business.—G. Strasser Son, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Right That Failed, with Bert Lytell.—This one is good. Had many good compliments on this one.—C. H. Simpson, Princess theatre, Millen, Ga.—General patronage.

Sherlock Brown, with Bert Lytell.—Fair program picture. Good star that hasn't been in a real picture for a long time.—G. E. Johnson, Lincoln theatre, Sterling, Ill.—General patronage.

Don't Write Letters, with Garrett Hughes.—War drama.—Fair business.—G. Strasser Son, Emblem theatre, Buf- falo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Five Dollar Baby, with Viola Dana.—Pleased a large house on a free show given by the Chamber of Commerce.—K. J. Uglow, Strand theatre, Whitewater, Wis.—General patronage.

Peacock Alley, with Mae Murray.—Wonderful with the accent on the entire "wond." Filled the house to capacity and pleased 100 per cent. Only one mistake I made—looked for one night only.—A. C. Collins, Idle Hour theatre, Ridgerville, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Peacock Alley, with Mae Murray.—Went over fine in spite of the epidemic of flu in town. Audience well pleased.—Nettie M. Sinderson, Mystic theatre, Alhion, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The Prisoner of Zenda, a Rex Ingram production.—Very good picture, but did not pull very well. Paid too much and lost money.—C. E. Johnson, Lincoln theatre, Sterling, Ill.—General patronage.

The Prisoner of Zenda, a Rex Ingram production.—A good picture from any angle, but an awful flop at the box office. They simply would not come and see it. Used every known way of advertising. One of the worst flops of the year for Warner's, your step—Steve Farrar. Orpheum theatre, Harrisburg, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Four Horsemen, a Rex Ingram production.—Fine. A sure money get- ter. People came out to see this one.—Nettie M. Sinderson, Mystic theatre, Alhion, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The Four Horsemen, a Rex Ingram production.—Oh, boy, this one pulled like a mustard plaster. Played it two days and cleaned up. If you need a little extra change just play this one. Any ex- hibitor that doesn't play this one is losing money.—C. H. Simpson, Princess theatre, Millen, Ga.—General patronage.

Woman's Hate, with Alice Lake.—Photography very bad; first four reels foggy, last two reels so dark you cannot tell one actor from the other. Picture may be all right, but we could not see anything but fog and darkness.—C. H. Simpson, Princess theatre, Millen.

The Four Horsemen, a Rex Ingram production.—To run this picture, once it gives your house prestige. If you don't make any money on this special, you surely will get the mouth to mouth ad- vertising.—A. Berger, Star theatre, Jasper, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Stoke of Midnight, with a special cast.—Played on this floor as a special and said they wouldn't pay one cent to see it. We had a few of them in the first night, but the second night we couldn't get enough to pay for the ticket. Op- tim, Family theatre, Attica, N. Y.—General patronage.

Paramount

The Home and Broke, with Thomas Meighan.—Meighan's best picture to date. Just a fair box office attraction for me, but the weather during the run was tol- lable. Patronage keen.—Raymond G. Frankel, Hippodrome theatre, Newport, Ky.—Neighborhood patronage.

Black Horse and Broke, with Thomas Meighan.—One of the best pictures for a small town I have ever played. Lots of people liked it better than Munsal-ughter. But this, another one, had plenty of advertising.—Russell Armentrout, K. P. theatre, Pittsfield, Ill.—General patronage.

FIND THE WOMAN, a Com- politan production.—Very good. Used this on "Community Day." This is the best idea I have gotten from the HERALD. Look up your back numbers and read about it. It took two or three weeks to get it going but it is beginning to show results. I use a drama, THE TIM- BER QUEEN and AESOP'S FABLES.—Mrs. W. M. KIMBRO, General theatre, Oxnard, Calif.

Ebb Tide, with a special cast.—Fair picture. Kirkwood has very poor part and story drags out too long. Some good scenic shots, but picture not up to expectations.—J. Lytell, Young, St. Lytell, Shakespearian drama which Export & Import control in America and Canada. It was produced in Germany by Ben Blumenthal and David P. Howells. Emil Jannings has the title role.
to the Paramount standard. Should go big in bigger cities.—J. Carbonell, Monroe theatre, Key West, Fla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The World's Appliance, with Bebe Daniels.—Bebe does more acting in the picture than all others put together. A good picture, but do not pay too much for it.—T. W. Young, Jr., Frances theatre, Dyersburg, Tenn.—General patronage.

The World's Appliance, with Bebe Daniels.—Booked for two nights. Pulled it after the first which speaks for itself. Lack Tiller, Temple theatre, McCook, Neb.—General patronage.

Kick In, with a special cast.—As a crook melodrama it is far and away above the average. Do not remember ever seeing a better crook picture. Business built up for three days, proving word-of-mouth advertising was favorable. Opposition, The Hottentot.—Sterling theatre, Greeley, Colo.—General patronage.

The Pride of Palamar, a Cosmopolitan production.—Pleased 95 per cent of my patrons. Can't see why the critics panned this. George Tiller, Temple theatre, McCook, Neb.—General patronage.

Burning Sands, with a special cast.—Actually believe it compares with The Sheils. Did a good business and pleased the folks in this burg. A good bet for me. Try it.—F. W. Horrigan, McDonald theatre, Phillipsburg, Mont.—Mining town patronage.

Burning Sands, with a special cast.—Not a wonderful picture, but good enough for the average house. Had a novel advertising campaign, therefore did good business. Ran it two days.—H. Van Buskirk, Temple theatre, Mishawaka, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Singed Wings, with Bebe Daniels.—A poor picture with just a fair cast and just fair direction. Very few patrons pleased.—F. W. Horrigan, Temple theatre, Newport, Ky.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pink Gods, with Bebe Daniels.—Just a program. Satisfied 50 per cent. —Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

When Knighthood Was in Flower, with Marion Davies.—A real feature in which Miss Davies does real acting. The entire cast does well. Same expenditure in a big modern play would draw better. Miss Davies costume play not bringing anyone near expected box office returns.—Rosenfeld, Hopp & Co., Fort Armstrong theatre, Rock Island, Ill.—General patronage.

The Loves of Pharaoh, with a special cast.—Paid $12.50 for this piece of cheese and got it for $8.00. Personally I and my patrons thought it was rotten. Paramount should pay you at least $50.00 to run it. Stay away from it. —F. W. Horrigan, McDonald theatre, Phillipsburg, Mont.—Mining town patronage.

The Valley of Silent Men, a Cosmopolitan production.—Remarkable scenery makes a very good program feature. It doesn't follow book very closely. On the whole it will please very well.—Bert McDonald, Temple theatre, Eureka, Ill.—General patronage.

Nice People, with a special cast.—Better than average program feature. Good enough, but not special. Drinking and hell-raising done in picture. Pretty good box office attraction.—F. W. Horrigan, McDonald theatre, Phillipsburg, Mont.—General patronage.

The Woman Who Walked Alone, with Dorotha Dalton.—An excellent picture in which Dorothy Dalton and Milton Sills are splendid. Picture can not be beat like this right along.—L. V. Feldman, Orpheum theatre, Pipestone, Minn.—General patronage.

Anna Ascends, with Alice Brady.—Much, much better than we expected. Sustains interest throughout. Cannot recall seeing a better vehicle starring Miss Brady. As a program bill, above the average.—Sterling theatre, Greeley, Colo.—General patronage.

Manslaughter, a Cecil B. DeMille production.—Thomas Meighan never amounted to much here until this picture came along. Ran it three days to very good business.—H. Van Buskirk, Temple theatre, Mishawaka, Ind.—General patronage.

Manslaughter, a Cecil B. DeMille production.—One of the best pictures we ever played. Pleased all.—Reed & Son, Palace theatre, Wisconsin Rapids, Wis.—General patronage.

Manslaughter, a Cecil B. DeMille production.—It's a dandy and drew in spite of severe cold weather. Manslaughter is the best thing I've run this year. It was a good bet for me. Try it.—F. W. Horrigan, McDonald theatre, Phillipsburg, Mont.—General patronage.

The Man From Home, with James Kirkwood.—Better than most so-called specials from other firms. Scenery wonderful.—R. E. Siebert, World theatre, Mineral Point, Wis.—General patronage.

Thirty Days, with Wallace Reid.—Like all of his pictures, magnificent. Public should and does mourn the great star for he was a brilliant entertainer.—J. Carlton, Monroe theatre, Key West, Fla.—General patronage.

Thirty Days, with Wallace Reid.—Pulled in one good house. Believe the people came as a matter of respect for Wallace. This is the type of picture they liked him in.—Russell Armettrout, Key West, Fla.—General patronage.

Thirty Days, with Wallace Reid.—Wally Reid has become more popular than ever since his death. This picture is only fair. Drew the best of any of Reid's productions.—E. Fraenkel, Temple theatre, Newport, Ky.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Top of New York, with May McAvoy.—Good program picture that appeals especially to women and children.—Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—General patronage.

Fool's Paradise, a Cecil B. DeMille production.—One of the best and liked by nearly everyone. DeMille in a class by himself. We as well as our patrons think his pictures better than any others.—R. E. Siebert, World theatre, Mineral Point, Wis.—General patronage.

The Inside of the Cup, a Cosmopolitan production.—Wonderful production. Did good business. Rev. Neil preached a sermon on 'The Inside of the Cup' on Sunday before my showing Monday and Tuesday.—James Nester, Rialto theatre, Lake Mills, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Heliotrope, with a special cast.—Quite old, but a good picture and liked by most of my patrons. Print in good condition.—P. G. Held, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Whistle, with William S. Hart.—The crowd came out to see O'Malley of the Mounted, but Paramount, running true to form, slipped us this sub-sister. Four subs on a twelve picture contract. Brothers, this is a poor deal, yet if we tried to break our side of the contract—O ritch, what's the use? Fahney & Elson, Electric theatre, Curtis, Neb.—Small town patronage.

White Oak, with William S. Hart.—A good seven-reel Western that drew well and gave my patrons all the action of wild and woolly atmosphere they could ask for. They seemed to like it.—B. C.

EXHIBITORS HERALD  March 17, 1923

Brown, Temple theatre, Viroqua, Wis.—General patronage.

Life, with a special cast.—Well received.—Levi G. Durepo, Browne theatre, Limestone, Me.—Small town patronage.

Life, with a special cast.—This pleased all who saw it—but did not attract at box office. Extremely bad weather partially responsible.—H. G. Sweet, Royal theatre, Royal Center, Ind.—Small town patronage.

O'Malley of the Mounted, with William S. Hart.—One of Hart’s best with a missional mystery action.—James Nester, Railto theatre, Lake Mills, Iow.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Easy Road, with Thomas Meighan.—A dandy program picture. The photography in one was excellent. Print in No. 1 condition.—P. G. Held, Sterling theatre, Fairmount, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Boomerang Bill, with Lionel Barrymore.—Fair. Carries a good moral.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Law and the Woman, with Betty Compson.—A good program picture. Satisfied.—Clifford L. Niles, Grand theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.—General patronage.

The Law and the Woman, with Betty Compson.—Excellent mystery mystery serial story with many tense moments which will hold interest of your audience. Name is good drawing card. Admission ten and twenty-five cents.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Bonnie Briar Bush, with a special cast.—No good, boys. Stay away from this. No story, no star, no nothing, but a lot of long-haired lords. No action. Burlesque film.—P. O. Roby, Latona theatre, Williamsburg, Iow.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Bonnie Briar Bush, with a special cast.—A pretty Scotch picture, but not enough action to make it interesting.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Sheik, with Rudolph Valentino.—A good picture. Give us more like it. A 100 per cent picture. No kicks on this one. Audience well pleased. Boys, if you haven’t seen it, see it. It can’t go wrong.—Earl Somerville, Opera House, Raymond, Minn.—General patronage.

The Sheik, with Rudolph Valentino.—Same story as all exhibitors, good picture. It did not draw for me, but weather was cold and picture is old. Print from Kansas City in first-class condition.—W. H. Hardman, Royal theatre, Franklin, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Exit the Vamp, with Ethel Clayton.—While not new, I know there are thousands who have not used it and I hope they will read this. The best Ethel Clayton ever made and it advertised right will make you money.—Mrs. W. M. Kimbro, Greenland theatre, Greensboro, Ga.—Small town patronage.

Exit the Vamp, with Ethel Clayton.—I find all Paramount stuff O. K. Good prints, good service and good pictures. Heirloom Clayton with their sliding scale of prices.—R. D. Taylor, Bourbon theatre, Bourbon, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Miss Lulu Bett, with Lois Wilson.—An excellent offering with big cast. Picture should be big drawing card, but fell flat. Please those who saw it. Admission ten and twenty-five cents.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hawthorne of U. S. A., with Wallace Reid.—Nothing to rave about. Will Scene from “Just Like a Woman,” Grace Haskins production issued by W. W. Hodkinson on March 18 with George Fawcett and Ralph Graves in the cast.

please the Reid fans. I played a two-reel Campbell comedy with this and the show pleased. Admission ten and twenty-five cents. Print in fair condition.—P. G. Held, Sterling theatre, Fairmount, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Young Diana, with Marion Davies.—This picture was favorably commented on by all who saw it. The only part that was not liked was the dream. Otherwise richly staged and costumes beautiful.—M. J. Babin, Fairyland theatre, White Castle, Ia.—General patronage.

The Little Minister, with Betty Compson.—A picture every theatre should run. Received many comments on same. People who seldom come to “the movies” came to see this one. Wish there were more like it.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Enchantment, with Marion Davies.—Here is a good comedy. Picture was drawn for me, and a picture that has some real work in it, although it might have been made shorter.—E. E. Gailey, Crystal theatre, Wayne, Neb.—General patronage.

Don’t Tell Everything, with a special cast.—A good program picture, but not a special. Please, but they did not enthuse over it.—Clifford L. Niles, Grand theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.—General patronage.

Don’t Tell Everything, with a special cast.—As good a picture as can be bought, with a cast that is hard to beat. Plenty of fine clothes and good acting.—Roy Dowling, Ozark Theatre Co., Ozark, Ala.—General patronage.

Borderland, with Agnes Ayres.—No good for small town. Beautiful picture and that’s all.—W. T. Hayes, Dreamland theatre, Providence, Ky.—General patronage.

Borderland, with Agnes Ayres.—A good picture with a big moral lesson which made for the older people, but not liked by younger class.—L. V. Feldman, Orpheum theatre, Pipestone, Minn.—General patronage.

Sham, with Ethel Clayton.—Played this to poor business on account of miserable weather. However, seemed to please the few who saw it.—H. G. Sweet, Royal theatre, Royal Center, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford, a Cosmopolitan production.—An excellent deep picture with a good moral. This one is a sermon. It will keep the audience in suspense until the end.—Clifford L. Niles, Grand theatre, Oskar, Ala.—General patronage.

Beyond, with Ethel Clayton.—Her pictures are always good.—General patronage. R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

After the Show, with Lila Lee.—Pleased 100 per cent. Lila Lee has the world beat as a local with tremendous publicity.—D. F. Wolfe, Princess theatre, Lansing, Iow.—Neighborhood patronage.

One Glorious Day, with Will Rogers.—A good, clean, refreshing different. Good comedy, although I like Rogers better in wild and woolly stuff.—Ralph G. Rober, Grand theatre, New Hamburg, Ont., Can.—Neighborhood patronage.

Just Around the Corner, a Cosmopolitan production.—Good picture but did not draw.—W. H. Hardman, Royal theatre, Frankfurt, Kan.—Small town patronage.

The Bonded Woman, with Betty Compson.—Very good, but business poor.—One of extreme cold weather.—D. F. Wolfe, Princess theatre, Lansing, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The World’s Champion, with Wallace Reid.—This is a good picture, but disappoints.—If it is not a success, I think there’s a chance, but there isn’t any. It’s fairly funny, but the butler draws all the laughs.—Ralph G. Rober, Grand theatre, New Hamburg, Ont., Can.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Daughter of Luxury, with Agnes Ayres.—Created no unfavorable comment, neither did the picture. It proved very satisfactory, however. Ayres not strong enough card for individual star to make people remember her individuality. Played this picture to twenty and ten with Fun From the Press and The Jungle Goddess.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Cleveland, Miss.—General patronage.

White Oak, with William S. Hart.—A good Western picture. Most people liked it.—I. H. Hart, Grand theatre, Franklin, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Rent Free, with Wallace Reid.—Very poor Reid. Patrons disappointed.—Clifford, Niles, General patronage, Anamosa, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Full House, with Bryant Washburn.—A good comedy-drama. No kicks on this one.—Earl Somerville, Opera House, Raymond, Minn.—General patronage.

The Spanish Jade, with David Powell.—Nothing to write home about. Acting fails very did not like.—Ralph R. Gribble, Grand theatre, New Hamburg, Ont., Can.—Neighborhood patronage.

Three Word Brand, with William S’ Hart.—A good Hart that pleased.—Clifford L. Niles, Grand theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.—General patronage.

Always Audacious, with Wallace Reid.—This is one of the very nice pictures, very well directed for a dual play. Patrons please.—Ralph R. Gribble, Grand theatre, New Hamburg, Ont., Can.—Neighborhood patronage.

Three Live Ghosts, a Cosmopolitan production.—Pleased all. A good comedy.—Clifford L. Niles, Grand theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.—General patronage.

A Real Sea Drama

STARRING

WALLACE AND NOAH

BEERY

Right now dramas of the sea are having their greatest vogue—in magazines and books as well as in pictures. Look around for yourself and you'll find proof of this—which means that the man who books a sea drama RIGHT NOW is a live wire playing into the hands—and cash pockets—of an eager public—it means that he's letting the grass grow under the other fellow's feet. Here's YOUR chance to book a REAL sea drama—a sea drama starring the two greatest character actors on the screen. Grab it while the grabbing's still way above par—NOW!

Holt.—This one gave entire satisfaction. Has all that goes to make a good picture.

Mr. Huckstein, Tennesseon Amusement Co. —It is too much for the price.

Her Own Money, with Ethel Clayton.—Only a fair everyday picture. Acting very good; story quite interesting. Will please the ladies.—Ralph R. Grisbee, Grand theatre, New Hamburg, Ont. Can.—Neighborhood patronage.

Civilian Clothes, with Thomas Meighan.—A good picture with a good star. Everything good box office, but with potatoes at twenty-five cents a cwt. to the farmer it needs even more than Thomas Meighan to pull them in in the terrible slack theatre, Hawley, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

At the End of the World, with Betty Compson.—No kicks at all on this one. Everyone pleased, both old and young. Business off for Saturday on account of heavy rains, but those that came were pleased.—Roy L. Dowling, Ozark theatre, Ozark, Mo.—General patronage.

White and Unmarried, with Thomas Meighan.—Personally thought it not much of a story, but many others were pleased for the price. time, but several patrons stopped on way out and said, "It was a good show. A long show." Very good, so you may draw your own conclusions. You will get no kicks at least. Maybe the two-reel comedy and Chat put it over. Will make it a per cent. —Umbrella theatre, Bricelyn, Minn.—General patronage.

Pathé

Dr. Jack, with Harold Lloyd.—Record business on this production. Better than Grandma's Boy.—Louis R. Markum, Tuxedo theatre, Ind anapolis, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Dr. Jack, with Harold Lloyd.—No deep stuff, but just what the public wants,—so I'm repeating on A Sailor Made Man. We did fine on this subject.—E. E. Bail, State theatre, Uhrichsville, Ohio.—Small-town patronage.

Dr. Jack, with Harold Lloyd.—Picture was well liked and majority liked it better than Grandma's Boy. Did a nice business on it.—Raymond G. Frankel, Hippodrome theatre, Newport, Ky.—Neighborhood patronage.

Dr. Jack, with Harold Lloyd.—I mailed cards and put out big lobby. This is the best comedy I ever ran. I doubled my profits. Don't be afraid of this one.—Kenney Lloyd, Spad theatre, Diers, Ark.—General patronage.

Dr. Jack, with Harold Lloyd.—The best comedy picture we have ever played. The audience laughed constantly. A clean entertainment that ought to fill the theatre of any exhibitor.—A. S. Widaman, Centennial theatre, Warsaw, Ind.—General patronage.

Dr. Jack, with Harold Lloyd.—Played this February 8 and 9th. Weather not favorable. Had several dollars show of Grandma's Boy, when beautiful weather prevailed. Dr. Jack is without doubt a wonderful entertainment. Had no reason in hysterics during entire presentation. It is one picture that is a continuous roar from beginning to end. Lloyd by all odds greatest drawing card in pictures today, but rental too big to allow exhibitor fair profit for time, efforts and additional advertising expense we went to for Dr. Jack. Just imagine Pathé will want an increase for Safety Last, judging from length (7 reels), but have resolved to stand pat on Dr. Jack and Grandma's Boy price, as our peak of business was reached on that and we know how to better judge prospective results now. Charged fifty and ten cents for Dr. Jack and used Pathé Review and Fox News.—P. F. Morris, Regent theatre, Cleveland, Miss.—General patronage.

Nanook of the North, with a special cast.—This is a fine picture if your patrons like educational pictures. Do not try to raise your admission price and it will please. Film in fairly good condition.—P. G. Held, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

NANOOK OF THE NORTH, with a special cast.—Without advertising this picture exceeded on regular night any feature shown in past two years. Received over 30 requests that it be held over for another night. Second night exceeded first.—ELMON A. GEN, ESTE, Firbor theatre, Friday Harbor, Wash.

Simple Souls, with a special cast.—We were the only souls for running anything a poor show. Say to Miss C. Baden, Gay theatre, Wilcox, Nebr.—General patronage.

Without Benefit of Clergy, with a special cast.—Nothing to it. Had a very good crowd and no one was pleased. Lay off of this one.—C. W. Tipton, New theatre, Manila, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Go Get 'Em Garringer, with a special cast.—Worse than nothing Nobody ever round out what the shooting was all about. Awful.—B C. Burden, Gay theatre, Wilcox, Nebr.—General patronage.

The Isle of Zoda, with a special cast.—An old special which is better in many ways than some of the new ones. It's a good buy if it exploited strongly.—G. M. Elkins, Grand theatre, Loganport, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Ruler of the Road (Pathé), with Frank Keena.—These Pathé pictures are good. We use them with serials and have not run into a bad one yet. These are far better than some features, and the price is reasonable. Try them for a filler.—Anderson & Weatherly, Gen theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Realart

Morals, with May McAvoy.—Good comedy drama and pleased an average crowd.—Ralph R. Grisbee, Grand theatre, New Hamburg, Ont. Can.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Homespun Vamp, with May McAvoy.—I find all the Realart pictures about the same. They will do for a program picture but I don't hear anywhere over them.—C. H. Simpson, Pemcess theatre, Millen, Ga.—General patronage.

Selznick

One Week of Love, with Elaine Hammerstein.—During two days of the coldest weather of the season this one got money. They all said, "Fine." Presented with a prologue. "At Dawn," usual advertising, Lobby.—Geo. W. Keys, Majestic theatre, Pittsburg, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

One Week of Love, with Elaine Hammerstein.—A beautiful, splendidly produced picture. Did not draw as well as expected, but this may be due to re-opening of gambling in Juarez and to local election excitement.—Will R. Winch, Wigwam theatre, El Paso, Tex.—Trans-plant patronage.

The Prophet's Paradise, with Eugene O'Brien.—Many good comments. Pleased almost entire house.—A. E. Collins, Idle Hour theatre, Ridgeville, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fighter, with Conway Tearle.—This is a good program picture and will suit most everybody. We ran it on a Sunday and did a good business with it as the ladies like this star. Print is in good shape and the photography good.—Crawford & Neary, Idle Hour theatre, Utica, Ill.—Small-town patronage.

Reported Missing, with Owen Moore.—This picture has been made for our audience. The best liked picture we played in 1922.—F. P. Selz, Queen theatre, Pilot Point, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Reported Missing, with Owen Moore.—The fastest comedy-melodrama I've ever seen. It's great and you can buy it right. Made me a piece of change. Book it.—F. W. Harrigan, McDonald theatre, Philiburg, Mont.—Mining town patronage.

EVIDENCE, with Elaine Hammerstein.—"Every day in every way her pictures are better and better."—E. P. SELZ, Queen theatre, Pilot Point, Tex.

A Divorce of Convenience, with Owen Moore.—I lay off this one. If you have it booked pay for it, but don't run it. People in our territory have a tendency to drop the picture they came out. We ran it on a Sunday to a packed house, but think we would have made more money if we had stayed dark.—Crawford & Neary, Idle Hour theatre, Utica, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Reckless Youth, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Good picture. Drew about like the rest of her pictures.—Herszog Bros.

by WYNDHAM GITTENS

Directed by J. W. HORNE

IN a luxurious photoplay which glitters brilliantly with the pure gold of matchless drama—a photodramatic gem of purest ray serene, born of sheer genius to shine warmly in the memory of the millions who will see it.

Here, gentlemen, is an example of cinematographic craftsmanship which will stand as a model of entertainment for some time to come. Never before has there been a bigger, better, finer, straight dramatic offering on the screen. It is a production that will win high praise from millions—and you know what that means to your box office. You'll give your patrons—and your till—the treat of their lives with—

One Exciting Night, a D. W. Griffith production, in its third week. Picture must be seen from first reel to be appreciated. Only 50% liked it—Raymond G. Frankel, Gifts theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio.—Transient patronage.

The Three Must-Get-Theres, with Max Linder. This burlesque on The Three Musketeers should have been in three sets, but was good, leaving one to wonder what the finish would have improved it. It overshadowed the feature.—Rosenthal, Hopp & Stowe street theatre, Rock Island, Ill.—General patronage.

The Secret of the Storm Country, with Norma Talmadge.—Just a picture. You couldn’t say it was poor, neither could you say it was good. Just in between and no one says anything. Selznick pictures are the poorest of the poor drawing cards for us.—J. L. Meyers, Liberty theatre, Ivesdale, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Referee, with Conway Tearle.—Not up to Tearle’s standard. However, will please the men.—F. P. Selz, Queen theatre, Pilot Point, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Orphans of the Storm, a D. W. Griffith production.—After putting on the biggest advertising campaign in history in this town I broke even on it at twenty and fifty cents, but got most of my trade from surrounding towns. Had big tent of revival and or would have cleaned up. It’s a wonderful picture.—Howard K. Allen, Rialto theatre, Harlingen, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Dream Street, a D. W. Griffith production.—Little old but good. I bought right worth playing it.—Walter Balbat, Grant theatre, Cicero, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pollyanna, with Mary Pickford.—As money getters for small towns these old United Artists pictures can’t be beat. If you have never run them, book them.—R. D. Taylor, Bourbon theatre, Bourbon, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Kindled Courage, with Hoot Gibson.—A good clean picture with some good acting and a good story. Print was a bit damaged in shipping.—Roy Dowling, Ozark Theatre Co., Ozark, Ala.—General patronage.

A Dangerous Game, with Gladys Walton.—Very good program picture that should please any audience. Simple little story, but acting and superb scenery and photography offsets any weakness.—Anderson & Weatherly, Gem theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Ghost Patrol, with a special cast.—An excellent picture. All we have to say is, “ Hear it if you can”—Roy Dowling, Ozark Theatre Co., Ozark, Ala.—General patronage.

The Kentucky Derby, with Reginald Denny.—A good picture for those who like Kentucky pictures. Also well for two days at regular prices. The horse race is good, but have seen better.—R. N. Navary, Pleasant Hour theatre, Verona, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Three Must-Get-Theres, with Max Linder. This burlesque on The Three Musketeers should have been in three sets, but was good, leaving one to wonder what the finish would have improved it. It overshadowed the feature.—Rosenthal, Hopp & Stowe street theatre, Rock Island, Ill.—General patronage.

Tess of the Storm Country, with Mary Pickford.—Picture played four weeks to a good business. Did not hear one knock during entire run. Mary’s greatest picture to date.—Raymond G. Frankel, Gifts theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio.—Transient patronage.

Orphans of the Storm, a D. W. Griffith production.—After putting on the biggest advertising campaign in history in this town I broke even on it at twenty and fifty cents, but got most of my trade from surrounding towns. Keep Your Eye on F.B.O.
Ugolow, Strand theatre, Whitewater, Wis.—General patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—A picture every theatre should run. Patrons well pleased. Played New Years Day. Picture good and a dandy print.—Snyder Bros., Gem theatre, Earlville, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—A very good picture of its kind. Acting and scenery fine, but it’s not as big as we were led to believe, and paid too much for it. Did not draw as our patrons liked others better.—R. E. Siebert, World theatre, Mineral Point, Wis.—General patronage.

The Scrapper, with Herbert Rawlins.—Although a good picture I don’t think it made much of an impression as we had shown two other Irish pictures a short time before.—J. L. Meyers, Liberty theatre, Ivesdale, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Trimmied, with Hoot Gibson.—Very good, but for some unknown reason had the luck this year. Didn’t break even. No fault of picture.—G. F. Redsike, Star theatre, Rygate, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Don’t Show with Herbert Rawlins.—Here is another of Universal’s good bets. Peased 95%. We ran it on a Tuesday night and did a good business with a big box-office. Had a bad one with this star yet.—Crawford & Neary, Idle Hour theatre, Utica, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Trouper, with Gladys Walton.—A mediocre picture. Not up to her former ones.—C. C. Clendenen, Amusio theatre, Marlinton, W. Va.—Small town patronage.

Afraid to Fight, with Frank Mayo.—Run this one: it’s the berries. Here is a real action picture, good from start to finish, will make a national hit. The ladies in your theatre should real tears one minute and scream with excitement the next. Ran it for benefit of American Red Cross.—Cowan & Bier, Idle Hour theatre, Utica, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Afraid to Fight, with Frank Mayo.—Pleased. Very good program offering.—N. F. Lobbl, Chimes theatre, Cedarburg, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Afraid to Fight, with Frank Mayo.—Very well, very good performance. Gave good satisfaction.—L. V. Feldman, Orpheum theatre, Pipestone, Minn.—General patronage.

A Delicous Little Devil, with Mac Murray.—Pleased patrons 100%. Received many compliments. These two stars are good, their billing cards for our theatre.—Edw. W. Werner, Windsor theatre, Canton, Ohio.—General patronage.

A Delicous Little Devil, with Mac Murray.—I sure got fooled on this one. It is just a bunch of junk that has been on the shelf for years and was taken down and sold for a special at a special price. Never received a hard up to sell junk like this.—L. V. Feldman, Orpheum theatre, Pipestone, Minn.—General patronage.

Man to Man, with Harry Carey.—This drew fairly well and fairly good. Print was O. K.—Olen Reynolds, Pearl theatre.

My Wild Irish Rose, with a special cast.—My patrons did not like it. Fell down second day’s run. Nothing to rave over.—Arrow theatre, Broken Bow, Okla.—General patronage.

Divorce Coupons, with Corinne Griffith.—Very good picture. Pleased everyone.—A. C. Holmes, Royal theatre, Ainsworth, Neb.—General patronage.

MY WILD IRISH ROSE, with a special cast.—Splendid picture, but O, the competition! Dance in the depot waiting room (how’s that for the Great Burlington Route), two lodges, basket ball game, one poker and three radio parties, band practice, but why prolong the agony. Somebody had to be it and drew the number.—FAHRNEY AND ELSON, Electric theatre, Curtis, Neb.

The Silent Vow, with William Duncan.—Wanted that you can book and be sure of pleasing all. Sold at a price so that exhibitors can make money.—C. W. Glass, Star theatre, Trenton, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Flower of the North, with Pauline Starke.—A very good picture that will please any audience.—J. Koopman, Amenia Opera House, Amenia, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

The Ninety and Nine, with a special cast.—Good picture. First day very poor business. Second day good business.—G. E. Johnson, Lincoln theatre, Sterling, Ill.—General patronage.

The Ninety and Nine, with a special cast.—This was first run picture and we packed them. Patrons came back the second time to see the picture. Exhibitors do not fail to buy this picture.—Katherine Dowling, Ark theatre, Loganport, Ind.—General patronage.

My Wild Irish Rose, with a special cast.—Bought this right. Used as special at increased prices. Picture well received and no adverse comment on account increased price.—Elmon A. Gendere, Trexler theatre, Friday Harbor, Wash.—Neighborhood patronage.

My Wild Irish Rose, with a special cast.—If they like Irish pictures this one will knock ’em cold, but as we have very few Irish here it was a flop for us. It’s a well made picture in every way.—Steve Farrar, Orpheum theatre, Harrisburg, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fighting Guide, with William Duncan.—Very good picture of comedy-drama type that is very interesting and amusing. Personally we did not think it as good as other Duncan pictures, but it pleased.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Scarlet Ring, with Alice Joyce.—A drama with a very good plot. Will hold interest all the way through. Six reels. A little old, but will entertain. Play it.—J. Koopman, Amenia Opera House, Amenia, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

You Never Know, with Earle Williams.—Very good. Played with Larry Semon in The Hick. Made a good program.
F. J. O'Hara, Community theatre, Elgin, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

No Defense, with William Duncan.—You can't go wrong on this picture. Book it and boost it. Watch them smile when they come out of your theatre.—C. W. Tipton, New Theatre, Manila, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Silver Car, with Earle Williams.—This is as good as most specials and can be had at a fair rental. Vitagraph is always willing to let the exhibitor have some profit. James Nester, Rialto theatre, Lake Mills, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Black Beauty, with Jean Paige.—Acting very good. Most excellent story. Pleased.—Taylor and Holt, Kamas Opera House, Kamas, Utah.—Neighborhood patronage.

Peggy Puts It Over, with Alice Calhoun.—Very good comedy-drama with some action and plenty of humorous situations. This will satisfy all ages. Put it all together and you have a good picture. Star is very popular with our patrons.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Son of Wallingford, with a special cast.—Go after it. The cheapest best picture run in years. Fine.—Arrow theatre, Broken Bow, Okla.—General patronage.

Dead Line at Eleven, with Corinne Griffith.—A good program picture. I played this with Larry Semon comedy to good business and pleased my patrons. Film in good condition.—P. G. Held, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

What's Your Reputation Worth? with Corinne Griffith.—An extra good picture with reasonable rental. Don't be afraid of it.—A. W. Sage, Masonic theatre, What Cheer, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Restless Souls, with Earle Williams.—Very good society drama that seemed to please all who saw it, but it did not draw. Story very good and acting good. Picture rather slow.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Single Track, with Corinne Griffith.—Fair program offering. Satisfied.—N. F. Lobel, Chimes theatre, Cedarburg, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

God's Country and the Woman, with William Duncan.—Good picture, but story is very much the same as A Woman's Sacrifice. Nevertheless it is a good picture. We thought the better of the two.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Rogue's Romance, with Earle Williams.—Passable. Valentino no drawing card.—N. F. Lobel, Chimes theatre, Cedarburg, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Rogue's Romance, with Earle Williams.—Well liked. Good business.—G. Strasser Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Woman's Sacrifice, with Corinne Griffith.—A fine picture of the North woods that is full of thrills and surprises. The story is fine and the star and support do good work, making a very pleasing combination.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Steelheart, with William Duncan.—Whether good or bad from a critic's point of view, it made all who saw it like it and talk about it. I would class it a good out-doors picture.—H. L. Burrid, Garrick theatre, Hawley, Minn.—
Neighborhood patronage.

Steelheart, with William Duncan.—
Good picture, good cast. I played this with a two-reel Senor comedy, making a fine program. Print in color. Held, Holcomb theatre, Nebr.—
Neighborhood patronage.

Steelheart, with William Duncan.—A very good picture. Audience well pleased. Held, Monument theatre, Quebec, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Silent Vow, with William Duncan.—Good Northwest Mounted police story. Picture is in color. Plenty action. —J. W. Anderson, Kialto theatre, Cozad, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Wid Gunning, Inc.—
Our Mutual Friend, with a special cast.
—As a money maker it’s the biggest lemon for me of the year, but is a very clever production and photography is fine. Will draw the better class of people. If you have enough run it.—Ralph Gribble, Grand theatre, New Han-bury, Ont. Can.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Blot, with a special cast.—Very good. True to life story with a good message and due to the roads and cold weather.—James Xester, Kialto theatre, Lake Mills, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Blot, with a special cast.—A fair picture that does not have any appeal whatever.
We cannot see where the name amounts anything.
Picture acted, but very slow.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Nebr.
—Neighborhood patronage.

The Girl from God’s Country, with Nell Shipman.—Nell Shipman sure good, but not much of a story, but got by.
Star pulls it over.—A. R. Bud, Opera House, Arlington, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Million Phil Kennedy, with Bill Patton.—
Very good Western picture in which Bill Patton does good work with U. S.
Deputy Marshall. Picture is fast moving and well acted, but not much on this if you run Westerns.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

SURE FIRE FLINT (Burr) with Johnny Hines.—Great picture. Presented 100 per cent.
Broke all previous box office records. You can not go wrong on this picture. Book it. Advertise it.—True Thompson, Capitel theatre, Dallas, Tex.
—Downtown patronage.

SURE FIRE FLINT (Burr), with Johnny Hines.—Good picture, but paid too much for it. Fair business.—G. E. Johnson, Lincoln theatre, Sterling, Ill.—General patronage.

LIFE’S GREATEST QUESTION (C. B. C.), with a special cast.—Poor program picture.
Fair business.—G. Strasser Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

LIFE’S GREATEST QUESTION (C. B. C.), with a special cast.—A nice program picture. Fair business, and you will have no kick.—G. M. Elkins, Grand theatre, Logansport, Ind.—Transient patronage.

LIFE’S GREATEST QUESTION (C. B. C.), with a special cast.—Just fair picture to run in any small town by cooperation with schools or any other society and both can make it bring good returns.—B. C.
Brown, Temple theatre, Viroqua, Wis.—
General patronage.

HEARTS OF THE WORLD (D. W. Griffith), with a special cast.—Old, good and a sure business getter. We played it on a 40-60 and had to run it 4 nights.—L. C.
Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—
Neighborhood patronage.

WHEN EAST COMES WEST (Canyon), with Franklin Farnum.—Good Western comic. Very much enjoyed.—G. Strasser,
Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—
Neighborhood patronage.

SCHOOL DAYS (Warner Bros.), with Wesley Barry.—A good picture. The school kids and should be played with the schools behind it. Don’t think that it is worth an advance in admission. It will give the good business.—J. W. Mullin, Feldman, Orpheum theatre, Pipestone,
Minn.—General patronage.

SCHOOL DAYS (Warner Bros.), with Wesley Barry.—In my opinion this is the best this star has made, from a box office standpoint. That is all we go by anyhow.—R. K. Taylor, Bourbon theatre,
Bourbon, Ind.—Small town patronage.

ISABEL (Davis) with House Peters.—
A very fine picture. Best Curwood I have had. Do not be afraid to book this one, as it will please.—J. W. Andresen, Rich-town theatre, Cozad, Nebr.—Neighborhood
patronage.

THE LONG ARM OF MANNISTER (Pioneer), with Henry Walthall.—Very good picture. Will please all patrons.—Katheryn Dowling, Ark theatre, Logansport,
Ind.—General patronage.

SMILIN’ JIM (Enterprise), with Frank-lyn Farnum.—We have played a good number of this series of Hoxie, Farnum, Fairbanks, and Harts and can honestly say that they are as good as a lot more expensive buys.—M. L. Stover, Bijou theatre, Logansport, Ind.—Transient
patronage.

ACROSS THE BORDER (Ayvon), with Big Boy Williams.—Very good Western.
Very well liked. Good business.—G. Strasser,
Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—
Neighborhood patronage.

BLIND CIRCUMSTANCE (Clark-Corneilus), with a special cast.—Fair picture. Poor business.—G. Strasser Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood
patronage.

WESTERN FIREBRANDS (Ayvon), with Big Boy Williams.—Good Western program—reel. Held, Bijou theatre, Laurel, Ind.—Small town patronage.

THE BETTER MAN (Ayvon) with Snowy
Baker.—Great picture. Poor business.
Our star not known here.—H. C. Jones, Bijou theatre, Laurel, Ind.—Small town
patronage.

FLESH AND BLOOD (W. P. E. C.), with a special cast.—Good picture, but sold too high. Just fair business.—E. G.
Johnson, Lincoln theatre, Sterling, Ill.—
General patronage.

THE HARSDEST WAY (Jean), with Fannie
Ward.—War drama. Fair picture. Poor business.—O. Strasser Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood
patronage.

LOVE WITHOUT QUESTION (Jans), with Olive Tell.—We know this is an old one and we are not sure why this exchange is hounding the exhibitor for dates.
The print we had was the worst print we had seen this season.—L. C.
Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—
Neighborhood patronage.

BIG STAKES (East Coast), with a special cast.—Exceptional good Western action all the way through. Direction excellent. This star very good drawing
EXHIBITORS

The Snitching Hour (Clark-Cornelius), with a special cast. — If rotten could be said of a picture it would fit this one. Played during the holidays and have heard nothing but kclks. — W. M. Ward, Starlight theatre, Corning, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Better Man (Aywon), with a special cast.—Very good. Second day better than first. Everybody pleased.—O. W. McClellan, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Last Chance (Canyon), with the cast of Farnum.—Stay off this one, people walked out. Would rather lose fifty dollars than run such a picture.—B. J. Brink, Opera House, West Point, La.—Neighborhood patronage.

White Masks (Smith), with a special cast.—Action the outstanding feature. Drew the element that likes such pictures. It seemed to be satisfied. Average Western comedy-drama.—E. L. Franck, Oasis theatre, Ajo, Ariz.—Neighborhood patronage.

Flesh and Blood (W. P. E. C.), with Leslie Howard.—Did not draw as well but was good picture. Pleased about 85 per cent.—E. L. Golden, Mt. Vernon theatre, Tallassee, Ala.—Neighborhood patronage.

Double 0 (Arrow), with Jack Hoxie.—This is a good clean Western. Will please any Western audience. They went out telling how good it was. Runs two days to a good business. Ten and twenty cents.—Wm. Thacher, Royal theatre, Salina, Kans.—General patronage.

Up the Law (Aywon), with Big Boy Williams.—One of the best western pictures ever exhibited here.—Phillips & Lauwers, P. & L. theatre, Jeannette, Ark.—General patronage.

The Midlanders (Federated), with Bessie Love.—Mighty good picture. Good plot and acting. Some excitement and good pictures, but not too much.—R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kans.—General patronage.

Nobody's Girl (Federated), with Billy Rhodet.—Not much to the plot, but a lot of action. A sea and land adventure picture that pleased.—R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kans.—General patronage.

The Blazing Arrow (W. P. E. C.), with Lester Cuno.—One of the best Western pictures I ever saw. Will get money where Westerns are liked.—T. W. Young, Vaudeville theatre, Dyersburg, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

When Dawn Came (Prod. Sec.), with a good cast.—This is a good offering. I ran this just before Lent. Everybody pleased. Made some money. Bought rights of.—Paulick, Paulick theatre, Muscoda, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Serials

Punisher (Pathé), with Pearl White.—Best serial we have ever run. Pearl White is greatest of serial makers. Business good.—Geo. W. Keys, Majestic theatre, Johnson City, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Around the World in Eighteen Days

Driven,” the motion picture of Southern mountaineer life which opened an engagement at the Criterion Theatre yesterday afternoon, is one of the most genuine films even shown on Broadway. Except for its ending, which is, in part, a concession to the popular taste for theatrical hokum, it is convincingly sincere. And, most important of all, it is intensely dramatic. It is dramatic because it is rooted in reality, in a true situation, and grows logically, inevitably, up from its solid ground.

And it is unusually well made. Charles J. Brabin, who broke away from the movie mill to do something he wanted to do in motion picture creation, went down into the Southern mountains to make this film. He sought a natural setting, he took competent players with him, and he grasped the fundamentals of life in the mountains before he used the camera. Then he made the picture. He brought technical skill and an instinct for cinematographic expressiveness to his task, and the result is a story in living pictures, pictures that you can’t get away from and are not likely to forget for a long time. There are scenes in “Driven,” that reach the summit of cinematographic power. It is impossible to imagine how the things they say could be more effectively told.

As the mount in the mountains, Emily Fitzroy gives a thrilling performance. Her life is dead. She is broken. Her face is forever set in weariness—except when it blazes in resolution. And when it blazes, the spectator sits up in his seat. He feels the fire. The others in the cast are also good. Elinor Fair, as the girl, is appealing, and Charles Emmett Mack, though not altogether a happy selection for his rôle, still gives it the essential character it demands. He weakens it chiefly in the close-ups, of which might be fewer. Burr McIntosh, as the father and George Bancroft as Lem are true to their type, and make themselves plain. Altogether, the acting is excellent.

Short Subjects

Aescop's Fables (Pathe).—This short subject seems to be making a big hit with the trade. Personally I think it the best short subject on the market.—P. O. Roby, Latona theatre, Williamsburg, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

_AESCOP'S FABLES_ (Pathe).—I want to say something in behalf of these Fables. I couldn't believe they could really bring patronage but am using one every "Commun- day." Mothers are beginning to bring their babies who are just beginning to talk. These kiddies in arms yell out, "Cat, cat." I say to myself, "Baby, call that cat all you please—it means money for me." Better get the children back.—_MRS. W. M. KIMBRO_, Greenwood theatre, Greensboro, Ga.

Fox Educational.—These one reel subjects are very fine, but have failed to produce any additional revenue for me—R. D. Taylor, Bourbon theatre, Bourbon, Ind.—Small town patronage.

_INTERNATIONAL NEWS_ (Universal).—Best news reel on the market. Have tried them all. Program must be complete without them. Interesting subjects and clean photography.—R. Pfeifer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Larry Semon Comedies (Vitagraph).—These comedies are consistently good. You cannot go wrong on them.—C. C. Clendenen, Ainusu theatre, Marlinton, W. Va.—Small town patronage.

Larry Semon Comedies (Vitagraph).—For genuine all slap-stick these are "Them." I can't seem to make them draw any added business for me, how-the advancement of the motion picture. This one had the inauguration of McKinley and you would not believe that a picture ever looked like this. This should please your patrons.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Boat (F. N.), with Buster Keaton.
—one of the best comedies. A feature.
—N. F. Loibl, Chimes theatre, Cedarburg, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Sailor Made Man (A.E.), with Harold Lloyd.—Personally this is the best laugh producer ever put on the silver sheet, but financially it was an utter failure.—R. D. Taylor, Bourbon theatre, Bourbon, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Let Her Run (Educational), with a special cast.—Snappy all the time and a real horse race. Most of Educational's are pleasing.—Jack Tiller, Temple theatre, McCook, Nebr.—General patronage.

Doing 'Em Good (Universal), with Neely Edwards.—As good a one reel comedy as we have ever seen.—Roy Dowsing, Ozark Theatre Co., Ozark, Ala.—General patronage.

Lox's Outcast (F. N.), with Ben Turpin.—Poorest two-reel comedy I have ever played. Nothing to it.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Society Hoboes (Universal), with Neely Edwards.—A good comedy with plenty of laughs. Print in good condition.—Roy Dowsing, Ozark Theatre Co., Ozark, Ala.—General patronage.

Jiggs and the Social Lion (Pathé).—Good. Has good drawing power and gives general satisfaction.—P. O. Roby, Latona theatre, Williamsburg, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Some Class (Universal), with Brownie.—Marvelous work by Brownie. Very pleasing.—N. F. Loibl, Chimes theatre, Cedarburg, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fly Cop (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Very good. Got many good hearty laughs. Semon seems to be one of top notchers.—P. O. Roby, Latona theatre, Williamsburg, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Golf (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—A feature comedy. One of his best.—N. F. Loibl, Chimes theatre, Cedarburg, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Playhouse (F. N.), with Buster Keaton.—Very good. One of Keaton's good ones. He always gets the laughs.—P. O. Roby, Latona theatre, Williamsburg, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Kickin' Fool (Universal), with a special cast.—Very good comedy.—N. F. Loibl, Chimes theatre, Cedarburg, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Chop Suey (Educational) a Christie comedy.—A very entertaining comedy. Well cast and photographed.—H. J. Longaker, Howard theatre, Alexandria, Minn.—General patronage.

A Sailor Made Man (A.E.) with Harold Lloyd.—Absolutely a knockout. You can buy it right. They'll sure talk about it for weeks. Buy it, boys, if you want to see the old groaners smile.—Snyder Bros., Gem theatre, Earlville, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Blazes (Educational), with Lige Conley.—One of the best comedies. It's a good thing some of the producers know how to make comedies.—H. J. Longaker, Howard theatre, Alexandria, Minn.—General patronage.

"A really splendid film. As artistic as anything yet produced on the screen. Whoever misses seeing this piece misses a film that he or she would have been glad to remember. It is gratifying to be able to recommend this picture as one of the finest we have ever seen!"

—N. Y. MORNING TELEGRAPH

"Among the very best, not only this season but all other seasons. In all respects it is a masterly work. Greatness is achieved. 'Driven' could be utilized to serve as a model for the great majority of cinema producers."

—N. Y. GLOBE

"Among the best comedies produced here in a long time. An unusual picture. A powerful story. Many thrilling moments. True to life. It is well worth seeing."

—N. Y. EVENING TELEGRAM

—N. Y. EVENING MAIL

"One of the really fine things, dramatically, which have been shown on Broadway screens this year. It is natural and human and moving; it is acted with exceeding grace and faithfulness."

—NEW YORK WORLD

"Fascinating and real. Mr. Brabin has done it perfectly. It is well worth seeing."

—N. Y. TRIBUNE
Does Your Theatre Need Re-Seating?

This question should be decided upon early, before this year's refurbishing season is upon you. Theatre patrons' comfort and the competitive value of good seating should be thoroughly considered.

The American Seating Company Theatre Engineering Department, with its fifty years of practical experience in theatre planning and construction, stands ready to solve your seating problems no matter how large or small.

A recent installation, covering an entire city lot, is the State-Capitol Twin Theatres, Union Hill, N. J. These two theatres are equipped with American Seating Company chairs.

This was the second largest order for theatre chairs in the world.

What more convincing testimonial could be given?

Theatre Construction and Equipment

Architecture of the Metropolitan

Designer of Sid Grauman's New Playhouse at Los Angeles Discusses Many Interesting Considerations in Construction of Big Theatre

By William Lee Woollett, Architect

As to the facts in regard to the Grauman theatre at Sixth and Hill streets, Los Angeles, would say that the theatre is built in response to the legitimate request of the owners that I should build for them the most profitable theatre in the world. Accordingly the owners of Aladdin's Theatre and all those who have been necessary to effect the completion of the order has been the establishment of a branch bank for Sid Grauman and the Famous Players-Lasky office on the twelfth floor of the Pacific Mutual Building.

With due regard for the wrath of thousands whose curiosity may no longer be whetted on the query, "When will Grauman's Theatre be finished?" the theatre has been finished. It is one of the largest theatres of America. The problem given to me was to build a theatre of a capacity approved to provide without sacrificing the friendly, close-in atmosphere sometimes attainable in a smaller house. The sight lines were to be as good or better than such and such houses, and the acoustics perfect. In regard to the latter and in order to meet the specifications it was necessary for me to throw aside the rule of thumb methods which have characterized the solution of acoustic problems throughout the entire history of America, and to go my way alone.

Evolve New Laws

Time is too short here, but suffice to say that an entirely new adaptation of the laws of acoustics have been effected in this house. Naturally, the owner's interest in this problem was intense, and every facility was afforded by the owner in the way of expert advice and consultation with other architects. I am pleased to say we did agree, and that now one can actually hear in the theatre, as one would in an out-of-door amphitheatre.

It is commonly understood that the waiting room of the Pennsylvania Station is the largest scale interior in the United States. This is true no longer, although the actual size of the waiting room in the Pennsylvania Station is larger than the auditorium of the new Grauman theatre.

Every seat in the house is in full view of the entire picture and the whole of the orchestra, and the organist, all of the time. The house has not been seated to capacity, that is to say, the city ordinances would allow a larger number of seats in the auditorium than have been installed there.

Ample Space Provided

Certain rows of seats have been eliminated in order to provide more ample circulating spaces. Like the Hippodrome in New York City, this theatre is provided with a platform for the orchestra which raises and lowers at the touch of an electric button. There is an additional raising platform for the organ console; these facilities are unique in so far as moving picture houses are concerned.

When we consider that they are taken in conjunction.

In regard to the lighting of this theatre, it is well within the bounds of truth to state that no theatre has attempted to install such an elaborate system. From the first Mr. Grauman's idea appeared to be that the last resources of modern electric science should be exhausted in order to perfect this plant. The unusual demands made upon the engineers have resulted in entirely new situations. For instance, in order to obtain mechanical efficiency and cheapness of overhead, the remote control system for the dimmers and other stage equipment have been devised. The switchboards alone for these devices and other like items have meant a cost of $65,000. These expenditures, however, figure out on the right side of the ledger when maintenance costs are compared with costs of other installations.

Describes Type of Architecture

In regard to the architectural style of the theatre I have merely to say that it is a serious attempt to conform practical reinforced concrete construction on our time to the precedence of good architecture. Naturally, a new medium, such as concrete, cannot be used in the faithful representation or for copying of any historic style of architecture. A Greek temple or an Egyptian mosque built entirely of Monolithic concrete would not represent any style of architecture. In any type of architecture which is alive and full of meaning for the day in which it is built, it is necessary that the architectural forms be adopted sympathetically and intelligently to the material of which they are made, just as the classic wood forms we find in Colonial architecture were adopted from forms which originated in the stone and marble buildings of antiquity. When these adaptations have been made unskillfully and immorally we have a transient style in architecture; when they have been made skilfully and with sufficient intelligence the new forms and new materials merge into a new style. When a new style of architecture satisfies the needs of both the practical and esthetic standpoint over a long period of time we have an architectural epoch. Back of a new style of architecture are the economic forces of the community. Is it cheaper to build this way or that in order to produce a given amount of utility, practical comfort, opulence or beauty?

Has Latest Stage Equipment

Behind the stage is another story. The best stage for the theatrical producer is an absolutely clear floor area with plenty of rigging facilities aloft. The stage of the Grauman theatre, Sixth and Hill streets, is equipped with the latest counter-weighing device, so that all curtains, stage sets, flies, borders, etc., may be shifted with the minimum of expense in physical labor. Anything from a comedy to a hippodrome show can be put on.

Construction of the Proscenium
Methods Recommended by the National Board of Fire Underwriters to Insure the Greatest Possible Element of Safety

CAREFUL construction of the proscenium wall, and efficiency in the operation of the curtain are important safety factors in theatres. Following a study of the matter the National Board of Fire Underwriters has made the recommendations herewith, with a view to reducing to a minimum hazards that result in loss of life and property.

A fire wall built of brick or concrete not less than 12 inches thick in any portion shall separate the auditorium from the stage and shall extend at least 1 feet above the stage roof, or the auditorium roof if the latter be higher. Any window in the structure above the auditorium which faces over roof of stage section when within 100 feet of the stage roof must be protected with fire shutters or fire windows. Above the proscenium opening there shall be a gird or other support of sufficient strength to safely carry the load. If a gird be used it shall be protected against fire by at least 4 inches of fireproof material with special provision to reinforce or support it.

The Proscenium Curtain
The proscenium opening shall be provided with a rigid fireproof curtain, built in conformity with the following specifications, or of equivalent in efficiency when approved by the superintendent.

The curtain shall have a rigid, rivet-jointed, steel framework. The front or audience side of the frame shall be covered with sheet steel of a thickness not less than .020 U.S. gauge. The back shall be covered with vitrified cellular asbestos boards at least 1 inch thick, or other material equally fire-resisting. Both coverings shall be securely attached to the framework so as to make the joint properly sealed. The curtain shall be designed to resist a wind pressure of 10 pounds per square foot of surface without flexure sufficient to interfere with its closing.

The thickness of the curtain shall be not less than 3 inches where the width of the proscenium wall opening is 30 feet or less; curtains for larger openings shall increase in thickness in proportion to the increase in width of opening they cover.

An asbestos roll of a diameter not less than one-half the thickness of the curtain shall be securely attached to the bottom of the curtain to form a smoke seal between the curtain and the stage floor. Fig. 1. The curtain shall overlap the proscenium wall opening at least 12 inches at each side of the opening and not less than 2 feet at the top.

Pressure Must Close Guides
The guide members at the sides shall be rolled steel shapes, none of which shall be less than \(\frac{3}{4}\)-inch thick, and shall be of such character as to form a continuous smoke seal from top to bottom, with a clearance of not less than \(\frac{3}{4}\)-inch. The guides shall be installed in such manner that in case of fire on the stage the pressure of heated gases against the curtain will act to close the guide joints tightly. Fig. 2. Provision shall be made to prevent the curtain from getting out of the guiding channel into which it shall project at least 12 inches. The proscenium wall shall have an offset at each side of the opening, so located and of such thickness and height as to be suitable for the attachment of one-inch thick disk shall be allowed at each edge of curtain to provide for lateral expansion. The wall over the proscenium opening shall be smooth and plumb to approximately the top of the curtain when it is down, and shall extend at least 12 inches for the rest of its height, thus leaving a bench along the line of the top of the curtain between which a smoke seal shall be formed. The seal may conveniently be provided by arranging for the edge of a rolled steel shape attached to the curtain to rest upon a trough of sand resting on the bench. Fig. 3.

No part of a curtain or any of the curtain guides shall be supported by, or fastened to any combustible material. The hoisting apparatus for the curtain shall be designed with a factor of safety of 8.

Suspension From Four Points
The points for curtain suspension shall always be an even number, but never less than four. Two of the suspension points shall be located at the extreme ends of the curtain, and the others may be placed at such points as best suit the design, but in no case shall the distance between any two points of support exceed 10 feet. Half of the cross-top, attached to these points shall lead to one set of counterweights and fall to another. The curtain shall be operated by hydraulic or other mechanism. If hydraulic mechanism is used, the water may be taken from either the hospital or sprinkler tank supply. If from the latter, the supply pipe for curtain mechanism shall be so located in the tank that it cannot reduce the quantity of water below the amount necessary to fulfill the sprinkler requirements. The device for controlling the curtain shall be capable of convenient operation from both sides of the stage and from the side galleries. The drop speed of the curtain shall be uniform and not less than 1 foot per second, but when the curtain is about 2\(\frac{1}{2}\) feet from the stage it shall automatically slow down so as to settle on the stage without shock. In addition to the regular operating mechanism, there shall be an emergency device which will cut off the power and allow the curtain to drop slowly.

The device shall be so arranged that it can be easily operated by hand from each side of the stage, under the stage, and in the side galleries. The device shall also be so designed that its operation will be controlled by fusible links located at each of the above-mentioned points.

Can Be Decorated
The audience side of the curtain may be decorated with a point in which no combustible material shall be applied or attached to the curtain.

Goldman to Build Big Theatre in St. Louis
William Goldman, former managing director of the Missouri theatre, owned by the Famous Players-Lasky organization, will erect a $1,000,000 theatre to be known as Goldman's St. Louis theatre at Grand Boulevard at the head of Delmar Boulevard. The house will seat 3,000 in a balcony and the first floor.

Plans for the new theatre have been drawn by Preston J. Bradshaw and Goldman plans to award the building contract to the Selden-Breck Construction Company. Recently, Goldman purchased the Kings theatre, Kingshighway, near Delmar Boulevard, which is being remodeled and decorated. It will reopen on Easter Sunday. The St. Louis theatre will have many innovations, including a stage and orchestra pit operated by hydraulic elevator device, improving lighting control, a smoking and lounge room equipped with market tickets, baseball score board, a publishing plant, a day nursery for children, special parking space and chauffeurs' room with telephone call system, and a special layer and box reserved for the American Legion, Daughters of the American Revolution, Missouri Historical Society, Spanish War Veterans, G. A. R., etc.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—In a speech before the chamber of commerce here, W. R. Crawley, one of the members, stated that Hopkinsville has opened its present amusement facilities and urged construction of a new theatre.

THIS EQUIPMENT ADAPTABLE TO SMALL AS WELL AS LARGE STAGES
Chicago, Ill.—Plans are being prepared by Architects Eherson and Liska, 212 East Superior street, Chicago, for a theatre at 790 Madison avenues for National Theatre Corporation.

Kansas City, Mo.—Boller Brothers, architects, 206 Ridge building, have made plans for a theatre to be erected under the supervision of Frank P. McClure, 4207 Holmes street, Kansas City, which will seat 1,000 and cost $150,000.

Hutchinson, Kan.—A movement has been started in Hutchinson by G. H. Seldhoff, of Wichita, for the election of a theatre here to cost $300,000.

Palisade, Colo.—Business men of Palisade are backing a movement to erect a new theatre in this city some time this spring.

Emid, Okla.—A new theatre for Emid is practically assured. It is reported that local capitalists headed by L. Weil & Son, who formerly operated the Criterion, which was destroyed by fire, are planning a house which will cost $80,000.

St. Louis, Mo.—Missouri Theatre Company of this city has increased its capitalization from $400,000 to $1,200,000 and will build large offices adjoining the Missouri theatre.

Johnston City, I1l.—Robert Cluster of this city plans to rebuild the American theatre here which was recently destroyed by fire.

St. Louis, Mo.—Architect Preston J. Bradshaw, International Life Building, St. Louis, has awarded contract for construction of the new $1,000,000 theatre for William Goldston to Selden-Brock Construction Company. The house will seat 2,500.

Troy, N. Y.—Alter being closed for several months the Majestic theatre here will be reopened by Mr. Deiches, who plans to spend about $12,000 remodeling the house.

Barnesville, O.—Work will be started soon on the new theatre which Joseph Modl will build in this city on West Main street. It will seat 1,000.

San Diego, Cal.—Sid Grauman, owner of Grauman's Million Dollar theatre, the Hollywood Egyptian, and the new Metropolitan, Los Angeles, has announced that he will erect a theatre and office building in San Diego to cost $3,000,000. The location has not been announced.

Los Angeles, Cal.—A theatre to seat 2,000 will be built in Hollywood by Joseph S. Schonberg, Sol Lesser, Mike and Abe Gore and Adolph Ramish, it has been announced.

King City, Cal.—Leslie Hables of this city, who owns property adjoining the Hotel el Camino in this city, will construct a first class theatre on the site.

Sawtell, Cal.—August J. Flynn and Robert M. Enright will conduct the Crown theatre in Sawtelle, have acquired a site 65 by 150 feet here on which they will erect a motion picture theatre to seat 900.

Bandon, Ore.—Work has been started on construction of new theatre for the Hartman family, owners of the Orpheum theatre here. The house will seat 750. George B. Purvis, Seattle architect, has prepared plans.

Exhibitors are invited to report to this department changes of ownership, new theatres planned, remodeling contemplated, openings, etc.

New Projects

New York, N. Y.—Architect M. W. Del Gaudio, 128 W. 42nd street, has completed plans for a theatre to be erected at 56th street, East of Fourth avenue, Brooklyn, for Pulch-Berger Company, 107 Park avenue, New York City. This house will seat 2,500 and will cost approximately $400,000. The exterior of the building will be finished in face brick, limestone and terra cotta, in design of the ancient Colonial period. The interior will be decorated in the French renaissance of the Empire period in a color scheme of gold, old rose and gray.

Toronto, O.—Architect John Quincy Adams, Southern Hotel, Columbus, O., has completed plans for a theatre for George Mannos of Toronto. The house will seat 1,000 and will cost $75,000 and will combine stage, business rooms and offices.

Washington, D. C.—Plans have been completed by Architect J. P. Brenot of this city for a theatre to be erected here by Liberty Theatre Corporation which will cost about $200,000 complete and will seat 950. The project is awaiting decision of the city on widening streets.

Sheboygan, Wis.—W. C. Weeks, 720 Ontario street, architect of this city, has prepared plans for a theatre for Rex Theatre Corporation, Sheboygan, which will cost approximately $90,000 and have a seating capacity of 1,000.

Byesville, O.—A theatre will be erected in Byesville by Brown & Cohnes of Cambridge, O. Plans have been prepared by Architect John Quincy Adams, care of Southern Hotel, Columbus. The house will seat 800.

Gets Distribution Of Powers Machine

In Eastern States

William H. Rabell, president of the Independent Movie Supply Company, 729 Seventh avenue, New York City, has been made exclusive distributor of Power’s projectors in New York state, New Jersey, north of Trenton, and part of Connecticut. In Connecticut Independent Movie Supply Company will distribute Powers’ equipment throughout the state but the right to sell exclusively is limited to a line west of 72° 30’. While the territory is limited in area it is regarded as an extremely important one because of the population and number of theatres it embraces. Mr. Rabell, who is a well known and successful motion picture equipment dealer, has been made distributor of Power’s as a well deserved reward for his success in handling Power’s projectors under the more limited rights herebefore granted by the Nicholas Power Company. Mr. Rabell is now putting into effect plans for going after business on a much larger scale. The Independent Movie Supply Company, in addition to its main office at 729 7th avenue, New York City, also has branches at Albany and Buffalo, N. Y., and New Haven, Conn., and other branches will be added if necessary. The firm also distributes General Electric motor generators, Superintendent screens and other well known motion picture equipment.

Ownership Changes

West Liberty, Ia.—W. Glenn Miller, formerly of Muscatine, has purchased the motion picture theatre here.

Lepanto, Ark.—E. B. Martin of the Empress theatre, Hayti, Mo., has purchased the Majestic theatre in this city and has renamed it the Princess.

Forest City, Ia.—J. P. Neist has sold his interest in the Forest theatre to M. A. Brown of Riceville, Ia.

Roberts Entertains
Paramount Pep Club

Members Hold Annual Event at New Exchange at 18th Street

The Paramount Pep Club was entertained on Monday evening by the personal appearance of one of Famous Players-Lasky's best liked stars—Theodore Roberts.

Mr. Roberts is appearing in a one act sketch at the Palace theatre this week, and the club attended the theatre en masse on Monday night, occupying the first two rows of seats. At the announcement of Roberts' act the club stood up and waved a big banner reading "Welcome Theodore Roberts, Paramount star. The stunt was planned by Bill Danziger, exploiter.

On Tuesday night the club held their annual get-together at the new exchange, 18th street and Wabash avenue. The evening was spent dancing, eating and looking at pictures.

On Saturday afternoon, March 3, the Chicago Chamber of Commerce were invited guests and looked at the latest DeMille production, "Adam's Rib," in the new exchange. Inasmuch as the story brings in the Chicago Chamber of Commerce and gives several excellent shots of their quarters, it was thoroughly enjoyed.

Moeller Asks Support of Local Exhibitor's League

A. J. Moeller, general manager of the M. P. T. O. A., appeared before the board of directors of the Illinois M. P. T. O. last week to request the support of the state body in making the exposition, which is planned in connection with the national convention in May, a success.

Glenn Reynolds moved that the wholehearted support of the state body be given. W. D. Burford seconded the motion.

Eddie Cantor at Stratford

The Stratford theatre never overlooks a bet. Last Sunday they had Eddie Cantor, star comedian of "Make It Snapppy" for two matinee performances. Eight of the leading feminine members of the cast assisted Eddie and they packed 'em in.

Don Liz of the Palace theatre, Biggsville, Ill., has taken over the Alamo theatre, Monmouth, Ill., and renamed it the Palace.

The Keystone theatre, manager Arnold Schaak, on Sheridan Road, played "Mighty Lax a Rose" last week and G. L. Sears, First National's city sales manager, stood outside to catch the bouquets. "That's my picture," he said modestly whenever anybody praised it.

Morrie Rubens, of the Princess theatre, Joliet, Ill., was married last week.

A. B. McCollum of the Blackstone theatre, Dwight, Ill., says he cleaned up with "Mighty Lax a Rose."

Fox Film Plays Day and Date in 47 Houses Here

"Silver Wings," starring Mary Carr, the Fox special which played at the Apollo theatre, New York, during the summer, has a Chicago record which it may boast of. During the week of Washington's birthday, the picture played day and date in forty-seven theatres representing a total seating capacity of 37,000.

Jack Schwartz, First National Salesman, is going to deduct a lot of money from his income tax report, because he forgot to include it in his expense account.

Harry Phillips is in bad with friend wife. All because we didn't include his name in the list of those present at "Dick" Healy's radio party. It seems to us that Harry was there teaching the other film boys how to play "alley goll." So there's your alibi, Harry.

L. A. Ulrich, of Pathe, has a new Jewett sedan special.

Percy Havel, former Pathe salesman, now an operator, ran for alderman of the Tenth Ward, but the votes failed to come out, 'er something.

E. L. Markley, Metro's chief clerk, is in Manistee, Mich., visiting his parents.

A. E. Smith of Associated Exhibitors was in Chicago last week.

W E came to talk business, but how can anybody have business on the brain with this wonderful California sunshine?" This was the feeling of Morris Katz and Max Balaban of Balaban & Katz when they reached the West Coast producing center from Chicago's frigid zone. They spent most of the first day getting "acclimated" as it were and had the above picture taken. Left to right are Morris Katz, Sol Lesser, President of Principal Pictures Corporation, and Max Balaban. Floyd Brockell, sales manager of First National in New York City, was also in Los Angeles at the time the Chicago franchise holders of his company were there and a number of important conferences were held.

GEORGE W. TAI, assistant manager Vitagraph, was in Decatur, last week, telling Harry Gramp about "A Front Page Story."

LOU DREHNER, Fox booker, is back on the job after a week's illness.

Gus Cook, of Dundee, Ill., the famous hunter, was in town last Thursday.

IZY GUMBINER was a Milwaukee visitor last week.

TOD SCHRANGER, of Universal short subjects, wants to be mentioned in our Col. Well, here you are, Ted.

The Park theatre, on North avenue, advertised "The Prisoner of Zenda" as a Zane Grey story, in its electric lights. Sir Hall Caine is liable to become peeved if he ever hears of it.

Joe Lyon, of Fox, made Hammond, Ind., and Gary, last week.

JIMMIE COSTEN of the Harvard, Drexel, Kimbark and seven other theatres around 63rd street, has established a downtown office in the old Famous Players building. It's easy now to book Costen. He's right in the midst of the film men.

Harry Mitchell, former manager of the Empress theatre, 63rd street and Halsted, has resigned to become general manager of Pantages, and has taken over the Mildta theatre at 32nd and Halsted streets.
HARRY MCDONALD, Hodkinson exploitation man, is in town on "Down to the Sea in Shingle."•• •

Ben Reingold, resident manager of Goldwyn, has arranged to give regular show at Goldwyn Thursday, "Mad Love" is the attraction this week. • • •

Dan Roche is still barnstorming. He made Detroit last week and went from there to Pittsburgh. Paramount's "Covered Wagon" is the reason.

Bill Danziger, Paramount's other exploiter in the Chicago territory, was in Rockford, Ill., last week helping Charlie Lamp put on "Racing Hearts" at the Palm theatre. He had Theodore Roberts interviewed over the long distance, and aroused the ire of a lot of females by saying that Agnes Ayres, star of the Paramount picture, made the statement that women were incompetent to drive autos, after thirty, because they lack stamina to weather the strain. Good copy, sez we.

Ed Schiere, of the Rialto theatre, Streator, Ill., called on friends in the Row last week. • • •

Ralph Simmons is talking about "The ex-Kaiser in Exile" these days. Says the Hodkinson picture is playing Kunishe's Capitol, Detroit, and the Butterfield circuit, as well as Tom Moore's Rialto.

Ernie Grohe, Fox city sales manager, has his own nifty office now, with a fancy lamp, ink wells, etc. You don't have to knock. Walk right in.

Paramount's Pec club gave a house-warming at the new Famous Players exchange last Tuesday night. • • •

Jacob Cohen has joined the Hodkinson sales force. He has the Wisconsin territory.

Everybody along the Row who can spare the time is going up to Frank Fischer's opening Thursday night, of the New Madison theatre, Madison, Wis., Tommy Greenwood, of Hodkinson Corp., is one who will help christen the new house.

L. A. Ulrich, formerly of Ryan and Ulrich, of the Ben Hur theatre, Chicago, is now selling Metro films.

The Lexington theatre, 115 South Crawford avenue, has been purchased by Bert Hashman. • • •

Frank Ishmail, Metro salesman, has sold his ice boat, a converted Ford guaranteed to make 40 miles an hour with the wind.

Miss Edna Frank, Metro booker, is back on the job, after fighting the flu for a week. • • •

At Sobler, First National's peppy exploiter, was in Peoria last week, putting over the "Hot Blood." He issued 10,000 life insurance policies, with the premium $50 paid up, to patrons of Dee Robinson's Madison theatre. The policy covered death from laughter.

Bill Kelroy is doing special work for Metro, exploiting their new product.

Bert B. Perkins, formerly in Chicago with Metro, is now in New York, assisting Jack Meador.

Max Schwartz's beautiful new Capitol theatre, Lawrence and Kedzie streets, opened Wednesday night with "Quincy Adams Sawyer." This is to be a 100 per cent Metro house, we understand.

The Bugk theatre, Clarence Wagner, manager, is another 100 per cent Metro house.

Frank Mantzke, resident manager of American Releasing Corp., has closed with the Lubliner & Trinz circuit and also the Ascher Bros. for "What Fools Men Are." It played the State-Lake last week.

Charles Perry, former exploitation manager for Goldwyn, is covering the Illinois territory for American Releasing.

Miss Ethyl Ubel is now writing the

They're Off to Join the Navy

An interesting and unusual story is attached to the accompanying picture. When Manager Lee Burnstine of the Capitol theatre, Springfield, Ill., previewed Harold Lloyd in "A Sailor-Made Man" his assistants, Ernest Tuttle and John Maxon, sat on either side of him. At the conclusion of the showing a naval recruiting officer happened in and asked Mr. Burnstine if he would permit the running of a slide inviting enlistments in the navy. Maxon and Tuttle spoke up simultaneously and declared, "We want to enlist right now."

And above is manager Burnstine bidding them good-bye before they go to join the fleet. Although the Lloyd film was designed primarily for entertainment purposes, in this case, at least, it helped swell the navy's personnel as well as the theatre patronage.

curley cues for Frank Mantzke, American Releasing manager, and Miss Zella Smith is handling bookings.

Hellerkamp and Hill (The H. & H. boys) have taken over the Rivoli theatre at Elston avenue and Montrose.

Hal Oliver is hot under the collar! All the trade papers reported Hal's arrival in Chicago but classed him as assistant to Al Sobler, whereas we went on record as an additional exploitation man, and inasmuch as Hal's been connected with Paramount, Goldwyn, R-C, and First National for some time he wishes he understood there is no difference in rank. And that's that.

Didja see Louis Kramer's cake and candle celebrating the first birthday of Film Booking Office?

Jack Hopey of the Orpheum theatre, Quincy, Ill., is on the West coast. Vacacion.

John Ditman, of the Lindo theatre, Freeport, Ill., was in the city last week. He called on First National and other exchanges.

Mrs. Katherine McKee of the Liberty theatre, Libertyville, has again taken the active management of that popular house.

Joe Horn is wearing a big smile these days. He signed up for a lot of First National pictures for the Spencer Square theatre; and that's not all, 'tis said.

The United Artists added Bill Brimmer to its sales staff last week, also Ben Edleman, formerly with F. B. O.

J M Jacobs is back in "Zone B," First National, which is East Illinois, in case you don't know.

Ben Todd is now on the West Side selling features for Universal, having left the suburbs flat.

Beau McElroy of Pittsfield and McElroy, is visiting Mrs. McElroy on the West Coast. Mrs. McElroy has been ill for about two years in California.

C. E. Bion, manager of First National exchange, has a new Hudson coach, which promoted him from the four to the six cylinder class.

Tidden Goes West

Fritz Tidden, recently on the road with one of the Shubert vaudeville units, for a number of years with various motion picture papers, passed through Chicago last Friday en route from San Francisco, where he has signed up with George Oppenheimer.

Fox Officials Here

J. Sichelman, manager of contract department, and E. B. McCaffrey, in charge of the mail order department and educational division, were callers at the local Fox exchange during the week.

Coogan in Chicago

Jackie Coogan grabbed a lot of space in the local papers again last week, when he stopped off here on his way back to the Coast. Al Sobler and Hal Oliver worked overtime thinking up stunts for the young First National star.

"Success"

Metro's Murray Garsson Special Is a Huge Box Office Bet With Surefire Angles
Reviewed by Roger Ferri

The public that this production is destined to please to the superlative degree is the same public that furnishes the foundation on with "Success," Murray Garsson's independent special which Metro will distribute, has been constructed. It's a huge, spectacular, human-interest structure built on a solid foundation that will carry any house through a week or more of financial profit. Here's a production that is greater in human—genuine interest—than "Humoresque," a production of the theatre—of its folks, of life behind the scenes, life at home, of life itself. You've been raving for mother pictures. Here's an artistically clever production that dwells on the masculine head of the family. It is a masterpiece in its line. Ralph Ince never did anything quite so human. This picture has a soul—a soul that will spell big money for the wise exhibitors.

Give the industry more pictures like "Success" and Lent and Christmas week will mean nothing in the show business. Here's a picture every reformer, every clergyman, every man, and woman—everybody—should see. This writer can't say too much for this production. It represents our model of picture the showmen and the public want. There is nothing superfluous. Everything is logical. It's a sweet story, a story of temperaments, a story of daddy who erred in his youth, only to lose wife, daughter—everything—and suddenly finding himself at the threshold of happiness only to find that his past was a drawback.

And climax! Nothing we have seen in a D. W. Griffith production stirred us so strongly, so effectively as the climax in "Success," genially worked up with a punch that hits straight between the eyes. The characters are humanly interesting. You recognize each and every one. They typify characters that are common. Their behavior is logic—but the story, ah, that's the big drag that will drag them into your theatre and hold them in their seats satisfied they have got their money's worth.

Our regret is that we can not go into details concerning the many, many features embodied in this production that make it as big as anything this writer has ever seen. As a production it is flawless. Insofar as cast is concerned one couldn't "ADAM'S RIB" has broken records in every city where it has been shown!

NEW YORK

"Adam's Rib" on its opening date took in 8,992 admissions. "Manslaughter" drew 8,939. It's now in its second week, doing capacity.

LOS ANGELES

In its first four weeks "Adam's Rib" beat "Manslaughter" for same period by $751. It's still doing capacity.

SALT LAKE CITY

Broke all records for attendance at Paramount Express Theatre. Showed to over 18,000 paid admissions in four days in 1,400 seat houses.

OMAHA

Gross business over twenty percent better than "Manslaughter." Capacity business prevailed. Critics and audience applauded.

AND IN A SMALL TOWN

"Adam's Rib" is unquestionably the finest photoplay ever made. I thought I was hard boiled but this picture got me. Take all you can of the greatest pictures since nineteen twelve and "Adam's Rib" is greater than all combined. Have never seen anything like it.

The Elegy of Pola

By Edwin Schallert

A SHRIEK rent the air. It was the climax. The torment of music ceased, and Pola Negri, a quivering, throbbing, brooding black mound of nerves, lay huddled together upon the floor in front of the gilt doorway.

Slowly, almost tenderly, to an accompaniment of plaintive melody, a half-naked Nubian slave bent over her, touched her and then, with the semblance of a deep sorrow etching his face, lifted her to her feet. As he wound about her the lace of a mantilla, she stood swaying a moment, her eyes listless—empty their wells of feeling, her head beating back and forth in a dull rhythm. Then, step by step, hesitatingly, uncertainly, she half tottered out beyond the range of lights, beyond the camera itself, lost seemingly in a hypnotic mood that overhung scene and setting and onlookers, a mood nocturnal and vast as the surging, passionate desert blast that had swept and wasted and finally was destroying the bloom of its exquisitely deceptive flower—Bella Donna.

I had been watching one of the final scenes in Miss Negri's first American picture. Nobody but would have admitted this a privilege. It was, in fact, almost lese majesty for any stranger to be on the set. Nearly as many permissions had to be obtained to enable me to look on as are required for an audience with a Grand Lama. At least, I was told that they had been obtained, but the possible significance of this excess of formalities was absolutely lost on me once I came aboard Baroudi's love barge, where it was securely moored to the floor of the studio stage. I am not particularly concerned with formalities, anyhow, not even when they concern Europe's most celebrated screen actress.

Baroudi's love barge was the background for the culminating emotional scenes of Pola Negri in "Bella Donna." The hysterical episode I had just observed with, I might say, almost bated breath, was one of these. The heroine had just received her blurt congé from the sheikish Oriental exquisite, who had ensnared her. She was left quite alone in a world that did not love her and did not want her. The dark lotus of her charm was broken, the leaping flame of her youth was dying away. Destiny's tragic claim was written on her brow, and one sensed for her the approach of the blackest hour—

Less than the dust beneath thy chariot wheel,
Less than the rust that never stained thy sword,
Less than the trust thou hast in me, my lord,
Even less am I, even less am I—

Truly, I believe, you have never yet really seen Pola Negri on the screen. Always there has been some obscuring fault of make-up. Even as it has actually clouded her resplendent beauty so, too, I feel, it has but half disclosed her radiant art.

To behold her now, fully illumined by the dazzle of our unsurpassable lighting, and the minute excellence of our photography, will be like a glorious revelation. Lily-white her hands and face, orchidlike the spirit of her beauty. She is at once the sinister nightshade, and the white lotus, a blossom of ecstasy and a bloom of torment—

A dark cool night and oversweet
With tuberose breath;
A jeweled javelin in the heart,
Ecstatic death.

Those who have appeared in her picture have confessed to me their absolute inability to cope with her. They accuse her, in fact, of not giving a single thing. She rules the set absolutely as its mistress, and that is something that can well be understood after one watches her and realizes how much of herself she literally hurls into her acting.

She has been known to stand for minutes before a mirror, pretending to be making up her lips or her eyes. In reality she was not making up at all. That was only a pretext. She was going through her preparations for the next episode. She tested every expression of her face, studied it from every angle, endeavored to get over some undreamed-of nuance of feeling, some absolutely new light of eyes, curve of lips, engraving of forehead, to eliminate if possible a spoken title, which titles, she frankly admits, and with a positive venom in her voice, "I had."

To Pola Negri music is the essence of her art. One might almost say that it is also the essence of her being. To it may be ascribed the vivid fluency of her acting. In Europe she was accustomed to have only the finest sort of compositions to accompany her acting—Tschaikowsky, Beethoven, and sometimes—though rarely, because he depresses her—Wagner. On her arrival in Hollywood she cast out all the jazz ensembles that were brought her as if they had been the seven devils. It was only after many fits of temperament and finally an absolute refusal to work, I believe, that she finally obtained a makeshift of piano and cello that pleased her. A feverish Lament of Grieg had been selected as the motif for her closing emotional tempest in "Bella Donna." The melody tossed and undulated beneath the bow of a cellist, becoming every moment more languishing, more restless. As Pola faced Baroudi, and learned that, after her bitter sacrifice of Nigel, the Oriental no longer wanted her, that in fact, a new Circé had already captivated him, the elegy in tone became a veritable delirium. One sensed almost a demand from the actress that the music should be her stimulus; one felt that the players played for her as they had never played before. Such, indeed, is the magnetism—the well-nigh uncanny bewitchment of Pola.

Strangely, fantastically, in tune with her desespoir, the while, was the love boat's Nirvana harmony in black and gold—a subtle Oriental harmony built on one of those weird scales of tone that come out of the heart of the Far East. The deep inlays and intricate patternings of the narrow doors became momentarily deeper and darker. The grilled windows, fretted with a design as dainty as Chantilly lace, were lost in the febrile mists. The deep divan cushioned with inkly and yellow silks, became wan as in the light of dawn, its fitful purple scarflike coverings softening to amber, and its rose and fuchsia hangings to a methitic mauve. One sensed, too, almost the sick lapping of the waters of the Nile, and the oppressive portents of pyramids and sphinx and desert waste.

I know of no other setting that more admirably seemed to accommodate itself to the moods of its star, even as it also breathed so much of the storied wonders of the incensed far away. The skill of George Fitzmaurice, the director, who promises to become truly

A FRAT boat and an ice-equipped sword at every inch of the way, the white, endless miles of open water, the tremendous winds of the stormy sea-these are the elements that make up this thrilling tale of adventure and romance. The scene is the high seas, the setting is the Age of Sail, the characters are the men and women of those days. The story is the story of a love that has withstood the test of time, of a friendship that has lasted through many storms and dangers. The film is a faithful reproduction of the epic tale of the last of the Whalers, a tale of heroism and adventure, of courage and endurance. The photography is superb, the acting is excellent. A masterpiece of motion picture art, a story that will be told for generations to come. A film that will be remembered as one of the greatest of all time.

In Elmer Clifton’s new picture, “Down to the Sea in Ships,” we see a wonderful portrayal of life in the Age of Sail. The scenes are beautifully shot, the acting is perfect. The story is told with great skill and accuracy. It is a story that will be remembered for generations to come.

The Picture Shows:

The story is told in the words of the characters, as they tell it to us. It is a story of adventure, of heroism, of love and friendship. It is a story that will be remembered for generations to come. The picture is a masterpiece of motion picture art, a story that will be told for generations to come. A film that will be remembered as one of the greatest of all time.

AN OPEN LETTER

MOTION picture fans are anxious to see the most talked of woman in the world today—Pola Negri.

Since her arrival in this country, her name has been headlined by every paper in a series of news stories which have resulted in an interest in this remarkable star such as has never before been observed in the amusement industry.

Everyone is eager to see this star in her latest picture, "Mad Love," the first to be released since her arrival, and which, over her own signature, she claims to be her greatest success since "Passion."

As a Showman you will undoubtedly be quick to grasp the money-making possibilities of Pola Negri in "Mad Love." Here is opportunity knocking at your box-office window.

Records Smashed!

Pola Negri in "Mad Love" is doing the biggest business in New York's history at the Capitol. It has broken the attendance receipts of "Robin Hood" and "Passion." The throngs stood six deep a block and a half down Broadway on the opening night.

Wire from St. Louis

"Mad Love" opened Del Monte Theatre Sunday, March 4th, breaking all house records for past year, with exception of personal appearance of Valentino. Public heartily endorsed Pola Negri in "Mad Love."

THE BEST "BUY" IN THE FIELD
THERE is a lot of human interest in this picture, as well as numerous "big punch" situations. It registers as a good, wholesome melodrama, with plenty of rapid action, and carries a popular appeal. Also, it is decidedly refreshing to meet with such a rare type of screen hero, who is anything but heroic, rather a weakling in fact, but when thrown unexpectedly into an atmosphere altogether foreign to his nature, suddenly braces himself to meet the emergency, shows an undaunted front to his enemies, defeats their plans and wins a girl worthy of his love.

That "The Inner Man" will please a majority of film patrons is a safe prophecy. It abounds in beautiful photography; is free from padding and should prove a satisfactory box office asset.

The role fits Wyndham Standing like the proverbial glove. It is a capital bit of character work. Dorothy Mackaill is an exceedingly pretty and convincing heroine.

The continuity is even and the action swift from start to finish.

A Drama of a New Woman

A THOMAS H. INCE PRODUCTION

Written by Bradley King
Directed by John Griffith Wray, under the personal direction of Thomas H. Ince.

CAST OF CHARACTERS

John Bowers  Marguerite de la Motte
Milton Sills  Francesca Billington
Evelyn McCoy  Bertram Johns
Harry Todd  Ernest Butterworth
Aggie Herring  John Stepping

A TASTE OF THE PLOT

A man, primitive, masterful—a girl who loves his strength and fears his domination—and a polished man of the world. Comes a terrific conflict in the elemental, and the struggle to win a woman's soul. A story of the lonely spaces of the Northwest and Broadway's swarming nights—of a fiery, dominant man and a cultured city-bred woman.

CHARACTER OF THE STORY

Big in dramatic thrill—bigger still in spectacular sensation. Few have seen anything to equal the terrific dam-burst that sends flood waters seething over the country-side in miles-wide sweep of disaster, nor anything to surpass the mad stampede of a thousand steers, crushing life beneath flying hoofs, thundering down on the man who stands alone to check them. Thos. H. Ince has made those moments masterful.

and an Age-Old Love

READ WHAT THE CRITICS SAY:

INTENSELY INTERESTING DRAMA OF SOCIETY

"A thoroughly convincing and well-acted melodrama. The characters are well drawn and the work of the entire company brings out various situations in the best light. The story is both interesting and amusing and has good lighting and artistic settings.

"An intensely interesting play of the society type. The centre of interest is fastened upon three characters and it is all the more praiseworthy that the situations and acting create such good entertainment.

"John Bowers, in the role of Jim Russell, is well fitted for the part. He acts with restraint and is very effective as the young, struggling engineer. Marguerite de la Fosse has an equally important part as Isela Dorne, an authoress and playwright who finds a husband rather a nuisance when he goes after a career. Milton Sills plays the role of the producer of plays, Rudolph Martin, with his usual reserve and conviction."—Exhibitors Herald.

VILL BRING GOLD TO THE BOX OFFICE

"Excellent entertainment is offered by this production which is in every way up to the high standard of previous Thomas H. Ince pictures. A clear, well constructed plot, photography of the best grade, intelligent acting by a talented cast and skilled direction are the qualities which register What a Wife Learned as a feature worthy of attention of all exhibitors and likely to ring golden box office returns. The love interest gathers and develops without once striking a jarring note. The narrative gets to its stride quickly, there are no dull moments nor slackening of speed from start finish. The big flood scene will surely rill all beholders and a most satisfactory max is achieved."—Exhibitors Trade Re-

The Novelty Melodrama of the Year

Galleons, derelicts, once-proud clippers, stately liners, caught in the grip of the weird Sargasso Sea through centuries and wedged by sea-weed into an island of lost ships. A colony of men and only two women inhabit it, a rabble ruled by a giant with the right of might. Escape is impossible. Each new wreck adds new castaways, desperate men—sometimes a woman, and she, by community law, must marry within one day, choosing her mate from the men who offer. Two want her—the brute who rules and the man accused of murder.

Director Maurice Tourneur tackled a big job in filming this story of Captain Crittenden Marriott's. Not only was there drama of the strongest kind, but also the unprecedented locale of the Sargasso Sea with its waste world of stagnant weed, its submarine monsters, the hundreds of ships it never lets go. A sailor's myth some call the Sargasso Sea; yet the atlas shows it at the Gulf of Mexico's very door. Thus Tourneur has depicted both island and people, in scenes that come as some new, almost incredible wonder.

With Anna Q. Nilsson, Milton Sills, Frank Campeau and Walter Long in the cast, produced at M. C. Levee's vast United Studios, at Hollywood, "The Isle of Lost Ships" will be discovered as that rarest of jewels—a photoplay the like of which has never been seen.

"Refuge"
The American beauty in her latest picture, a melodramatic tale of adventure in a mythical kingdom on "The Prisoner of Zenda" type. A most unusual love story set in a gorgeous background and with action that is fast and furious every minute. If your patrons like straight from the shoulder thrills and strong melodrama, this is what you want.

"Money, Money, Money"
A story with a Main Street setting, a most timely topic as you know. A happy combination of a good story, a beautiful star and good direction makes this one a big success. Adapted by Hope Loring from the story by Larry Evans. Directed by Tom Forman. It should appeal to every lover of good, clean screen entertainment.

"Heroes and Husbands"
A beautiful romance of high society with the up-to-the-minute question of a woman's sphere in life. One that is sure to appeal to the women, and one which the men will enjoy as thoroughly. A love story with a deep mystery angle and plenty of thrills in gorgeous settings. Story by Charles A. Logue. Directed by Chet Withey.

"White Shoulders"
Many critics have called this Miss MacDonald's best picture. It is the story of a beautiful Southern girl placed on the auction block of marriage by her mother; taken from the famous Saturday Evening Post story by George Kibbe Turner and read by millions. It is one they all know and love. Directed by Tom Forman.

"The Woman Conquers"
A wondrous tale of a society girl's battle for life and love in the snow wastes of the far north. A colorful story of red blooded men and women with the primitive instinct of fighting for their own. The kind every audience will thrill to. An artistic and entertaining photodrama by Violet Clark and directed by Tom Forman.

Answering Reformers

In his relations with such outfits as the International Reform Bureau Mr. Will H. Hays has either been acting on a forlorn hope or else he is a sheer optimist.

The Reform Bureau last week handed to the newspapers a statement criticising Mr. Hays and denouncing his "employers." It appears that the statement was based on a letter from Mr. Hays in which he stated that the Bureau was laboring under a misunderstanding with reference to the purposes of himself and his associates.

We do not see how Mr. Hays can permit himself to believe for a moment that a radical reform organization such as this Bureau could, under any circumstances, permit itself to approve of or be content with any circumstances that exist, regardless of what they might be. Their platform is that practically everything is all wrong and they always find ways and means of avoiding or ignoring anything that might result in an admission that this is not true.

If all motion pictures were made safe for the kindergartens, the inveterate, professional type of reformer would still find an excuse for denouncing them in practically the same language he uses today.

The International Reform Bureau does not want to see an improvement in pictures and would not admit there was an improvement, even if it were apparent to all the rest of the world.

Sooner or later Mr. Hays will have to make up his mind that there are certain natural enemies to motion pictures—and everything else the public gets any enjoyment out of—and every time they bob up they should be hit and not argued with.

* * *

Stars and Commercialism

The protest of the group of famous stars against "commercialism" of motion pictures and their determination to band themselves together for mutual protection is not without a humorous touch.

These individuals include within their number several persons who may be set down as being among those who have been most favored by the motion picture, financially and in every other way.

By virtue of the position and natural endowments of these stars thousands of less fortunate individuals throughout the industry are compelled to struggle for a mere livelihood that they may be rewarded in the millions for what they contribute to the screen. They are the little kings and queens of the film world whose wishes are the law, or nearly so. They have, indeed, been smiled upon by fate, yet....

They are not satisfied. They protest that the motion picture is being "commercialized" and in that charge they have struck an ironical cut because it might be fairly pointed out that a pretty swift pace in "commercialism" is set by these stars themselves who demand for more money is heard with monotonous regularity. They seem to think it a case wherein it is quite all right for them to seek to increase their profit out of pictures but it is horrid commercialism for anyone else to enter into the same ambition.

To commercialize a thing is to put it to business uses and a great element in the good fortunes of these stars is the fact that men versed in trade and commerce have taken their work and put it to business uses. Otherwise, like many great artists before them they might be getting their mail in musty garrets instead of in palatial country homes.

* * *

Many pictures have been urged upon the public because of pointing some moral. Mr. William DeMille's latest production, "The World's Applause," has a story that can be contemplated with profit by the professionals of the picture world. Plenty of prints should be kept on hand in Los Angeles to be supplied to stars.

Compromise May Develop in New York Censorship Issue

One Possibility Is Abolition of Present Commission and Placing of Regulation in Hands of Tax Department or Comptroller’s Office

ALBANY, N. Y., March 13—There is a possibility of a compromise in the censorship argument in New York state, to the effect that the present censorship law would be continued, but the present commission would be abolished, and its functions placed in either the state tax department, or the state comptroller’s office. This has developed since the big censorship hearing at the state capitol last week. It is rumored also that a prominent member of the ways and means committee, before which the hearing was held, has since said that the repeal bill will not be released out of committee, and furthermore that there are not enough votes to force the committee to report it out.

Smith Confers With Advisors on Censorship

It is said that Governor Smith has had several informal conferences of late on the question of motion picture censorship, with persons from whom he frequently takes advice. Some of these are to have suggested the abolition of the commission, and another plan, said to have been advanced to the governor, would take the form of legislation giving each locality local option on the question of censorship. This latter scheme, however, would not get far as in the end it would only add to the trouble of the producers.

Meanwhile, official Albany is waiting for some definite word from the committee as to whether or not the censorship bills are to go to a vote in both houses of the legislature. The public hearing last week on the repeal measures now before the legislature disclosed a strong sentiment against censorship, the advocates of repeal being loudly applauded throughout their addresses.

Hillis Argues for Repeal

Strong arguments against censorship were made by the Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hills of the Plymouth church, Brooklyn; P. E. Howard, editor-in-chief of the American Press Association; Frederic C. Howe, former commissioner of immigration, and John Brady, representative of the state and American Federation of Labor, and Charles L. O’Reilly, president of the state exhibitors league, who will be the next chief executive of the T. O. C. C.

O’Reilly struck a responsive note when in addressing Canon Chase, New York reformer, he said:

“You told us exhibitors that when censorship came there would be a big increase in theater attendance. Well, I will tell you you were wrong. There has been a 30 per cent drop.”

O’Reilly Cites Board Eliminations

To support his contention that censorship on pictures is nonsensical and silly he cited a number of eliminations made by the New York commission. These and others were filed with the committee considering the repeal measures. Here are some of the eliminations made and filed with the committee to support the arguments against censorship:

“The Silent Voice”—Story of North-west mounted police. Scene shows chasing outlaw. Mounted policeman’s horse goes lame and to save horse he dismounts and leads horse. Eliminate scenes leading horse as “inhuman.”

“No Wedding Bells”—Two reel comedy. Father throws suit out of house. He goes to trolley track and puts head on track. Car goes by but parts at switch and goes on other track. Man goes over and puts head on second track and car goes by on regular track. Man gets disgusted and leaves. Eliminate scenes as “inhuman and tending to incite crime.”

Other Eliminations Read

“Rustlers of the Redwoods”—A scene was ordered eliminated which showed a man throwing a hatchet and the hatchet landing in a tree. It was ordered cut on the ground that it would “tend to incite crime.”

“The Haunted House”—Eliminate as sacreligious “episode of marriage by radio.”

“Jazzmania”—The commission has just passed and approved the Mae Murry feature. One elimination was ordered where the feminine inmate of the state hall and entering an ante-room lifts the back of her skirt and kicks back her foot towards the assemblage in the state hall. Her skirt is lifted about ankle length but the commission insists this would tend to “corrupt morals” and must come out.

Eighteen typewritten pages of these eliminations were filed with the legislative committee.

Public Protest Defeats Drastic Tennessee Bill

One of the most drastic censorship measures ever advocated has been defeated in the state as a result of the protests of public officials, club women and the public generally.

The measure would have placed a $50 fee on every picture, regardless of length, reviewed. The bill further provided that each theatre pay $5 per cent of the gross receipts for the privilege of playing picture censored.
The Funny Side of Exhibition

By LYN LUNDQUIST
(Delight Theatre, Estevon, Sask., Canada)

My father is a good old scout, but he remained determined that pictures were immoral and harmful for a period of twelve years. He grieved over our “bad business” and wrote many scolding letters.

One day he chanced to pay us a visit from the States. He would not go in and see the pictures, and only stayed in the residence portion of the theatre over the lobby. Finally, it got near his bed time, a little after 9 o’clock. In taking him to his bedroom back of the balcony we came opposite the rear balcony exit door. I swung it wide open so he had to see the picture. Apparently it was the first motion picture he had seen. It was a travelogue through the Hawaiian Islands. He stood astonished, with mouth and eyes open to the extreme, as he exclaimed:

“My, isn’t that beautiful and natural! You can see the water as natural as our own lake at home.”

He finally consented to come in and sit down and sat through the balance of the first show and all of the second show. His surprise reminded me of the story of Rip Van Winkle. I did not hoax him at all—just left the pictures to speak for themselves.

You see his idea of a show was got when he was a young man 50 years of age—he is now 79. In those days, it is rumoured that half of the show people and theatre owners were the worst kind of sports, while in reality today such characters are exceptional and immoral houses and companies are doomed to failure.

Now he never writes complaining letters about it any more. He was cured of his prejudice.

That is the way many objectors keep on knocking theatres, with the most of them never having seen a modern, clean show or picture. The most of them are good moral lessons, entertaining and educational in more ways than one.

By MILLER & CARROLL

After placing our piano in a recently installed orchestra pit, one of our town sports, upon entering the theatre with his ready fingers, it seemed a pity to saw off a perfectly good piano to make it level with the stage.
Facts and Comment Affording Close-up of West Coast Production Situation

By MARTIN J. QUIGLEY

(Written at Los Angeles)

Article II.

WHAT the West Coast production situation promises in big pictures and its intimation of an approaching prosperity were referred to in this outline of conditions last week.

In this article we shall refer to what's wrong with the situation—not all of the various things that should be made the subject of discussion with a view to hastening a remedy but only a few of the more conspicuous ills.

There can be no logical denial of the fact that production has set the pace of advancement for the whole industry and not even have the marvelous strides that have been made in theatre construction and picture presentation kept ahead of the progress in the studios. But as great as has been the studio progress it has not been greater than the opportunity and the resources which have been supplied by other branches of the industry. Hence, it is proper that the production branch of the business be held to strict accountability with reference to the opportunities and facilities that have been placed at its disposal.

The frequently mentioned provincialism of Hollywood—meaning the motion picture colony—is not merely a theory; it is a concrete fact that is making an indelible imprint upon production. A few years' residence in Hollywood, and frequently only a few months, seems to establish the notion that the earth has taken on a new axis and that the whole world is revolving around that particular spot. Actors, perhaps, cannot have too much egotism. It is a necessary or at least a traditionally accepted part of their business. But there are the others who are directly concerned in an executive capacity with production who must remain well-poised and well-balanced if pictures are not going to fly entirely away from the hearts and minds of the millions of ordinary people that they must appeal to and be understood by if they are to be commercially successful.

There is a Chinese wall of self-satisfaction and conceit being thrown up around the motion picture colony. Instead of safeguarding and maintaining, against every obstacle, the absolutely indispensable contact with the outside world, there is a tendency to become more self-centered and to ignore all mankind beyond the wall. If not stopped, the inevitable outcome of this tendency is the production of pictures that will not be in tune with the customs, the thoughts and the aspirations of the multitude and the industry will find itself saddled down with a lot of costly negatives that cannot hope for anything beyond a very limited distribution.

There is an idea getting abroad in production circles that there is an opportunity for the more sophisticated picture, with heavier theme and more involved construction. This idea is generated by the thought that in the development of pictures a point has been reached at which it is now commercially possible to make pictures with an especial appeal for the discerning intellectuals, of the type of certain plays that prosper moderately in the stage theatre of a few large centers but inevitably wither and die promptly when taken out on the road. While it is understood that motion pictures must appeal to the millions to be successful it would seem that the record of the type of stage play we refer to would be sufficient to discourage this folly.

* * *

ANYONE at all familiar with the process of motion picture production knows that every step in the proceeding involves a big outlay and that on the whole it is bound to be expensive business. But as rich men's foundations are not ending production and inasmuch as the cost and a profit for the investors must be gotten back somehow, it becomes a matter of overwhelming concern that something be done about the constantly rising costs of production.

Unfortunately, a large number of persons directly engaged in the expenditure of production appropriations are letting someone else worry about this feature of the matter. If there are any substantial efforts being made to curtail the cost of production—or even keep it within presents limits—it is not visible to the observer of the situation at this time.

The production end of the business is money-mad—mad and with the idea that money is omnipotent in the studio; that anything worth while in the production of a picture must cost a great deal and that money will supply many deficiencies of work, study and ability. Talent and brains are costly enough but doubly so when they rely upon the expenditure of more money to achieve results. As productive financially as pictures have been they cannot keep pace with the spending appetite that proached in any other line of human endeavor—and there is much right and reason for this condition!

The dollar, however, will come—but it is a great distance off—when the production personnel will recompense at figures materially less than the present scales. There will be a gradu-ual but inevitable levelling down to standards of compensation comparable with those in effect in other creative and artistic endeavors.

But the salary situation as it now exists is simply the result of the in-exorable law of supply and demand.
There is only a very limited number of artists who work before the camera and around it in comparison with the demand and because they are indispensable to the continuance of production it is simply in the natural order that they should levy a heavy toll upon the producer who in turn must pass it	on to the exhibitor. And because of the public’s tacit approval of the system through the box office the exhibitor is reasonably able to meet his share of the cost.

But even in the situation which exists today the production personnel must and should realize that picture making cannot continue at all unless it is kept economically sound and regardless of any position to dictate which they may be in temporarily they cannot safely expect or demand more than the traffic will stand. The devastating practice of carrying a production unit at a loss simply to prevent another producer from doing the same is just about at an end. Every unit now faces the alternative of making a profit or being dropped.

* * *

MOST of the harmful publicity concerning motion pictures and motion picture people originates in Los Angeles. We do not refer to scandal or the slings of the mainraker; we mean the foolish, deceiving and mis-representative type of stuff that is sent out about pictures and picture personalities.

The studio press agents largely are unwilling victims to this disorder which they recognize in all its harmful phases but which they are practically powerless to control because they are either going on orders or simply doing what they know are paid for. The majority of these men are practical newspapermen who have learned in newspaper offices the effect upon the popular mind of various kinds of mention. They know in many instances that their principals would be much better off if out of the newspapers than appearing frequently in them and getting mention with the type of stuff that is being put over. But the code seems to be that any kind of mention is better than none at all—which is a decidedly dangerous line of action to follow.

Production personalities generally are impelled with what amounts to an actual passion for publicity—publicity of every kind whether it be professional or personal. As the reader of the publications of the day knows there seems to be no limit to the intrusion into their personal and private affairs that they do not welcome for the sake of getting and keeping their names and pictures in print. They court the most glaring publicity for everything they are concerned with from their professional interests to their home and family interests. And then when one of them becomes involved in an affair which obviously is not fit subject matter for publicity they want to be able to declare that it is their private business and nobody else’s concern. After they have taught the public a morbid interest in everything concerning themselves, their position then is not a very consistent one.

We believe that this publicity matter has resolved itself into a problem of far-reaching consequences. We believe that the type of notice that is being sought and received is a seriously undermining influence with respect to the industry’s ability to make a worldwide appeal of pictures. This plying into the most delicate and intimate personal affairs of screen personalities is unquestionably destroying the illusion of pictures because it destroys the public’s illusion with reference to persons who portray the pictures upon the screen. Romantic leading men, for instance, are continually being shown in some domestic situation that has nothing to do with their work, possibly, cutting the lawn or engaged in some other activity of husbands, are simply, through publicity, disassociating themselves from the type of character that they are seeking to establish in the minds of the public.

Emotional beauties also who allow themselves to be portrayed in print with stories about their culinary proswes are tearing down the type of character that they are seeking to build up. Hundreds of other plain examples of publicity gone wrong might be mentioned.

Stars and other prominent personalalties must resign themselves to the fact that while they are active professionally they are creatures of a world of make-believe and that everything they do that destroys the illusion hurts them and hurts their business. They are fortunate in many ways and their lot is not without recompense but there are certain things they must sacrifice.
They cannot expect to be of the charmed circle of screen celebrities and also of the common people at the same time. The farther they withdraw from every kind of public notice —and especially personal appearance—excepting only that which applies to their work, the better off they will be and so also will be their work.

In Los Angeles the good nature—and bad judgment—of screen personalalties is presumed upon by hotel and restaurant management to the extent of using them as bally-hoos for their places. Can anyone imagine Maude Adams in the heyday of her popularity competing in a public dancing contest at Rector’s? * * *

The concentration of producing activities in Los Angeles unquestion-ably amounts to a valuable arrangement to the industry in the saving of time and money. But such an arrangement creates an iron-bound colony which becomes ruled and directed by local thought and local celebrities instead of being properly susceptible to national influences. Unless means to correct this difficulty are discovered and put into effect the isolated, smaller feature of the colony is going to become more pronounced.

A valuable influence upon the situation would be the location of a greater number of the practical heads of producing organizations in Los Angeles where they could stand out constantly as barriers against the development of impractical, objectionable and misguided tendencies. And their contact nationally and internationally with the market and with the outside would enable them to contribute day by day many things to the production center that it is badly in need of.

(The third article of the production situation and allied matters will be printed in next week’s issue.)

Educational Enjoins

“Day by Day” Picture

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, March 13—S. M.
Herzig, Lyle W. Rucker and others in an order issued by Judge Leslie Hewitt in the Superior court of California are restrained from selling, leasing, or exhibting a picture called “Day by Day” following action brought by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc.

Educational is distributing “The Message of Emile Coue,” which declared is the only authorized picture by the or-inator of the popular phrase “every day in every way” and the Coue method of self healing.

James Cruze in East

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, March 13—"The Covered Wagon," Paramount production directed by James Cruze will have its premiere at the Criterion theatre on Friday of this week. Director Cruze has arrived in New York for the showing, and will make a number of scenes for "Hollywood," his latest picture, while here.
League in Oklahoma Urges Elimination of Federal Tax

Also Acts to Stop Renting of Motion Pictures to Non-Theatrical Organizations—Spokane Forms Association Among Amusement Men

(Immediate Release)

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA, March 13.—Oklahoma exhibitors are going to take immediate steps toward abolition of the federal tax on admissions.

At the convention of the Oklahoma Theatre Owners & Managers' Association this month, a resolution memorializing congress to eliminate the admission tax and urging all exhibitors in the state to write to their senators and representatives in congress requesting that some action on the matter be taken, was adopted unanimously. H. W. McCall, Liberty theatre here, presented the resolution.

Disapprove Rental of Films to Non-Theatricals

Oklahoma voted its support of the campaign against rental of pictures to non-theatrical organizations, in a resolution condemning the practice. The resolution expressed no objection to the rental of films to churches and schools charging no admission prices.

Practically 200 exhibitors were in attendance at the two-day convention, which was presided over by Ralph Talbot, of Tulsa, chief executive of the league. He was assisted by Morris Lowenstein, vice-president, and Josh Bilings, secretary.

The report on the legislative situation stated that exhibitors need have no fear of adverse laws being placed upon the statute books at this session of the legislature.

Exhibitors authorized appointment of the following grievance committee:

For the exhibitors—James H. Cooper, Criterion theatre, Oklahoma City, and Morris Lowenstein, Majestic theatre, Oklahoma City.

For the exchanges—Tony Ryan, First National manager, and Wallace Walkhal, Associated Exhibitors manager.

A fifth member will be selected by the committee itself.

No Action on Cohen Plan

No action was taken by the league on the Cohen distribution plan. Whether or not it will be considered as an organization matter at a later date has not been indicated.

Henry B. Wallath addressed the gathering.

With free dances, free banquets, free admission to theatres, and everything else free, the convention was voted the largest and best ever held by the association.

West Coast Situation Magnified and Untrue, Narcotic Head States

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 13.—Following an investigation of narcotic conditions in Los Angeles and vicinity, Narcotic Chief Harry D. Smith of the Pacific Coast Division has submitted a supplementary report to Secretary G. Natt and Commissioner Haynes, heads of the government's narcotic forces, in which conclusion is made of statements that conditions in Los Angeles and environs have been greatly magnified and that few of the sensational cases as calculated throughout the coast were based on facts.

"There is a preponderance of evidence tending to show that Los Angeles and the Hollywood district particularly is as free from the narcotic evil as could be hoped for," he reports in summarizing his investigation.

Says Creditors Favor Reorganization Plan

NEW YORK, March 13.—In submitting to Federal Judge A. N. Hand the plan for the reorganization of the Selznick enterprises, James N. Rosenberg, counsel for Lewis J. Selznick, declared that the majority creditors have accepted the main features of the plan.

Details of the reorganization scheme were not made public, because, it was stated, there were some points of difference to be adjusted.

Dies in London

Robert Brunton

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, March 13.—The passing of Robert Brunton, widely known motion picture producer and founder of the old Brunton Studios, came as a decided shock to his many friends in this city. Brunton, who was rated as one of the wealthiest producers in the industry, died after a three days' illness while visiting in London, England.

He was at various times associated with many of the big film men locally in various motion picture enterprises. Recently the Melrose avenue studio which Brunton founded was renamed United Studios and was taken over by Joseph Schenck, M. C. Levee and associates. It is one of the largest of its kind in the world.

Kansas Exhibitors to Hold Convention Soon

(KANSAS CITY, KAN, March 13.—The next semi-annual convention of the M. P. T. O., Kansas, will be held the latter part of this month or early in April. R. G. Liggett, president of the organization, announced this week. At an executive board meeting soon the place of the convention will be determined. The uniform contract and the Cohen distributing plan will be two of the most important matters which will be referred to the convention.

Paul Bern With Mayer

LOS ANGELES, March 13.—Paul Bern, who has been supervising editor at Universal City under Irving G. Thalberg, has joined the Louis B. Mayer studios. He will contribute original stories for screen production.

WASHINGTON

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

SPOKANE, WASH., March 13.—A permanent organization, known as the Spokane Allied Amusement Association, was formed last week at a meeting of a temporary organization of representative theatrical and amusement men at a luncheon held here. The organization contains opposition to detrimental legislation.

Authorization was voted the executive board of trustees of the temporary organization to obtain an attorney and to draw up a constitution and by-laws of a permanent organization.

In the discussion at the meeting, the representatives expressed a hearty accord with plans for including in the permanent organization all those included in or affiliated with the amusement industry. The organization will cover all of Eastern Washington and among other amusement plans to include baseball and dancing.

H. C. Lambach, chairman of the temporary organization, presided at the meeting. The members of the executive board of trustees are C. E. Stillwell, Charles York, J. W. Alendar, Maurice Oppenheim and C. M. Van Horn.
THE FIRST TRADE PAPER SERIAL!

BY special arrangement EXHIBITORS HERALD will commence in an early issue the publication, serially, of Rupert Hughes’ great story of studio life—

SOULS FOR SALE

IN convenient-length instalments, this fascinating and informative story of Hollywood and its motion picture people will be run in the HERALD.

RUPERT HUGHES
BELIEVING that thousands of exhibitors throughout America will find this story of absorbing interest and at the same time the source of a great deal of valuable information about the motion picture Capital of the World, the HERALD has arranged with Rupert Hughes for its exclusive trade publication.

As an unique and original undertaking the HERALD will print this novel—which is in great demand at bookstores at $2.00 a copy—in its regular issues, supplying the complete story to subscribers at no additional charge.

A terest to the publication of this story in a motion picture trade paper is the fact that the author—Rupert Hughes—is now making for Goldwyn an elaborate production based on the novel.

In this story Rupert Hughes touches the highwater mark of a career which already has placed him in the vanguard of the great novelists of America. Hughes has an unsurpassed faculty of realistic story telling and in "Souls For Sale" he gives an inside picture of the cinema world of Hollywood, with all the trials and triumphs of its men and women, which should be studied by every person in the picture business.

Distinctive Plans 12 Productions for Year

New Screen Material Acquired by Arthur S. Friend and Henry M. Hobart

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, March 12.—A schedule which calls for a round dozen of big pictures is being completed by Arthur S. Friend and Henry M. Hobart of Distinctive Pictures Corporation. Since announcement of its first two 1923 features “Backbone” and “The Ragged Edge” a full program for the year has been arranged.

Acquire Parker Story

The most recent acquisition is Sir Gilbert Parker’s celebrated novel “The Weavers.” This work is considered to rank first of all the author’s many powerful romances. It is a tale of the Egypt of fifty years ago which will require a big cast and will permit of the creation of unusual sets.

Work has already begun on “The Steadfast Heart” by Clarence Budington Kelland, author of “Backbone.” This story is based on a serial now running in Collier’s Weekly and deals with the flight of a waif of a boy against adversity and the barriers of society.

Artists Play on List

Another on the Distinctive list is “Two Carpenters,” by Elbert Mygatt. The sixth of the list is “The Green Goddess,” by William Archer melodrama which George Arliss has been using on a successful tour of the country after a long run in New York.

Announcement of the remaining half dozen pictures will be made soon. All of the pictures will be produced at the Distinctive-Biograph studios in New York.

$100,000 Amusement Firm Given Charter

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

ALBANY, N. Y., March 13.—The heaviest capitalization of any motion picture company to work in New York state during the past week was that of the Daniel Amusement Co., Inc., located in New York city, and capitalized at $100,000.

Other companies filing papers with the secretary of state, and entering the business were: Brancie Amusement Corporation, $25,000; Daily Film Delivery Co., Inc., $80,000; Cameo Distributing Co., $80,000; Casselli Pictures, Inc., $500; B. S. Moss Holding Corporation, $1,000; Tall Theatre Corporation, $10,000; Cities Productions, $500; General Synchronizing Corporation, $500; Young Pictures Corporation, $250,000; and the Strand Theater, Inc., of Buffalo, $25,000.

White Joins Mayer Organization in East

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, March 13.—Randall M. White, who has been director of advertising and publicity for the Lewis J. Selznick Corporation, has joined the New York office of Louis B. Mayer Productions, Inc., of which Paul C. Mooney is the head

Mr. White will be concerned chiefly with advertising and publicity in connection with the Mayer product which has distribution contracts with First National and Metro.

“Robin Hood” Show Lasts Till Morning

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, March 13.—In order to enable everybody in Salt Lake City to see “Dooglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood” the Farnsworth Pictures Corporation continued its showing of the picture until the wee hours of the morning. Then they took it out, found street cars and “fliers” waiting to take them home. A local automobile firm furnished the machines and in this manner the Pantages was able to accommodate all who wanted to see the picture and whom they had been forced to hold out previously.

Lone Robber Gets Haul Of $3,500 at Newman Theatre in Kansas City

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

KANSAS CITY, MO., March 13.—In one of the most daring holdups in Kansas City in several years, the Newman theatre was robbed of $3,535.55 last week. The fact that it took fifteen minutes late, saved $8,000, according to Milton Fich, manager of the Newman theatre.

Mr. Feld, G. S. Eyssell, treasurer, and Dr. Carlos De Mandel, orchestra director of the Royal theatre, were in the office of the Newman theatre when a lone bandit entered and commanded Mr. Eyssell to hand over the money he was checking up, $2,500. The bandit then commanded Mr. Eyssell to remove a grip, containing more money, from the vault.

Perceiving that the grip was heavy, the bandit then forced Mr. Eyssell to put on his hat and coat, carry the grip, and accompany him out on the street, where a taxi cab was hired and Mr. Eyssell driven to the southernmost part of the city. Here the bandit handed him $3 for taxi cab fare, and bade him “good night.”

Sawyer Affiliated With New Producing Concern

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, March 13.—Arthur H. Sawyer has return to Los Angeles announcing new affiliations with the formation of Associated Pictures, headed by Marcus Jacoby, Chicago financier. Sawyer will substitute Dan McGrew as his last picture for Metro.

Mr. Sawyer and Herbert Lubin recently completed a series of conferences with Metro executives in the east.

French Films Not to Be Beared,Says Tully

Sees No Competition for Years

Even With Aid of Government

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, March 13.—Recent cable dispatches disclose changing a attitude on the part of the French government toward motion picture production and distribution in France. Lightening taxes and giving producers other encouragement need not be viewed with alarm according to Richard Walton Tully, the National producer who has recently returned from France where he was in close touch with producing conditions.

Pictures Are “Frank”

“No amount of protection by the government will make French productions equal to our American pictures,” said Tully, at the United Studios where, in concert with the Director Young, he is preparing the script of his next first National publication. French picture producers seem to make pictures for sale to Parisian and foreign markets, without realizing the fact that all France, including Paris, has a hunger for the American sort of pictures. That is the reason that American films go big in France. The Parisian producers base most of their dramas on a strong sexual appeal. I do not have to say that there are libelous. Rather, I would say they are very frank. A little too much so for the average person who does not reside in a big city.

Climate Not Favorable

“French climatic conditions are not good for the making of exteriors except in the northern sections of the country and across the Mediterranean Sea in Algeria, where the climate is similar to California. But the making of French pictures in Algiers involves the expense of importing props and construction materials for modern buildings. Even with the government’s encouragement, French producers cannot hope to really compete with American made films for many years, at least until the psychology of the French producer changes.”

New York Film Bills Still in Committee

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

ALBANY, N. Y., March 13.—The two bills introduced in the New York state senate on February 5 by Senator Love are still in committee and with little chance of their going to a vote. Both bills relate to miniature picture apparatus. One seeks to amend the general city law, and the other seeks to amend the general business laws.

The bills introduced by Assemblyman Miller on February 26, seeking to impose an annual tax on the box office receipts of motion picture theatres, and other places of amusement, is also still in committee. The same holds true of the Levy bill, relating to theatrical performances in first class cities of the state on Sunday. A bill relating to liens on motion picture film laboratories was introduced in the state senate on March 6.

Develop Color Process

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, March 13.—A new color process is being secretly developed in Hollywood and will be tried out by Metro in an early production.

The blushing bride and groom, the latter being none other than Harry Reichenbach, exploiteer "extraordinaire." The bride was Mrs. Lucinda Bacon before her marriage to Reichenbach, whose exploitation schemes have been heralded throughout the trade.

Bull Montana, Metro's caveman comedian, is just full of "pranks," even as he was when a boy. When they don't give him a picture in which he may bust a few craniums, he takes his spite out on his Chevro-Royce. His latest comedy is "Rob 'Em Good," the Hunt Stromberg picture Metro is distributing.

Baby Peggy is so cute that even when she cries you want to smile instead of sympathize. The little Century's star's latest comedies are "Peg O' the Movies" and "Sweetie," an April publication.

Stan Laurel and his frisky steed, Carburetor, exhibit some clever stunts in Metro's "When Knights Were Cold," the star's latest comedy, which should tickle your funny bone.

Here is one of the most spectacular scenes ever staged for a motion picture—the burning of a complete circus for a scene in Rupert Hughes production for Goldwyn, "Souls for Sale." The Hughes story will run serially in "Herald," beginning in an early issue.

Willard Mack appears in the Metro-SL version of his playlet, "Your Friend and Mine."

Conrad Tritschler, London artist, will paint the sets for Tully-First National production of "Trilby."

Reginald Denny, star of Universal's "The Leather Pushers" and "The Kentucky Derby," and the forthcoming Jewel, "The Abysmal Brute," is on his high mule as a result of his good work in the latter picture.

"Hope you win," said Jackie Coogan, little Metro star, when he met Judge Dever, candidate for mayor of Chicago. Jackie has returned to Coast after receiving plaudits of public throughout East. He will begin producing for Metro shortly. (Pacific & Atlantic Photo.)

The WEEK in NEW YORK

PETER J. BRADY, than whom there is no more popular union labor official in New York, told the members of the A. M. P. A. a lot of things about motion picture affairs at last week's session of the advertiser organization. Mr. Brady many times demonstrated his friendliness to the industry and the occasion of his advent as the guest of the day brought out a large and enthusiastic attendance.

Mr. Brady was one of the speakers at a meeting of the censorship law, and surprised the advertisers by stating frankly that he did not believe the ambiguous law would be wiped off the statute books at this session of the legislature.

He was outspoken in his criticism of the manner in which the hearing was conducted by the anti-censorship element. This, he said, was done on a very amateurish way and the only consolation was that the presentation of their case had been just about as badly mishandled by the other side.

There was no preparation for the presentation of anti-censorship arguments, said Mr. Brady. "No one knew who was going to talk until the hearing began and then no speaker knew what any other speaker was going to talk about. Instead of each speaker driving home a few points of argument, each one tried to cover the whole subject and, as a result, no one got anywhere."

There has been considerable discussion as to just what Senator Walker said to Canon Chase when he stopped the noted reformer in what purported to be a quotation from the Senator at a hearing on censorship last year. As taken down by a stenographer, Senator Walker's remarks were:

Don't mind your well-known scandalous state speaker who attempts to quote you, you must, for once, confine yourself to the truth.

The high light of the industry's social calendar of the past week was the Paramount ball, which was held at the Hotel Commodore, Saturday night. This was the third annual event of this sort and nearly 2,000 invited guests were in attendance. In addition to a dinner and dancing, an elaborate entertainment program was provided. This varied from a number of individual bits by well-known professional entertainers, to numbers from several of the most popular Broadway musical comedies.

It's hard to live down a reputation, especially that of being the liveliest publicity person at large. In its account of the squash over the proposed showing of the German picture "Rasputin," which came into the courts last week, the New York Times says:

"The most active officer of the club in attempting to alter the situation yesterday was Harry S. Reinchenbach, the publicity manager of the Hotel Commodore, who has just heard that Miss Edith Turner has been engaged as a hair stylist just before the production of The Virgin of Stamboul. The activity of Reinchenbach caused some fear that the Green Room Club, the Society for the Suppression of Vice, Supreme Court, and the District Attorney's Office would be interested in the interest of publicity for some forthcoming sensation of the season. As the club's theory was denied by officers of the club, who insisted that there was no evidence that a group of factors experienced genuine sorrow at having publicity thrust upon them."

JOSEPH M. SEIDER, who in addition to exercising his other talents runs the Leroy theatre in Brooklyn, declares that the report of his recent demise is grossly exagger- ated. Recently Joe received a letter from a fratal order of which he is a member, asking if he could give any details of the recent death of Joseph M. Seider. After rolling four straight naturals Joe inquired:

"Am I a dead one?"

Then he picked up the answer, slipped a rubber band around it and put it in his pocket.

Referees get some queer ideas, and some of them express these in a way that makes them seem more queer. At the All-American track censorship repeal bill, one dear old lady, after telling of her efforts to save the youth of the country from pernicious influences, said:

"Children today prefer the movies to any other place of amusement, even the church."

ABE WARNER is still commuting. He left Los Angeles Saturday and will likely remain in New York over the week end. Abe swings a wicked brassie and according to rumors around the Warner Brothers' office, he is bringing his cow pasture pool tools with him. About one peep at the snow covered courses hereabouts and Abe will decide that Los Angeles is a good golf country.

JOHN FLEK LEWIS, general counsel for Famous, was accompanied by Mrs. Ludvig, returned last week from a ten weeks' stay in Europe.

J. LEON BRANDMARKER, who knows more exhibitions than any film man except Sam Moross, has severed his connection with the Fox New York exchange, and has joined the vanguard forces of America Releasing. In order to let them all know about it, J. Leon springs the following:

K. C. B. and sends it along to EXHIBITORS HERALD:

IT'S VERY terrible
TO TRY to call
ON ALL this weekend,
WHEN IT CAN'T be done.
But if you're ready,
TO REACH you all,
WRITE you,
WHEN
FOR OLD time's sake
FOR YOUR own good
FOR MY good
I THANK you.

And in spite of parting his name as he does and writing that stuff, J. Leon is a regular fellow.

JAMES CRUZE, director of "The Covered Wagon," the big Paramount special which will make its public bow at the Criterion theatre on Friday night, arrived in New York last week to attend the premiere, accompanied by numerous members of the cast. Mr. Cruze attended a preview of the picture Sunday night at the Hotel Plaza, when it was shown at $10 top for the benefit of two New York charities—the Committee for Devastated France and the New York Maternity Center.

RICHARD ROYLAND, general manager of First National, has gone to the coast to give Richard Walton Tully and Earl Hudson his moral support and the once over as they start the wheels of production rolling for the big circuit.

"Mad Love" the Goldwyn Polo Negri film, broke all previous high Sunday records at the Capitol theatre on its opening day at the big Broadway house, outdistancing even "Robin Hood" and "Passion."

JOHN S. SPARRO.

WHEN Jesse L. Lasky chose James Cruze to direct "The Covered Wagon" for Paramount, he picked the man who had the broadest background possessed by any of the Paramount directors—a consideration of the greatest importance in the filming of Emerson Hough's epic of the early West.

The job required a man who knew how to work in the great outdoors and obtain the required effects of distance and prismatic backgrounds. Cruze had directed "The Valley of the Giants."

It required a man who knew melodrama. Cruze had directed "Terror Island" and "Always Audacious." It required a man who knew comedy. Cruze had directed "One Glorious Day," "Is Matrimony a Failure?" and "The Lottery Man." It required a man who could handle crowds. Cruze had directed "The Dictator." It required a man who knew plain folks. Cruze had directed "The Old Homestead." And it required a man who knew the West and its people. Cruze was born in Ogden, Utah, in 1884. At the age of fifteen he left home to travel with a medicine show. Knocking all around the West and finally going to Alaska, he saved enough money to pay his tuition for a year in a San Francisco dramatic school. As an actor, he was highly successful, finally heading his own repertoire company. Shortly after he decided to go into pictures he was given the leading role in "The Million Dollar Mystery," and from that time until he started to direct for Paramount in 1918 he appeared on the screen in no fewer than 257 roles.

With "The Old Homestead" and "The Covered Wagon" he has reached the top of his profession, and when Paramount's greatest all-star drama, the making now in the making at the Lasky studio, reaches the public some months hence the main title will bear the line, "A James Cruze Production."—J. S. S.
Steffes Predicts Contract Adoption
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, March 13.—W. A. Steffes, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Minnesota, who has been in New York for several days in conference with Will H. Hays and Sydney S. Cohen, said before his departure for home:

“There is no question but what the uniform contract, while not perfect in all details, is a vast improvement on anything yet offered to the exhibitors. It will come up for discussion at our state convention in Minneapolis on March 24-25-26, and I feel pretty sure it will be officially adopted as it was here in New York.”

Six Per Cent Tax Bill Is Defeated in Kansas; New Measure Bobs Up
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

TOPEKA, Kan., March 13.—The proposed tax bill in the Kansas legislature, which would place a 6 per cent tax upon the shoulders of Kansas exhibitors, died in committee Tuesday, following two hearings of a delegation of nine exhibitors before the assessment and taxation committee of the house and a joint committee in Topeka.

R. G. Liggett, President of the M. P. T. O. of Kansas, who was chairman of the exhibitors’ committee in the hearing before the house committee, while Thomas Brown of Leavenworth, Ks., was chairman of the committee that appeared before the joint committee.

What is considered the most radical measure introduced thus far in the Kansas legislature was introduced this week by Mrs. Minnie Grinstein of Liberal, Ks. It was a joint bill. The attorney-general said the bill would eliminate entirely any distinction between negroes and white persons, making it compulsory for all theatres and hotels to admit negroes the same as white persons.

Blue Law Hitting Races Is Vetoed by Governor
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 13.—Comment on efforts to discriminate against certain interests in the passage of regulatory laws is contained in a report of the attorney-general declaring the proposed anti-speedway racing law unconstitutional. The attorney-general ruled that the bill represented class legislation and was, therefore, unconstitutional. Governor McCrory vetoed the bill.

“The proposed act does not extend the application of the principal involved to all classes alike—going generally,” the attorney-general said. “For instance, on Memorial day, there might be a circus exhibition held; on the same day a professional baseball team might play. Under provisions of the act the owner of the circus and those participating in the performance would violate no law. Entertainments such as theatres, motion picture shows, etc., may be given where admission fees are charged, without coming under the provisions of the proposed law.”

Arbitration Cases Disposed Of Under New Set of Rules

Grievance Body in New York is Comprised of Three Members of the Exhibitors Organization and Three Members of F. I. M. M. Club
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, March 13.—The first arbitration hearing under the uniform contract was held here last week and a number of cases disposed of smoothly and expeditiously. Under the new rules the board is composed of three members of the T. O. C. C. and three of the F. I. M. M. Club, with the board itself electing a chairman. The personnel of the board at last week’s hearing was:

For the F. I. M. M. Club—Louis Rosenbluh, Fox; W. E. Raynor, Pathe; Samuel Zierler, Commonwealth.

Landau Selected as Chairman of Body

Mr. Landau, who is also president of the T. O. C. C. was selected as chairman. Before the board went into executive session Bernard Edelhertz, who assisted in drafting the rules under which the arbitration board operates, pointed out to the members of the board and the assembled contestants, that the board now has an official standing under the state arbitration act and that its findings are as binding as those of a regularly established court of law.

Under the former workings of the arbitration board no exhibitor or distributor could legally be compelled to appear before it. Under the workings of the uniform contract, however, both sides expressly agree to take any dispute to the arbitration board for settlement.

Governing Rules Announced

Following are the rules governing operation of the board:

Rules for the operation of the boards of arbitration have been agreed to by distributors and exhibitors, have been approved by the attorneys and will be put in force. This was concluded at a meeting held here at the offices of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., on Thursday, March 8, attended by William A. Steffes of Minnesota, Claude Cary of Michigan, Charles O'Reilly, William A. Brandt, Bernard Edelhertz, Lee Brecher of New York, and representatives of the Distributors. These rules are as follows:

The Board of Arbitration

“The board of arbitration shall consist of six persons, three of whom shall be managers of local offices of the distributors, called distributors’ representatives, and three of whom shall be proprietors or managers of theatres in the zone where the Film Board is located, called exhibitors’ representatives; provided, however, that in no event shall exhibitors’ representatives own or control theatres owned or controlled by producers or distributors.

“Each of the three distributors’ representatives shall be selected by the Distributors’ Board of Trade to serve for one year or until his successor is appointed. Each of the three exhibitors’ representatives shall be selected and appointed by the local exhibitors’ association. In the event there is no local exhibitors’ association or such association fails to appoint, then the President of the Film Board of Trade shall appoint the President of the Chamber of Commerce, or if there is none or if he fails to appoint, then the Mayor of the city in which the Film Board of Trade is located, to select and appoint the three exhibitors’ representatives. Failing such selection and appointment the designation of exhibitors’ representatives shall be by the President of the Film Board of Trade. Each of the exhibitors’ representatives shall serve for one year or until his successor is appointed, provided, however, that any exhibitors’ representatives designated after such organization association fails to appoint, then the President of the Film Board of Trade shall appoint the President of the Chamber of Commerce, or if there is none or if he fails to appoint, then the Mayor of the city in which the Film Board of Trade is located, to select and appoint the three exhibitors’ representatives. Failing such selection and appointment the designation of exhibitors’ representatives shall be by the President of the Film Board of Trade. Each of the exhibitors’ representatives shall serve for one year or until his successor is appointed, provided, however, that any exhibitors’ representatives designated after such organization association fails to appoint, then the President of the Film Board of Trade shall appoint the President of the Chamber of Commerce, or if there is none or if he fails to appoint, then the Mayor of the city in which the Film Board of Trade is located, to select and appoint the three exhibitors’ representatives.

“For failure to agree in respect of an Exhibitor’s representatives shall be by the President of the Film Board of Trade. The remaining Distributors’ representatives or representative may appoint a substitute for such member; similarly if a vacancy exists in respect of an Exhibitor’s representatives or representative, the remaining representatives or representative may appoint a substitute.

“In case of a refusal or disqualification by reason of interest or sickness or other reason on the part of one of the Distributors’ representatives on the Board of Arbitration, the remaining Distributors’ representatives or representative may appoint a substitute for such member; similarly if a vacancy exists in respect of an Exhibitor’s representatives or representative, the remaining representatives or representative may appoint a substitute.

“In case of a tie vote the Board of Arbitration shall appoint a seventh arbitrator and if they are unable to agree then the Chairman of the Board of Arbitration shall request the President of the Chamber of Commerce, or if there is none or if he fails to appoint, then the Mayor, or the city in which the Film Board of Trade is located, to appoint a seventh arbitrator who shall be neither a distributor nor exhibitor nor interested in the motion picture business.

If the Board of Arbitration shall have general power to order a thorough and impartial hearing of any dispute or controversy, to determine such dispute or controversy, to make findings thereon, to direct what shall be done by either or both parties in respect to the matter in dispute, and in the event of the failure of the Exhibitor to comply with the above order; the arbitrator or distributors’ arbitrator may demand payment to Article Nineteen of the Uniform Exhibitors’ Code. If it shall adopt its own rules of procedure and evidence. These rules shall provide for reasonable notice to the parties of the hearing and of the nature of the dispute, and shall be available to the parties of their respective counsel, or by person or by counsel and to submit evidence. The findings of the arbitrator or distributors’ arbitrator of such controversy shall be conclusive and binding upon the parties therein.”

Is Nominee for Good Will Body
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, March 13.—Lois Wilson has been nominated as the motion picture industry’s candidate for New York’s Good Will Delegation. One nomination is made for each leading industry and final selection is contingent upon the nominee’s obtaining at least 25 per cent contributions to the fund of the American Committee for Devastated France.

Miss Wilson will be known as “The Covered Wagon” girl, the title of the Paramount picture in which she plays the leading role.
Photos Will Identify Mileage Book Holders; Regulations Explained

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 12.—Photographic identification will make impossible the scalping or transference of the interchangeable railroad mileage books which have been ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and which will be issued on and after May 1, next. The new mileage will be in the form of coupons, each having a face value of five dollars, payable to bearer being $1,500 to a book which is to be sold for $72, a reduction of 20 per cent from its face value.

The purchaser will be affixed to the cover of the book by the agent making the sale, and mileage will not be transferable, and if any of the conditions or stipulations governing their use are not complied with the holder forfeits all rights thereunder.

It is provided that coupons must be exchanged for tickets before boarding the train and they will not be honored on trains except in cases where passengers board at stations where tickets are not sold. The exchange of coupons for ticket is to be made on the basis of the regular one-way fare, and they will not be honored in exchange for one-way, round trip or other tickets sold at reduced rates, suburban tickets, parlor, extra-fare charges (but may be used on extra-fare trains, extra-fare being paid in cash), or excess-baggage or other baggage charges.

The original order for the issuance of interchangeable mileage books was to hear from the Interstate Commerce Commission the request of the carriers action on certain of the rules and regulations was deferred. It was agreed that coupons would not be acceptable on trains, with the exception already noted; that holders of mileage were to be entitled to all privileges of stop-over, side trips, baggage allowance given purchasers of first-class single tickets, and that scrip coupons should not be accepted in payment of baggage, extra-fare or other charges.

Withey to Make First Frank Wood Photoplay

(Los Angeles Herald, March 13.—Frank Wood will make his first photoplay, a silent version of Sir Walter Scott's "The Talisman," will be made under direction of Chet Withey, it has been announced. This will mark the beginning of a series of productions by Associated Authors composed of Mr. Woods, Elmer Harris and Thompson Buchanan which will be distributed through Allied Producers Corporation. Harris and Thompson will produce the second and third offerings.

Wallace Beery will be featured in the Woods production.

Seek Fund for Club

(Los Angeles, March 13.—A campaign to raise $10,000 for the erection of a new home for the club, a residence and club center for girls employed in the motion picture industry, is under way in this city. The organization, which is seven years old, has outgrown its present quarters and a new building is to be erected on the present site in Hollywood.
THE THEATRE
A department of practical showmanship

Universal Appeal

Universal appeal should be a theatre attribute as well.

Almost people of any community are not too many for the theatre to draw from. Any detail of policy, any line of advertising or any screen matter that estranges any fraction of the total populace is bad business. Occasional temptations to utilize methods calculated to set one faction or element against another, however great, immediate possible gain may seem, are instantly shunned by the reasonable showman.

Permanency is essential to theatre success of moment. One-time profit never outweighs perpetual favor. Uniform appeal should be obtained by clean showmanship and preserved at any cost.

On the Bill at The Chicago

"Syncopation Week," observed by Balaban and Katz at the Chicago theatre the week of March 4 and subsequently at the same theatre's neighborhood house, is hardly a representative bill but no less interesting to showmen. It is probably the biggest bill of the year's most interesting offerings.

In tabular form it reads:

1. Introductory Overture—Selected
2. Abood the Airship Chicago—Spectacular scenic illusion transporting audience to "Land of Jazz.
3. Arnold Johnson and His Orchestra—Brunswick recording jazz band of 11 in futuristic setting giving several numbers.
4. Egbert Van Alstyne and Company—Composer of hits from "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree" to "Carolina in the Morning" at piano assisted by four singers.
5. Ten Abbott Dancers—Classic dancers in jazz figures.
6. Irving and Jack Kaufman—Phonograph vocalists in jazz numbers.
7. "You Tell Him, I Stutter"—Organ solo by Jesse Crawford.
8. "The Don of the Forest"—Spectacular finale enacted by all appearing in foregoing numbers.

Immediately following the overture and between each number thereafter a snappy pick-up by the orchestra brought on a trio of girl pages in jazz uniforms singing brief lines introducing the feature to follow. The take-off on the scenic airship made a spectacular and satisfying break into the jazz spirit of the entire program. Settings throughout were specially done and elaborate.

Campaign Book Asks Reports

Independent Pictures Corporation has produced one of the most complete campaign books ever brought out for its production, "Flames of Passion," a portion of a prominent page being in the form of a blank addressed to the "What the Picture Did for Me" department of the "Herald" for the convenience of exhibitors using the attraction. The suggestion is that showmen clip the blank, fill in with their report on the picture and mail direct to this publication.

In the provision of the blank Independent clearly attests confidence in its product and desire for a prompt exhibitor-jury verdict. No more constructive press book development has been chronicled recently.

Say It With Newspaper Space

YEAR around, newspaper advertising pays biggest theatre dividends. Practically everybody reads. It is doubtful if the few who do not can be "sold" by any other means, and that they aggregate any considerable clientele if such sale is possible.

"Newspapers first" is an admirable theatre slogan. Its observance need not involve neglect of other advertising media.

BILLBOARDS rank second to newspapers in box office yield. Here again the transmission of information is by printed word and illustration. The appeal is through the reading habit, almost universally prevalent. Like the newspaper advertisement, the billboard confronts a beholder whose perusal of its text is practically guaranteed.

The billboard operates more swiftly, as a general rule, in most instances. It is possible, and enjoys the advantage of comparative isolation. The eye that lights upon it seldom passes over it without carrying to and leaving with the brain the sales message. Billboards undoubtedly constitute the newspaper's logical complement.

AFTER the billboard, close after, rank the various types of theatre literature. The house organ, the mailing piece, the herald and similar printed matter depend, like newspaper and billboard, upon the reading habit for success. That the reading habit is the principal target of productive advertising may be accepted as an axiom.

Successful theatre literature must be well composed and effectively distributed. Failure in either of these departments is fatal to productivity, and it is largely because of the average theatre's limited distribution facilities and the very printer's limited resources that theatre literature is given third place in this analysis. A number of exhibitors have doubt, however, that easily surpasses the billboard in value; but when this degree of excellence is attained the house organ becomes practically a newspaper and the rating cannot, therefore, be applied generally.

As fourth in importance may be grouped the wide range of theatre and picture representation generally termed exploitation. The ballyhoo, mobile or stationary, the decorated lobby or interior and the many types of cooperative display are valuable chiefly because they are inexpensive and novel. They may be compared with other advertising mainly on a cost basis.

This economical angle affords ample reason for the development of these methods. It is possible, even less than a sufficient volume of this representation, obtained at practically no expense, to promote the sale of a given entertainment quite as satisfactorily be done with newspaper and billboard. It is not possible as yet, however, to maintain it consistently on that scale. This explains its position in this column and probably accounts for its somewhat irregular use by the majority of showmen.

On the basis of this scale it is not difficult to direct a theatre advertising program that should yield vast returns for the future. Adherence to a definite principle is sound policy.

For the immediate present and until developments warrant modification the showman of today will find it good business to place confidence in his newspaper advertising. He will make it as good as he can and he will use space liberally and intelligently. Second emphasis will be given billboards. There is more billboard advertising today than formerly and there can be much more before a saturation point is reached.

Intensives development of theatre literature, with especial effort in composition and distribution, will build up rapidly the efficiency of that department. Revision, cultivation and expansion of exploitation methods will produce a like result.

BUSINESS conditions, constantly changing, and local requirements must be taken into consideration in all effort of this nature, of course. Yet a general adoption of these principles undoubtedly will result in amplified box office returns and a strengthened public contact.

As Summer approaches, bringing its natural effects to bear upon the big productions in process, the endeavors of this character clearly is in order.

Neighboring cities send patrons to see "When Knighthood Was in Flower," Paramount-Cosmopolitan. This car ran into Eau Claire, to the Grand Opera House. Exploiter Bill Danziger officiated.

Impressive in its severity, and admirably posed for the camera, this float figured in Aldine box office returns when Metro's "The Prisoner of Zenda" was presented in Philadelphia. A well-exploited attraction.

Lights that told New Yorkers all about Universal's "Driven," which was shown at the Criterion.

Many such flower windows told of "Mighty Lah' A Rose," First National, run at the Chicago theatre.
Ascher's Merrill, Milwaukee, used lots of light advertising Goldwyn's "Golden Dreams." A good policy.

Everybody has made money exploiting one race picture or another and now Thomas H. Ince's First National feature, "The Hottentot," gives all a chance to repeat. The Arcade, Ann Arbor, is shown.

N. N. Frudesfeld, Sun, Moon and Muse theatres, Omaha, did as much as anyone has done, which is a great deal, in exploiting "The Third Alarm," F. B. O. The Moon front looked like this.

Psychological Copy Attracts Maximum Crowd

Arthur E. Weld opened "When Knighthood Was in Flower" to maximum business by warning local patrons not to attend the first day of the run.

Psychology which Mr. Weld clearly explains in his letter did it.

Read it. Anyone can use his copy as it stands.

THEATRE EDITOR
Exhibitors Herald.

Dear Sir:

When the Lord created man He evidently instilled a little of the mulish characteristic into his makeup. At least it is said a person never wants to do a certain thing so much as when he is forbidden to do it. The suggestion seems to sink deeper and the urge to do the opposite is greater to resist.

Acting upon this theory of psychology, I wrote the enclosed ad. The result was a turnover business. I am wondering if I struck the right chord in asking the home folks to stay away from "nighthood" on the opening night. What do you think?

ARTHUR E. WELD.

Strand theatre, Waterloo, la.

DEAR MR. WELD:

We think you unquestionably did. We think to the extent that we went to the extreme of "knocking down" your ad in order that we might reproduce it in readable scale for the benefit of others, of whom there are many, who can use your copy as is.

We don’t believe a great many showmen go as deeply into psychology in shaping their ad copy as we do and we believe your letter will prove to them the advisability of doing so. Thanks for it, and congratulations on the copy. — W. B. W.

Add Crull Vote For Endorsement Of Exploiters

Harry Crull, Victory theatre, Providence, adds another exploiters vote for the endorsement of the professional exploitation man in this, his first Theatre Letter.

THEATRE EDITOR,
Exhibitors Herald.

Dear Sir:

In your Theatre Letters I notice some recent ones under the heading, "What has the exploitation man done for you?"

During a recent run of The Strangers’ Banquet we had Buddy Stuart, Goldwynn from Boston, with us. We had an exceptional newspaper campaign winding up with nearly a full page for Sunday papers.

Rallyho! We had a bottle twelve feet high by five feet round with cotton stuffed in the top to give real champagne effect. Words on side: "Marshall Neilan’s Sparkling Entertainment—The Strangers’ Banquet—Victory Now.” This bottle set on a huge tray which we used on a truck all over town during run.

We used ten thousand bottle novelties, five thousand chairs and two thousand toast books. Got them in different luncheon clubs, such as Rotary, Lions, Town Criers and Kiwanis. Also in dance halls, including the big Arcadia Dance Hall.

Got a tie-up with the Waldorf Lunch Rooms (six) to use fifteen thousand paper napkins with the words: "Marshall Neilan’s The Strangers’ Banquet at Victory Theatre.” Also used ten thousand wrapped toothpicks with copy on wrapper. Got these in all restaurants. Used mailing list and covered the town thoroughly.

Harry Crull.
Victory theatre, Providence, R. I.

DEAR MR. CRULL:

Familiar as readers are with the showmanship of "Buddy" Crull as applied at the Hope theatre, Dallas, and elsewhere, none will marvel at the completeness and evident success of his efforts in behalf of the Victory. Those who know him expect that sort of thing from him.

The "exploiter" discussion was closed before your letter arrived, but of course the subject is always interesting. Write again, on that or any topic. — W. B. W.

Fire Destroys Theatre

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

OWENSVILLE, IND., March 13.— Destruction of the Montgomery theatre at Cynthia, together with the home of Al Montgomery, owner, and the Methodist church, resulted when a fire became ignited. The loss was $10,000.
True Thompson
Joins Theatre Letter Circle

A notable addition to the ever widening circle of "Theatre Letter" writers is registered this week with publication of the first contribution from Mr. True T. Thompson, Capitol theatre, Dallas, Texas.

Make his acquaintance through his letter.

THEATRE EDITOR,
EXHIBITORS HERALD.

Dear Sir:

Under separate cover I have mailed you a photograph showing the crowds on the opening performance of Johnny Hines' latest picture, "Sure Fire Flint."

We feel that words are inadequate to express our attitude toward this picture. It is "sure fire." We opened to capacity business, and the same held up throughout the engagement. Every person in the audience enjoyed the picture, both large and small. It is a picture which will please any audience in any locality. It has enough comedy to satisfy the "comedy lovers," with thrills and heart interest interspersed to equally balance the comedy situations. It is a speedy comedy-drama of the A-1 class.

We started our advertising campaign on this picture ten days in advance, carrying special hand-drawn ads. We used sixes, threes and twenty-four sheet paper, special tack cards of original design, using red lettering on yellow stock, and yellow lettering on red stock. We used the special circus billing carrying eight sheet date strips.

In our window cards, we had frames made instead of using a card, and mounted three of the eight-by-ten colored pictures from the lobby acts. The frames were neatly lettered Capitol theatre and the name of the picture. They were so attractive, no one objected to them being placed in their windows. In the lobby we used the large oil paintings, attractively placed. As a special "stunt," we had a large rocket made of red cloth over wire. Seated astride of this was a dummy dressed to represent Johnny Hines. A small electric fan placed in the end to fly with the appearance that the rocket was going up. All of this proved a winner for the box office receipts during the engagement of "Sure Fire Flint." The newspapers also gave us splendid write-ups, every one praising the picture.

Our message to comedy makers is, "Give us more clean, high-class comedies like 'Sure Fire Flint.'"

TRUE T. THOMPSON,
Capitol theatre, Dallas, Tex.

Dear Mr. Thompson,

Welcome to the circle.

Very glad to have your letter and photograph, which are passed along for the helpful consideration of other exhibitors herewith, and would like to receive more of the same. Truly, "Sure Fire Flint" seems to have the goods, reports in this issue, "What the Picture Did For Me," and the March "Box Office Record" indicating your experience with it is typical.

"Day by Day in Every Way" the Circle Expands

The circle of Theatre Letter writers expands apace. With new contributors every week it threatens to break the confines of allotted space and hew out a niche for itself.

Price and Dalrymple, Home theatre, Obing, Ill., are among those whose first letters appear this week.

THEATRE EDITOR,
EXHIBITORS HERALD.

Dear Sir:

We have been in the show business (not game) for only eight months, and "day by day in every way" we are learn-

HARRY VAN NOY, Starland theatre, Anderson, Ind., writes about this front in his Theatre Letter this week. (We haven't received that other photograph yet, Mr. Van Noy.) Rain ruined it and he rebuilt it.
GEORGE REA, Colonial theatre, Washington C. H., O., finds book windows easy to get and very much worth getting. He used these for “The Pride of Palomar,” Paramount-Cosmopolitan, and “Quincy Adams Sawyer,” Metro. Note that the latter is an advance announcement window. Mr. Rea writes about windows in his Theatre Letter this week.

Finds Bookman
Eager to Lend Display Space

Good business men know a good thing when they see it.

Good book dealers readily extend window privileges for cooperative display purposes.

Maybe this letter will aid showmen to convince any backward bookman they may have met.

THEATRE EDITOR,
EXHIBITORS HERALD, Dear Sir:
Mailing two book store window displays.

Book stores are the easiest of all to cooperate.

This store displaying “The Pride of Palomar” said any assistance he could give me any time to just whittle, that there had been more people looking at that window than any time since he had been in business and that any time I wanted it just to walk in and ask no questions, “Just take it and fix it up any way you want it.”

Any kind of advertising is good so long as it is clean. Book stores are easy and surely one of the best.

Both of these attractions are both Coupe box office attractions.

GEORGE REA,
Colonial theatre, Washington C. H., O.

DEAR MR. REA:
“Coupe box office attractions” is good. So are the windows, and your analysis of their value. You write a volume in a line when you say “Any kind of advertising is good so long as it is clean.” So much of the so-called “big stuff” isn’t.

In Attendance

Theatre attendance is getting better.
The picture public’s absorption point is considerably higher than for some time past.

One big picture today follows another closely with no apparent drop off due to proximity.

THEATRE EDITOR, EXHIBITORS HERALD, Dear Sir:
It seems good to send you a photo of my exploitation stunts when you put them over with a bang. “The Third Alarm” is a wonderful picture. How we made them stand up when we started the siren whistle as the fire trucks ran down the street. I secured the whistle for six passes and that helped put this fire scene over big.

We also had a fire truck running around the city ringing the bell and blowing the whistle. It sure attracted everyone’s attention.

Sunday night I met a man and his wife on the street and he asked me where that fire picture was being shown. I told him, but he didn’t know where the Starland theatre was, so we had one person I know was never in our house before and maybe a hundred more.

I secured the fire truck from the Home

FORD DAY BARGAINS
WEDNESDAY, MARCH 7, 1923

FORD DAY, promoted by general business men, was made Home Theatre Day by Price and Dalrymple, Oblong, Ill., through this circular. Their first Theatre Letter tells about it.

Fire Apparatus Company for passes to the theatre, gave every fireman and his wife passes, and in return they furnished six men to drive and ride in full uniform on the truck. There was a banner on both sides and in back of same.

You can go after this picture and make good.

I also send under separate cover photo of lobby display on “When Knighthood Was In Flower.” I put this lobby up one day before play date and the rain hit the display and this is what is left of same. Had complete front made of stone painting on headboard and had to make display over Sunday morning.

We had a fine business on this picture, a dandy to back you up on what you say about it.

STARLAND APPEAL

Similar success with two pictures as markedly different as those you name seems to us to indicate a doubly happy circumstance—great re-admittement on your part and a healthy attitude toward pictures on the part of your clientele.

A few months ago it would have been difficult, if not impossible, to sell the two pictures close together without sacrificing one of them. Everybody ought to be glad that condition has passed. And everybody ought to be grateful to the good showmen who sent it in its way.—W. R. W.
Emanuel Cohen Says Newsfilm Is Not Filler

That the newspicture is no longer a filler but a feature on its own merit, a permanent institution comparable to the American newspaper, is the declaration of Emanuel Cohen, editor of Pathé News, in the following interesting article on the development of the newsfilm product.

The news film has become a permanent institution in the motion picture field and is now a part of every program in every important theater of the country. Whereas only a few years ago it was considered a filler thrown in to occupy 10 or 15 minutes, it is now a feature on its own merit and in many instances is presented as the most important part of a program.

One of the reasons for the development of the news film has been, of course, the enlargement of its scope and the extension of its length, that at the present time it is a world-wide institution comparable with the Associated Press, the United Press, etc.

In projecting a modern feature the cost of production is very apparent—the number of people employed, the salaries of the staff, the cost of the sets, all of which must be carefully calculated. On the other hand, the cost of production of the newsreel is not apparent from the results. Actual events are not staged, the people participating are not paid, nor are any special sets built. However, although not immediately evident, it must be clearly realized that behind the newsreel as projected in the theatre stands a tremendous organization, untiring efforts, a tremendous interest and enormous expenditures.

We cannot tell when events are going to happen nor where they are going to happen. Newsgathering does happen in any part of the world no matter how remote, the exhibitors and the public expect a comprehensive pictorial record and it is our business to get it for them.

Accordingly, we have to maintain a staff of hundreds of cameramen stationed throughout the world to watch and wait for events to happen, ever on the alert to cover them thoroughly so that the public may see the pictures.

Time and tide "news" wait for no man and it is therefore frequently necessary to engage special airplanes, trains, etc., to enable a cameraman to get to the scene of the events while the event is still in progress, so that it can be photographed. Moreover, the interest and value of the news subject depend upon its timeliness, so that on very important subjects special arrangements must be made to bring the film to the factory while it is still "hot."

The recent exclusive pictures of the Burning of Smyrna is a concrete example of how news is covered and presented. A close study of the reports from that territory indicated trouble-breeding. Accordingly we kept three cameramen in the Turk-Greek War Zone to be on the job in the event that something should suddenly break, and one of them was immediately rushed to the scene of the conflagration when it occurred. When the pictures were obtained they were of such tremendous international importance that European towns were shipped by boat from Smyrna to Italy and then by airplane to Paris and Havre where they were placed on the steamer for the shipment across the Atlantic. This film was actually shown in the theatres here fourteen days after the event, although it took place 8,000 miles away. The cost of the picture was $7,000. Yet when screened the spectator could not possibly grasp the enormous amount of research and effort that entered into its filming and final presentation.

At another example—the Burial of the Unknown Soldier—an event of tremendous national interest. In order to present the first and comprehensive pictorial record of this historic occasion to the American public it was necessary to have seven cameramen to cover the event from all angles. Furthermore, in order to get the pictures to the public in all parts of the country in the quickest possible time the pictures were engrossed to rush the film from Washington to New York and a large force worked in the laboratory to rush the final prints, and when they were completed they were shipped by airplane to Chicago and the West. The cost of this one story was $4,000—and this is not another instance of the unrealized cost of production when the picture is viewed on the screen.
DIGEST of PICTURES of the WEEK

The only perfect projection machine is your own mind according to the photoplay editor of the New York Times. It not only projects motion pictures as you want to see them, but it projects only those you want to see. The best thing about a poor photoplay is that it is so soon forgotten.

Many reviewers can testify that, after seeing some picture, they can hardly remember enough about them to write their reviews a few hours later. If you see a so-called dramatic film which presents an impossible cut-and-dried story in meaningless motion pictures and signboard subtitles that may inform but do not stimulate the mind, your mental projection machine never runs the film. It leaves the screen of your imagination blank. Which, you will agree, is a blessing.

But if you see a photoplay made up of well-composed, expressive motion pictures which tell a credible, interesting story in the language of kinetic photography, you are not only entertained during the exhibition of the physical film, but, later, again and again, by its repetition in your mind. Sometimes your mental projection runs practically a whole photoplay for you, sometimes only a scene or a series of scenes, but always just enough and never too much, because it cuts its films as faultlessly as it exhibits them.

The best photoplays for each individual, then, are those which provide his own projection machine with the most material. And most exhibitors will agree with the Times' critic that quite a few pictures leave but little impression on the spectator, due to weak plot, poor direction, mediocre acting, or a combination of these.—J. R. M.

SCARS OF JEALOUSY (First National). This is a thoroughly worth while production filled with dramatic situations and suspense. Frank Keenan, Marquerite De La Motte, Lloyd Hughes and Edward Burns are in the cast. Fine entertainment for any theatre. Directed by Lambert Hillyer. Length 6,200 feet.

MAD LOVE (Goldwyn) is a German-made production starring Pola Negri, and although a sombre tragedy, is intensely interesting. It is one of the best things Pola Negri has done since "Passion." A splendid cast appears in her support.

IS DIVORCE A FAILURE (Associated Exhibitors) stars Leah Baird who is also the author of the story. The picture is replete with action, fistic encounters, a light at sea with sharks and a volcanic eruption being one of its high lights. It has good exploitation possibilities and some good acting.

NOBODY'S BRIDE (Universal) with Herbert Rawlinson in the role of a down and out youth, disappointed in love. It is a crook story and Herbert Blache, who directed it, keeps the action at a high pitch. Good performances are contributed by Alice Lake, Harry Van Meter and Edna Murphy, as well as the star.

SHRIEK OF ARABY (Allied Prod. & Dist.) is Mack Sennett's latest comedy. Ben Turpin is the hero and as usual the cross-eyed comedian furnishes most of the fun with his rough love making and semi-heroic attitude. It's a sand picture for the most part and a good many laughs are tucked away in its five reels.

ADAM'S RIB (Paramount) is a lavishly mounted and well acted DeMille production, adapted from a story by Jeanie Macpherson. While the plot is familiar—the story of a young wife who seeks romance—it has many novel twists and DeMille manages to keep the interest up despite the slight story.

THE HERO (Al Lichtman) presented with a special cast headed by Gaston Glass and John Sainpolis, is an adapted stage play written by Gilbert Emery. The story concerns a returned war hero who is lacking in moral rectitude although he redeems himself in a spectacular fire at the village school. A very pleasing and convincing little drama with several unusual twists.

STORMSWEPT (F. B. O.). A sea picture with Wallace Beery and Noah Beery in the leading roles. Good characterizations are contributed by each, but the story is not an especially strong one. It pictures life aboard a light ship, and presents a typical studio storm at sea.

Johnnie Walker and Eileen Percy in a scene from "The Fourth Musketeer," an H. C. Witwer story, distributed by F. B. O.

BEN TURPIN IN

SHREIK OF ARABY
(ALLIED PROD. & DIST.)

A broad burlesque on "The Sheik" with the usual slapstick situations and amusing subtitles of a Mack Sennett comedy. It was directed by E. Richard Jones, and written by Allen McNeil, and although not the funniest of this Director's comedies, will prove satisfactory entertainment with audiences who approve of this type of film. It is in five reels.

"The Shreik of Araby" is a delightfully funny farce comedy and while it has been some time since we've seen Ben Turpin, he's just as amusing as ever. At Barbee's Loop theatre, Chicago, patrons rolled around in their seats as the latter half of the picture unwound, although it didn't excite much mirth in its early footage.

Ben is cast as a thoughtful bill poster of a motion picture theatre, who takes the job of ballyhooing "The Sheik" when the dark skinned rider of a white horse falls down on the job. He falls asleep and the action takes place while he's dreaming. He thinks he is aboard ship and because he picks a quarrel with a fortune teller going to the Orient, he is thrown overboard with a canoe. He lands near the Sahara desert and is brought before the ruler for annoying the royal ostrich. When about to be beheaded, the timely arrival of the Sheik—who proves to be the ex-ballyhoo saves him and makes him temporary Sheik, while he goes on vacation. Then follows a romance with an American girl, a trip into the desert for trout, he is chased by a lion and his wife is captured by a desert outlaw. The final scenes are well handled and wherein he and his wife are held prisoners in the outlaw's castle. There are bathing girls and swimming pools and everything a Sennett comedy usually has and the action is fast and furious. Finally he comes up with a policeman tapping him on the shoulder and telling him to move on. There is much laughter, especially where the Sheik's wife is shown doing the family wash, and the terrible burn of the开水_SWI which forces her to wash his dirty linen. The scenes with the lion and the magic ladder are also comical, and the outlaw's torture hall impressively devised.

Kathryn McGuire appeared to advantage as The Girl, George Cooper was as Prof. McNeil, and Charles Stevenson an excellent bully, Luke Hassen. The subtitles were good throughout.

POLA NEGRl IN

MAD LOVE
(GOLDwyn)

A sombre tragedy, but intensely interesting. Pola Negri gives her best characterization since "Passion," and logically developed storyline, directed by Dimitri Buchowetzki. About six reels.

Adapted from the play "Sappho," this story of "Mad Love" is essentially foreign in its viewpoint, but provides an excellent vehicle for Pola Negri's talents. It is regrettable that the other players are not given credit, for several contribute excellent performances, notably the serious young lover, Pierre, his cousin, the crazed Andre, and the wealthy merchant. The sets are elaborate and detail is good. The carnival sequence has the breadth and splendor that characterizes the best of the foreign-made pictures. Photography for the most part is especially interiors, very satisfactory.

The story concerns the loves of one known on the boulevards as Liane. played by Pola Negri. The play opens with young Pierre calling at a private sanatorium, where his cousin Andre is convalescing in the hope that his physical condition is not so serious as reported, and that he can write to Andre's sister, Marie, to whom he himself is partly pledged. A word of encouragement, as well as to Andre's mother. But he finds his cousin violently insane, his downfall due to a fickle woman named Liane. To see this destroyer, he lists the aid of a man-about-town who takes him to the restaurant where she is often seen. Pierre mistakes another, Fifi, for the woman he seeks, and Liane enters in time to see and hear his denunciation of the destroyer of men, Liane.

Without disclosing her identity, she questions him, and is overcome when she discovers he is cousin to the man she was engaged to, and who has gone mad for love of her. She leaves the restaurant, where she was entertained by the merchant-Prince, for whose gifts she had cast aside Andre, and the latter, industively follows her to join Pierre in planning to leave her and join Pierre, with whom she has fallen honestly in love.

Pierre, not suspecting she is the woman who wrecked his cousin's life, marries her and they leave. The merchant discovers their retreat, follows and tells Pierre who she is. Pierre denounces her, rushed back to his waiting sweetheart, and took her hand. He could not forget Liane, however, and at last forsook everything to return to her.

Meanwhile Liane has heard of his coming, marries to the country girl, and intending to put her out of her life, joins a gay party of revellers on the night when Paris is carnival mad. Andre kills his guard, escapes, locates the merchant-prince, kills him in his car, appropriates his clothing and gets into the opera house where the carnival holds sway. Liane locates Liane here at the same time his mad cousin does, Liane flings herself into his arms and he declares he loves her in spite of all. They are interrupted by the entrance of the mad man. Pierre seizes him, but he throws Pierre out, locks the door, is discovered, and when the vendetta, summoned by the frantic Pierre, forces the door, they find her dead. The scene where Andre is engaged and the good roles and the silent revellers is extremely expressive. "Mad Love" should prove a good box-office attraction.

HERBERT RAWLINSON IN NOBODY'S BRIDE

(UNIVERSAL)

An interesting crook story with Alice Lake and Edna Murphy appearing in Rawlinson's support. The interest is well sustained and there is plenty of punch in the final reel. Written by Evelyn Campbell. Directed by Herbert Blache. Five reels.

"Nobody's Bride" is a typical crook story relying little from the customary pattern of such tales. It concerns a youth, down in his luck, who is befriended by a woman by the name of Liane, and is used as a chauffeur to assist them get away with what they have stolen. By accident, however, he rescues a society girl about to marry an undesirable, wealthy old rogue, and finds it is the same girl who had been engaged to him. The rescue spoils the plans of the crooks, although the girl falls into the hands of the gang, and there is an exciting finish with the crooks and rescue the hero and girl. The girl's relatives agree then to allow her to marry him.

RAWLINSON plays the hero role with his usual spirit and puts plenty of punch into the scenes where he meets up with the crooks. There was considerable acting as the society girl, and Alice Lake pleased as the lady crook. Harry Van Meter and others did good roles and rendered excellent assistance. The picture is well made and well staged, with excellent photography throughout. One well staged bit was the fight in the bed room where the leader of the crooks determines to revenge himself upon the "false" of the action who took place back of a door and leaving the details of the fight to the imagination of the spectator.

EX-KAISER IN EXILE

(HODKINSON)

Here we have two reels of Germany's former emperor walking briskly through his grounds, unconscious of the long-range effect his later career will have on the German public. The fact that the scenes are of the quaint old Holland town, Doorn, and bits of the castle grounds enclosed in the twenty acre plot which Liliencron, the ex-Kaiser, bought him from an old weeklies showing the ex-Kaiser in uniform are also given. You will be surprised at the pep Wilhelm shows as he walks bareheaded through the fields and woods. A very interesting subject.

FRANK KEENAN and EDWARD BURAN, in a scene from "SCARS OF JEALOUSY." (First National)

SPECIAL CAST IN

SCARS OF JEALOUSY

(First National)

A vivid and dramatic story told in excellent terms of acting, direction and photography. It is thrilling and suspenseful, holding interest captivatingly. Presented by Thomas H. Ince and directed by Lambert Hillyer from a story by Anthony E. Rudd. 6,200 feet in length.

This story by Anthony Rudd is fit entertainment for any screen. It reaches a high degree in dramatic situations, suspense, and thrills. It is not a story of the "eternal triangle" but the title conveys this impression, but rather a big outdoors, picturesque picture with its locale in the mountains of Alabama. There is action all the way through, with a mighty forest fire rounding out a series of impressive events.

The characterization of the players are especially noteworthy exacting roles being portrayed by Frank Keenan, Marguerite De La Motte, Lloyd Hughes and Edward Burns. Keenan is a striking figure in a part in which he is especially effective—that of an old southern Colonel who is strict and unrelenting in his views toward the conduct of his shiftless son.

In a story which best revealed the theme of this production which has as its root the reformation of the son of a wealthy southern aristocrat through the efforts of a set of uncouth and primitive boy from the hills, whose veins flow the blood of a former generation. Colonel Newland, tiring of the useless life being indulged in by his son Jeff disowns him and adopts in his place a dispossed Cajun from the hills named Caddy Jakes. His protege under new environment becomes a gentleman in every respect. When he learns that is displacing Newland's son in his father's affections he kidnaps him and rushes him off to the mountains where he forces the young aristocrat to take up the life there exactly as he has led it. Plenty of hard work and a number of thrillingly enabled young Newland to see the right side of life and as he is given permission to return to his father a sheriff's posse arrives and arrests Jakes for the shooting of an officer, a crime committed by his brother. The end prove the real man that he is, in a thrilling series of events which lead to the rescue of Jakes from hanging.

The love interest has not been overlooked, Marguerite De La Motte playing the part of a friendly neighbor of the Neulands whom the Cajun boy wins and who plays an important part in his rescue when she realizes that she loves him.

SPECIAL CAST IN

THE HERO

(lichtman)

An adapted stage play that has been revamped to meet the screen's needs. An after-the-war story with excellent small town atmosphere and some very good acting. Should appeal to better class audienc.

Directed by Louis J. Gasnier.
Seven reels.

Although a trifle long "The Hero" will be found good entertainment. It was adapted from Gilbert Emery's stage play of the same name and while it deviates somewhat from the stage, nevertheless holds the attention right through and furnishes an interesting and unusual psychological study.

The story concerns a war hero, wearing many medals for bravery in war, yet lacking in moral rectitude and courage. He returns from an army hospital and spends the rest of his days in a hotel named "Jury," his old army comrade, makes love to a Belgium refugee in the house and plays with her brother's wife. It is then that the story really begins with a school house in which he displays his bravery and saves his brother's child, furnishes the necessary punch to the picture and brings about the necessary ending.

Gaston Glass is the war hero. He plays the difficult role with his customary re-"cream" and good honor, however, goes to John Sainpolis, as Andrew. Here is a splendid piece of work. Martha Mattox was Mrs. Lane, and Frankie Lee the child. Barbara LaMarr was in many lengthy scenes with Gaston Glass, in the role of Hester Lane. She was only fairly convincing in her emotional scenes. Doris Pawn was the Belgian refugee, a well played part. David Butler appeared briefly as Bill Waters, as did Ethel Shannon, as Hilda Pierce.

SPECIAL CAST IN

STORMSWEPT

(F. B. O.)

Another sea picture but not an especially good one. Excellent character roles are given by Wallace Beery and Noah Beery, with Virginia Brown Baire and Arline Pretty assisting. Story is not convincing and leaves one guessing as to what the fuss is about. Directed by Robert Thornby. Story by H. H. Van Loan, scenario by Winifred Dunn. Five parts.

Apart from the excellent characterizations contributed by the two Beery boys—Wallace and Noah—there is very little in the way of story. There is a great deal of scene cutting. There is told in a rambling, unconvincing and unsatisfactory way, which leaves the spectator wondering what all the shooting's for.

The story concerns William McCabe, who rescues Shark Moran, captain of a lightship, who has been thrown into the bay while on shore leave. The captain in turn takes McCabe from self-destruction and they become fast friends. Soon McCabe falls in love with the captain's wife, who is on the supply boat, which comes to the light ship once a month. A stray row boat with a leak is driven ashore, and is picked up by Capt. Moran and she is kept in his cabin for the return of the supply boat. McCabe discovers that she

"ARE YOU A FAILURE?" Tom Forman's second Preferred picture for Lichtman, will be issued March 15. Lloyd Hughes, Madge Bellamy, Tom Santschi and Hallam Cooley head a star cast. Gav-nier is now producing Edgar Saltus' novel "Daughters of the Rich," with Gaston Glass, Ethel Shannon, Ruth Clifford and Marjorie Daw in the cast. April 22 has been set as publication date for this feature.

"POOR MEN'S WIVES" has been booked for the Balaban & Katz theatres in Chicago, being scheduled to open at their Chicago theatre on April 9. The picture has played at the Criterion, New York City, and is booked in leading theatres all over the country.

"THE HERO," B. P. Schulberg's most recently published production through Lichtman channels, listed as an exceptional picture by the National Board of Review, has been further honored by being placed first in the list of the six best pictures of the month of Photoplay Magis-azine. "Are You a Failure?" has also been cited by the National Board of Review.

RIGHTS FOR BRAZIL for "Shadows" and "Thorns and Orange Blossoms" have been sold by Lichtman to Ferdinand H. Adams. The home office has been advised by Al Lichtman, who is abroad, that "Thorns and Orange Blossoms" is receiving very favorable comment in Eng-land.

Cosmopolitan

"WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER," starring Marion Davies, holds the record for having played to more people within a given period than any other film ever shown in Detroit, Cosmopolitan reports. In endorsing this photoplay the Better Films Committee referred to it as "a pictorial presentation of a vivid romance of the Tudor period. A family picture."

CHARLOTTE MERRIAM, formerly Christie comedy lead, essays her first dramatic role in "The Fifth Command-ment," Cosmopolitan's picturization of Fannie Hurst's story. Colleen Moore and James Morrison are featured in this production, which was directed by Frank Borzage.

Lee Moran

LEE MORAN ANNOUNCES that the first "inning" of his baseball comedies, produced for RKO Pictures' "You Know Me Alex," will be ready for general distribution by the time the first shots of "Play Ball" are heard throughout the baseball parks and on the corner lots. Arvid Gillstrom is directing the star, Mike Donlin and Emil Muesel, popular baseball players, Bill Dyer and Lilian Hackett in these two reel subjects.

Associated Exhibitors

A CAMPAIGN BOOK which Associated Exhibitors believes will be especially valuable to exhibitors has been published under the title of "The Tents of Allah" and mailed to branches. It is twenty-four pages and contains many aids for this production which features Milton Sills and Mary Alden.

CONSTANCE BINNEY'S production for Associated Exhibitors, "A Bill of Dvorce ment" has been booked by the William Fox circuit for its entire chain in New York and New Jersey, starting in April. Lubinier & Trinza, Chicago, have also contracted for this feature for their chain of fifteen houses.

EXCLUSIVE RIGHTS FOR non-thea-trical distribution of its productions, "The Unoldment" and "Silas Marner," has been sold by Associated Exhibitors to Plymouth Film Corporation of New York. This firm will launch an aggressive campaign among schools, churches and other institutions not connected with picture theatres.

DOUGLAS MACLEAN has virtually completed the filming of "Gang Up" for Associated Exhibitors. He is sup-porting in this adaptation of the Cohen & Harris stage hit by Marjorie Daw, Hallam Cooley, Edna Murphy and other promi-nent players.

Richard Thomas

THE POLICE IDENTIFICATION feature of the first Richard Thomas picture now under production at the Hollywood Studios offers unlimited exploitation possibilities in the opinion of the producer. This six reel drama has its special cast Carmel Myers, Carl Hallo-way, Melvyn MacDowell, Kathryn McGuire, Clyde Fillmore, Spottiswoode Aitken and Edward Borman. This picture, the first of a series of twelve, will be ready for an Eastern showing about March 30.

Paramount

PARAMOUNT HAS AN imposing array of subjects for publication this month. "The White Flower," by Julia Crawford Ivers, starring Betty Compson, was issued on March 4. The story is laid in Hawaii. Cosmopolitan's "Adam and Eva," the Marion Davies vehicle, directed by Robert G. Vignola, was published on March 11, as was "Racing Hearts," the automobile race picture starring Agnes Ayres. On March 15 Walter Hiers first starring production, "Mr. Billings Spends His 15 Th," will go into the theatres. On the same date comes "The Nth Commandment" from the Cosmopolitan studios. This is a Fannie Hurst drama directed by Frank Borzage. Allan Dwan's "The Glimpse of the Moon" and "The Leopardess," with Alice Brady, are scheduled for March 25. Cecil B. DeMille's "Adam's Rib," is the March special.

MARCH WILL BE the busiest month at Paramount's Long Island plant - a fact it reopened several months ago. Thomas Meighan is completing "The Ne'er-Do-Well." Dorothy Dalton will return from Florida soon to finish "Fog Bound." Bebe Daniels and Antonio Moreno have left for Florida to make ex-teriors for "The Exiles." Agnes Ayres

Production Progress

MUSIC CUE SHEETS will be provided by Pathe in connection with the "Aesop's Fables," a new series of animated shorts, arranged as an educational film. A similar arrangement having been completed with Cameo Music Publishing Company of New York City.

VICTOR L. SCHERTZINGER has been appointed as special representative of the Vitaphone Company. Albert Fox, Smith of Vitaphone to direct the forthcoming series, "The Man Next Door," the Emerson Hough novel. This attraction will be later cast as does "Masters of Men," the special just completed. "The Man Next Door" is a strong human interest story of the type that has made Hough one of the most popular of present day authors.

LARRY SEMON'S new comedy, "The Barnyard," is said to be the best he has made. Prints have been shipped to the Vitaphone branches. Kathryn Meyer is the comedian's new leading woman in this picture.

TWO REELS OF FAST comedy are presented in Jimmy Aubrey's "Forward March" which will be published shortly. John Fitcher Smith directed the subject.

"PIRATES OF THE AIR" and "The Staff of Life" are the Urban Popular Classics for immediate publication. The first shows the life of birds that prey upon one another, while the latter shows the progress of a grain of wheat from the sowing to the baking.

WHAT FOX BELIEVES to be the greatest exploitation of pictures ever witnessed in Paris, was staged recently in connection with "Over the Hill," "Thunderclap," "Comet," and "Nero." During a screening of "Over the Hill" before Minister Ginest of Beaux Arts of France, the French Vignier, Fox representative, was tendered the services of the National Bombing Squadron for the exploitation of the pictures. With full forces flying over Paris in tutus thousands of vari-colored circulars were dropped. They almost obscured the sun. More Vignier efforts resulted in filling all the theaters that were playing the pictures. "It was without a question the greatest display of publicity that ever was witnessed by the Paris public," he states.

GEORGE SCARBOROUGH is the author of "Shake Up," a new Shiner Mason picture in production. He is also responsible for William Farnum's latest picture, called "The Grail," soon to be started.

United Artists

TWO MAE MARSH pictures, made in England, will be distributed by Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation under arrangement completed by president Hiram Abrams. They are "Paddy-the-Next-Best-Thing" and "A Woman's Secret."

D. W. GRIFFITH and his company of players have moved to Miami, Fla., for scenes for his production "The White Rose." Griffith is covering many southern points for scenic beauty for this film. Mae Marsh, Carol Dempster, Ivor Novello, Neal Hamilton and other players of prominence are featured.

Thomas H. Ince

MADGE BELLAMY HAS renewed her contract with Thomas H. Ince for a period of three years. She will be starred in a series of pictures, of which one special each year will be directed personally by Mr. Ince. In addition to her latest roles in "Lorna Doone" and "The Hottentot," she is starred in "Ten Ton Love" which will be published soon.
The Spirit That Wins

Three letters received during the past week by this department emphasize the fighting spirit among theatre men which is responsible for the effective check placed upon the activities of reformers throughout the country. That sentiment among the public against radical reform is growing is illustrated in the vain attempts made by the hypocrites to force oppressive laws through the present sessions of legislatures in many states. The fighting spirit among theatre men, as exemplified in the letters received, has been a dominant factor in crystallizing public opinion in opposition to coercive legislation.

Writes Mr. Kundert:

Exhibitors Herald, Chicago, Ill.
Dear Sir:
We are again arrested for Sabbath breaking. After our arrest we were out warrants charging twelve more people with the same offense. Hearings were held today and trials in all cases, including ourselves, set for April 10.
Yours truly,
E. W. Kundert
Ryan & Kundert's Empress Theatre, Beresford, S. D.
It is a fact that laws closing the theatres on Sunday are discriminatory, and if Ryan & Kundert can win their suits against other businesses remaining open on the Sabbath they will have contributed a valuable legal decision upon which other exhibitors may base future suits, as well as a defense in Blue Law trials.

Writes Mr. Hyde:

Exhibitors Herald, Chicago, Ill.
Dear Sir:
Nothing new here except that the city election is coming on in the near future and as the closing of the Strand on Sundays is about the only issue the killjoys can work up. I expect I will soon have about all I can attend to. If the bugs like another fight they won't surprise me or hurt my feelings either. I like it and expect it and would be surprised if they acted like they had enough.
Very truly yours,
W. P. Cuff
Strand-Empire Theatre, Chillicothe, Mo.
If you have followed Mr. Cuff's activities on behalf of a free screen you will not wonder at his confidence in facing another fight to remain open on Sunday. The Missouri exhibitor is not an eleven hour fighter. He prepares a strong defense by being active throughout the year. He sets a standard which might well be adopted in other communities.

Meet Mr. Cuff:

You've all heard about W. P. Cuff of Chillicothe, Mo., and his activities on behalf of a free screen. Because we thought that every exhibitor should meet Mr. Cuff we are publishing this photograph. The majority of you can not meet Mr. Cuff personally, but your acquaintance with him through the columns of the Herald is sufficient to impress you with his sincerity of purpose and his bull-dogged determination to make the reformers seek shelter.

Can You Imagine?

Following presentation of Charlie Chaplin's "The Pilgrim" by the Chicago Daily News before residents of the Danish Old People's Home, Mrs. A. H. Pio, director of the institution, said:
"Nothing brightens life for our people like Charlie Chaplin. Yesterday's showing accomplished more good than we can ever express."
It is to be regretted that the people of Pennsylvania will not be cheered, as were the residents of the Danish Old People's Home, by the latest Chaplin comedy. The censors of that state, you know, have prohibited exhibition of the picture.
Censors are not normal people, for normal people do not seek to deprive others of that which is good and wholesome. Censors are not human, for the human person does not resort to the weapon of oppression. Censors as a whole are narrow-minded, officious and in most instances unreliable in that they conduct their office purely from the viewpoint of making it appear that their existence is vital to the welfare of a community.
LETTERS From Readers

A forum at which the exhibitor is invited to express his opinion on matters of current interest. Brevity and clearness to any statement. Unsigned letters will not be printed.

Wants Shorter Features

E. A. CLAIRE, WIS.—To the Editor:—We have continually avoided feature pictures that are too long in length and feel that producers are making a mistake in each and every case where they allow total footage to exceed six thousand feet, especially in towns the size of Eau Claire and smaller, where we must turn at least two shows a night beginning at 7:30 P. M. It gives us no chance to run a short subject more than five hundred to one thousand feet in length. Our patrons want two reel comedies and two or three short educational subjects of some kind.

In the larger cities where they run continuous houses, A. M. until 11 P. M. it would not make so much difference, but we certainly are going to give all five and six reels preference over the two-reelers. In about ten years pictures in the future, and our patrons always complain when we run a long feature of seven, eight, nine and ten reel length, stating in many cases, that the picture was good, etc., but why so long and dragged out, when the same story could be told in five or six reels.

I wish producers would, for the good of our industry, give this matter careful consideration. A product it would even in my estimation be a step in the right direction to cut down some of the long features already made. If other exhibitors feel as I do, it would greatly expedite bookings. Long dragged out celluloid is a menace in the average exhibitor’s eye and I will venture to say, he will hesitate, nine times out of ten, in booking a long feature where he can get a shorter feature of the same merit—relatively.

H. A. SCHUHR, General Manager, Eau Claire Theatre Company, Eau Claire, Wisconsin.

A Tardy but Interesting Answer

DUNDEE, ILL.—To the Editor:—Just my answers to the three questions in regard to the Theatre Owners Distribution System.

Question No. 1.—Yes I think there is a place if we could be assured of good, efficient and HONEST officials at the head of it. But where oh where are we going to find such parties? Still remember my firsts and experience with the first one that was formed.

No. 2.—Yes.

No. 3.—What I think best of all is for all exhibitors to cut censorship and let the exhibitor buy the pictures he thinks will please his patrons instead of having to buy them in order to get rid of them. I will be frank in saying I wish not one of them would stop at my step.

If you do not buy, they get sore and tell you do not know a good film when you see one, etc., and if you buy, it is generally to get rid of them. Each exhibitor knows what pictures will please his patrons and knows what he can afford to pay for his pictures. And we ought to have credit at least for having enough common sense to know what pictures we need without a hot-air salesman coming out and telling us all about it. If the exchanges reduced that expense it would mean a good reduction in the cost of a picture.

Also, another real benefit would be: The exchange would have only real-honest-to-goodness pictures or real pictures. It would mean better pictures and a reduction in a lot of unnecessary expenses.

Then if some exhibitors think they are too far away from Chicago to get in to review pictures that they are undecided about, one or two trips a year to the film centers would be a proper remedy, also a much needed vacation for them.

And usually we buy for three or four months at a time anyway, so we could all look at them and see what we were undecided about. That is in my opinion the best remedy for high film rentals.—Cook, Crystal Theatre, Dundee, Illinois.

Careless Shipping Clerks

COLUMBIA, IOWA.—To the Editor:—Sometimes it appeals to us as funny, at other times it’s tragedy. After securing blank sheets as to your paper order can go to the exchange with an intelligent selection of paper that you think will be the best for your own particular clientele, you find that they have sent all the one sheets the same instead of one sheets A-B-C, the same with the theo. To which there is.

There are a series of slides numbered plainly A-B-C but they all come a’s.

It’s perhaps the funniest experience I know of—if you have an exaggerated sense of humor, which I have not; but I’ll bet they boy that fills the order at the exchange has a good laugh. The expense of the exhibitor—that "bird" out in the "sticks" who has an idea that a front with different order numbers might appeal better than a lot of duplicates.

The difference in the amount of humor in this situation is geographical. If you get no kick out of a like situation—try to get credit for the duplications.—Arthur E. Hanaway, Columbia Theatre, Main and Van Buren Streets, Columbia City, Ind.

More "Funny" Stories

PIERRE, S. D.—To the Editor:—One cool morning on the first of February, 1922, I was running a morning call and found I had a letter from the bank in which they informed me I had a balance. This is the funniest thing that has happened to me for some time. I believe some of my friends may enjoy it with me and I hope all of them have the same experience as I had with the Lzg. Hvor, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.*

WEWOKA, OKLA.—To the Editor:—Some weeks ago a patron asked me when I was going to show "Flood" and I answered "Grandma’s Boy." My town is 2,000 and my house seats 250. Day by day, in every way, the good stuff is getting higher and higher.—F. G. Roberts, manager, Wewoka theatre, Wewoka, Okla.*

HEPPNER, ORE.—To the Editor:—My two years as an exhibitor have been anything but funny. I see many more funny things in the projection room than I see in conducting the business. God turned the corner of my mouth up and what I have been able to sell, and the man has not caused them to droop yet. We always smile when a patron pays two-bits and as he goes out says the show was worth a dollar, but forgets to leave the seventy-five cents; and we smile again when the same party puts his money back in his pocket when we ask him 40 cents for a Paramount special.

While this is a matter of the smallest proportion to the exchange business, the exhibitor advises us to run a picture whether we make anything or not, because it has been our pleasure to do this many times. In fact, many of the distributors’ efforts are (which are not related to producers or distributors), believing that eventually the exhibitor will make some money with them.

Strictly speaking, the funniest things we know of in the business have been produced by Will Rogers, H. L. Johnston, and Harold Lloyd; but the experience of securing the films has never involved a vast amount of humor from our viewpoint.—B. G. SHORE, Star theatre, Heppner, Ore.

What a Life! What a Life!

MARBLE FALLS, TEXAS.—To the Editor:—The funniest thing to me is how the distributor can continue to sting the exhibitor with big prices on bum pictures.—G. F. JOHNSON, Lincoln theatre, Sterling, Ill.

Confidence Hall the Battle

TULGEY MILLs, IOWA.—To the Editor:—If I have a picture that is a great picture and know so, and get out and boost with this assured in myself, it seems strange. So you can have a big name and I am sure that this will influence the public. The minds have the most influence in every line of business. Try it and find out.—Sherry, Main Street theatre, Marble Falls, Texas.

Complaints on Prices

STERLING, ILL.—To the Editor:—The funniest thing I have is how the distributor can continue to sting the exhibitors with big prices on bum pictures.—G. F. JOHNSON, Lincoln theatre, Sterling, Ill.

Want Earlier Bookings

SHERBARD, ILL.—To the Editor:—do not think that the little fellow gets a square deal. The distributor will not sell the little fellow anything that has not been worn out by the larger places. If he does he will not sell according to stealing capacity; i.e., a little fellow can sell 250, therefore should only pay 1/100 as much as larger places.—H. A. DOUGLAS, Sherrard Opera House, Sherrard, Ill.

Why Salesmen Are Popular

TECMUSEH, MICH.—To the Editor:—My funniest experience in the film business is: If you buy a picture from an exchange that is pleasing and you tell them so, the next time the salesman calls, you may get to know the picture he has to sell, he will always want to raise the price on you.—F. H. GUY, Bradley Opera House, Tecumseh, Mich.

Here’s a Vital Matter

MONTFORD FALLS, NEW YORK.—To the Editor:—I have noticed in the trade papers during the past few months that a bill was to be introduced in congress to eliminate the tax on the trade papers. A few days ago a supplier dealer called on me and wanted me to buy more tickets. I told him that I was only going to buy a limited quantity so that in case the tax came off January first I would not have a lot on hand. He said you need not worry, as the tax is not coming on yet, and if you do I will tell him why, he claimed that it was because the exhibitors are not working. This certainly is the case and must be true, as one reads nothing of the subject in the trade papers. Exhibitors in all parts of the country “holler” about the tax and they lay down and do nothing. It is my desire to hear from other exhibitors on the subject in the Herald and would also like to read one of your editorials putting forth all the facts.—Geo. C. STARKER, Opera House, Montford Falls, New York.
American Releasing

My Old Kentucky Home, with Monte Blu.—Went big for two days and pleased all.—C. A. Hatcher, Grand Opera House, Meridian, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

My Old Kentucky Home, with Monte Blu.—Good picture. Holds the interest well.—C. A. Kriehbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Danger Point, with a special cast.—A good picture. That's all.—J. Carbonell, Monroe theatre, Lake West, Fla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Three Buckeroos, with a special cast.—An out of the ordinary production. Played 100 per cent. Picture of this type, by being so different from the usual run, creates a desire to become a movie fan.—L. B. Lewis, Gayety theatre, Ft. Worth, Tex.—Transient patronage.

Queen of the Moulin Rouge, with a special cast.—Above the average, but not a big one.—R. Hatcher, Grand Opera House, Meridian, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Jan of the Big Shows, with a special cast.—Fantasy picture for the business. Wish there were more like this one. Made us forget Lent was here.—C. A. Riva, Pastime theatre, Tilton, N. H.—Small town patronage.

Me and My Gal, with a special cast.—Fair picture. Some exhibitors said this was a poor one, but we have had a lot worse than this one. Had some comments that were good.—Geo. J. Kress, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Cardigan, with a special cast.—Good picture for Revolutionary days. Drew well and gave general satisfaction.—C. A. Riva, Pastime theatre, Tilton, N. H.—Small town patronage.

Associated Exhibitors

The Woman Who Pooled Herself, with Mae Allison.—Pleased the patrons and drew well. A very nice picture. Not a big one.—C. A. Hatcher, Grand Opera House, Meridian, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Woman Who Pooled Herself, with Mae Allison.—A good production in every respect, although not a special.—C. W. Longacher, New Grulus theatre, New Grulus, Wis.—General patronage.

Grandma's Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—Played this for three days and broke all house records with it. Advertise heavily.—A. Burris, Lyric theatre, Crete, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Grandma's Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—Good picture, but not the drawing power they lead you to believe.—C. V. Kelly, Majestic theatre, Reedsburg, Wis.—General patronage.

Grandma's Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—Went big two days. Fell flat third day—good box office attraction. Pleasured 90 per cent.—C. R. Hatcher, Grand Opera House, Meridian, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Rider of the King Log, with a special cast.—Pure bunk. Sorry print. No drawing power. Lost money on it. Title not attractive.—E. W. Harrell, Royal theatre, Rison, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Devil, with George Arliss.—Evidently a good picture and some big stuff, but for some reason this devil stuff don't take here. People want something more human and true to life. Don't think people would fall for such stuff, as they did not this picture.—R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kan.—General patronage.

The Third Alarm, with a special cast.—A knockout melodrama. A good buy for a small town house. You cannot go wrong. Spend money advertising it. You're safe in getting it back.—E. E. Bair, State theatre, Ulrichsville, Ohio.—Small town patronage.

The Canyon of Fools, with Harry Carey.—Good picture. Made us some money and we bought it at a price that we could make money. F. B. O. does not try to take your theatre in.—Paul L. Shaw, Rivoli theatre, Clinton, Ind.—General patronage.

Thelma, with Jane Novak.—Picture drew well but did not please. I would not advise paying a big price for it. Only a fair program picture.—G. G. May, Isis theatre, Kanopolis, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Good Men and True, with Harry Carey.—Harry was a dead bird here. This is first picture of his in over a year. Business better than anticipated and picture pleased.—H. G. Stettmum, Jr., Odeon theatre, Chandler, Okla.—General patronage.

The Kick Back, with Harry Carey.—Just fair. We put it on as a program picture and drew crowd likewise. It did not go over big, but the posters are good and I see the theatre in.—E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Kick Back, with Harry Carey.—Exhibitors should make money with this as it is priced within reason and sure pleases the people. Situations handled in excellent manner.—K. H. Sink, Grand theatre, Union City, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Beyond the Rainbow, with Billie Dove.—Dandy picture, but small audience. Too much competition. Showed to advanced prices and no kicks.—C. A. Riva, Pastime theatre, Tilton, N. H.—Small town patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—Very good picture. Business increased 23 per cent on second night. Extra good exploitation on this picture which gets them in, and the picture goes over after they are in.—R. E. Beason, Princess theatre, Adrian, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—A good story. We shall not get any crowd. Print very foggy. Paid too much for it.—A. H. Dodge, Palace theatre, Capac, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—This picture drew me good crowds for two nights and pleased all. Admission ten and twenty-five cents.—G. G. May, Isis theatre, Kanopolis, Kan.—Small town patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—A mighty good picture which pleased 90 per cent.—Smith Read, Patriot theatre, DeKalb, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—This one stood two for two days and film pleased 100 per cent.—E. M. McFarland, Opera House, Kewanee, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Broadway Madonna, with a special cast.—Very flashy paper. Picture failed to give satisfaction.—H. G. Stettmum, Jr., Odeon theatre, Chauder, Okla.—General patronage.

Poet Chief
In Favor of Meyer Plan

I would like to endorse Fred Meyers' plan of getting all the long legs and short legs possible under a groaning table at some famous Chicago theater. Every wheel in "Herald"-land. I don't suppose I can be present, because the producers will get all the coin out of this Alpine valley and it costs a Doug Fairbanks daily profit to get to Chicago, see the log and get back to Idaho.

However, those who live nearer can attend and it may be the means of forming some society for mutual protection against highwaymen in general; but if nothing more than the fun and pleasure of greeting old friends, "Herald" family is the final outcome it will surely pay.

Fred, your plan sounds good to me and I can land East for less than the worth of my theatre I'll do my "dreadnest" to be there.

PHILIP RAND,
Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.

won't bring out much praise, but neither will they kick.

Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—General patronage.

White Shoulders, with Katherine Mac- Donald.—Better than the average MacDonald picture.—C. F. Kriegehausen, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

White Shoulders, with Katherine Mac- Donald.—A little better than some of her previous pictures, but nothing to brag about.—B. E. Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—General patronage.

MIGHTY LAK' A ROSE, an Ed- win Carewe production—one of the picture miracles of the year. It has that thrilling quality that means success. Dozens of people told me that it was the best picture they ever saw.—B. C. WILLIAMS, Majestic theatre, Streator, Ill.

Kindred of the Dust, with Miriam Cooper.—100 per cent picture. Acting perfect. Pleased everybody. Had more good comments on this than any picture I ever ran.—George Vaughan, Grand theatre, Gunnville, Ont., Can.—General patronage.

Kindred of the Dust, with Miriam Cooper.—Another mighty good picture that will draw nothing but praise from those who are interested in pictures. The story is good, true, and clear. Every one can get them in to see it. Some said it was the best they had ever seen. I showed it for two weeks. Producers say the public demands specials, yet they don't come out to see them. Why? Because you are forced to take any admission. Result, they stay home.—P. G. Vaughan, Royal theatre, Lee's Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Kindred of the Dust, with Miriam Cooper.—Very good picture and pleased —C. V. Kelly, Majestic theatre, Reedsburg, Wis.—General patronage.

Kindred of the Dust, with Miriam Cooper.—A fine production that gave univer- sal satisfaction. Characters excellently cast. Will make good any promises made for it.—Hay & Nicholas, Strand theatre, Fairmont, Minn.—General patronage.

The Bond Boy, with Richard Barthel- mess.—Good picture, fair patronage. Gen- eral satisfaction.—S. H. Borsky, American theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn.—Neigh- borhood patronage.

The Bond Boy, with Richard Barthel- mess.—Very good picture. Please by major romantic. Work of star very fine. Good chance for publicity in states where capital punishment is an issue.—Hay & Nicholas, Strand theatre, Fairmont, Minn.—General patronage.

Brawn of the North, with Strongheart. Better business than on The Silent Call. Very good coming, please.—Fred, Reedsburg, Wis.—General patronage.

Brawn of the North, with Strongheart. Two days to turnover business. Sec- ond day bigger than first. All records broken. Played to over 50 per cent of population. A real feature. Everyone pleased.—C. A. Riva, Pastime theatre, Two H. H., Smelterville, Idaho.—General patronage.

Brawn of the North, with Strongheart. This is far better than The Silent Call and sure did get the money. We broke our house records. Played to over 50 per cent of population. A real feature. Everyone—Paul L. Shew, Rivoli theatre, Clinton, Ind.—General patronage.

Brawn of the North, with Strongheart. This drew very good business. A case of keen competition. Not quite as good as The Silent Call. Still one of the good ones to play.—C. V. Kelly, Majestic theatre, Reedsburg, Wis.—General patronage.

Fools First, a Marshall Neilan produc- tion.—Marshall Neilan production that will draw better for movie talkies than a picture well acted. Should be sold to a small town for about $750. One night shows $200 to $250. Placed with C. V. Kelly, Kozy theatre, Gunnville, Ont., Can.—General patronage.

East Is West, with Constance Tal- madge.—A perfect picture. Equiva- lence value 100 per cent. Constance Tal- madge will never have a more pleasing role and she did it just right. There is something about this picture that rests you to see it, as story is right and pro- duction is rich with beautiful settings that cannot be overlooked even by a hard- boiled fan. Two days showing to bet- ter than average business. Should do very good business.—B. C. Williams, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

The Eternal Flame, with Norma Tal- madge.—What a picture!—Richman, London, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Seventh Day, with Richard Barthel- mess.—Drew well and pleased, but not in as big business as in our town theatre, Tilton, N. H.—Small town patronage.

Domestic Relations, with Katherine Marshall.—Kind surprise. It is to laugh to think that this sort of pic- ture is made with the expectation of being entertainment for real people. We certainly got burnt when we signed the dotted line on the franchise. Our experience has been that we are lucky to get four pictures from one of the first National that will make us money. All the others are exhibited for the benefit of the producer and deal with "big" birds in the executive chairs—P. E. Morris, Regent theatre, Cleveland, Miss.—General patronage.

Hurricane's Gal, with Dorothy Phillips.—Even thought is filled with action, the director has worked in enough comedy and thrills so it pleases women and all.—Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, III.—General patronage.

Hurricane's Gal, with Dorothy Phillips.—A real melodrama that pleased about 10 per cent. Not worth a raise in admissions, but better than average.—A. La Valla, Community theatre, Bethel, Conn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hurricane's Gal, with Dorothy Phillips.—Mostly sea stuff. Really big picture, great action and this picture will determine if they work or not.—George Vaughan, Grand theatre, Dunville, Ont.—General patronage.

Penrod, a Marshall Neilan production.—Very good picture. A great picture for kids and plenty of laughter for the grown ups.—E. M. McFarland, Opera House, Kewanee, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Sign on the Door, with Norma Talmadge.—Expected this to be an extra good picture, but the story is weaker than fair and pleased only about 10 per cent. The rental is 50 per cent too high for this theatre.—Tram, Pastime theatre, Blue Mound, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Sign on the Door, with Norma Talmadge.—This is a good picture. Pleased the majority.—John Esterl, Rex theatre, Park Falls, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Sign on the Door, with Norma Talmadge.—Pleased the majority.—E. O. Gailey, Crystal theatre, Wayne, Neb.—General patronage.

Mamma's Affair, with Constance Talmadge.—Mamma's Affair. Fair picture. Should have been a reel and then been plenty long. An old picture at present price. They don't rush our box office over.—W. E. Gailey, Crystal theatre, Wayne, Neb.—General patronage.

Mamma's Affair, with Constance Talmadge.—My customers like Constance Talmadge. They liked it.—Frank E. Lee, Lee's theatre, Three Oaks, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Talogue David, with Richard Barthelmess.—A very fine production. Pleased all who saw it.—H. J. Trainer, Pastime theatre, Blue Mound, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Talogue David, with Richard Barthelmess.—They liked it.—Frank E. Lee, Lee's theatre, Three Oaks, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Crossroads of New York, a Mack Sennett production.—A very fine production, but paid big price.—Louis Frank, Olympic theatre, Calmar, Iowa.—General patronage.

The Child Thou Gavest Me, with a special cast.—I have had more comments on this picture than any I have ever run since in business.—Chas. Elliot, Jewel theatre, Sidell, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Child Thou Gavest Me, with a special cast.—A fine picture, the people do not have one house credit. If the people see this they will come again. However, it's old.—J. C. Wickham, Select theatre, Schenevus, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

All for a Woman, with a special cast.—This may be a good picture, but if it is played it and can buy it right do so. Will make you some money. Business good.—J. F. Gaveston, Lyric theatre, Eldon, Mo.—Small town patronage.

The Primitive Lover, with Constance Talmadge.—Gave very good satisfaction. Business good all week. Charged twenty-one and twenty-eight cents. Print good shape.—Jack Hickey, J. r., Grand theatre, New London, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Polly of the Follies, with Constance Talmadge.—Connie Talmadge and First National ought to be ashamed of this one. A few women said it was "cute." Nothing more nor less than an advertising film on seven spoons and rather raw at that in spots. Had lots of kicks.—C. G. Taunton, Royal theatre, Lee's Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.
John Estel, Rex theatre, Park Falls, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Man, Woman, Marriage, with Dorothy Phillips.—A great picture to some; no good to others.—Eugene Saunders, Saunders theatre, Harvard, Ill.—General patronage.

Molly O, a Mack Sennett production.—An old one that First National shoved off on me in order to get a few new ones. Of course, the print as old as the release. Lot of it gone. Did not draw. When will we learn not to buy junk?—P. G. Vaughan, Royal theatre, Lee's Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Molly O, a Mack Sennett production.—This is a good picture, but does not compare with Mickey, however.—D. A. Kooker, Happy Hour theatre, Ewen, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Wonderful Thing, with Norma Talmadge.—Placed this one after I had played Smilin' Through and The Eternal Flame, but it held its own and I did not get a kick.—Eugene Saunders, Saunders theatre, Harvard, Ill.—General patronage.

Not Guilty, with a special cast.—A mighty good picture that comes very near being in the special class. These Sidney Franklin productions seem to be made along the right lines to entertain.—Chas. W. Lewis, I. O. O. F. Hall, Grand Gorge, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Not Guilty, with a special cast.—This is old, but good. Good acting.—D. A. Kooker, Happy Hour theatre, Ewen, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Trouble, with Jackie Coogan.— Went well for me and should for everyone else.—Eugene Saunders, Saunders theatre, Harvard, Ill.—General patronage.

Red Hot Romance, with a special cast.—A very poor picture for a regular house. The satire is over their heads and the burlesque is taken seriously. You are better off without it.—Ben L. Morris, Elk Grand theatre, Bellaire, Ohio.—General patronage.

Red Hot Romance, with a special cast.—Just a picture. If it was funny it was over my patrons' heads. Did not satisify.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

The Sky Pilot, with a special cast.—Sure a fine offering of the Western type. Beautiful scenery and fine snow scenes. Plenty of action. Sure to please. Adverisising, window cards, photos, slide and paper.—K. A. Bechtold, Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Bob Hampton of Placer, a Marshall Neilan production.—Old, but good. Only objection to it was that it was too long. Nine reels of a feature and a two-reel comedy is too much at one sitting, regardless of how good it is.—Wm. E. Tragsdor, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Bob Hampton of Placer, a Marshall Neilan production.—As fine a picture as an exhibitor would want. Play up Sitting Bull and his Sioux Indians against Custe at the Battle of the Little Big Horn. Seven reels of fine entertainment.—K. A. Bechtold, Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Bob Hampton of Placer, a Marshall Neilan production.—Think this would have been a mighty fine picture if I had gotten it all. Film was cut so much that I only had about two-thirds of it. It's a shame to spoil a good picture like this with a poor print.—J. W. Andrews, Kialto theatre, Cozad, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The River's End, a Marshall Neilan production.—A good average Curwood with some very fine acting by Lewis Stone. No crowd. Didn't take in enough for my overhead, let alone pay for the picture and advertising matter.—K. A. Bechtold, Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Silent Call, with Strongheart.—A fine picture. Drew well.—C. F. Krieghoff, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

The Silent Call, with Strongheart.—Another, one of First National's good ones. The name alone will draw and picture pleases.—McFarland, Opera House, Kewanee, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Silent Call, with Strongheart.—This is a dandy. I do not want to miss a copy. I am making more money since I have been using the "Herald" in selecting pictures.

I do not remember just how long I am paid up for but all you have to do is to notify me just before the time expires and I will send you my check.

C. W. TIPTON, New theatre, Manila, Ark.

The Kink's Ironed Out; Write More

I am reporting on two pictures that I have run and I also want to call your attention to the fact that I am not using all my "Herald." I do not get any picture papers that I value as highly as I do yours and I do not want to miss a copy.

I am making more money since I have been using the "Herald" in selecting pictures.

New Ones I Have Seen

THE HOTTENTOT (First National) a Thos. H. Ince production. This is the story of a voyage of discovery in the South African desert. A good picture, but not a very good one. —M. Hillyer, Pastime theatre, Reserve, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Love's Redemption, with Norma Talmadge. —One of the very best pictures for the season. Elliott theatre, Sidell, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Golden Snare, with a special cast. —A good picture. Plenty of business, but no fault of picture. Played First National Week and lost a slug.—M. Hillyer, Pastime theatre, Reserve, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Salvation Nell, with a special cast. —A very good picture. 90 cent winner. First National are hard to beat if you can get them where people can run them.—Chas. Elliott, Jewell theatre, Sidell, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Blind Hearts, with Hobart Bosworth. —Good picture, though not as fine as Peck's Bad Boy or Trouble, and seemed to please better people that don't ordinarily come.—Chas. W. Lewis, J. O. O. F. Hall, Grand Gorge, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

The Sea Lion, with Hobart Bosworth. —Excellent sea picture. Pleased all who saw it. The storm is terrific and realistic. Should have been in six or seven reels instead of as it ended abruptly.—M. Hillyer, Pastime theatre, Reserve, Kan.—Small town patronage.

R. S. V. P., with Charles Ray. —A good picture, a pretty sight and plenty of action.—Chas. Elliott, Jewell theatre, Sidell, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Fox

The Crusader, with William Russell. —This is a very good picture and everybody liked it.—John Estler, Rex theatre, Park Falls, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Brass Commandments, with William Farnum. —Best of series this season. Does not draw here.—Nelson theatre, Pascagoula, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Paw Print 210, with Shirley Mason. —A good program picture, and not quite up to the standard of Shirley Mason pictures,—C. Malphurs, Dreamland theatre, High Springs, Fla.—Small town patronage.

My Friend the Devil, with a special cast. —Picture is good, but title and posters misleading. Don't shout too much about it and don't raise your admission fare too high.—M. Hillyer, Pastime theatre, Reserve, Kan.—Small town patronage.

The Fast Mail, with Charles Jones. —Very good picture, will pleased all that saw it. Didn't get in enough to pay the rental account but did well.—J. Martin, Family theatre, Attica, N. Y.—General patronage.

Silver Wings, with Mary Carr. —A very good picture which pleased all that saw it.—M. Hillyer, Pastime theatre, Reserve, Kan.—Small town patronage.

The Three Alarm (F. B. O.) with a special cast. —Saw this and it was hot stuff. Will report for the Lyric on it. A picture that pleased everyone. Did good business on it. It is above par for the money.—C. L. Chronchite, Lyric theatre, Fairview, Okla.

kinds.—J. P. Jones, Yale theatre, Groesbeck, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Love Gambler, with John Gilbert. —One of those kind of nice pictures that suits all classes.—Eugene Saunders, Saunders theatre, Harvard, Ill.—General patronage.

The Love Gambler, with John Gilbert. —This is a small screen picture. With John Estler, Rex theatre, Park Falls, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Yosemite Trail, with Dustin Farnum. —A good picture, but didn't get the people in to see it.—C. Malphurs, Dreamland theatre, High Springs, Fla.—Small town patronage.

Up and Going, with Tom Mix. —Not up to Mix's standard but a very good picture. A little draggy in spots.—Smith Read, Patriot theatre, DeKalb, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Moonshine Valley, with William Farnum. —Everyone enjoyed this feature. The child actor was great. The kind of picture that seems to please people.—C. Malphurs, Dreamland theatre, High Springs, Fla.—Small town patronage.

Men of Zanzibar, with William Russell. —Good picture. This story had our audience guessing all the way through as to who was the crook. Had to stay to the finish to find out.—Geo. J. Kress, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Oathbound, with Dustin Farnum. —Good story. Not liked by many. No praise for it. Fair one day picture.—O. W. McClellan, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fast Mail, with Charles Jones. —A good melodrama, but really not a high class picture. Too much action and not enough detail. It drew good business for three days, but caused little or no comment.—Ben L. Morris, Temple theatre, Belleair, Ohio.—General patronage.

The Fast Mail, with Charles Jones. —If you want a thriller get this one. It will please the people who like this sort of a picture. It is not worth an advance in admission price.—C. Malphurs, Dreamland theatre, High Springs, Fla.—Small town patronage.

Silver Wings, with Mary Carr. —A very good picture which pleased all that saw it. Didn't get in enough to pay the rental account but did well.—J. Martin, Family theatre, Attica, N. Y.—General patronage.

The Three Alarm (F. B. O.) with a special cast. —Boys, if you bought this one, pay for it, but if you value your health don't play it; or if you do play it, have the theatre before picture over. I heard something about a tar-and-feather party for me from my patrons.—Walter Balzat, Dream theatre, Cicero, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Nero, with a special cast.—Very good picture. Please all that saw it, but lost money on it.—J. Martin, Family theatre, Attica, N. Y.—General patronage.

Ever Since Eve, with Shirley Mason. —This is a five-reel picture and Miss Mason acted splendidly in this one. There is nothing wrong with the picture, except that it is not very active. A good program picture and should please.—Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Connersville, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Staged Romance and Shackles of Gold, with William Farnum. —Have been an exhibitor a year; have run thirty-two pictures, and think that Farnum is the only person in the bunch.—C. F. Kreigbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Self-Made Man, with William Russell. —A good program picture which pleased about 90 per cent.—Smith Read, Patriot theatre, DeKalb, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Trailing, with Tom Mix. —This is a dandy picture. Pleased 100 per cent. Applied for Mix as well as this one. Have never had a poor one yet.—E. D. Luna, Cozy theatre, Lincoln, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Neighborhood from Tennessee, with William Russell. —A picture with English location, but well acted. Usually these foreign pictures don't get over with us, but this one had a very good story with comedy enough to make it interesting. Should please any movie fans.—Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Connersville, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Trooper O'Neil, with Charles Jones. —Very good picture for Saturday. Jones better in this picture than the last—Strand theatre, Griswold, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fighting Steak, with Tom Mix. —Holds well up to the Mix standard, but it's not so bad at that.—C. F. Kreigbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

Shirley of the Circus, with Shirley Mason. —Shirley Mason pictures are always good. This one a little above the average.—C. Malphurs, Dreamland theatre, High Springs, Fla.—Small town patronage.

Lights of the Desert, with Shirley Mason. —Good picture, well acted. Mason is certainly good. Everybody pleased. Ran two days.—O. W. McClellan, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Strange Idols, with Dustin Farnum.
Dustin Farnum is good in Western pictures, but not much in this kind.—Smith Read, Patriot theatre, DeKalb, Tex.— Neighborhood patronage.

Bar Nothing, with Charles Jones.—Here is a picture that has plenty of action to please any audience. "Buck" Jones is my best bet. Don't worry when you have him on the billboard.—E. D. Luna, Cozy theatre, Lincoln, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Over the Hill, with Mary Carr.—Beat picture that I ever ran in my house, considering the stormy weather. Still business was fair and made a few dimes.—J. Martin, Family theatre, Attica, N. Y.—General patronage.

The Devil Within, with Dustin Farnum.—Five reels. A South Sea picture ending up in the States. It should be titled "The Sons of the Father," for that is the story of the picture. A picture that pleased all who saw it. It is a good Sunday picture. Dustin did some splendid acting with an able cast. Give this one and boost it and watch your patronage go away pleased.—Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fighting Streak, with Tom Mix.—Broke the record at my house for a Western. Played two days, Fair business second day.—O. W. McClellan, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, III.—Neighborhood patronage.

Monte Cristo, with John Gilbert.—A big picture that failed to draw. Although a good picture my patrons did not like it.—C. Malphurs, Dreamland theatre, High Springs, Fla.—Small town patronage.

The Strength of the Pines, with William Russell.—A dandy picture with good strong story and pleased all who saw it.—E. D. Luna, Cozy theatre, Lincoln, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Strength of the Pines, with William Russell.—Have seen the star in better pictures. Played Clyde Cook in Lazy Bones with this, which helped to get it by. Bosin had a fair share.—O. D. Dowdell, Electric theatre, Eldon, Mo.—Small town patronage.

The Last Trail, with a special cast—Corking good outdoor picture.—S. H. Borisy, American theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Bucking the Line, with Maurice Flynn.—We were a little afraid of this picture, but it pleased our patrons very much. It's a railroad story and has some good action. Has six full reels.—Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pardon My Nerve, with Charles Jones.—Up to Jones' standard on Westerns. He makes money for us.—W. M. Ward, Starlight theatre, Corinth, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Connecticut Yankee, with Harry Myers.—Old, but if you haven't used it, get it. Boost it big and your patrons will thank you for the privilege of seeing it, or at least mine thanked me.—J. D. Costello, Opera House, Poultny, Vt.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Last of the Duanes, with William Farnum.—Played return engagement with new reissued print. Went over big. Many compliments as would have on a new picture.—L. B. Lewis. Gayety theatre, Ft. Worth, Tex.—Transient patronage.

Chasing the Moon, with Tom Mix.—Surely was chasing something. A very poor Mix picture.—W. M. Ward, Starlight theatre, Corning, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Desert Blossoms, with William Russell.—Russell has done lots better. Will pass for program picture with a good company. Film in poor condition.—H. M. Retz, Strand theatre, Lamont, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Little Miss Haskshaw, with Elleen Haskshaw.—As sorry a picture as the exhibition company ever handed.—H. G. Stettmum, Jr., Odeon theatre, Chandler, Okla.—General patronage.

A Virgin Paradise, with Pearl White. She went very well as a program picture, but not any special by any means.—W. M. Ward, Starlight theatre, Corning, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

For Big Stayes, with Tom Mix.—Mix a favorite here. This picture did not please as well as former pictures.—H. C. Stettmum, Jr., Odeon theatre, Chandler, Okla.—General patronage.

A Rough Diamond, with Tom Mix.—A sure 'nut Tom Mix picture.—Smith Read. Patriot theatre, DeKalb, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Goldwyn

A Blind Bargain, with a special cast.—Very good mystery story. Charles does good work in a double role in this production. Played to S. R. O. for one night.—A. Burrus & Co., Powers theatre, Crete, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hungry Hearts, with a special cast.—Good program picture. On order of Humoresque.—S. M. Southworth, American theatre, Canton, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Sherlock Holmes, with John Barrymore.—Good picture for the kind, but too death and nothing in the way.—E. J. Reynolds, Liberty theatre, Paseo, Wash.—General patronage.

Broken Chains, with a special cast.—Did not please. Men didn't come and women thought it brutal and immoral for married woman to love another man.—H. G. Sommers & Co., Powers theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich.—General patronage.

Broken Chains, with a special cast.—Advertise this to the limit. It is there. A very fine picture that will please them all.—A. Burrus, Lyric theatre, Crete, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Sin Flood, with a special cast.—Last money. Picture did not play for four days.—H. G. Sommers & Co., Powers theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich.—General patronage.

The Sin Flood, with a special cast.—A good picture, but not a special as represented. Too much saloon.—John Es- tery, Rex theatre, Park Falls, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

When Romance Rides, with a special cast.—Stacked them up on this picture. Paid 100 per copy Carl Johnson, Pershing theatre, Florenceville, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

When Romance Rides, with a special cast.—Great picture, good plot. All are pleased.—O. W. McClellan, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, III.—Neighborhood patronage.

When Romance Rides, with a special cast.
cast.—Book this one, boys, you can buy it right and it is better than some really big spectacles. Picture doesn't stick to Zane Grey's story, "Wildfire," very closely. Film in good condition.—H. M. Kets, Strand theatre, Lamont, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Yellow Men and Gold, with a special cast.—Good picture and pleased all. With plenty of action. Should go over another city.—Geo. Klett, Texas theatre, El Paso, Texas.—Neighborhood patronage.

Yellow Men and Gold, with a special cast.—Good picture. No complaints.—Geo. Sykes, Ben Hur theatre, Ft. Worth, Texas.—Neighborhood patronage.

Yellow Men and Gold, with a special cast.—No pull to it. Did not give satisfaction. Pass it up, brothers.—W. McClellan, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Poverty of Riches, with Richard Dix.—Very good picture. Pleased 85 per cent. Had quite a few comments.—H. R. Ringler, Ringler's theatre, Bishopville, Md.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Poverty ofRiches, with a special cast—a program at the theatre as we ever ran. Will please all. Business fair.—J. Martin, Family theatre, Attica, N. Y.—General patronage.

W. F. Yeowen, with Cullen Landis.—Good, clean, clever comedy-drama. Contains several laughs. Did not cost a million dollars to produce, but will save the regulars at the better Houses.—H. S. Holland, Bishop theatre, Bishop, Calif.—Neighborhood patronage.

For Those We Love, with Betty Compson.—Good program and will please all if you get them in. Business fair.—J. Martin, Family theatre, Attica, N. Y.—General patronage.

Doubting for Romeo, with Will Rogers.—Not worth a shot. They can't make them worse.—H. R. Ringler, Ringler's theatre, Bishopville, Md.—Neighborhood patronage.

Head Over Heels, with Mabel Normand.—One of the worst pictures I ever ran and nothing to it. If you want to keep your friends, lay off this one.—D. F. Wolfe, Princess theatre, Lancaster, Pa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Invisible Power, with House Peters.—Good program picture.—Bert Silver, Silver family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

The Concert, with a special cast.—This went over good. Had no faith in it, so didn't buy it. It was, in spite of this, drew well and pleased all who saw it. A trifle spicy in spots. Used a two-reel comedy and Movie Chat with it.—C. H. Brown, Opera house, Lenora, Kan.—Small town patronage.

His Back Against the Wall, with a special cast.—A Western that is different. People should like more of this kind.—O. W. McClellan, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Madame X, with Pauline Frederick.—A wonderful picture. Will please. Very sad.—E. Harrell, Royal theatre, Dixon, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

The North Wind's Malice, with a special cast.—A real fine picture. Plenty of snow scenes. Drew well. Good picture.—John Estler, Rex theatre, Park Falls, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Dangerous Curve Ahead, with a special cast.—This is a fine picture. Don't be afraid of it. The advertising on this one is good.—E. O. Holmes, Gem theatre, Chester, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Prisoners of Love, with Betty Compson.—Fair, but some short subjeets go with it. The two would make a good program.—F. Crawford, Strand theatre, Griswold, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Dust Flower, with Helene Chadwick.— Pronounced fine by small crowd. Some very sympathetic parts and, although it couldn't be otherwise, the climax arrives hitting on all four, which puts it over seven reels.—S. V. Wallace, Idle Hour theatre, Cambridge Springs, Pa.—Transient patronage.

The Man With Two Mothers, with Cullen Landis.—A good, clean program picture.—W. M. Ward, Starlight theatre, Corning, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Brothers Under the Skin, with a special cast.—A fine domestic comedy. Pat O'Malley a regular hit. Everyone pleased with this one. Brought it right.—E. E. Bair, Strand theatre, Churubusco, Ohio.—Small town patronage.

An Unwilling Hero, with Will Rogers.—A fairly good program picture with enough comedy to put it over. Please most of them. Nothing impossible to it.—H. B. Bills, Opera house, Lenora, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Be My Wife, with Will Rogers.—This is an A1 comedy and we advise small town houses to book it. It entertains them.—Pratt & Dean, McCallie, Dickson, Tenn.—Good general patronage.

Golden Dreams, with a special cast.—Not much to it, although it will pass as a good comedy.—W. M. Ward, Starlight theatre, Corning, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hodkinson

No Trepassing, with Irene Castle.—Fair picture and did fair business. Paid fair price and the company is also fair, so there is no kick on this one.—Geo. Kress, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

SLIM SHOULDERs, with Irene Castle.—A good picture which has everything from soup to nuts. Will please the houseboys as well as the roughnecks. The only fault I could find was that it was in seven reels. We must exactly two reels more than was necessary. I showed Charles Chaplin in PAY DAY along with this, which made a nine-reel show. No matter how good your show is, too much is more than enough. This does not apply to the bigger shows. SLIM SHOULDERs but to 999 per cent of the other 7, 8, 9 and 10 reeler's which are on the screens with fearful regularity.—William E. Trask & Son, theatre, Churubusco, Ind.

The Headless Horseman, with Will Rogers.—Not a fair program picture. It sat two days and picture fell flat on the second. It was a good program picture for the school. We of this is to fail to please. Price too high on this picture.—Miller and Carroll, Gayety theatre, Amory, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Cameron of the Royal Mounted, with Garton Glass.—A good picture as any. Can be bought right and will bring them out.—A. H. Dodge, Palace theatre, Capac, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Rip Van Winkle, with Thomas Jeffers.—A good picture of the Rip Van Winkle story. Fair price. Pleased the kids and the adults. Photography and settings all good. Broke even on it, which is a whole lot at a chance. D. F. Wolfe, Carroll, Gaystue theatre, Amory, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Mysterious Rider, with a special cast.—One of the best they have ever had that please your patrons no matter what their likes are.—E. W. Longacher, New Glarus theatre, New Glarus, Wis.—General patronage.

Slim Shoulders, with Irene Castle.—We had lots of nice compliments on this one and then on the other hand said that it was too loud. A whole lot will price it about 75 per cent. In places just a little dark. Poor photography.—W. E. Elkin, Strand theatre, Eden, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Kentucky Colonel, with a special cast.—This is a fine picture and should be classed as a fair money picture. Sure to do well and good story of the South land. Nothing over done. All together human. Six reels.—S. V. Wallace, Idle Hour theatre, Cambridge Springs, Pa.—Transient patronage.

At the Sign of the Jack O'Lantern, with a special cast.—Not a box office attraction, nor did it create any enthusiasm in the theatre.—E. E. Bair, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

God's Crucible, with a special cast. Cannot name this picture for our own reputation don't play this one.—R. C. Williams, Majestic theatre, Streator, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Lichtman

The Hero, with a special cast.—This picture did a good week's business and is well thought of.—W. M. Hardin, Liberty theatre, Kansas City, Mo.

Shadows, with Lon Chaney.—Great in every sense of the word. A student picture I've hooked bannned out fine. More power to State Rights, boys. I'm for 'em.—E. E. Bair, Star theatre, Churubusco, Ohio.—Small town patronage.

Shadows, with Lon Chaney.—A high class production in every way, but is inclined to be "too slow," for the lower class of people. Lon Chaney's acting is supernatural.—C. W. Longacher, New Glarus, Wis.—General patronage.

Metro

All the Brothets Were Valiant, with a special cast.—A good sea story that hold the interest of audience from beginning to end. A picture that you can boost. Pleasure patron. Retail price right.,—A. E. Woodford, Princess theatre, Okolona, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Peg o'My Heart, with Laurette Taylor.—A great audience picture. Laurette does fine. Good business. Paid too much money for it, so buy it right and you won't lost on it.—E. E. Bair, State theatre, Churubusco, Ohio.—Small town patronage.

Youth to Youth, with Billy Dow.— Barely a program picture. Will make for itself enough extra good.—S. M. Southworth. American theatre, Canton,
If HENRY FORD had to quit making automobiles he could still make millions by exhibiting such pictures as JOHNNY HINES in a scene from 'Luck,' his new C. C. Burr feature for the independent market. This film is from an original story by Jackson Gregory.

We can't get them in on Miss Lake's pictures. They seem to please, but actually they don't draw him rental. The Golden Gift is extremely good, but that doesn't mean anything.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

There Are No Villains, with Viola Dana.—Star popular here. Production as a whole good. Attendance average.—Chas. O'Mara, Majestic theatre, Berryville, Va.—Neighborhood patronage.

Don't Write Letters, with Gareth Hughes.—A good average program picture.—S. W. Filsen, Opera House, Scott City, Kan.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Four Horsemen, a Rex Ingram production.—Mr. Small Town Exhibitor, play this picture. Now Metro will sell it to you reasonably. I stood them out for three nights on this.—A. Burrus, Lyric theatre, Crete, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

FIGHTIN' MAD, with William Desmond.—A new little Western with good acting; and a fine story, but rotten business. Perhaps not fault of picture.—J. Martin, Family theatre, Attica, N. Y.—General patronage.

FIGHTIN' MAD, with William Desmond.—As good a Western as you can buy. Boost it. Pleased all that saw it. Played to full capacity.—P. M. McFarland, Opera House, Kewanee, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Great Redeemer, with House Peters.—This is a good picture, but parts of it make one laugh. Who ever heard of solitary confinement for a stage robber sent to prison for ten years? Also, who ever heard of a murderer looking out of a window watching carpenters building the gallows to hang him? These things are rather crude and make picture fans laugh. Another scene brought a big laugh, when the prison closed for the night and closed the doors on hundreds of prisoners and the guards walked around and blew out the kerosene lamps. These directors are sure funny and must think the people are duds.—Geo. C. Starkey, Opera House, Montour Falls, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Conquering Power, a Rex Ingram production.—We liked it. It was heavy and had no action, but interesting and exceedingly well directed. Scenes laid... in France. The story of a miser—it is Balzac’s “Eugénie Grandet.” Average fan won’t like it. Society crowd will. Ill. Look at your clientele whether to book it or not. Unless Valentino draws well don’t run it. We put it on over Monday and Tuesday; put on some good music, charged forty and fifteen cents and did better than we anticipated. Valentino draws the ladies in this town and if you can fill my house it is the star for me. The price was right. I find Metro disposed to be fair. They have financially done me badly recently though I think this is not one of the, strongest.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

Back Home and Broke, with Thomas Meighan.—Let me add a word to the grand chorus of boosters for this story. It is the kind the people who pay the money like. They came in droves three days. Get it and please the people.—Ben. L. Morris, Temple theatre, Bel- laire, Ohio.—General patronage.

Back Home and Broke, with Thomas Meighan.—Report to exhibitors that I have played in two years, small town exhibitor. You can’t go wrong.—B. E. Crawford, Bowery, Fowler, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Back Home and Broke, with Thomas Meighan.—Contains heaps of fun and splendid suspense. Well suited to Thomas Meighan’s talents. Securely all our patrons.—E. W. Werner, Warwick theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—Neighborogtown patronage.

When Knighthood Was in Flower, with Marion Davies.—Got out a new set and pleased them all. Good for a change and business stimulant. But an exhibitor certainly pays all it’s worth.—Harry Holland, Bishop theatre, Bingham. Calif.—Neighborhood patronage.

When Knighthood Was in Flower, with Marion Davies.—Great picture. Made small profit at $1,30 boxoffice. Will play it again at fifty cents.—H. G. Sommers, Powers theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich.—General patronage.

When Knighthood Was in Flower, with Marion Davies.—So powerful is the story that I think exhibitors can do with it for a change and business boost. But an exhibitor certainly pays all its worth.—Harry Holland, Bishop theatre, Bingham, Calif.—Neighborhood patronage.

When Knighthood Was in Flower, with Marion Davies.—Was afraid of this on account of costume, but don’t let costume worry you, as it will give en- tire satisfaction. Pleased 100 per cent. Buy it again at fifty cents.—Jack Hill, Jr., Grand theatre, New London, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

When Knighthood Was in Flower, with Marion Davies.—Was afraid of this on account of costume, but don’t let costume worry you, as it will give entire satisfaction. Pleased 100 per cent. Buy it again at fifty cents.—H. G. Sommers, Powers theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich.—General patronage.

To Have and to Hold, with Bert Lytell and Betty Compson.—Lived up to its promise of interest and suspense clear through. Well produced and well acted. Better than the usual.—K. H. Sand.—S. M. Southworth, American theatre, Canton, N. Y.—Neighborhood and college patronage.

To Have and To Hold, with Bert Lytell and Betty Compson.—Plays on one that is sure to please the public, providing you can get them in. As usual the presentation of the story was handled in the form of rental.—K. H. Sink, Grand theatre, Union City, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

To Have and to Hold, with Bert Lytell and Betty Compson.—This picture pleased my patrons. It is a well produced

Back Home and Broke, with Thomas Meighan.—Let me add a word to the grand chorus of boosters for this story. It is the kind the people who pay the money like. They came in droves three days. Get it and please the people.—Ben. L. Morris, Temple theatre, Bel- laire, Ohio.—General patronage.
Don't swallow that "alibi" stuff. Here's one that needs an alibi badly.—C. V. Kelly, Majestic theatre, Reedsburg, Wis.—General patronage.

The Face in the Fog, with Lionel Barrymore.—Fine crook picture that holds the interest all the way through.—C. F. Kriegbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

The Ghost Breaker, with Wallace Reid.—Not his best. Few laughs. Poor business.—C. V. Kelly, Majestic theatre, Reedsburg, Wis.—General patronage.

The Ghost Breaker, with Wallace Reid.—Another good picture. But drew well and satisfied.—Eugene Saunders, Saunders theatre, Harvard, Ill.—General patronage.

A Bachelor Daddy, with Thomas Meighan.—The best picture in our estimation, this star has ever made. It pleased a good matinee and we filled the house for the night performance. By all means book this one. Play up the children.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Cowboy and the Lady, with a special cast.—A weak attempt at a picture. No plot, no action, nothing. A two-star failure. Did not give satisfaction and patrons said so.—C. V. Kelly, Majestic theatre, Reedsburg, Wis.—General patronage.

Bought and Paid For, with a special cast.—Very, very good. It drew well as the play was so well known. It pleased 95 per cent in spite of some poor comments I had read.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Beauty's Worth, with Marion Davies.—Very fine.—Frank E. Lee, Lee's theatre, Three Oaks, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford, a Cosmopolitan production.—A dandy. One that will please all. Better than most specials. Business was only fair. I think that the public got it confused with "The Son of Wallingford," as I ran it some time ago. If you have a saving for "The Son of Wallingford, be sure to tell them that the "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" is not a repeat show. The titles are confusing. Advertising, lobby and six sheets.—A. Mitchell, Dixie theatre, Russellville, Ky.—General patronage.

Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford, a Cosmopolitan production.—Interesting comedy-drama though not up to Vitagraph's "Son of Wallingford." Ran this Saturday night with "What's a White Eagle" and a good audience. Attendance is not a "riot of fun," but you need not be afraid of it. It holds the interest.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

The Great Moment, with Gloria Swanson.—Made a lot of noise about Elinor Glyn, "Three Weeks," etc. A good program picture, but nothing to rave over. If there was a "Great Moment" in this anywhere, I must have been looking out the window for I didn't see it.—Wm. F. Smith, Trocadero theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

The Great Moment, with Gloria Swanson.—Here, undoubtedly is one of Gloria's best. It is surely a picture that will please the most discriminating patron. Longacher, New Glarus theatre, New Glarus, Wis.—General patronage.

Cappy Ricks, with Thomas Meighan.—They like Meighan.—Frank E. Lee, Lee's theatre, Three Oaks, Mich.—General patronage.

Cappy Ricks, with Thomas Meighan.—Heard lots of good comments on this one. Based on a novel and the business was not big, but no fault of picture.—R. E. Benson, Princess theatre, Adrian, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Idol of the North, with Dorothy Dalton.—Very, very good. Played one fine day and made a good program with two reel comedy.—F. Crawford, Strand theatre, Griswold, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Idol of the North, with Dorothy Dalton.—As part of a double feature bill, this was the weakest. A very ordinary program picture that needs something good to bolster it up.—Chas. W. Lewis, I. O. O. F. Hall, Grand Gorge, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Behold My Wife, with a special cast.—Great. Going to the best theatre in town. Put on Milton Sills does a wonderful piece of acting. The cast is good. My patrons were pleased and said so.—J. A. Burrell, Family theatre, East Tawas, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Behold My Wife, with a special cast.—Can't go wrong on this picture. Very pleasing picture.—F. Crawford, Strand theatre, Griswold, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Law and the Woman, with Betty Compson.—A very interesting picture and will please the majority, but small towns having reformers in it, leave it alone. Too much drinking and cigarette smoking by women.—W. Anderson, Rialto theatre, Cozad, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Law and the Woman, with Betty Compson.—A picture that holds your interest for the reason of its unexpected twists. Betty Compson plays an unusual role in this one.—E. J. Reynolds, Liberty theatre, Pasco, Wash.—General patronage.

Her Gilded Cage, with Gloria Swanson.—A well produced picture. Very beautiful settings, but this kind does not draw the crowds for it. It was not the best.—A. Burrell, Lyric theatre, Crete, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Her Gilded Cage, with Gloria Swanson.—A very good picture.—Anderson &

Johnson, New Penn theatre, Minneapolis, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Her Gilded Cage, with Gloria Swanson.—A wonderful picture. Drew fine business, and yet much for those that enjoyed by all classes.—A. LaValla, Community theatre, Bethel, Conn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Across the Continent, with Wallace Reid.—4/5 reel. Our patronage is for Wally Reid, although he has passed away and even though quite a few of his admirers did not come on this account. We record the attendance of the winter to see this great racing story. As usual, Theodore Roberts made a big hit.—E. E. Gailey, Crystal theatre, Wayne, Neb.—General patronage.

Blood and Sand, with Rodolph Valentino.—A well named picture. Good direction and good acting as well as excellent photography, with an unhappy ending which was brought upon the audience, although it was a good business.—E. E. Gailey, Crystal theatre, Wayne, Neb.—General patronage.

Blood and Sand, with Rodolph Valentino.—Direction and acting good, but story and Spanish stuff not what most of my patrons want.—S. M. Southworth, Anderson & Jonsen, N. Y.—Neighborhood and college patronage.

Blood and Sand, with Rodolph Valentino.—Paramount got 73 per cent of my receipts. Not much drawing power here.—C. L. Bell, Happy Hour theatre, Reedsburg, Wis.—General patronage.

Blood and Sand, with Rodolph Valentino.—A fine production. If the ending was happier it would take as well as any picture I know of.—Andrews & Jonsen, New Penn theatre, Minneapolis, Minn. — Neighborhood patronage.

Too Much Speed, with Wallace Reid.—Great business. Very popular. Drew well.—A. LaValla, Community theatre, Bethel, Conn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Green Temptation, with Betty Compson.—Good picture and gave satisfaction. Print in good shape. Admissions ten and twenty-eight cents.—Jack Hingley, Jr., Grand theatre, New London, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Green Temptation, with Betty Compson.—Showed this with Now or Never and raised prices slightly. This feature proved to be well liked and many patrons remarked upon excellency of the show. Attendance good.—A. LaValla, Community theatre, Bethel, Conn.—Neighborhood patronage.

At the End of the World, with Betty Compson.—This is a good program picture. D. A. Rodolph, Happy Hour theatre, Ewen, Mich.—Small town patronage.

North of the Rio Grande, with Jack Holt.—A fairly good Western of the higher class variety.—C. W. Longacher Electric theatre, Eldon, Mo.—Small town patronage.

The Sheik, with Rodolph Valentino.—Played it a year ago and broke record for one day's take. We did better than usual on one day return recently.—S. M. Southworth, American theatre, Canton, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Sheik, with Rodolph Valentino.—Consider this a 100 per cent attraction. This picture should bring them out if any of them will. We had the good fortune during Lent had something to do with this.—D. F. Wolfe, Princess theatre, La Lasing, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Always Audacious, with Wallace Reid.—Here is an old one, but it is more interesting than Don't Tell Everything, and I paid double for the new and didn't give as good satisfaction.—E. J. Laqua, Gem theatre, Hankinson, N. D.—General patronage.

The Lost Romance, with a special cast.—Although the action is slow it is a very interesting picture. The theme is a vital question in almost every home today and is a help to the struggling school couple.—Amsberry & Leuzinger, Carthage theatre, Carthage, S. Dak.—Neighborhood patronage.

Three Live Ghosts, a Compton production.—Very good picture, but no business.—E. J. Reynolds, Liberty theatre, Pasco, Wash.—General patronage.

Miss Lulu Bett, with a special cast.—Did not draw. My patrons thought it was lukewarm attraction. Theodore Roberts the outstanding entertainer.—F. E. Sabin, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

A Prince There Was, with Thomas Meighan.—A fair picture. Nothing to rave about.—John Esler, Rex theatre, Park Falls, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Conrad in Quest of His Youth, with Thomas Meighan.—Did not draw as good as either Meighan pictures, but pleased those who came. We consider it a good program picture.—O. L. Dowell, Electric theatre, Eldon, Mo.—Small town patronage.

The Gilded Lily, with Mae Murray.—Pleased patrons and had fair attendance. Miss Murray keeps her good picture, however.—S. G. Ilbe, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

While Satan Sleeps, with Jack Holt.—This is the kind of pictures for Hoyt Jones, Yale theatre, Groesbeck, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Exit the Vamp, with Ethel Clayton.—Five full reels. Ethel Clayton may have made a poor picture once upon a time, but we have failed to get it. None of her pictures are knockouts and there is a sameness to all of them, yet there is enough difference and enough Ethel Clayton to actually satisfy our patrons, and this one was no exception. We are surely sorry that she has left Paramount.—Horn & Morgan, Star theatre, Hay Springs, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Three Word Brand, with William S. Hart.—Good picture, up to the standard of this star's pictures. Have heard some exhibitors say Hart doesn't get them in well. We did. Give this one a trial and see for yourselves.—Geo. J. Kress, Holden theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Three Word Brand, with William S. Hart.—A good Hart production, but paid too much for this. Buy it right and will make you some money.—O. L. Dowell.

Gladys Walton and Ramsay Wallace in a scene from "Gossip" (Universal). didn't like it.—Frank E. Lee, Lee's theatre, Three Oaks, Mich.—General patronage.

The Great Impersonation, with James Kirkwood.—Heavy, absorbing, beautifully produced English society war mystery drama featuring a German spy in the House of Lords. Ann Forest takes the difficult part of a mentally unbalanced girl and wife in a highly creditable manner. High class in every respect. It failed totally in drawing power. Big loss. Name against it, though we advertised E. Phillips Oppenheim's name as author.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

Ladies Must Live, with Betty Compson.—Fair story. Too hard to follow in the first two reels.—Faustel & Evans, Ahna theatre, Alna, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

White Oak, with William S. Hart.—A good star. One of the few.—Frank E. Lee, Lee's theatre, Three Oaks, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Old Wives for New, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—Large picture. Dr. Milne made. It is fair entertainment, but it is censurable.—W. Longacher, New Grinnell theatre, New Grinnell, Wis.—General patronage.

The Dancing Fool, with Wallace Reid.—Another good Reid picture. Pleasing. 75 cents per cent. Well worth the fare of this drawing card here. Too bad that such an accomplished actor as he was had to die. His place will never be filled by another.—M. Hillyer, Pastime theatre, Reserve, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Find the Woman, a Cosmopolitan production.—Held interest.—Frank E. Lee, Lee's theatre, Three Oaks, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Testing Block, with William S. Hart.—Fair. Patrons said they enjoyed it.—F. Crawford, Strand theatre, Griswold, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Saturday Night, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—An entertaining picture with quite a bit of comedy.—C. F. Kriehbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

The Jucklins, with Monte Blue.—Gave good satisfaction. Little slow, but made good program.—F. Crawford, Strand theatre, Griswold, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Humoresque, a Cosmopolitan production.—Picture old, but good. If you haven't played it, book and boost it, as it will stand raise of admission.—H. R. Ringeler, Ringler's theatre, Bishopville, Md.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Wild Goose, a Cosmopolitan production.—This was a good picture and we had a very quiet audience, which is evidence that everybody was interested.—Geo. N. Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Little Minister, with Betty Compson.—Good picture. Did not draw well. Probably because of bad weather.—C. A. Kriehbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

The City of Silent Men, with Thomas Meighan.—Just fair program picture. Dark in spots, but what is there to it after it's over?—F. Crawford, Strand theatre, Griswold, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Over the Border, with a special cast.—A very good story of the Northern mounted type that always finds many admirers. Not a great original story, but a good one.—Rex, Morris, Elkhart, Grand theatre, Bellaire, Ohio.—General patronage.

Appearances, with a special cast.—Fair program picture. Did not stand them up on this one.—Geo. J. Kress, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Forever, with Wallace Reid and Elsie Ferguson.—Played originally at $1 top (hopped). This was second run to thirty cents admission and very satisfactory business, but is only for high class following. Advertised as the one picture by which Reid should be remembered.—Sterling theatre, Grecy, Colo.—General patronage.

Pathé

Dr. Jack, with Harold Lloyd.—I simply couldn't take care of the business on this picture. Lloyd gets better and better and you can't make a mistake by booking him and advertising this picture.—A. S. Widaman, Centennial theatre, Warsaw, Ind.—General patronage.

Dr. Jack, with Harold Lloyd.—His very best comedy. It is impossible for us to break even on them. Our patrons want him soon after St. Louis or Little Rock runs, or we never hear the last of it.—W. M. Ward, Starlight theatre, Corn- ing, Ark.—General patronage.

Nanook of the North, with a special cast.—I found that although this is an excellent educational subject, my patrons did not care for it as they come to be entertained.—C. W. Strother, New Glarus, Wis.—General patronage.

Nanook of the North, with a special cast.—Everyone boosts this, but for the ordinary house it is a picture of geography poor and dark. Too much same kind of stuff. As a three reel added attraction it would be a knockout on any market.—W. T. Allen, Little Empire theatre, Bellaire, Ohio.—General patronage.

Nanook of the North, with a special cast.—One of the best pictures of its kind ever shown in this city. Get the schools back of you and clean up. Rent reasonable.—Jack Hickey, Jr., Grand theatre, New London, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Killers, with a special cast.—Good Western. Drew good on a Saturday night. Consider it a very satisfactory offering.—R. E. Benson, Princess theatre, Adrian, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Playgoers

Reckless Chances, with J. P. McGowan.—Good picture. Plenty of action.—A. K. Roth, Crystal theatre, Silver Creek, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Reckless Chances, with J. P. McGowan.—A nice clean Western railroad story with plenty of action. This is more of a railroad than a Western. Don't be afraid of this as it is all to the good.—K. A. Bechtold, Opera house, Martinsville, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Hills of Missing Men, with J. P. McGowan.—Here is a real Western special. If your patrons like Westerns get this and tell them about it.—R. S. Moore, Gem theatre, Snyder, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Ruse of the Rattler, with J. P. McGowan.—A sure fire Western that has plenty of action and a good picture. Took in only $7.92 on a Saturday night. School has taken what business there was here.—K. A. Bechtold, Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Through the Storm, with Edith Stockton.—Not much to say for the picture, but we cannot kick on the business that we had with it as it was more than the picture deserved. Dan Mason in Pop Tuttle's Long Shot that brought what business we had.—Paul L. Shew, Rivoli theatre, Clinton, Ind.—General patronage.

Sunshine Harbor, with Margaret Bex- chener.—A very nice little picture of the South and North. Nothing big, but pleased what few came to see it. The last two weeks has been paid out of house to pay overhead.—K. A. Bechtold, Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Tracks, with Bill Patton.—A really good Western and one that should make you some money. Noble Johnson makes a better bad man than he did a Friday.—R. Ross Kelley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kan.—General patronage.

Father Tom, with Tom Wise.—A dandy rural comedy-drama with a lovable old priest. If you are a Catholic community advertise it big for it will be sure to please.—K. A. Bechtold, Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.
Realart

The Sleep Walker, with Constance Baines.—A pleasing program picture—C. F. Kriehbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

Her Face Value, with Wanda Hawley.—Five reels. Good. The best of the day we have ever shown. Film in good condition.—Walter H. Musson, Queen's theatre, Hesper, Ont., Can.—Small town patronage.

Everything for Sale, with Mae McAvoy.—A good program offering.—Mrs. C. H. Cannon, Gem theatre, Kouts, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Truthful Liar, with Wanda Hawley.—George Salmon.—C. H. Simpson, Princess theatre, Millen, Ga.—General patronage.

Through a Glass Window, with May McAvoy.—Just a fair picture.—C. F. Kriehbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Selznick

One Week of Love, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Most satisfactory picture from both box office and audience standpoint. Pitman.—Hammerstein draws all classes. Very sensational paper, made cut-out of 24 sheet to play up train wreck and four stars. Have played biggest plays lately and this is getting as much money as the best of them.—Ray McMinn, Capitol theatre, Superior, Wis.—General patronage.

One Week of Love, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Better than the average special for me. Please all whom I can talk to.—Eugene Saunders, Saunders theatre, Harvard, Ill.—General patronage.

Love Is an Awful Thing, with Owen Moore.—Very good picture. Please all. It's different and should be used when possible to give patrons change.—Ray McMinn, Capitol theatre, Superior, Wis.—General patronage.

Evidence, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Nothing to rave about. Did not draw good. Poor exploitation. Too much samey.—Loyalty advertising lacks. Can't arouse them enough to get them in on select's.—R. E. Benson, Princess theatre, Elyria, Ohio.—General patronage.

Repealed Missing, with Owen Moore.—Seven reels. Tom Wilson as the coon was the real star. Good entertainment, but did not draw here, but not fault of picture.—C. F. Kriehbaum, Queen's theatre, Hesper, Ont., Can.—Small town patronage.

Repealed Missing, with Owen Moore.—10 reel.—Terry-Net.—I don't have to talk about anything. Plenty of laughs in this one. Colored man very good.—J. K. Koopman, American Opera House, Amenia, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Repealed Missing, with Owen Moore.—Extra good comedy, for a fact the best I have seen in a long time. Very few patrons commented this.—E. G. Wilson, Opera house, Odell, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Wonderful Chance, with Eugene O'Brien.—A fair program picture, with Valentino in it, which was made three or four years ago.—Smith Read, Patriot theatre, DeKalb, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Wonderful Chance, with Eugene O'Brien.—Fair program picture,职务 Valentino wears a mustache in this one. The ladies didn't recognize him, I don't think, and were somewhat deceived.—P. G. Vaughan, Royal theatre, Lee's Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Under Oath, with Elaine Hammerstein.—About on a par with other Hammerstein pictures. Another basket ball game. 'Nuf sed. Played to a total of 21 adults and four kids. I am glad there are still few exhibitors in this small town that are making a living.—K. A. Bechtold, Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Wide Open Town, with Conway Tearle.—Fair program picture, fine story. My people liked it better than some specials.—J. Martin, Family theatre, Attica, N. Y.—General patronage.

Why Announce Your Marriage? with Elaine Hammerstein.—A good first class comedy-drama that seemed to satisfy all. This star always pleases our patrons. Hammerstein is not as big of a star in the small town exhibitor.—A. E. Woodfin, Princess theatre, Okolona, Miss. Neighborhood patronage.

Chivalrous Charley, with Eugene O'Brien.—Ran this with Selznick News and Lloyd reissue. A good five reel program in which O'Brien gets in trouble saving the women.—J. W. Helt, Pastime theatre, Hornic, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Channelling the Northwest, with Eugene O'Brien.—The slowest picture that ever ran in my house, although there were just few kids. Business poor.—J. Martin, Family theatre, Attica, N. Y.—General patronage.

Love's Masquerade, with Conway Tearle.—This is a nice program picture, but didn't like it as well as some of Tearle's others. I have never been able to get anyone in on Conway Tearle.—K. A. Bechtold, Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Way of a Maid, with Elaine Hammerstein.—A good comedy-drama that pleased.—Smith Read, Patriot theatre, DeKalb, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Clay Dollars, with Eugene O'Brien.—Good. You don't and can't figure out his idea and don't see where it's going in the last.—E. G. Wilson, Opera House, Odell, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Poor Dear Margaret Kirby, with Elaine Hammerstein.—A good program picture that will please all. Poor business on account of the weather being bad.—J. Martin, Family theatre, Attica, N. Y.

Blind Youth, with a special cast.—Very good program picture in which Walter McGrail does some good work in this picture. Pleased 90 per cent.—C. F. Kriehbaum, Paramount theatre, Millen, Ga.—General patronage.

The Safety Curtain, with Norma Talmadge.—Good revival which pleased a Saturday night audience. Business fair.—J. Martin, Family theatre, Attica, N. Y.—General patronage.

Happiness a la Mode, with Constance Talmadge.—Reissue. Nice little program pictures. Pleased to small audience.—P. G. Vaughan, Royal theatre, Lee's Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Up the Road with Sally, with Constance Talmadge.—A fine revival with plenty of pathos in it. Audience roared all night.—J. Martin, Family theatre, Attica, N. Y.—General patronage.

Luxe Annie, with Norma Talmadge.—This reissue is a good one for the so-called specials. Pleased a large audience.—A. LaValia, Community theatre, Beloit, Conn.—Small town patronage.

Her Only Way, with Norma Talmadge.—These reissues are a good buy and will get you business. Fine films. Select service.—P. G. Vaughan, Royal theatre, Lee's Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Secret of the Storm Country, with Norma Talmadge.—Very good reissue on the order of Tease.—This reissue drew better than usual Tuesday night crowd. Print fine.—P. G. Vaughan, Royal theatre, Lee's Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

United Artists

Douglass Fairbanks in Robin Hood.—A masterpiece. A more perfect picture I never hope to see. Douglass Fairbanks is wonderful in his portrayal of "Robin Hood." He is the "Robin Hood" the most delightful, mischievous, devil-may-care, character ever shown on the screen. Richard, John and Maid Marian are exceedingly well done; in fact the whole cast fits in and works like clockwork. The first half of the picture, while good, is just a wee bit slow, but from the time "Robin Hood" arrives on the scene everything is snap and jingle. The romance between him and Marian is beautiful and elish in its plot. The work out smoothly to a wonderful grand climax. Would recommend anything ever shown on the screen. Shown four days to capacity business.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester.—General patronage.

Orphans of the Storm, a D. W. Griffith production.—A little long, but a truly big picture.—S. H. Borisky, American theatre, Chatanooga, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Ruling Passion, with George Arliss.—Very good story and good acting. Tried three of this star's pictures but they fell down on all of them. However, it was no fault of the pictures.—Geo. J.
Kress, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Nut, with Douglas Fairbanks.—Not what you would expect of Fairbanks, but still it seemed a pleasant surprise. Should please 75 per cent.—H. J. Trainer, Pastime theatre, Blue Mound, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Way Down East, a D. W. Griffith production.—I have used many a picture since I have been in the business but I have never used one before and shewed to as many people and never received a knock on it. The rental is out of reason, though.—S. G. Holte, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

The Iron Trail, with a special cast.—Poor picture, poor photography and poor business. Paid price of a special and is far from being one. Brother exhibitors watch out for United Artists.—J. Martin, Family theatre, Attica, N. Y.—General patronage.

The Iron Trail, with a special cast.—A well made production that should please 85 per cent. The ice scenes are very good and the players do good work.—H. J. Trainer, Pastime theatre, Blue Mound, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Through the Back Door, with Mary Pickford.—Placed 1 per cent, but lost money. Rental too high for small town.—D. F. Wolfe, Princess theatre, Lansing, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Down on the Farm, a Mack Sennett production.—Contrary to reports, we thought this an excellent comedy. Although we paid too much money for it we broke even. We played it only one day, but would have done better if we had played it two.—Miller & Carroll, Gayety theatre, Amtoy, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Love Light, with Mary Pickford.—Would have been a fair program picture if it had been all there. Film in poor condition account of titles cut short.—Geo. Hake, Lyric theatre, Belmond, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Universal

A Gentleman from America, with Hoot Gibson.—Well directed and very amusing comedy drama which will likely be a class of patronage.—W. H. Harman, Strand theatre, Kingsport, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Flirt, with a special cast.—A great picture. Played to capacity business.—Jas. D. Kennedy, Apollo theatre, Indianapolis, Ind.—General patronage.

The Flirt, with a special cast.—Very fine production. Pleased all who came out.—Wilson theatre, Pascagoula, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Flaming Hour, with Frank Mayo.—A very fine picture. A little different from his usual type of picture, but good. Will please.—J. W. Anderson, Rialto theatre, Cozad, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Flame of Life, with Priscilla Dean.—Fine picture that did not please my patrons. Lost money on it.—Nelson theatre, Pascagoula, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Paid Back, with Gladys Brockwell.—This offering gave good satisfaction. Some beautiful scenery on the South Sea Isles.—E. D. Luna, Cozy theatre, Lincoln, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Another Man's Shoes, with Herbert Rawlinson.—Only a program picture. No business on this one.—Lewis & Brisco, Princess theatre, Elwood, Ind.—General patronage.

Kindled Courage, with Hoot Gibson.—Pleased a Saturday crowd greatly, many asking to see it again. Splendid program picture.—W. H. Harman, Strand theatre, Kingsport, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Girl Who Ran Wild, with Gladys Walton.—This was fine. It pleased the majority. Good drawing title here. Good box office attraction.—Three Threes, Lyric theatre, Manning, Tex.—Small town patronage.

The Girl Who Ran Wild, with Gladys Walton.—A good program picture which drew a first dollar better than her previous ones.—G. G. May, Isis theatre, Kanzopolis, Kans.—Small town patronage.

Forsaking All Others, with a special cast.—Hoot Gibson left all previous pictures in the dust. Pictures like this and we will close up.—Lewis & Brisco, Princess theatre, Elwood theatre, Elwood, Ind.—General patronage.

Forsaking All Others, with a special cast.—Fair picture. Colleen Moore helps a lot in putting this over.—E. J. Laqua, Gem theatre, Hankinson, N. D.—General patronage.

Ridin' Wild, with Hoot Gibson.—The same old story. Hoot always pleases and draws here.—Eugene Saunders, Rialto theatre, Harvard, Ill.—General patronage.

Ridin' Wild, with Hoot Gibson.—I'm for you Hoot. This was a dandy. Little taken at the beginning, but comedy scenes offset it, but after that Hoot gives us some real action and stunts. Give us some more like that.—E. J. Laqua, Gem theatre, Hankinson, N. D.—General patronage.

Ridin' Wild, with Hoot Gibson.—Hoot is consistently good, but this one fell down. We must expect an occasional mediocre picture from the best of them.—F. E. Sabin, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Don't Shoot, with Herbert Rawlinson.—Everybody well pleased with this picture. Rawlinson liked very much here.—Carl Johnson, Pershing theatre, Floresville, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Don't Shoot, with Herbert Rawlinson.—Well received by our patrons. Universal features seem to please. We use these every week.—Chas. W. Marks, New theatre, Berryville, Va.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Long Chance, with a special cast.—A very good program picture. Acting of the leads very good.—Wm. E. Tragsdorff, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

The Long Chance, with a special cast.—A very good picture. Well done. Had no drawing power for us. Smallest Fri-night business we've ever played Cuts. Complete comedy with Ina Morris and this, Some Family.—O. L. Dowell, Electric theatre, Eldon, Mo.—Small town patronage.

The Galloping Kid, with Hoot Gibson.—This is a good comedy Western. It got lots of laughs. Give us a little more action in these and they will be fine.—E. J. Laqua, Gem theatre, Hankinson, N. D.—General patronage.

Caught Bluffing, with Frank Mayo.—Patrons seemed well pleased with this picture.—Carl Johnson, Pershing theatre, Floresville, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Lone Hand, with Hoot Gibson.—An excellent program picture. Star well liked here. I consider this one of his best.—Chas. W. Marks, New theatre, Berryville, Va.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Kentucky Derby, with Reginald Denny.—This picture did not not please. Not enough pep for a race track picture. Did good business. Charged fifteen and forty cents.—Jack Hickey, Jr., Grand theatre, New London, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Kentucky Derby, with Reginald Denny.—Another Denny winner. Had small patronage, but all who came were highly pleased. A good one from start to finish.—J. J. Kendall, Victory theatre, Milledgeville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Afraid to Fight, with Frank Mayo.—Better than the average Mayo. Good picture scene.—W. F. Ellison Opera House, Scott City, Kans.—Neighborhood patronage.

Afraid to Fight, with Frank Mayo.—Good entertaining picture.—C. F. Kreigbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.
—General patronage.

Under Two Flags, with Priscilla Dean.
—Personally I didn’t care so very much for this picture. If your patrons like this kind of stuff, then it will go over.
Lost heavily as nobody came. It’s in eight reels. Admission ten and thirty-five cents.—G. F. Rediske, Star theatre, Rye-gate, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Under Two Flags, with Priscilla Dean.
—A worth while picture for any exhibitor to run. Please here immensely.
Print good. Charged fifteen and thirty-five cents.—Ike Higbee, Grand theatre,
New London, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Under Two Flags, with Priscilla Dean.
—Good picture full of thrills and well worth an afternoon or evening’s time.—
W. H. Harman, Strand theatre, Kingsport, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Lavender Bath Lady, with Gladys
Walton.—Fair picture. It has been a long time since we had a good picture from this star.—Geo. J. Kress, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood
patronage.

Wild Honey, with Priscilla Dean.
—Fairly good picture. Drags till near the cnd.—D. A. Kooker, Happy Hour theatre, Ewen, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Confidence, with Herbert Rawlinson.
A good offering with a good story and likeable star.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town
patronage.

Confidence, with Herbert Rawlinson.
Good. Star has good following here.
Played entirely comedy. Kicking Fool with this. Made good program for Friday night show.—O. L. Dowell, Electric theatre, Eldon, Mo.—Small town patronage.

Confidence, with Herbert Rawlinson.
Anderson & Johnson, New Penn theatre, Minneapolis, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Headin’ West, with Hoot Gibson.—A very good Western. Had several tell me it was best Gibson they ever saw.—S. G.
Hicks, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.
—Small town patronage.

Headin’ West, with Hoot Gibson.
100 per cent program feature. Hoot is a drawing card for this. Good box office attraction.—Lee M. Threet, Lyric theatre, Manning, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Headin’ West, with Hoot Gibson.
Good. Good action from start to finish.
—E. G. Wilson, Opera House, Odell.
Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Headin’ West, with Hoot Gibson.
Good. I have begun to think he has gone West. I have been trying to get more of Hoot, but cannot.—R. R. Ringler, Ringler’s theatre, Bishopville, Md.
—Neighborhood patronage.

Headin’ West, with Hoot Gibson.
Good. Good action from start to finish.
—E. G. Wilson, opera House, Odell,
Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—This is one of the season’s best and pleased a large crowd. It has everything to make it a very good picture and will stand a raise of admission.—A. LaValla, Community theatre, Bethel, Conn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Delicious Little Devil, with Mae
Murray.—This is the poorest picture Mae Murray ever made.—D. A. Kooker, Happy Hour theatre, Ewen, Mich.—Small town
patronage.

Human Hearts, with House Peters.
Just an extra good program picture, is all you can say for it. Will please too, even if it is all hokum. However, it should be bought for less than The Storm. Did not draw. Too much flu and basket ball.—P. G. Vaughan, Royal theatre, Lee’s Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Human Hearts, with House Peters.
Very good picture to excellent business.
House Peters is a wonderful actor and his patrons think well of him. Anyone ought to clean up on Human Hearts —Paul L. Shew, Rivoli theatre, Clinton,
Ind.—General patronage.

Human Hearts, with House Peters.
A very good melodrama with plenty of soff stuff and a sterling cast. Personally, do not care for this type of picture.—F.
E. Sabin, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.
—Small town patronage.

The Golden Gallows, with Miss du-Pont. This was a very poor program feature. Miss doupont is well liked, but Universal gives her no stories. Box of-ice receipts poor.—Lee M. Threet, Lyric theatre, Manning, Tex.—Small town patronage.

The Golden Gallows, with Miss du-Pont. Have never had Miss duPont many times, but this picture pleased very much.—Carl Johnson, Pershing theatre, Floresville, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Step on It, with Hoot Gibson.—It’s too dark. Fine if it was not so dark.—G. L Blasingame, Hans theatre, Halls, Tenn.
—Neighborhood patronage.

Step on It, with Hoot Gibson.—Hoot well liked here. Print in very bad condition. Too much night scene and almost too bad to run.—Carl Johnson, Pershing theatre, Floresville, Tex.—Neighborhood
patronage.

The Dangerous Little Demon, with Marie Prevost.—This was an excellent comedy. Was liked by all who saw it.—
Lee M. Threet, Lyric theatre, Manning,
Tex.—Small town patronage.

Playing with Fire, with Gladys Walton.
—Walton won’t go for me. She likes to pose too much, and my patrons want moving pictures.” Personally thought this one too silly.—S. G. Hede, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Danger Ahead, with Mary Philbin.
—This was a dandy picture and pleased all who saw it.—E. D. Luna, Cozy theatre, Lincoln, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Vitagraph

The Ninety and Nine, with a special cast.—One of the best melodramas in years. It properly exploited will get the business and please 95c.—C. R. Hatcher, Grand Opera House, Meridian, Miss.—
Neighborhood patronage.

The Ninety and Nine, with Colleen
Moore.—Fire scene equal to The Storm.
A fine picture. Just as good as My Wild Irish Rose.—F. H. Guy, Brady Opera House, Tuscums, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Ninety and Nine, with Colleen
Moore.—played this picture as against Manslaughter and Oliver Twist and will venture to say that we knocked 'em for a severe round. This much was a surprise to Paul L. Shew, Rivoli Theatre, Clinton, Ind.—General patronage.

A Front Page Story, with a special cast—William Calhoun, the star, will play at the new lamp shed, which will give the show a new setting. It will be a good one. W. T. Hatcher, Grand Opera House, Meridian, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Front Page Story, with a special cast—T. E. Martin, the star, will play a special by any means. Too much money. Title no good for small town. Lost money on it.—Walter Habits, Grant Theatre, Cicero, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Little Wild Cat, with Alice Calhoun.—Not so good. The story seemed to be too little for the audience. They seem to have any direction.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags Theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

My Wild Irish Rose, with a special cast.—Did not draw as well as we expected, and the actors may be a little to do with it.—Anderson & John- son, New Penn Theatre, Minneapolis, Minn.—General patronage.

My Wild Irish Rose, with a special cast.—Played as benefit to S. A. A. O. H. Pleased very large audience.—J. D. Coste, Orange, Vt.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Girl in His Room, with Alice Calhoun.—This is an unusually good pro- gram picture. It has a new theme that will please.—Pratt & Dean, McCauley Theatre, Dickson, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Defense, with William Duncan.—This a splendid program picture. Ex- cellent photography, good cast, good story, pleasing settings and last reel held my audience in breathless suspense. Topped off with a Lloyd comedy. Made a splendid Saturday offering.—Mrs. C. H. Kouts, Ina.—Neighborhood patronage.

No Defense, with William Duncan.—Good. Plenty of action. Plenty sus- pention. Everyone said that it was both good and—L. P. Stubble- field, Hartsville Theatre, Hartsville, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Girl in His Room, with Alice Calhoun.—We didn't get by with this one. Fair entertainment for the kids. Vitagraph can soon put you out of business.—C. W. Hart, Temple Theatre, Chester, Neb.—Small town patronage.

A Woman's Sacrifice, with Corinne Griffith.—Very good story. Play this and box office and your patrons will go away satisfied and you can stand at the door and bid them good night.—Geo. J. Kent, Huntington House, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Woman's Sacrifice, with Corinne Griffith.—This is a good picture. Buy it.—Hans Bruns, Bijou, Montour Falls, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Restless Souls, with Earle Williams.—An excellent picture. Print in good condition. Pleased 100%.—E. W. Harrell, Royal Theatre, Rison, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Island Wives, with Corinne Griffith.—A nice little program picture with a South Seas setting, which doesn't go bad with it. But in the show the top over the telephone poles.—Wm. E. Trags- dorf, Trags Theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

It Can Be Done, with Earle Williams. Was a good picture and pleased whatever come out to see it, but star doesn't draw for me.—E. D. Luna, Crazy Theat- re, Lincoln, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Flower of the North, with Pauline Starke and Henry B. Walthall.—Both stars and the picture and print excellent out of N. O. Office. Place every one and made us a little money. Price right. Vitagraph is evidently trying to help.—C. H. Streicher, Galloway Gaiety Theatre, Amory, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Where Men Are Men, with William Dumas.—This is about as good an other- can pictures and pleased my people.—Geo. C. Starkey, Opera House, Montour Falls, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Prodigal Judge, with Jean Paige.—My people like this kind of picture and it drew well.—Eugene Saunders, Saun- ders Theatre, Harvard, Ill.—General patronage.

Single Track, with Corinne Griffith.—A nice little picture that pleased my people very much.—Selig Theatre, Schenevus, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

The Romance Promoters, with Earle Williams.—This picture failed to please. People didn't like it.—Geo. W. Holme, Gem Theatre, Chester, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Gypsy Passion, with a special cast.—This is a good picture without any audi- ence appeal whatever. Lay off.—D. A. Cooker, Happy Hour Theatre, Ewen, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

State Rights

Sure Fire Flint (Burr), with Johnny Hines.—A sure fine attraction that pleased everyone. When it hooked Ash Wednesday, so audience small. Book it, it will surely please.—C. A. Riva, Pastime Theatre, Tilton, N. Hamp.—Small town patronage.

Sure Fire Burr (Burr), with Johnny Hines.—This is as good or better than Burn 'Em Up Barnes. It will please the majority of patrons.—Arthur Ugow, Crystal Theatre, Burlington, Wis.—General patronage.

Sure Fire Flint (Burr), with Johnny Hines.—Better than Burn 'Em Up Barnes. Give us more like them.—F. H. Guy, Bradley Opera House, Tecumseh, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Sure Fire Burr (Burr), with Johnny Hines.—One of the finest pictures ever shown on my screen. No business. Can't account for it. Charged ten and twenty- eight cents.—Jack Hickey, Jr., Grand Theatre, New London, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Sure Fire Flint (Burr), with Johnny Hines.—Very good comedy-drama. Hines well liked.—C. V. Kelly, Majestic Thea- tre, Red Wing, Minn.—General patronage.

Only a Shop Girl (C. B. C.), with a special cast.—Held up fair for three days.—S. H. Bosky, American Theatre.

Expert Pipe Organ Repair Service

Theatre Managers, Notice! All makes Unit Organs a specialty. Superb Tuning and Voicing. 25 years experience. I guarantee perfect work or no pay. Lima

R. C. PINDER Ohio

Chattanooga, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Beautiful and Damned (Warner Bros.), with Marie Prevost, played two days. Second almost empty house. More kicks on this one than any I have shown in a long time.—W. M. Ward, Starlight Theatre, Corning, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Curse of the Demon (Weber & North), with a special cast—Good interest in this picture, but not enough to offend any one. Ran this on percent- age. I had several to say it was fine. Rpt. given.—O. C. Conklin, A. B. Beach, opera House, Martinsville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Heroes of the Street (Warner Bros.), with Charlie Berton, played one day. Drawn from every angle. Work of the star the best yet. We lost money, but not felt of picture. Very bad weather and rental too high.—W. H. Harman, Strand Theatre, Kingsport, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

What's Wrong with the Women (Equity), with a special cast—A good offering, but not censor proof. Be careful if you are in a censorship agitated community.—W. H. Harman, Grand Opera House, New Glarus, Wis.—General patronage.

Back Fire (Sunset), with Jack Hoxie. Very big numbers. We had several who just 'em in. Buy all Hoxies if you want good stuff.—O. W. McClellan, Theatre, Tekin, Ill.—Neigh- borhood patronage.

South of Northern Lights (Steiner), with Neal Hart.—Something different in a wide way.—Neal Hart, K. I. K. Jones, Circuit, to have satisfaction and a clean censor proof picture.—W. H. Harman, Strand Theatre, Kingsport, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Table Top Ranch (Steiner), with Neal Hart.—Played this picture and was crowded all day in spite of the fact that the Capitol Theatre has had the Wonderland on a Fox special. Picture was very good.—Paul L. Shew, Capitol Theatre, Clinton, Ind.—General patronage.

Rags to Riches (Warner Bros.), with Wesley Barry.—A great audience picture but not so good as it can be. Wesley Barry has ever done as he does not "hog" the story. Niles Welsh and Russell Simpson make a fine team, which is a key of a house or audience.—Ben L. Morris, Temple Theatre, Bellaire, Ohio.—General patronage.

Rags to Riches (Warner Bros.), with Wesley Barry.—Very good picture and pleased all. His best picture to date. Charged ten and thirty-five cents.—Jack Hickey, Grand Theatre, New London, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

West of the Pecos (Steiner), with Neal Hart.—Just a fair Western picture. Drew fair and seemed to please.—R. Ross Riley, Wibwam Theatre, Oberlin, Kans.—General patronage.

I Am the Law (Affil. Dist.), with Alice Tose.—This was one of my favorites of the year. Always a good picture of sort of picture that's hurt the industry. Entirely too much kissing.—Harry Hol- man, Perf. Bishop, Calif.—Neighborhood patronage.

I Am the Law (Affil. Dist.), with a special cast.—I played this to my top box office. (Miss Hinkay) is a very good dancer. Weather very cold.—F. Crawford, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Gains the Business (Benson), with Big Boy Williams.—Patrons did not like this.—C. R. Hatcher, Grand Opera House, Meridian, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Girls Don't Gamble (Schwab), with Love’s Battle (Pioneer), with a special cast—a nice western program picture. Has thrills. Business unusually bad on this account of sudden drop in temperature. —K. A. Bechtold, Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Sheriff of Sun-Dog (Arrow), with William Fairbanks.—A real good western program picture. Has thrills. Business unusually bad on this account of sudden drop in temperature. —K. A. Bechtold, Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Ten Nights in a Bar Room (Arrow), with John Lowell.—This picture will get you money and is a good picture. Little too sad, but well produced.—E. D. Luna, Cozy Theatre, Lincoln, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight (Equity), with a special cast.—I certainly agree, as do my patrons, with all the good things said about this offering.—C. W. Letchworth, Gem Theatre, New Glarus, Wis.—General patronage.

Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight (Equity), with a special cast.—This was a very good audience picture.—Louis Franz, Olympic Theatre, Calmar, Iowa.—General patronage.

Serials

Around the World in Eighteen Days (Universal), with William Desmond.—This serial hasn’t the drawing power that “Buffalo Bill” had, with Art Acord.—Anderson & Johnson, New Penn Theatre, Minneapolis, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Speed (Pathé), with Charles Hutchison.—Good serial showing to poor business.—S. B. Johnson, Regent Theatre, Marriana, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Speed (Pathé), with Charles Hutchison.—Good serial. Am playing episode No. 6 and going fine. Full of action and planning.—S. B. Johnson, Regent Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pathé), with Ruth Roland.—Have finished this serial and never had a small night. It kept them coming through the whole fifteen weeks. Clean and snappy.—A. J. Berube, Family Theatre, East Tawas, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pathé), with Ruth Roland.—This serial is getting better every Monday and every Monday is getting larger. Sure is one of the best crowd getting serials I have ever shown.—Paul L. Shew, Rivoli Theatre, Clinton, Ind.—General patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pathé), with Ruth Roland.—Believe this serial stood up for us better than we had expected. Had some good laughs here.—The Lost City. Held the grownups as well as the kids and had lots of action. Last episode was just as good as the first.—Horn and Morgan, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb.—Small town patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pathé), with Ruth Roland.—If you want a good serial that will bring them back, show this one.—E. M. McFarland, Opera House, Kewanee, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pathé), with Ruth Roland.—Extra good serial. One of the best we have ever shown. Crowds better than ever.—W. M. Marks, New Theatre, Corning, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

His Brother’s Keeper (Pioneer), with Martha Mansfield.—Just a fair program offering. A little old, but the print was in good condition.—Harry R. Longacher, General seating. Ark.—No fault with picture, only needed more money on a two days run.—W. M. Marks, New Theatre, Corning, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Raider (Universal) with Robert Stewart.—Good serial. There are not many exhibitors who can sit through a serial. I'll bet you every eye in this theatre are sitting on this one. We are playing three just now and this is the best.—GEORGE J. KRESS, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—Best serial that Universal has put out. Pulling good.—Lewis & Brisco, Princess Theatre, Elwood, Ind.—General patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—This is the king bee of all the serials I ever ran or saw. I have more money in this serial than I ever had on any other attraction. On the twelfth chapter and still increasing. Book it through.—W. H. Bills, Opera House, Lenora, Kans.—Small town patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—On sixteen episodes it has held up fine. School children especially have enjoyed historical features.—C. L. A. Martin, Gen. Theatre, Tilton, N. H.—Small town patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—Am on the sixth episode and picture will have the same action that they want in serials here. It’s going to be awful if they fall off more in the next twelve weeks.—E. J. Lagua, Gem Theatre, East Tawas, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—A good one so far. The historical feature has drawn some patrons that did not follow serials. One that should be liked by all classes.—Chas. W. Marks, Family Theatre, Berryville, Va.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—A good one so far. The historical feature has drawn some patrons that did not follow serials. One that should be liked by all classes.—Chas. W. Marks, Family Theatre, Berryville, Va.—Neighborhood patronage.

These running these with second series of Leather Pushers and I met people I thought were out of town for the winter. Here is a couple of samples.—S. V. Wallace, Idle Hour Theatre, Cambridge Springs, Pa.—Transit patronage.

Century Comedies (Universal).—Centennial comedies are coming in fine here, all the way through. Baby Peggy, Brownie and Lee Moran are exceptionally good comedians. Also, every time I go into the kids I reach the older ones.—C. H. Bills, Opera House, Lenora, Kans.—Small town patronage.

International News (Universal).—A good news reel and priced right.—Chas. W. Marks, New Theatre, Berryville, Va.—Neighborhood patronage.

International News (Universal).—I’ve the big trees of the West, with your International tops them all.—S. G. Ihe, Photoplay Theatre, Ashland, Kans.—Small town patronage.

Johnnie Jones Comedies (Pathé).—These good here. All kid cast. Clean. Would say I’m booking 100% from What the Picture Did For Me.—J. C. Wilson, Cheyenne, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Leather Pushers (Universal), with Reginald Denny.—Round 4 (new series), and still going big. However, I would like the playing of the Leather Pushers to have a slight angle to counteract the few knocks by those opposed to fighting pictures. —Fox Bros., Kansas City, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Leather Pushers (Universal), with Reginald Denny.—I’ll tell you, brothers, these two reel specials are the real thing, but if you buy them, play them out at least one a week or they will lose their drawing power and become just a filler.—C. H. Bills, Opera House, Lenora, Kans.—Small town patronage.

The Leather Pushers (Universal), with Reginald Denny.—Just a line to add my O. K. to money getters in a town where there are no Leather Pushers.—The Leather Pushers make five reels that pull.—S. V. Wallace, Idle Hour Theatre, Cambridge Springs, Pa.—Transit patronage.

The Leather Pushers (Universal), with Reginald Denny.—Great entertainment. I played the first six. Just started on No. 7 and it was even better than first series.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

Our Gang Comedies (Pathé).—Very, very good. Remarkably clean. Will please the kiddies 100% and most of the adults.—J. C. Kickham, Select Theatre, Schenectady, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Paul Parrot Comedies (Pathé).—These are good comedies for a business builder.—Chas. Elliott, Jewel Theatre, Sidel, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Semon Comedies (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Personally can’t see much to them. A lot of slap stick, high dives, bagy pants and racing around. Perhaps a good feature.—Use.—General patronage.

Tales of the Timberlands (Universal).—A series of two reel dramas featuring Henry Fonda, with lots of action. Well liked here.—
Chas. W. Marks, New Theatre Berryville, Va.—Neighborhood patronage.

Torchy Comedies (Educational), with Joe Pantages—See Torchy and the Mermaid Comedies, two reels, and Vanity and Gayety, one reel, released by Educational Film Exchange. Nearly all good, but dull and rather long. Attrial, they'll get you money.—H. M. Reitz, Strand Theatre, Lamont, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Urban Classics (Vitagraph)—Good, real good, but they want too much.—J. C. Wickham, Select Theatre, Scheunevus, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Urban Movie Chats (Hod.)—These are the old movies that they say they have ever used, nothing else like them published.—C. H. Bills, Opera House Lenora, Neb.—Small town patronage.

The Champmen (Path), with Our Gang.—This one not up to the standard of the other Our Gang Comedies that I have run previously.—A. K. Roth, Crystal Theatre, Silver Creek, Neb.—Small town patronage.

The Reporter (Fox), with Lupino Lane.—A real comedy that gets the laughs.—A. W. Small, Town Theatre, Marion, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Face the Camera (Path), with Paul Parrot.—Here is the best single reel I have had in some time, many comedy situations that got the laughs.—E. J. Laqua, Gem Theatre, Hancock, N. D.—General patronage.

Do or Die (Fox), with Buster Keaton.—Not as good as some of Buster's comedies, but any of his are hard to beat.—Smith Read, Patriot Theatre, DeKalb, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Fruits of Faith (Path), with Will Rogers.—Said to be a comedy, more drama than else. Personally thought it rotten, but darned if some of 'em didn't tell me it was good.—J. C. Wickham, Select Theatre, Scheunevus, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

A Panicky Pullman (Universal), with Roy Atwell.—This comedy is best one we have had in a long time. Pleased the grownups as well as the kids, Ran it with Go Straight, Mayo feature.—L. J. Kendall, Victory Theatre, Milledgeville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Wooden Cracker (Universal) "Leather Pushers," with Reginald Denny.—Best of all the "Leather Pushers," the knock on how it Roy McCann, Capital Theatre, Superior, Wis.—General patronage.

A Rip Snorting Night (Universal), with Lewis Sargent.—These one reel comedies are good as a filler. You can buy them right as Universal is not out to put the exhibitor out of business with high prices.—Geo. S., Kinematograph Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Rent Collector (Vitagraph), with Lewis Sargent.—Complete comedy, could not shut my house in a screen. I think the music was seldom heard. Excellent.—Mrs. C. H. Cannon, Canton, Kuit, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Strike Father, Strike Son (Universal) "Leather Pushers," with Reginald Denny.—Very good comedy. Part of the last of second series and every round highly satisfactory from all angles.—Roy McCann, Capitol Theatre, Superior, Wis.—General patronage.

My Wife's Relations (F. N.), with Buster Keaton.—A very weak offering in view of the price charged for it. Not as good as some of the other comedies, as one-third the price.—Hay & Nicholas, Strand Theatre, Fairmont, Minn.—General patronage.

The Frozen North (F. N.), with Buster Keaton.—Here is the best Keaton comedy I have ever run and have run almost all the others. He really did laugh for twenty-five minutes. You won't go wrong on this one. If they don't laugh at these they are wrong with your audience.—E. J. Laqua, Gem Theatre, Hancock, N. D.—General patronage.

A Quiet Street (Path), with Our Gang.—This one is getting better with each picture.—J. P. Jones, Yale Theatre, Groebeck, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

No Wedding Bells (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Good, Semon getting better picture each.—J. P. Jones, Yale Theatre, Groebeck, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Pair of Kings (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Comments on this comedy have hardly been up to Semon's standard of the past but our patrons generally were very much pleased with same. It does not have quite as much slapstick, black paint and whitewash as some of the others, but Larry proves that he can make a real comedy without them.—Horn and Morgan, Star theatre, Hays Springs, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Torchy and Orange Blossoms (Educational), with Johnny Hines.—Regular Johnny Hines. As usual, good.—N. F. Laul, College Hill, Churburg, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Sailor Made Man (A. E.), with Harold Lloyd.—Consider Harold best bet on market. Good comedy, again proves that his personal life seems above par. He carries it to the screen also. But they want too much money for small town.—J. C. Wickham, Select theatre, Scheunevus, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Speed 'Em Up (Universal), with Harry Sweet.—A good two reel comedy that you can put with the best feature. Will make them roar. Universal will not overcharge you.—A. H. Dodge, Palace theatre, Capac, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

THE FIRE CHIEF (F. B. O.) with Dan Mason.—After looking at comedy for twelve years, we find very little in most comedies to laugh at, but this made us laugh a real laugh on a dull night.—GEORGE J. KRESS, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

Chumama (Universal), with Baby Pegey.—One of the very best we ever had. Kept our audience in gales of laughter and sent them away happy.—C. E. Hopkins, Hopkins theatre, Cotter, Ark.—Small town patronage.

The Paleface (F. N.), with Buster Keaton.—Say, folks, here is a comedy that surely could knock 'em dead. It's the best ever. My patrons did some tall yelling. They liked it so did our box office.—Paul H. Jones, Bijou theatre, Clinton, Ind.—General patronage.

Holy Smoke (Educational), with Lloyd Hamilton.—As are all of the Mermaids, this is an exceptionally good comedy that gets the laughs.—C. W. Longacher, New Glarus theatre, New Glarus, Wis.—General patronage.

365 Days (Path), with Suan Pollard.—Very good two reel comedy. Great big punch in last part that makes it up and all.—J. H. Pounds, Jt. Odeon theatre, Chandler, Okla.—General patronage.

The Star Boarder (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Semon gives out another good Semon Semon ever played, but if the rest are as good I will play many more of them. All I heard from the children for a week was when the next one come.—Geo C. Starkey, Opera House, Montour Falls, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Boat (F. N.), with Buster Keaton.—One of the entertainingest things that has originality.—C. W. Longacher, New Glarus theatre, New Glarus, Wis.—General patronage.

Pay Day (F. N.), with Charles Chaplin.—Chaplin does his old tricks now, producing instead of acting. We paid a stiff price for this. Worth about a two C. G. Stettner, Jr. Odeon theatre, Chandler, Okla.—General patronage.

The Greenhorn (Educational), with Lloyd Hamilton.—A dandy Mermaid, probably the best.—C. W. Longacher, New Glarus theatre, New Glarus, Wis.—General patronage.

Saturday Morning (Path), with Our Gang.—This is the third in the series I ever played and it certainly is good.—Geo. C Starkey, Opera House, Montour Falls, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Extra Extra (Educational), with Lloyd Hamilton.—This is the best.—C. W. Longacher, New Glarus theatre, New Glarus, Wis.—General patronage.

Dress Hand to Mouth (Path), with Harold Lloyd.—I never saw many of Lloyd's, so can't judge how this compared with his others, but it certainly was good and pleased everybody on my "All Comedy Night."—Geo. C Starkey, Opera House, Montour Falls, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Hick (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—As all other Semons are good. If you are not running these, try one.—J. W. Andren, Baldio theatre, Cozad, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

I Do (A. E.), with Harold Lloyd.—Probably caused more laughter than any comedy ever showed. He is the best by all the leading comedians. Many stayed to see it again.—A. LaValla, Community theatre, Bethel, Conn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Electric House (F. N.), with Buster Keaton.—This two reel comedy should be featured in all theatres. American theatre, Canton, N. Y.—Neighborhood and college patronage.

Accidental Wealth (Universal), with Nora Edwards.—First of the reel has a number of how-haws. Towards the end, however, pretty tame for a comedy. No business.—G. F. Rediske, Star theatre, RyeGate, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Now or Never (A. E.), with Harold Lloyd.—An extra fine comedy that I have as much advertising as I can, but don't advertise this as just "a comedy," as it's worth boasting.—A. LaValla, Community theatre, Bethel, Conn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Sic Em Brownie (Universal), with Brownie.—Century Comedies go over much here. Had a good success with "Buffalo Bill." Made a good show and drew well.—C. H. Bills, Opera House, Lenora, Kans.—Small town patronage.

The Wrong Man (Universal), with Harry Carey.—These two comedies are as much as we can handle. If they are not right there is in many five comedies we are playing at present.—Geo. I. Kress, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fortune Hunter (Path), an They've Got To Be GOOD To Be Booked for New York's Rialto Theatre

No better proof of the quality of a comedy is needed than its ability to satisfy the most discriminating picture audience in the world—the patrons of the Rialto Theatre, New York. Proof that Plum Center Comedies are doing exactly that is found in the fact that Dr. Reisenfeld has just booked another Plum Center for the Rialto—“Pop Tuttle, Detekatif.” It's a known fact that and the exhibitor who gives his patrons Plum Centers is feeding them the finest film dessert on the market. The wise showman spends most of his time choosing features. He signs up for short stuff which he knows is consistently good. That's why so many exhibitors have placed their faith in Plum Center Comedies. It's YOUR turn NOW!

Aesop Fable.—Another good Fable. The cat and the old man as usual. We have some patrons come on our serial night just to see Fable. There is nothing better in the short reels. We have shown about 150 to date and every one went over with honors. If you have never used any, try them once and you will order a few for your house because your patrons won't let you.—Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth. Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Rapid Fire (Educational), with a special cast.—Absolutely the best comedy that has ever played at my theatre. Worth playing if you want to hear the audience laughing a block away.—Clifford Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

High Power (Educational), with Lige Conley.—Two reels. Real good comedy. Let's the faults. Walter H. Johnson, Queen's theatre, Hespeler, Ont., Can.—Small town patronage.

His Wife's Son (Fox), with a special cast.—These Sunshineys are a whole 100%浣. This one is extremely good.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Old Sea Dog (Pathé), with Snub Pollard.—Lots of laughs and sent them out feeling they had seen a good comedy.—H. F. Held, the star, Adrian, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Never Touched Me (Pathé), with Harold Lloyd.—Sure some comedy. They seemed to draw just as good as a color John, Elliott, Jewel theatre, Sidell, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Pay Day (F. N.), with Charles Chaplin.—Very good comedy. Mr. Stannus how the wise guys around town will tell you that Charlie is the junk and then tear the doors down trying to get an admission for just the poor ones. Had some crepe hangers in to see Charlie who hadn't been in the house since I showed them "The Lord's Last Supper" which was some time ago.—Win. F. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE FOX AND THE CROW AND THE CANARY (Pathé) Aesop's Fables.—I played these two on my "All Comedies" through the week.—The program contained Harold Lloyd and Our Gang comedies, would you believe it, even the kids liked these Fables. It's the only thing that has come up, fellow exhibitors, as they are certainly "sugar coated pills with a domin just as the are advertised.—GEORGE C. STARKLEY, Opera House, Montour Falls, N. Y.

The Suiitor (Vitagraph), with Larry Senon.—This comedy got more laughs than any other comedy I ever saw. It's a little "raw" in a place or two.—S. G. Hde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kans.—Small town patronage.

Brotherly Love (Pathé), with Paul Parrott.—One of the best one reel comedies we have shown of this star. It got the laughs and everyone left with a smile. It will be good with any short reel program.—Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Muts (Universal), with Browning.—Average comedy. Only thing that stands it up is the novelty of it. No human beings appear in it—just "Muts."—Lee M. Thr. Three, Royston, Manning, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Some Baby (Pathé), with Snub Pollard.—Snub Pollard comedies are all good. They will keep you laughing. This one is their best.—Geo. J. Kress, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Trail of the Wolf (Universal), with a special cast.—This two reel Western was as good as a five reel for us.—Lee M. Thr. Three, Royston, Manning, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Little Red Roblin Hood (Jo-Rok), with Claude "Babe" Swanson, had substituted to us for The Dentist and wish it had got lost as it was one of the worst we ever played.—Geo. J. Kress, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Mud and Sand (Metro), with Stan Laurel.—Only a fair comedy, and was disappointed on this.—Geo. J. Kress, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Circus Clowns (Universal), with Baby Peggy.—A dandy little comedy and pleased everybody. Buy them at right prices, they're good.—Snyder Bros., Gem theatre, Earlville, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Steeple Chaser and Look Out Below (Educational).—Exhibitors who pass these two by will miss giving their patrons a treat. They are both dandies.—H. J. Longaker, Howard theatre, Alexandria, Minn.—General patronage.

School Days (Vitagraph), with Larry Senon.—This one sure made my patrons laugh. I consider this one of Senon's best two reel comedies. Print in No. 1 shape.—P. G. Held, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Paleface (F.-N.) with Buster Keaton.—A poor bet, boys, lay off. The worst comedy we have ever played and paid the most. Print old and in poor shape. The fellow who said First National had Captain Kidd cheated is right.—Snyder Bros., Gem theatre, Earlville, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Solid Concrete (Vitagraph), with Larry Senon.—Not his best but a good comedy that will please. Print cut up quite a little.—P. G. Held, Gem theatre, Fairmont, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Unfermented Bricks (Universal), with Neddy Edwards.—A fair one reel comedy that could have been a lot better, but gets some laughs. Neddy struggles his stuff until it gets tiresome, but our patrons seemed pleased and we call it a fair comedy.—J. M. Heister, Rialto theatre, Lake Mills, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Pair of Kings (Vitagraph), with Larry Senon.—While all Senon comedies are a great this one was not as good. It is the good old slap stick comedy but pleased everyone.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Educator (Educational), with Lloyd Hamilton.—An exceptionally good comedy.—R. J. Uglow, Strand theatre, Whitewater, Wis.—General patronage.

The Tattle Tale (Universal), with Brownie.—The new Century comedies are good and this one pleased both old and young. The dog Brownie furnishes some real treats in the way he puts his part over.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Bright Eyes (F.-N.), with Ben Turpin.—A fair comedy.—W. H. Hardman, Strand theatre, Frankfort, Kans.—Small town patronage.

Step This Way (Educational), with Jack White.—A good two reel comedy, but not as good as some Senon comedies. Print in No. 1 shape.—P. G. Held, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Rent Free (Mermaid) with a special cast.—As good a comedy as we have had this winter. Why will we play Sennetts when we can buy educational comedies at any price?—Champion theatre, Amana, Iowa.—General patronage.

NUMBER PLEASE (A. E.) with Harold Lloyd.—Lloyd always a safe bet. Draws good, no matter how old the picture or if it has been run in your house before. Any exhibitor in any small town should buy this to look to his short subjects as well as features. Just as essential and, I find, builds up your patronage.—RETZ, Strand Theatre, Lamont, la.

A Doll Romance (Educational).—A dandy comedy for children but not suit for older patrons. Print in No. 1 shape.—P. G. Held, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

On a Summer's Day (F.-N.), a Mack Sennett comedy.—Just another Sennett comedy. Not as poor as some, but very mediocre.—Clifford L. Niles, Grand theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.—General patronage.

Smoked Out (Pathé), with Leo Mabley.—Fine two reel Western that has plenty of good action and clean story. We thought this one a little better than preceding ones. Photography wonderful and film in excellent condition.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Trailing the Coyote (Pathé), a Bill and Bob comedy.—These comedies are different and have always pleased. Only thing that stands it up is the novelty of it. No human beings appearing in it—just "Muts."—Lee M. Thr. Three, Royston, Manning, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Some Baby (Pathé), with Snub Pollard.—Snub Pollard comedies are all good. They will keep you laughing. This one is their best.—Geo. J. Kress, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Trail of the Wolf (Universal), with a special cast.—This two reel Western was as good as a five reel for us.—Lee M. Thr. Three, Royston, Manning, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Two famous characters will re-live in Universal's serial "The Oregon Trail." Lord Astorburn at the left and Daniel Webster.

comedy—A dandy clean comedy. Plenty of action and lots of laughs.—W. H. Hardman, Royal theatre, Frankfort, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Plain Grit (Universal), with Reginald Denny.—A fast moving drama of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police in two reels that made them stand in their seats. Photography fine. Patrons well pleased with it.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gent theatre, Omaha, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Champion (Pathé), an Our Gang comedy. This series is bringing out the old and young. Had just double the number of children. The children bring the parent laughs after the kiddies.
The Champion is rich.—Mr. W. M. Kimbro, Greenland theatre, Greensboro, Ga.—Small town patronage.

Falling for Fanny (Educational), a Christic comedy.—A very nice comedy with quite a lot of original humor which is hard to get. It is also clean.—Ralph R. Gribble, Grand theatre, New Hamburg, Ont. Can.—Neighborhood patronage.

Fruits of Faith (Pathé), with Will Rogers.—This three reel comedy is one of the great ones. Instead of shelving a weak feature I used it with Fruits of Faith. Patrons forgot the "fuming" feature and praised the comedy.—Mrs. W. M. Kimbro, Greenland theatre, Greensboro, Ga.—Small town patronage.

A Barnyard Cavalier (Educational), a Christic comedy.—Very good indeed. A lot of hearty laughs all through.—Ralph R. Gribble, Grand theatre, New Hamburg, Ont. Can.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Pickanniny (Pathé), with Sun-shine Sambo.—Good and surely drew the "laugh." One of the best two reelers that I have had in a long time. Played this with Hoot Gibson in Trimmed and had the smallest crowd for 1923. Can’t figure it out.—Mr. F. Redbanks, Star theatre, Rogate, Mont.—Small town patronage.

The Vagrant (Educational), with Lloyd Hamilton.—Nothing original, but it seems to keep them laughing and that’s what we want. Also Ralph R. Gribble, Grand theatre, New Hamburg, Ont. Can.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Bar Cross War (Pathé), with Leo Maloney.—Where two reel Westerns are run these will most assuredly please. This one has as much action as a five reeler.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Abercrombie, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

For Land Sakes (Educational), a Christic comedy.—A fine comedy. Very funny and kept the kids all in for second show.—Ralph R. Gribble, Grand theatre, New Hamburg, Ont. Can.—Neighborhood patronage.

One Terrible Day (Pathé), an Our Gang comedy.—By all means don’t pass these two reel comedies up. They are the best yet. Will please any audience.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Abercrombie, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Torchy a la Carte (Educational), with Johnny Hines.—This is a good comedy. Torchy is very popular here and most of the Torchy comedies are good. This is one of the best.—Ralph R. Gribble, Grand theatre, New Hamburg, Ont. Can.—Neighborhood patronage.

Out of Place (Fox), with Al St. John.

—the best St John comedy in a long time. Will keep the audience laughing during the entire show.—By all means get this one.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Artist (Fox), with Clyde Cook.—Right here and now I want to rise up and remark that the Fox comedies have cut the world heat for week after week entertainment. Lord only knows they are costing me enough, but judging from the laughs they bring today they’re worth it.—Howard K. Allen, Kaito theatre, Harlingen, Tex.—Small town patronage.

No Brains (Universal), with Harry Sweet.—Just a second rate comedy. Not as good as Century can put out.—H. L. Burrell.—Garrick theatre, Hawley, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Torchy and Orange Blossoms (Educational), with Johnny Hines.—A very good comedy with plenty of laughs. Torchy comedies are very nearly all good.—J. W. Anderson, Kaito theatre, Cozad, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Extra, Extra (Educational), with Ham Hamilton.—A very good comedy with many new angles to plot.—H. J. Longaker, Howard theatre, Alexandria, Minn.—General patronage.

of the historic flight, but the hazards of aviation and its uncertainties, especially on so long an aerial journey, extended the flight so long a time that its news value was lost. All of the expense of the preparations and the trip, amounting to over $5,000, are really therefore a total loss.

Still another example is the recent exclusive pictures of the earthquake in Chile. It occurred in a very remote section of Northern Chile, about 400 miles from our nearest cameramen. It required the hiring of a special mountain pack train to reach the scene of the event in the quickest possible time and to have the film rushed here for release.

I could enumerate scores and scores of instances of specific stories where the expenses of production were similarly enormous, but it is not only the specific expenses on specific stories that adds such burdens to the cost of producing the newsreel. It is also the hundreds and hundreds of attempts that we have to make to cover stories that appear from first reports to be of importance and which are found later to be unusable. Very frequently a cameraman has to Overhead an aeroplane was flying over the city, giving a message in smoke. Mike—"Ow, you see me to be up there in one of the things?" Pat—"Sure, an' Old'd hate to be up thar without me wings.—"Topics of the Day" Films."

An Irish pig, engaged in his first professional glove match, was so new to rules that kept on fighting after the game had announced the end of a round. "Hey!" shouted the referee. "Don't you know you are supposed to quit when you hear that bell ringing?" —"Is that so?" demanded the embryo Dempsey. "I was always a whistler stopped me."—American Legion N. C.

Pat and Mike, two Irishmen, wandered along the waterfront. Mike stopped and stood staring at a very large anchor lying by a dock. Pat—Come on Mike, ye'ar stand that long enough. Mike—Yes, Pat, an' niver a foot do Oi stand till I've seen that pick.—"Topics of the Day" Films.

Pat (looking at some large grapefruit on street stall)—Indade, Moike, it wouldn't take me of them oranges to make a dzen. Mike—Oranges? Sure, Pat, I thot they wuz lemons.—"Topics of the Day" Films.

"I was sorry to hear 'bout your old man, Mrs. Higgins. Still I reckon now 'll be hangin' on is 'arp with the angels."—"My Army! Not on yer life! 'E's more likely hangin' the angels with 'is 'arp."—New York Morning Telegraph.

Pat (on shipboard)—And pat are ye goin' ter do whin ye git to America? Mike—Take up land. Pat—Indade, an' 'ow much? Mike—Oh, a shovelful at a toime.—"Topics of the Day" Films.

An Irishman was handling dynamite in a quarry. He let a stick of dynamite go, and the whole box went up taking Mike with it. The quarry boss came around later and said to another Irishman:

"Where is Mike?" —"He's gone," replied Pat. "When will he be back?" asked the boss. "Well," replied Pat, "if he comes back as fast as he went he'll be back yesterday."—Boston Globe.

travel several hundred miles on the report of a very big story happening, only to find at the last moment that it "fizzled." Very elaborate preparations may be made to cover an event and then owing to inclement weather the event is cancelled and the entire cost of preparations has to be written off. When the time for a story has been taken the whole film of the stories which we try to cover are actually used in the Pathé News, you will realize the percentage of waste that necessarily enters into the production of a newsreel.

The news films therefore, although it is one reel in length cannot be considered in the one reel short subject class. It is not 1/5th of a feature, it is a feature in itself, necessitating a tremendous organization operated at tremendous costs.

THEATRE CONSTRUCTION AND EQUIPMENT

Heating By Direct Radiation

In This Article the Author Discusses What He Terms a “Split System” of Heating and Ventilating Which He Has Found Efficient for Theatres

By R. L. SIMMONS, Architect

ABOUT a year ago, two professors were discussing school buildings and particularly auditoriums, and one of them said to the other, “Professor, did you ever notice that a theatre is a comfortable, restful place to drop into but a school auditorium never is?” This remark was based on truth. But the real facts being revealed disclose many defects in the heating and ventilating equipment of the recommended buildings.

The requirements of heating and ventilating school auditoriums are fairly well taken care of in some states, while that of the theatre is left to the architect or engineer in charge, which may be of advantage as regards the heating and ventilating theatres are rapidly changing.

In other words, we are becoming more conscious of the need of properly placed in recesses in the walls above shoulder height and led from above to drain into below floor and have both pipes concealed if desired. The overhead feed system gives another 3 per cent greater heating efficiency which can be accomplished by placing the air ducts properly in the rear of the auditorium. It is advisable to place the ducts high enough on the wall to be out of the way but not so high as to interfere with any decorative accessories as they can be made into panel effects and in any color desired with as much ornamental effect as one wishes to choose, and, if desired, vertical artistic grills may be placed over the recesses and thus obscure any sign of heating paraphernalia that should be designed to give access to the radiators.

Ventralizing Unit Separate

Connected to the heating plant should be the ventilating system, which is very closely allied and inseparable, but not a part of the heating system. The ducts of a common system should be placed in the basement or basement below stage or dressing rooms, and by fresh air being taken in at the floor level near the stage and the air ducts of the main chamber with stacks of vents placed in basement below stage or dressing rooms. The point near roof is an ideal location and should be taken in the main chamber. To avoid the roof for fear of drawing in smoke from floors above is a big mistake and in any case there should be a rather fine mesh screen and adjustable louvers which should be considered when the problem is solved.

The condensed steam in the condenser should be used in the house as is and may be used as a source of heat. The air ducts of the ventilating system should be considered as a source of heat and when the air is exhausted, it should be used in the building. The air ducts from the fan to the auditorium should be very large, as should be the openings into the auditorium, and I have found that a good method of placing these openings is to design the proscenium arch so as to have these openings on each side starting at about 5 feet from stage and ex-

New Projects

Paterson, N. J.—Architect Fred Wesley Wentworth, City Trust building, Paterson, N. J., has completed plans for a theatre in this city for Jacob Fabian which will rank as one of the finest in the state. It will have a seating capacity of 2,400 and cost approximately $450,000. Mr. Wentworth is also architect for the Brentford theatre, Newark; the Regent, Elizabeth, N. J., and the Regent at Paterson.

Reno, Pa.—Plans have been completed by Architect W. H. Lee, 32 South 17th street, Philadelphia, for a theatre in this city for J. J. McFadden, which will seat 800 and cost about $75,000.

Springfield, O.—Work is under way on a theatre on Fair street, east of Yellow Springs street, by D. G. Bacon and company, building contractors, for James W. Maxey, 702 S. Yellow Springs street.

Brookfield, Ill.—A motion picture theatre is to be built in Brookfield, although a site has not yet been chosen. Local men are behind the project.

Detroit, Mich.—A $3,000,000,000 theatre will be erected here by B. F. Keith Theatre Company. While a site has been acquired it has not been announced by company officials yet.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Plans are now being made for a theatre which will be erected at 35 South street and Valley avenue have been drawn by Architects Lewis & Hill, 802 Main street.

Santa Rosa, Cal.—Construction work has been started on a new theatre on B street for John Grecott and E. Strombino. A. M. Hildebrandt is contractor. It will cost about $100,000.

Springfield, Ill.—Cassidy Brothers, local merchants, in association with Lewis Murphy, manager of the Majestic theatre here, will build a modern theatre in Spring Valley.

Kansas City, Mo.—A theatre to be known as the Rockhill will be erected at Fortieth and Main streets by Tri-State Realty Company. Plans have been prepared by Architects Shepard & Wiser, 302 R. A. Long building, Kansas City, Mo.

Ventura, Cal.—H. A. Giddings and associates have acquired a site in Ventura on which will be constructed a modern theatre.

Utica, N. Y.—Plans have been completed by E. C. Horn, 4176 Broadway, New York City, for a new theatre for Nathan Robbins at Columbus and Washington streets.

Monrovia, Cal.—Possibilities of a 1,000 seat theatre being erected in this city by West Coast Theatres, Inc., are reported following a visit here of Jack Retlaw, assistant general manager of that firm, who has been investigating sites. West Coast Theatres is now building a 1,000 seat house at Pomona, Cal., and has a $50,000 theatre under way at San Pedro.

Walnut Ridge, Ark.—Swan Theatre Company has been organized in this city with a capital stock of $25,000 for the erection of a new theatre.

Arkansas City, Ark.—Work will be started soon on construction of a new theatre here to cost $100,000 for Budworth Theatre Company.

Show on Truck Used for Advertising

Motion pictures have been adapted for outdoor advertising by means of the motor truck in a specially designed apparatus by Industrial Displays, Inc., of N. Y. and Boston. From the truck pictured herewith, motion pictures are shown from three places at the same time—on both sides and in the rear. Panels on the sides and one in the rear are the "screens" of this traveling picture show. Properly illuminated, and with the show in progress, crowds gather at any street corner where a "performance" is being staged.

There is a 52 volt, 250 ampere storage battery, charged by a 2 kilowatt Universal motor generator. Two hours of daily running are required to charge the battery for a five-hour operation of the show at night.

The three displays of the films at three different points at the same time is attained by means of a triple projector feeding automatically. Due to the ample radiator capacity of the Garford truck in which the "show" is mounted, the generating plant is efficiently cooled. This saves the necessity of a separate cooling plant.

Each ground is covered by this "movietruck show." This facility of movement is one of the chief advantages of this new idea in advertising. The entire outfit, storage battery, motion picture machine and the control of these devices, is mounted inside the truck-closed body. In any weather this "show" can pick up and move along to its next scheduled stop without difficulty. The total mileage in a season to be covered by each of these "movie" truck units will be extraordinarily high.

Conroe Remodeling House

Elbert I. Conroe, one of the Herald's oldest subscribers, who is running the Conroe's Play House at Conroe, Texas, and the Cleveland theatre at Cleveland, has his Conroe show shut down for several weeks. Mr. Conroe is remodeling his theatre throughout, installing new seats, parquet, repainting, putting in a new floor, new ticket booth and fixing the show up in general. He expects to open it about March 26.

Drumright, Okla.—Robert Snodgrass and Chester Lee, have opened the Idle Hour theatre, which seats 600.

E. St. Louis, Ill.—Louis Menges has completed and opened his new State theatre at 25th and State streets.

Heating by Direct Radiation

tending up to the spring of the arch, the width and height, of course, depending on the amount of air to pass through. This method allows the air to pass into the house at a very low velocity and thus be unnoticed by the audience and materially assist the acoustics of the building as it opens the sound waves from the stage to every seat in the house and this air is fresh and full of vitality and is warmed to the temperature desired in the room. Careful designing of the plan will make this possible and thus every patron will receive his 30 cubic feet of fresh air per minute but without noticing any draft or change in temperature, and is unannoyed by any interference with the acoustics. This system causes a slight pressure in the building that is, in effect, reverse to the existent system and causes warm air to pass out through and around doors and causes the floors to be warm up to the exits.

As can be readily seen, there must be provided exhaust ducts in order to change the air and these should be placed at the rear of auditorium, at floor line of both main floor and balcony and careful attention paid to the requirements of the space below balcony. Aspiring coils should be placed in these exhaust flues and are carried well above roof with "cowls," as these coils provide for an up draft at all times, even though the fan is not running and this will cause the building to be ventilated to some extent when not in actual use and makes a great deal of difference in the atmosphere of the house by eliminating the vitiated and still, foul air from the building before the show starts and the building will be heated much more readily and at less expense.

Cools House in Summer

So far I have covered points of heating and ventilating only when heat is required, but the system I have above described can be used for ventilation in the summer time as efficiently as though designed especially for the purpose and from cool air in a theatre in the summer is as good an advertisement to the owner as the well-heated and ventilated buildings in the winter. There being no fire in the summer, the cool air in the house will be cool and the fan can be run the same as in winter and bring fresh air into the building and cause the change of atmosphere and eliminate the individual fans that are too frequently used, and if one wishes to cool this air beyond the point of outside temperature, it may be done by placing "cooling coils" in the plenum chamber back of the vento stacks or by a little change in piping the vento stacks themselves may be used for this purpose. I will not attempt to go into details of the various air systems as there are many on the market and I would explain them in the same way I have done. I have probably not adopt any one particular system but work out the requirements to the individual needs of the theatre in question, and the above gives you quite of possibilities that are to a decided advantage to the management, as they are approved by the health departments and I have found that cooled air may be obtained at a very small cost in connection with these systems described.

The heating and ventilating and cooling systems of a theatre are second only in advertising value to the class of shows and the management and should be carefully considered by the owner.
Franklin Is Sued by "Music Tax" Society
Springfield Newspaper Takes Rap at Composers and Publishers Body

The Franklin theatre, 325 East 31st street, has been sued by Jerome H. Remick & Company and Gus Kahn, composer, who charge that the theatre has used "Carolina in the Morning," a copyrighted song, illegally. The suit has been filed in the United States district court here.

An editorial which should be of especial interest to exhibitors of Illinois in that it marks the enlistment of the press in the fight against the "music tax," was published in a recent issue of the Illinois State Journal. Springfield. It reads:

A Story of Easy But Safe Money

"Here is a story of easy money; possibly how money has been made in the world and no danger of going to jail for it either.

"Moving picture houses and hotels in which dances or social entertainment, requiring music are given, are all taxed for the privilege of playing the compositions that have been published in the open patent

A system akin to a mild terrorism has kept nearly all of the victims of the process. Springfield threatens to turn. If it does, there will be an interesting scrap. It may end the practice, which works out as follows:

"A motion picture house wants to buy, for its orchestra, the new compositions in music. It may buy but it may not play the music unless it kicks into a crowd that controls the music by copyright. The 'kick in' depends upon the size of the town. In Springfield it is ten cents a year for each chair in the house. Hotels are charged flat rates, according to their ability to pay. Springfield hotels pay about two hundred dollars a year. This payment permits the hotel's own orchestra and all organized orchestras to play the music controlled by the syndicate.

"The syndicate has its inspectors who travel about the country, checking up on the houses and hotels and other places of entertainment from which this fee may be exacted.

"Not all the music is in its grasp. Lately, I am told, it has been losing prestige. Protests against the practice have been having that effect.

"The fee is charged under the authority given by the copyright laws. Publishers rather than composers are included in the legislation which is very careful to conceal itself in New York city. A motion picture theatre owner tells me that the organization itself never comes into the open. If it has a slow or bad account against a theatre or hotel it attempts to collect through a third party or money. Rather than start a law suit it is usually ready to compromise. A bill for one hundred dollars it will settle for fifty, my informant says, and so on.

"Various efforts have been made to break up the combination but, by legal means, it does not seem possible. An amendment of the copyright law has not yet been drawn that will effect the object without weakening the protection composers and writers are entitled to.

"One of the strange features of the thing is that legitimate theatres, through-out the country, are not included among those who must pay this fee. No reason is assigned for the exemption. It is an arbitrary levy, imposed by some smart New Yorkers, located near the seat of music publication. They acquire the rights to new music and holding those rights invoke the copyright laws to their aid in mutilating the picture patrons from the Atlantic to the Pacific."

ELINOR FAIR, star of the Universal film, "Driven," visited in Chicago for a few hours Mar. 7, before leaving for Universal City, where she will appear in Universal pictures. Miss Fair was accompanied by her mother. She has been in and out of pictures for several years, having played the crippled girl in "Miracle Man," featured with Al Ray in Universal films and also with Lew Cody, Otis Skinner, Eugene O'Brien and William Farnum. She was born in Richmond, Va., but lived in Seattle for a number of years.

Normal Man Can't Pass Censor Test

Chicago Board Is Still Using Tactics Practiced by Funkhouse

Funkhouse-ism isn't dead yet in Chicago. The censor board is still using the major's tactics and following his teachings and no one knows it better than the film companies that have to do business on the tenth floor of the city hall every week.

The board is under the domineering rule of one woman and other members have little say. Up there she reigns supreme. She orders re-inspections of films, holds up permits, visits theatres to see that theatre managers are not running films with cut-outs in them, and in various ways is making it costly for distributing concerns to operate in Chicago.

You Must Have Warped Conception

A recent examination for motion picture censors was held in Illinois with forty-three persons, all of whom took the civil service examination, failed to receive the passing grade of 70. Some of the questions asked the candidates were:

"What sort of motion picture would you create, and what is the meaning of the word abiding citizens?"

"What is the meaning of "immoral" as implied to motion pictures?"

"Would you sanction the showing of a withering snake prominently shown in motion pictures?"

"Should a picture be shown that depicts a person administering hypodermic injection which results in death? Give reasons."

"Would it be harmful to any class of people to exhibit a scene showing a burglary open an opening a money safe by drilling or by the use of explosives and effecting all evidence of finger prints?"

The snake stuff was one of Maj. Funkhouse's pet scenes.

None of the candidates could successfully determine what sort of pictures would have a tendency to create contempt or hatred for any class of law-abiding citizens. Nor could they tell the meaning of "immoral" as applied to pictures in Chicago.

Censor Board Is Costly

Other practices which cost the film companies and also the theatre men, who eventually have to foot the bills, immense sums every year, are the charges imposed for inspecting films. It costs $3 a reel to have a print censored and $1 for each additional reel after the initial five or six reels. A permit will not be issued on a film not so to the board on Saturdays and if it is booked for a Sunday showing, has to be held over until Monday.

The members of the censor board no longer wear police badges, but they invade theatres throughout the city every night and cause considerable annoyance to a theatre manager if they do not display film permits prominently or are showing a film in which a censored scene appears.

It is to be hoped under Chicago's new administration a change will be made in the methods of censoring films.

Didja see that film with Judge Wi Dever, candidate for mayor of Chicago, shaking hands with Harry Elscz? The judge ought to win easily with Harry on his side.

Rothacker Employs Give

Aldous Farewell Banquet

The crowd at Chicago Rothacker headquarter gave H. J. Aldous, vice president of Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, a farewell dinner at the Edgewater Beach hotel that made him sorry to leave for the Coast. Mr. Aldous will be at the Rothacker-Aller Laboratories for a number of months.

Aged of Chicago Made Happy by Chaplin Film

Chicago's aged in the various institutions in the city are being cheered these days by the presentation of Charlie Chaplin's latest comedy, "The Pilgrim." The exhibitions are being conducted by the Daily News, whose operator is visiting the homes for the aged.
CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By J. R. M.

EVERYBODY busy filling out income tax reports. Not a life! Not a life! If a salesman takes his family around the block in his car he can’t deduct $200 expenses. “Cousin”, it isn’t for business. It’s a pleasure trip. Unless he has a Ford. Nobody ever rode in a Ford for pleasure.

LOUIS BAYM, general manager of Equity Pictures, called on J. J. Sampson, local manager of F. O. last week. He returned to New York Sunday.

W. T. PERGO and son, from the Peerless theatre, Kewanee, Ill., called at First National exchange last Wednesday.

“The Fugitive” broke all Monday records at the Roosevelt,” its said.

A fire at the lunch counter in the Film building, 511 South Wabash avenue, Thursday a.m., called out the fire department. Luckily it didn’t reach the film vaults, or we’ve had some fire sales of billons this week.

JOHN DITMAN, of the Lindi theatre, Frederick, Md., staged a personal appearance stunt with “Strongheart” the dog star. Everybody, including the dog, had a good time.

Every salesman in town made the New Capitol theatre, last Wednesday night, at Lawrence and Kelzie streets. It was a big night for the School of Commerce.

NEIL HOLMES, First National’s chief exploitation man, isn’t coming to Chicago this week. Nip, Too busy says Xed.

We forget to mention last week that Chick Kapeller, the Pathe go-getter, made a side trip to Kansas City a week ago, to see his sister.

A. E. SMITH of Associated Exhbitors and Harry Willard, local manager, were “out stopping” last week (after new business we hasten to add).”

Al. SOHR, the First National exploitation hound, made Canton and Bloomington, putting over “Oliver.”

E. C. KETCHAM, representing Grosset & Dunlap, book publishers, put over one of the best photoplays displays ever handed in these parts at Marshall Field’s book department week before last, and they still are talking about it.

The many friends of Ray “Chub” Florne, former Pathe salesman, were griefed to learn of the death of his eight-months old baby boy last Thursday.

RAY NOLEN is now in charge of the Pathe complaint and adjustment bureau. You’re sure of good service now around that exchange. Cause Ray has his eye on everything.

JACK COOGAN, the boy star of the West coast, while passing through Chicago en route to California last week, was made an honorary member of the Sca Scouts. This organization will plug for “Daddy” the next Coogan production which will open at the Chicago, March 26.

JACK CAMPELL, Al Steffes right hand man up Minneapolis way, is in Hot Springs.

Jack took along his own medissme, and Bill Hall and others a taste of it. Long may we wave say Hill.

A. J. MOLLER, who is in our midst talking up the M. P. A. A. Convention and exposition to be held May 19-26, is a bust fellow these days.

First National showed “Sears of Jealousy” last week at its weekly trade show. Educational comedies were also shown.

R. C. SEERY, district manager, has become a radio fan, having bought himself a Zenith outfit.

Clyde Eckerdt, assistant to general manager, Fox Film Corporation, is expected here this week.

F. M. BROCKELL, manager in charge of distribution, who has just completed a tour of First National exchanges, is due here this week, and will hold a conference with R. C. Seery.

Our old friend Jeff Lazarus has been heard from. He sends pictures of some scenes for us. You said lonesome?” Must he nice out in California.

HERMAN STERN, assistant general sales manager, Universal, held one of his district sales meetings March 2 at Milwaukee. Plans for coming week were gone over and the sales staff pep up ped up for a clean-up campaign, it’s said. Louis Lueummle accompanied Mr. Stern. A similar meeting was held March 4 at Indianapolis.

JAMES POOLY, who was out a few days, is again confined to his bed.

JACK BARRY, the American Releasing Company’s crack salesman, has his eye on a nice solid gold watch, which that concern is giving this month for the best showing. Jack has already shown Frank Mantzke how to have the initials “JMB” engraved on it.

The Chicago Chamber of Commerce was entertained to a special showing of “Adam’s Rib” last Saturday by Paramount.

GRABWILL SEARS, Bill Cook and Nat Wolf horned in on the Jackie Coogan reception at the Hotel Sherman and helped entartain the Scouts on the roof of the hotel.

J. S. McHENRY, former advertising manager of the Holkam, is now in the Fox office at Boston, learning the ins and outs of the exchange business, according to a letter from Clyde Eckhardt.

That must be some party one of our projection rooms staged last week. Understand some of ’em couldn’t get up the next morning.

FRANK REMBUSH was in town last week.

St. Louis, Mo.—Sigooff Brothers, owners of the Union theatre, have taken the Elite airrome, Eighteenth and Park avenue. They plan to build a 1,000-seat theatre adjoining it.

“Up in Mary’s Attic” to Be Road-Showed in State

“Up in Mary’s Attic,” being handled by Carson & Caster, distributors, 831 South Wabash, Chicago, makes its initial appearance as a road-show on March 25 at the Apollo theatre, Porcia. This feature has enjoyed a successful season in Chicago, two of its most successful engagements having been at Barbee’s Loop and at the Castle.

A truck carrying a small house and attic scene and also musical instruments will be used in exploiting the picture. A feature of the presentation will be a special enlarged film and the personal appearance of Miss Del Ray who will show proper methods of developing the body. Earl Novak and Harry Grillibon are featured in the picture.

Rothacker Disposes of His Interest in United

Watterson R. Rothacker arrived on the east on Monday afternoon, to receive his payment at his Chicago headquarters. The film man will spend at least two weeks in Los Angeles conferring with Joe Alter, resident head of the Hollywood laboritories.

It is announced that Mr. Rothacker has disposed of his interest in United Studios, taken over recently by Joseph Schenck, and resigned from the board of directors.

Martin Says He Was First

To Use Pictures on Train

Several weeks ago we reported an experimental trip of a motion picture car used by the Chicago & Alton railroad between Chicago and St. Louis. The trip was made on February 12. H. O. Martin, Pathe exchange manager, wishes us to state that he made a similar experiment in May, 1922, using a small projector in the dining car, and was the first one to suggest motion pictures on trains hereabouts.

Milwaukee to Vote on Daylight Saving Plan

Film men from Milwaukee who were visiting the Row this past week stated that the council of the Wisconsin city has voted to submit the question of daylight saving to the people. The save-an-hour plan has been in force in Milwaukee for two years. Theatres and exchanges of the city are active in the fight for abolition.

Better Film Body Meets

The regular monthly meeting of the Better Pictures League was held on Saturday, March 10, at the Auditorium hotel. “The Scenic Motion Picture and Its Place in the Picture Program” was the theme of the gathering which was addressed by W. J. Adams, Swedish Bio- company, E. L. Benington, Trans- Continental Passenger Association, and W. D. O’Neil.

Astoria, Ore.—The new Liberty theatre, owned by Jensen & O’Don Herberg, has been completed and opened.

Newton, Ia.—The new Newtonia theatre here has been opened by Manager Eyerly.
A REAL CHRISTMAS

CHRISTMAS means much to us this year. Twelve months ago THE STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES were an unfinished dream of something the industry needed. Today they stand out as the finest plant of the kind. Twelve months ago an empty, incompletely building stood where today the foremost producers of the West are getting a new conception of laboratory service and co-operation. It has been a year of hard work, of unavoidable difficulties, but a year crammed with achievements of which we are justly proud.

We have given some of the industry’s biggest producers daily service they never believed possible. We have removed the laboratory problem from pictures. We have demonstrated that our release prints look better and wear longer. Many of the year’s best pictures have gone through THE STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES from the camera to the screen. We hope each succeeding Christmas will mark for us a year of corresponding expansion and achievement and of greater prosperity for the entire industry.

"Now this roping picture. I don’t know whether they’ll call it artistic or not but it’s the accumulation of thirty-five years’ hard practice. If they don’t I’ll call it in, put on a mustache for a disguise, say it was made in Germany and then the critics will say it’s art."

"‘Fruits of Faith’ is the most successful character I had in pictures,—a tramp. I don’t say this egotistically but I don’t think there’s a man that can play a tramp on or off the screen any better’n I can. And if this picture’s not going to go right I’ll be one. The reason I play a tramp is because I never have to change my clothes."
